12. However, Mr. Thosar, the learned advocate for the Defendant who argued the matter at great length, tried to bring his case within the four corners of the proviso or exception to sub-section (iv) of S. 10 by laying great emphasis on the custom or usage which according to him is proved by the evidence on record alluded to in the foregoing paragraphs. I have already concluded that the said evidence as a matter of fact has failed him and the learned trial Judge has answered this point against the defendant-respondent. But Mr. Thosar tried to get rid of this difficulty by falling back upon certain observations in the reported cases to which a reference would be made shortly and impressing upon this Court that this custom, so far as the erstwhile Bombay State, which is now a part of Maharashtra State and in which the old Hindu law on adoption prevailed, is concerned, is recognised and has hardened into a rule of law. A judicial note be taken of the custom allowing adoption of boys more than 15 years in age or putting no upper age limit on the ages of the boys to be given in adoption and he need not be called upon to prove the custom once again. Even if the oral evidence is read against him and it fails to establish the alleged custom, still the precedents of this Court can be taken into account and on the issue of custom and/or usage the point can be in his favour. In support of his submission he relied upon certain observations of Nain J. in Dnyanu Gopal Powar v. Jijaba Baba Powar, 73 Bom. L. R. 667; (AIR 1972 Bom 98) correctness of which is doubted by the Division Bench of this Court in Laxman Ganpati v. Anusuyabai, AIR 1976 Bom 264. In Dnyanu's case the widow who had inherited her husband's properties, had sold them in 1942 and 1943 to the defendants. In 1959 she adopted the plaintiff as a son to her husband and died thereafter. The plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants for possession of the properties on the ground that the alienations made by the widow were without legal necessity. Numerous contentions were taken and one of the points raised was that the age of the adopted son was more than 15 years at the date of adoption; therefore, the adoption was not valid. While repelling this attack Nain J. observed thus:

".....However this sufficiency of evidence for establishing a custom or usage loses all importance in territories which were formerly part of State of Bombay, such as Satara District. Even prior to the passing of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act in 1956, the Hindu law applicable to the Bombay State was that a person may be adopted at any age even though he may be older than the adopter and even though he may be married and had children. It is well-known that Hindu law in India is derived from various texts and commentaries some of which have by custom held the field in various parts of India. Hindu law, therefore, is by itself customary law, except to the extent to which it has been subsequently codified. In my opinion, therefore, the prohibition contained in S. 10 (iv) against the person adopted who has completed the age of 15 years has no meaning in relation to male persons adopted in the territories which were comprised in the former State of Bombay which include the District of Satara from where this appeal comes. The custom or rule of Hindu law prevailing in these territories permitting adoption of males over the age of 15 years is expressly saved by S. 10 (iv)."

With respects, the learned Judge in the concluding two sentences uses the two expressions 'custom' or 'rule of Hindu law.' The exception embodied in S. 10 (iv) is the custom. S. 10 makes no reference whatsoever to the rule of Hindu law. On the other hand, it appears that the provisions of S. 4 were not brought to the notice of the learned Judge.

13. Now, going back to S. 4 which speaks of the overriding effect of the Act, it is clear that all the texts, rules or interpretation of Hindu law or customs or usages seem to have no effect with respect to any matter for which provision is made in the Act. When we read S. 4 with S. 10, the only interpretation admissible is that if any text or rule or interpretation of Hindu law permitted adoption of boys over 15 years in age, they will not have any effect unless a specific provision was made in any other section of the Act recognising them or giving them the old sanctity. In other words, if any such old text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law (meaning thereby old Hindu law as it stood before the Act) permitted adoptions of boys more than 15 years in age, they could not stand sanctioned by the new Act unless there was express provision in the Act itself.

14. Now, advertent to S. 10, no doubt there is an express provision, but it is with respect to custom or usage which has been defined in S. 3 and to which a reference is already made. What sub-section (iv) of S. 10 says is that adoptions of boys over 15 years of age are not recognised by law unless there is a custom or usage applicable to the parties permitting such adoptions. If the parties succeed in establishing the custom or usage sanctioning such adoptions of boys more than 15 years of age, then only they could be deemed to be persons capable of being taken in adoption within the meaning of S. 10. Section 10, to my mind, restricts the cases of boys in whose community there is such a custom. If adoption of boys more than 15 years in age is recognised by any text or rule or interpretation of Hindu law and not by custom, there being no express provision in the Act, the said text, rule and interpretation having ceased to have effect, cannot run to the rescue of the defendant-respondent. In other words, if such sanction of taking boys of more than 15 years of age in adoption is to be found in the old text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law, then the exception to sub-sec. (iv) of S. 10 would be of little moment to the defendant-respondent. Therefore, it is quite essential to find out how and why and under what authority this restriction of the age limit under the old law came to be imposed. Before touching this subject, I may mention here that the parties to this litigation claim to be Somavanshiya Kshatriyas which could be put in the category of 'Regenerate class' (Dwijia Class) recognised by the old Hindu law.

15. Now, going to the old Hindu law as it stood before this Act was brought on the statute book, there was a limitation on age. This limitation had its origin in the text of the law which was interpreted, so far as Bombay State was concerned, in a different manner looking upon it as a text which was recommendatory in its nature and not mandatory. It appears from the commentaries on pages 234, 235 and 236 of Mayne's Hindu Law, 1953 edn. that a boy whose upanayana or thread ceremony was not performed, could be taken in adoption and that is how the restriction on the age limit came in. The original text is to be found in Dattaka Mimamsa, Vol. IV Sec. 23, Colebrooke, Dig. II p. 301. The learned author has further observed that upanayana is performed in cases of Brahmins as early as the 5th year and carried upto the 8th. In a given case it may be extended to 16th year. But the next important observation is: "The primary periods for upanayana in the case of a Kshatriya are eleven, and of a Vaisya twelve years. According to Dattaka Chandrikam the age of the boy to be adopted is only material as determining the time at which upanayana may be performed. Unless it was performed in the family of the adopter, the boy could not be given in adoption so far as the other provinces except Bombay are concerned. On quoting Nilakantha and the opinions of Shastries from Poona who appear to have opined that there is nothing in the text that the adoption should precede moonj (Upanayan) and marriage, it is further observed by the learned commentator:

"It has been held by the Bombay High Court that a man can adopt a son older than himself on the ground that the rule as to age is only recommendatory. But the learned Judges themselves admit that "it is contrary to the recognised notions of Hindus as to adoptions and to the fundamental idea of an adopted son. (vide Balabai v. Mahadu ILR 48 Bom 387 at p. 389: (AIR 1924 Bom 349)."

A survey of these observations, to my mind, indicates that the restrictions on the age of the boy at the date of adoption did find place in the original text, but the restrictions were interpreted to be recommendatory. However, it cannot be said that they had no foundations either in the text or rule of law.

16. Reference to certain observations in the decided cases of our High Court under the old Hindu law and on a couple of which Mr. Thosar himself relied, would be necessary. The oldest case is of Nathaji v. Hari reported in (1871) 8 Bom HCR 67. The principal question involved in that case was whether the adoption of a shudra who is married at the time of his adoption is valid or not if the adopted person be a 'Sagotra' (of the same family) of the present type. However, from the observations made by the learned advocate appearing for the appellant who sponsored the view, that the adoption of a married person is invalid under the Hindu Law, it seems that he relied upon certain texts like Dattaka Chandrika Sec. II, para 25 (b),

T. L. Strange's Manual of Hindu Law para 104, page 27 and other compilations of English authors. He drew the attention of the Court to certain passages not only from Dattaka Chandrika, but from Dattaka Mimamsa. Reference was also made to Nilakantha's quotations referred to in one of the texts in which he said: "And my father has said that a married man, who has even had a son born, may become an adopted son." But the learned advocate commented further that Nilakantha's father was not a 'rishi' and his opinion was not authoritative. Naturally Mr. Gadgil appearing for the Respondent referred to certain portions in Mayukha and also passages from Kalika Puran. Why I am referring to these notes of arguments is to point out and to place on record that the restrictions on the age had their foundations in the old texts. It is not a restriction brought into existence by customs or conventions. His Lordship Melvill J. after dealing with these passages appearing in the various texts has pointed out that the authority of the Dattaka Chandrika, as regards Brahmins, is absolute and that an adoption is necessarily invalid if made after the Upanayana has been performed in the natural family. On the other hand, the author of the Vyavahara Mayukha seems to have taken an opposite view; but the commentators on Mayukha also were relying upon the statement made by Nilakantha referred to a little earlier. It is needless to make a reference to the further observations in this context as to on what grounds the argument was accepted or not, but next comes an important observation which has been relied upon by Mr. Thosar and it runs thus:

"Independently of the Hindu law, we think that there is sufficient authority for holding that such adoptions are in the Dakhan recognised by the custom of the country."

Mr. Thosar wants me to read in these observations that the custom having recognised such adoptions, he is relieved of the burden of proving the custom and this custom should prevail over the other barriers of law. Ultimately the Court concluded that the adoption of a married Shudra was valid. However, this authority lends support to the view that the restrictions on the age limit had their origin in the texts.

17. The next authority nearer to the point is to be found in the case of Gopal Balkrishna v. Vishnu Raghunath, (1899)

ILR 23 Bom 250. The learned Bench of which Mr. Justice Ranade was a party, observed that the fact that an adopted son is older than the adopting mother does not make his adoption invalid. The rule prescribing a difference of age in favour of the adopting mother is only directory and not mandatory. The principal point involved in the appeal was the effect of the adoption on the vesting and divesting of the estate. While challenging the adoption a point was raised whether a person who is older than the person taking him in adoption is valid or not. It was an adoption by a widow and the boy was older than the widow. In that context arguments were advanced, but his Lordship Ranade J. in the concluding paragraph observed; "It is not strictly necessary to discuss the validity of the other objection arising out of the difference of age between his adopting mother and the appellant." The learned Judge then proceeded to point out the objections and the pertinent observations run thus:

"The original authorities referred to by these text-writers are the same, being collected from Steele's Hindu Law and Customs, and the opinions of Shastris. As regards the earlier Smriti texts, there seems to be no definite rule laid down on the point. The inference in favour of the adopted son being younger than his adoptive father, is extended to the mother by a somewhat loose analogy and interpretation of the text that the adopted son should be the relation of a legitimate son. But in a system of law where bachelors and widowers are permitted to adopt, and where minors also can adopt, if they have arrived at the age of discretion, and where further married men with children have been held to be fit subjects for adoption, these strict interpretations of the old texts seem to be not a little out of place. If a male person at any time of life may adopt a man of any age, and such male person is also permitted to marry a female minor of any age, it is obvious that the rule prescribing a difference of age in favour of the adopting mother must be only regarded as a directory rule, and not a command, the infraction of which invalidates the adoption. As observed above, it is not necessary to decide this point in the present appeal."

True it is that these observations of the learned Judge are obiter, but they make a reference to the Smriti texts and the texts lay down these restrictions on the age. They have been interpreted by this Court to be directory in their nature and not mandatory. Even then the position under the old Hindu Law remains that there were bans on the age limit in the texts and in course of time they came to be interpreted in the manner above said and validated adoptions of persons who were either married or older than the adopter himself. In other words, the ban on the age limit found in the texts, was relaxed not on the ground of custom but on the interpretation.

18. The next authority is to be found in the case of Dharma Dagu v. Ramkrishna Chinnaji, (1886) ILR 10 Bom 80. The precise issue was whether the adoption of a married Asagotra Brahman was prohibited by the Hindu law in force in the Presidency of Bombay. The point was answered in the negative, but the principal reasoning which weighed with the Court was the doctrine of factum valet. Speaking for the Court, His Lordship Birdwood J. observed:

"Where a rule is in effect directory only, an adoption contrary to it, however blamable, is nevertheless, to every legal purpose, good."

This authority takes a survey of the entire old case law laying emphasis or stress on the quotations dealing with the validity of the adoption of married persons; but what is pointed out is the existence of certain provisions in the old law defining the age limit for adoption.

19. More or less to the same effect are the observations in Balabai Tukaram Balur v. Mahadu Krishna Balur, ILR 48 Bom 387; (AIR 1924 Bom 349). In this case the question for decision was whether it is permissible to a person to adopt a son older than himself and it was answered in the affirmative. The reasoning for taking such a view is to be found in the penultimate paragraph of the judgment. On observing that no express text directly bearing on the point was cited at the bar. His Lordship Macleod C. J. speaking for the Bench observed that the directives given in the old text have been treated as recommendatory and not mandatory.

20. My learned brother Malvankar J. in an unreported case Second Appeal No. 1444 of 1965 decided on 24-4-1972 (Bom) has catalogued various judgments on this point to which a passing reference is made by the division bench of this Court in Laxman Ganapati Khot v. Anusayabai, AIR 1976 Bom 264. Three prinprincipal questions were raised before the Division Bench, and they are: (1) whether, in view of the provisions of Ss. 4 and 10 (iv) read with S. 3 (a) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, it is open to the first defendant to prove that there was a custom or usage applicable to the parties which permitted persons who were over the age of 15 to be taken in adoption; (2) whether any such custom or usage has been proved in the present case; and (3) whether the first defendant has succeeded in proving the factum of the adoption on which he relies. The learned Judges dealt with the third point first and came to the conclusion that the factum was not established. On observing that it was not necessary for them to express on the remaining two points still as the point was urged at great length, they proceeded to give their own views. Their attention was drawn to the judgment in Dnyanu Gopal v. Jijaba Baba, 73 Bom LR 667: (AIR 1972 Bom 98) decided by Nain J. The division bench, in my opinion, has rightly pointed out that the attention of the learned Judge Nain was not drawn to the provisions of S. 4 of the Act. The learned Judges seem to take the view that if the adoption of a person over the age of 15 years was permissible under any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu Law before the Act came into force, and not in accordance with any custom, then the same could not be allowed to be proved, in view of the provisions of the said sections viz. Ss. 4, 6 and 10. These observations, to my mind, clinch the issue. As I have already indicated in the foregoing paragraphs that the restrictions on the age of the boy to be given in adoption could be traced to the original text and the relaxation owes its origin to their interpretations as put by this Court in the various authorities. Although the texts or rules were liberally interpreted, upholding the adoptions of persons older than the adopter or removing the ban on the age of the boy to be adopted, still the basic question remains and it is that such adoptions were upheld not because of the proof of custom but because of the interpretation put on the texts. If this be the correct position of law,—and it is, to my mind,—then S. 4 read with S. 10 (iv) is a complete answer to the numerous points raised by Mr. Thosar before me. S. 4 overrides all the provisions in the old texts, rules or interpretations of Hindu law. They are not saved by S. 10 (iv). What is saved by S. 10 (iv) of the Act is the custom which permits the adoption of a boy who has completed the age of 15 years. Therefore, the question of custom, to my mind, as I read these sections and the origin of these restrictions, recedes to the background. In view of the overriding effect of S. 4, a party cannot be allowed to prove that adoption of a person over the age of fifteen years was permissible. On these grounds I am disposed to set aside the decree of the lower Court.

21. In this view of the matter I take, it is needless, nay, it would be futile to deal with the various other points urged at considerable length by Mr. Thosar.

22. In the result, the appeal is allowed with costs throughout. The plaintiff's claim is decreed by declaring that defendant's adoption is null and void as he was more than 15 years of age at the date of adoption.

HAJARNAVIS AND LENTIN, JJ.

First Appeal No. 598 of 1975, D/- 11-2-1976.*

(A) Succession Act (1925), Ss. 264 and 265 (1) — Grant of letters of administration — Contentious proceeding — Power of Civil Judge (Senior Division) authorised under Bombay Act 14 of 1869 to decide. (Bombay Civil Courts Act (14 of 1869), S. 28-A) — High Court Rules and Orders — Bombay High Court Rules (Civil Manual, Vol. 1, 1960), R. 255 (ii)).

Reading S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869 and R. 55 (ii) of the Bombay High Court Rules (Civil Manual, Vol. 1, 1960) there can be no doubt that a Civil Judge (Senior Division) has been invested with all the powers of a District Judge to take cognizance of any contested proceeding under the Succession Act, 1925, which may be transferred to him by the District Judge. Thus the Civil Judge (Senior Division), to whom an application for grant of letters of administration is so transferred by the District Judge, could dispose of the same, on merits irrespective of the fact that a caveat had been entered and the matter had become contentious: AIR 1967 Guj 214 and AIR 1962 Mad 450 (FB) Followed. (Para 11)

There is no conflict whatsoever between S. 264 of the Succession Act and S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act nor can it be said that the High Court's power of delegation under S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act is circumscribed by S. 265 (1) of the Succession Act. (Paras 15, 16)

(B) Succession Act (1925), S. 264 — 'District Judge' — Not persona designata.

The expression 'District Judge' as used in S. 264 does not refer to a persona designata. On the contrary it means the Judge of a principal civil court of original jurisdiction as defined in S. 2 (bb) of the Act. A. C. Agarwal with V. B. Joshi, for Appellant; M. V. Paranjape with S. S. Phadnis and P. M. Pradhan, for Respondent.

LÉNTIN, J.:— This appeal has been filed against the judgment and order dated 16th April 1975 passed by the learned 2nd Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, returning to the petitioner, who is the appellant before us, her application for letters of administration together with all documents, for presentation to the District Judge, Poona, under S. 288 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

2. On 6th October 1973, one D. A. Thackersey died intestate at Poona, leaving a large estate. His widow, namely the appellant, filed Application No. (146 of 1974) 376 of 1974 for letters of administration in the Court of the learned District Judge at Poona. This application was ordered to be registered on 20th June 1974. On 24th June 1974, the learned District Judge transferred the matter for disposal to the Court of the learned Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona. Thereafter, the deceased's mother, one Manekbai, who is the respondent before us, filed a caveat, the contents whereof are not material for the purpose of this judgment. She also challenged the jurisdiction of the learned Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona to hear and decide the application, on the ground that the latter was merely the District Judge's delegate and the matter having become a contentious one, by reason of the filing of the caveat, the learned Civil Judge, Senior Division, was liable to return the application for presentation to the Court of the learned District Judge, under S. 288 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. This contention of the respondent found favour with the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, who by her judgment and order dated 16th April 1975, ordered the application and documents to be returned to the appellant for presentation to the District Judge, Poona. Hence the present appeal.

3. In challenging the correctness of the impugned judgment and order, it was contended by Mr. Agarwal, the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant, that the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, misconstrued the provisions of S. 288 of the Indian Succession Act, as also that there was some misappreciation on her part as to her own powers to hear and decide the matter. Mr. Agarwal urged that the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, was not the District Judge's delegate and that she, viz. the former, had jurisdiction to hear and decide the application, irrespective of the fact that the same had become contentious by reason of the filing of the caveat by the respondent.

4. On the other hand, Mr. Paranjape, the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent, attempted to justify the correctness of the impugned judgment and order on several grounds. He contended that the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, was merely the delegate of the learned District Judge who alone had the jurisdiction to hear the matter as the same had become contentious by reason of the filing of the caveat. He further contended that the High Court had no power whatsoever to invest any Judge subordinate to the District Judge to try a contentious matter pertaining to letters of administration or probate. He also attempted to justify the impugned order on the ground that S. 264 of the Succession Act, 1925, was in direct conflict with S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869. He also contended that the High Court's power of delegation was circumscribed statutorily by S. 265 (1) of the Succession Act, which factor was brought to the forefront by the provisions of S. 272 which dealt with delegation only in the case of non-contentious matters. Finally, Mr. Paranjape contended that the District Judge was persona designata, with the result that the delegation under S. 28-A (1) of the Bombay Civil Courts Act was bad in law. According to Mr. Paranjape, the High Court could appoint a District Delegate under S. 265 of the Succession Act in connection with non-contentious cases only, which was the only power which was vested in the High Court.

5. Our attention was invited to certain provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869 and R. 255 of the High Court Rules, Civil Manual Volume I, 1960, which it would be necessary to allude to in order to appreciate the rival contentions urged before us.

6. Section 2 (bb) of the Indian Succession Act defines "District Judge" as "the Judge of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction." S. 264 (1) provides that a District Judge shall have jurisdiction in granting and revoking probates and letters of administration in all cases within his district. S. 265 (1) confers power in the High Court to appoint Delegate of the District Judge to deal with non-contentious cases and reads as under:—

"The High Court may appoint such judicial officers within any district as it thinks fit to act for the District Judge as Delegates to grant probate and letters of administration in non-contentious cases, within such local limits as it may prescribe:

x x x x x x x

Sub-section (2) states that persons so appointed shall be called "District Delegates." S. 286 provides that a District Delegate shall not grant probate or letters of administration in any case in which there is contention as to the grant, or in which it otherwise appears to him that probate or letters of administration ought not to be granted in his Court. S. 288 lays down the procedure inter alia in the case of contentious proceedings before the District Delegate and reads thus:—

"In every case in which there is contention, or the District Delegate is of opinion that the probate or letters of administration should be refused in his Court, the petition, with any documents which may have been filed therewith, shall be returned to the person by whom the application was made, in order that the same may be presented to the District Judge,....."

7. Pausing here for a moment, it may be stated that while the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, was correct in holding that the matter before her was a contentious one (a caveat having been filed), she was obviously not correct in apparently proceeding on the basis that she was the District Delegate, for reasons we shall be stating hereafter.

8. Section 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869 empowers the High Court to invest Civil Judges with jurisdiction under certain Acts. Sub-clause (1) of that section, with which we are concerned is as follows:—

"The High Court may by general or special order invest any Civil Judge, within such local limits and subject to such pecuniary limitation as may be prescribed in such order, with all or any of the powers of a District Judge or a District Court as the case may be under the Indian Succession Act, 1865. The Probate and Administration Act, 1881, or paragraph 5 of Schedule III to the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908."

9. Rule 255 of the High Court Rules (Civil Manual, Volume I, 1960), issued by the Bombay High Court, Appellate Side, comprises of sub-rules (i) and (ii). By sub-rule (i), it is provided that under S. 265 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, the High Court has appointed all Civil Judges to act for the District Judges as delegates to grant probate and letters of administration in non-contentious cases arising within the local limits of their respective jurisdiction. Sub-rule (ii) is important and hence we reproduce it as under:—

"In exercise of the powers conferred by S. 28-A (1) of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), the High Court has invested all Civil Judges (Senior Division) with all the powers of a District Judge to take cognizance of any contested proceeding under the Indian Succession Act, 1925, arising within the local limits of their respective jurisdiction that may be transferred to them by their respective District Judges."

Thus, while sub-rule (i) refers to appointment of Civil Judges as delegates to act for the District Judge in non-contentious cases, by sub-rule (ii), the High Court has invested all Civil Judges (Senior Division) with all the powers of a District Judge to take cognizance of contested matters as provided in that sub-rule.

10. It is not in dispute, and rightly so, that by reason of the caveat having been filed, the matter before the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, became a contentious matter. The question that however, does arise is whether she, viz, the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, was correct in returning the application for presentation to the District Judge under S. 288 of the Succession Act, as done by her. It is not without significance that the order dated 24th June 1974 passed by the learned District Judge, Poona, transferring the matter to the learned Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, was not passed in the capacity of the latter being a Delegate of the former. This is amply brought to the forefront by the wording of that order which is clear and explicit, namely—"Transferred to the file of the Civil Judge, S. D. Poona for disposal according to law."

11. Reading S. 28-A and sub-rule (ii) of Rule 255, there can be no doubt that the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division, Poona, was invested with the powers of the District Judge himself. If he could have decided the application, which he no doubt could, so could she, viz, the learned Joint Civil Judge, Senior Division. With respect, this position does not appear to have been brought to her pointed attention. All that the learned District Judge did was to transfer simpliciter the matter to the learned Civil Judge, Senior Division, who by virtue of S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act and R. 255 of the High Court Rules, could and should have disposed of the same on merits, irrespective of the fact that a caveat had been entered and the matter had become a contentious matter.

12. In arriving at this conclusion, we are fortified by a decision of a Division Bench of the Gujarat High Court in Bai Zabu Khima v. Amardas, AIR 1967 Guj 214, where also it had been contended that the learned Civil Judge had no jurisdiction to grant letters of administration, as the matter had become contentious. It was further urged that only if the case had been non-contentious, the learned Civil Judge could have had jurisdiction to entertain the application and to grant letters of administration as a District Delegate under S. 265 of the Indian Succession Act. Referring to S. 28-A (1) of the Saurashtra District and Subordinate Civil Courts Ordinance, 1948, which provided that the High Court may by general or special order invest any Civil Judge within such local limits and subject to such pecuniary limitation as may be prescribed in such order, with all or any of the powers of a District Judge or a District Court as the case may be, under the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and further in exercise of the powers conferred under this section the High Court of Saurashtra having issued a Notification dated 30th July 1948 empowering all Civil Judges, Senior Division, within their territorial limits to exercise all the powers of a District Judge, the Division Bench of Gujarat High Court repelled the contentions urged before it and held that the learned Civil Judge was competent to entertain the application and to grant letters of administration to the applicant despite the fact that the matter before him had become a contentious one by reason of the filing of a caveat.

13. No attempt was made by Mr. Paranjape to distinguish this authority, and no doubt rightly so, as it is on all fours to the facts of the matter before us.

14. However, Mr. Paranjape contended that the High Court had no power to invest any Judge subordinate to the District Judge to try a contentious matter pertaining to letters of administration or probate. According to Mr. Paranjape, S. 264 of the Indian Succession Act was in direct conflict with S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, which section was enacted in the statute book in 1912, namely much prior to the coming into force of the Indian Succession Act of 1925.

15. We do not agree with any of these contentions urged by Mr. Paranjape. We fail to see why the High Court would have no power to invest any Judge subordinate to the District Judge to try contentious cases pertaining to letters of administration or probate. We do not subscribe to the contention that S. 264 of the Indian Succession Act is in conflict with S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act. S. 264 gives jurisdiction to the District Judge to grant or revoke probates or letters of administration in all cases within his district, whereas S. 28-A empowers the High Court to invest Civil Judges with all or any power of a District Judge or a District Court,

We see no conflict or even incongruity between the one and the other. Mr. Paranjape inadvertently did not take into account the provisions of S. 8 (1) of the General Clauses Act, 1897 which provides that:—

"Where this Act, or any Central Act or Regulation made after the commencement of this Act, repeals and re-enacts, with or without modification, any provision of a former enactment, then references in any other enactment or in any instrument to the provision so repealed shall, unless a different intention appears, be construed as references to the provision so re-enacted."

16. There is also no merit in Mr. Paranjape's contention that the High Court's power of delegation was circumscribed statutorily by S. 265 (1) of the Indian Succession Act or that this was brought to the forefront by S. 272 of that Act. As already stated earlier, S. 265 (1) empowers the High Court to appoint judicial officers to act for the District Judge as delegates for the grant of probate or letters of administration in non-contentious cases. We see no force in the contention urged before us, that hence the High Court could not by virtue of S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act invest a Civil Judge with all or any of the powers of a District Judge, including the jurisdiction to decide a contentious matter. S. 272 which provides for grant of probate and letters of administration by a Delegate in non-contentious cases, carries the matter no further. It is nobody's case that a Delegate could do otherwise.

17. Mr. Agarwal, the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant, invited our attention to the decision of the Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Rama Subbarayalu v. Rengammal, AIR 1962 Mad 450 (FB), where it was held that the jurisdiction of a subordinate Judge in the Madras State invested with the power under S. 29 (1) of the Madras Civil Courts Act to take cognizance of any proceedings under the Succession Act, which cannot be disposed of by the District Delegate, is that of a District Judge and not that of a District Delegate under the Succession Act and he is competent to dispose of a contentious application for probate. It was further held that the subordinate Judge invested with a power under a notification issued by the High Court will have jurisdiction to hear and dispose of not merely contentious proceedings relating to the issue of probate or letters of administration, but other matters under the Act as well.

18. We are in respectful concurrence with this decision of the Full Bench of the Madras High Court.

19. Mr. Paranjape, however, attempted to distinguish the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court on three counts. Firstly, that it was not decided in that case that the District Judge is a persona designata. Secondly, that the amendment to the Madras Civil Courts Act was subsequent to the enactment of the Indian Succession Act of 1925 whereas in the matter before us, the enactment of S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act was prior to the enactment of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. And thirdly, that it was not decided by the Full Bench of the Madras High Court that the right of the High Court to confer power upon the lower judiciary was severely restricted by S. 265 (1) of the Indian Succession Act.

20. We regret that this attempt at distinguishing the Madras decision is somewhat feeble and must meet with failure.

21. It was next urged by Mr. Paranjape that under S. 264, the power conferred on the District Judge was as persona designata and hence investing any civil Judge with the powers of the District Judge by the High Court under S. 28-A of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, was bad in law. According to Mr. Paranjape, the High Court was competent only to appoint a Delegate of the District Judge under S. 265 of the Indian Succession Act and that too only to deal with non-contentious matters. This, emphasised Mr. Paranjape, was the only power which the High Court could exercise. Mr. Paranjape invited our attention to certain sections of the Indian Succession Act, viz. Ss. 264, 266, 267, 268, 283 and 299. According to Mr. Paranjape, the fact that in these sections the words used are, "the District Judge," and not "the District Court," indicates that the District Judge acts as persona designata and in no other capacity.

22. We do not find it difficult to repel this contention. There is nothing in the scheme, ambit or scope of the Indian Succession Act to warrant our coming to the conclusion which Mr. Paranjape invites us to do. On the contrary, a bare glance at the definition, which is important, of "District Judge" in S. 2 (bb), is sufficient to negative this contention of Mr. Paranjape. If the District Judge had been persona designata, he would not have in that definition been defined as the Judge "of a Principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction". It is these words which are revealing and lay at rest any controversy on this aspect. It is in this light, and in no other, that the words, "District Judge," as defined in S. 2 (bb), have been used in the sections relied upon by Mr. Paranjape. Thus when reference is made in these sections to "District Judge," it must necessarily mean a judge of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction. The question of the District Judge being a persona designata, therefore, does not arise.

23. On this aspect, in Ganpat v. Mahadeo, AIR 1949 Nagpur 408 it, was observed by the Division Bench of that Court that—

".....in interpreting S. 264 we have to substitute the definition given in S. 2 (bb) and when that is done S. 264 (1) reads as follows:

"The Judge of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction shall have jurisdiction in granting probates... in all cases within his district." "

It was held by the Nagpur High Court that an Additional District Judge at Yeotmal could exercise the powers of a District Judge in the matter of granting probate of a will except that his jurisdiction is limited to cases arising out of the Yeotmal Revenue District.

24. In Sagar v. Nabin, AIR 1970 Assam 111, it was held by a Division Bench of that Court, that the term "District Judge" used in the Indian Succession Act, has reference not to a persona designata, but to a Court, and that Court is the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction. Hence probate and letters of administration under the Indian Succession Act which could be issued by the Court of District Judge could also be issued by the Additional District Judge in Assam.

25. These decisions are a complete answer to Mr. Paranjape's contentions. We respectfully agree with the ratio of these decisions which fortify the conclusion arrived at by us, namely, that from the scope and ambit of the Indian Succession Act, there is nothing to indicate that the expression, "District Judge," refers to a persona designata in the matters of grant or revocation of probate or letters of administration but, on the contrary, that this expression means the Judge of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction as defined in S. 2 (bb) of the Indian Succession Act.

26. In support of his contention that the District Judge is a persona designata Mr. Paranjape invited our attention to a decision of the Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in the case of Spring Mills, Ltd. v. Ambekar, 51 Bom LR 148: (AIR 1949 Bom 188) and also to an earlier decision of a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in Sholapur Municipality v. Tuljaram Krishnasa, ILR 55 Bom 544: (AIR 1931 Bom 582). The Spring Mills case was under the Payment of Wages Act, 1936. The Sholapur Municipality case was under the Bombay City Municipalities Act, 1925. In view of the fact that there are direct authorities under the Indian Succession Act itself which lay down that the District Judge is not a persona designata, it is unnecessary to take recourse to authorities under other Acts. In neither the Spring Mills case nor the Sholapur Municipality case, was the Court required to construe the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, much less the definition of "District Judge" as appearing in S. 2 (bb) of the Indian Succession Act.

27. The ratio laid down by the Division Bench of the Assam High Court and the Nagpur High Court, and the Full Bench of the Madras High Court, fortify the view which we have taken, and negative the contentions urged to the contrary on behalf of the respondent.

28. Mr. Paranjape finally urged, though somewhat faintly, that S. 388 of the Succession Act postulated that power could be delegated only by the State Government, and that too by a notification. This contention was, however, abandoned, when it was brought to his notice that S. 388, which is under the Chapter, "Succession Certificates," would have no application in the facts and circumstances of the matter before us.

29. In the result, the impugned judgment and order are set aside and the appeal is allowed with costs.

Appeal allowed.

(B) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 20 — Limitation Act (1963), Art. 137 — Application under S. 20 — Art. 137 is applicable. AIR 1973 Delhi 15 Dissented from.

Article 137, which is a residue Article, will apply to an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act, and, therefore, period of limitation for filing such an application will be three years from the time the right to apply accrues. Case Law discussed. AIR 1973 Delhi 15, Dissented from. (Para 16)

The application contemplated by S. 20 Arbitration Act is to be filed before a Court having jurisdiction in the matter. The term "Court" is defined in S. 2 (c) of the Arbitration Act which means a Civil Court having jurisdiction to decide the questions forming the subject-matter of the reference. Sub-s. (2) of S. 20 then provides that such an application is to be numbered and registered as a suit. Therefore, the application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act is to be filed in a Civil Court. These proceedings are governed by the Civil P. C. Art. 137 of the Limitation Act only contemplates application to Court. In the Third Division of the Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1963 all other applications mentioned in the various Articles are applications filed in a Court. Art. 119 deals with an application filed in a Court, though under the Arbitration Act. If this is so, then, the residue Article will obviously apply to an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act, which is to be filed before a Civil Court and for which no period of limitation is provided

V. R. Manohar, for Applicants; M. B. Mor and S. C. Mehadia, for Opponent No. 1.

ORDER:— Opponent No. 1 Brijmohan filed an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act against the applicants as well as opponents Nos. 2 to 5 contending that the original opponents had entered into an agreement with him on 24-11-1965 whereunder he had advanced an amount of Rs. 26,250/- to the opponents on the terms and conditions enumerated therein. Further, according to him, as the opponents failed to comply with the terms and conditions of the agreement, vide registered notice dated 11-11-1967 he asked them to pay an amount of Rs. 31,885.86 as dues on account of his business commission. Vide reply dated 27-9-1968 the opponents contended that the entire dues were paid to his father and as no business was done for the concerned pictures for November 1967 onwards, nothing more was payable to him. Therefore, as according to opponent Brijmohan, a dispute or a difference had arisen between the parties, to which the arbitration agreement applied, he filed an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act. The application in that behalf was filed on 2-1-1971.

2. The opponents to the original application opposed the said application on various grounds. They also contended that the application was barred by limitation. Original applicant Brijmohan adduced evidence in support of his case and ultimately vide order dated 17-10-1973, the Civil Judge, Senior Division, Amravati, permitted filing of the said agreement and directed that reference should be made to the Arbitrators appointed by the parties. It is this order which is challenged in this revision application.

3. Initially when the matter came up for hearing before this Court on 3-12-1976, Shri Mehadia, the learned counsel for opponent No. 1, was absent. After the matter was heard and was closed for judgment he appeared and requested that he could not appear before the Court on 3-12-1976 as his name was not shown in the cause list notified by this Court. In view of this, the matter was re-heard at his request. At the outset a contention was raised by Shri Mehadia that this revision application is not maintainable under S. 115 of the Civil P. C.

4. In my opinion there is some substance in this contention of Shri Mehadia. S. 39 of the Arbitration Act deals with appealable orders. The controversy involved in this revision application is covered by Cl. (iv) of S. 39 (1) of the Arbitration Act. In view of this, it is not disputed by Shri Manohar, the learned counsel for the applicants, that instead of filing a revision application, his clients should have filed an appeal before this Court. However, he contended before me that the present revision application should be treated as an appeal and should be decided on that footing. In my opinion, the request made by Shri Manohar deserves to be granted. In cases where an appeal lies but a revision application is wrongly preferred, the Court has wide discretion to treat it as an appeal if conditions laid down by law are fully satisfied. I find that all the necessary conditions are satisfied in the present case. Therefore, it will not be proper to dismiss this revision application at this stage on such technical ground. In view of this, the present revision application is permitted to be converted into an appeal and is directed to be registered as an appeal against an order.

5. Shri Manohar, the learned counsel for the appellants contended before me that the learned Judge of the trial Court committed an error apparent on the face of the record in not deciding the question of limitation at all. According to Shri Manohar, the provisions of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 apply to the present application and, therefore, respondent No. 1 Brijmohan should have filed this application within a period of 3 years from the date when the right to apply accrued to him. According to Shri Manohar, the right to apply accrued to Brijmohan on 11-11-1967 when the first notice was issued by him. Therefore, the application filed by him on 2-1-1971 is obviously barred by limitation.

6. On the other hand it is contended by Shri Mehadia, the learned counsel appearing for the respondent No. 1, that the provisions of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 are not applicable to the present application at all. He further contended that no period of limitation is prescribed for filing of such an application. Further, according to learned counsel, even if it is assumed that Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 applies to such an application, then also the application is within time as the right to apply accrued to the respondent No. 1 on 27-9-1968 when a reply was given by M/s Rupam Pictures to the notice issued by him. Till then it cannot be said that any dispute or difference had arisen between the parties, to which the agreement could apply. The difference between the parties arose for the first time on 27-9-1968 and, therefore, the application filed on 2-1-1971 is within limitation.

7. From the rival contentions raised before me, therefore, it is quite obvious that the main controversy involved in this appeal relates to application of Article 137 of the Limitation Act 1963 to the present application which is filed under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act. Article 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 reads as under :

"Description of application.	Period of limitation.	Time from which period begins to run.

Part II — Other applications.

137. Any other application for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this Division.	Three years.	When the right to apply accrues.
--	--------------	----------------------------------

From the bare reading of his Article it is quite obvious that it applies to all other applications for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in Third Division of the Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1963. According to Shri Manohar, the Third Division of the Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1963 deals with applications in the specified cases and as no period of limitation is prescribed by the said division so far as application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act is concerned, Art. 137 will apply to such an application. In support of his contention Shri Manohar has relied upon a decision of Gauhati High Court in the Union of India v. Bimal Kumar Kar (AIR 1973 Gau 100) as well as upon the observations of the Supreme Court in Vulcan Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Maharaj Singh (AIR 1976 SC 287).

8. On the other hand Shri Mehadia is relying upon the earlier decision of the Supreme Court in Town Municipal Council, Athani v. Presiding Officer, Labour Court, Hubli (AIR 1969 SC 1335). He is also relying upon a decision of Delhi High Court in Union of India v. M/s. Risri Raj and Co., Delhi (AIR 1973 Delhi 15). According to Shri Mehadia, the law laid down by the Supreme Court in Town Municipal Council, Athani's case is still a good law and Art. 137 of the Limitation Act applies only to the applications contemplated by Civil P. C. According to the learned counsel, the said article has no application to the applications filed under the special Acts, including the Arbitration Act.

9. In view of the contention raised by Shri Mehadia, it will be useful if a reference is made to the decision of the Supreme Court on which reliance is placed by him. The Supreme Court had an occasion to consider the scope of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 in the context of the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, in Town Municipal Council, Athani v. Presiding Officer, Labour Court, Hubli (AIR 1969 SC 1335) (supra). After making a reference to the various provisions of the Act as well as to the earlier decisions, ultimately in paras 10 and 11 of the said decision the Supreme Court observed as under (at p. 1342):

"10. It appears to us that the view expressed by this Court in those cases must be held to be applicable, even when considering the scope and applicability of Art. 137 in the new Limitation Act of 1963. The language of Art. 137 is only slightly different from that of the earlier Art. 181 inasmuch as, when prescribing the three years' period of limitation, the first column giving the description of the application reads as "any other application for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this division." In fact, the addition of the word "other" between the words "any" and "application" would indicate that the legislature wanted to make it clear that the principle of interpretation of Article 181 on the basis of ejusdem generis should be applied when interpreting the new Article 137. This word "other" implies a reference to earlier articles, and, consequently, in interpreting this Article, regard must be had to the provisions contained in all the earlier articles. The other articles in the third division to the schedule refer to applications under the Civil P. C. with the exception of applications under the Arbitration Act and also in two cases applications under the Cr. P. C. The effect of introduction in the third division of the schedule of reference to applications under the Arbitration Act in the old Limitation Act has already been considered by this Court in the case of Sha Mulchand & Co. Ltd., 1953 SCR 709 : (AIR 1953 SC 98) (supra). We think that, on the same principle, it must be held that even the further alteration made in the articles contained in the third division of the schedule to the new Limitation Act containing reference to applications under the Cr. P. C. cannot be held to have materially altered the scope of the residuary Art. 137 which deals with other applications. It is not possible to hold that intention of the legislature was to drastically alter the scope of this article so as to include within it all applications, irrespective of the fact whether they had any reference to the Civil P. C.

11. This point, in our opinion, may be looked at from another angle also. When this Court earlier held that all the articles in the third division to the schedule including Art. 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 governed applications under the Civil P. C. only, it clearly implied that the applications must be presented to a Court governed by the Civil P. C. Even the applications under the Arbitration Act that were included within the third division by amendment of Articles 158 and 178 were to be presented to Courts whose proceedings were governed by the Civil P. C. At best the further amendment now made enlarges the scope of the third division of the schedule so as also to include some applications presented to courts governed by the Criminal P. C. One factor at least remains constant and that is that the applications must be to courts to be governed by the articles in this division. The scope of the various articles in this division cannot be held to have been so enlarged as to include within them applications to bodies other than Courts, such as quasi-judicial tribunal, or even an executive authority. An industrial Tribunal or a Labour Court dealing with applications or references under the Act are not courts and they are in no way governed either by the Civil P. C. or the Cr. P. C. We cannot, therefore, accept the submission made that this article will apply even to applications made to an Industrial Tribunal or a Labour Court. The alterations made in the article and in the new Act cannot, in our opinion, justify the interpretation that even applications presented to bodies, other than courts, are now to be governed for purposes of limitation by Art. 137."

10. However, in a subsequent decision namely, Nityanand v. Life Insurance Corporation of India (AIR 1970 SC 209), the decision in Town Municipal Council, Athani's case (AIR 1969 SC 1335) (cit. supra) again came for consideration of the Supreme Court. After making a reference to the said decision in paras 3 and 4 of the later decision, namely, Nityanand's case, the Supreme Court observed as under (at p. 210):

"3. In our view Art. 137 only contemplates applications to Courts. In the Third Division of the Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1963, all the other applications mentioned in the various articles are applications filed in a court. Further Section 4 of the Limitation Act, 1963 provides for the contingency when the prescribed period for any application expires on holiday and the only contingency contemplated is "when the court is closed". Again under Section 5 it is only a court which is enabled to admit an application after the prescribed period has expired if the Court is satisfied that the applicant had sufficient cause for not preferring the application. It seems to us that the scheme of the Indian Limitation Act is that it only deals with applications to courts, and that the Labour Court is not a court within the Indian Limitation Act, 1963.

4. It is not necessary to express our views on the first ground given by this Court in Civil Appeals Nos. 170 to 173 of 1968 D/- 20-3-1969 (AIR 1969 SC 1335). It seems to us that it may require serious consideration whether applications to courts under other provisions, apart from Civil Procedure Code are included within Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963, or not."

The High Court of Delhi in Union of India v. M/s Rishi Raj & Co., Delhi (AIR 1973 Delhi 15) has held that in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Town Municipal Council, Athani v. Presiding Officer, Labour Court, Hubli (cit. supra) the contention that the application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act falls within the scope of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 cannot be accepted. Therefore Delhi High Court has not considered the questions on merits.

11. This Court had also an occasion to consider these two decisions of the Supreme Court in M/s Popular Process Studio v. Employees' State Insurance Corporation (AIR 1970 Bom 413). After making a detailed reference to these two decisions of the Supreme Court, ultimately in para 7 of the said judgment this Court observed that "it is thus finally settled that Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 is confined to applications to 'Courts' within the meaning of that Act but the question whether it applies to applications to Courts under provisions other than those of the Code of Civil Procedure is left open." Therefore it is not possible for me to accept the view taken by the Delhi High Court.

12. Although the statement of objects and reasons leading to the passing of an enactment cannot be looked into as a direct aid to the construction, yet it could be used for the limited purpose for finding out the intention behind the legislation as well as the conditions prevailing at the time of passing of the enactment. It is further well settled that it is a sound rule of interpretation that a Statute should be so construed as to prevent the mischief and to advance the remedy according to the true intention of the makers of the Statute. While deciding the true scope of the Legislation, it is permissible to have regard to all such factors as can legitimately be taken into account in ascertaining the intention of the Legislature, such as the history of the Statute, the reason which led to its being passed, the mischief which it intended to suppress and the remedy provided by the statute for curing the mischief. This was the rule laid down in Heydon's case (1584) 3 W.R. 16 : 76 ER 637, which is accepted by the Supreme Court in various cases. It is no doubt true that as a general principle of interpretation of a statute, where the words of the statute are plain, precise and unambiguous, the intention of the Legislature is to be gathered from the language of the statute itself and no external evidence is admissible to construe it, but where the statute is not exhaustive or where its language is ambiguous, uncertain, clouded or susceptible of more than one meaning or shades of meaning, then external evidence as to the evils, if any, which the statute was intended to remedy, or of the circumstances which led to the passing of the statute may be looked into for the purpose of ascertaining the object which the Legislature had in view in using the words in question and in enacting the legislation. (see Anandji Haridas & Co. Pvt. Ltd. v. Engineering Mazdoor Sangh, AIR 1975 SC 946).

13. The Division Bench of Gauhati High Court had an occasion to consider this aspect of the matter in Union of India v. Bimal Kumar Kar (cit. supra), (AIR 1973 Gau 100). After making a reference to the earlier decisions of the Supreme Court in Wazir Chand v. Union of India (AIR 1967 SC 990) and Mohd. Usman v. Union of India (AIR 1969 SC 474) as well as to the provisions of the new Limitation Act, the Gauhati High Court came to the conclusion that the legal position has changed after the commencement of the new Limitation Act. The Gauhati High Court has also made a reference to the recommendations of Law Commission. In this context a reference could be usefully made to the following observations of the Gauhati High Court in para 8 of the said decision:

"It is, therefore, clear that the legal position has changed after the commencement of the new Limitation Act and the provisions of the Limitation Act will be attracted to an application under the Special Act, such as the Arbitration Act. The matter is no longer in dispute about Art. 137 applying to any applications. An application under S. 20 of the Act is also an application within the meaning of Section 2 (b) of the Limitation Act, 1963 and the 'applicant' therein is a 'petitioner' within the meaning of S. 2 (a) (i) of the Limitation Act. That being the position, Art. 137, which is a residuary article, will apply to an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act and the period will be three years from the time the right to apply accrues."

It is no doubt true that in this decision the Gauhati High Court has not made any reference to the decisions of the Supreme Court in Town Municipal Council, Athani v. Presiding Officer, Labour Court, Hubli, (AIR 1969 SC 1335) and Nityanand v. Life Insurance Corporation of India (both cit. supra) : (AIR 1970 SC 209). However, if the decision of the Gauhati High Court is considered in the light of the observations of the Supreme Court in para. 11 of the judgment in Town Municipal Council, Athani's case and in paras. 3 and 4 of the Nityanand's case, then in my opinion, the view taken by the Gauhati High Court is the only possible view having regard to the object as well as the intention of the Legislature. It is quite obvious that this provision is made by the Legislature for the purpose of resolving the controversy raised in this behalf under the old Limitation Act.

14. For properly understanding this aspect of the matter, a reference could be usefully made to the provisions of the new Limitation Act. In clause (b) of S. 2 of the Limitation Act, 1963, a new definition of the word "application" has been inserted. Cl. (b) of S. 2 provides that "application" will include a petition. In view of the said new definition of the word "application", the scope of the Limitation Act has been enlarged by making it applicable to the applications as well as to the petitions under the Special Enactments. This intention of the legislature is further clear from the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Limitation Act, 1963, which declares as follows:

"A new definition of application is being inserted so as to include a petition, original or otherwise. The object is to provide a period of limitation for original applications and petitions under special laws as there is no such provision now."

15. In this context a reference also could be made to the provisions of S. 20 of the Arbitration Act itself which read as under:

"20 (1) Where any persons have entered into an arbitration agreement before the institution of any suit with respect to the subject-matter of the agreement or any part of it, and where a difference has arisen to which the agreement applies, they or any of them, instead of proceeding under Chapter II, may apply to a Court having jurisdiction in the matter to which the agreement relates, that the agreement be filed in Court.

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs and the remainder as defendant or defendants, if the application has been presented by all the parties, or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

(3) On such application being made, the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to all parties to the agreement other than the applicants, requiring them to show cause within the time specified in the notice why the agreement should not be filed.

(4) Where no sufficient cause is shown, the Court shall order the agreement to be filed and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed by the parties, whether in the agreement or otherwise or where the parties cannot agree upon an arbitrator, to an arbitrator appointed by the Court.

(5) Thereafter the arbitration shall proceed in accordance with, and shall be governed by, the other provisions of this Act, so far as they can be made applicable."

The application contemplated by S. 20 of the Arbitration Act is to be filed before a Court having jurisdiction in the matter. The term "Court" is defined in S. 2 (c) of the Arbitration Act which means a Civil Court having jurisdiction to decide the questions forming the subject-matter of the reference. Sub-sec. (2) of S. 20 then provides that such an application is to be numbered and registered as a suit. Therefore, the application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act is to be filed in a Civil Court. These proceedings are governed by the Civil P. C. Article 137 of the Limitation Act only contemplates application to Court. In the Third Division of the Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1963, all other applications mentioned in the various Articles are applications filed in a Court. Article 119 deals with an application filed in a Court, though under the Arbitration Act. If this is so, then, in my opinion, the residue Article will obviously apply to an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act, which is to be filed before a Civil Court and for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in the Third Division of the Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1963.

16. The view which I am inclined to take in this behalf also finds support in the observations of the Supreme Court in Vulcan Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Maharaj Singh (AIR 1976 SC 287). (cit. supra). In this context a reference could usefully be made to the observations of the Supreme Court in para 23 of the said decision which read as under: (at pp. 293, 294)

"23. We do not propose, as it is not necessary, to decide whether the action commenced by respondent no. 1 under S. 20 of the Act for the filing of the arbitration agreement and for appointment of arbitrators was barred under Cl. 19 of the policy. It has been repeatedly held that such a clause is not hit by S. 28 of the Contract Act and is valid; vide — Baroda Spinning and Weaving Co. Ltd. v. Satyanarayan Marine and Fire Insurance Co. Ltd., ILR 38 Bom 344: (AIR 1914 Bom 225 (2)); Dawood Tar Mahomed Bros. v. Queensland Insurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1949 Cal 390 and the Ruby General Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Bharat Bank Ltd. (AIR 1950 EP 352). Clause 19 has not prescribed a period of 12 months for the filing of an application under S. 20 of the Act. There was no limitation prescribed for the filing of such an application under the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 or the Limitation Act, 1963. Article 181 of the former did not govern such an application. The period of three years prescribed in Article 137 of the Act of 1963 may be applicable to an application under S. 20. Nor are we concerned in this case to decide whether the time taken by respondent no. 1 in prosecuting his application in Muzaffarnagar court could be excluded under S. 14 (2) of the Limitation Act, 1963. Nor do we propose to decide whether the application under S. 20 could be defeated on the ground of the extinction of the liability of the company under Cl. 19. We may, however, observe in passing that in view of the decision of this Court in Wazir Chand Mahajan v. Union of India (1967) 1 SCR 303 at p. 308 : (AIR 1967 SC 990 at p. 993) if the difference which had arisen between the parties was the one to which the arbitration clause applied then the application under S. 20 of the Act could not be dismissed on the ground that the claim would not ultimately succeed either on facts or in law. The matter will have to be left for the decision of the Arbitrator. Without any discussion we may just state that the High Court is not right in its view that respondent no. 1's claim was not barred under cl. 19 because of the provisions of law contained in S. 37 (3) of the Act."

In this decision in the clearest terms it is laid down by the Supreme Court that there was no limitation prescribed for filing an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act under the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, or in the Limitation Act, 1963. Article 181 of the former did not govern such an application, but the period of 3 years prescribed in Art. 137 may be made applicable to the application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act. If these observations of the Supreme Court are read in the context of the amended provisions of Limitation Act, 1963 as well as the observations of the Supreme Court in para 11 of the decision in Town Municipal Council, Athani's case (AIR 1969 SC 1335) and para 4 of the decision in Nityanand's case (AIR 1970 SC 209) (cit. supra) it is quite obvious that a change has been brought out in this behalf by the Limitation Act, 1963. Therefore, in my opinion, the provisions of the Limitation Act, 1963, namely, Art. 137, which is a residue Article, will obviously apply to an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act, and, therefore, the period of limitation for filing such an application will be three years from the time the right to apply accrues.

17. The next question, therefore, which requires consideration in the present appeal is to find out as to when the right to apply accrued to the applicant. Section 20 of the Arbitration Act deals with a dispute or difference between the parties to which arbitration agreement applies. All that S. 20 (1) of the Arbitration Act provides is that (a) the petitioner should establish first that he entered into an arbitration agreement before the institution of the suit with respect to the subject-matter of the agreement and (b) the differences had arisen to which the agreement applied. In the present case it is the contention of Shri Manohar that the difference or dispute arose on 11-11-1967 when the first notice was issued by respondent no. 1 Brijmohan. On the other hand it is contended by Shri Mehadia that the dispute or difference in this case arose on 27-9-1963 when the reply was given by the appellant M/s Rupam Pictures to the second notice issued by Brijmohan. According to him, till then no dispute was raised at all by the appellant M/s Rupam Pictures. Unless there was denial of the claim or a dispute raised in that behalf, it cannot be said that any difference has arisen between the parties. According to Shri Mehadia, the existence of a difference or a dispute is an essential condition for the arbitrator's jurisdiction. Failure to pay the amount is not necessarily a difference or a dispute and the mere fact that a party could not or did not pay does not in itself amount to a dispute unless a party who chooses not to pay raises a point of controversy in that behalf. In this context he has relied upon a decision of this Court in Dawoodbhai v. Abdulkadar (AIR 1931 Bom 164). However, it is not necessary to decide this question at this stage.

18. It is quite obvious from the order passed by the learned Judge of the trial Court that the trial Court has not at all considered the question of limitation. Though the question as to whether the provisions of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 will apply to such an application or not is a pure question of law, the question as to when the right to apply accrued is a question of fact, or in any case is a mixed question of law and fact, which cannot be gone into for the first time in this appeal. In this view of the matter, in my opinion, this is a fit case where the matter should be remitted back to the trial Court for deciding the whole question over again in accordance with law.

19. In the view which I have taken, therefore, this appeal is allowed. The order passed by the trial Court is set aside and the matter is remitted back to the trial Court for deciding the whole matter afresh in accordance with law after giving a reasonable opportunity of being heard to both the parties. It is needless to say that after remand the parties are at liberty to amend their pleadings and to adduce such evidence, both oral and documentary, as they desire. However, in the circumstances of the case there will be no order as to costs.
Appeal allowed.

AIR 1977 BOMBAY 431

MASODKAR, J

M/s. Shah Amrutlal Shantilal Shah Firm and others, Appellants v. Madhyavarti Sahakari Hatamag Vinkar Singh Ltd. and another, Respondents.

Limitation Act (36 of 1963), Arts. 14, 70, 113 — Sanjaiti contract — Suit either

JU/IU/D789/77/MBR

for recovery of goods deposited or in alternative for its price — Art. 70 or Art. 113 and not Art. 14 is applicable.

The word 'Sanjaiti' or 'Sanjait' indicates taking of an article of merchandise without ascertaining the price and with liberty to retain or return it. Under the commercial practice of Sanjait transactions goods are supplied by an agreement by one trader to another with an obligation on the latter to hold them in deposit till the same are appropriated by him by its sale or return them not so appropriated to the former with its already fixed price. The liability of the person receiving the goods in deposit is to make good the value or to return the goods. In either case, the refusal either to pay the value or to return the goods deposited would give rise to a cause of action for the purpose of a civil suit

In view of this, the suit, on the basis of Sanjaiti contract, either for the recovery of the goods deposited or in the alternative for its price is governed not by Article 14 but by Art. 70 or by the residuary Art. 113.

The practice of Sanjaiti supply of goods does not bring about sale contemplated by Art. 14 nor goods pass upon delivery to the acceptor under it extinguishing the title of the depositor. The term "movable property deposited" in Art. 70 is wide enough to include such type of transaction. Applying Arts. 70 and 113, the cause of action arises only after the refusal to follow the obligation under the contract is communicated by the depositor to the person receiving the goods.

K. J. Abhyankar, for Appellants; S. G. Mandrekar and A. V. Datar, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT:— The appeal is filed by the original defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3. The Cross-Objections are filed by the plaintiff. Plaintiff, which is a registered Co-operative Society, filed the present suit against defendant No. 1, a registered firm and defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4, styling them to be the partners of that firm, either for the recovery of 1191 Sarees or in the alternative for its price Rs. 10,260/-. Briefly stated, the plaintiff's case was that defendant No. 1 firm were supplied Sarees during the period from 5th December 1959 to 28th January 1964 under a practice called 'Sanjaiti' supply. It was the practice that Sarees were to remain with the defendants in deposit and price was to be paid for the Sarees as the same were sold and defendants were at liberty to return the remaining unsold Sarees. Out of the stock so supplied, it had been the case of the plaintiff that 1191 Sarees were in deposit with defendants and that defendants were liable to return the same or pay the price thereof. After serving a notice produced at Ex. 72 and replied by the defendant as per Ex. 74, the present suit was filed.

2. The defence had been that defendant No. 4 was not the partner of defendant No. 1. It only consists of the other two defendants being defendants Nos. 2 and 3. Though the dealings are admitted with the plaintiff, the basis of Sanjaiti is denied. Defendants pleaded that in fact the supply had been under two different transactions, one covering the period 5-10-1959 to 30-3-1961 and another distinct transaction from 23-9-1963 to 28-1-1964. For the second period, according to the defendants, everything was paid and there was nothing due for which the defendants could be held liable.

3. The trial Court found in favour of the plaintiff substantially with regard to the period of 5-10-1959 to 13-3-1961 and holding further that the plea raised by the defendants that defendant No. 1 had not received the goods of three Sanjaiti notes of dates 10-12-1959, 6-1-1960 and 1-2-1960 was untrue and found that the balance of Sarees for this period with the defendants is 910 Sarees which the defendants are liable to return or pay to the plaintiff for the same. As to the second period between 23-9-63 and 20-10-64, it substantially accepted the defence that it was an independent transaction and recorded a finding that defendants had paid for the supply of these Sarees numbering 281 out of the second period. Taking into account this payment, the Sarees which remained with the defendants worked to 910 and their liability has accordingly been worked out.

4. In the appeal, the first part of the finding and the eventual liability of the defendants is questioned while in the cross-objections the second part of the finding relating to the second period is questioned.

5. Upon careful consideration of the submissions on both sides it appears that there is neither merit in the appeal nor in the cross-objections.

6. Mr. Abhyankar in support of the appeal urged that upon the finding of the learned Judge that there were two distinct transactions the claim based on the first transaction would be barred by limitation and the answer given by the learned trial Judge to the bar of limitation because of the payment of the bill by the defendants on 28th August 1965 as evidenced by Exhibit 165 is unsustainable at law. The learned Counsel submitted that to the first part of the transaction Art. 14 of the Limitation Act, 1963, would be attracted for this was a case of sale and the suit filed on 29-7-1966 for recovery of the amount of the price would be barred by limitation. As to the nature of the transaction, the learned Counsel submits that for all purposes that is deemed to be a sale between the plaintiff and the defendants the property in goods passing in favour of the purchaser, payment of price being deferred till the contingency of appropriating the goods is reached. He submits that the appreciation of the learned Judge on facts too is unsustainable.

7. In support of the cross-objections Mr. Mandrekar urged that there is a patent error committed by the learned Judge in treating the second part of the transaction as separate and then holding that the balance has to be worked out on the basis of the payments made for 281 Sarees during the second period. The appropriation of the payments made and found by the learned Judge is thus disputed.

8. Turning to the evidence, the transaction of the so-called first period, which ranged between 5-10-1959 to 13-3-1961 is evidenced apart from the oral testimony of witnesses examined on behalf of the plaintiff being P. W. 1 Balgonda (Exhibit 49) and P. W. 2 Ilahi Husen Maindargi (Ex. 50), by the documents styled as Sanjaiti chits ranging from Ex. 77 to Ex. 107, out of which only few are in dispute. These documents indicate that it was a sort of note or Tippan of the goods given in Sanjait. It mentions that to the defendant No. 1-firm the goods are sent as per specification and also it mentions the rate of the said goods. It further mentions the items sent under each note. It is significant that this is the note of despatch of the goods and it does not raise by itself nor demand by itself any price from the addressee of the goods itself. At the foot of each document there appears to be a signature on behalf of the defendant No. 1-firm indicating that the goods have been so received for the defendant No. 1-firm. Thus, these notes, which are several in number, indicate despatch of items of Sarees sent to the defendant No. 1 for the purpose of sale and not by itself evidence any sale in favour of the defendant. In one of the documents it is called a delivery note (Exhibit 87).

9. Thus, these documents do not help the defence by themselves that any sale was effected by the parties.

10. Now, the word "Sanjaiti" or "Sanjait" indicates taking of an article of merchandise without ascertaining the price and with liberty to retain or return it. (See Molesworth's Marathi-English Dictionary page 810). This appears to be the recognised commercial connotation operative as a practice under which the goods are removed from one shop and are deposited in another, not under any sale but under an arrangement that the recipient of these goods will be at liberty to sell those goods or return the same if the same were not so sold.

11. Apart from the usual commercial connotation of the word 'Sanjait' used in these several notes, the evidence and the conduct of the parties clearly indicate that this was merely the supply of goods by which the plaintiff-Co-operative Society used to despatch the sarees and the defendant used to accept the same in deposit with a view to sell them and with liberty to return the same. Defendant, however, accepted to pay the stated price mentioned in the note in case of appropriation of the goods by sale. The evidence of Balgonda (Exhibit 49) indicates that this is how the goods were supplied. So is the evidence of Ilahi Husen Maindargi (Exhibit 50), who was in the service of the plaintiff. The negative denials with regard to this practice as spoken to by the defendants' witness Shantilal Manikchand (Exhibit 64) indicates that by Sanjait basis the practice meant was that the plaintiff was to keep the sarees for sale with the defendants and the defendants were to sell them or to return the unsold sarees to the plaintiff. Looking to the several documents and the long standing practice between the parties, this evidence indicates that the sarees were supplied by the plaintiff-Co-operative Society to the defendants on Sanjaiti basis and not on the basis of sale.

12. Coming to the case of the defendants that under three Sanjait Notes goods were not received, except the word of Manikchand and his reliance on his own account books, there is hardly any material. These notes admittedly appear to have been made in the course of dealings between the parties during the first period and further properly proved being the copies retained by the plaintiff in his custody after the supply of the originals thereof to the defendants. The persons admittedly shown to have received the goods under the notes were in the employment of the defendant-firm by name Mr. Jokhe and Mr. Joshi. Defendant has not examined either of them. Looking to these facts it cannot be said that the finding recorded by the learned Judge that under these notes goods were so supplied is, in any way, erroneous. After all, when the parties lead evidence and the same is appreciated by the trial Court and there being no error in that appreciation, such questions are not entertainable even at the stage of the first appeal. Finding with regard to the Sanjait notes is supportable by the evidence led by the plaintiff and there is hardly any material on which defence can rely to indicate that in fact no goods were supplied under any of these notes.

13. It is not possible to accept the submission of the learned Counsel that to the claim of the plaintiff based and proved of the kind of Sanjait notes, Art. 14 of the Limitation Act should be applied and each separate transaction should be viewed as if it was an independent sale. To attract that Article, there must be a sale at price and then the time would run from the date of the delivery of the goods so sold whereunder property would pass to vendor. The commercial practice of Sanjaiti supply of goods does not bring about sale upon delivery nor goods pass to the acceptor under it extinguishing the title of that despatcher. As noted it is a special commercial mode and though some of the factors alive to sale are present, it does not bring about that result. Upon the evidence what results under this practice is supply and deposit of goods by one trader to another with liberty to the latter to appropriate the goods by selling it and return the unsold goods. For all purposes, the relations between these traders under the Sanjait system would be that of a factor and factor with an obligation on the latter to hold the goods of the former in deposit till the same are appropriated by him by its sale or return the goods not so appropriated on any event with its already fixed value. Primarily, the transaction is that of deposit for sale by others and not sale itself. Therefore the money would become due only when the goods are so sold or appropriated and either the account or the return of the goods so deposited is sought by one factor from another.

14. In the present case the finding relates to the period of supply between 1959 and 1961 as far as the first transaction is concerned. As against this, several payments have been made from time to time presumably as and when the goods were sold by the defendants. Eventually, the goods remained in deposit till notice of 7-7-1965 as per Exhibit 72 was duly served and the liability to return the goods was first denied as per Exhibit 74. Thereafter the cause for recovery of the goods would properly arise and that too upon the repudiation evidenced by Exhibit 74 and from that date the suit would be well within time.

15. Another answer found out by the learned Judge on the basis of part payment of the outstanding dues or outstanding price appears to be incorrectly reached. The learned Judge presumably was having in his mind that this was a case of continuous mutual account between the parties. In 1961 certain liability arose and the plaintiff had made a part payment towards that liability. Therefore he treated that the suit was within limitation. It is difficult to endorse as correct this approach or reasoning. In fact, the so-called bill of 20th August 1963, which is signed by Mr. Jokhe is not a payment by the defendants to the plaintiff; but it is a mere bill raising the debit against the defendants and is an act of the plaintiff of adjusting the amount of Rs. 1516/- in the account of the defendants out of the advances with the plaintiff. Surely, that would not be a payment by the defendant for the purposes of saving the limitation. Had the transaction been of pure sale between the parties, this type of dealing and adjustment would not have saved the limitation for the purpose of the plaintiff's claim.

16. Provisions regarding the limitation as applicable to causes provided by the Limitation Act, 1963, have to be applied in the spirit of fairness and justice. Effort should be to sustain the right and remedy of the party or the suiter. The construction that will tend to subserve this purpose as against the construction that will limit or take away the right has always been judicially preferred, (See Umia-shankar Lakhmiram v. Chhotalal (1877) ILR 1 Bom 19, Collector of Broach v. Rajaram Laldas, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 542, Chunilal v. Dahyabhai (1907) ILR 32 Bom 14, P. N. Films Ltd. v. Overseas Films Corporation Ltd., AIR 1958 Bom 10).

17. For application of this rule ever attendant upon the principle of limitation, firstly the controversy between the parties should be properly ascertained particularly with regard to the cause set up by the plaintiff for adjudication. It is on that cause that the law of limitation operates. In the present controversy as indicated above, the agreement between the parties is termed as 'Sanjait' or 'Sanjaiti' and it postulates a commercial relationship wherein the goods or articles of specified value are despatched or deposited with another with liberty to sell or to return the goods as unsold. Two types of relations spring forth from this arrangement. Firstly, the acceptor of the goods or the commercial articles accepts it in deposit having ascertained its value. The transaction of sale thereafter is not the concern of the sender of the goods but it is the whole and entire transaction of that of the latter, i.e., the recipient of the goods. The despatch and delivery lend to a deposit of the goods, the property in which is specifically retained by the despatcher and sender, for he has a right to get returned those goods or the cost already ascertained. No doubt, this first part of the transaction cannot be strictly called the deposit for the depositor is merely interested in getting the pre-ascertained value of the goods so deposited and not always the corpus of the goods itself. The relationship brought about by this arrangement can suitably be termed as a quasi-trust or a quasi-deposit of the goods. Lexicographically it may be called deposit of commercial articles with liberty to sell or deal with the articles at the choice and risk of other, the right to recall or return always being alive. Upon this, the liability that arises against the person receiving in deposit these goods is obvious—to make good the value which is already ascertained or to return the goods. In either case, the refusal either to pay the value or to return the goods despatched and deposited would give rise to a cause of action for the purpose of a civil suit.

18. Having noticed these basic constituents of the transaction, it is easy to turn to the Articles that may govern the cause of the person who despatched and deposited the goods for the purpose of other's sale.

19. Three Articles loom large for appropriate consideration. Art. 55 which is a residuary Article operating upon the causes of action on contract and its breach, will help the suiter seeking compensation for breach of the terms of such a contract when the contract itself is broken or when the breach of that contract occurs or when the contract itself ceases and a suit within three years from those dates will be within limitation. Had the present suit been only for the purpose of compensation on the basis of Sanjaiti contract, in that seeking to recover the value of the goods so supplied, it would have been possible to find out when the defendants committed the breach of the said contract and to count time within three years. But it appears, appropriate Article to apply is Art. 70 or the residuary Art. 113 to the present types of causes of action. Art. 70 deals with the recovery of the moveable property deposited and the time runs from the date of refusal after demand. If the goods are despatched and deposited under the stated understanding or arrangement wherein in case the deposited goods are sold, the deposittee would be liable to return the goods so deposited, makes it clear that though this may not be the strict case of deposit and return of the goods in corpus, this Article should govern the rights of the parties. As stated above, it is implicit in the arrangement between the parties that in case of sale, which is permitted by express agreement, the value already ascertained would be payable in lieu of the goods or otherwise the goods themselves would be returned in the same condition. The term "movable property deposited" in Art. 70 is wide enough to include such type of transaction. The term "deposit" has clearly a wide meaning. (See Lala Gobind v. Chairman of Patna Municipality, (1907) 6 Cal LJ 535 and Balakrishnudu v. Narayanaswamy, ILR 37 Mad 175 : (AIR 1914 Mad 51) and as far as the goods are concerned, wherein the right to recall the goods in specie or return the goods in specie remains intact under the Sanjaiti transaction, there does not appear to be any impediment in covering the cause by applying Art. 70 of the Limitation Act.

20. Even assuming that Art. 70 does not apply under the arrangement and agreement between the parties in cases of present type of transactions, the matter will squarely fall in the residuary Article 113 and the right to sue for return of, the goods so sent under the Sanjaiti transactions would accrue to the plaintiff upon refusal to follow the obligations by the person receiving the goods.

21. Therefore, applying Art. 70 and Art. 113 of the Limitation Act, the cause of action arose only after the refusal or repudiation was communicated by the plaintiff to the defendant and the suit is well within time from that repudiation or refusal.

22. Thus, as the real transaction between the parties is that of deposit of goods for the purposes of appropriation by the defendants, the liability always arising at the time of appropriation and further there being a liability to return the goods unsold, it could only be said that during the period the goods are in deposit the liability remains and it is only when the liability is liquidated, the costs for the return of the goods or payment of its price would arise. As stated above, it is only by reply Exhibit 74 that the cause arose and suit was filed for the recovery of the goods. The property which the plaintiff was entitled to recover was proceeded against well within time.

23. Upon these findings the appeal must fail and the same is accordingly dismissed.

24. Turning to the cross-objections, it is difficult to take any other view of the matter. For the purpose of recording the finding with regard to 281 sarees, there was enough material before Court including the account books and entries therein produced by the defendants. No doubt, in the cross-examination of Manikchand some effort was made to indicate that the accounts were not maintained from day to day and reflected items were clubbed together for over a period. But that is no reason to take any other view of the matter. Between the period there had been seven Sanjait notes and admittedly as against five price was duly received. That left the consideration of 266 sarees and the price thereof. On the side of the plaintiff there is clear omission to show any bill and the plaintiff's witness Balgonda (Exhibit 49) clearly admits that for the items of the supply of 11th December 1963 and 20th January 1964 no bills are available. As against this, the evidence of Ilahi shows that the price for 15 sarees must have been received by cheque amounting to Rs. 191.12 and the balance by the cheque for Rs. 2747.67. The passing of these cheques has been spoken to by the defendants' witness Manikchand. His word supported by the fact of the passing of the cheques has been accepted by the learned trial Judge. Under such circumstances, the grievance made in the cross-objections cannot be upheld and the same cross-objections too are rejected.

25. In the result, the present appeal as well as the cross-objections would stand rejected. Parties to bear their own costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 BOMBAY 436

DIGHE, J.

Dhananjaya and others, Appellants v. Mst. Gajra and others, Respondents.

A.F.A.D. Nos. 434, 436 and 437 of 1965, D/- 18-11-1976.*

(A) Hindu Succession Act (30 of 1956), S. 4 (2) — M. P. Land Revenue Code (1954), S. 151 — Applicability — S. 151 whether embodies law providing for devolution of tenancy rights in respect of agricultural holdings.

Section 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act has to be so read not as providing an exception to the general application of the Hindu Succession Act but as enforcing the position that the Act could not at all have legislated on the subject of "agricultural holdings." If that is so, the result would be that devolution to such holdings would be governed by the local laws. Wherever as in the State of Maharashtra local laws exist, the net result is that the devolution to agricultural lands is in accordance with such local laws. Therefore, there is only a subtle distinction in interpreting subsection (2) of Section 4. From the practical aspect when the local laws exist, there will be no difference. (Para 14)

There is clear distinction between the persons remaining on the land from the tenure-holders and those who are on the land as Bhumiswami or Bhumidhari by their relationship with the State Government. Keeping probably this distinction in view apparently in all the States the phrase "devolution of tenancy rights in respect of agricultural holdings" as appearing in Section 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act was incorporated to speak about the second class of cases where the persons were on land as tenants.

(Para 16)

Without Section 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code or on its application by reason of the express words pointed out in Section 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code, 1954, it is the personal law which would govern the devolution of the land. However it is not correct to say that the personal law is indicative of the personal law which was governing the parties before the enactment of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Case law Discussed.

(B) Hindu Succession Act (30 of 1956), S. 14 (1) — Applicability.

Sub-section (1) of Section 14 makes the limited owner a full owner. It would have application only when the heir referred to therein is not having full ownership, but is having limited ownership.

A. S. Bobde and M. L. Vaidya, for Appellants; V. A. Masodkar and Abid Ali, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT:— These four appeals can be disposed of by common judgment as they raise a common question of law. That question is regarding the interest of the purchaser from a widow in the joint Hindu family.

2. The property sold in the four appeals together with certain other lands, house property, moveables etc. belonged to one Deobhau who died in the year 1954. He left behind two widows, one Malubai and the other Deokabai. Deobhau had two sons by his wife Malubai named Dhananjaya and Zankarsingh who are appellants 1 and 2 in each of the appeals. Malubai, their mother is the third appellant. Deokabai had four daughters through Deobhau by name Gangabai, Tulsabai, Jaiwantibai and Jamnabai who are party defendants as her heirs. The suit with which we are concerned in Second Appeal No. 434 of 1965 was brought by purchaser Gajrabai. The other suits were by the other three purchasers from Deokabai. Deokabai died on 11-7-1961. Prior to that but after the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act she had alienated different properties in favour of the respondents other than her heirs in the four appeals before us.

3. During the lifetime of Deokabai, Dhananjaya, Zankarsingh and Malubai had filed Civil Suit No. 17A of 1958 against Deokabai, purchasers Rameshwardas Kanhaiyalal, Dadu Tukaram, Saji Motiram, Pito Lalji as also Gajrabai for possession of the property transferred by Deokabai. In that suit a compromise was arrived at between the parties on 5th of January 1960. According to the terms of the compromise, the plaintiffs in that suit, namely, minors Dhananjaya, Zankarsingh and Malubai were declared entitled to a decree for possession as claimed. However, the execution of such a decree was postponed for a period of 4 months, during which time the defendants excluding the third defendant who under the compromise decree was declared to have no interest were under the obligation to file a suit for general partition and the execution of the decree in favour of the plaintiffs in their suit was to remain postponed as long as the suit for general partition was pending. In case of default of bringing a suit for general partition within four months, the plaintiffs could execute the decree for possession of the suit property. There was also a declaration that the purchasers defendants Nos. 2 and 4 to 6 in that suit were each owners of the respective undivided share purchased by them from Deokabai and they were at liberty to get their ownership rights ascertained by appropriate action. These purchasers also bound themselves for not transferring or alienating the properties purchased by them; they were to maintain the status quo. Accordingly Gajrabai wife of Hagaruji Kalar and the three purchasers Rameshwardas, Mst. Saji and Pitto son of Lalji filed suits for general partition which came to be heard together.

4. Dhananjaya, Zankarsingh and Malubai were the first three defendants. On their behalf various contentions were raised opposing the relief claimed by the plaintiffs in each of the suits. Pending the suit Deokabai died and thereafter a contention was raised by amending the written statement that the interest of the deceased Deokabai had passed to Dhananjaya, Zankarsingh and Malubai by survivorship under Section 151 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code.

As such the question of partitioning the property did not arise and that was on the basis that Deokabai could only transfer her life interest. The trial Court negated this contention. The trial Court determined the share. However, it was not considered equitable to make an order for general partition and hence only a declaration in favour of the different plaintiffs maintaining their possession was granted.

5. Aggrieved heirs of Deokabai, Dhananjaya, Zankarsingh and Malubai filed appeals against that order. The Assistant Judge, Bhandara who tried these appeals confirmed the order passed by the lower Court by common judgment delivered on 5th of April 1965. Questions agitated related to the law of succession to be applied and the interest of Deokabai in the property, so that whether she had or had not become the absolute owner of the suit property since 17th of June 1956, the date on which the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 came into operation. It was contended that Deokabai, in the circumstances, remained a limited owner and as such, after her lifetime her vendees could not remain in possession.

6. A perusal of the judgment of the learned Assistant Judge shows that the contention that Deokabai had a limited interest was negated on the interpretation of the various provisions of law. The learned Judge also felt that the plaintiffs who were appellants before him were bound by the consent decree which was the contract between the parties solemnly as entered into. While deciding Civil Suit No. 17A of 1958 the parties had legislated for themselves and under the compromise the vendees had become full owners. The learned Judge also held that the plaintiffs were estopped from saying that full interest did not pass to the purchasers.

7. Mr. Bobde appearing for the appellants Dhananjaya, Zankarsingh and Malubai, heirs of Deokabai, has toed the same line as in the lower appellate Court. He maintains that although under Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the property of a female Hindu acquired before or after the commencement of the Act becomes her absolute property, the alienations made by Deokabai were in respect of agricultural lands and on the interpretation of Section 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 that Act did not apply to agricultural holdings. According to him, the matter was governed by Section 151 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, so that the interest on death of Deokabai would pass by inheritance, survivorship or bequest as the case may be but subject to the personal law. He contended that after the year 1951 proprietary rights in agricultural lands almost in any form came to be abolished and on the background of such abolition the word "tenure holder" appearing in Section 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code ought not to be given the restricted meaning, but ought to cover any type of tenancy inclusive of the holding by an individual from the State. By way of a further limb of his argument, he contends that where the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 does not apply, the personal law applicable to Deokabai would be the law other than the Hindu Succession Act, namely, the principles of Hindu Law, under which normally she would have inherited only the life estate and as such after her death the interest would devolve upon the heirs of the original owner.

8. As against this Mr. Masodkar for the respondent No. 1 has contended that by reason of Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, Deokabai became full owner. The sale deeds were passed after the Act was applicable. Section 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act refers to the application of laws for the time being in force providing for the devolution of tenancy rights. As such on a reference to Section 151 of the Code, the personal law inclusive of the full effect of Section 14 would apply and hence on the date of the transfer, Deokabai was the full owner so that she could pass full title to the purchasers.

9. Alternatively he relied upon the terms of the compromise which according to him show the acceptance by the present appellants of the full interest remaining in the transferor Deokabai as well as the acceptance of the position that full interest passed on to the purchasers and hence according to him, the appeals ought to fail. As a branch of the same argument, he also stated that on the background of the compromise the case would fall under Section 14 (1) of the Hindu Succession Act wherein Deokabai would be getting the full title to the property of which she could not be looked upon as a limited owner and hence the purchasers would be the full owners.

10. Section 4 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 deals with the overriding effect of the Act. Sub-section (1) provides for such overriding effect in spite of any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu Law or any custom or usage as part of that law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act, namely, Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Sub-section (2), on which long discussion proceeded runs as follows:

"For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared that nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect the provision of any law for the time being in force providing for the prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or for the fixation of ceiling or for the devolution of tenancy rights in respect of such holdings."

This sub-section comes in the section which is providing an overriding effect of the Act and as the opening words show, it has been enacted "For the removal of doubts." It apparently envisages "provisions of any law for the time being in force providing for the prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or for the fixation of ceilings or for the devolution of tenancy rights in respect of such holdings."

11. Section 151 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1954 runs as follows:

"Subject to his personal law, the interest of a tenure-holder shall on his death pass by inheritance, survivorship or bequest, as the case may be."

The question for consideration therefore arises whether this section embodies the law providing for devolution of tenancy rights in respect of agricultural holdings.

12. A reference must be made to the Division Bench Ruling reported in Smt. Indubai v. Vyankati (AIR 1966 Bom 64), where similar questions came for consideration. As per the facts of that case, the property holder Balaji died leaving two sons as members of the joint family. One of them died leaving behind two sons who were defendants 1 and 2. The other died in 1941 leaving behind his widow Sarubai and daughter Indubai. That daughter was married. Sarubai had filed a suit for partition. She appears to have also executed a will in favour of her daughter. After her death her daughter Indubai claimed alternatively under the will as well as by reason of Section 15 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 looking upon Sarubai as having become the full owner of the suit property. Negating the question of adverse possession by the other heirs on the interpretation of Section 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act and the application of the M. P. Land Revenue Code, 1954, Section 151, the observations contained in placitum (c) are as follows: (At pp. 68 and 69 of AIR)

"In order that the exception created by S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 can apply, the legislation must provide for devolution of tenancies. The M. P. Land Revenue Act is not, however, a tenancy Legislation and consequently exception made in S. 4 (2) cannot apply to it.

Section 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Act merely defines the classes of tenures, their liabilities and privileges. The section prescribes the conditions under which a tenure holder occupies the land. It is clear from the section that the rights of the tenure holders are permanent and heritable. However, no particular law of devolution in respect of tenancies is laid down in the section. The holdings of tenure holders are not tenancies. However, while S. 151 of M. P. Land Revenue Act provides that the holdings of tenure holders are heritable as per their personal law, there are no words in it to mean the personal law on a particular date. The normal rule of construction is that the language of a statute is generally extended to new things which are not known and could have been contemplated by the legislation when it was passed. The personal law contemplated by the section therefore only means the law as applicable to the tenure holder when the succession opened. It does mean the law prevailing at the time that the L. R. Act was enforced. Consequently, the question of S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act saving the rights of survivors does not arise in such a case. There is no need to interpret the words "any law for the time being in force" in S. 14 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act to mean "any law which came into force" once it is held that S. 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Act merely recognises that the tenure is heritable and will pass according to the law applicable to the tenure holder and it does not prescribe the law regarding devolution of tenancy rights in respect of agricultural holdings amongst the Hindus."

The first proposition as obtained therein and discussed in more particulars in paragraph 14 of the judgment, shows that for the application of S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act, the Legislature must provide for devolution of tenancies. In other words, the section is read as showing exception depending upon the existence of the local laws providing for devolution of tenancy rights.

13. The second proposition obtainable from the Division Bench ruling is that the M. P. Land Revenue Code, S. 151 in particular, is not a tenancy legislation. Mr. Bobde for the appellants is taking an exception to both these propositions. Deciding the matter as a Single Judge in normal circumstances the Division Bench ruling would be binding upon me. It is, however, necessary to appreciate the points made out by Mr. Bobde. Incidentally it may be noted that in an earlier ruling Sitabai v. Kothulal, (1958 Nag LJ 319) the Single Judge of this Court has held in similar circumstances that S. 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code, 1954 would apply, that being the law providing for the devolution of tenancies. That view stands superseded by AIR 1966 Bom 64 Indubai's case.

14. Initial objection of Mr. Bobde proceeds on the basis that the Central Government could not legislate on the subject of agricultural holdings. In that context, he wants to read in the opening words of sub-section (2) of S. 4, namely, "For the removal of doubts" an emphasis that the Central Legislature could not intervene to legislate on the subject of agricultural holdings, the same is kept untouched and hence it is indicated that the succession to such lands would be governed by the local laws existing in each of the States. He relies upon the ruling reported in Premadevi v. Joint Director, Consolidation. (AIR 1970 All 238) where the matter was looked into in connection with the tenancy law, namely, U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 and the relevant observations are as follows:— (At p. 240 of AIR)

"In the first place, we are of the opinion that the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, cannot be made applicable to agricultural plots. This Act was passed by the Central Legislature in 1956 and the only entry under which the Central Legislature had the jurisdiction to pass the Act, was entry No. 5 in the third list of the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution. This entry is as follows:

"5. Marriage and divorce, infants and minors, adoption, wills, intestacy and succession, joint family and partition; all matters in respect of which parties in judicial proceedings were immediately before the commencement of this Constitution subject to their personal law." This entry obviously relates only to personal law and laws passed under this entry do not apply to any particular property. They merely determine the personal law. In List 2, Entry No. 18 is as follows: "Land, that is to say, right in or over land, land tenures including the relation of landlord and tenant, and the collection of rents, transfer and alienation of agricultural lands, land improvement and agricultural lands; colonization." The entry which is in the exclusive jurisdiction of the State Legislature is in the widest term. All laws relating to land and land tenures are therefore, within the exclusive jurisdiction of the State Legislature. Even personal law can become applicable to land tenures if so provided in the State Law, but it cannot override State Legislation.

It is noteworthy that in List 3 wherever the entry relates to rights in land 'agricultural land has expressly been excluded. For instance, Entry No. 6 is as follows: "Transfer of property other than agricultural land." Entry No. 7 is as follows:—

Contracts, including partnership, agency, contracts of carriage, and other special forms of contracts, but not including contracts relating to agricultural lands." No such exception was expressly mentioned in Entry No. 5 because this entry related only to matters personal to individuals and did not relate directly to any property. While legislating in respect of such general subject the Legislature must be assumed to pass law only affecting property which it had jurisdiction to legislate about. Gwyer, C. J. while delivering the judgment of the Federal Court in a reference on the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937 reported in AIR 1941 FC 72 observed as follows:—

"There is a general presumption that a Legislature does not intend to exceed its jurisdiction. When a Legislature with limited and restricted powers makes use of a word of such wide and general import as "property," the presumption must surely be that it is using it with reference to that kind of property with respect to which it is competent to legislate and to no other."

The Hindu Succession Act, 1956 was passed merely to alter the personal law of succession applicable to Hindus. It had no reference to any kind of property in particular and was not meant to govern rights in agricultural tenancies. Sub-s. (2) of S. 4 of the Act runs as follows:—

"For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared that nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any law for the time being in force providing for the prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or for the fixation of ceilings or for the devolution of tenancy rights in respect of such holdings." This sub-section indicates that it was only for the removal of doubts that this provision, had been included. Even without this provision, the Act could not apply to agricultural holdings.

Under the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act which regulated the tenancy rights, there is no provision applying personal law to any of the tenures created under that Act and thus the provisions of the Hindu Succession Act are wholly inapplicable to the land tenures under the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act."

In terms, therefore, it has been said that the Hindu Succession Act could be looked upon as having been passed under Entry No. 5 of the Third List of the Seventh Schedule giving power to regulate the personal law. But under Entry No. 18 of the Second List 'agricultural holdings' is exclusively the State subject. The Central Government, therefore, could not legislate on that subject. Hence what has been legislated cannot be made applicable to agricultural holdings. Mr. Bobde is thus making a valid point that S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act has to be so read not as providing an exception to the general application of the Hindu Succession Act but as enforcing the position that the Act could not at all have legislated on the subject of "agricultural holdings." If that is so, the result would be that devolution to such holdings would be governed by the local laws. Incidentally, it may be noticed that whether on the interpretation put forward by Mr. Bobde or whether upon looking the sub-clause as a conditional clause, wherever as in the State of Maharashtra local laws exist, the net result is that the devolution to agricultural lands is in accordance with such local laws. Therefore, there is only a subtle distinction in interpreting Sub-s. (2) of S. 4. From the practical aspect when the local laws exist, there will be no difference.

15. The further question canvassed is regarding the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code and in particular S. 151 thereof, on which reliance is placed being a piece of legislation providing for devolution of tenancy rights. Our Division Bench in Indubai v. Vyankati (AIR 1966 Bom 64) (Cit. sup), has held that it does not so regulate the devolution of the agricultural tenancies.

16. In this connection if we have a look at the M. P. Land Revenue Code, 1954, we find that S. 151 comes under Chapter XII dealing with 'tenure-holders.' Chapter XIII of that Code consisting of one S. 164, deals with Government lessees laying down that every person who holds land from the State Government or to whom a right to occupy land is granted by the State Government or the Collector and who is not entitled to hold land as a tenure-holder shall be called a Government lessee in respect of such land. Quite a distinction is drawn, therefore, between tenure-holders and a person not a tenure-holder. It is Chapter XIV which now stands repealed by the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region and Kutch Area) Act, 1958. That provided for "Tenants" and obviously the repealing Act elaborately provides for the status and the character of tenants. In this context if we refer to sub-s. (20) of S. 2, 'tenure-holder' is defined as follows:

"'Tenure-holder' means a person holding land from the State Government as a Bhumiswami or Bhumidhari."

"Tenant" is defined in Sub-s. (19) of S. 2 as follows:

"'Tenant' means a person holding land from a tenure-holder as an ordinary or an occupancy tenant under Chapter XIV."

Section 145 of the Code indicates the two types of tenure-holders namely, Bhumiswami and Bhumidhari and by reason of the definition contained in sub-sec. (19) of S. 2, the tenant would be the person holding land from a tenure holder. The Act, therefore makes a clear distinction between the persons remaining on the land from the tenure-holders and those who are on the land as Bhumiswami or Bhumidhari by their relationship with State Government. Keeping probably this distinction in view apparently in all the States the phrase "devolution of tenancy rights in respect of agricultural holdings" as appearing in [S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act was incorporated to speak about the second class of cases where the persons were on land as tenants.

17. Mr. Bobde, however, takes exception to this line of interpretation. He invites me to understand the background that after 1951 almost all proprietary rights in land were abolished and so-called tenure-holders in a sense became the tenants from Government. He is supporting his reasoning by adverting to this decision reported in Uma Shanker v. Deputy Director of Consolidation. (AIR 1973 All 407). That was a case under the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act and the question was regarding the devolution in case of a Bhumidar under the provisions of the Hindu Succession Act. S. 4 (2) of the Act came in for discussion and in paragraph 5 it is observed by the learned Judges that the Hindu Succession Act does not define the term "tenancy rights." It was, therefore, said that it must be deemed to have been used in its ordinary meaning. After looking into the various meanings given in different Dictionaries, it was held that the terms "tenancy" and "tenure" were clearly interchangeable words and they connote one and the same thing.

18. For adopting this construction my attention was also invited to the earlier Supreme Court ruling reported in Indu Bhusan v. Rama Sundari Debi, (AIR 1970 SC 228) where the occasion was to consider the scope and effect of Entry No. 3 in the matter of houses acquired, requisitioned or allotted for military purposes etc. Entry No. 18 in List II of the Seventh Schedule was also under discussion. That is in respect of the rights over the land, land tenures including the relationship of landlord and tenant and the collection of rents. In this context the observations are made in paragraph 12 as follows:

".....the relation of landlord and tenant is mentioned as being included in land tenures and the expression "land tenures" would not, in our opinion, appropriately cover tenancy of buildings or of house accommodation. That expression is only used with reference to relationship between landlord and tenant in respect of vacant lands."

No doubt the observations are made for comprising the land on which houses are put up, but the interpretation on Entry No. 18, as it stood, is taken as inclusive of relationship between landlord and tenant including the land tenures. Obviously however the observations are made to recite the subject on which there could be Legislation; it includes undoubtedly 'Land tenures' and ought not to be of much assistance to Mr. Bobde. However, in support of the construction he has put forth regarding the initial interpretation of Sub-s. (2) of S. 4 of the Hindu Succession Act and the interpretation of the words 'devolution of tenancy rights in respect of agricultural holdings,' Mr. Bobde relied upon a recent Full Bench decision of the Madhya Pradesh High Court reported in Nahar Hirasingsh v. Mst. Dukalhin. (AIR 1974 Mad Pra 141) (FB). The observation in this case has to be appreciated on the background that the Madhya Pradesh High Court had till then followed the Division Bench decision of the Bombay High Court in Indubai v. Vyankati (AIR 1966 Bom 64). (cit. sup.) It has now been dissented from; the relevant observations can be taken from the brief note resting upon paragraph 22 of the judgment, which runs as follows. (At p. 149 of AIR).

"Provisions of the M. P. Land Revenue Code (1959) contemplate a tenure holder to mean not only a plot proprietor, but also a tenant, who previously was considered as such and on whom better rights are intended to be bestowed by this new enactment. The distinction is not very real but imaginary and that the Parliament while using the phrase 'devolution of tenancy rights' in S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, meant to use it in the broadest possible sense so as to include all rights of devolution in relation to agricultural lands not only confined to tenancy rights, but also to tenure holder's rights. However, the actual effect of this would be that where a tenancy or a land tenure legislation makes a special provision for devolution of rights to lands, that provision will prevail and in that event S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, will make the provisions of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, inapplicable to such devolutions provided by the tenancy or the land tenure legislations. But, if the land tenure legislation itself makes the personal law of the parties applicable, in that event certainly the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 or any other personal law will be applicable."

case (AIR 1974 Madh Pra 141 (FB)), it must be said that the two propositions made in the Division Bench ruling of our High Court in Smt. Indubai v. Vyankati (AIR 1966 Bom 64), require reconsideration. I do not think, however, that I am called upon in these appeals to ask for any such directions because I feel that on consideration of the other material, the appellants must fail in their contention. Ultimately the points made on behalf of the appellants is the application of the personal law. Without S. 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code as considered in Smt. Indubai v. Vyankati (AIR 1966 Bom 64) or on its application by reason of the express words pointed out in S. 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code, 1954, it is the personal law which would govern the devolution of the land. I, however, cannot appreciate Mr. Bobde's argument that the personal law is indicative of the personal law which was governing the parties before the enactment of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. It is only if that proposition is accepted that Deokabai could be said to have had Women's Estate or Widow's estate and it is only then that the appellants would be able to non-suit the plaintiffs in the four appeals. If on the other hand, personal law as applicable on the date succession opened is to be applied, it will take in its full stride the effect of S. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act by virtue of its application as a canon of personal law and at the time the different alienations were made by Deokabai she would be taken as having passed on the full interest which she herself possessed by reason of her personal law to which she was subject, namely, under S. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act. The very decision of the Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court upon which reliance is placed does not support Mr. Bobde on the line he has chosen to canvass. The relevant observations are in paragraph 24 of that decision which runs as follows: (At p. 150 of AIR).

"This brings us to the other question as to which personal law would govern the matter of devolution. In this connection we would affirm the view of the Division Bench of this Court in AIR 1968 Madh Pra 247 (supra), which has followed the view of the Bombay High Court in AIR 1966 Bom 64 (supra). In our opinion, the said two Division Bench cases had taken the correct view and the personal law applicable will be the law as amended from time to time upto the stage when the relevant question of devolution comes to be considered. If we were to accept the untenable view of Vyas J., it will imply as pointed out in one of the Single Bench decisions of this Court that the question of succession will have to be considered with reference to the point of time when a person is alive. That will clearly be absurd and such an interpretation cannot be permitted as was put on S. 151 of the M. P. Land Revenue Code, 1954 by Vyas J., of the Bombay High Court and by K. L. Pandey, J., of this Court."

In fact on this aspect of the application of personal law the observations in paragraph 16 of the Division Bench decision in Indubai v. Vyankati, (AIR 1966 Bom 64) (sup.) would also provide an able guide.

"What Mr. Khare contends is that the words "subject to his personal law" meant the personal law as it existed when the statute was passed, that is, in 1954. He contends that S. 151 (of Land Revenue Code) is a reproduction of S. 11 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act 1920, as amended in 1941, and the words "subject to his personal law" must be confined only to the law as then obtaining. The history of the legislation does not justify the contention. It may be that the Tenancy Act came to be repealed by the Code but that may be due to the very comprehensive recent tenancy legislation. Does it mean the personal law as in force in 1928, 1941 or the personal law as in force in 1954? The purpose of S. 151 was one of applying the law of succession by which a holder was governed. It can only mean personal law by which he was governed when the succession opened. There are no words in this section to mean personal law as applicable on a particular day. The normal rule of construction is that "the language of a statute is generally extended to new things which are not known and could have been contemplated by the legislation when it was passed. (Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes pp. 76 and 262). Until 1956 the personal law of a Hindu was the ordinary law applicable to him. By the enactment of Hindu Succession Act, his personal law was changed in supersession of all his old law and therefore, on the date when the question arose this became his personal law."

Consequently although there may be force in the contention regarding the in-interpretation of S. 4 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act and the interpretation to be put on S. 151 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, the net result would work against the appellants, the purchasers from Deokabai would be having full interest and on that score the contention of the appellants ought to be negatived.

19. It is rather unnecessary on this conclusion to refer to Mr. Masodkar's argument based on the interpretation of term No. 4 in the compromise precipe in Civil Suit No. 17-A of 1958 which runs as follows:

"Defendants 2 and 4 to 6 have become the owners of the undivided share they have purchased from the defendant No. 1 and they have the right to take action for ascertaining the ownership rights of each of them."

Stress is laid by Mr. Masodkar on the words 'ownership of undivided share' (अविभक्त हिस्साचे मालीक).

He interprets this term as showing that full ownership was conceded by the opposing plaintiffs in that suit both in Deokabai and the vendees from her. The words, however, speak of the share and ownership. They do not say anything about the totality of the interest or otherwise. The words appear to me to be recognising only the alienations made by Deokabai and nothing more. It does not appear to be the acceptance of the enlarged interest. In view of it question of executing the terms of contract embodied in the consent decree or of any estoppel does not arise.

20. I am also unable to appreciate his contention regarding Section 14 (1) on the supposed interpretation of the term as giving the full rights of Deokabai under Section 14 (1). Sub-section (1) of S. 14 makes the limited owner a full owner. It would have application only when the heir referred to therein is not having full ownership, but is having limited ownership. If on the basis of the consent decree Deokabai was the full owner, then on that supposition there would be nothing upon which S. 14 (1) would act.

21. As said earlier, however the appellants ought to fail in opposing the alienations by saying that after the lifetime of Deokabai they had no interest.

22. The finding of both the courts on that aspect is maintained. However, I am unable to appreciate the ultimate decree passed by the trial Judge and confirmed by the first appellate Court. The decree refers to the maintenance of possession by the plaintiffs in different suits, namely, the alienees and asks them to wait till the suit for general partition is filed. True it is, that a purchaser would in normal circumstances not be able to enforce the general partition against the wish of the coparceners. He would have to wait his turn. The facts of the present case, however, are different. The term of general partition was embodied in the consent decree, nay, there was risk of these plaintiffs losing their rights of ownership in case such a suit was not filed within four months. The coparceners thus had impliedly agreed for a suit for general partition, the result of which was the filing of different suits with which we are concerned in second appeals. These suits themselves would have to be looked upon as a combined action for general partition. The shares appear to have been defined, if we look to paragraph 24 of the judgment of the learned trial Judge. But a glance at the written statement would show that some more property is stated to be the joint family property which ought to be put in hotch-pot. On that there is no material to hold some way or the other. Hence the suits will have to be remanded to the trial Court for decision on the point regarding the totality of the property of which there would be partition. Of course at that time if the coparceners or some of them show their willingness to remain joint, the finding would be adjusted accordingly. As it stands, I cannot persuade myself to hold that the defendants fail on the question of general partition remaining open to the risk of not following the term of the contract and that they should wait indefinitely.

23. The appellants have virtually failed. I, therefore, feel that they will have to bear the costs of these second appeals, I pass the following order.

The finding of the two courts below that Deokabai had full interest which passed on to the defendants vendees is maintained, but the various suits are remanded to the trial Court for passing an appropriate decree of general partition in the light of the observations made above. The appellants in second appeals to bear their own costs, and pay those of the respondents.

AIR 1977 BOMBAY 445

DESHMUKH, J.

Mohit Gajadhar Ahir, Applicant v. Inderbali Rangai Ahir and others, Opponents.

Civil Revn. Appln. No. 4 of 1976, D/- 24-1-1977.*

Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 28 — Suit by tenant for declaration of his tenancy — Defendant-rival tenant also claiming to be tenant — Jurisdiction of Court of Small Causes.

The plaintiff was originally accepted as tenant by the defendants-landlords in the earlier litigations started by the defendant-rival tenant claiming to be the lawful tenant. The defendants-landlords, however, subsequently changed their stand and accepted the defendant-rival tenant as a tenant instead of the plaintiff. Taking advantage of this position, the defendant-rival tenant filed application claiming eviction against the plaintiff as a result of which the present suit was filed by the plaintiff for declaration of his tenancy and for permanent injunction restraining the defendants-landlords from treating the defendant-rival tenant as a tenant.

Held, the Court of Small Causes had jurisdiction to try the suit. When the plaintiff was asking for a declaration from the court, he was asking for a decision on an issue between landlord and tenant. Though the target prima facie appeared to be defendant-rival tenant, it was substantially a suit against the landlords (who were cleverly remaining behind the scene) for relief which a tenant can claim under the provisions of the Rent Act. To say that it was merely a suit between two rival tenants is to exaggerate technicalities to the position of a substantial dispute.

M. V. Shah, for Applicant; Kishor V. Tembe, for Opponents Nos. 2, 3, 5 and 6.

ORDER:— This is a revision application by the original plaintiff against the appellate order of the Division Bench of the Court of Small Causes at Bombay. The facts of the litigation which may be noted for the purpose of appreciating the present revision application are these:

JU/JU/D987/77/MBR/RSK

2. Umer Mansion, Arthur Road, Jacob Circle, Bombay-11, is a property belonging to a trust of which original defendants Nos. 1 to 5 and present respondents Nos. 2 to 6 or 7 appeared to be the trustees. The plaintiff's case in the trial Court was that one Khodabhai was the original tenant of room No. 3 of these premises from the trustees. Khodabhai consented in writing that the tenancy be transferred in the name of the plaintiff and on the strength of that writing, the trustees not only acted upon it but actually accepted the plaintiff as a tenant of that room and issued rent bills in his name from the year 1960. In this manner as a lawful tenant of room No. 3 directly from the trustees the plaintiff is in occupation in his own right as full-fledged tenant. That occupation began in 1960 and is even continuing now.

3. Defendant No. 1, present respondent No. 1 called Inder Bali Rangai Ahir, is original defendant No. 6 in the present litigation. This defendant is playing the role, as has been described by the Appellate Court, as a rival tenant. For the convenience of reference, the plaintiff will be described as a tenant and Inder Bali as a rival tenant. According to the plaintiff, the rival tenant was merely staying with him as a licensee and had nothing to do with the premises. However, this rival tenant took into his head to claim tenancy and to challenge right, title and interest of the present plaintiff tenant. Hence he filed Suit No. 435/60 in the Court of Small Causes at Bombay for a declaration that he was the lawful sub-tenant of Khodabhai or after his demise his son Hirubhai Khodabhai. He joined the present plaintiff as well as the trustees as party defendants. However, he withdrew that suit with liberty to file another on the same cause of action. Subsequently he filed Suit No. 2327/62 in the Court of Small Causes without joining Hirubhai, the legal heir and representative of the original tenant Khodabhai, for a declaration that the tenancy created by defendants Nos. 1 to 5, the trustees, in favour of the present plaintiff is not a valid one and that in law he continues to be the lawful sub-tenant of Hirubhai and therefore a tenant of the trustees. In both these suits, viz. Suit Nos. 435/60 and 2327/62, the trustees as owners filed written statements or defences entirely supporting the present petitioner. In other words, they accepted the proposition that Khodabhai withdrew his tenancy and the present plaintiff was accepted as a direct tenant by the trustees. They therefore supported the claim of the plaintiff in regard to his title to the tenancy and his physical possession as against the claim of the rival tenant.

4. The plaintiff says that in spite of such a defence solemnly taken by the trustees they have somehow changed their mind and have taken a complete somersault. In spite of the written statement mentioned above and during the pendency of the suit No. 2327/62 they accepted the rival tenant as their direct tenant and began issuing rent bills in his name. This fact was notified to the Court by the rival tenant on 19-8-1964 and the rival tenant withdrew his suit 2327/62. However, this new development having taken place much earlier, the rival tenant filed an application under Section 41 of the Small Causes Court Act, being No. 819/E of 1963 on 12-11-1963. He claimed eviction against the present plaintiff on the basis of the rent bills in his favour issued by the trustees.

5. When the present plaintiff became aware of these proceedings he became panicky and rushed to the same Court by filing Suit No. 5923/64 which is the subject-matter of the present revision application. In this suit, he joined all the trustees as defendants Nos. 1 to 5 and the rival tenant as defendant No. 6. By giving the history of the present litigation including the solemn written statement filed by the trustees earlier, he made an application that he is a lawful tenant of defendants Nos. 1 to 5 and not defendant No. 6. He further asserted that he was in physical possession and enjoyment of the property as a tenant through defendants Nos. 1 to 5 and he had a right to protect that tenancy as well as possession. He then alleged that defendants Nos. 1 to 5 are trying to remove him from possession and are issuing rent bills in the name of defendant No. 6, the rival tenant. Being armed with such rent bills, defendant No. 6 has approached the Small Causes Court by eviction application described above. In the circumstances, he claimed that his tenancy be upheld after giving that declaration and defendants Nos. 1 to 5 be restrained permanently by an order of the Court from treating defendant No. 6, the rival tenant, as a tenant and also a mandatory injunction of the Court directing them to treat the plaintiff as their tenant.

6. This suit was now opposed by the trustees as well as defendant No. 6, the rival tenant. One of the points raised undoubtedly was that the Small Causes Court had no jurisdiction. However, on this technical issue as also on the substantive issues based upon the pleadings of the parties, the learned trial Judge of the Court of Small Causes gave findings entirely in favour of the plaintiff. He held that the plaintiff was a tenant in physical possession. He further held that defendants Nos. 1 to 5 were the landlords who had to accept the plaintiff as a tenant. He therefore restrained defendants Nos. 1 to 5 from doing anything by way of encroaching upon the right of the plaintiff as a tenant or to affect his possession as a tenant. Incidentally of course the learned trial Judge passed an order of injunction even against defendant No. 6 the rival tenant from calling himself as a tenant.

7. Against such a decree the original defendant No. 6, the rival tenant, alone went in appeal to the Bench of Two Judges of the Court of Small Causes. That was Appeal No. 88 of 1968. By their order dated 15th October 1975 the two learned Judges allowed the appeal purely on a technical question of jurisdiction and held that the type of the suit the plaintiff has filed in this litigation is not within the special jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes as contemplated by Section 28 of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Bombay Rent Act'). Their main reasoning is that this is essentially a suit between the two rival tenants who want to claim priority over each other and this is not a suit between the tenant and the landlord either relating to rent or possession as contemplated by S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. This being their view, the appeal was allowed and the suit was dismissed. They therefore find it unnecessary to consider the other questions of facts arising in the litigation. Being aggrieved by such an order, the plaintiff has filed this revision application. The sole point that arises for my consideration is whether looking to the facts and circumstances of the case and the claim made by the plaintiff, the Court of Small Causes, Bombay, has jurisdiction to try the suit under Section 28 of the Bombay Rent Act.

8. Though the respondents are served only the trustees appeared through their Advocate and though an appearance has put by the rival tenant through an Advocate I have had no advantage of hearing that Advocate as he is not present today when the matter was called and heard. Mr. Tembe, the Advocate of the present trustees submits that there appears to be some more trustees other than the present trustees so far as the present suit is concerned. However, he has no definite instructions and his request for adjournment of the matter for some time to ascertain this fact was rejected by me.

9. The only question is whether the present suit can squarely fall within the provisions of Section 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. The provisions of Section 28 of the Bombay Rent Act create the Court of Small Causes, Bombay, as the Court of exclusive jurisdiction to entertain and try any suit or proceeding between a landlord and a tenant relating to the recovery of rent or possession of any premises to which any of the provisions of this part apply, and to decide any application made under this Act and to deal with any claim or question arising out of this Act or any of its provisions and subject to the provisions of subsection (2) no other court shall have jurisdiction to entertain any such suit, proceeding or application or to deal with such claim or question. Undoubtedly therefore where the claim can fall within the ambit of this section, the Court of Small Causes, alone will have jurisdiction. The Appellate Bench of the Small Causes Court was mainly influenced by the fact that this suit appears to be a suit between two rival tenants and it is not a suit between landlord and tenant. However, if the facts which I have summarised above, are examined closely, it would be apparent that though the target prima facie appears to be defendant No. 6, who is a rival tenant, the real mischief lies with the trustees, which are the landlords. They are cleverly remaining behind the scene and are putting forth defendant No. 6 as a person who could set up a claim against the present plaintiff.

10. The discussion I am making at this stage regarding the pleas taken by the trustees and their position in this litigation is not so much with a view to decide the facts and to hamper the jurisdiction of the trial Court and the Appellate Bench of the Court of Small Causes to discuss and decide those facts. I am merely referring to the history which cannot be gainsaid to point out how the positions are being changed from time to time by the trustees. In the two earlier litigations at the instance of the present plaintiff the trustees accepted the present plaintiff as a tenant. That would prima facie make it clear that the plaintiff's allegation that Khodabhai withdrew his tenancy rights and consented to induct the present plaintiff as a tenant was accepted by the trustees and the rent bills were issued in his favour. That position continued at least till 1963, for upwards of three years. It is only when the second suit filed by the rival tenant was pending in the Court of Small Causes that the trustees made a complete volte-face and began issuing rent receipts in the name of the rival tenant. Why and how they changed so is a matter for the Court of facts to investigate. However, prima facie it does appear that the trustees first acknowledged the plaintiff as a tenant from 1960 to 1963 and thereafter changed their front.

11. Now, let us consider the consequence of the change of this front. They have not only stopped issuing rent bills to the plaintiff but have started issuing directly in favour of the rival tenant, defendant No. 6. It is this act of the landlords which has armed defendant No. 6 with a right to see that he is a tenant and he must get possession from the plaintiff, who is in unauthorised occupation of the premises. It is on that footing that an application under Section 41 of the Small Causes Court Act could be filed by defendant No. 6. The landlords therefore are directly responsible for enabling defendant No. 6, the rival tenant, to hold these proceedings. Since they are supporting him to do so, it means that they are as if prosecuting the remedy of evicting the plaintiff by remaining behind the screen.

12. When the plaintiff therefore asks for a declaration from the Court of Small Causes, which is a court of exclusive jurisdiction, that he is a tenant of the premises through the landlords, viz. the trustees, he is asking for a decision on an issue between a landlord and a tenant, which that court alone can decide. If that issue is answered in his favour, the cloud created upon his possession would be cleared and the remedy which apparently appears through the instrumentality of defendant No. 6 is in fact, in my view, a mischief of the landlords themselves. In other words, the plaintiff is asking the Small Causes Court to protect his right as a tenant against the landlords. On these facts it is difficult for me to understand why this could not be described as a suit between a landlord and a tenant relating to the property which is a tenanted property. Tenancy as well as possession as a tenant are the issues within the exclusive jurisdiction of Small Causes Court. Those are the very issues raised by the present plaintiff in his litigation. Since defendant No. 6 is claiming to be the tenant, for once it does appear that the plaintiff is claiming substantial relief against defendant No. 6. However, as the landlords themselves are parties to the litigation, it is in my view, substantially a suit against the landlord and again substantially a suit for relief which a tenant can claim under the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act.

13. The plaintiff is not merely asking to protect his possession against the rival tenant, but he is asking for a declaration that he be declared as a tenant of the trustees and the trustees who have changed their front should be directed not to disturb the plaintiff's possession as tenant except through appropriate proceedings.

14. This being the real nature of the suit, I do not think that the Court of Small Causes could not have jurisdiction. To say on the face of the record that this is merely a suit between two rival tenants is to exaggerate technicalities to the position of a substantial dispute. A substance of the matter has to be seen and not the form. Viewed in that light, the substantial dispute is between the landlords and the position relating to the plaintiff as a tenant. In the circumstances the trial Judge of the Small Causes Court was right in holding that he had jurisdiction and the Appellate Bench was in clear error.

15. However, unfortunately the Appellate Bench has not disposed of the matter on merits, which it could have done and the remand would have been obviated. However, since they have chosen to dispose of the appeal purely on a technical point and have further observed in paragraph 7 of the judgment that they consider it unnecessary to discuss the other issues involved in the suit, I have no alternative but to allow this revision application and restore back Appeal No. 88/68 to the Appellate Bench of the Court of Small Causes for trying it as an appeal which it has jurisdiction to decide and thereafter to dispose of on the merits of the matter.

16. Mr. Shah tells me that taking advantage of the Appellate Court's Judgment, the trustees have themselves filed a suit in the Small Causes Court, being RAE. NR. Suit No. 1070/5673 of 1976 against the rival tenant, defendant No. 6, for possession. They are treating him as a tenant already and alleging that he being in arrears they are entitled to ask for possession from him. If this litigation were to be allowed to go without finally disposing of the present litigation, the landlords would be practically entitled to evict the present petitioner-plaintiff, who calls himself a tenant. By resorting to clever means and remedies a dispute which is substantially between a landlord and a tenant cannot be allowed to appear as not between a landlord and a tenant and the machinations of such a landlord could not be allowed to succeed. I therefore direct that RAE. NR. Suit No. 1070/5674 of 1976 pending in the Court of Small Causes shall be stayed until Appeal No. 88/68 is disposed of on merits.

17. The revision application thus succeeds and the rule is made absolute with costs.

Revision allowed.

Prayag Deb Ganguly, Plaintiff v. Sm.
Rama Roy, Defendant.

Suit No. 173 of 1973, D/- 25-8-1976.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), Order 37 — Suit filed on Negotiable Instrument for value below Rs. 5,000/- — High Court has jurisdiction to entertain. ((1) Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 18; (2) Letters Patent (Cal), Cl. 12; (3) Calcutta City Civil Court Act (21 of 1953), S. 5 (4) and (5) read with First Schedule, Item 17). Suit No. 1459 of 1966, D/- 7-12-1971 (Cal), Overruled.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Sections 5 (4) and 5 (5) read with Item 17 of First Schedule of Calcutta City Civil Court Act, there is no bar to the entertainment of a suit on a Negotiable Instrument which has been instituted under Order 37 of the Civil P. C. for recovery of a sum of Rs. 5,000/- by the High Court in its original side under Order 37 of the Civil P. C. and passing of a decree in the suit. Suit No. 1459 of 1966, D/- 7-12-1971 (Cal), Overruled; AIR 1960 SC 936 and AIR 1929 Cal 560, Ref.; AIR 1917 Cal 657, Approved; AIR 1969 SC 823 and AIR 1918 Low Bur 135 (1), Ref. (Para 16)

The combined effect of clause 12 of Letters Patent (Cal), Section 18 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act and Section 5 (4) and (5) read with item No. 17 of the First Schedule of the Calcutta City Civil Court Act is that both the Small Cause Court and the High Court have jurisdiction to try suits above one hundred rupees and upto five thousand rupees, whereas the City Civil Court shall try suits above five thousand rupees and upto fifty thousand rupees. (Para 8)

S. Pal with P. Choudhuri, for Plaintiff.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J. — The question that arises in this Reference is whether the High Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit on a Negotiable Instrument which has been instituted under Order XXXVII of the Code of Civil Procedure for the recovery of a sum below Rs. 5,000/- in view of the provisions of the Calcutta City Civil Court Act, 1953.

2. In Suit No. 1459 of 1966 (Cal), (Kamalabala Mahapatra v. Golam Khan), Mr. Justice Ghose has held that this Court has no jurisdiction to try and determine a suit under Order XXXVII of the Code of Civil Procedure when the value of the suit is below Rs. 5,000/-. This decision was given on 7-12-1971.

3. The present suit being Suit No. 173 of 1973, (Prayag Deb Ganguly v. Sm. Rama Roy) is a suit under O. XXXVII of the Code for recovery of a sum of Rs. 3,235/-. It came up for hearing before Mr. Justice Salil Kumar Roy Chowdhury on 19th September, 1973. Mr. Justice Roy Chowdhury was inclined to pass a decree but in view of the earlier decision of Mr. Justice Ghose he has referred the matter to a larger Bench. Mr. Justice Roy Chowdhury has relied on the Supreme Court's observations in Mahadeolal Kanodia v. Administrator General of West Bengal, AIR 1960 SC 936 for the purpose of making this Reference. The observations are as follows:—

"If one Division Bench of a High Court is unable to distinguish a previous decision of another Division Bench, and holding the view that the earlier decision is wrong itself gives effect to that view the result would be utter confusion. The position would be equally bad where a Judge sitting singly in the High Court is of opinion that the previous decision of another single Judge on a question of law is wrong and gives effect to that view instead of referring the matter to a larger Bench. In such a case lawyers would not know how to advise their clients and all Courts subordinate to the High Court would find themselves in an embarrassing position of having to choose between dissident judgments of their own High Court."

4. In this Reference we have to consider the relevant provisions of:

(a) Clause 12 of the Letters Patent of 1865,

(b) Section 18 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 as amended upto-date.

(c) Section 5 (4) and (5) of the City Civil Court Act, 1953, read with the 17th item in the First Schedule thereof.

5. Clause 12 of the Letters Patent lays down that the High Court shall not have original jurisdiction in cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta, in which the debt or damage, or value of the property sued for, does not exceed one hundred rupees.

6. Section 18 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 prescribes that the Small Cause Court shall have jurisdiction to try all suits of civil nature when the amount or value of the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees.

7. Sub-section (4) of Section 5 of the City Civil Court Act, 1953 lays down that the City Civil Court shall not have jurisdiction to try suits and proceedings of the description specified in the First Schedule. Item No. 17 in the First Schedule is: "Suits and proceedings triable by the Small Cause Court." Sub-section (5) of Section 5 of the City Civil Court Act, 1953 says that all suits and proceedings which are not triable by the City Civil Court shall continue to be triable by the High Court or the Small Cause Court or any other Court, tribunal or authority, as the case may be as hereinbefore. Under this Act the City Civil Court has been given exclusive jurisdiction to try suits not exceeding fifty thousand rupees in value which were previously triable by the High Court in its original side.

8. The combined effect of the above provisions is that both the Small Cause Court and the High Court have jurisdiction to try suits above one hundred rupees and upto five thousand rupees, whereas the City Civil Court shall try suits above five thousand rupees and upto fifty thousand rupees.

9. The question that arises for our decision in this reference is whether a suit under Order 37 of the Code can be instituted in the High Court when the same suit can be instituted in the Small Cause Court. In other words, whether a suit on a negotiable instrument above one hundred rupees and upto five thousand rupees which can be instituted in the Small Cause Court can also be instituted in the High Court under Order 37 of the Code. Order 37, it is well-known, is not applicable to the Small Cause Court at all.

10. The answer to the question is that there is a difference between pecuniary jurisdiction and the procedure for enforcement of that jurisdiction. Pecuniary jurisdiction has been conferred on this Court by Clause 12 of the Letters Patent as noted above read with the other provisions we have referred to. Order 37 is a manner or method of enforcing that jurisdiction. In this view of the matter we do not see any impediment in the way of this Court entertaining a suit under Order 37 of the Code when a suit of the same value can be entertained by the Small Cause Court as well.

11. There is no direct authority on the subject, but it may be of some assistance to refer to some of the decided cases. In Manmohan Kumar v. Abu Jafer, AIR 1929 Cal 560, it was stated that where a suit was cognizable in the Small Cause Court and where it was instituted in the High Court the provisions of S. 22 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act were attracted. In cases governed by Section 22 no costs are allowable to the plaintiff unless the Judge who tries the suit certifies that it was one fit to be brought in the High Court. A party, having chosen to avail himself of O. 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure in a suit for the recovery of a sum which is less than the amount mentioned in Section 22 (i. e., less than one thousand rupees), takes the risk of having no costs allowed to him unless he can induce the Judge to certify that it is a fit case to be brought in the High Court.

12. This decision shows that a suit under Order 37 could be entertained by the High Court even though the value of the suit was less than one thousand rupees except that the plaintiff could be deprived of costs.

13. In Mani Mohan Mondal v. Ram Ratan Mondal, ILR 43 Cal 148 at p. 152 = (AIR 1917 Cal 657) a Division Bench of this Court has said :

"The body of the Code (i. e., the Civil Procedure Code), is fundamental and is unalterable except by the Legislature; the rules are concerned with details and machinery and can be more readily altered. Thus, it will be found that the body of the Code creates jurisdiction while the rules indicate the mode in which it is to be exercised. It follows that the body of the Code is expressed in more general terms, but it has to be read in conjunction with the more particular provisions of the rules."

This is a decision which emphasises the point we have been making, namely, the distinction to be observed between the pecuniary jurisdiction and the machinery for enforcement of the jurisdiction.

14. That Order 37 is a procedural provision only has been made clear in Wor Lee Lone v. A. Rahman, AIR 1918 Low Bur 135 (1). A Division Bench of the Court has said :

"O. 37 lays down certain rules of procedure which are applicable only to the Chief Court, and such rules of procedure can only be applied after the plaint has been admitted. The rules do not in any way alter the nature of the suit, nor the jurisdiction of the Court. * * *"

15. We may also mention another point of relevance. In a suit under O. 37 the High Court alone has jurisdiction to pass a decree and jurisdiction depends not only on the right to entertain a suit but also to give the relief asked for. The Supreme Court in Official Trustee, West Bengal v. Sachindra, AIR 1969 SC 823 has said that before a Court can be held to have jurisdiction to decide a particular matter it must not only have jurisdiction to try the suit brought, but must also have the authority to pass the orders sought for. It is not sufficient that it has some jurisdiction in relation to the subject-matter of the suit. Its jurisdiction must include the power to hear and decide the questions at issue, and the authority to hear and decide the particular controversy that has arisen between the parties.

16. For all the reasons aforesaid, we are of opinion that there is no bar to the entertainment of the present suit by the High Court in its original side under Order 37 of the Code and to the passing of a decree in the suit. We remit the matter with our opinion under Chapter 5, Rule 3 of the Original Side Rules to the learned Judge who made the report. Leave is given to the plaintiff to mention the matter before the learned Judge for early hearing. Costs of this reference would abide by the result of the suit.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— I agree.

S. K. DATTA, J.:— I agree.

Answer accordingly.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 3

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.

C. R. No. 4161 of 1969, D/- 16-9-1976.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (1908), Sections 115, 151, Order 41, Rule 23 — Revision application — Maintainability — Remand of case under Section 151 for fresh decision — Revision application against the remand order is maintainable.

A suit for declaration of title was dismissed by the trial Court which disbelieved the evidence. In appeal, the Court passed an order for remand for the trial Court to rehear the suit giving an opportunity to the parties to adduce further evidence. Against this order for remand, the defendants filed revision under Section 115. The preliminary objection was raised as to the maintainability of the revision application on the ground that appeal ought to have been filed against the order passed by the appellate Court below.

Held, that the trial Court decided the suit not on any preliminary point but on all issues framed considering the questions of law as raised before him and the evidence on record. Therefore, when the appellate Court sent back the case on remand for fresh decision on questions of law and fact, it cannot be an order of remand under Order 41, Rule 23. (Para 5)

JT/JT/D333/76/RSV/WNG

The order for remand was passed under the inherent powers under Section 151 and no appeal lies against that order. But a revision application can be filed before the High Court against such an order. AIR 1927 Pat 296 and AIR 1927 Cal 850, Rel. on. (Para 8)

(B) Civil Procedure Code (1908), Order 41, Rules 27, 28 — Additional evidence — Ground for allowing — Order of remand by appellate Court — Trial Court asked to rehear case after taking further evidence — Mere insufficiency of evidence is no ground for allowing additional evidence — Remand order held invalid.

In a suit for declaration of title the trial Court disbelieved the evidence and dismissed the suit. The Court in appeal passed order for remand for the trial Court to rehear the suit giving an opportunity to the parties to adduce further evidence.

Held, that, from the record it appears that both the parties had sufficient opportunity to prove their cases by evidence in the trial Court. The Court below allowed the parties while remanding the case to adduce further evidence on the ground that there was insufficient evidence. Mere insufficiency of evidence is no ground for allowing any party to adduce further evidence, when the dispute is lying in appeal. If there is insufficient evidence for any party to prove his case, he will suffer. For getting order to adduce further evidence, a party must come under a provision of law. AIR 1931 PC 143, Rel. on.

Susanta Kumar Kundu, for Petitioner; Basanta Kumar Panda, Santimoy Panda, for Opposite Party No. 1.

ORDER :— This revisional application is by the defendants Nos. 1 to 7 of the original suit against the decision of a Subordinate Judge, Midnapur in a first appeal remanding the case back to the trial Court of the Munsif for the rehearing of the suit.

2. The opposite party-plaintiff Kartick Hait brought the original suit against several defendants for declaration of his title to some of the properties mentioned in the plaint and for partition of the suit properties, separate possession, mesne profits and permanent injunction. Of the defendants only the petitioners before this Court filed written statements and contested the suit challenging the allegations of the plaintiff. The trial Court on consideration of the evidence disbelieved the evidence adduced on the side of the plaintiff and rejected the story that the plaintiff had any title to the disputed lands as alleged and held the contesting defendants' case as acceptable. The learned Munsif dismissed the suit. In the appeal taken by the plaintiff, the learned Subordinate Judge found insufficient evidence on the question of a previous partition set up by the defendants for any decision although he did not consider all facts and circumstances. According to him, there was no decision on issue No. 6 and the trial Court came to a decision on the question of title and possession without any issue in that respect. The learned Subordinate Judge passed order for remand for the learned Munsif to rehear the suit giving an opportunity to the parties to adduce further evidence. Against this order for remand, the present application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been filed.

3. I have heard Mr. Kundu, the learned Advocate for the petitioner and Mr. Panda for the plaintiff-opposite party.

4. Mr. Panda on behalf of the opposite party has raised a preliminary objection that the present revisional application is not maintainable and that an appeal ought to have been filed against the decree passed by the appellate Court below.

5. There is the provision for remand of a case by the appellate Court in Order 41, Rule 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure. When a suit is disposed of on a preliminary point and the decree is reversed in appeal the appellate Court may by order remand the case to the lower Court for determination of the suit as indicated in that Rule 23. Against that order of remand an appeal lies according to Rule 1 (u) of Order 43 of the Code. In this connection Mr. Panda has argued that in the present case the First Appellate Court drew up a formal decree and the same was signed. According to him a second appeal ought to have been filed in this Court. I cannot accept this contention. First of all, the order of remand passed by the appellate Court below was not under Rule 23 of the C. P. Code. The trial Court decided the suit not on any preliminary point but on all issues framed considering the questions of law as raised before him and the evidence on record. Therefore, when the appellate Court sent back the case on remand for fresh decision on questions of law and fact, it cannot be an order of remand under Order 41, Rule 23.

6. Next, Rule 23 provides for an order of remand and not for any decree. "Decree" has been defined in Section 2 (2) of the Code of Civil Procedure. A decree is the formal expression of the conclusive determination of the rights of the litigants. In the appeal below there was no determination of the rights of the parties but the matter was simply sent down on remand for decision of the suit on merit. There was no occasion for the appeal Court below for drawing up of any decree. There was simply an order for remand that was passed. When the decree was formally drawn up, though not necessary, it was of no effect. Therefore, there can be no question of filing any second appeal. The decision of a Division Bench of the Patna High Court in Chandrika Prosad Singh v. Mithu Rai reported in 103 Ind Cas 722 (723) = (AIR 1927 Pat 296) may be mentioned. It was held:

"Order XLI, Rule 23, operates only when one of the preliminary issues is tried by the Court of first instance and that Court disposes of the suit on that ground and says he is not going to try the suit on any other issues."

Further the judgment says:

"A decree is defined in the Civil Procedure Code as the formal expression of the adjudication which, so far as regards the Court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit and may be either preliminary or final. Now, in this case the learned Judge in the Court below has not determined the rights of the parties either conclusively or otherwise or at all. All that he has done is to hold that the rights of the parties cannot be decided until certain important matters are decided. He has, therefore, left them very much at large. In my opinion, therefore, the order of the learned District Judge cannot be looked upon as a decree within the meaning of that term as used in Section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure." The Division Bench decision of our Court should also be noticed in the case of Banika Behari Deb v. Birendra Nath Dutta reported in 103 Ind Cas 864 = (AIR 1927 Cal 850). Regarding Order 41, Rule 23 we find in the judgment:

"It is abundantly clear that the order of remand as made was passed without jurisdiction, because the learned Munsif who tried the case did not determine the case upon a preliminary issue, but heard and decided the suit upon the merits. The condition precedent, therefore, to the exercise of the power of remand with which the Court is invested under Order XLI, Rule 23, was not fulfilled, and the order of remand as made could not validly have been passed under Rule 23, and was ultra vires the Court that passed it. The result is that no appeal lies from the order as made, for, under O. XLIII, R. 1 (u) an appeal only lies if the order of remand has been passed under O. XLI, R. 23."

As to the character of the order for remand the decision goes on to say:

"Again, the order for remand as made, in my opinion, did not itself finally determine all or any of the matters in controversy between the parties, and it was not a decree within Section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure; therefore no appeal lay from this order of remand as being a decree within Section 100 of the Civil Procedure Code."

7. There is another provision in Order 41, Rule 25 of the C. P. Code for limited order for remand. According to this Rule specific issues are sent to the Court below for a finding keeping the appeal in file of the appellate Court for decision. On receiving the finding from the lower Court, the appellate Court is to determine the appeal under Rule 26 of Order 41. Against the order passed under Rule 26 for remitting certain issue or issues for decision, no appeal lies. The present order for remand under my consideration does not come under the purview of Order 41, Rule 26 of the C. P. Code.

8. An order for remand may also be passed by the appellate Court under its inherent power under Section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure and in that case no appeal lies against that order. Of course, a revisional application may be filed before the High Court against such an order passed by the District Judge or the Subordinate Judge in the first appeal. There can be no doubt that the order for remand passed by the learned Subordinate Judge in the present case was one under Section 151 of the C. P. Code. Before passing the order for remand, the appellate Court below said, "In the circumstances to meet the ends of justice, I deem it a very fit case to be remanded to the learned Munsif for a rehearing in the light of the observations made above and according to law." In this view of the matter, no appeal lay against the order for remand passed under the inherent power for ends of justice as felt by the learned Subordinate Judge. The present application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure against that order is quite legal. The preliminary objection as to the maintainability of the revisional application against the order for remand is rejected.

9. The main grievance of the petitioners is that the appellate Court below acted without jurisdiction or acted illegally with material irregularity by not deciding the appeal on merits on consideration of the findings and judgment of the trial Court and by sending the case for fresh hearing giving an opportunity to the plaintiff for adducing further evidence to make up the deficiency in his case. In this connection it has been contended that the learned Subordinate Judge failed to notice that issue No. 6 was decided by the trial Court. In the judgment of the trial Court the issue No. 6 has been mentioned with other ones and it has been made clear that the learned Munsif considered issues Nos. 6 and 7 together and gave his decisions thereon. The learned Court below perhaps missed the point in the judgment.

10. The learned Subordinate Judge says in his judgment that the trial Court without framing any issue found that the plaintiff had no title and possession in the suit land. It appears that several issues were framed in this suit. The plaintiff alleged his title and possession in the suit properties. The contesting defendants claim their title and possession and also referred to a former partition. Both the parties in this case knowing the cases of the adversaries led evidence to prove their own cases and to disprove the case of the opponent. One of the issues is "Is the kobala dated 16-7-1934 void, collusive and for no consideration?" This relates to the question of title. Moreover, it appears that the plaintiff brought in evidence several other deeds of conveyance to support his title and possession. It appears that both the parties attempted by producing evidence to prove their respective title and possession in the suit properties as alleged in their own pleadings. Although there was no specific issue mentioning title or possession but the issues were broad and general to embrace all the disputes between the parties. It appears also that the learned trial Court focussed its attention to the evidence of title and possession adduced by the parties and their contentions. It was, therefore, not necessary for reconsideration by the trial Court of the suit on merit again after giving any opportunity to any party to lead further evidence. Such opportunity will give undue and improper chance to the parties to make up their weakness or deficiencies in the evidence after the discussion of the evidence by the trial Court in its judgment. The parties had sufficient opportunity to prove their cases by evidence. Moreover, in the first appeal by the plaintiff, there was no ground that the plaintiff had no opportunity to adduce evidence or that he was prevented from proving his title or possession being misled by the framing of issue. The appellate Court below should have decided the appeal on the evidence on record according to law. I do not think that in the facts and circumstances there was any valid reason to pass any order for remand as has been done in this case. The learned Court below allowed the parties while remanding case to adduce further evidence on the ground that there was insufficient evidence. Mere insufficiency of evidence is no ground for allowing any party to adduce further evidence when the dispute is lying in appeal. For additional evidence, we may consider O. 41, Rr. 27 and 28 of the C. P. Code. The present case does not come under those provisions. If there is insufficient evidence for any party to prove his case, he will suffer. For getting an order to adduce further evidence, a party must come under a provision of law. The Court must not act in such a way as to cause undue advantage against any party and contrary to law. Further evidence should not be allowed to be adduced by a litigant who has been unsuccessful in the lower Court to patch up the lacuna or the weakness in his case. This practice beyond law will result in manufactured evidence and abuses of the processes of Court. This principle of not allowing undue advantage to adduce further evidence has been indicated by the Privy Council in the case of Parsotim Thakur v. Lal Mohar Thakur reported in AIR 1931 PC 143 = 132 IC 721 = 35 Cal WN 786. Clearly, the appellate Court below illegally allowed parties to adduce further evidence in his remand order. Practically speaking, the learned Subordinate Judge refused to exercise his jurisdiction in the first appeal by sending back the case to the trial Court for rehearing and by not deciding the appeal on evidence on record according to law. In any view, the learned Court below acted illegally and with material irregularity by passing the remand order as he did causing a grave error of law and an improper decision. It is liable to be set aside.

11. Hence, the revisional application succeeds and the Rule is hereby made absolute without any cost. The judgment with order for remand complained against is set aside and the learned appellate Court below shall dispose of the appeal in the light of this judgment and according to law. The appeal is long pending and it should be disposed of as expeditiously as possible.

12. Send down the records at once.
Revision allowed.

N. C. MUKHERJI AND B. C. RAY, JJ.

A. F. O. O. No. 319 of 1968, D/- 3-9-1976.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 299 (1) — Applicability — Requirements of Article 299 (1) are mandatory — Contract not complying with the requirements is invalid. (Para 8)

(B) Evidence Act (1872), Section 106 — Authority to act on behalf of Government — Burden to prove — On whom lies.

The plaintiff in the instant case entered into an agreement with a Sub-Divisional Controller of Food and Supplies who executed it on behalf of the Governor of the State. A suit for money for work done was filed by the plaintiff against the State. The question was whether the Subdivisional Controller had authority to act on behalf of the Governor and on whom the onus to prove such authority lay.

Held that the evidence clearly proved that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies had been duly authorised to enter into the contract on behalf of the Governor by the District Magistrate. The plaintiff thus discharged the onus which lay upon him. (Para 11)

Section 106 clearly enjoins that when any fact is specially within the knowledge of any person the burden of proving that fact is upon him. The onus is, therefore, upon the defendant to prove by producing the file containing the relevant orders, its plea that the Sub-Divisional Controller had no authority to enter into the agreement in question on behalf of the Government and, as such, the agreement was not in conformity with the mandatory requirements of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution. This case clearly falls within Illustration (b) to Section 106. The defendant has failed to prove its plea by producing the relevant papers which are in its custody and control and within its knowledge. Case law discussed. (Para 12)

R. C. Deb, S. C. Mitter and S. P. Roychowdhury, for Appellant; B. K. Roychowdhury and P. N. Palit, for Respondent.

B. C. RAY, J.:— This appeal by the plaintiff appellant is directed against the judgment and order passed in Title Suit No. 62 of 1966 and it arises out of a proceeding for passing a decree in terms of the award made by the Arbitrator and filed by him in Court.

2. The plaintiff appellant Raipada Pramanik was appointed a clearing and storing agent for C. I. Sheet, B. R. K. Coal and other relief materials for the area under the Subdivisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar on the basis of a written agreement executed on 22nd of February, 1967 by him and the Subdivisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal. In the said agreement it was stipulated that the petitioner will store the relief materials in his godown for which he will be paid commission at a certain rate mentioned therein. In Clause 21 of the said agreement it has been provided that either of the parties shall be at liberty to terminate the said agreement on giving one month's notice in writing of his intention to so terminate the agreement. In Clause 23 of the said agreement it has also been provided that in the case of difference or dispute arising under the agreement the same shall be referred to two Arbitrators one to be nominated by the Government and other by the agent that is the plaintiff and an umpire to be appointed by the Arbitrators in writing before proceeding with the reference and the decision of the Arbitrators or the umpire as the case may be shall be final and conclusive and the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940 and rules framed thereunder shall be deemed to apply to this contract. The State of West Bengal, the defendant neglected to pay the bills submitted by the plaintiff on account of the storage charges amounting to Rs. 52,108.13 paise in spite of repeated reminders. The plaintiff finding no other alternative had to appoint Sree Somnath Chatterji, Barrister-at-law, as his arbitrator in accordance with the provisions of Clause 23 of the said agreement and sent a notice dated 8th of January, 1962 to the Secretary, to the Government of West Bengal, Food and Supplies Department, District Magistrate and the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia to nominate its arbitrator to settle the above disputes and differences which have arisen between them within 15 days after the service of the said notice. But in spite of the receipt of the said notice the defendant, that is, the State of West Bengal did not take any steps to nominate their arbitrator. As such in accordance with the provisions of Section 9 of the Indian Arbitration Act, the plaintiff appointed Sri Somnath Chatterji, Bar-at-law as the sole arbitrator for decision of the said dispute. The arbitrator served several notices upon the parties to the dispute and held several meetings. On 11th of August, 1962, the arbitrator made an award for a sum of Rs. 51,398.62 paise in full and final settlement of the dues of the plaintiff against the defendant under the said agreement and after due publication the said award was signed and sealed by the Arbitrator. The Arbitrator then filed this award in Court in compliance with the provisions of Section 14 of the Indian Arbitration Act. The petitioner filed an application under Section 17 of the Arbitration Act praying for passing a decree in terms of the said award. This was numbered as Title Suit No. 62 of 1966. The District Magistrate, Nadia, filed a written objection against the said award contending inter alia that the alleged agreement was not legally valid and binding upon the State of West Bengal as the same was not executed in the manner provided under Article 299 of the Constitution of India inasmuch as Sri Narendranath Sarkar, the then Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies had no authority to enter into such a contract. The appointment of arbitrator by the petitioner was illegal as the same was not in accordance with the Clause 23 of the agreement and the alleged award filed by the arbitrator was a nullity. It was also contended that there was no difference or dispute regarding the claim between the plaintiff and the defendant and as such there had been no occasion for appointment of any arbitrator and the appointment of the sole arbitrator by the petitioner and award made by the sole arbitrator was without jurisdiction and so the same was liable to be set aside.

3. In the said suit the plaintiff examined two witnesses. P. W. 1 is the then Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia and P. W. 2, Sree Sailendranath Das, the then Head-Clerk, in the Office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies and Relief, Krishnagar, Nadia. The defendant, on the other hand, examined one witness Deb Kumar Ganguly who was an employee in the Office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar from 1959 to 1965.

4. On April 19, 1967, the Additional Subordinate Judge, Nadia held that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia had no (sic) authority to enter into any contract on behalf of the Government in respect of relief materials. It was also held that from the printed form of agreement it was clear that the Sub-Divisional Controller had no authority. The agreement (Exhibit 3) was thus unauthorised and as such it could not bind the defendant. It was held that the plaintiff was not ever paid in pursuance of the said agreement and the payment made, if any, could not be said to have been made with the sanction of the Government. It was therefore held that the agreement (Exhibit 3) was not legal and valid and as such the suit at the instance of the plaintiff was held not maintainable. Accordingly, the suit was dismissed. It is against this judgment and order this appeal has been filed.

5. Mr. Rathindra Chandra Deb, learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant has contended that the onus was upon the defendant to show that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar had not been empowered by the District Magistrate, Nadia to execute the agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal. It has also been submitted that the defendant wanted the Court to believe the fact that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies was not empowered by the District Magistrate and as such it was for the defendant to prove the same. It has also been submitted that the relevant file containing the order and also the agreements are in the custody of the defendant and the same being not produced the presumption for withholding the evidence would go against the defendant. It has been next contended by Mr. Deb that whether the District Magistrate has empowered the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, to execute the agreement in respect of relief matters is within the special knowledge of the defendant and as such the onus is upon the defendant to prove the same by producing the relevant documents. The defendant has not discharged the onus and the defence plea should be held to have not been proved. In this connection, Mr. Deb referred to a decision reported in AIR 1953 SC 225. Mr. Deb has lastly contended that the judgment of the Court below was not a proper judgment inasmuch as it did not consider and assess properly the evidence on record which clearly proved that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies was duly empowered and had authority to execute the agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal and as such the agreement was a valid agreement. It was also contended by Mr. Deb that the plaintiff had stored the relief materials on the basis of the said agreement executed by the Sub-Divisional Controller believing in good faith that the same was duly made on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal. The State of West Bengal also has enjoyed the benefit of the said agreement and as such the plaintiff is entitled to get the relief claimed on the basis of the said agreement and the defendant cannot challenge the same. In this connection Mr. Deb referred to two decisions reported in 1948 (2) All ER 767 and 1950 (1) All ER 538.

6. Mr. Birendra Kumar Roy Chowdhury, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent has, on the other hand, submitted that the agreement was not in compliance with the provisions of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution and as such it was a void contract being made by a person not authorised and so the suit for a decree in terms of the award of the arbitrator was not maintainable. In this connection Mr. Roy Chowdhury mentioned several decisions reported in AIR 1962 SC 110, AIR 1962 SC 113, AIR 1962 SC 779, AIR 1962 Pat 336 (FB) and AIR 1967 SC 203. Mr. Roy Chowdhury further submitted that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia, was not empowered by the District Magistrate, Nadia to execute any agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal in regard to storage of relief materials and as there was no order giving the officer such authority there was no question of producing any document before the Court and no adverse inference for non production of any document can be drawn against the defendant. Mr. Roy Chowdhury also submitted that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the agreement was duly executed, that is, the Sub-Divisional Controller, had authority to execute the said agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal. The burden of proof lies on the plaintiff under Section 101 of the Evidence Act and the plaintiff having failed to discharge the onus the Court below rightly held that the agreement was not a legal and valid agreement.

7. The suit out of which this appeal has arisen was decided on a preliminary point i.e. whether the suit was maintainable. It was held by the Court below that the suit was not maintainable and as such the suit was dismissed without entering into the merits of the other issues raised in the said suit. The only question, therefore, that poses itself for decision in this appeal is whether the agreement (Exhibit 3) executed by the plaintiff and the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia is a valid agreement: In other words if the Sub-Divisional Controller had been duly authorised by the District Magistrate, Nadia to execute the said agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal. It is proper to set out hereunder the relevant provisions of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution:—

"All contracts made in the exercise of the executive power of the Union or of a State shall be expressed to be made by the President, or by the Governor of the State, as the case may be, and all such contracts and all assurances of property made in the exercise of that power shall be executed on behalf of the President or the Governor by such persons and in such manner as he may direct or authorise."

The said provision is almost in pari materia with the provisions of Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935. In 63 Cal WN 907 = (AIR 1961 Cal 663), Province of West Bengal v. Mohonlal Jain it has been observed that under Sec. 175 (3) of the Government of India, Act, 1935 any contract to be made in the exercise of the executive authority of the province should be expressed to be made by the Governor of the Province and should be executed on behalf of the Governor of the Province and further should be executed on behalf of the Governor by such person and in such manner as might be directed or authorised by him. A contract not made in accordance with the above statutory requirement has been subsequently ratified by the Government or by any appropriate authority on its behalf if clearly proved by evidence would make the contract binding on the Government. In AIR 1962 SC 110, State of Bihar v. M/s. Karamchand Thappar Ltd. it has been observed that a contract in order to be a valid contract under Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 must satisfy three conditions— (1) it must be expressed to be made by the Governor of the Province, (2) it must be executed and (3) the execution should be by such persons and in such a manner as the Governor might direct or authorise. It has also been observed that the Section does not prescribe any particular mode in which the authority must be conferred. Normally such conferment will be by notification in the official gazette, but there is nothing in the Section itself to preclude authorisation being conferred ad hoc on any person and when that is established the requirements of that Section must be held to be satisfied. The same decision has been followed by the Supreme Court in AIR 1962 SC 113, Bhikraj v. Union of India as well as in AIR 1962 SC 779, State of West Bengal v. B. K. Mondal. In the last case (AIR 1962 SC 779), State of West Bengal v. B. K. Mondal it has been observed by the Supreme Court that the provision is made in public interest and in enacting the provision of Sec 175 (3) the Parliament intended that the State should not be burdened with a liability based on unauthorised contracts and the plain object of the provision therefore is to save the State from spurious claims made on the strength of such unauthorised contracts. Failure to comply with the mandatory provisions of the Section makes the contract invalid. In AIR 1967 SC 203, K. P. Chowdhury v. State of Madhya Pradesh it has been observed by the Supreme Court that in view of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution there can be no implied contract between the Government and another person, the reason being that if such an implied contract between the Government and another persons was allowed, they would in effect make Article 299 (1) useless, for then a person who had a contract with Government which was not executed at all in the manner provided in Article 299 (1) could get away by saying that an implied contract may be inferred by the facts and circumstances of a particular case. This is, of course, not to say that if there is a valid contract as envisaged by Article 299 (1), there may not be implications arising out of such a contract. Further, if the contract between the Governor and another person is not in compliance with the Article 299 (1), it would be no contract at all and could not be enforced either by the Government or by other person as a contract.

8. Thus it is now well-settled that a contract executed on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal in order to be a legal and valid contract must comply with the mandatory requirements of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution.

9. In 1948 (2) All ER 767, Robertson v. Minister of Pensions the fact in short was that by the Pensions (Navy, Army, Air Force and Auxiliary Services) Transfer of Power Order, 1939 (made under the Pensions (Navy, Army, Air Force and Mercantile Marine) Act, 1939, Section 1) the entire administration of disablement claims in respect of military service after September 2, 1939, was transferred to the Minister of Pensions. Mr. Robertson being injured in an accident while on military service was examined by a Medical Board and was found unfit for general service and he was graded in category B. He wrote to the War Office requesting to settle the question of attributability regarding his disability. The War Office by letter intimated him that his disability was accepted as attributable to military service without any consultation with the Ministry of Pensions. On the faith of that assurance the claimant did not take any further steps to obtain independent medical opinion. The question was whether this assurance as contained in the letter of War Office was binding on the Minister of Pensions. It was held that his claim to attributability would be dealt with by or through the War Office. If the War Office in dealing with this matter takes on itself to assume authority on this matter with which he is concerned, the claimant is entitled to rely on it having the authority which it assumes. The department itself is clearly bound and as it is an agent of the Crown the Crown is also bound by it. In 1950 All ER 538 it was held that whenever Government Officers, in their dealings with the subject, take on themselves to assume authority in a matter with which he is concerned, the subject is entitled to rely on their having the authority which they assume. These decisions, however, have no application to the case of agreement made not in compliance with the requirements provided in Article 299 (1) of the Constitution of India in view of the decisions of the Supreme Court mentioned before.

10. It is evident from the agreement (Exhibit 3) that the said agreement was made in the revised model form for clearing and storing agreement and the same has been signed by the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia, for and on behalf of the Governor of the Province of West Bengal being authorised by the District Magistrate Nadia at Krishnagar. Thus from the agreement itself it is clear that the agreement was made in the proper form kept by the District Magistrate, Nadia and the same was signed by the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia.

11. The plaintiff has examined the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Sri Narendra Nath Sarkar, who executed the said agreement as well as the Head Clerk in the Office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Sree Sailendra Nath Das in order to prove that the Sub-Divisional Controller had authority to execute the agreement on behalf of the State of West Bengal. P. W. 1 Narendra Nath Sarkar stated in examination-in-chief that he signed the agreement (Exhibit 3) dated 22nd of February, 1957 on behalf of the Government of West Bengal. He denied that he had no authority to sign the agreement on behalf of the Government. He also stated that all such agreements were signed by him. In cross-examination he stated that he had authority to sign the agreement on behalf of the Government. He had written authority to sign the agreement on behalf of the Government.

He also denied the suggestion that the Sub-Divisional Controller was not authorised. He also stated that it was not a fact that he assumed his authority and signed on behalf of the Government of West Bengal. Usually Office Clerks place the agreement for his signature thereon. He also stated that it was not his concern to know if the Sub-Divisional Controller had authority. P. W. 2, Sree Sailendra Nath Das, who was the Head Clerk in the Office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies and Relief, Krishnagar at that time stated that so far as he remembered the District Magistrate authorised the Sub-Divisional Controller to sign the contracts in relief matters. The letter of authority is in office. In cross-examination he stated that he saw the Collector's authority giving to Narendra Nath Sarkar in the latter part of 1956. D. W. 1, Deb Kumar Ganguly, who was an employee of the Office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies stated in cross-examination that contracts in matters of food with storage agent used to be signed by the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies. He used to sign in relief matters as well. The Court below has commented upon the deposition of P. W. 1 when he said that it was not his concern to know that the Sub-Divisional Controller had any authority. But the trial Court did not at all consider his specific statements in the cross-examination that he was duly authorised to sign the agreement on behalf of the Government. P. W. 2 has clearly stated that he saw the Collector's authority given to Sree Narendra Nath Sarkar in the latter part of 1956. D. W. 1 also stated in his cross-examination that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, used to sign in relief matters as well. Thus the evidences clearly proved that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies had been duly authorised to enter into the contract on behalf of the Governor of West Bengal by the District Magistrate, Nadia at Krishnagar. The plaintiff thus discharged the onus which lay upon him.

12. The defendant in the written objection specifically pleaded that the Sub-Divisional Controller was not authorised by the District Magistrate, Nadia to sign the agreement in regard to relief matters on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal. In this case admittedly no notification empowering the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar to execute agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal by the District Magistrate, Nadia has been published in the Official Gazette. The defence plea is that the Sub-Divisional Controller has authority to execute agreement on behalf of the Governor in respect of matters relating to Food and Supplies Department but he had no authority to execute any agreement in relief matters. Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, was thus given such authority by order made by the District Magistrate, Nadia. The said order is in the office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar as is evident from the depositions of the witnesses P. W. 2 and D. W. 1 who were the employees in the office of the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Nadia. It is neither feasible nor possible for the plaintiff to know of the said order and to get copy of the same and to produce it before the Court below. The file wherein the said order is kept is lying under the custody and control of the defendant respondent. Section 106 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (Act 1 of 1872) clearly enjoins that when any fact is specially within the knowledge of any person the burden of proving that fact is upon him. The onus is, therefore, upon the defendant to prove by producing the file containing the relevant orders, its plea that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia had no authority to enter into the agreement in question for storage of relief materials with the plaintiff on behalf of the Government and as such the agreement was not in conformity with the mandatory requirements of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution. This case clearly falls within Illustration (b) to Section 106 of the said Act. The defendant has failed to prove its plea by producing the relevant papers which are in its custody and control and within its knowledge. In AIR 1917 PC 6, Murugesam Pillai v. G. Sambandha Pandara Sannadhi it has been observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council:—

"A practice has grown up in Indian procedure of those in possession of important documents or information lying by, trusting to the abstract doctrine of the onus of proof, and failing, accordingly, to furnish to the Courts the best material for its decision. With regard to the third parties this may be right enough — they have no responsibility for the conduct of the suit; but with regard to the parties to the suit it is in their Lordships' opinion an inversion of sound practice for those desiring to rely upon a certain state of facts to withhold from the Court the written evidence in their possession which would throw light upon the proposition."

This view was reiterated in AIR 1929 PC 95, Rameswar Singh v. Bajitlal Pathak. These decisions have been relied upon in AIR 1953 SC 225, Hiralal v. Badkulal and it had been held by the Supreme Court that in the suit for recovery of amount due on the basis of adjustment of accounts defendant having possession of account books kept by him and from which balance could be ascertained should produce them before the Court. He cannot be heard to say, relying upon the abstract doctrine of onus of proof, that it was no part of his duty to produce them unless he was called upon to do so.

13. The contention that the judgment and order is not appealable and this appeal is incompetent is not sustainable. The order is one coming within Sec. 39 of the Arbitration Act and as such this appeal is legally competent and so valid.

14. In the premises aforesaid the contentions made on behalf of the appellant succeed. We hold that the Sub-Divisional Controller, Food and Supplies, Krishnagar, Nadia had been authorised duly by the District Magistrate, Nadia to sign the agreement on behalf of the Governor, State of West Bengal and as such the agreement (Exhibit 3) executed by him is in due compliance with the provisions of Article 299 (1) of the Constitution and so it is a legal and valid agreement binding upon the defendant. We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the order of the Additional Subordinate Judge directing him to decide the suit on merits with regard to other issues framed in the said suit. In the circumstances of the case there will, however, be no order as to costs. Let the records be sent down to the Court below immediately and the Court below is directed to dispose of the suit as expeditiously as possible.

Haripore Farming Syndicate Ltd.,
Petitioners v. Union of India, Respondent.

C. R. No. 1246 of 1974, D/- 26-8-1976.

(A) Requisitioned Land (Continuance of Powers) Act (1947), Section 5 (1) —

JT/KT/D326/76/RSV/WNG

Defence of India Act (1939), Section 19 (1) (b) — Powers of arbitrator — Necessary parties to valuation proceedings — Compensation for acquired land — Collector making award in name of recorded tenants — Petitioners also claiming compensation for the same land — Arbitrator appointed — Arbitrator ordering apportionment of compensation — In valuation proceedings, Government challenging title of petitioners — Held, that Government was necessary and proper party and, Arbitrator appointed under Section 19 (1) (b) of Defence of India Act had jurisdiction to decide title of petitioners.

The Collector made assessment of compensation in respect of the acquisition of certain plots of land in the name of recorded tenants. The present petitioners, when they came to know of the said assessment of compensation made in the name of wrong persons, applied to the Collector for reference to arbitration for determination and apportionment of compensation for the acquisition of the land. Arbitrator was appointed under Section 19 (1) (b) of the Defence of India Act, for determination of the compensation. The Arbitrator apportioned the compensation between the petitioners and the recorded tenants. The Union of India, the opposite party in valuation case taken up thereafter by the arbitrator, filed a written statement that the reference proceedings were not maintainable before the title of the petitioners in the land was proved in a Civil Court. The arbitrator passed an order upholding the objection. The present revision application was filed by the petitioners contending that the Union of India was neither a necessary nor a proper party in the said case and that the Arbitrator had no jurisdiction to decide the title of the petitioners.

Held, that the Arbitrator has jurisdiction to decide the question of title of the petitioners to receive compensation in respect of the said plots of land acquired under Section 5 (1) of the Requisitioned Land (Continuance of Powers) Act, 1947 in the valuation case and the Government is a necessary and proper party in whose presence the decision has to be made inasmuch as it is the liability of the opposite party to pay compensation to the petitioners in whose name no award was made by the Collector and so the opposite party is vitally interested in the decision on the question of title of referring claimants to receive compensation. Case law discussed. (Para 12)

Amarendra Nath Gupta, for Petitioners; Manon Kumar Ghosh, for Respondent.

B. C. RAY, J.:— This revisional application under Article 227 of the Constitution of India is directed against the order No. 35 dated March 26, 1973 passed in Arbitration case No. 7 of 1971 (valuation) by the Arbitrator, 24 Parganas and Calcutta.

2. C. S. plots Nos. 6, 9, 10, 11, 43 and 86 of Mouza Hariपुर, P. S. Habra, District 24 Parganas with standing structures and trees thereon had been requisitioned under Rule 75-A of the Defence of India Rules made under the Defence of India Act, 1939 on or about April 25, 1942. The said plots of lands were subsequently acquired under Section 5 (1) of the Requisitioned Land (Continuance of Powers) Act, 1947 on October 16, 1947. The Collector of 24 Parganas (North) made assessment of compensation in respect of the acquisition of the said plots of land in the name of the recorded tenants. It has been stated by the petitioners that the Collector never communicated the said assessment of compensation in respect of the said acquisition of land to the petitioners, Messrs. Hariपुर Farmers Syndicate Limited. The petitioners, however, on coming to know of the said assessment of compensation made in the name of wrong persons applied to the Collector of 24 Parganas (North) for reference to arbitration for determination and apportionment of compensation payable for the acquisition of the said portions of the said lands with trees and structures thereon. The petitioners also stated therein that they took settlement of the said lands on the basis of three registered pattas dated 16-9-1937, 21-3-1938 and 12-5-1938 from the landlords and they had been in possession of the same in Mourashi Mokarari right. The petitioners after taking settlement constructed one dwelling house with brick walls, pucca floors and corrugated roofings and also constructed a kitchen and one cow-shed. Sri S. S. Ganguly was appointed Arbitrator by the Government under Section 19 (1) (b) of the Defence of India Act, 1939 for determination and apportionment of compensation in respect of the acquisition of the said plots of lands.

The apportionment case was registered as case No. 8 of 1971 (A) for the purpose of apportionment of the compensation and the arbitration case No. 7 of 1971 (Valuation) was started for the purpose of determination of the compensation. The apportionment case being Arbitration case No. 8 of 1971 (A) was heard ex parte first and the petitioners were held to have taken settlement of the said lands on the basis of the said three pattas (Exhibits 1 to 1 (b)) and as such in accordance with the terms of those deeds the petitioners were entitled to six annas share of compensation and landlord was entitled to ten annas share of the compensation to be awarded in respect of the said lands. Thereafter the valuation case being Arbitration case No. 7 of 1971 (V) was heard by the Arbitrator. In the said valuation case the Union of India, the opposite party filed a written statement stating inter alia that before having their title established in the Civil Court the referring claimants were not entitled to make the reference and initiation of those proceedings before the Arbitrator under the Defence of India Act, 1939 at the instance of the referring claimants was invalid. The learned Arbitrator after hearing objection of the Union of India, the opposite party, passed order No. 35 holding that the opposite party could challenge the title of referring claimants in the valuation case and the referring claimants should not get any award unless they would establish their title in the amount of compensation.

3. It is against this order this application in revision has been made and the instant rule and an interim order of stay of operation of the said order No. 35 was made pending the disposal of this Rule.

4. Mr. Amarendra Nath Gupta, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners has submitted that in the apportionment case the Arbitrator after considering the registered pattas (Exhibits 1 to 1 (b)) has held that the petitioners have acquired tenancy right to the plots in question. The said finding is conclusive and cannot be questioned in the valuation case.

5. It has next been submitted by Mr. Gupta that in the apportionment case the Union of India is neither a necessary nor a proper party. It is only the persons who are the contesting claimants in the apportionment of the compensation that are necessary and proper parties. Hence, the decision arrived at by the learned Arbitrator in the said apportionment case after considering the registered pattas is final and the Union of India is not competent to challenge the title of referring claimants to receive compensation in the valuation case on the mere plea that the said question was not decided in its presence. It has lastly been contended by Mr. Gupta that the same learned Arbitrator who decided the title of the referring claimants in the apportionment case being Arbitration case No. 8 of 1971 (A) was wholly in error in holding that in deciding the amount of compensation in the valuation case he has jurisdiction to decide the title of the referring claimants which is not the subject-matter of reference in the said valuation case. The impugned order, therefore, it has been submitted, is liable to be set aside.

6. Mr. Manon Kumar Ghosh, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite parties has submitted that the Collector did not assess compensation in the name of the referring claimants, that is, the petitioners, M/s. Haripur Farmer Syndicate Limited inasmuch as their names were not recorded in the finally published record of rights. The Union of India, the opposite party has challenged the title of the petitioners to get compensation in respect of the plots of the lands acquired and as such the State is vitally interested and also a necessary and proper party in whose presence the question of title of the petitioners to get compensation is required to be decided. It has also been submitted by Mr. Ghosh that in accordance with the provisions of Rule 6 of the Rules framed under Section 19 of the Defence of India Act, 1939 by the Government of Bengal the arbitrator has been empowered to exercise the like powers of a Civil Court and also to follow the like procedure followed by the Civil Court in exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction under the Code of Civil Procedure. The Arbitrator, therefore, has jurisdiction to decide the question of title of the referring claimants in deciding the valuation case.

7. It appears that the Collector made the assessment of compensation in the name of the recorded tenants and not in the name of the petitioners, i.e. the referring claimants. The petitioners, however, made an application under Rule 5 of the Defence of India Rules, 1939 to the Collector for referring the case to arbitration for apportionment of the compensation claiming that they were entitled to the entire compensation as they were tenants of the said lands and also praying for determination of the compensation in respect of the said lands acquired on the basis of the market value at the date of the requisition. The apportionment case being Arbitration case No. 8 of 1971 (V) was decided ex parte as the recorded tenants in whose names the award was made by the Collector did not appear at the time of hearing and petitioners were held to have title as tenants to the said lands and, therefore, to have been entitled to get 6 annas share of the compensation. In the said apportionment case the Government was not a party. In the valuation case being Arbitration case No. 7 of 1971 (valuation) the Union of India was a party and an objection was raised on its behalf as to the title of the petitioners to the compensation in respect of the lands acquired. Now the question is whether the Arbitrator is legally competent or, in other words, has jurisdiction to decide this question in the valuation case.

8. In a bench decision of this Court reported in AIR 1951 Cal 392, Bharat Nath v. Ramswaroop, the fact in short was that certain plots of lands were acquired under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. On the objection of some of the parties in whose names the award was made by the Collector the collector made a reference both as regards apportionment and as regards valuation of the lands acquired. The question was whether the order of the Land Acquisition Judge in directing the hearing of the valuation case first was correct or not. It has been held by this Court that there can be no possible injury to either the Government or the tenant, opposite party if the apportionment case is taken first. The Government obviously is not interested in the matter of apportionment at all, but the tenants opposite parties are. In another Bench decision of this Court reported in AIR 1955 Cal 398, Naresh Chandra Bose v. State of West Bengal, it has been held that the Government is neither interested nor is a proper party in an apportionment reference or appeal therefrom in a Land Acquisition Proceeding, but only the contesting claimants are. It is only in valuation reference that the Government is a necessary party. In this case the Government did not question the title of the referring claimants to receive compensation.

9. In (1940) 44 Cal WN 411, Province of Bengal v. Shyamapada Banerji the fact in short was that 5 persons including one Kalipada Banerji claimed interest in certain premises acquired under the Land Acquisition Act. The Collector did not make any award in the name of Kalipada Banerji. Application for reference for both apportionment of compensation as well as determination of compensation payable was made to the Collector and the Collector referred the same to the Tribunal whereon apportionment case and valuation case were started. Both the apportionment and valuation cases were, however, heard together. In the said proceedings a compromise was made amongst the contesting claimants to the effect that Kalipada would get the enhanced amount of compensation and the compromise petitions to that effect were filed before the Tribunal who on the basis of the said compromise petitions passed an order in the apportionment case ordering that Kalipada or his representative Shyamapada would be entitled to the enhanced compensation. The said determination was, however, questioned in appeal by Government on the ground that the said decision should be made in the valuation case in presence of the Government inasmuch as the Government was the only person who would be affected by this determination. It has been held that the only person who will be affected by this determination is the appellant (the Government) because it will have to pay the enhanced amounts. In the determination of this question in view of the facts of the present case the persons interested are the respondent who claims the money and the appellant against whom the money is claimed. It has also been held that the appellant is only the person interested in opposing the respondent's claim and as such the respondent is bound to prove his right to claim the enhanced amounts in the presence of the appellant.

10. In 64 Cal WN 514 = (AIR 1960 Cal 506), State of West Bengal v. Kisson Chand Kocher the fact in short was that on diverse dates certain plots of land with structures and trees standing thereon were acquired. The Collector made joint awards in favour of the landlords and tenants. Against those awards of the Collector the landlords filed application for references disputing the amount of compensation as well as claiming the entire amount of compensation payable in respect of this acquisition for themselves to the exclusion of the tenants. The tenants did not file any application challenging the compensation awarded by the Collector. In the valuation reference the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal enhanced the valuation of the lands acquired. The tenants having not filed any application challenging the Collector's valuation were not entitled to any part of the enhanced compensation allowed. In the apportionment case to which the State of West Bengal was not a party the Tribunal held that the landlords were entitled to 13 and 1/2 annas share of the compensation and the tenants to the remaining 2 and 1/2 annas share. Against the said order the tenants filed four appeals which were disposed of by one judgment holding that the landlords were entitled to get thirty times the annual rent as compensation and the Mitra tenants would get the entire balance. Against those decrees of this Court the landlords filed appeals to the Supreme Court which were decreed on compromise. The compromise was to the effect that the enhanced award together with all costs and interests would be paid to the landlords appellants. It has been held

"the principles that the State is not a necessary party in apportionment cases is not an absolute proposition of law, but it is a rule of convenience. There may be cases of apportionment where there is neither any question of enhancement of the valuation made by the Collector nor any question as to the liability of the State to pay enhanced compensation to anybody. If there is no challenge to the compensation determined by the Collector, nor any challenge to the liability of the State to pay the enhanced compensation to anybody, the State is certainly not an interested party in the apportionment cases, but where without any dispute as to the total amount of the compensation payable by the Collector, the liability of the State to pay compensation to any person is enlarged or enhanced, the State, seems to be a necessary party."

11. It has been urged on behalf of the petitioners that in a similar case being Civil Rule No. 167 of 1973 decided on 10-8-1973 it was held by this Court that the question whether the referring claimants had title to the acquired property was no part of the case referred to the Arbitrator and did not arise for consideration directly or incidentally for deciding the controversy in the valuation case. As such the Arbitrator had no jurisdiction to enter into the question of title even collaterally. Referring to this decision it was tried to be contended that the Arbitrator has no jurisdiction to decide the question of title of the referring claimants in the valuation case. But it must not be lost sight of that in the aforesaid case the Collector made the award in the name of the referring claimants whereas in the present case the award was not made by the Collector in the name of the referring claimants, that is the petitioners, but in the name of the recorded tenants and the Union of India, the opposite party has questioned the title of the petitioners to get compensation in respect of the land acquired.

12. On a conspectus of the decisions mentioned before the conclusion is irresistible that the Arbitrator has jurisdiction to decide the question of title of the petitioners to receive compensation in respect of the said plots of land acquired under Section 5 (1) of the Requisitioned Land (Continuance of Powers) Act, 1947 in the valuation case and the Government is a necessary and proper party in whose presence the decision has to be made inasmuch as it is the liability of the opposite party to pay compensation to the petitioners in whose name no award was made by the Collector and so the opposite party is vitally interested in the decision on the question of title of referring claimants to receive compensation.

13. In view of the above findings it is not necessary to decide the question whether the Arbitrator being vested with the like powers of the Civil Court under Rule 6 of the Defence of India Rules, 1939 has jurisdiction to decide the question of title in valuation case like any other Civil Court.

14. For the reasons stated above we overrule all the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioners. The application, therefore, fails and the Rule is discharged. The order of the learned Arbitrator is a perfectly valid order and it is within jurisdiction. There will be no order as to costs. Let the records be sent down to the Arbitrator immediately.

Nirmal Chandra Chakraborty and Anil Bandhu Ray, for Petitioner; Amar Prasad Chakraborty, Milan Ch. Bhattacharya, and Benoy Kr. Banerjee, for Opposite Party No. 1.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This Rule was issued on an application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against order No. 14 dated December 8, 1973 passed by Sri A. N. Mitra, District Delegate (6th Subordinate Judge), Alipore, in Succession Certificate Case No. 119 of 1973.

2. The facts of the case, however, cannot be gathered from the application. On going through the order it is seen that the petitioner filed an application under Section 372 of the Indian Succession Act praying for the grant of Succession Certificate in respect of the securities and debts due to the estate of the deceased Gopal Chandra Basak. The opposite parties filed a petition of objection. As such the matter became contested. The learned Court below after examining the oral and documentary evidence on record allowed the objection raised by the opposite parties and consequently the petitioner's application for grant of succession certificate was struck off. Being aggrieved by the aforesaid order, the petitioner has come up before this Court.

3. Mr. Amar Prasad Chakraborty, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite parties, takes a preliminary point to the effect that the application is not maintainable as the same is not supported by an affidavit. Mr. Chakraborty submits that according to the Appellate Side Rules every application before it is filed in Court will have to be presented before the Commissioner of Affidavits who will report as to the sufficiency of stamp and before whom the petitioner or any one authorised on his behalf will have to swear an affidavit about the correctness of the facts stated in the petition. In this case the application is not supported by an affidavit. It was not presented before the Commissioner of Affidavits. There is an endorsement at the bottom of the application by the learned Advocate to the effect that no affidavit is necessary. Mr. Chakraborty further submits that it was not within the rights of the learned Advocate to say whether an affidavit is necessary or not and as such the granting of the certificate by the learned Advocate cannot improve the matter. As the application has not been filed in accordance with the Appellate Side Rules this application should be rejected summarily.

4. Mr. Nirmal Chandra Chakraborty, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner submits that in this application no fact has been stated. It has simply been stated that being aggrieved by the order No. 14 dated 8th December 1973 passed by Shri A. N. Mitra, District Delegate (6th Subordinate Judge), Alipore, in Succession Certificate Case No. 119 of 1973, the petitioner begs to move on the following amongst other grounds on which the application has been moved. The petitioner has along with the application filed the certified copy of the impugned order in which all the facts of the case have been narrated in details. In such circumstances it is not at all necessary for the petitioner to swear an affidavit. In support of his contention Mr. Chakraborty first refers to a decision reported in (1908) 8 Cal LJ 308, (Mt. Kariman v. A. H. Forbes). In this case an objection was raised on behalf of the opposite party that the Rule ought not to be heard, inasmuch as the petition upon which it had been obtained is not supported by any affidavit. It is a Bench decision and Mukherjee J., who delivered a separate judgment, held "I do not think that this contention ought to prevail, for, as pointed out by this Court in the case of Zamiran v. Fateh Ali, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 146," when a petition to the High Court states facts which are matters of record and which are supported by copies of the order passed by the Court below, such a petition need not be supported by an affidavit". His Lordship further held that "The facts upon which the petition to this Court was made, appear from the judgment of the learned District Judge, and it was not necessary, therefore, for the petitioner to put in any affidavit in support of this application."

5. Mr. Chakraborty next refers to a decision reported in (1936) 40 Cal WN 1408, (Rajballav Mandal v. Rajendra Narain Mandal). In this case R. C. Mitter, J. relying on (1905) ILR 32 Cal 146 and (1908) 8 Cal LJ 308 held that "As in the present case all the facts stated in the application are supported by the certified copy of the order-sheet which is attached to the application, no affidavit is necessary". In this case also the petition of motion was not supported by any affidavit. Considering the fact that in the present application the petitioner does not challenge any question of fact and that the only challenge is with regard to the jurisdiction of the Court below. We are of the opinion in view of the decisions referred to above, that the application under Section 115 though it is not supported by any affidavit is maintainable.

6. With regard to the merits Mr. Chakraborty submits that as the matter arose on an application under Section 372 of the Indian Succession Act and the matter was a contested one the learned District Delegate had no jurisdiction to dispose of the matter. Section 265 of the Indian Succession Act provides that "The High Court may appoint such judicial officers within any district as it thinks fit to act for the District Judge as Delegates to grant probate and letters of administration in non-contentious cases, within such local limits as it may prescribe". Sub-section (2) of the said section states that "Persons so appointed shall be called District Delegates". The District Delegate has, therefore, no authority to dispose of any application in connection with the Succession Certificate whether it is contested or not. Chapter X of the Act deals with Succession Certificate cases. Section 388 provides that "The State Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, invest any Court inferior in grade to a District Judge with power to exercise the functions of a District Judge under this Part". Sub-section (2) of the said Section provides that "Any inferior Court so invested shall, within the local limits of its jurisdiction, have concurrent jurisdiction with the District Judge in the exercise of all the powers conferred by this Part upon the District Judge, and the provisions of this Part relating to the District Judge shall apply to such an inferior Court as if it were a District Judge". Mr. Chakraborty contends with much force that it is only a District Judge or an officer empowered under Sec. 388 who can deal with the Succession Certificate cases. In the present case, the officer being a District Delegate had no jurisdiction to entertain a Succession Certificate Case. After we heard the case on 8th of July 1976 we felt it necessary to see the lower Court's records and as such we directed the office to call for the records. We further directed the learned District Judge to send a report stating whether on 8th December, 1973 Sri A. N. Mitra, Subordinate Judge, 6th Court, was empowered by any Notification of the State Government to deal with contested Succession Certificate Cases. The report of the District Judge has been obtained and by his letter dated 26th July, 1976 the District Judge writes to say that "As per Rule 317 (1) of the Civil Rules and Orders—Volume I, two senior Subordinate Judges of 24-Parganas have been invested with the functions of the District Judge under Section 388 (1) of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 within the local limits of Sadar Munsif of Alipore under the Government of West Bengal Judicial Department Notification No. 6244-J dated 13th July, 1927. On 8th of December, 1973 Shri A. N. Mitra was the Senior-most Subordinate Judge of the district and by an administrative order he was directed to exercise the function of the District Delegate under Section 388 (1) of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 and to deal with the Succession Certificate Cases arising within Alipore Munsifi". It is further seen from Civil Rules and Orders that 2 senior Subordinate Judges of the district have been empowered by the High Court to grant probate and letters of administration in non-contentious cases. Thus it is seen that this very officer Shri A. N. Mitra was a District Delegate within the meaning of Section 265 and he was also an officer empowered to exercise the functions of the District Judge under Section 388 (1) of the Indian Succession Act. Mr. Chakraborty submits that even assuming that the learned Subordinate Judge had power to deal with the Succession Certificate Cases he did not exercise his jurisdiction in that capacity, but he exercised his jurisdiction as a District Delegate, and that being so, the order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge must be considered as having been passed without jurisdiction. Mr. Chakraborty refers to several decisions in support of his contention. The first case referred to has been reported in ILR (1940) 1 Cal 358, (Jhrighat Native Tea Co. Ltd. v. Bipul Chandra Gupta). In this case it has been held that "If a Court holds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain a case or that the case is not maintainable, then it is not open to that Court to decide any other issue in the case. In such a case the pleading on which the case was started should be returned to the party who filed the same leaving it open to the proper Court to decide the other issues in the case". We do not follow how the principle enunciated in this case applies to the present case. In the present case the Court was not of opinion that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the case.

7. Mr. Chakraborty next refers to a decision reported in (1885) 13 Ind App 134 (PC), (Ledgard v. Bull). In this case a suit was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, who was incompetent to try it, the same was transferred by consent of parties to the Court of the District Judge for convenience of trial. It was held that such transference was incompetent, and that such consent did not operate as a waiver of the plea to the jurisdiction which was taken in the defendant's written statement and subsequently insisted upon. This case also does not apply to the facts of the present case. In the present case the question of creation of jurisdiction by consent does not arise. The petitioner never raised the question of want of jurisdiction of the Court below.

8. Mr. Chakraborty next refers to a decision reported in (1886) 14 Ind App 160 (PC), (Meenakshi Naidoo v. Subramaniya Sasty). In this case it was held that "the question of High Court's jurisdiction not having been raised before that Court, the right to raise it had not been waived. There was inherent incompetency in the High Court to deal with the question before it and consent could not confer on the High Court a jurisdiction which it never possessed". This decision is only relevant in a case where it is found that the Court below had no jurisdiction to dispose of a matter which it did.

9. Mr. Chakraborty next submits that it cannot be said that though the learned Judge described himself as District Delegate and passed the order as such it will be deemed that he passed the order as an officer empowered under Section 388 (1) of the Act. In support of his contention he refers to a decision reported in AIR 1974 Bom 281, (Shankarrao Ramchandrarao v. Chatrapal Anandrao). It has been held in this case that "A deeming fiction cannot be introduced by construction and it is the exclusive privilege of the Legislature to apply a deeming fiction in a given case." We are quite in agreement with the principle laid down in this case.

10. The last case referred to by Mr. Chakraborty has been reported in AIR 1975 SC 915, (Ramachandra Keshav v. Govind Joti). At page 918 it has been held "A century ago, in Taylor v. Taylor, (1875) 1 Ch D 426 Jessel M. R. adopted the Rule that where a power is given to do a certain thing in a certain way, the thing must be done in that way or not at all and that other methods of performance are necessarily forbidden". We do not see how this principle applies to the present case. The only point that awaits decision in the present case is whether the officer, who was admittedly empowered under Section 388 (1) of the Act to deal with the Succession Certificate Cases, acted without jurisdiction in passing an order, simply because he described himself as a District Delegate. In this case it may be noted that the letter of the District Judge dated 26th July 1976 stated that the Officer was directed to exercise the function of the District Delegate under S. 388]

(1) of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 and to deal with the Succession Certificate Cases. It should also be remembered that this very officer was also a District Delegate empowered as such under Section 265 of the Indian Succession Act.

11. For all the reasons stated above we have no hesitation to say that the order passed by the learned Court below cannot be said to have been passed without jurisdiction. The contention raised by Mr. Chakraborty fails. In the result, the application fails and the Rule is discharged. There will be however no order as to costs.

(D) Arbitration Act (1940), Sections 9, 31 and 33 — Contract for supply of goods by B to A — Non-delivery of goods — Reference of dispute by A to sole arbitrator — Application by B challenging reference — Question whether non-delivery was due to frustration of contract held could not be gone into.

Where B entered into a contract to supply goods to A and on non-delivery of part of the goods A pursuant to the arbitration clause in the contract referred the dispute to the sole arbitrator appointed by him under Section 9 (b) and B made an application under Sections 9, 31 and 33 challenging the reference on the ground that there was no arbitration agreement and the appointment of the sole arbitrator was invalid it was held that the question whether the non-delivery of goods was due to frustration of the contract or not was a matter relating to the merits and the same could be decided in the arbitration proceeding and not in the application. A. C. Bhabhra, Malay Mohan Guha and Rajat Ghosh, for Petitioner; S. B. Mukherjee, Arindam Lahri and S. N. Sen, for Opposite Party No. 1.

RAY, J.:— This revisional application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure arises out of an application filed by the petitioner under Section 31 read with Section 33 and Section 9 of the Arbitration Act of 1940 and it is directed against order No. 21 dated December 6, 1972 passed in Misc. Case No. 50 of 1972 by the learned Subordinate Judge, Asansol.

2. The petitioner Company carried on business as manufacturers of and dealers in fireclay bricks and refractory goods in mouja Salanpur P. S. Salanpur, Sub-Division Asansol, District Burdwan, The opposite party No. 1 is a fully owned Government Company in public sector carrying on business as manufacturers of and dealers in Iron and Steel at Bhilai Steel Plant, Bhilai, District Durg, Madhya Pradesh. Sometime in 1966 the opposite party No. 1 sent a letter No. Expm/BM/Pur — 17 (1)/66 to the petitioner inviting tenders for supply of fireclay bricks and refractory goods of certain specifications to the opposite party No. 1. On February 24, 1966, the petitioner sent a letter to the opposite party No. 1 intimating that the petitioner could supply a certain quantity of fireclay bricks and refractory materials of the specifications mentioned therein and enclosed with it the tender No. BRCS/35/1832. The said letter contained all the terms and conditions. The opposite party No. 1 by letter dated December 31, 1966 accepted the said tender on certain terms and conditions. In the said letter there was a remark which is set out hereunder: "Subject to conditions of acceptance of tender attached."

3. In accordance with the said agreement the petitioner from time to time sold and delivered diverse quantities of goods to the opposite party No. 1 at the petitioner's works' at Salanpur after the same had been duly inspected and approved at its factory at Salanpur. The opposite party No. 1 made payments from time to time in respect of goods so sold and delivered and after deducting the amounts paid by the opposite party No. 1 a sum of Rs. 86,120.45 paise remains due from the opposite party No. 1 as the balance of price of goods sold and delivered besides other dues. The opposite party

No. 1 in spite of repeated demands failed and neglected to pay the said sum. There was serious labour unrest in the petitioner's factory. Moreover, the opposite party No. 1 did not pay the balance price of the goods supplied. For these reasons the petitioner was compelled to declare a closure of its factory on August 4, 1969 and as such the aforesaid contract became impossible of further performance and void. The notice of such closure was given to opposite party No. 1 in due time.

4. In February, 1971, the opposite party No. 1 wrongfully alleged that the petitioner had committed a breach of the said contract by not supplying the balance quantity of goods and the opposite party No. 1 had thereby suffered loss and damage. As such a dispute had arisen and the same should be referred to arbitration. It has been stated that though the said contract did not embody any arbitration clause the opposite party No. 1 by letter dated February 8, 1971, appointed the opposite party No. 2 as its arbitrator purportedly relying upon clause 23 of the General Conditions of Contract and intimated the same to the petitioner asking it to appoint a person as the second Arbitrator. It has been submitted that the said contract did not contain any arbitration agreement and the said appointment by the opposite party No. 1 is illegal and invalid and the opposite party No. 2 has no jurisdiction to act as arbitrator. On February 20, 1971, the petitioner under protest appointed one Mr. Satipati Banerjee, Advocate, as the Second Arbitrator. The petitioner, thereafter, received a letter dated September 24, 1971 from the opposite party No. 1 intimating it that the opposite party No. 3 by its letter dated May 1, 1971, requested Mr. Satipati Banerjee to intimate when he would be able to come to Bhilai to discuss matters regarding appointment of an umpire. In spite of reminders no reply was received and so the petitioner was called upon to appoint another person as arbitrator in place of Mr. Satipati Banerjee within 15 days of the receipt of the said letter. On November 1, 1971, the petitioner came to know from a copy of the letter by opposite party No. 1 to opposite party No. 2 that the opposite party No. 1 purported to appoint the opposite party No. 2 as the sole arbitrator.

5. It has been submitted that Mr. Satipati Banerjee had been suffering from cataract of both the eyes and he was advised to take complete rest in bed. It cannot be said in such circumstances that he neglected and refused to act as arbitrator nor was he incapable of acting as arbitrator. The petitioner should be given an opportunity to appoint an arbitrator in place of Mr. Satipati Banerjee. It has been submitted that the appointment of opposite party No. 2 as the sole arbitrator will lead to substantial miscarriage of justice. It has, therefore, been prayed that the question whether there is an arbitration agreement in respect of the above mentioned contract between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 should be determined. There is also an alternative prayer for setting aside the purported appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator and to allow further time to the petitioner to appoint its arbitrator and for stay of arbitration proceedings before opposite party No. 2 till the disposal of this application.

6. An objection to the said petition was filed by the opposite party No. 1 contending that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application and the application had been made mala fide to delay the Arbitration proceeding. It has been stated that admittedly the opposite party No. 1 sent the letter No. Expn/BM/Pur 17-1-1966 to the petitioner and several others inviting quotations for supply of articles. In paragraph 10 of the said letter it has been provided that in sending the quotations the petitioner will be deemed to have read, understood and accepted the General Conditions/Special conditions of contract prescribed by the project which can be seen in the office of the General Manager on any working day and liquidated damages clause printed overleaf. Paragraph 23 of the General conditions clearly provides for compulsory arbitration in the event of a dispute arising between the parties. It has been submitted that the petitioner submitted tenders subject to the General conditions including the arbitration clause and the contract between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 is subject to the arbitration clause contained in the General conditions of contract. It has also been stated that the petitioner did not supply the articles as per contract nor did it make alternative arrangements for procuring the same from outside. The opposite party No. 1 had to purchase the said materials from elsewhere at higher prices at short notice in order to maintain construction schedule and thus the opposite party No. 1 had suffered considerable financial loss. A dispute has arisen between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 and under the terms of the contract the same is to be settled by arbitration. The petitioner appointed Sri Satipati Banerjee, Advocate as its arbitrator and the petitioner thus accepted the position that the dispute was to be settled by arbitration. The petitioner's arbitrator did not proceed with the reference in spite of reminders and thereby neglected or refused to act as arbitrator. It has been averred that the opposite party No. 1 by registered letter dated 24-9-1971 requested the petitioner to appoint another arbitrator in place of Sri Satipati Banerjee within 15 days but as nothing was done in this respect so the opposite party No. 1 had to appoint the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator by letter dated 27-10-1971. The said appointment is quite legal and valid. It has been submitted that in Clause 24 of General conditions of contract there is express provision that any legal proceeding against the plant shall be instituted in the appropriate Civil Courts of Durg (District) and this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain this application and to make any order thereon as prayed for.

7. On December 6, 1972, the Subordinate Judge, Asansol by order No. 21 dismissed the Misc. case holding that the contract as entered into by the parties to the dispute was subject to the aforesaid General Conditions providing for compulsory arbitration in the event of dispute arising between the parties. It has also been held that there is a dispute between the contracting parties and as such the matter was referable to an arbitration under the terms of the agreement. The appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator was valid as the petitioner failed to appoint its new arbitrator in place of Sri Satipati Banerjee within the specified time. It was further held that this Court had no jurisdiction to entertain and decide the Misc. case in view of provisions of clause 24 of General Conditions of Contract.

8. Mr. Bhabhra, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioner has submitted firstly that the contract entered into between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 as evidenced by the letter of offer dated February 24, 1966 and letter of acceptance dated December 31, 1966 annexed as Annexures A and B respectively to the application did not contain any arbitration agreement and as such the appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as arbitrator for decision of the dispute is wholly illegal, invalid and unwarranted. Mr. Bhabhra has, in the second place, contended that even assuming for argument's sake that the tender had been accepted in accordance with the terms and conditions contained in the letter inviting tenders wherein there is an arbitration clause. The appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator is illegal and unwarranted inasmuch as there has been no refusal or neglect on the part of the arbitrator Sri Satipati Banerjee appointed by the petitioner to act and also there was no failure on the part of the petitioner to appoint a new arbitrator in place of Sri Satipati Banerjee. It has also been submitted that in clause 23 of the General Conditions of contract containing the arbitration agreement there is a provision for appointment of an umpire. The third dimension of Mr. Bhabhra's contention is that in accordance with the terms of contract entered into between the parties the goods were sold and delivered at the factory site of the petitioner at Salanpur within Sub-Division Asansol and as such the learned Subordinate Judge, Asansol had jurisdiction to entertain the said Misc. case and to pass orders thereon. It has been further submitted that the bar to the institution of legal proceedings against the plant in any other Civil Court except in the appropriate Civil Court of Durg (District) as provided in Clause 24 of the said General Conditions of contract is not applicable to this case inasmuch as the said Court has jurisdiction to entertain the said application. It has been further submitted by the learned counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioner that the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in not holding that the contract had become void being impossible of further performance. It has been lastly contended that the appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as the sole arbitrator is illegal and invalid inasmuch as he is an employee of the opposite party No. 1 and so he is not a disinterested person. The appointment of such a person as an arbitrator will violate the rules of natural justice.

9. Mr. S. B. Mukherjee, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the opposite party No. 1 has submitted that the contract entered into between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 contained an arbitration agreement and as such a dispute between the parties having arisen the appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as arbitrator is perfectly legal and valid. Mr. Mukherjee has also submitted that the petitioner after having appointed Sri Satipati Banerjee as its arbitrator for decision of the dispute by arbitration is not competent to question the existence of any arbitration agreement in the contract entered into between them. Mr. Mukherjee has next submitted that the arbitrator Sri Satipati Banerjee appointed by the petitioner having failed and neglected to proceed with the arbitration proceedings in spite of reminders the opposite party No. 1 duly asked the petitioner to appoint new arbitrator in his place within 15 days. But the petitioner failed to take any steps to appoint a new arbitrator and as such the appointment of opposite party No. 2 by the opposite party No. 1 as the sole arbitrator is quite in accordance with law. Mr. Mukherjee has further contended that in view of the express provision in clause 24 of the General Conditions of contract the said Misc. case is not maintainable and the learned Subordinate Judge, Asansol was right in rejecting the said Misc. case on that ground.

10. Admittedly the opposite party No. 1 sent a letter No. Expm/BM/Pur — 17/1/66 dated 24th February, 1966 inviting quotations from the petitioner for supply of fireclay bricks and other refractory materials mentioned therein. It also appears that the said letter inviting quotations contained several terms. Paragraph 10 of the said letter runs as follows:

"In sending your quotation you will be deemed to have read, understood and accepted the General Conditions — Special Conditions of the contract prescribed by the project which can be seen in the office of the General Manager on any working day and liquidated damages printed overleaf."

It also appears from the letter of acceptance issued by the opposite party No. 1 dated 31st of December, 1966 that the said quotations submitted by the petitioner in its tender were accepted. Cls. 23 and 24 of the General Conditions of contract are quoted below:—

"Clause 23—In the event of any question or dispute arising under these conditions or any special conditions of contract or in connection with this contract (except as to any matters the decision of which is specially provided by these conditions) the same shall be referred to the award of an arbitrator to be nominated by the purchaser and an arbitrator to be nominated by the contractor, or to an Umpire to be appointed by the arbitrators in writing before proceeding on the reference. The decision of the arbitrators, or in the event of their not agreeing, of the Umpire appointed by them, shall be final and conclusive and the provision of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940 and of the Rules framed thereunder and any statutory modification thereof shall be deemed to apply to and be incorporated in this contract. Upon every and any such reference, the assessment of the costs incidental to the reference and award respectively shall be at the discretion of the arbitrator or in the event of their not agreeing of the Umpire appointed by them."

"Clause 24—That in case any legal proceedings are instituted against the Plant (that is to say, the opposite party No. 1) they shall be instituted in the appropriate Civil Court of Durg (District)".

11. On a consideration of Clause 23 of the General Conditions of contract it is evident that the said clause embodies an arbitration agreement. In this case undoubtedly the petitioner failed to supply the requisite quantity of fireclay bricks and refractory materials as per contract entered into between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1. Of course, the petitioner has stated that this failure on its part to supply the goods was due to the frustration of the contract owing to the closure of its factory on account of labour unrest and non-payment of the balance of prices of goods supplied to the opposite party No. 1. Thus a dispute has arisen between the parties and the same in accordance with the terms of the contract needs to be determined by arbitration. In such circumstances the appointment of opposite party No. 2 as arbitrator by the opposite party No. 1 is in accordance with the terms of the said arbitration clause and the petitioner also appointed Sri Satipati Banerjee as its arbitrator for this purpose. The petitioner, therefore, cannot challenge that there was no arbitration agreement in the contract for determination of any dispute arising out of contract between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 by arbitration.

12. It is evident from the letter dated September 24, 1971 sent by the opposite party No. 1 that the arbitrator Sri Satipati Banerjee appointed by the petitioner who was repeatedly requested to come down to Bhilai in connection with the arbitration proceeding did not send any reply to the opposite party No. 1. The petitioner also was asked by the said letter to appoint another person as arbitrator in place of Sri Satipati Banerjee within 15 days. It appears that the petitioner did not either appoint any new arbitrator or did not send any reply to the same. In these circumstances we have no hesitation to hold that the petitioner failed to appoint an arbitrator by way of substitution within 15 days from the date of the receipt of the said letter and as such the opposite party No. 1 was perfectly justified in appointing the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator in accordance with the provisions of Section 9 (b) of the Arbitration Act. No sufficient cause has been shown to us by the petitioner for setting aside the said appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator and to allow the petitioner further time to appoint an arbitrator in place of Sri Satipati Banerjee who neglected and/or refused to act as arbitrator.

13. It is evident from Clause 24 of the General Conditions of contract that any legal proceedings against the Plant, that is, the opposite party No. 1, shall be instituted in the appropriate Civil Court of Durg (District). Now the question is whether in view of this specific agreement between the parties as to the venue of bringing any action against the opposite party No. 1 the said Misc. case which was filed in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Asansol was maintainable or not. It is apparent from the terms of the contract that the goods have been sold and delivered by the petitioner to the opposite party No. 1 at its factory site at Salanpur under Asansol Sub-Division within the jurisdiction of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Asansol and the Asansol Court ordinarily has jurisdiction to entertain the said application filed under the provisions of the Arbitration Act. Under Section 31 an application under the Arbitration Act may be filed in any Court having jurisdiction in the matter to which the reference relates. In this case the application in question may be filed either in the Asansol Court or in the appropriate Civil Court in Durg (District). In view of the express agreement between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 the application was not maintainable in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Asansol. It is pertinent to refer to the decision in AIR 1971 SC 740. Hakam Singh v. Gammon (India) Ltd.; it has been observed by the Supreme Court as follows:

"It is not open to the parties by agreement to confer by their agreement jurisdiction on a Court which it does not possess under the Code. But where two Courts or more have under the Code of Civil Procedure jurisdiction to try a suit or proceeding an agreement between the parties that the dispute between them shall be tried in one of such Courts is not contrary to public policy. Such agreement does not contravene Section 28 of the Contract Act."

14. It has been strenuously contended by Mr. Bhabhra that the appointment of the opposite party No. 2 who is an employee of the opposite party No. 1 as sole arbitrator is invalid and bad inasmuch as it violates the rules of natural justice. The opposite party No. 2, it has been submitted, being an employee of the opposite party No. 1 will be biased and he cannot be expected to determine the dispute disinterestedly and free from any bias. In support of his submission certain decisions were cited. In this case the arbitrators were appointed pursuant to the terms of the agreement as contained in the Clause 23 of the General Conditions of the contract which provides that the dispute shall be referred to the award of two arbitrators — one to be nominated by the petitioner and another arbitrator to be nominated by the opposite party No. 1. In Redman's Law of Arbitration and Awards Chapter VI page 56 it has been stated:

"Unless the reference is under some statute which points out the class of persons from which the arbitrator is to be selected, any person may be appointed arbitrator; and if the parties agree to choose the arbitrator by lot they may do so. Some of the older authorities except, as incompetent to be arbitrators, infants and lunatics, but if the selection is by mutual consent it is not now probable that disability of any kind in the person chosen, known at the time of appointment, would be ground for impeaching the award, for the parties choose their own tribunal and agree to abide by its decision."

"If the parties to a dispute with full knowledge of the facts select an arbitrator who is not an impartial person or who has to perform other duties which will not permit of his being an impartial person, the Court will not in general release them from the bargain upon which they have agreed; and if a party to a contract submits to the jurisdiction of a tribunal which has an interest of its own in the decision, the Court will not in general on that account release him from the bargain (however improvident it may be) so long as the Court is satisfied that he is aware or ought to have been aware of the terms of the bargain he has entered into. To disqualify an arbitrator so appointed, it is insufficient to show that he might be suspected of partiality: it must be shown, if not that he actually is biased, at least that there is strong probability that he will be biased, and to such an extent as to be incapable of fairly and honestly giving a decision." (Russell on Arbitration Sixteenth Edition page 110).

In (1894) 2 QB 667, Eakersley v. Mersey Docks it has been held that the Rule which applies to a judge or other person holding judicial office — namely, that he ought not to hear cases in which he might be suspected of a bias in favour of one of the parties — does not apply to an arbitrator, named in a contract, to whom both the parties have agreed to refer disputes which may arise between them under it. In order to justify the Court in saying that such an arbitrator is disqualified from acting, circumstances must be shown to exist which establish, at least, a probability that he will in fact be biased in favour of one of the parties in giving his decision.

15. Where, however, in a contract for the execution of works, the arbitrator selected by the parties is the servant of one of them, he is not disqualified by the mere fact that under the terms of the submission he may have to decide disputes involving the question whether he has himself acted with due skill and competence in advising his employers in respect of carrying out of the contract.

16. In 68 Cal WN 927 = (AIR 1965 Cal 424), B. K. Dhar (Private) Ltd. v. Union of India it has been held that if the parties with full knowledge of the fact select their arbitrator who is not an impartial person, the Court will not release them from the bargain upon which they agreed and if a party in order to secure a contract has submitted to the jurisdiction of a tribunal which has an interest of its own in the decision, the Court will not on that account release them from their own bargain, however, improvident it may consider it so long as the Court is satisfied that he knew or should have known what kind of bargain he was entering into. In a bench decision of this Court reported in (1971) 75 Cal WN 767, Union of India v. Promode Kumar Agarwalla it has been observed

"It cannot be said that only because the sole arbitrator is nominated by the Secretary, Government of India and he might be a Government servant the Court ought to conclude that he will or is likely to act as biased."

17. Thus on a consideration of the aforesaid decisions we have no hesitation to hold that the appointment of the opposite party No. 2 as sole arbitrator cannot be held to be invalid on the mere plea that he is an employee of the opposite party No. 1 in the absence of any material to show that he is biased in favour of the opposite party No. 1. The question whether there has been a frustration of contract or not cannot be decided in the instant application under Section 9 read with Section 31 and Section 33 of the Arbitration Act. The scope of the application is to decide whether there is an arbitration agreement in the contract entered into between the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 and whether the appointment of the respondent No. 2 as the sole arbitrator is in accordance with the provision of the Arbitration Act. The petitioner failed to supply goods in accordance with the terms of the contract. The question whether the non-delivery of such goods is due to the frustration of the contract or not is a matter relating to the merits and the same is to be decided in the arbitration proceeding and not in this application. It is pertinent to refer in this connection to the decision reported in AIR 1951 SC 9, A. M. Mair and Co. v. Gordhandas Saggarmull where it has been held by the Supreme Court

"If, therefore, we come to the conclusion that both the disputes raised by the respondents fall within the scope of the arbitration clause, then there is an end of the matter, for the arbitrators would have jurisdiction to adjudicate on the disputes, and we are not concerned with any error of law or fact committed by them or any omission on their part to consider any of the matters. In this view, it would not be for us to determine the true construction of the contract and find out whether the respondents' contention is correct or not. Once the dispute is found to be within the scope of the arbitration clause, it is no part of the province of the Court to enter into the merits of the dispute."

18. In the premises aforesaid all the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioner having failed this application fails. The Rule is, therefore, discharged. There will be no order as to costs in the facts and circumstances of the case.

MUKHERJI, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

Sudhis Das Gupta and Hari Charan Pal, for Appellant; Amerendra Mohan Mitra and Bijitendra Mohan Mitra, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT:— This is an appeal against a judgment of affirmance. The plaintiff instituted the connected suit on July 5, 1969 under Section 36 of the Bengal Money-lenders Act, 1940 read with Section 37-A and Section 38. The claim was for a decree reopening the transaction effected by the sale deed of February 5, 1951 and the agreement of even date treating it as a mortgage by conditional sale and also for reopening the rent decree passed against him in S. C. Suit No. 34 of 1951 as also the decree for ejectment in Title Suit No. 252 of 1960 and for other ancillary and incidental reliefs.

2. The plaintiff appellant's case is that he obtained from the defendant a loan of Rs. 300/- by mortgaging his bastu land measuring $2\frac{1}{2}$ bighas of C. S. Plot 1607, Mouja Balagarh within Hooghly-Chin-surah Municipality. To avoid the provisions of the said Act, at the instance of the defendant respondent, the plaintiff executed a sale deed in favour of the defendant in respect of the said property on February 5, 1951. On the same date an agreement of sale was entered into between the parties whereby the defendant agreed to reconvey the property on payment of the said sum of Rs. 300/- by instalments by Magh 1362 B. S. The plaintiff who remained in possession of the property, was to pay Rs. 10/- per month as interest though it was described in the agreement as rent thereof. The property was very valuable worth Rs. 15,000/- even at the time of the loan and Rs. 90,000/- at the time of the institution of the suit. The plaintiff was forced to execute the documents aforesaid under pressure of circumstances according to the proposal of the defendant.

3. In view of the law in force at the time, the plaintiff was advised to file Title Suit No. 96 of 1959 for specific performance of the said contract against the defendant stating that though the transaction was a loan transaction it was shown as a sale to avoid rigour of the Money Lender's Act. The suit was dismissed as the amount was not paid within the time agreed upon and the said decree was ultimately affirmed by this Court.

4. The defendant filed S. C. Suit No. 34 of 1959 for rent for the suit property and the suit was decreed. Thereafter the defendant also filed Title Suit No. 252 of 1960 for ejectment of the plaintiff from the suit property which was decreed and the decree was ultimately confirmed by this Court as it now appears. The decree was put into execution but the plaintiff had always been in possession of the property although false reports as to possession had been submitted to the executing Court.

5. In view of the change of law in respect of the provisions of the Bengal Money-lenders Act by the Amendment Act of 1965, the plaintiff became entitled to establish in a Court of law the true nature of the transaction which remedy was not available to him under the existing law. The plaintiff accordingly instituted the present suit alleging that the transaction was a loan secured by the mortgage by conditional sale. Accordingly, it was prayed, the transaction as also the decrees obtained by the defendant should be reopened and a decree for accounts be passed in the circumstances as the plaintiff had already paid to the defendant double of the principal amount secured.

5-A. The suit was contested by the defendant who filed a written statement denying all allegations made by the plaintiff. It was said that the transaction was a sale with a covenant for reconveyance under certain conditions. The plaintiff's attempt to enforce the agreement of reconveyance failed for his own default and the decrees impugned were passed in accordance with law and could not be reopened. The defendant was in possession of the suit property except in respect of three rooms in forcible possession of the plaintiff against which the defendant had prayed for police help and report of Nazir about possession was correct and true. The impugned decrees, it was contended, could not in law be reopened.

6. The learned Munsif on a trial on evidence dismissed the suit and the decree was affirmed in appeal; the appellate decree is now the subject-matter of appeal before us.

7. The Bengal Money-lenders Act, 1940 was amended by the Bengal Money-lenders (Amendment) Act, 1965 with effect from October 15, 1965. By that amendment, inter alia a new S. 37-A was inserted after S. 37 providing a saving as to mortgage by conditional sale. In modification of the proviso to sub-sec. (c) of S. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 it is provided that where a mortgager ostensibly sells the mortgage property on any of the conditions of the said sub-section, the transaction notwithstanding anything contained to the contrary therein shall always be deemed to be a mortgage by conditional sale. Further by insertion of sub-section (b) of Section 40 of the Act, it has been provided that evidence adduced by the borrower of any agreement or statement varying the terms of any document creating or witnessing a loan shall be admitted.

8. The appellant's case is that prior to the promulgation of the said Act, it was not possible for him to assert the true nature of the transaction which was a mortgage by conditional sale but was recorded in two separate documents, one the ostensible sale deed which was registered while the other was the unregistered deed of an agreement for reconveyance of the same date. The present suit was instituted on July 5, 1969 well within the period of limitation for a suit for redemption for reopening the transaction. The appellant's further case is that the suit for redemption of the mortgage by conditional sale, which was the true nature of the transaction, could only be instituted when the change of law took place by the Amendment Act of 1965. The Courts below erred in holding that the transaction was an out and out sale.

9. In Manindra v. Narendra, ILR (1956) 1 Cal 59, a Division Bench was considering the true nature of a transaction of an out and out sale coupled with an agreement for repurchase entered into by two separate documents of October 7, 1942 between two persons. The Court noticed that a sale and an unregistered agreement for repurchase will not be a mortgage by conditional sale under the Transfer of Property Act. Even so, in the Bengal Money-lenders Act, it was noticed, Section 2 (12) includes transactions which are loans in substance though not in form. In construing transactions under or for the purpose of special statute, substance will prevail over form. Thus though a transaction may not amount to mortgage, yet it may well come within the definition of loan under Section 2 (12) of the Act if, in substance it is a loan. Section 92 of the Evidence Act makes evidence as to intention of a document contrary to its express language inadmissible but proviso (b) lets in evidence to show in what manner the disputed transaction or the language of the document was related to existing facts. Accordingly, extraneous evidence as to the true value of the property as also possession of the property and dealings, or in other words, the conduct of the parties in relation to the transaction, are relevant and admissible under proviso (b) to Section 92 of the Evidence Act to establish that the transaction in substance was a loan.

10. It may be possible that in the attending circumstances particularly in regard to the value of the property and the possession thereof, the transaction may be considered to be a loan in substance and, after the amendment, secured by a mortgage of conditional sale. But an insurmountable difficulty has been created by the appellant's earlier Title Suit No. 96 of 1959 for specific performance of the agreement of repurchase. If the transaction was a loan, as contended, there was no impediment on the plaintiff at the time to establish that the transaction in substance was a loan in view of the judgment we have referred to above. By the institution of the suit for specific performance of the agreement for purchase, the appellant brought his doom on himself beyond reparation. The Court's decision was that though the appellant was otherwise entitled to repurchase the property which was sold to the respondent subject to purchase as pleaded by the appellant, the claim could not be enforced as the amount due was not repaid within the stipulated period.

11. Mr. Das Gupta appearing for the appellant contended that the relief as prayed for in the connected suit was not available to the appellant at the time he instituted the suit for specific performance. It may be that the right to reopen an ostensible sale as a mortgage by a conditional sale was available only after the promulgation of the Act. But in establishing a mortgage, it also must be established that there was a loan and without establishing the loan, the transaction of mortgage by conditional sale is not conceivable in law.

12. The question now is whether the appellant was entitled in law to institute the present suit for reopening the transaction which was obviously on the basis of a loan secured by mortgage by conditional sale, as contended. The suit for specific performance proceeded on the basis that the transaction was not a loan but was an out-and-out sale. This finding cannot but operate as a res judicata on a future litigation amongst the parties and the question of the transaction being a loan could not further be reagitated by the appellant in view of the position taken by him in the earlier suit.

13. Mr. Das Gupta further contended that the appellant in this suit was litigating under a different title viz. as mortgagee and accordingly, no question of the bar of res judicata arises. This argument would be plausible if the Court was to consider the position only in the context of Small Cause Court Suits for rent and eviction suit only all instituted by the respondent, particularly when the suit for redemption was not barred by time. Unfortunately, these suits followed, as we have seen, the dismissal of the suit for specific performance when the appellant in fact gave up his case that the transaction was a loan and, on the contrary, accepted the position that the transaction was an out-and-out sale. Accordingly, there is no escape from the conclusion that the present suit is barred in law by the principles of res judicata as the appellant's case as a debtor was no longer available to him.

14. The appellant in his earlier suit in respect of the same property did not base his claim for the reliefs that the transaction was in substance a loan even though there was no legal impediment in respect thereof. It is to be held accordingly that in obvious absence of any leave of Court he was not in a position to claim later on on the basis of the same transaction being a loan which had been the basis of his claim in the subsequent proceeding under Section 36 of the Act. This bar of Order 2, Rule 2 (3) seems also insurmountable.

15. For all these reasons, the appeal fails and is dismissed. There will be no order for costs in the circumstances.

16. Leave under clause 15 of the Letters Patent is prayed for and granted.
Appeal dismissed.

Panchanan Pal, Sailendra Nath Dutta and Miss Jyotsna Das, for Appellant; Lala Hemanta Kumar and Manick Chandra Banerjee, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT:— The defendant, the State of West Bengal, has preferred this second appeal against the judgment and the decree passed by a Subordinate Judge, Alipore affirming those of the Munsif of the Additional Court at Sealdah in a suit brought by the respondent Mir Fakir Mohammad. The suit was brought for a declaration that the suit lands were orchards and that he was entitled to retain the same under the provision of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 amongst other reliefs. The plaintiff got the decree against the State of West Bengal and in the first appeal taken by the State, the appellant was unsuccessful.

2. The allegation of the plaintiff, in short, is that he is in possession of agricultural lands. The draft record of the recent revisional settlement prepared by the State Government was on the basis of the cadestral survey records published long ago showing the lands as agricultural. After the publication of the said C. S. records, the plaintiff converted some of his danga lands into gardens by planting fruit trees, banana plants and bamboos and he has been in possession of the same for more than 30 years as such. The suit was instituted on 20-7-1960. It is stated in the plaint that due to his mental unrest on account of promulgation of the Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 and also on account of his ignorance of law, he included the suit lands as agricultural lands in the 'B' form prescribed under the law. The inclusion of these lands was due to mistake. In fact, according to the provision of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act he is entitled to retain them and as such he wanted to amend the 'B' form to exert his right of retention of the lands in question. As the prayer of the plaintiff was refused, he now prays in this suit for declaration that the lands in question are orchards and non-agricultural lands so as to be retained by the plaintiff according to the law. The State appeared and contested the suit on the allegation that the lands in dispute were not gardens or orchards, but in fact, they were agricultural lands. The case of the defendant further is that those lands have already vested in the State and cannot be retained by the plaintiff under the law.

3. The only question that has been agitated before me is whether or not the disputed lands can be called orchards or non-agricultural lands as alleged by the plaintiff. Both the Courts below have held that the suit lands were not agricultural lands. The trial Court held that bamboo gardens were non-agricultural land and banana gardens were orchards. The First Appellate Court below was of the view that the suit lands were orchards. Mr. Pal, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant has mainly attacked the findings of the Courts below on two grounds. The first point of attack is that both the Courts below failed to read the plaintiff's case as made out in the plaint which was changed at the time of hearing and to read correctly the evidence on record. The second point is that even according to the case of the plaintiff and the materials on record, the suit lands ought to have been held to be agricultural lands and not orchards or gardens. Mr. Lala appearing on behalf of the respondent has contended that the findings of both the Courts are based on records and arrived at on proper appreciation of the case of the parties.

4. Coming to the first point raised by Mr. Pal, we find from the reading of the plaint that the suit lands were agricultural lands upto the publication of the C. S. records of right, but subsequently the plaintiff converted the suit lands into gardens by planting fruit trees, banana plants and bamboos. The plaintiff, since then, has been possessing those lands as gardens or orchards for more than 30 years. This is the specific fact pleaded by the plaintiff. It has been alleged that due to some mistake of law, he wrongly included the disputed lands in 'B' form under the wrong impression that these were agricultural lands. Later on, being aware of the fact that he was entitled to retain orchards in khas under the law, he wanted to amend the 'B' form claiming retention of the disputed lands, but, he got no relief. From the judgment of the Courts below, it appears that the plaintiff took the point at the time of hearing that the suit lands could be called non-agricultural lands because the banana plants and bamboos appearing in the suit lands grew spontaneously and the plaintiff did not cultivate the land or make any effort for the purpose of growing banana plants and bamboos. As 'agriculture' implies cultivation of land and making of some effort for culturing the plants, the plaintiff took up this position to show that lands are not agricultural relying upon certain decisions. The plaintiff examined himself during trial and examined some of his witnesses on his side. The plaintiff is P. W. 2. He says that out of 25 acres of agricultural land, he mentioned the suit properties in 'B' form wrongly. He says that those lands have been mentioned in Schedule 'A' to the plaint as orchards. According to the plaintiff's evidence, he has got bamboos and fruit trees on these lands. He says that these bamboos grew spontaneously and he wants to retain them as non-agricultural land. He further says that banana plants also grew spontaneously and that no cultivation is necessary for the growth of banana plants. Of course, he has admitted also that some new banana plants were planted when some plants had died. He wants to retain the banana garden as orchard. He has also stated that there are some mango plants, jack trees, date trees, sajina plants and tamarind plants on some plots. From the witnesses examined on the side of the plaintiff, it appears that they wanted to say that no cultivation or manual care or effort would be necessary for the growth of banana plants or bamboo plants or to maintain the gardens. Two witnesses were examined on the side of the State of West Bengal. D. W. 1 was an Assistant Settlement Officer. According to him, an orchard consists of fruit bearing trees. D. W. 2 has stated that for cultivation of banana one is to stir the banana plants and to remove the old plants for proper growth of new plants. He has also stated that for proper growth of bamboos, the roots are to be cleared. The plaintiff has relied upon an inspection report of a Pleader Commissioner appointed by the Court to ascertain the nature of some of the suit lands. In the report we find that some of the lands were banana gardens and some were bamboo gardens. The inspection was made in presence of both the parties. From his report we get that the Commissioner found the gardens to be "cultured". He also found some trees like mango, simul and tamarind. But their number is insignificant. From the reading of the evidence of the Commissioner along with his report, Ext. 1, there can be no doubt that the banana gardens and the bamboo gardens inspected by the Commissioner were cultured. The plaintiff's case in the plaint is that he had agricultural lands and that some danga lands were converted by him into gardens by planting bamboos, banana plants and fruit trees. The evidence also shows that he sells the product of the gardens and for maintaining the garden, the plaintiff cultured them by employing efforts as evidenced by the Commissioner's report. At the time of trial when giving evidence, the plaintiff, however, changed his case and he wanted to say that the banana plants and the bamboo plants grew spontaneously and without any effort. His case at that time was that no care or effort was to be made for maintaining the garden. This is contradictory to the one appearing in the plaint. In order to get any relief in this suit, the plaintiff must prove his own case pleaded in the plaint. It appears that the learned Courts below did not pay their attention to the pleading of the plaintiff and allowed the plaintiff unlawfully to adduce evidence at the time of trial for setting up a new and a different case. It also appears that the learned Courts below did not consider the report of the Commissioner as also the evidence adduced on the side of the defendant. They overlooked the fact that the banana and bamboo gardens were found by the Commissioner to be "cultured" and that the fruit bearing trees like mango, jack trees, tamarind, sajina were very few. The materials on record coupled with the original case of the plaintiff in the pleading clearly prove that the suit lands were banana and bamboo gardens properly grown and cultured by the plaintiff himself by his efforts. The plaintiff in evidence does not give any reasonable explanation why he made wrong statements in 'B' form. In this view of the matter when the case pleaded in the plaint was different from the case set up at the time of trial, the latter case ought to have been rejected and the suit dismissed. The first point raised by Mr. Pal is accepted.

5. Coming to the second point the question arises whether the suit lands can be retained by the plaintiff as claimed. Section 4 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 speaks about the notification vesting the estates and rights of the intermediaries in the State free from all encumbrances. Section 5 of the Act mentions the effect of notification and enumerates the rights and extent in the properties of the intermediary. Sub-section (1) of Section 6 of the Act mentions the property which the intermediary shall be entitled to retain. Clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 6 is relevant for our purpose because the plaintiff claims his right to retain the suit lands under this provision. The plaintiff claims himself to be an intermediary and clause (f) relied upon by him is as follows:—

"(f) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), land comprised in tea gardens or orchards or land used for the purpose of livestock breeding, poultry farming or dairy".

The plaintiff further relied on clause (c) which says that an intermediary is entitled to retain non-agricultural land in his khas possession under certain circumstances mentioned therein.

6. In this connexion we should note the definitions of agricultural land and non-agricultural land. In clause (b) of Section 2 of the Act "agricultural land" is defined in the following language:—

"(b) "Agricultural land" means land ordinarily used for purposes of agriculture or horticulture and includes such land, notwithstanding that it may be lying fallow for the time being."

In Clause (j) of Section 2 we get:

"(j) "Non-agricultural land" means land other than agricultural land or other than land comprised in a forest."

According to Mr. Pal, the suit lands are all agricultural lands because according to the definition of the Act any land used for purposes of agriculture or horticulture will be agricultural land. His argument is that the plaintiff has been using the disputed lands either for banana garden or for bamboo garden, both of which require cultivation of land and human effort and care are also necessary for culturing the growth and maintenance of the banana and bamboo plants. The cultivation, culturing and the growing of banana and bamboo plants amount to agriculture and even if it is not agriculture in the narrower sense, it must be so being horticulture as mentioned in the definition of 'agriculture' in the Act. It has been contended that the banana gardens or the bamboo gardens cannot in any view be called orchards referred to in clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 6 of the Act on which the plaintiff relies to get retention of the same. In this connexion I will refer to the decisions relied upon by the trial Court to hold that the suit lands were not agricultural lands because bamboos and bananas on the suit land grew spontaneously. The first reference was made to the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Pratap Singh v. Commr. of Income-tax reported in AIR 1952 All 845. That was a case which relates to the sale of forest trees of spontaneous growth. It was a reference under the Income-tax Act made by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal. It is no use discussing the facts of that case. I quote below the relevant portion:—

"In the Statement of the case, the Tribunal has mentioned that it was conceded before the Bench that there was no evidence on the record of the assessment proceedings that there had ever been cultivation of the soil on which the trees stood. The form in which the question was formulated also implied that the growth of the trees on the land was natural and spontaneous and without the intervention of the human agency. If, therefore, human labour and skill were expended, they were not directed towards planting or growing of the trees. The skill and labour were directed towards regeneration and preservation of the forest trees. We are unable to hold that the use of human labour and skill merely for such purpose constitutes "agriculture," or that the land was being used for agricultural purposes".

In the case before us that decision will be of no help because this is not a case of forest trees. But, according to the plaintiff's case, he converted the lands into gardens by planting banana plants and bamboos. Moreover, there is the evidence that the gardens were cultured. This case is, therefore not relevant for the purpose of our decision.

7. The second decision of the Supreme Court relied upon by the trial Court is Commr. of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa v. Sri Ramkrishna Deo reported in AIR 1959 SC 239. That was also a case relating to the Income-tax Act and in that case also forest trees of spontaneous growth were involved. There the Supreme Court on consideration of some other decisions of its own noted as follows:—

".....that the term "agriculture" meant, in its ordinary sense, cultivation of the field, that in that sense it would connote such basic operations as tilling of the land, sowing of the trees, plantation and the like, and that though subsequent operations such as, weeding, pruning, watering, digging the soil around the growth and removing under-growths could be regarded as agricultural operations when they are taken in conjunction with and as continuation of the basic operations mentioned before, they could not apart from those operations, be regarded as bearing the character of agricultural operations."

This case will not, in my view, support the plaintiff-respondent here before me.

8. In this connexion I think it necessary to refer to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Commr. of Income-tax, West Bengal, Calcutta v. Benoy Kumar Saha Roy reported in AIR 1957 SC 768. Although that case relates to the Income-tax Act, yet that decision is instructive in the sense that there has been a long discourse upon the terms "agriculture" and "agricultural purpose" used in the definition of "agricultural income" in Section 2(1) of the Income-tax Act. There the said two terms "agriculture" and "agricultural purpose" were not defined in the Income-tax Act. In paragraph 10 of the judgment we find:

"The terms "agriculture" and "agricultural purpose" not having been defined in the Indian Income-tax Act, we must necessarily fall back upon the general sense in which they have been understood in common parlance. "Agriculture" in its root sense means sowing, a field and culture, cultivation, cultivation of field which of course implies expenditure of human skill and labour upon land. The term has, however, acquired a wider significance and that is to be found in the various dictionary meanings ascribed to it".

Bhagwati, J. while delivering the judgment on behalf of the Court considered the meaning of the word "agriculture" appearing in different dictionaries and several decisions and he says in paragraph 16 of the judgment:

"These are the various meanings ascribed to the term "agriculture" in various dictionaries and it is significant to note that the term has been used both in the narrow sense of the cultivation of the field and the wider sense of comprising all activities in relation to the land, including horticulture, forestry, breeding and rearing of livestock, dairying, butter and cheese-making, husbandry etc."

On a consideration of meanings of the word "agriculture" in different dictionaries and decisions Bhagwati, J. says:

"Whether the narrower or the wider sense of the term "agriculture" should be adopted in a particular case depends not only upon the provisions of the various statutes in which the same occurs but also upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The definition of the term in one statute does not afford a guide to the construction of the same term in another statute and the sense in which the term has been understood in the several statutes does not necessarily throw any light on the manner in which the term should be understood generally".

In view of the definition of "agricultural land" inserted in the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, it cannot be stated that such land has been used in the narrowest sense, but in fact, it is meant to be used in a more or less wider sense and in that view of the matter the suit lands, we are concerned with, are agricultural lands.

9. Now, the question is whether the plaintiff shall be entitled to take advantage of clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 6 of the Act for retaining them on the ground that they are orchards.

The word 'horticulture' appearing in the definition of "agricultural land" has not been defined in the Act. Horticulture, according to Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary means "the science and arts of growing fruits, vegetables, flowers or ornamental plants". The word according to the Pocket Oxford Dictionary means "gardening". In Chambers's 20th Century Dictionary we get the meaning of the word as "the art of gardening". If the suit lands are taken to relate to horticulture which is a species of agriculture, it is to be decided whether the suit lands can be called orchards which are connected with horticulture. "Orchard" according to the Pocket Oxford Dictionary means, enclosure with fruit trees. According to the Chambers's Dictionary it is an enclosed garden of fruit trees. Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary says that the word 'Orchard' means a planting of fruit trees or nut trees. "Tree" according to this Dictionary means a woody perennial plant having a single usu. elongate main stem generally with few or no branches on its lower parts. In Pocket Oxford Dictionary "tree" has been described as a perennial plant with single woody self supporting stem called the trunk usu. unbranched for some distance above ground. According to the Chambers's Dictionary "tree" is a large plant with a single branched woody trunk. An orchard, therefore, means a garden of trees. A question again arises whether bamboos and plantain or banana plants can be called trees. To show the nature of tree as distinguished from other kinds of plants Mr. Pal relies upon the "Text Book of Botany" by H. Mukherjee, 6th Edn. meant for college students. At page 49 of the book it is stated that nature of stem and its branches often determine the types of plants. Thus, the denomination of plants into herbs, shrubs and trees is mainly based on the woody nature and size of the stem. According to the author, herbs are low growing plants with tender stems which are usually not woody. In some perennial herbs woody tissues may develop with age. Plants which live for a number of years are called perennials. The perennial herbs send out sub-aerial shoots for vegetative and reproductive purposes once a year during the periods favourable for growth. Shrubs have been described as small, perennial woody plants without a main trunk. China rose, Gardenia, etc. are examples of this type. "Trees" are described as taller and more robust than the shrubs. Their main axis remains unbranched for some distance above the ground and forms trunk. Mango, Tamarind, Banyan etc. are given as examples of trees. From what I have discussed above, it cannot be held that plantain or banana plants and bamboos are trees. The banana garden and the bamboo gardens referred to in the suit cannot be called orchards. In my view, therefore, the claim for retention of the said gardens by the plaintiff cannot be sustained on the basis of clause (f) of sub-sec. (1) of Section 6 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. The second point urged by Mr. Pal from the side of the appellant also succeeds.

10. Mr. Lala on behalf of the respondent filed a petition for taking note of a subsequent event after the disposal of the first appeal in support of the decree passed in favour of the plaintiff-respondent. He relies upon the judgment of a Bigh Raiyat Case No. 8 where an order was passed in favour of the plaintiff-respondent allowing him to retain several lands on the basis of the decree passed in Title Suit No. 23 of 1962 confirmed by the learned Subordinate Judge in the Title Appeal No. 1462 of 1962. Mr Lala's argument is that when in the meantime plaintiff's claim has been allowed by the Settlement Officer, the appellant, the State of West Bengal cannot challenge the character of the suit lands to deprive the plaintiff of his legitimate right of retention. The said application is opposed by the appellant. On consideration of the affidavits filed by both the parties and considering the judgment passed, I find that the application has got no merit. The order was passed by the Settlement Officer on the basis of the judgment and the decree passed by the trial Court duly affirmed by the Subordinate Judge in the first appeal below. The decisions of the lower Courts have been challenged in this second appeal before me. The decisions of the Courts below were not final and the Settlement Officer, when the said judgments were produced before him, could not disregard the said judgments of the Civil Court and pass order on the basis thereof and not on the merits of the plaintiff's claim considered independently. When in my view as indicated above, the judgments and the decrees of the Courts below were illegal, erroneous and unsustainable and also liable to be set aside, the order passed by the Settlement Officer on the basis of those erroneous decisions is of no value and the plaintiff cannot rely upon that in support of his claim. The plaintiff gets no assistance from the said judgments and no relief can be granted to the respondent on the basis of that application. The said application is thus disposed of.

11. In the result, the appeal is allowed and the judgments and the decrees of the Courts below are hereby set aside. The plaintiff's suit is dismissed. In the facts and circumstances, however, the parties will bear their own costs in this appeal as well as in the Courts below.

Appeal allowed.

Sunil Krishna Dutta, for Appellant;
Rabin Mitra and Kamallesh Banerjee, for Respondents.

T. K. BASU, J.:— This is an appeal from an order of the learned Judge, Motor Vehicle Accident Claim Cases Tribunal, Burdwan dated the 31st August, 1966. The petitioners before the Tribunal were the sons, daughters and the widow of one Mohammad Ahsan who had died in an accident on the 11th January, 1966. The case of the petitioners was that the truck No. BRN 4761 was being driven rashly and negligently as a result of which it met with an accident near Rani Bundh on the Grand Trunk Road as a result of which the said Mohammad Ahsan received severe injuries. He was removed to Rani Bundh Primary Health Centre and he died on the same date. It was the case of the petitioners that the deceased was a contractor by occupation and his monthly earnings came to about Rs. 500 which was the only source of maintenance for his family. The petitioners claimed Rs. 30,000 by way of compensation before the Tribunal.

2. The owner of the truck did not appear or contest the claim. The claim was however contested by the appellant with whom the truck was insured. The learned Tribunal rightly held that since the owner of the truck did not contest the claim, the evidence on the question of rash and negligent driving was necessarily ex parte and the Insurance Company was not entitled to challenge that evidence.

3. The only question that the appellant before us could and did agitate before the Tribunal was that it was not liable under the policy of insurance for the claim on behalf of the deceased. The learned Tribunal however came to the conclusion that the petitioners were to get a sum of Rs. 12,000 as compensation and the appellant was to pay the amount.

4. It is against this order that the appellant Insurance Company has come before us on appeal.

5. Mr. Sunil Krishna Dutt, the learned advocate on behalf of the appellant contended that the Insurance Company was not liable to the deceased or his heirs for the accident resulting in the death of the deceased. This contention was based on the provisions of Section 95 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 (IV of 1939) (hereinafter referred to as the Act). Section 95, in so far as it is material for our purpose, is in the following terms:—

Provided that a policy shall not be required—

6. According to Mr. Dutta Proviso (ii) of Section 95 (1) (b) exonerates the appellant from any liability in respect of the accident or the death of the deceased in the present case. It is clear from a reading of the Proviso (ii) to Section 95 (1) (b) of the Act but it deals with the cases where the Insurance Company shall not be liable on the policy. Proviso (ii) however engrafts an exception to this exemption from liability. The first part of the Proviso (ii) speaks of a vehicle in which passengers are carried for hire or reward. This would obviously refer to passenger transport or what is otherwise known as stage carriages where passengers are carried from place to place for a consideration. The truck in the instant case clearly did not answer to that description. The next part of the Proviso speaks of a vehicle in which passengers are carried 'by reason of or in pursuance of a contract of employment'. If the deceased was being carried as a passenger by reason of or in pursuance of 'a contract of employment' the appellant Insurance Company would clearly be liable for the accident.

7. Mr. Rabin Mitra, the learned advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents, who are the heirs of the deceased, contended that the deceased was being carried on the vehicle under a contract of employment and as such the Insurance Company was liable. Mr. Mitra contended that the deceased had hired the truck for the purpose of carrying timber for a sum of Rs. 70. This according to Mr. Mitra amounted to a 'contract of employment' within the meaning of Proviso (ii) to Section 95 (1) (b) of the Act.

8. That the deceased was a hirer in respect of the vehicle in question cannot possibly be disputed and indeed was not disputed. This is clear from the evidence of witness No. 5, on behalf of the petitioner before the Tribunal. It may be mentioned that witness No. 6 was the sister's husband of the deceased. The material portion of his evidence is as follows:—

"On the morning of the day of accident we went to Gorpara to hire a truck. I accompanied him. He hired the truck for carrying wood to Khatra to a timber depot. Truck No. BRN 4761 was hired for Rs. 70. He boarded the truck there and I returned home".

9. It is thus clearly established that the deceased was a hirer from the owner of the truck. The question therefore which arises for consideration in the present appeal is whether a hirer can be said to be under 'a contract of employment' within the meaning of Proviso (ii) to Section 95 (1) (b) of the Act, in order to make the appellant liable on the Insurance Policy.

10. Mr. Dutta, the learned advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant placed strong reliance in this connection on a Full Bench decision of the Punjab High Court in the case of Oriental Fire and General Insurance Co. Ltd., New Delhi v. Smt. Gurdev Kaur, reported in AIR 1967 Punj 486. The facts of that case were somewhat similar to the facts of the present case. In the case before the Punjab High Court, a goods truck which was insured, was hired by some persons for carrying their goods. The truck was driven by an employee of the truck owner. The owners of the goods were also sitting in the truck when it met with an accident, as a result of which some of them died. The dependents of the deceased were awarded compensation by the Tribunal. On an appeal by the Insurance Company, it was held that the deceased persons as hirers-cum-owners of the goods did not come under Clause (ii) of the Proviso to Section 95 (1) (b) and as such the Insurance Company was not liable on the policy. Dealing with the expression 'contract of employment' in that proviso, Mehar Singh C. J. observed as follows:

"The words in clause (ii) of the Proviso to clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 95 are 'carried for hire or reward or are carried by reason of or in pursuance of a contract of employment' go with the word 'passengers' and not with the word 'vehicle'. If those words were to be read with the word 'vehicle' the reading of this clause of the Proviso does not make correct grammatical sense or any other sense. This is one consideration which negatives completely the second argument that in this case there was 'a contract of employment' of the truck or the motor vehicle of Benarsi Das or that there was 'a contract of employment' of Benarasi Das as a carrier. Then it has not been shown by reference to any judicial opinion that the expression 'a contract of employment' can have reference to a contract of carriage of goods whether in relation to the carriage itself or the owner of such carriage. The normal and the ordinary meaning and scope of the expression 'a contract of employment' points to a person being employed to do something or to carry out something for another person. It has the element of rendition of some service in one shape or another for the employer. So it cannot refer to the hiring of a goods carried as a contract of employment or to the owner of such a carrier as the person with whom a contract of employment has been made."

11. This according to Mr. Dutta is a clear authority for the proposition that a hirer of a vehicle is not a person who enters into 'a contract of employment' with the owner of the vehicle and as such the Insurance Company is not liable.

12. Mr. Mitra, the learned Advocate on behalf of the respondents sought to rely on a decision of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Hukum Chand Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Subashini Roy, reported in (1970) 74 Cal WN 879. In that case, it was held that in an action for compensation in respect of the accident involving the death or fatal injury of a person arising out of using a motor vehicle, all possible defences are not open to the Insurer. The Insurer is not entitled to avoid his liability except on the grounds specified in Section 96 (2) of the Act. There can possibly be no dispute with the proposition laid down in the above judgment of this Court. Where the liability is otherwise covered by the policy, the Insurer is confined to the defences laid down in Section 96 (2) of the Act. But this does not and cannot possibly preclude the Insurance Company from disputing the very basis of its liability under the policy. In such a case, it seems to us that Section 96 (2) of the Act does not come into the picture at all.

13. We are fortified in this view by the above-mentioned decision of the Full Bench of the Punjab High Court in the Oriental Fire and General Insurance Co. Ltd., New Delhi v. Smt. Gurdev Kaur reported in AIR 1967 Punj 486. While dealing with this question, the Court observed as follows:—

"Sub-section (2) of Section 96 refers to a sum payable by an insurer under sub-section (1) of that section and sub-section (6) of that section debars any other defence than those mentioned in sub-section (2). But this only happens when the judgment is in respect of liability as is required to be covered by a policy under clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 95. Where no liability is required to be covered by that provision, it is obviously open to the insurer to prove that in a particular case the liability is not required to be covered by that provision, and, when the insurer shows that, it has no liability to pay to the person who is entitled to the benefit of the decree and judgment of the Tribunal. In such a case the question of the other defences under sub-section (2) of Section 96 never arises."

14. We may mention that this particular question of whether the Insurer challenge its liability did not come up before the Division Bench of this Court in the case mentioned above and was not dealt with.

15. Mr. Mitra, learned advocate on behalf of the respondents referred to a decision of the Bombay High Court in the case of Abdulkadar Ebrahim v. Kashinath Moreswar, reported in AIR 1968 Bom 267. This case only deals with the mode of assessment of the damages and does not appear to have any relevance to the issue before us. Indeed Mr. Dutta for the appellant did not raise any contention on the quantum of damages awarded by the learned Tribunal.

16. Reference is also made by Mr. Mitra to a decision of the Madras High Court in the case of the Vengard Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Chinnammal, reported in AIR 1970 Mad 236. In that case it was held by Alagiriswami, J. that the expression 'a contract of employment' occurring in Proviso (ii) of Section 95 (1) (b) would cover not only such persons as were under a contract of employment with the owner of the vehicle but also persons who are on the vehicle in pursuance of a contract of employment with the owner of the goods carried in it. This decision also, in our view, is of no assistance to the respondents as it does not directly deal with the question whether a hirer comes within the expression 'a contract of employment'. With respect, we are inclined to agree with and follow the decision of the Full Bench of the Punjab High Court and hold that the deceased being a hirer was not under 'a contract of employment' within the meaning of Proviso (ii) to Section 95 (1) (b) of the Act and as such the appellant was not liable on the policy in respect of his accidental death.

17. Unfortunate as the result is, the findings of the learned Tribunal must be held to be erroneous in law and must be set aside.

18. In the result, the appeal succeeds and is allowed. The order of the learned Tribunal is set aside. The claim of the respondents petitioners before the Tribunal is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs of this appeal.

M. N. ROY, J.:— I agree.
Appeal allowed.

Janendra Coomer Datt, for Appellant; Ajoy Kumar Basu, for Respondent.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— This appeal is at the instance of the plaintiff and it arises out of a suit for recovery of the price of goods.

2. On June 29, 1948, the appellant alleged to be a dissolved partnership firm, booked 150 bales of piece goods at Wadi Bander on the G.I.P. Railway for carriage by the said railway and also by the E. N. Railway and for delivery of the same to the appellant at Shalimar. It was alleged that on July 17, 1948, the B. N.
Railway delivered 140 bales of piece goods and failed and neglected to deliver the remaining 10 bales and/or lost the same and thereby caused loss and damage to the appellant. The appellant accordingly, claimed Rs. 10,183-4-6 on account of the value of 10 bales and Rupees 1,018-6-3 for loss of commission at the rate of 10 per cent of the value of the goods. The total amount claimed by the appellant is Rs. 11,202-4-9. It was alleged that the statutory notices under Section 77 of the Indian Railways Act and Section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure were duly served.

3. Initially, the appellant instituted the suit claiming the said amount in the Original Side of this Court being suit
No. 3934 of 1949. On September 16, 1957, Lacminarayan Poddar, one of the partners of the appellant-firm died. On January 4, 1957, the High Court dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction. On January 7, 1957, the present suit was filed in the third Court of the Subordinate Judge, Howrah. It was contended that the period during which the High Court suit was pending should be excluded in computing the period of limitation of the present suit.

4. The respondent Union of India representing the B. N. Railway contested the suit by filing a written statement. The claim of the appellant in respect of two bales only was admitted and the remaining claim was denied by the respondent.
The receipt of the notices under Section
77 of the Indian Railways Act and Section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the legality and validity thereof were denied. It was also denied that the appellant was entitled to claim the benefit of Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 as the plaintiff did not prosecute the High Court suit bona fide and with due diligence.

5. The learned Subordinate Judge came to the findings that the notice under Section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure was duly served and that the suit was not barred by limitation. Regarding the notice under Section 77 of the Indian Railways Act, he held that no copy of the alleged notice had been filed and that if the correspondence between M/s. Santa Singh & Co. and the claims of the respondent-Railway be construed as constituting a notice under Section 77, it was illegal and invalid. Further, he took the view that as the G.I.P. Railway which was the contracting railway was not made a party to the suit, the onus lay on the appellant to prove loss during carriage by the respondent-Railway, and the appellant failed to discharge the said onus. He held that the appellant-firm having been dissolved on the death of the said Lachminarayan Poddar was not entitled to sue. Upon the said findings, he dismissed the suit. Hence, this appeal.

6. We may first of all consider the maintainability of the suit. On behalf of the respondent, the maintainability of the suit has been challenged on two grounds, namely, (1) the appellant-firm is a dissolved firm and (2) the name of Durga Prosad Poddar who became a partner of the appellant-firm in 1956 before the institution of the present suit is not shown in the Register of Firms. The relevant provision is Section 69 of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932. Sub-sections (1) and (2) and clause (a) of sub-section (3) are as follows:—

"69. (1) No suit to enforce a right arising from a contract or conferred by this Act shall be instituted in any Court by or on behalf of any person suing as a partner in a firm against the firm or any person alleged to be or to have been a partner in the firm, unless the firm is registered and the person suing is or has been shown in the Register of Firms as a partner in the firm.

(2) No suit to enforce a right arising from a contract shall be instituted in any Court by or on behalf of a firm against any third party unless the firm is registered and the persons suing are or have been shown in the Register of Firms as partners in the firm.

(3) The provisions of sub-sections (1) and (2) shall apply also to a claim of set-off or other proceeding to enforce a right arising from a contract, but shall not affect—

(a) the enforcement of any right to sue for the dissolution of a firm or for accounts of a dissolved firm, or any right or power to realise the property of a dissolved firm, or."

7. It has been already noticed that the learned Subordinate Judge was of the view that as the appellant-firm was a dissolved firm, the suit was not maintainable. We are, however, unable to agree with him. Sub-sections (1) and (2) give a clear indication that a suit at the instance of a dissolved firm is maintainable. Moreover, under sub-section (3) a dissolved firm has the right or power to realise its property and, in that case, the provisions of sub-sections (1) and (2) will not apply. But in other cases including a case to enforce a right arising from a contract, the conditions under sub-sections (1) and (2) must be fulfilled. The learned Subordinate Judge was in error in holding that the suit was not maintainable at the instance of the appellant-firm alleged to be a dissolved firm.

8. The second ground which has been raised on behalf of the respondent was not taken in the Court below, but as it is a pure question of law and all the facts required to determine the question are on record, we propose to consider the same. Under Section 69 (2), two conditions must be fulfilled before a suit can be said to be maintainable. The said conditions are: (1) the firm must be a registered one and (2) the persons suing are or have been shown in the Register of Firms as partners in the firm. There is no dispute that the first condition is satisfied, for the appellant-firm is a registered firm. There is, however, a serious dispute between the parties as to whether the second condition is fulfilled. It is now necessary to state certain facts. The appellant has examined one Durga Prosad Poddar. Durga Prosad has stated in his evidence that he became a partner of the firm in 1956 after the death of his father Lachminarayan Poddar. In paragraph 12 of the plaint, it has been stated that one of the partners Sri Lachminarayan Poddar having died on September 16, 1956, the plaintiff-firm has been dissolved. The suit was instituted on January 7, 1957 and before the institution of the suit Durga Prosad Poddar was taken in as a partner. So it is not correct to say that on the date of the suit the firm stood dissolved. When a firm consists of more than two partners, it is dissolved on the death of one of the partners unless the partnership agreement provides for its continuance in spite of the death of a partner. In the instant case, no partnership agreement has been produced by the appellant. But as stated by Durga Prosad he became a partner of the firm in 1956 after the death of Lachminarayan. From this fact, it may be reasonably presumed that the firm did not dissolve, but continued to carry on its business as before. The statement in paragraph 12 of the plaint does not seem to be correct. The second condition under Section 69 (2) is that the persons suing are or have been shown in the Register of Firms as partners in the firm. The entries in the Register of Firms do not, however, include the name of Durga Prosad as one of the partners of the firm. It is argued on behalf of the appellant that as the cause-of-action for the suit arose before Durga Prosad was taken in as a partner it is quite immaterial whether or not his name appears in the Register of Firms, and the second condition is fulfilled as the names of the partners who were at the time of the accruing of the cause-of-action have been shown as partners in the Register of Firms. In support of this contention, reliance has been placed on behalf of the appellant on the provision of Order 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The provision of Order 30, is an enabling one which permits partners constituting a firm to sue or be sued in the name of the firm (Purushottam v. M/s. Manilal & Sons, AIR 1961 SC 325). Sub-rule (1) of Rule 1 of the Order 30 enables two or more persons to sue or to be sued in the name of the firm of which such persons were partners at the time the cause of action arose. A firm's name is merely a compendious mode of describing the partners constituted in the firm. When a suit is instituted in the name of the firm, it is really a suit by all the partners of the firm. In such a case, "the persons suing" within the meaning of Section 69 (2) of the Partnership Act, are all the partners on the date of the suit. The partners during whose time the cause-of-action arose may also sue in the firm name, but the names of those partners must appear on the face of the plaint so that they can be said to be the "persons suing". If the firm is only shown as the plaintiff, in that case, all the partners of the firm on the date of the suit must be held to be the persons suing and not only those partners during whose time the cause-of-action arose. Under sub-rule (1) of Rule 2 of Order 30, where a suit is instituted in the name of the firm, plaintiffs or their pleader shall, on demand in writing by or on behalf of any defendant forthwith declare in writing the names and addresses of all the persons constituting the firm. In the instant case, the plaintiff is the firm, that is, all the partners of the firm as on the date of the suit. In other words, all the partners of the firm on that date were the persons suing within the meaning of Section 69 (2) and, as required by the second condition of that section, their names must be shown in the Register of Firms as partners in the firm. Admittedly, Durga Prosad Poddar was a partner of the firm on the date of the suit, but his name is not or has not been shown in the Register of Firms and, accordingly, the second condition is not fulfilled.

9. On behalf of the appellant, the following observation of the learned single Judge of the Mysore High Court in M. A. Hussain v. M/s. Panchmal, AIR 1970 Mys 299, has been relied on:

"..... persons suing may establish either that they are partners on the date of the suit or that they are persons whose names are shown in the register of firms as partners in the firm. As already observed, the second alternative, namely, the fact that the names of the persons suing have been shown in the register of firms as partners of the firm can be established either by producing relevant Register of firms or a certified copy of the same and not by adducing oral evidence. But there is no legal bar to prove the first alternative, namely, that the persons suing are partners of the firm by adducing evidence other than the register of firms or its certified copy."

It follows from the said observation that the second condition will be fulfilled if it is proved that he is a partner in the firm notwithstanding that his name does not appear in the Register of Firms. With respect, we are unable to agree with this view as expressed by the learned Judge. Both the conditions under Section 69 (2) are mandatory. In our opinion, the second condition will be fulfilled only when the names of the persons suing are or have been shown in the Register of Firms as partners in the firm. In the instant case, as the second condition of Section 69 (2) has not been fulfilled, it must be held that the suit is barred by that section.

10. The next question that requires consideration relates to the notice under Section 77 of the Indian Railways Act. The appellant has placed reliance on a letter dated August 18, 1948, [Ext. 3 (c)], and it is contended that the said letter constitutes a notice under Section 77. Ext. 3 (c) was written by Santa Singh & Co. to the Claims Officer, B. N. Railway, claiming refund in respect of the short certificate for 10 bales granted by that railway. The receipt of this notice is not denied, and in the subsequent letters, the Claims Officer has acknowledged the receipt of Ext. 3 (c). On behalf of the respondent, however, it has been strenuously urged that Ext. 3 (c) cannot be relied on by the appellant as a notice given on their behalf. Section 77 provides that a person shall not be entitled to refund of an overcharge in respect of animals or goods carried by railway or to compensation for the loss, destruction or deterioration of animals or goods delivered to be so carried, unless his claim to the refund or compensation has been preferred in writing by him or on his behalf to the Railway Administration within six months from the date of the delivery of the animals or goods for carriage by railway. It is clear from Section 77 that the notice must be in writing by the owner of the goods or on his behalf. Ext. 3 (c) does not indicate on whose behalf it was sought to be given. It is, however, the case of the appellant that Santa Singh & Co. was its clearing agent and, as such, it should be inferred that Ext. 3 (c) was written on behalf of the appellant. In order to prove the same, the appellant examined P.W. 2 Audh Pathak who stated that Santa Singh & Co. was a clearing agent. He did not, however, say that the said company was a clearing agent of the appellant. Moreover, the firm of Santa Singh & Co. under which P.W. 2 served had been dissolved, and it was admitted by him that there was no paper to show that the company was a clearing agent. He could not also give any other particular. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that the appellant has failed to discharge the onus that Santa Singh & Co. was its clearing agent. According to the respondent, Santa Singh & Co. made a claim and its claim was satisfied. It appears from Ext. 3 (c) that a sum of Rs. 1,063-15-6 was given to Santa Singh & Co. in full and final settlement of its claim in connection with the consignment in question. In these circumstances, it must be held that Ext. 3 (c) cannot be held to be a notice given by Santa Singh & Co. on behalf of the appellant. Even assuming that Santa Singh & Co. was the clearing agent of the appellant, the claim preferred by him having been settled finally, the said notice spent its force and the appellant cannot rely on the same. As there is no other notice given by the appellant under Section 77, the suit must fail on that ground. The learned Subordinate Judge was, therefore, right in holding that the plaintiff failed to prove service of any notice under Section 77 by or on its behalf. In these circumstances, it is not necessary to consider whether the appellant has been able to prove loss of goods on the defendant railway.

11. In the result, the judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge are affirmed and this appeal is dismissed, but in view of the facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no order for costs.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against Order No. 195 dated February 18, 1972 passed by Sri R. L. Mukherjee, Subordinate Judge, 9th Court at Alipore in Misc. Case No. 96 of 1967 arising out of Title Suit No. 100 of 1967.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

3. The petitioner instituted Title Suit No. 100 of 1967 for declaration of title, recovery of khas possession and injunction. The petitioners subsequently filed an application under O. 39, Rules 1 and 2 of the Code and the opposite parties were restrained by an order of ad interim injunction from raising any construction on the suit land. The said order was served upon them on 13th November 1967. In spite of service of ad interim injunction the opposite parties started to raise construction. Thereafter the petitioners filed an application under Order 39, Rule 2 (3) of the Code for attachment of the properties. The said application was registered as Misc. Case No. 96 of 1967 and an order of attachment was passed on 13th of July 1968. Thereafter the learned Subordinate Judge on 14th of February 1970 passed an order for sale of the attached properties under Order 39, Rule 2 (3) of the Code and it was ordered that out of the sale proceeds 3/4th thereof should be awarded to the petitioners as compensation and the balance should be paid to the opposite parties. On 18-11-1971 the opposite parties filed an application under Section 151 of the Code for setting aside the order for sale. The said application was heard in presence of both the parties and by an order No. 195 dated 18-2-1972 the learned Judge vacated the order dated 14-2-1970 and set aside the order for sale of the properties. It is stated that though the injunction order was served on 13-11-1967 the opposite parties continued construction even upto 22-4-68 which will appear from the second inspection report. As such the violation of injunction order continued for several months. Being aggrieved by the order dated 18-2-72, the petitioners have come up before this Court.

4. Mr. Chandidas Ray Chowdhury, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners, contends that Order 39, Rule 2 (3) of the Code was an appealable order and as such the learned Subordinate Judge ought not to have entertained an application under Section 151 of the Code. It is submitted that the learned Judge acted illegally and with material irregularity in exercise of his jurisdiction by entertaining the application under Sec. 151 of the Code and setting aside the order for sale which was passed under Order 39, Rule 2 (3) of the Code and which is an appealable order under Order 43, Rule 1 (r) of the Code.

5. In support of his contention Mr. Ray Chowdhury refers to a decision reported in AIR 1952 Cal 577 (Krishna Mohan v. Nripendranath). In this case upon an application by the judgment-debtor for relief under Section 36 of the Bengal Money Lenders Act to reopen the mortgage decree it was ordered that the preliminary and the final decree be reopened. The decree-holders filed an appeal against the said order but it was allowed to be dismissed. In the meantime the decree-holders made an application for amendment of the reopened decree and prayed for a direction in terms of Section 36 (2) (e) directing restoration of possession of the decree-holder auction-purchasers in case of default in payment of the instalments and the municipal rates and taxes as provided for in the reopened decree. The Subordinate Judge made an order directing that the decree be amended. The amendment was purported to have been made under either Section 152 or Section 151 of the Code. It was held that it could not be said that the Court while passing an order directing the decree to be reopened was not conscious of what would follow in case of a default on the part of the judgment-debtor in complying with the directions contained in that order. It was purely a case of error on the part of the Court. Such an error could be remedied by proper proceedings either by way of a review if that was allowable under the law or by an appeal against the reopened decree. The decree-holder did prefer an appeal but did not prosecute it and allowed the same to be dismissed. In the circumstances it was difficult to say that the error in the order of the Court reopening the decree was an accidental slip or omission which justified the Court in exercising its power under Section 152." It was further held that "The Court could not also exercise the inherent powers under Section 151, reason being that these powers could not be invoked where there was another remedy available to the party". Their Lordships in coming to the above conclusion relied on the Full Bench decision reported in AIR 1917 Cal 44 (FB) (Abdul Kasim Abu Ahmad v. Allahabad Bank Ltd.).

6. Mr. Sushil Kumar Biswas, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite parties, submits that it is true that an order passed under Order 39, Rule 2 (3) of the Code is an appealable order, but in the circumstances of the case the Court must be said to have jurisdiction to entertain an application under Section 151 and to pass necessary order. In support of his contention Mr. Biswas first refers to a decision reported in AIR 1953 SC 23 (Keshardeo Chamria v. Radha Kissen Chamria). In this case on the adjourned date of hearing of an execution, the decree-holder again applied for time for giving instructions to his pleader for taking necessary steps in execution but the application for time was refused by the Court and the execution case was dismissed. The decree-holder then applied under Section 151 of the Code for restoration of the case and the Court thereupon restored the execution case under its inherent powers in order to rectify the said mistake it had committed in dismissing the execution case by the same order without giving opportunity to the decree-holder to take the necessary steps. It was held that "in the circumstances of the case the order dismissing the execution on part satisfaction was bad and the executing court was justified in correcting the same under its inherent powers".

7. The facts of this case are completely different from the facts of the present case and the principle laid down in this case has no application to the present case.

8. Mr. Biswas next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1962 SC 527 (Manohar Lal Chopra v. Hiralal). In this case it was held by the majority view that "It is well settled that the provisions of the Code are not exhaustive, for the simple reason that the Legislature is incapable of contemplating all the possible circumstances which may arise in future litigation and consequently for providing the procedure for them. The effect of the expression 'if it is so prescribed' in Section 94 is only this that when the rules in Order 39, Civil Procedure Code prescribe the circumstances in which the temporary injunction can be issued, ordinarily the Court is not to use its inherent powers to make the necessary orders in the interests of justice, but is merely to see whether the circumstances of the case bring it within the prescribed rule. If the provisions of Section 94 were not there in the Code, the Court could still issue temporary injunctions, but it could do that in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. It is in the incidence of the exercise of the power of the Court to issue temporary injunction that the provisions of Section 94 of the Code have their effect and not in taking away the right of the Court to exercise its inherent power". The principle laid down in the above case also does not apply to the facts of the present case. In the present case the question is if there is an express provision of appeal against an order whether an application under Section 151 is maintainable? To support his contention that in some circumstances such an application is maintainable Mr. Biswas refers to the Full Bench decision of this Court reported in 78 Cal WN 1045 = (AIR 1975 Cal 80) (FB) (Bimala Devi v. A. C. Mallick). In this case "An application under Order 21, Rule 90 was dismissed for default. Then the petitioner filed an application under Section 151 of the Code. It was held by the Full Bench that "Though an appeal lies under Order 43, Rule 1 (j) of the Civil Procedure Code from an order dismissing an application under Order 21, Rule 90 such an appeal will however be useless and ineffective inasmuch the appellate court would have no materials on the record when no evidence has been adduced to come to a decision whether the appellant was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing in court when his application under Order 21, Rule 90, was dismissed". It was further held that "In such a case although an appeal has been provided under the Civil Procedure Code, the Court will have jurisdiction to entertain an application under Section 151 of the Code for setting aside the order of dismissal for default". But the position in the present case is not such as was in the case before the Full Bench. In this case an order was passed for sale of the properties under Order 39, Rule 2 (3) of the Code. The Court was satisfied that there was violation of the order of injunction. Aggrieved parties could have very well preferred an appeal against the said order. In such circumstances it cannot be said that without preferring an appeal the aggrieved parties can file an application before the same Court under Section 151 of the Code for setting aside its earlier order.

9. For all the reasons stated above we are of the opinion that the learned court below ought not to have entertained the application under Section 151 of the Code when there is a clear provision in the Code for preferring an appeal against the order passed under Order 39, Rule 2 (3) specially in view of the facts and circumstances of the case.

10. In the result this application succeeds and the Rule is made absolute. The Order No. 195 dated February 18, 1972 passed by the learned Subordinate Judge in Misc. Case No. 96 of 1967 be set aside. There will be however no order as to costs.

(A) Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), S. 21 — Appeal — Forum — Pecuniary jurisdiction of District Judge raised from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 15,000 by Amendment Act — Suit filed before Amendment Act — Appeal arising out of such suit — Forum of appeal — Determination of — Right of appeal — Vested right — (i) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 96; (ii) Interpretation of Statutes — Retrospective effect).

A right of appeal is vested in the parties as soon as a suit is instituted, and the forum of appeal would be determined with regard to law as existing on the date of the commencement of the suit. The Legislature can take away such vested right by way of amendment and if such vested right is taken away then the forum will be changed and the forum will be determined according to the provisions of the Amendment Act. The Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts (Amendment) Act which raised the pecuniary jurisdiction of the District Judge from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 15,000 does not contain any provision which has in any way taken away the vested right of appeal. That being so, the forum of appeal arising out of a suit filed before the Amendment Act and valued at Rs. 12,000 will not be the District Judge but the High Court. AIR

Ashutosh Ganguly, for Petitioner.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This Rule was issued on an application under Section 115. of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against Order No. 18 dated 25th May, 1974 passed by Sri A. N. Mitra, Additional District Judge, 4th Court, Alipore, in Title Appeal No. 530 of 1973. By the above order the learned Additional District Judge held that the appeal was maintainable in his court and directed the appellant to pay the deficit court-fees. Being aggrieved, the appellant has come up before us.

The opposite parties 2 to 4 brought a suit. The plaint case is that the suit property comprising 13 decimals of land with pucca building thereon belonged to Ambika Charan Pramanik, now deceased, the husband of the defendant No. 1 and Gurupada Pramanik in equal shares. Ambika died leaving behind the defendant No. 1 as his widow who inherited 8 annas share and continued to possess the same in ejmali with Gurupada Pramanik who owned the remaining eight annas share. The defendant No. 1 thereafter by a kobala sold her above share in respect of the suit land and other properties to the plaintiffs Nos. 2 to 4 who thereafter on amicable partition with Gurupada began to possess the property separately. The defendant No. 1 filed Title Suit No. 48 of 1950 for setting aside the above kobala and got a decree. The decision was affirmed upto this Hon'ble

Court. On the basis thereof the present defendant No. 1 obtained an order of joint possession with Gurupada Pramanik. During the pendency of the aforesaid suit the plaintiff No. 2, since deceased, with the permission of the said Gurupada raised a residential pucca building on the suit land and the plaintiffs had been residing in such building and possessing land thereunder. The present defendant No. 1 by way of execution got possession of the property except the present suit land measuring 13 decimals. The plaintiffs being in possession of the above building, the defendant No. 1 did not get any possession in respect of such building. The plaintiffs Nos. 2, 3 and 4 filed objection in Title Execution Case No. 37 of 1958 for obtaining possession in respect of the suit land, as a result of which the defendant No. 1 did not get possession. Against such decision the defendant No. 1 filed F. M. A. 55 of 1960 in which it was decided that the defendant No. 1 would be entitled to get back possession of the above 13 decimals of land on removal of the structures. On 22nd of July, 1959 Gurupada transferred his 8 annas interest in favour of the plaintiff No. 1 Kalidasi, who was not a party to the above suit brought by the defendant No. 1. The defendant No. 1 Taramoni filed Title Suit No. 33 of 1960 for partition and in such suit the present plaintiff No. 1 was declared to have 8 annas share on the strength of the deed of gift. The above order of delivery of possession on the removal of structures is highly prejudicial to the plaintiffs, and as such the plaintiff has filed the present suit for confirmation of possession in respect of the suit property upon declaration of title and for permanent injunction. For the purpose of jurisdiction and court-fees the plaintiffs valued the suit under Section 7 (iv) (c) of the Court-Fees Act at Rs. 12,000. The learned court below decreed the suit on declaring the eight annas share of the plaintiff No. 1 in the suit land and confirming her joint possession therein and restraining the defendants from disturbing the plaintiffs' possession of the disputed property in any way till the final partition of the disputed property between the plaintiff No. 1 and the defendant No. 1 by metes and bounds either amicably or by the decree of a competent court. Against such judgment and decree an appeal was filed by the defendant No. 1. The appeal was filed on 16th of June 1973 and the appeal was valued for the purpose of court-fees at Rs. 160 on the basis of the valuation made by the Pleader Commissioner. An objection was taken by the respondents Nos. 1 to 4 that since the plaintiffs have valued the suit under Section 7 (iv) (c) of the Court-Fees Act at Rs. 12,000 and as the appellant wants to have the entire decree set aside, the instant appeal has to be valued at Rs. 12,000 for the purpose of court-fees.

3. Though the appeal was filed before the District Judge, it was urged on behalf of the appellant that the appeal was wrongly filed before the District Judge and the appeal ought to have been filed before the High Court as the suit out of which the present appeal arises was instituted long before the Amendment of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act. By such amendment the pecuniary jurisdiction of the District Judge to entertain an appeal was raised from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 15,000. It was urged on behalf of the appellant that this amendment will not determine the forum in respect of the appeals arising out of suit instituted before the commencement of the amendment. It was contended that the amendment had no retrospective effect and as such the vested right of preferring an appeal in a particular forum could not be taken away. The same argument has been advanced before us most ably by Mr. Ganguly, learned Advocate for the petitioner. In support of his contention he cites before us several decisions including 1905 AC 369 (Colonial Sugar Refining Co. Ltd. v. Irving). Mr. Ganguly next refers to a Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court reported in AIR 1928 All 437 (FB) (Ram Singha v. Shankar Dayal). In this case their Lordships relying on the Privy Council decision referred to above laid down:

"An appeal is a mere continuance of the original proceeding initiated by the filing of the plaint, and the right to continue that proceeding cannot be affected by a new Act, unless it expressly says so."

In this case a suit was filed for arrears of rent for less than Rs. 200 in the Court of the Assistant Collector when the old Agra Tenancy Act was in force. Before it could be decided, the new Act came into force on the 7th of September 1926. The suit was decreed on 23rd of December 1926. It was held "That the right to appeal to the Court of the District Judge was governed by the law prevailing at the date of the institution of the suit and not by the law that prevailed at the date of its decision, or at the date of the filing of the appeal."

4. The next case referred to by Mr. Ganguly has been reported in AIR 1957 SC 540 (Garikapati Veeraya v. N. Subbiah Choudhury). This is a decision of 5 Judges and 4 of the Judges held

"The legal pursuit of a remedy suit, appeal and second appeal are really but steps in a series of proceedings all connected by an intrinsic unity and are to be regarded as one legal proceeding. The right of appeal is not a mere matter of procedure but is a substantive right. The institution of the suit carries with it the implication that all rights of appeal then in force are preserved to the parties thereto till the rest of the career of the suit. The right of appeal is a vested right and such a right to enter the superior court accrues to the litigant and exists as on and from the date the lis commences and although it may actually be exercised when the adverse judgment is pronounced such right is to be governed by the law prevailing at the date of the institution of the suit or proceeding and not by the law that prevails at the date of its decision or at the date of the filing of the appeal. This vested right of appeal can be taken away only by a subsequent enactment, if it so provides expressly or by necessary intendment and not otherwise."

We have gone through the provisions of Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts (Amendment) Act and we do not find that there is any provision by which the vested right of appeal has been taken away either expressly or by necessary intendment.

5. The last case referred to by Mr. Ganguly is another Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court reported in AIR 1970 All 201 (FB) (Behari Lal v. Keshri Nandan). In this case their Lordships found as follows:

"On examining the language of Cl. (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 21 of Civil Courts Act and sub-section (1-A) of Section 21, Civil Courts Act (as inserted by the U. P. Civil Laws Amendment Act) it becomes clear that the Legislature was anxious to give retrospective effect to the amended Section 21 of the Civil Courts Act. The amendment is effective even as regards a suit instituted before the commencement of the U. P. Civil Laws Amendment Act."

Their Lordships further held

"It is true that litigants have got vested right of appeal the moment a suit is instituted. But it is open to the appropriate Legislature to take away such vested right."

Thus it is clear that the legal position is that a right of appeal is vested in the parties as soon as a suit is instituted and the forum of appeal would be determined with regard to law as existing on the date of the commencement of the suit. The Legislature can take away such vested right by way of amendment and if such vested right is taken away then the forum will be changed and the forum will be determined according to the provisions of the Amendment Act. As has already been stated there is no provision in the Amendment Act which has in any way taken away the vested right of appeal, and that being so, we fully agree with Mr. Ganguly that in the present case the forum would be determined with reference to the law as it existed on the date of the commencement of the suit and that being so, the appeal was wrongly presented before the learned District Judge and the same ought to have been presented before this Court. This being the legal position, we further find that as the learned Additional District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal he was wrong in directing the appellant to pay deficit court-fees. The proper order which the learned Additional District Judge could have passed was to return the Memorandum of Appeal to the learned Advocate for the appellant for presentation of the same to the proper court.

6. With regard to the payment of court-fees Mr. Ganguly submits that the learned court below was wrong to hold that the appellant was required to pay ad valorem court-fees at Rs. 12,000. As the suit was valued at Rs. 12,000 the appeal was also valued at Rs. 12,000 for the purpose of jurisdiction. There is no doubt that the valuation of an appeal for the purpose of jurisdiction and the valuation of the same for the purpose of payment of court-fees may be different. The payment of court-fees depends on the claim as made by a party. It is contended by Mr. Ganguly that the appellant having disclaimed any interest in the structure, the court below misdirected itself in taking the value of the structure for the determination of court-fees. In this connection it is further submitted that the relief which the appellant claimed was only in respect of undivided one-half share of 13 decimals of land which was valued by the Pleader Commissioner at Rs. 160 and as such the appellant paid court-fees on the said amount. In support of his contention that the court-fee was properly paid Mr. Ganguly refers to a decision reported in AIR 1953 SC 28 (Nemi Chand v. The Edward Mills Co. Ltd.). It has been held in this case

"A memorandum of appeal as provided in Article 1 of Schedule 1, Court-Fees Act, has to be stamped according to the value of the subject-matter in dispute in appeal: in order words, the relief claimed in the memorandum of appeal determines the value of the appeal for the purpose of court-fees."

Considering the facts and circumstances of the case and the relief claimed in the appeal we agree with Mr. Ganguly that the court-fee paid on the appeal is sufficient.

7. In the result, the application succeeds and the rule is made absolute. The Order No. 18 passed by the learned Additional District Judge on 25th May 1974 is set aside. The learned Additional District Judge is directed to return the Memorandum of Appeal to the learned Advocate for presentation of the same to the proper court. Let the records go down immediately.

The suit of the plaintiffs having been dismissed for default due to absence of the plaintiffs, application was made under O. 9, R. 9 read with O. 17, R. 2 and Section 151 for setting aside the dismissal. The trial court disbelieved the reasons for plaintiffs' absence but allowed the application to meet the ends of justice. On appeal by defendant it was contended that trial court had no jurisdiction to pass an order under Section 151 the reasons having been disbelieved by it. Held that the orders could not be upheld as in an application under O. 9, R. 9 the Court cannot exercise inherent jurisdiction under S. 151. R. K. Bhattacharya and M. M. Ghosh, for Petitioners; Saktinath Mukherjee and Debaprasad Mukherjee, for Opposite Parties.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against Order No. 374 dated 8th December 1973 and Order No. 375 dated 22nd December 1973 passed by Shri A. N. Mitra, Subordinate Judge, 6th Court at Alipore in Misc. Case No. 22 of 1973.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

The opposite parties Nos. 1 to 3 instituted a Title Suit No. 7 of 1964 for partition of accounts against the petitioners and Manki Shaw, since deceased, the mother of the petitioner No. 1 and the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 4. On 12th of June 1973 when the suit was fixed for further hearing, no one appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs and as such the suit was dismissed for default. Thereafter the plaintiffs filed an application under Order 9, Rule 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with Order 17, Rule 2 and Section

151 of the Code for setting aside the order of dismissal. On the said application Miscellaneous Case No. 22 of 1973 was started. The petitioners contested the application by filing objection. Evidence was adduced by both the parties. The learned Subordinate Judge after considering the evidence on record and the facts and circumstances of the case found "that the plaintiffs have miserably failed to prove that they had any sufficient cause for preventing them from attending the court when the suit was called on for hearing". The learned Judge, however, allowed the Miscellaneous Case and restored the suit to file on condition that the petitioners would pay some costs to the opposite parties. The learned Subordinate Judge observed

"But as the hearing of the suit on contest already proceeded to a great length and since, in my opinion, the opposite parties should not feel shy of the disposal of the suit on contest, I, to meet the ends of justice, give an opportunity to the petitioners on terms as hereunder, on the points being thus disposed of." Being aggrieved by the aforesaid order, the defendants have come up before this Court.

3. Mr. Radhakanta Bhattacharya, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners, submits that when the plaintiffs filed an application under Order 9, Rule 9 and when the case as made out by the plaintiffs was completely disbelieved by the learned Judge, the learned Judge acted without jurisdiction to pass any order under Section 151 of the Code. Mr. Bhattacharya adds that though the learned Judge has not said that he allowed the application under Section 151 of the Code, it must be presumed that he did so because he disbelieved the plaintiffs' case as made out in the application under Order 9, Rule 9. Mr. Bhattacharya submits that there being a specific provision in the Code for seeking relief by a party whose suit has been dismissed for default, the learned Court was in error in exercising its jurisdiction under Section 151 of the Code. In support of his contention Mr. Bhattacharjee first refers to a decision reported in 34 Cal WN 222 = (AIR 1930 Cal 387) (Haridas Mukherjee v. Bijay Krishna Das). In this case an application was filed under Order 9, Rule 13 of the Code for setting aside an ex parte decree. The learned Munsif held that no sufficient cause was shown for the non-appearance of the defendant on the date of hearing, but even then he restored the suit on certain terms. It was held by the Division Bench of this Court "That in making the order in the circumstances of the case the Munsif acted without jurisdiction and it would not have been open to him to apply the provisions of Section 151 of the Code where there is a specific provision in the Code applicable to the case."

4. Mr. Bhattacharya next refers to another Bench decision reported in 34 Cal WN 419 = (AIR 1930 Cal 488) (K. B. Dutt v. Shamsuddin Shah). In this case an ex parte decree was set aside by the Court on an application under Rule 13, Order 9 and the Court also invoked the inherent jurisdiction under Section 151 of the Code. It was held that "It was an instance of a decree being set aside irregularly and the lower court purported to exercise powers which it did not possess and the order was liable to be set aside."

It has been laid down in this case that "Rule 13, Order 9 deals not with a person who has no excuse for not being present or who as a reason for not having all his witnesses asks for an adjournment for the purpose of calling further evidence and such adjournment being refused, takes no further part in the proceedings."

5. Mr. Bhattacharya next relies on a decision reported in 63 Cal WN 300 = (AIR 1959 Cal 389) (Tulsiram Bhagwandas v. Sitaram Srigopal). It has been held in this case by Chakraborty, C. J. and Lahiri, J. at p. 309 (of Cal WN) = (at p. 394 of AIR) that "It was contended on behalf of the respondent in the second place that even assuming that Order 17, Rule 2 read with Order 9, Rule 8 did not apply and consequently Order 9, R. 9 also would not, the learned Judge had nevertheless power to make the order he did under Section 151 of the Code. I do not consider that contention to be tenable. The essence of the Code, as is well known, is to be exhaustive so far as it goes and as respects matters for which the Code expressly provides, there is no room for the exercise of any additional jurisdiction under Section 151."

Their Lordships relied on the well known case of Hookam Chand Singh v. Kamalanand Singh, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 327; 34 Cal WN 222 = (AIR 1930 Cal 387); 34 Cal WN 419 = (AIR 1930 Cal 488) and on other cases.

6. The last case referred to by Mr. Bhattacharya has been reported in (1962) 66 Cal WN 810 (Gour Mohan Sen v. Ganesh Chandra Sen). This is also a Bench decision and in this case their Lordships relied on 34 Cal WN 222 = (AIR 1930 Cal 387); 34 Cal WN 419 = (AIR 1930 Cal 488) and 63 Cal WN 300 = (AIR 1959 Cal 389) and held

"this Court has in the past clearly expressed itself as to the scope and contents of Section 151. That section, it has been held, cannot be invoked to override the specific provisions of law. The question has not infrequently been raised in connection with application under Order 9, Rule 13 where it is found that no sufficient cause exists for non-appearance on a date of hearing involving the consequence that the suit is decreed ex parte; such ex parte order cannot be set aside by resorting to Section 151."

7. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite parties, in the first place submits that the Court allowed the application under Order 9, Rule 9 for ends of justice considering the fact that the suit progressed to a great extent and evidence was also adduced. Mr. Mukherjee also reminds us that the suit was one for partition and if the plaintiffs' application for restoration is dismissed, there will be no bar for the plaintiffs to institute a fresh suit any day. Thus, in order to prevent multiplicity of proceedings, the learned Judge was quite right in exercising his jurisdiction under Section 151 of the Code and that being so, this Court would refuse to interfere with the said order. In support of his contention Mr. Mukherjee first refers to a decision reported in AIR 1919 Cal 979 (2) (F. P. Nalladaroo & Co. v. Hari Kissen Rathi). In this case on an appeal against an order of the primary Court refusing to restore a suit dismissed for default the appellate court restored the suit, although it found that the plaintiff could not show sufficient cause for his non-appearance within meaning of Order 9, Rule 9. It was held that the order of the appellate court was not without jurisdiction. We find that this judgment is a very short one consisting of 12 lines. Their Lordships simply relied on two decisions reported in (1912) 34 All 426 (Lalta Prasad v. Ram Karan) and (1913) ILR 35 All 331 (PC) (Debi Baksh Singh v. Habib Shah) and on a consideration of those decisions expressed the opinion as stated above. Mr. Mukherjee places before us the two Allahabad decisions. The facts of the case reported in (1913) ILR 35 All 331 (PC) are completely different. Here, the plaintiff's suit was dismissed for non-appearance. Dismissal was at the time when it was found that the plaintiff was dead. In such circumstances it was held that S. 151 was applicable. The facts of the case reported in (1912) ILR 34 All 426 are also different and as such the principle laid down there does not apply in the present case.

8. Mr. Mukherjee last refers to a decision reported in 36 Cal WN 869 = (AIR 1933 Cal 20) (Sheikh Hari v. Sm. Diljan Bibi). In this case a decree passed by an Additional District Judge provided that ad valorem court-fees and the costs incurred by the opposite party should be paid within a certain time and further provided that in default of the payment of the costs only within the time the suit should stand dismissed and on the application of the party concerned, the successor-in-office of the Judge who passed the order extended the time. It was held that so far as the payment of court-fee was concerned, the succeeding Additional District Judge had jurisdiction to extend the time. But so far as the payment of the costs was concerned he had no jurisdiction. But, having regard to the facts of the case, the High Court in its discretion declined to interfere. This case, also, in our opinion, does not help the plaintiffs. There being clear decisions of our High Court on the point whether in an application under Order 9, Rule 9 the Court can exercise its inherent jurisdiction under Section 151, we are of the opinion that the order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge cannot be upheld.

9. In the result, the application succeeds and the Rule is made absolute. There will be no order as to costs.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 49R. BHATTACHARYA AND*A. K. JANAH, JJ.

Civil Revn. No. 1876 of 1974, D/-3-8-1976.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 — Amendment of plaint — Addition of new ground for relief — Eviction of tenant sought for on ground of default — Application for amendment by adding ground of reasonable requirement of landlord — Notice to quit not mentioning latter ground — Amendment whether permissible — (1974) 78 Cal WN 572, Overruled.

A suit was filed by a landlord against his tenant for ejection on the ground of default. The notice to quit previously served on the tenant did not mention the ground of reasonable requirement of the landlord. The landlord applied for the amendment of the plaint by the introduction of his reasonable requirement as an additional ground of relief. The trial Court allowed the amendment of the plaint. The question before the High Court was whether the amendment was permissible.

Held that the suit is one for ejection of a tenant and the amendment, if allowed, will not change the nature and character of the suit, inasmuch as it will nevertheless remain a suit for eviction of a tenant. Secondly, the cause of action in the suit is not default, but it is the determination of the tenancy by a notice to quit. Default is only one of the grounds which entitles a Court to pass a decree for eviction against the tenant. (1974) 78 Cal WN 572, Overruled; (1976) 80 Cal WN 269, Rel. on; AIR 1950 Mad 32 and AIR 1974 Cal 83 and (1974) 78 Cal WN 849, Dist. (Para 4)

There can be no quarrel with the proposition that where the landlord mentions one ground in the ejection notice but subsequently makes out a case on another ground such omission on the part of the landlord to mention the subsequent ground in the notice to quit is a relevant factor to be taken into consideration in deciding whether such ground really exists or not. But the question here is quite different. We are concerned with the question whether the application for amendment should be allowed or not. Whether the Court will decide in favour of the plaintiff or not in so far as the new ground is concerned is a question which is to be considered at the hearing of the suit and not at this stage.

Mrs. Diptikana Bose and Mrs. Aradhana Nag Choudhary (Mitra), for Petitioner; Amitava Choudhury, for Opposite Parties.

JANAH, J:— This rule has been obtained by the tenant defendant in a suit for ejection instituted by the landlord opposite party on the ground of default in payment of rent. In the said suit the plaintiff opposite party filed an application for amendment of the plaint by introducing the ground of reasonable requirement of the suit premises for his own use and occupation. This application for amendment was allowed by the trial court. Against the said order the tenant defendant has obtained the present rule.

2. The facts which are relevant for the purpose of present rule are as follows: In the year 1967 the plaintiff opposite party instituted a suit for eviction against the defendant petitioner on the ground of default. That was Title Suit No. 309 of 1967. In that suit the trial court found that the defendant petitioner was a defaulter in payment of rent for some months. In spite of this finding the suit was dismissed on the ground that there had been substantial compliance with sub-section (1) of Section 17 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'). The trial court therefore found that the defendant petitioner was entitled to protection against eviction under sub-section (4) of Section 17 of that Act and accordingly dismissed the suit. The plaintiff opposite party thereafter served a fresh notice to quit alleging default on the part of the petitioner for a subsequent period, and thereafter he filed the instant suit, being Title Suit No. 17 of 1971 for eviction of the petitioner. The defendant petitioner entered appearance in the suit and filed an application under Section 17 (2A) of the Act. There is no dispute between the parties that the defendant petioner has been depositing rent in terms of the order passed under Section 17 (2A) of the Act.

3. The present rule came up for hearing before S. K. Datta J. before whom reliance was placed on behalf of the petitioner upon the decision in Arun Kumar Chatterjee v. Karuna Rakshit, (1974) 78 Cal WN 572 wherein N. C. Mukherjee J. took the view that an amendment of the plaint should not be allowed under such circumstances as in the present case. S. K. Datta J. considered a number of decisions which had been cited before him on behalf of the parties and his Lordship was unable to accept the view taken by N. C. Mukherjee J. His Lordship accordingly referred the matter to the Division Bench. The rule has accordingly come up before us for hearing.

4. Mrs. Bose, learned Advocate for the petitioner, has contended before us that the introduction of the ground of reasonable requirement for eviction of her client would change the nature and character of the suit. She has further contended that such amendment has been prayed for on a different cause of action which cannot be joined with the cause of action upon which the present suit has been filed. This submission of Mrs. Bose cannot be accepted. The suit is one for ejectment of a tenant and the amendment, if allowed, will not change the nature and character of the suit, inasmuch as, it will nevertheless remain a suit for eviction of a tenant. Secondly, the cause of action in the suit is not default, but it is the determination of the tenancy by a notice to quit. Default is only one of the grounds which entitles a Court to pass a decree for eviction against the tenant. Section 13 of the Act provides that unless one or more of the grounds specified in sub-section (1) of that section is satisfied no Court shall pass a decree for eviction against a tenant. Default in payment of rent or reasonable requirement on the part of the landlord are merely two of such grounds which lift the bar put under Section 13 of the Act.

5. The next contention of Mrs. Bose has been that the plaintiff opposite party did not mention the ground of reasonable requirement in the notice to quit which was served by them. In the said notice, it was contended, the only ground mentioned is the ground of default. That being so, it was argued by Mrs. Bose, the plaintiffs' application for amendment is not bona fide and it ought not to have been allowed by the trial court. Whether the plea of reasonable requirement sought to be set up by the opposite party is bona fide or not, that is to say, whether there exists any requirement on the part of the landlord or not, is a matter which is to be considered at the hearing of the suit itself. The omission to mention the ground of reasonable requirement in the notice to quit is a relevant factor to be taken into consideration at the final hearing of the suit. But at this stage it is not for us to go into that question, and upon the materials on record it cannot be said that the plaintiffs' application for amendment is not bona fide.

6. On behalf of the petitioner it was contended that the averment made in the application for amendment of the plaint by the plaintiffs is to the effect that the plaintiff No. 1 was in Military Medical Service and on retirement from the Military Medical Service he joined the West Bengal Health Service from which he ultimately retired in 1971. Mrs. Bose, therefore, contended that the plaintiff was fully aware that he would retire in 1971 and accordingly he ought to have mentioned the ground of reasonable requirement on his part in the notice to quit. The plaintiff not having done that, it was argued, the application for amendment was an afterthought, and was calculated to deprive the defendant of the benefit which had accrued to him under Section 17 (2) of the Act. In support of this contention reliance was placed upon the decision in Arun Kumar Chatterjee v. Karuna Rakshit, (1974) 78 Cal WN 572, where N. C. Mukherji J. took the view that an amendment of the plaint should not be allowed under such circumstances as it would jeopardise the defendant's right of protection against eviction which the defendant had acquired under Section 17 (4) of the Act. In that case the suit was originally brought on the ground of default in payment of rent. Subsequently, another ground was sought to be added by way of amendment of the plaint to the effect that the tenant-defendant had without the knowledge and consent of the landlord sublet a portion of the demised premises and had been creating nuisance and causing material damage to the property. In that case the tenant-defendant had complied with an order made under Section 17 (2) of the Act. His Lordship took the view that the effect of allowing the amendment would be to take away the benefit which had accrued to the defendant on account of his having complied with the order made under Section 17 (2) of the Act. A similar point came up for decision in the case of Dwarka Prosad Mahawar v. Gopal Das Mahawar, (1976) 80 Cal WN 269. In that case also the suit was originally instituted on the ground of default in payment of rent. Subsequently the plaint was sought to be amended by introducing another ground, namely, that the defendant had made certain unauthorised constructions in the premises. My learned brother R. Bhattacharya J. had occasion to consider several decisions of the Supreme Court and also a Full Bench decision of the Delhi High Court as well as the decision reported in (1974) 78 Cal WN 572 in connection with the points which arose for determination in that case. After a careful analysis of all the decisions cited before him his Lordship came to the conclusion that the prayer for amendment was rightly allowed by the trial court in that case. I respectfully agree with the view taken by his Lordship in the said case and the reasons given in the said judgment and I am unable to subscribe to the view taken by N. C. Mukherjee J. in the case of Arun Kumar Chatterjee (1974) 78 Cal WN 572 (supra).

7. It may be mentioned here that Mr. Choudhury appearing on behalf of the landlord opposite party has drawn our attention to annexure 'X' to his affidavit-in-opposition, which is a copy of the judgment delivered in the earlier ejectment suit between the parties, namely, Title Suit No. 309 of 1967. Mr. Choudhury has pointed out that in the earlier Ejectment Suit the tenant-defendant was found to be a defaulter, but he was given protection inasmuch as he complied with sub-section (1) of Section 17. Mr. Choudhury accordingly argued that the tenant-defendant having once obtained relief under sub-section (4) of Section 17 in an earlier suit, and he having committed default within a period of twelve months, is not entitled to protection against eviction on the ground of default under the proviso to sub-section (4) of the said section. This, however, is a matter which is to be considered by the trial court at the hearing of the suit. It is not, therefore, necessary for us to express any opinion in so far as this point raised by Mr. Choudhury is concerned.

8. One thing is, however, clear from the contention which has been raised by Mr. Choudhury on behalf of the landlord-opposite party, namely, that compliance with the provisions of the various sub-sections of Section 17 does not necessarily afford protection to the tenant against eviction on the ground of default. Even if the tenant is entitled to protection against eviction on the ground of default the amendment sought for in the instant case does not take away that right from the tenant. If the landlord fails to establish the ground of reasonable requirement and if the tenant is found to be entitled to protection against eviction on the ground of default the suit will naturally fail. If, on the other hand, the landlord succeeds in establishing the ground of reasonable requirement then a decree will be passed in his favour, even if the tenant is entitled to protection against eviction on the ground of default under Section 17 (4) of the Act.

9. On behalf of the petitioner Mrs. Bose relied upon the decision in Gopal Krishnamurthi v. Sreedhara Rao, AIR 1950 Mad. 32 and contended that when at the time of institution of the suit the plaintiff was aware of the fact that he reasonably requires the suit premises for his own use and occupation but he failed to take it as a ground for eviction in the suit the subsequent application for amendment should not be allowed. The said case is, however, completely different on facts. In that case the amendment sought for introduced completely new facts which were not pleaded in the plaint as it originally stood. The plaintiff had knowledge of those facts at the time when the plaint was filed. In our view, the decision in that case can have no application to the present case.

10. The next case cited on behalf of the petitioner is Ghaffar Haji Shakoor v. S. M. Saeed, AIR 1974 Cal 83. The observations relied on by Mrs. Bose occurring at paragraph 19 of the report have been made in connection with the final decision arrived at in the suit and not on the question of amendment of the plaint. In that case M. M. Dutt J. held that although the landlord is not required to state the grounds for eviction in the notice to quit, but if he chooses to mention one ground and subsequently tries to establish another ground at the hearing of the suit such conduct on the part of the landlord is a relevant factor to be taken into consideration in deciding whether the ground subsequently sought to be established really exists or not. The observations made in that decision does not, therefore, help the petitioner in the present case. Mrs. Bose also referred to the decision in Biswanath Gupta v. Narendra K. Tandon, (1974) 78 Cal WN 849 where a Division Bench of this Court took a view similar to the view taken by M. M. Dutt J. and held that where the landlord mentions one ground in the ejectment notice but subsequently makes out a case on another ground such omission on the part of the landlord to mention the subsequent ground in the notice to quit is a relevant factor to be taken into consideration in deciding whether such ground really exists or not. There can be no quarrel with the proposition of law laid down by their Lordships of the Division Bench. But the question here is quite different. We are concerned with the question whether the application for amendment should be allowed or not. Whether the Court will decide in favour of the plaintiff or not in so far as the new ground is concerned is a question which is to be considered at the hearing of the suit and not at this stage. The cases relied on by Mrs. Bose, therefore, are of no assistance to her.

11. I, therefore, agree with the view expressed by S. K. Datta J. and as there is no impediment in law in allowing the application for amendment of the plaint I hold that the said application was rightly allowed by the trial court. For the reasons mentioned above this rule is discharged. But in the circumstances I make no order as to costs.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— 12. I fully agree with my learned brother. The case of Dwarka Prosad Mahawar v. Gopaldas Mahawar, 80 Cal WN 269 referred to in the judgment of my learned brother was decided by me but I find no reason to change my view expressed in the said judgment.

stantial compliance of contract within stipulated time by plaintiff — Held did not entitle him to any relief — (Contract Act (1872), S. 55).

The title suit of the plaintiff was adjourned by a compromise petition to another date for passing a decree in terms of the solenama. On careful consideration of the terms thereof, it appeared that the time was made the essence of the contract of compromise. Not only was this condition mentioned in certain clause of the contract, but it was also mentioned in the subsequent clause and each clause was made the consideration of the other. The plaintiff admittedly failed to perform the acts mentioned therein, namely, the execution and registration of the Kibala and payment of the relevant amount before the stipulated date. Held that in view of the express provision of the agreement which was a material condition thereof there was no escape from the conclusion that the parties made time the essence of the contract between them providing for consequence for failure to perform the obligations therein imposed on either party. It was not possible to hold that equitable consideration should prevail for substantial compliance of the contract by the plaintiff, to modify the terms of the contract by Court against the expressed provision of the agreement and without consent of parties. Gopal Chandra Mukherjee, for Petitioner; Tapas Roy and Alok Chakraborty, for Opposite Party; G. N. Roy, for the State.

ORDER:— This Rule was issued at the instance of the plaintiff in Title Suit No. 357 of 1967 in the Court of 1st Munsif, Tamluk against the order No. 47 dated Sep. 21, 1973, whereby the suit was dismissed after contest in terms of Solenama which was made a part of the decree. The relevant facts are as follows: The plaintiff filed the above Title Suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession of the suit property on eviction therefrom of the defendant the opposite party No. 1 and the State of West Bengal. It was stated that the opposite party No. 1 was allowed to live in the suit property as the licensee and as he failed to vacate on demand the suit was instituted for recovery of possession on declaration of title. The opposite party No. 1 filed a written statement stating that he was a tenant under the plaintiff's father since 1347 B. S. and his right was also perfected by adverse possession and his name was duly entered in the record of rights as a raiyat under the State. A written statement was also filed on behalf of the State of West Bengal stating that the opposite party No. 1 was a tenant under the State. The suit became ready for hearing on April 16, 1969 when both the parties namely the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1 submitted that they would file a petition of compromise. Thereafter on April 17, 1969 both parties filed a petition of compromise. The terms of Solenama in English rendering are as follows:—

"1. We the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 on the advice of our well-wishers and considering all circumstances have decided to settle the suit amicably on compromise on the following terms.

2. We the plaintiff and the opposite party No. 1 hereby mutually admit and agree that

(i) each term of solenama is consideration of the other,

(ii) in this compromise the time is the essence of the contract,

(iii) the plaintiff within April 26, 1969 will execute as vendor on behalf of his youngest minor son Kristo Prasad Bera, a kobala for about 6 cottas of land of Rs. 1,500 and register the same and endorse the registration receipt of the kobala in the name of the defendant No. 1 and deposit it in the Court and on that account pay Rs. 1.100 to the defendant No. 1 and inform Court accordingly. If the plaintiff complies with all these he will be entitled to a decree in the suit without cost and the opposite party No. 1 will deliver amicably khas possession of the decretal property to the plaintiff,

(iv) if the plaintiff do not perform the acts mentioned above within the time aforesaid the suit will be dismissed,

(v) the suit will be dismissed against defendant No. 1,

(vi) the Solenama will be a part of the decree and if the defendant No. 1 is unable to vacate the plaintiff will be entitled to take possession with the aid of the Court and he will be liable to pay Rs. 200 as compensation,

(vii) accordingly we the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 pray that the suit be fixed for May 27, 1969 for disposal in ac-

According to the plaintiff petitioner's case the Kobala was executed on April 25, 1969 and he tendered the money to the lawyer of the said opposite party and also to the opposite party; on their refusal to accept and inform the court accordingly, it became necessary that the amount should be deposited in Court. He accordingly filed an application on May 13, 1969 for deposit of money in Court. On this application the Court permitted the plaintiff to deposit the amount at his risk and thereafter it appears the amount was deposited. The plaintiff filed an application on May 27, 1969 for disposal of the suit in terms of Solenama. The opposite party No. 1 thereupon submitted that the deed should be perused and the final order be passed after few days. The suit was adjourned to June 2, 1969 and on that day the defendant No. 1 filed a petition for dismissing the suit according to the terms of the Solenama. It was stated therein that the plaintiff did not act in terms of the Solenama, he failed to endorse the registration receipt and to pay Rs. 1,100 and inform to the Court of such acts within April 26, 1969 as agreed and accordingly the suit was to be dismissed. By order dated June 5, 1969 the learned Munsif held that both execution of the kobala and the payment was to be made within April 26, 1969 and as the payment had been made beyond the time, the suit was to be dismissed in terms of the Solenama. Accordingly, the suit was dismissed.

2. The plaintiff moved this Court in revision against this order being Civil Rule No. 3342 of 1969 and it was held by this Court that the learned Munsif did not give reasons in support of his conclusion. Accordingly by order dated November 26, 1971 the impugned order was set aside and the case was sent back to the trial Court for decision in accordance with law. Thereafter the matter came up for hearing and the learned Munsif by his order No. 47 dated September 21, 1973 after considering all aspects held that the suit was liable to be dismissed in terms of the Solenama. The suit was accordingly dismissed after contest in terms of the Solenama filed on April 17, 1969. This rule as already stated, is against this decision.

3. Mr. Gopal Chandra Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing for the petitioner, submitted that the trial court should have held on the interpretation of the Solenama that time was not essence of the contract; further even if it were so, in view of the substantial compliance of the provisions of the contract by the plaintiff, and on equitable consideration the court should have granted the relief to the plaintiff by decreeing the suit in terms of the Solenama instead of dismissing the same. He further submitted that in any event the contract in the Solenama was a voidable one and the opposite party No. 1 did not even avoid the contract by any overt act. He was accordingly not entitled to challenge the compromise contract. For all this reasons it was submitted that the judgment challenged in the rule should be set aside and suit should be decreed in favour of the plaintiff in terms of the Solenama. Mr. Tapas Roy learned Advocate appearing for the opposite party No. 1 contended that time was the essence of the contract and the plaintiff failed to perform his part of the contract as required and was not entitled to any relief.

4. We have set out above in detail an English rendering of the Bengali Solenama. On careful consideration of the terms thereof, it appears to me that the time was made the essence of the contract of compromise. Not only was this condition mentioned in the clause (2) of the contract it was also mentioned in the subsequent clause and each clause was made the consideration of the other. The plaintiff admittedly failed to perform the acts mentioned therein namely the execution and registration of the Kobala and payment of Rs. 1,100 within April 26, 1969. It is also difficult to accept the plaintiff's case that he tendered the money within time which was denied by the opposite party No. 1 and there is no explanation for the delayed deposit in Court on May 13, 1969. In view of the express provision of the agreement which was a material condition thereof there is no escape from the conclusion that the parties made the time essence of the contract between them providing for consequence for failure to perform the obligations therein imposed on either party.

5. It has been next contended that even in such a case, the Court has power and discretion to grant adequate relief to the party on equitable consideration when substantial part of the agreement has been complied with by him. Reliance was placed on the decision in Jamshed Khodaram v. Burjorji Dhunjibhai, 20 Cal

WN 744 = (AIR 1915 PC 83). It was held in that case that Section 55 of the Indian Contract Act does not lay down any principle which differs from those which obtain under the law of England as regards contracts to sell land. Under that law, equity which governs the rights of parties in cases of specific performance of contracts to sell real estate, looks not at the letter but at the substance of the agreement in order to ascertain whether the parties notwithstanding that they named a specific time within which the completion was to take place really and in substance intended more than that it should take place within a reasonable time. This judgment, it appears, is of no assistance to the plaintiff as we have already seen the time was made essence of the contract as its material term by agreement in a protracted litigation.

6. Mr. Mukherjee has referred also to the decision in Kandarpa Nag v. Banwari Lal Nag, 33 Cal LJ 244 = (AIR 1921 Cal 356) in which Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee speaking for the Division Bench observed that in case of specific performance of contract to sell real estate, equity which governs the rights of parties looks, not at the letter but at the substance of the agreement, in order to ascertain whether the parties, notwithstanding that they named a specific time within which the completion was to take place, really and in substance, intended more than it should take place within a reasonable time. The Court further observed that in cases, where the parties intended in the first conception of the agreement to make time the essence of the contract, the court would not be competent to extend the time, except by consent of all parties concerned. In Jadabendra v. Monorama Debya, 73 Cal WN 875 = (AIR 1970 Cal 199) the Court was of the opinion that in the facts of the case, the principle of Kandarpa Nag case apply, and the relief was available to the aggrieved party on that basis. In this case the suit was decreed ex parte and thereafter the application under O. 9, Rule 13 of the Code was filed giving rise to the Misc. Case. A petition of compromise was filed therein whereby the defendant was to pay certain amount within certain time to have the Misc. Case allowed and the suit restored to file after setting aside the ex parte decree. There was also a default clause providing that if the payment was not made within the specific time the Misc. Case would stand dismissed and the ex parte decree would stand affirmed.

The petitioner did not make the deposit in time on account of his illness and as a result the Misc. Case stood dismissed and thereafter an application was made under Sections 148 and 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Court was of opinion, following Kandarpa Nag's case, that it had ample power in an appropriate case to grant relief against forfeiture apart from consent of parties.

7. In the facts of this case before us it appears that time was made the essence of the contract and this was a material and essential condition of the contract. As such the time could not be extended except by the consent of all the parties concerned as was laid down in Kandarpa Nag's case (AIR 1921 Cal 356). It was a case where by the compromise petition the case was adjourned to another date for passing a decree in terms of the Solenama and the time was mentioned specifically as essence of contract which would only enable the party to claim benefit on the basis thereof. In such state of affairs, in view of express and mandatory condition of the contract, it is not possible to hold that equitable consideration should prevail to modify the terms of the contract by Court against the expressed provision of the agreement and without consent of parties. Further on merits also it is difficult to accept the case of the plaintiff when he stated that the deposit was being made only on the 14th May, 1969 in terms of the contract when such payment to the defendant No. 1 was to be made within April 26, 1969. On both aspects it seems to me that the plaintiff has failed to claim any equitable or other consideration in his favour by the Court.

8. About the contention under Section 55 of the Contract Act it is to be noted that the defendant did not accept the delayed deposit as the performance of the terms of the contract and in his application for objection he prayed for rejection of the plaintiff's prayer and also for dismissal of the suit in terms of the agreement. On this ground also I do not find that the plaintiff is entitled to any relief whatsoever. The rule accordingly fails and is discharged but there will be no order for costs. It is however, necessary to pass some consequential order and I direct that the plaintiff would be at liberty to withdraw the amount of Rs. 1,100 deposited by him in Court. Further the kobala executed in terms of the Solenama is to be treated as cancelled and of no effect. A copy of this judgment is to be sent to the Sub-Registrar of the Registration Office where the document is stated to have been registered for necessary action.

Rule discharged.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 55

N. C. MUKHERJI AND B. C. RAY, JJ.

Civil Revn. No. 2541 of 1974, D/- 7-9-1976.

(A) Civil Procedure Code (1908), O. 6, R. 15; O. 29, R. 1 — 'Principal Officer' — Who is — Plaintiff signed and verified by the authorised agent of Bank acquainted with the facts of case — Plaintiff held properly signed and verified.

The plaintiff was signed and verified on behalf of a bank by A who was an agent of the Bank. The defendant challenged the verification. The plaintiff was allowed time to satisfy the court that A was a competent person described in O. 29, R. 1. The Bank produced a power of attorney executed by Manager and Director of the Bank authorising B to sign the pleading on behalf of the Bank. B signed the plaintiff. The defendant again raised objections that B cannot be considered a principal officer mentioned in O. 29, R. 1. The lower Court was of the opinion that B could sign the plaintiff, but the plaintiff was directed to have the plaintiff verified by an officer enumerated in O. 29, R. 1. The plaintiff filed revision against the order of the lower Court.

Held, that the Court was not very much concerned whether B was duly authorised to sign and verify the plaintiff. From the facts of the case, A was a principal officer of the bank and was acquainted with the facts of the case and authorised to sign and verify the plaintiff. Nothing had been shown by the defendants that he was not the officer authorised to sign or verify the plaintiff. As the plaintiff was properly signed and verified by A, the order of the lower Court was liable to be set aside. (1893) 20 Ind App 139 (PC), Rel. on. (Para 5)

Ranjit Kumar Banerjee and Nihar Ranjan Das Gupta, for Petitioner; Gobinda Chandra Paul, for Respondents.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This Rule arises on an application under Sec. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against order No. 14 dated April 8, 1974 passed by Shri A. N. Saha, Additional Subordinate Judge, Nadia, in Title Suit No. 2 of 1974.

The petitioner as plaintiff filed a suit against the opposite parties. The said suit was signed and verified by one Sri C. R. Sen Gupta, Agent of the Bethuadari Branch of the United Bank of India. The defendant challenged the verification. The plaintiff was allowed time to satisfy the court that Sri Sengupta fills up the character of any of the personalities described in Order 29, Rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiff, however, produced a registered power of attorney executed by the Manager and the Director of the Bank authorising one Sri Nikhil Ranjan Ghosh to sign the pleading on behalf of the company. It was the contention of the plaintiff that by the said power of attorney Sri Ghosh was authorised to sign and verify the plaint. The defendant raised an objection to the effect that Sri Ghosh cannot be considered as one of the principal officers mentioned in Order 29, Rule 1 of the Code. The learned Subordinate Judge after hearing the learned Advocates for the parties was of the opinion that Sri Ghosh could sign the plaint, but the plaintiff was directed to have the plaint verified by an officer enumerated in Order 29, Rule 1 of the Code. Being aggrieved by the aforesaid order, the plaintiff has come up to this Court.

4. Mr. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner, draws our attention to Section 435 of the Old Code, the provisions of which are similar to those in Order 29, Rule 1. Mr. Banerjee submits that Shri Sen Gupta, the Agent of the Bank, ought to have been considered as a principal officer of the bank as he was managing the affairs of the bank and it was he who on behalf of the bank advanced loan to the defendants for the non-payment of which the suit has been brought. Mr. Banerjee in this connection further submits that loan has been admitted by the defendants in their written statement and it is only to delay the matter, a baseless objection has been raised on behalf of the defendants. Mr. Banerjee submits that when the plaint was signed and verified by the local agent of the bank, it was for the other side to show that he was not a person authorised. In support of his contention Mr. Banerjee refers to a decision reported in (1901) 5 Cal WN 91 (Ram Komal Saha v. Bank of Bengal of Akyab). It has been held in this case that where a petition by the Bank of Bengal was verified by a person described as the Officiating Inspector of Branches, Bank of Bengal, and there was nothing to show that he was not the officer authorised to sue or verify the petition on behalf of the Bank at Chittagong or that he was not able to depose to the facts of the case. The petition was properly verified under S. 435, C. P. C. Mr. Banerjee very much relies on the pronouncement of the Judicial Committee in (1893) 20 Ind App 139 (PC) (Delhi and London Bank Ltd. v. Oldham). In this case one Mr. Lawson was acting under the power of attorney as Accountant to the company in Lucknow. Mr. Langdon, the manager, was away in Cashmere; Mr. Banks, whose position is not explained, but who appears to have been a leading officer of the bank, was ill with small-pox; Mr. Lawson, having the large powers expressly conferred upon him by the power of attorney was apparently the sole authority; at all events, he was conducting the chief banking business of the branch in Lucknow. Their Lordships thought that in the absence of any evidence that any one else was at the time in question doing any act of management, it was fair to presume that he was the person of all others best able to depose to the facts of the case, the action being in respect of transactions depending upon documents which would necessarily be accessible to him at the time. Their Lordships further found that Mr. Lawson was then as he described himself acting manager of the Bank of Lucknow and that as such he was a 'principal officer of the corporation', entitled to subscribe and verify the plaint within the meaning of Section 435 of the Code, and that the suit was properly instituted. Mr. Banerjee submits that the facts of the present case are identical with the facts of the case cited above. Here Sri Sen Gupta was the agent of the bank. It was he who advanced loan on behalf of the bank to the defendants. That being so, he was a princial officer of the bank and it was he who was most able to depose about the facts of the case. In such circumstances it must be held that the plaint was signed and verified by Sri Sen Gupta properly.

5. Mr. Gobinda Chandra Paul, learned Advocate for the opposite parties, submits that the petitioner gave up a go-by to its earlier case that Sri Sen Gupta was the proper person to sign and verify the plaint and produced a power of attorney showing that one Mr. Ghosh was authorised to sign and verify the plaint. Then again Mr. Paul submits that Clause 11 of the said power of attorney empowers Shri Ghosh to sign the plaint but it does not authorise him to verify the plaint. Clause 11 of the said power of attorney runs as follows:—

"United Bank of India Ltd. do hereby nominate, constitute and appoint Sri N. R. Ghosh to commence, prosecute, defend, answer and oppose any suit or legal proceeding..... and to make, sign execute, present and file all applications, plaints, petitions, written statements, memorandum of appeals, vakalatnama, muktarnama, and any other powers or any other papers expedient or necessary, to be made, signed, executed, presented or filed in any court of law."

Mr. Banerjee contends that a wide power has been given to Shri Ghosh by which he has been authorised to present a plaint in the court and that being so, it must be said that he was authorised to sign the plaint as well as to verify the same and for that no separate authority is required. Mr. Paul joins issue and contends that whether a person is competent to verify a pleading on behalf of a company or a corporation an affidavit of competency is required to be filed. In support of his contention he refers to a decision reported in 31 Cal WN 1030 = (AIR 1927 Cal 780) (International Continental Caoutchoue Compagnie v. Mehta & Co.). Mr. Paul also refers to a decision reported in 61 Cal WN 445 = (AIR 1958 Cal 104) (Raj Kumar Dhar v. A Stuart Uwis). In this case it has been held that "Whenever a verification is sought to be made by an agent either under a power of attorney or under some other document or by somebody on behalf of another, that verification must be justified under the latter part of the Order 6. Rule 15 of the Civil Procedure Code, namely, that the person verifying must be proved to the satisfaction of the court to be acquainted with the facts of the cases."

In this case we are not very much concerned whether Sri Ghosh was duly authorised to sign and verify the plaint. From the facts of the case and relying very much on the Privy Council decision reported in (1893) 20 Ind App 139 (PC) we have no hesitation to hold that in this case Sri Sen Gupta is a principal officer of the bank and he is acquainted with the facts of the case and nothing has been shown by the defendants that he was not the officer authorised to sue or verify the plaint. We are mindful of the fact that on the objection being raised by the defendants the plaintiff got the plaint signed by Sri Nikhil Chandra Ghosh. For the reasons stated above we are of the opinion that the plaint was properly signed and verified by Shri C. R. Sen Gupta, the Agent of the Bank. That being so, we set aside the order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge.

6. In the result, the application succeeds and the Rule is made absolute. There will be no order for costs. As the suit is pending for a long time we direct the learned Subordinate Judge to dispose of the suit as early as possible. Let the records go down to the court below immediately.

(A) Constitution of India, Article 134

(1) (c) — Final order — Proceedings still remaining to be tried after passing of order — Inherent powers refused to be invoked — Such refusal, though final, does not render the order a final order — Certificate not granted.

In the instant case it was argued that though the orders passed by the High Court were interlocutory in nature, the refusal by the High Court to invoke its inherent powers was final and hence a certificate of fitness should be granted.

Held, that even after the orders, the proceedings still remained to be tried and the rights in dispute could by no means be said to be determined. The order must, therefore, be held to be an interlocutory one and a certificate of fitness for appeal could not be granted. AIR 1970 SC 1168, Foll.; AIR 1968 SC 733, Expl.

SUDHAMAY BASU, J.:— This is an application under Article 134 (1) (c) of the Constitution of India for a certificate of fitness for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court.

2. It appears that complaints were filed by the Income-tax Officer, A-Ward, against the directors of the Asiatic Oxygen and Acetylene Co. Ltd. and Asiatic Oxygen Co. Ltd. and one Mr. K. C. Gangwal designated as the Principal Officer, of the said companies for failure to deduct income-tax from the salary of the employees, for failure to submit return in time, for failure to take income-tax and super tax on dividends for certain period mentioned in various sections of the Income-tax Act. On receipt of complaints the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, took cognizance but transferred the cases to some other learned Magistrates for disposal. The offences related to those under Sections 276-b, 276-D and 276-B of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Six petitions in revision were filed for quashing the proceedings by way of test cases. It was represented before the Court that hundreds of similar cases were pending before the Magistrate. The principal point urged in support of the rules issued in those six petitions was that cognizance having been taken in all these cases by the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate who transferred them the transferee Magistrates were not competent to issue process. Another point urged was that a company can have only one principal officer. Directors were not principal officers. As the Sanctioning Authority in those cases accorded sanctions against Mr. K. C. Gangwal as Principal Officer and against other Directors, the same was bad. By a judgment delivered by us on the 27th of January, 1976, the six petitions Cr. Rev. 271 to 276 of 1976 were disposed of. The rules except in Cr. Rev. 274 of 1975 were discharged. On consideration of the facts and circumstances we were unable to hold that the learned Magistrate had no jurisdiction or competence to issue process. We also held that it would be premature at that stage to quash the proceedings. In our view the point as to whether accused persons who are designated as Directors are Principal Officers or Agents could only be determined after witnesses were examined. The present application relates to the said judgment and order.

3. Although we are of the view that some of the points raised are of importance it appears that the order we passed cannot be said to be a final one. Mr. N. C. Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing in support of the petition concedes that the orders passed by the learned Magistrates which were dealt with by us in our judgment are interlocutory in nature but he argued that our refusal to invoke the inherent powers was, however, final and therefore, he was entitled to have a certificate. He relied in this connection on a judgment of the Supreme Court namely, Mohanlal Maganlal Thakkar v. State of Gujarat reported in AIR 1968 SC 733. According to him, the aforesaid judgment of the Supreme Court makes a departure from the earlier cases. We are, however, unable to agree with Mr. Banerjee in this regard.

4. In the case of Mohanlal Maganlal Thakkar, (AIR 1968 SC 733) a Magistrate ordered, after an enquiry under Section 476, Criminal P. C., that a complaint case be filed against a person in respect of offences under Sections 205, 467 and 468 read with Section 114, I. P. C. In appeal the Additional Sessions Judge held that the complaint was competent only in respect of offence under Section 205 read with Section 114, I. P. C. The High Court dismissed the revisional petition against an order of the Court of Session. The Supreme Court held that the order passed was a final one within the meaning of Article 134 (1) (c) of the Constitution since the controversy between the parties whether the complaint was competent in respect of offences under Sections 467 and 468 read with Section 114, I. P. C. was disposed of by the order of dismissal and the proceedings regarding that question was finally decided. Mr. Banerjee relied on a portion of the judgment on that case at page 738 paragraph 11 where it was observed that the finality of the order was not to be judged by correlating that order with the controversy in the complaint namely, whether the appellant had committed offence charged against him therein. But it may be noted that the said decision of the Supreme Court was by a majority. Two of the Judges viz. Bachwat and Mitter, JJ. dissented from the majority judgment. Moreover, in the case of Tarapore and Co., Madras v. Tractors Export reported in AIR 1970 SC 1168 it was specifically held with reference to earlier judgments that:

"There is, therefore, abundant authority in support of the view that an order is final within the meaning of Art. 133 of the Constitution, under Section 109, Code of Civil Procedure or Section 205 of the Government of India Act, 1935, if it amounts to final decision on the rights of the parties in dispute in the suit or proceeding; if after the order is made the suit or proceedings still remains to be tried, and the rights in dispute have to be determined, the order is interlocutory."

Referring to the case of Mohanlal Thakkar v. State of Gujarat the Supreme Court observed that there was nothing in the said judgment which supports the contention that this Court departed from the principle of the earlier decisions or suggested a different test for determining the finality of orders. The Court held unambiguously

"In our judgment Mohanlal Thakker's case reported in AIR 1968 SC 733 makes no departure from the earlier judgments of the Judicial Committee, the Federal Court and this Court."

We are therefore, unable to accept the validity of Mr. Banerjee's submissions in this respect. Even after the order we passed the proceedings still remain to be tried and the rights in disputes can by no means be said to be determined. The order, therefore, must be held to be an interlocutory one.

5. In that view of the matter the application must fail. The same is dismissed. Liberty is granted to take back the certified copy of the judgment.

6. This judgment will govern the other cases, namely, Cri. Revns. 272, 273, 275 and 276 of 1975.

B. C. Dutt, for Appellant; P. K. Das, for Respondents.

MASUD, J.:— This appeal has been directed against a judgment and order of A. K. Sarkar J. dated September 24, 1973, whereby, the learned Judge refused to record the terms of settlement, filed in suit No. 276 of 1971. The facts of the case may briefly be stated.

2. Two brothers Nawab Ali Hyder Khan and Ali Asgar Khan were the joint owners of premises No. 8/2, Palm Avenue, Calcutta. On or about March 15, 1958 they executed an agreement for sale of the said premises with one Sailaja Ranjan Chaki, respondent No. 6, on terms and conditions, set out in the agreement. Prior to the said date of agreement, Title Suit No. 284 of 1951 was pending in the Court of Subordinate Judge, Alipore, between one Indranath Nandy, the Mortgagee, and the said two brothers, the mortgagors in respect of a mortgage deed dated June 29, 1944. Ali Hyder Khan died intestate in 1963 leaving behind him Musst. Hossenara Begum, Ali Safdar Khan, Ali Sarwar Khan, Ali Dewar Khan and Mst. Sayedunessa Begum, the respondents Nos. 1 to 5. By a deed of assignment dated April 22, 1966, the said Sailaja Ranjan Chaki for a valuable consideration transferred absolutely to the appellant his right, title and interest under the said agreement for sale dated March 15, 1958 in respect of the said premises. The appellant, thereafter, instituted a suit in this Hon'ble Court being suit No. 1322-A of 1966 for specific performance of the said agreement for sale. The said suit was ultimately decreed on May 30, 1969 on compromise on the terms mentioned in paragraph 5 of the appellant's petition before the trial Judge. One of the terms of the decree in favour of the appellant is as follows:—

"The plaintiff (appellant) shall also be at liberty to release the original deed of conveyance in respect of the said premises dated June 29, 1944 in favour of the predecessors of the defendants Nos. 2 to 6 and defendant No. 7 in their joint names from Sri. B. N. Ghosh who is claiming a lien on the original deed of conveyance in respect of his dues amounting to Rs. 81,600/- against defendants Nos. 2 to 7 at the costs of defendants Nos. 2 to 7 and also out of the balance consideration money as stated in paragraph 6 (b) hereinabove retain all sum payable to or to be payable to the said B. N. Ghosh in order to make the plaintiff's title on the property, clear, absolute and perfect".

3. Pursuant to the said compromise decree, the appellant released the subsisting charge on payment of Rupees 81,600/- to Mr. B. N. Ghosh and a deed of release was duly executed and registered on July 22, 1969. There was another term in the said compromise decree whereby the appellant is entitled to get credit for a sum of Rs. 65,000/-, being the expenses incurred, as set out in the agreement for sale dated March 15, 1958, in favour of Sailaja Ranjan Chaki. Thereafter, the appellant on or about June 30, 1969 called upon the respondents 1 to 5 and 7 to execute and register the conveyance of the said premises on receipt of the balance of the consideration money, alleged to be a sum of Rs. 48,400/-. But the vendors being respondents Nos. 1 to 5 and 7 refused to do the same. The appellant, thereafter, came to know that a mortgage decree in the said Title Suit No. 284 of 1951 was passed and in execution of the said decree the said premises were sold in auction at the instance of the mortgagee on March 15, 1952 for a sum of Rs. 2,01,000/-. The respondents Nos. 9, 10 and 11 became the auction purchasers. The date of confirmation of sale was fixed on April 16, 1962. But on April 16, 1962, the mortgagors, the said Ali Hyder Khan, since deceased, and the said Ali Asgar Khan, the respondent No. 7, deposited the entire decretal amount along with the execution cost and 5% of the bid money as compensation as required under law for setting aside the said auction sale. In view of the said deposit, the learned Subordinate Judge was pleased to set aside the auction sale and the execution case was disposed of by his order dated April 16, 1962. The mortgagee decree-holder withdrew all his dues from the Court. The said auction purchasers, however, moved this Hon'ble Court in revision whereupon the order setting aside the auction sale was reversed and the matter was remanded back to the learned Subordinate Judge with a direction for reconsideration of the matter. On remand, the matter was considered by the learned Subordinate Judge on the very day the said Alipore Court received the records i.e. on December 2, 1968 and the said subordinate Judge confirmed the sale. On July 2, 1969, Mr. Anilendra Nath Mitra a Solicitor of this Hon'ble Court, withdrew the sum of Rs. 2,11,050/- being the sale proceeds of the said premises and costs etc. on the basis of a power executed by one Dharendra Nath Acharya who is alleged to be holder of a Power of Attorney from respondents Nos. 1 to 5 and 7. The appellant, having come to know all the aforesaid facts, instituted a suit being Title Suit No. 60 of 1970 in the Court of learned Subordinate Judge, Alipore against the heirs of late Ali Hyder Khan being respondents Nos. 1 to 5, against Ali Asgar Khan, respondent No. 7 and the said auction purchasers, respondents Nos. 9, 10 and 11 for a declaration that the appellant is the owner of the said premises under the decree passed by this Court on May 30, 1969. In the said suit No. 60 of 1970 the appellant made an application for an order restraining the auction purchasers from transferring the properties in any way or from taking possession thereof or for restraining the said Anilendra Nath Mitra from making any disbursement of the amount withdrawn by him. Thereafter, the learned Subordinate Judge allowed the appellant's prayer for Injunction against the auction purchasers but refused the prayer for temporary Injunction against Anilendra Nath Mitra. The auction purchasers preferred an appeal before the learned District Judge which was allowed on December 17, 1970. Against the said order the appellant moved an application in this Court in its civil revisional jurisdiction whereupon Amaresh Roy and A. K. De, JJ. were pleased to issue a Rule and granted an interim order of Injunction restraining the auction purchasers from transferring the said premises or from taking delivery of possession of the same. During the pendency of the said Civil Rule, the heirs of late Ali Hyder Khan, the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 instituted the present suit on June 23, 1971 against the appellant, Sailaja Ranjan Chaki, Ali Asgar Khan, Amar Kr. Roy a Solicitor of this Court and the auction purchasers for a declaration that the terms of settlement dated May 30, 1969 filed in the said Suit No. 1322-A of 1966 of this Hon'ble Court (Sm. Ajita Debi v. Sailaja Ranjan Chaki) are null and void and not binding on the heirs of Ali Hyder Khan and Ali Asgar Khan and as such the said consent decree should be set aside. In the meantime, the appellant was advised to settle the present suit and in fact the terms of settlement were arrived at between the appellant and the plaintiffs in the present suit i.e. heirs of late Ali Hyder Khan. Terms of settlement are as follows:

"1. The suit is withdrawn without liberty to file a fresh suit on the same cause of action.

2. Each party to bear and pay his own costs.

3. All ad interim orders are vacated." The said terms of settlement were filed before Sarkar, J. The learned Judge by his judgment and order dated September 24, 1973 has refused to record the said terms of settlement. The present appeal has been filed against the said order.

4. Before the trial Court, three applications were filed in the present suit. In the first application filed on April 12, 1972 in order of time the appellant prayed for filing the terms of settlement as set out above. Pending the hearing of the said application two applications were made on Master's summons dated November 20, 1972 and November 28, 1972 whereby the auction purchasers respondents Nos. 9, 10 and 11 in the second application and the respondent Ali Asgar Khan in the third application respectively prayed for their transposition to the category of the plaintiffs and transposition of the plaintiffs to the category of defendants in the said suit. By consent all the three applications were heard one after the other. It was also agreed that the final order would be passed by the trial Court after hearing all the three applications. The learned Judge delivered one judgment whereby the appellant's application for filing the terms of settlement was dismissed and the respondents Nos. 9, 10 and 11 and respondent No. 7 were transposed to the category of the plaintiffs. Three appeals have been filed by the appellant against the said judgment and order of the learned Judge.

5. The short point to be decided in the present appeal is whether the learned Judge was right in refusing to record the terms of settlement.

6. A preliminary point has been taken challenging the maintainability of the appeal. Mr. P. K. Das, Counsel for Ali Asgar Khan, has submitted that leave was granted to prefer the present appeal on the usual undertaking that in the Paper Book they would set out the list of dates relating to the question of limitation. Even the other undertaking to file a certified copy of the order under appeal had also not been complied with. But subsequently leave was granted by this Court to file a supplementary Paper Book, including the said certified copy. Thereafter the said certified copy has been duly filed. But neither in the original Paper Book nor in the supplementary Paper Book, the list of dates relating to the question of limitation has at all been given. Mr. Das has, therefore, submitted that the appellant having failed to comply with the undertaking given to this Court, this appeal should be dismissed. Reliance has been placed upon an unreported Bench decision of this Court by Lahiri and Bachawat JJ. in Ram Gopal Lachmi Narayan v. Bansidhar Ghan-shyam Das delivered on April 5, 1960 in Appeal No. 36 of 1959 (Cal), Commissioner of Income-tax v. Santosh Debi Chamaria, AIR 1974 Cal 295 and the unreported judgment of myself and Ghose J. in Appeal No 106 of 1974, (Prahlad Lal Saraf v. Nathmul Bhuwalka) delivered on January 21, 1975 (Cal), where it was held that if the appellant fails to comply with the conditions on the basis of which leave was granted to file the appeal, the appeal should be dismissed.

7. Mr. B. C. Dutt, Counsel for the appellant, has submitted that the facts in the above cases are distinguishable. Although the list of dates relevant to the question of limitation has not been printed in the Paper Book, Mr. Dutt has contended that in the appeal there has been no breach of undertaking inasmuch as the appeal was placed in the list earlier than the normal time at the instance of the respondent and hearing of the appeal commenced on March 26, 1976, although the certified copy of the order was delivered by the department and filed by the appellant on March 23, 1976. We have, however, called for the records and have found the following dates:

1. Requisition for drawing up the order dated 24th September, 1973	28-9-73.
2. Requisition for certified copy of the order dated 24th September, 1973	28-9-73.
3. Order signed on	9-3-76.
4. Order filed on	10-3-76.
5. Folios for certified copy assessed by Court	12-3-76.
6. Stamp furnished on	12-3-76.
7. Date on which the copy is ready for delivery	24-3-76.
8. Date when delivery was taken	24-3-76.
9. Date of filing of certified copy of order	24-3-76.

8. We are, therefore, satisfied that the appeal in fact was filed within the period of limitation and, in the facts of the case, the breach of undertaking in omitting to furnish the dates relevant for period of limitation in the Paper Book cannot be said to be voluntary or without reason.

9. Mr. Das has next contended that the respondent No. 3 Ali Safdar Khan has died in December, 1974 and no substitution of his heirs having been made till the date of hearing, the appeal abated against all the respondents. Reliance has been placed by him on R. P. Gupta v. Murli Prasad, AIR 1972 SC 1181 at p. 1185, in support of his contention.

10. In reply to this contention, Mr. Dutt, prayed for an adjournment of the hearing of the appeal to enable his client to make a formal application for putting the heirs and legal representatives of Ali Safdar Khan on record. We have, however, granted the said prayer and adjourned the hearing. A formal application has been made on April 7, 1976 which has been disposed of by us by a separate judgment today. In our judgment, we have held that as Musst. Hossenara Begum is an heir of Ali Safdar Khan, deceased, as his mother, under the Mohammedan Law the estate of Ali Safdar Khan has already been represented in the appeal. Relying upon Sulaiman Sahib v. N. C. Mohd. Ismail Sahib, AIR 1966 SC 792 and Mahabir Prasad v. Jageram, AIR 1971 SC 742, we have allowed to put the other heirs of Ali Safdar Khan on record in place of the deceased. For the reasons set out in the said judgment, we are of opinion that the appeal has not abated as submitted by Mr. Das and, as such, this contention of Mr. Das must also fail.

11. On merits Mr. Das has argued that the learned Judge has correctly rejected the appellant's prayer to file terms of settlement inasmuch as no such compromise or adjustment could be lawfully effected under Order XXIII, Rule 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Admittedly all the defendants did not sign the terms of settlement. Further no power of attorney has been filed by Amar K. Roy, since deceased, who has signed the said terms of settlement on behalf of the plaintiffs. As the compromise is unlawful it has rightly been rejected. Reliance has been placed by him on Sadasukh Kabra v. Jugal Krishna Singh, (1957) 61 Cal WN 67 at p. 76. He has also contended that substantial nature of the terms of settlement as set out above is that the plaintiffs in this suit i.e. respondents Nos. 1 to 5 have made the application not to proceed with the suit. The appellant's said application to file the terms of settlement, however, has been made under O. XXIII, R. 3 and not under O. XXIII, R. 1. Even assuming that the said application before the trial Court was substantially an application under Order XXIII, Rule 1, the order of the learned Judge in the facts and circumstances of this case cannot be said to have been incorrectly made. Reference has been made to M/s. Hulas Rai Baij Nath v. Firm K. B. Bass & Co., AIR 1968 SC 111 where it has been held that the plaintiffs cannot be compelled to proceed with the suit by the Court under Order XXIII, Rule 1 of the Code.

12. In our view, where an application has been made under Order XXIII, Rule 1 the plaintiff is entitled to withdraw his suit and the defendants cannot be heard to oppose such prayer. But the said legal right of the plaintiffs to withdraw the suit is not unconditional or absolute. The Court can only exercise its jurisdiction in favour of the plaintiffs where the interests of the defendants are not adversely affected in any way if the plaintiffs are allowed to withdraw the suit. To illustrate, in a partition suit by a sole plaintiff against defendants, the former cannot be allowed to withdraw the suit inasmuch as a defendant having a cause of action against such plaintiff, may be allowed to be transposed as plaintiff in the suit. Reliance may be placed on Bhupendra Narayan Sinha v. Rajeshwar Prosad, 58 Ind App 228 at p. 229 = (AIR 1931 PC 162). The Judicial Committee in this case held that transposition of a party under Order I, Rule 10 should be allowed where it is necessary for a complete adjudication upon the questions involved in the suit and to avoid multiplicity of proceedings. Similarly, in a suit under Section 92 of the Code a plaintiff is not allowed to withdraw the suit if one of the defendants makes an application to proceed with the suit after being transposed as a plaintiff. Reliance may be placed upon AIR 1920 Mad 732. Similar situation may arise in a suit for accounts of a firm by a Partner. We are, therefore, satisfied that where an application simpliciter has been made under Order XXIII, Rule 1, the Court cannot compel the plaintiff to proceed with the suit and the defendants cannot be allowed to complain against such order. But where there is an affinity or identity of interests between the plaintiffs and one or more of the defendants, the plaintiffs cannot be allowed to withdraw the suit if an application on behalf of such defendants having an interest in the suit is made for their transposition to the category of plaintiffs and for transposition of the plaintiffs to the category of the defendants under Order 1, Rule 10.

13. In the facts and circumstances of the present case, late Ali Hyder Khan and Ali Asgar Khan were absolute owners of the said premises comprising more than 4 Bighas of land in a respectable locality in Calcutta. The respondent Ali Asgar Khan who was a defendant in the suit had identical interest in the said property with the interests of late Ali Hyder Khan or his heirs who happened to be the plaintiffs in this suit. If Ali Asgar is not allowed to be transposed, in such cases he would be compelled to file another suit against the heirs of Ali Hyder and the appellant which would encourage multiplicity of proceedings. It is quite possible that in a proper case if the suit is allowed to be withdrawn, the defendants' new suit might be barred by limitation. In the present case not only an application under Order XXIII, Rule 3 has been made but application for transposition of some of the defendants have been made under Order 1, Rule 10 so that the issues between the parties are finally determined.

14. It is the definite case of the appellant that one of the seven defendants, made the application to put the terms of settlement in Suit No. 276 of 1971 (Cal), (Mst. Hossenara Begum v. Sm. Ajita Debi) under Order XXIII, Rule 3. Relevant provisions of Order XXIII, Rule 3 read as follows:

"Provided it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise..... the Court shall order such agreement, compromise.....to be recorded and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit." Defendant Smt. Ajita Debi made the application for recording the terms of settlement. The defendant No. 2 Sailaja Ranjan Chaki did not enter appearance. The defendant No. 3 Ali Asgar Khan is one of the defendants in the suit filed by Smt. Ajita Debi against Ali Hyder Khan, the predecessor-in-interests of the plaintiffs. Smt. Ajita Debi, the defendant No. 1 is supposed to have entered into an agreement with Musst. Hossenara Begum, Ali Safdar Khan, deceased, Ali Sarwar Khan, Ali Dewar Khan and Mst. Sayedunessa Begum. There is nothing to show that the suit has been adjusted wholly or in part between Smt. Ajita Debi and Ali Asgar Khan. It has been submitted by the Counsel for the appellant that Ali Asgar Khan is acting in collusion and conspiracy with Smt. Ajita Debi. If this submission is correct, then Ali Asgar Khan also should have been a party to the said terms of settlement. On the contrary,

Smt. Ajita Debi has tried to file terms of settlement by excluding Ali Asgar Khan. It cannot be denied that Ali Asgar Khan and the heirs of Ali Hyder Khan have identical interests in the suit premises. It is true that respondents Nos. 5, 6 and 7 who happen to be the auction purchasers under a mortgage decree against Ali Hyder Khan and Ali Asgar Khan were not parties in the Suit No. 1322-A of 1966, that is, Ajita Debi's suit for specific performance of the agreement for sale against Ali Hyder Khan and Ali Asgar Khan; Counsel for the appellant is right in his submission that no relief has been claimed in the present Suit No. 276 of 1971 against respondents Nos. 5, 6 and 7. The fact remains that they have been impleaded as defendants by the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 who are the plaintiffs in the suit. The facts of the case also show that the respondents Nos. 5, 6 and 7 have purchased the suit premises for a sum of Rs. 2,01,000/- and paid the amount. Thus, the auction purchasers who have been impleaded in the said Suit No. 276 of 1971 are also interested in the suit premises. It is, thus, clear that the appellant who happens to be a lady instituted the said Suit No. 1322-A of 1966 for specific performance of the contract for sale and the said suit was compromised at her instance. The heirs of Ali Hyder Khan, deceased, filed the present suit for setting aside the decree for specific performance and impleaded Ali Asgar Khan as one of the defendants. Smt. Ajita Debi again persuaded the heirs of Ali Hyder Khan to withdraw the present suit and it is she who made the application for putting the terms of settlement excluding Ali Asgar Khan and the auction purchasers. Smt. Ajita Debi has therefore, failed to prove to the satisfaction of the Court that the said Suit No. 276 of 1971 has been adjusted wholly or in part against Ali Asgar Khan and the auction purchasers who are represented by different Counsel before the trial Court and this Court. The learned Judge is, therefore, right in refusing to file and record the terms of settlement by the order under appeal. Further, the suit premises No. 8/2, Palm Avenue, Calcutta, comprising of an area of about 4 Bighas 16 Cottahs together with two-storied building in a respectable locality is a very valuable property and there are several litigations relating to the said property. Ali Asgar Khan and the auction purchasers are very much interested in the suit premises. We have been told that the Custodian of Enemy Property has instituted a suit against the heirs of Ali Hyder Khan, deceased, and Ali Asgar Khan for a declaration that the suit premises have been vested in the Union of India on the ground that heirs of Ali Hyder Khan, deceased, and Ali Asgar Khan are not Indian nationals. It is thus quite possible that all the parties have acted or are acting to dispose of the property at a nominal price.

15. There is another reason why the proposed compromise or adjustment cannot be allowed to be filed. The original terms of settlement have been examined by us and we have found that, Amar Kumar Roy, the respondent No. 8, has put his signature as solicitor for the respondents Nos. 1 to 5, but his power of attorney has not been filed in the suit. Thus we are satisfied that the purported terms of settlement are not based upon any lawful agreement or compromise within the meaning of Order XXIII, R. 3. We, therefore hold that the learned Judge has not erred in refusing to record the terms of settlement.

16. In the premises, the appeal is dismissed but in the facts of this case parties will bear their respective costs.

S. K. MUKHERJEA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Bijoli Prova Nandy Chowdhury, Appellant v. State of West Bengal, Respondent.

A. F. O. D. No. 601 of 1971 (Analogous to A. O. D. No. 245 of 1972), D/-25-6-1976.

(A) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), S. 7 (2) (a) — Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 23 (2) — Solatium under S. 23 (2) — Admissibility of — Acquisition of land — Claim for payment of statutory solatium — S. 7 (2) (a) of W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act is ultra vires — Hence claim of statutory solatium under S. 23 (2), Land Acquisition Act is not barred.

Under the W. B. (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, it has been provided that for the purpose of compensation the market value of the land has to be decided in accordance with S. 23 of Land Acquisition Act and thereafter the Land Acquisition Act provides for payment of statutory compensation by way of solatium at the rate of 15% under S. 23 (2) of the said Act. However S. 7 (2) (a) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act provides for non-payment of statutory solatium.

Held, that S. 7 (2) (a) of W. B. Land Acquisition Act is ultra vires and hence the appellant is entitled to claim the statutory solatium under S. 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act. AIR 1971 SC 961, Distinguished. (Paras 2, 3)

BANERJEE, J.:— This appeal arose out of an application for reference under Section 18 at the instance of the claimant. By notification dated 17th April, 1965, 336.27 dec. of land was acquired out of which the appellant is interested in C. S. Plots Nos. 4091, 4092 and 4095 and the Collector by his award dated 3rd September, 1968 allowed Rs. 39,263.85 p. The nature of the land in which we are interested in this application are Bill, Bhery and Bhery machchas. The Collector valued the bill and bhery lands at the rate of Rs. 1210/- per acre. Not being satisfied with the award given by the learned Collector, the appellant referring claimant made an application under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act and claimed compensation at the rate of Rupees 2500/- per cottah for the acquisition of the petitioner's property. She also claimed Rs. 2500/- per month for the period of requisition. The learned arbitrator however allowed at the rate of Rs. 80/- per cottah or Rs. 1616/- per bigha and he further gave 6% interest on the land and also 15% statutory allowance on the land value. The award was made on 26th April, 1971. Thereafter the State Government made an application under Order 47, Rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code for review of the judgment passed on 26th April, 1971. On review by order dated 14th June, 1971, 15% statutory allowance was disallowed in view of the Supreme Court judgment in AIR 1971 SC 961.

2. Mr. Das Gupta on behalf of the appellant contended that the valuations of Beel, Bhery and Bandh were too low on the material date on 26th June, 1965 or at the rate of Rs. 80/- per cottah as fixed by the arbitrator. Mr. Das Gupta contended that the appellant produced number of documents which were not considered at all by the learned arbitrator. The documents produced by the appellant are Exts. 3A, 3B and 3C. The appellant also produced two awards (Exts. 1 and 2) and gave evidence to the effect that he was earning a monthly rent of Rs. 250/- from one Bhusan Naskar before the vesting of the estate in the State of West Bengal. The evidence was given by the witness No. 1 for the claimant that the acquired bhery was about 2 miles from the Bengal Chemicals which is within the Calcutta Corporation. The terminus of the State Bus No. 14 is at the Bengal Chemicals. The V. I. P. Road is about 3/4 miles from the bhery. There was waist-deep water in the beel and that she claimed Rs. 2500/- per cottah in respect of the property in question. Ext. 3 was a document dated 3rd June, 1959 which shows a sale deed of 31 dec. land of plot No. 3558 at the rate of Rs. 3000/- per cottah. In our opinion, the Court below rightly rejected the said kobala which has no relation with the land in question and is quite long way off from the property under acquisition which is recorded as beel, bhery and bhery machchas. The next document relied upon by the claimant is Ext. 3A, that is also a small plot of garden land and the rate was Rs. 15500/- per acre in one case and Rs. 9700/- per acre in other. These plots covered by Ext. 3 are all quite a long way off from the plot acquired in the present case. Ext. 3B was a kobala dated 20th July, 1963, by which 16 cottahs 14 chittacks of land was sold for Rs. 28,000/-. Ext. 3C is also document dated 5th March, 1965 by which 2 cottahs and 15 chittacks and 31 sq. ft. of land were sold at the rate of Rs. 1500/- per cottah. Exts. 1 and 2 are certified copies of judgment and decree passed in L. A. Case No. 34 of 1969 (V). The Kobala produced by the State Government was rejected by the learned arbitrator on the ground that the said Exts. A to A-3 are not relevant for the purpose of value of beel, bhery and bandh land, inasmuch as they are in respect of transaction 10 years ago from the date. We are concerned with the material date of notification dated 25th June, 1965. He also rejected Exts. 3, 3A and 3B as the nature of lands are of garden lands and sali lands and that cannot be a proper guide for the purpose of valuation of bhery, bhery machchas or beel lands. The learned Judge did not take into consideration the rental method of valuation because the claimant could not produce any evidence excepting the oral evidence of the rent which has been received for the bhery machchas. In the award 25.48 acre beel-cum-paddy land in plot N. 6279 as on 14th February, 1956 was fixed at Rs. 1000/- per bigha and 70 cents of beel land in plot No. 6537 at Rs. 688/- per bigha. From the Map it appears that plot Nos. 6279 and 6537 is nearest to plot Nos. 4091, 4042 and 4095. The date of notification in case No. 34 of 1969 was however 14th February, 1956 whereas in the present case the date is 24th June, 1965. At the relevant date no evidence has been produced by the parties about the sale transaction of the similarly situate land. Therefore, we are to value the land on the basis of documents and also consider the continuous rise in land value in and around Calcutta from 1941 and onwards. It appears that similar land was valued at Rs. 688/- per bigha in 1956. The said land was near to the V.I.P. Road whereas the present land is not so near the V.I.P. Road. It appears that the beel and paddy land were assessed at Rs. 1000/- per bigha and that assessment cannot be taken into consideration in view of the evidence of the appellant that the land in question was under waist deep water. In that view of the matter, the learned arbitrator was right in taking Rs. 688/- per bigha as value of the beel land on 15th February, 1956 and thereafter took into consideration of the trend of rise in the land value between 1956 to 1965 in and around Calcutta while the scheme of Salt Lake already in operation and considered the appreciation of 15% allowance per year in respect of the value of the land under acquisition and fixed the rate of Rs. 1616/- per bigha. In our opinion, nothing has been stated by Mr. Das Gupta by which we can hold that the valuation arrived at by the arbitrator was wholly inadequate. In our view, taking into consideration the fact that the petitioner, assuming for a moment was getting a rental of Rs. 250/- per month is correct even if the rental method is applied, he could not have got what has been given. The valuation fixed at the rate of 15% per bigha as on 24th June, 1965 is a correct reasonable and adequate compensation for the acquisition. Mr. Das Gupta next contended that the appellant is entitled to 15% solatium, in view of the fact, Section 7 (2) (a) of the Act, 1948 has been declared ultra vires by this Court and the learned arbitrator was wrong in refusing the 15% solatium as is entitled under Section 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act.

3. The learned Arbitrator referred to AIR 1971 SC 961 (S. M. Nandy v. State of West Bengal) and on the basis thereof reviewed the decision and held that the claimant is not entitled to the solatium. It appears however that the point which arose in this case is whether the requisition is ultra vires of the Constitution of India under Art. 19 (1) (f) read with Art. 19 (5) of the Constitution. The point which has been urged by the learned Advocate appearing for the appellant is to be found in paragraph 2 of the judgment which is as follows:—

"2. The learned counsel for the appellants, Shri Arun Kumar Dutta, challenges the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1948—hereinafter referred to as the impugned Act on the ground that it does not impose reasonable restrictions within Article 19 (5) of the Constitution. He urges three grounds in this respect. First, he says, that there is no provision for a notice to the owner or the occupier of the property before an order of requisition is passed. Secondly, there is no provision for an appeal against the order of requisition, and thirdly, a civil suit is barred under Section 11 of the impugned Act." In repelling the argument of the appellant, the Supreme Court considered the scheme of the Act and in doing so the Supreme Court only referred to the different provision of the Act. The Supreme Court had no occasion to consider whether Section 7 (2) (a) is ultra vires of the Act. In our opinion, therefore, the learned arbitrator was wrong in his reading of the effect of the Supreme Court's judgment in so far as the solatium is concerned. Under the West Bengal Act II of 1948 it has been provided that for the purpose of compensation the market value of the land has to be decided in accordance with Section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act and thereafter the Land Acquisition Act provides for payment of statutory compensation by way of solatium at the rate of 15% under Section 23 (2) of the said Act. Under Section 7 (2) (a)

however the Act II of 1948 provides for non-payment of statutory solatium or in the other words though compensation will be provided under the Land Acquisition Act, the provision for statutory solatium under Section 23 (2) will not be available. The Supreme Court had to consider the effect of such provision in respect of Nagpur Improvement Act and struck down the similar provision of the said Act as ultra vires. This Court also considered the similar provision under the Calcutta Improvement Act and struck down it as ultra vires. Following these decisions, in our opinion, Section 8 (2) (b) (7 (2) (a)?) of the Act, in so far as it provides for non-payment of statutory solatium, cannot be upheld. We, therefore, set aside the order passed by Arbitrator dis-allowing the claim for 15% statutory allowance as modified by the judgment dated 14th June, 1971.

4. The appeal is, therefore, allowed in part. The judgment dated 14th June, 1971 is set aside. The award passed by the Special Land Acquisition Judge on 26th April, 1971 is affirmed.

There will be no order as to costs.

Re:— F. A. No. 245 of 1972

5. In view of our judgment passed in F. A. No. 601 of 1971, this appeal is disposed of. There will be no order as to costs.

R. K. SHARMA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal partly allowed.

FULL BENCH

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J., SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND SALIL KUMAR ROYCHOWDHURY, JJ.

Kamal Krishna Bhattacharya and others, Petitioners v. The State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

Full Bench Reference No. 1 of 1974 in Civil Rule No. 6098 (W) of 1972 and Full Bench Reference No. 2 of 1974 in Civil Rule No. 7247 (W) of 1972, D/- 3-9-1976.

(A) Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 67-A (3) — Word 'such' — Word cannot be given restricted meaning — "Such powers" may include all the 'powers' of Chairman. AIR 1974 Cal 363, Overruled.

given a restricted meaning. The words 'such powers' therefore may include all powers of the Chairman or the Commissioners. AIR 1974 Cal 363, Overruled; (1974) 78 Cal WN 988, Approved.

(Paras 17 and 21)

To ascertain the true scope and meaning of the word 'such' in Section 67-A (3), it is necessary to take into consideration the object of that section and the object of Sections 552 and 553. The object of Sections 552 and 553 is to dissolve the body of Commissioners or to supersede the body altogether. The object of Section 67-A is to keep the Chairman and the Commissioners in office, to be re-installed if thought necessary. Section 67-A gives to the State Government an emergency power for exercise in special circumstances for specified period. It does not take away the office of the Chairman or the Commissioners. They would remain in office. They have been only deprived of exercising the powers given to them under the Act which are specified in notifications under Section 67-A. This power of the State Government can be used when in its opinion either the affairs of a municipality are not properly managed or the affairs of a municipality cannot, for failure of a general election or for any other reason, whatsoever, be managed in accordance with law and if the State Govt. is of opinion that it is desirable in the public interest to exercise the power. The Executive Officer appointed under Section 67-A may be armed either with some of the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners whether at a meeting or otherwise or all powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners. When all powers are conferred the Chairman and the Commissioners remain in suspended animation for periods specified in the notification or notifications under the sections. On the expiry of such period or periods the Chairman or the Commissioners may assume the powers they are deprived of and the municipality is allowed to function in the normal way through them. Full Bench Reference No. 1 of 1974 in Civil Rule No. 6098 (W) of 1972:

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:—

This is a Reference made by a Division Bench consisting of my learned brother Mr. Justice Salil K. Roychowdhury and myself on the 2nd July, 1974 under R. 7, Chapter VII, Part II of the High Court Appellate Side Rules. The reference is restricted to the meaning of the word 'such' in Section 67-A of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act'). No other question can be gone into or decided by this Bench.

2. On the meaning of the word 'such' there has been a difference of opinion between two Division Benches of this Court. The relevant decisions have been reported in (1974) 78 Cal WN 988 (State of West Bengal v. Surendranath Mondal) and 78 Cal WN 686 = (AIR 1974 Cal 363) (Sailendra Nath Bhowmik v. State of West Bengal). The first judgment is a judgment of the Division Bench consisting of Mr. Justice A. N. Sen and Mr. Justice S. K. Hazra delivered on February 4, 1973. The second judgment is of a Division Bench consisting of Mr. Justice A. C. Gupta and Mr. Justice S. C. Deb delivered on September 25, 1973. It appears that the first judgment was not cited before the second Division Bench.

3. Before we proceed any further it would be relevant to quote Section 67-A and Sections 552 and 553 of the Act.

4. Section 67-A reads:

"Appointment, etc. of Executive Officer by the State Government:—

(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in Section 66 or Section 67, if in the opinion of the State Government the affairs of a municipality—

(a) are not properly managed, or

(b) cannot, for failure of a general election or for any other reason, whatsoever, be managed in accordance with law, and if in its opinion it is desirable in the public interest so to do, it may, by notification, declare that the municipality shall have an Executive Officer for such period as may be specified in the notification:

Provided that the State Government may, if it thinks fit, by notification, extend such period from time to time.

(3) The Executive Officer of a municipality, appointed under this section shall, subject to such directions as the State Government may issue from time to time, exercise such powers of the Chairman or of the Commissioner whether at a meeting or otherwise as may be conferred on him by notification by the State Government and on such notification such powers shall cease to be exercisable by the Chairman or by the Commissioner, as the case may be."

5. We now come to Section 552. This section is in these terms:

"552. Power to dissolve body of Commissioners.— If, in the opinion of the State Government, the Commissioners have shewn their incompetency to perform or to have persistently made default in the performance of the duties imposed on them by or under this Act or by any other law, or have exceeded or abused their powers, the State Government may, by an order published, with the reasons for making it, in the Official Gazette, direct that a fresh general election shall be held immediately of persons to be Commissioners; and from the date on which the results of such new election and appointment of Commissioners under Section 26 (if any) are published in accordance with the provisions of Section 50 the former Commissioners shall, unless they are re-elected or re-appointed for the purpose of Section 26, vacate their offices:

Provided that the tenure of office of the Chairman of the outgoing body of Commissioners shall continue until that office is vacated in the manner provided by Section 59."

6. The next Section 553 runs thus:

"553. Power to supersede Commissioners in case of incompetency, default or abuse of powers.—

(1) If, in the opinion of the State Government, the Commissioners have shown their incompetency to perform, or has persistently made default in the performance of the duties imposed on them by or under this Act or by any other law or have exceeded or abused their powers, the State Government may, by an order published with the reasons for making it, in the Official Gazette, declare such Commissioners to be incompetent, or in default, or to have exceeded or abused their powers, as the case may be, and supersede them for a period to be specified in the order:

Provided that except in case of misappropriation of municipal funds or persistent default in the performance of duties by the Commissioners the State Government shall not ordinarily exercise power under this section until action has been taken under Section 552.

(2) The State Government may, if it considers it necessary so to do, by order extend or modify the period of supersession."

7. Both the two Division Benches referred to above are of opinion that Sections 67-A, 552 and 553 may operate in the same field. We are, therefore, unable to reopen this question although an attempt was made to do so by the learned Government pleader appearing for the State Government. The difference between the two Division Benches is that in the case of State of West Bengal v. Surendranath Mondal ((1974) 78 Cal WN 988), it has been held that all the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners of a municipality may be conferred upon an Executive Officer under Section 67-A (3). In other words, 'such powers' in Section 67-A may mean all powers. In the case of Sailendra Nath Bhowmik v. State of West Bengal (AIR 1974 Cal 363), the other Division Bench is of the view that under Section 67-A (3), only certain powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners of the municipality as may be specified can be conferred upon the executive officer appointed under this section, that is to say, that all the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners cannot be conferred upon such executive officer.

8. It is this difference of opinion between the two Division Benches which we have been called upon to resolve in this reference.

9. Mr. Arun Prakash Chatterjee appearing for the appellants has relied on the dictionary meaning of the word 'such' in Webster's International Dictionary, Volume III, page 2283. He has drawn our attention to the following meanings:

"(1) Of a kind or character about to be indicated, suggested or exemplified."

"(2) Having a quality to a degree to be indicated."

"(3) Having a quality already or just specified used to avoid repetition of descriptive term."

"(4) Of the same class, type, or sort, in the same category; similar."

10. Relying on the meanings aforesaid, Mr. Chatterjee contends that the words 'such powers' in Section 67-A (3) mean powers of the character or quality indicated. The word 'such', says Mr. Chatterjee, cannot mean 'all' inasmuch as it will render nugatory Sections 53, 68 (1) and 68 (2) of the Act. The relevant provisions of these sections may be quoted at this stage. They are as follows:

"53. Delegation of powers by the Executive Officer.—The Executive Officer may with the approval of the Commissioners at a meeting delegate all or any of his powers to the holder of any office under the Commissioners."

"68. Power of the Executive Officer.—(1) The Executive Officer shall be the principal executive officer of the Commissioners and all other officers and servants of the Commissioners shall be subordinate to him. He shall have the same right of being present at a meeting of the Commissioners or of any standing or special committee, and of taking part in the discussions thereat as if he were a Commissioner or a member of such committee and with the consent of the Chairman or the president of the meeting, as the case may be, he may at any time make a statement or explanation of facts, but he shall not vote upon, or make, any proposition at such meeting.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 51 and sub-section (3) of Section 67-A Executive Officer shall act in respect of all other matters under the direction of the Chairman through whom he shall be responsible to the Commissioners."

11. Mr. Chatterjee has urged that if all the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners are vested in the Executive Officer appointed under Section 67-A (3), the other sections, he has referred to, would cease to be operative. According to learned counsel Section 67-A assumes the existence of the Chairman and the Commissioners and it cannot be construed to cover cases when the tenure of the Chairman or the Commissioners is at an end under Section 56 and Sec. 56-A of the Act. Section 56 puts an end to the tenure of the office of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Commissioners. Section 56-A provides for the appointment of a Committee in the case of delay in forming new body of Commissioners by reason of an order of Court or for other reasons.

12. To strengthen this argument learned counsel has referred to the relevant provisions of Section 554 which prescribe the consequences of supersession of the body of Commissioners or of failure to assume office or of setting aside of election. The sum and substance of the contention on behalf of the appellants has been that when the Act intends to make the Chairman or the Commissioners altogether ineffective the Act has made separate provisions but when they do not cease to function altogether and some powers are still exercisable by them the Act provides in different circumstances for the appointment of an Executive Officer. Section 67-A (3) provides one of the methods of appointing an Executive Officer keeping alive the functions of the Chairman and the Commissioners to the extent they had not been taken away by the notification or notifications under the section. In these premises, it is not open to the State Government by an order passed under Section 67 to take away all the powers of the Chairman and Commissioners.

13. It seems to us that to ascertain the true scope and meaning of the word 'such' in Section 67-A (3), it is necessary to take into consideration the object of that section and the objects of Sections 552 and 553. The object of Sections 552 and 553 is to dissolve the body of Commissioners or to supersede the body altogether. The object of Sec. 67-A is to keep the Chairman and the Commissioners in office, to be re-installed if thought necessary with their full powers. Section 67-A gives to the State Government an emergency power for exercise in special circumstances for specified period. It does not take away the office of the Chairman or the Commissioners. They would remain in office. They have been only deprived of exercising the powers given to them under the Act which are specified in notifications under Section 67-A. This power of the State Government can be used when in its opinion either the affairs of a municipality are not properly managed or the affairs of a municipality cannot, for failure of a general election or for any other reason, whatsoever, be managed in accordance with law and if the State Government is of opinion that it is desirable in the public interest to exercise the power.

14. In our opinion, an Executive Officer appointed under Section 67-A may be armed either with some of the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners whether at a meeting or otherwise or all powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners. When all powers are conferred the Chairman and the Commissioners remain in suspended animation for periods specified in the notification or notifications under the sections. On the expiry of such period or periods the Chairman or the Commissioners may assume the powers they are deprived of and the municipality is allowed to function in the normal way through them.

15. The view we have taken would be supported to some extent by the judgment of the Supreme Court in Radheshyam Khare v. State of Madhya Pradesh, reported in AIR 1959 SC 107. In this case the Supreme Court was considering the provisions of Sections 53-A and 57 of the C. P. and Berar Municipalities Act (2 of 1922). It would be useful to set out the provisions of these two sections. They run thus:

"53-A. (1) If a committee is not competent to perform the duties imposed on it or undertaken by it by or under this Act or any other enactment for the time being in force and the State Government considers that a general improvement in the administration of the municipality is likely to be secured by the appointment of a servant of the Government as the executive officer of the committee, the State Government may, by an order stating the reasons therefor published in the Gazette, appoint such servant as the executive officer of the committee for such period not exceeding eighteen months as may be specified in such order.

(2) Any executive officer appointed under sub-section (1) shall be deemed to be an officer lent to the committee by Government under sub-section (3) of Section 25.

(3) When under sub-section (1) an executive officer is appointed for any committee, the State Government shall determine from time to time which powers, duties and functions of the committee, president, vice-president or secretary under this Act or any rule or bye-law made thereunder shall be exercised and performed by such officer, in addition to, or to the exclusion of, their exercise and performance by the said committee, president, vice-president or secretary.

(4) The secretary of the committee shall be subordinate to the executive officer.

(5) The executive officer shall have the right to attend all meetings of the committee and any joint committee or sub-committee and to take part in the discussion so as to make an explanation in regard to the subject under discussion, but shall not move, second or vote on any resolution or other motion."

"57. (1) If a committee is not competent to perform, or persistently makes default in the performance of, the duties imposed on it or undertaken by it under this Act or any other enactment for the time being in force, or exceeds or abuses its powers to a grave extent, the State Government may, by an order stating the reasons therefor published in the official Gazette, dissolve such committee and may order a fresh election to take place.

(2) If after fresh election the new committee continues to be incompetent to perform, or to make default in the performance of, such duties or exceeds or abuses its powers to a grave extent, the State Government may, by an order stating the reasons therefor published in the Official Gazette, declare the committee to be incompetent or in default, or to have exceeded or abused its powers, as the case may be, and supersede it for a period to be specified in the order.

(3) If a committee is so dissolved or superseded, the following consequences shall ensue:—

(a) all members of the committee shall, as from the date of the order, vacate their offices as such members;

(b) all powers and duties of the committee may, until the committee is reconstituted, be exercised and performed by such person or persons as the State Government may appoint in that behalf;

(c) all property vested in it shall until the committee is reconstituted vest in the State Government.

(4) On the expiration of the period of supersession specified in the order, the committee shall be reconstituted, and the persons who vacated their offices under sub-section (3), Cl. (a), shall not, by reason solely of such supersession be deemed disqualified for being members.

(5) No order under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall be passed until reasonable opportunity has been given to the committee to furnish an explanation.

(6) Any person or persons appointed by the State Government to exercise and perform the powers and duties of a dissolved or superseded committee may receive payment, if the State Government so directs, for his or their services from the municipal fund."

16. In construing the provisions of these two sections the Supreme Court at page 113 of the Report in paragraph 7, inter alia, observes:

"The effect of an order made under Section 57 is, therefore, extremely drastic and puts an end to the very existence of the committee itself and, in view of the grave nature of the consequences that will ensue, the legislature presumably thought that some protection should be given to the committee before such a drastic action was taken and accordingly it provided, by sub-section (5) of that section, that no order should be passed until reasonable opportunity had been given to the committee to furnish an explanation—a provision which clearly indicates that action under Section 57 can only be taken after hearing and considering all the explanations furnished by or on behalf of the committee. The legislature did not think fit to provide a similar safeguard in Section 53-A presumably because the order under the last mentioned section was of a temporary duration, was not very drastic and did not threaten the very existence of the committee. A cursory reading of the two sections will also indicate that the conditions precedent to the exercise of the powers under both sections overlap to some extent, namely, that action can be taken under both if the committee "is not competent to perform the duties imposed on it....." To the extent that the requirements of the two sections overlap the State Government has the option of taking steps under one section or the other according to its own assessment of the exigencies of the situation. The position, therefore, is that if a committee is not competent to perform the duties imposed on it the State Government has to make up its mind as to whether it should take any action at all and, if it thinks that action should be taken, then it has further to decide for itself as to which of the two sections it would act under. If the State Government considers that the incompetency does not run to a grave extent and the exigencies of the situation may be adequately met by appointing an Executive Officer for a short period not exceeding 18 months with certain powers to be exercised by him, either in addition to or in exclusion of their, exercise by the committee, the president, vice-president or the secretary, the State Government may properly take action under Section 53-A. On the other hand if the State Government considers, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that the incompetency is much too grave to permit the committee, its president, vice-president or the secretary to function at all, it may take action under S. 57 and dissolve the committee and direct fresh election to take place. In other words incompetency on the part of the committee gives to the State Government an option to apply one of two remedies under the Act, if, that is to say, it considers it necessary to take action at all."

17. It is true that the wordings of the two sections the Supreme Court was considering are not the same as the wordings of the three Sections 67-A, 552 and 553 of the Act which we are considering. But there appears to be no doubt that Section 67-A is less drastic than Section 552 or 553. That is why when power is exercised under Section 552 or 553 it is expressly stated that the State Government has to give its reasons for doing so but when power is exercised under Section 67-A no such reason need be stated. This shows that power under Section 67-A can be exercised in an emergency for temporary periods only and when the emergency comes to an end and the municipality can be put back on its feet the Chairman and the Commissioners would resume their normal function. In meeting an emergency the State Government may take away only some of the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners or may take all the powers of the Chairman and the Commissioners. They would depend on the nature and circumstances of each case depending on public interest to restore the municipality to its normal position. In these circumstances, we are of opinion that the word 'such' in Section 67-A (3) ought not to be given a restricted meaning.

18. Mr. Chatterjee also wanted to argue before us that Section 67-A is violative of the principles of natural justice inasmuch as the power under that section can be exercised without giving an opportunity to the Chairman and the Commissioners of being heard. On this point, Mr. Justice Gupta and Mr. Justice Deb in Sailendra Nath Bhowmik v. State of West Bengal reported in (1974) 78 Cal. WN 686 at p. 694 = (AIR 1974 Cal 363 at p. 368), paragraph 15, have observed:

"It was further contended on behalf of the appellants that the Commissioners of the municipality were entitled to a notice before steps were taken under Section 67-A. This it was argued, was a requirement of the principle of natural justice. On a reading of the provisions of Section 67-A it appears that the State Government has been given the power to act under this section once it has formed an opinion that circumstances exist for the appointment of an executive officer. This is an opinion which does not have to be justified by stating reasons. It seems therefore that the section by necessary implication excludes the rule of natural justice requiring notice to be given to the persons affected."

19. This point was also taken before the Division Bench of Mr. Justice A. N. Sen and Mr. Justice S. K. Hazra in State of West Bengal v. Surendra Nath Mondal, ((1974) 78 Cal. WN 988). Mr. Justice Sen in paragraph 32 at page 1004 has refused to go into the question of violation of the principle of natural justice in the absence of proper materials. But Mr. Justice Hazra in paragraph 56 at page 1011 is clearly of opinion that there is no violation of the principles of natural justice when the statute does not require any reasons to be given or any opinion to be formed. The requirement of the principles of natural justice, according to Mr. Justice Hazra, must depend, inter alia, upon circumstances of the case, and also on the rules under which the Tribunal is acting. Mr. Justice Hazra says that Section 67-A, sub-section (3) of the Act does not provide that notice should be given to the Chairman or the Commissioners before conferring powers on the Executive Officer under the notification.

20. It appears therefore that there is no difference of opinion on the question of applicability of the principles of natural justice between the two Division Benches. And this Bench is not competent to determine the question in these circumstances.

21. We therefore express the view that the words 'such powers' in Section 67-A (3) of the Act may include 'all powers' of the Chairman or the Commissioners. In view of this finding the application is dismissed and the Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

22. The interim orders, if any, are vacated.

A. F. O. O. Nos. 869 and 100 of 1974, D/- 24-11-1976.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 31 (2) and (3) — Combined effect of — State law providing for compulsory acquisition or requisition of property — Assent of President essential to make it enforceable.

The combined effect of Clause (3) and Clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution is that any law providing for compulsory acquisition or requisition of property passed by the legislature of the State will require reservation for consideration of the President and until the assent of the President has been received such law will not be enforceable. AIR 1952 SC 252 and AIR 1958 SC 468, Rel. on. (Para 4)

(B) West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act (9 of 1967), S. 2 — Amendment of S. 44 (2a), West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 by substituting words 'within 12 years' for 'within 9 years' — Amending Act being inextricably linked up with scheme of acquisition is unenforceable for want of President's assent as required by Art. 31 of the Constitution. AIR 1976 Cal 15, Overruled. (Constitution of India, Article 31 (3)).

The West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (1 of 1954) is undoubtedly an Act which is for compulsory acquisition of property. The W. B. Amendment Act (5 of 1967) merely substituted the period of 12 years to the existing period of 9 years for taking steps by the empowered officer to revise the records finally published in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 44 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. (Para 6)

The record-of-right determines the quantum of land and the particulars of the land to be retained. Such record-of-rights is the basis upon which the quantum and the persons entitled to the compensation for acquisition of properties will have to be determined. The right and extent of retention of land is inextricably linked up with the record-of-rights. The right to obtain compensation and the quantum thereof are also dependent upon the record-of-rights. It follows, therefore, that the procedure and the method for the preparation of the record-of-rights are integral parts of the scheme of acquisition under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. A reading of the different provisions contained in Chapter V of the Act along with the rules namely Rule 25 onwards of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Rules, 1954 leads to that conclusion. AIR 1976 Cal 15, Overruled. (Paras 6, 7)

By the amending Act IX of 1967 there has been an enlargement of the period of time within which the empowered officer can suo motu take steps for revision of the record of rights. Such enlargement of time affects fundamentally the procedure of the rectification of record of rights which is inextricably connected with the scheme of acquisition. Hence the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 being inextricably linked up with the scheme of acquisition comes within the purview of Clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution and without the assent of the President the same is unenforceable. (Para 7)

(C) Constitution of India, Arts. 31 (3) and 201 — West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act (31 of 1969), Section 4 — Amendment of Section 44 (2a) of main Act of 1953 by substituting '15 years' for '12 years' — President having given his assent to 1969 Act must also be deemed to have given his assent to W. B. Act (9 of 1967) effective only from date of assent. (West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 44 (2a) — Amendment of by W. B. Act (9 of 1967) and W. B. Act (31 of 1969)).

In the absence of any rules framed under the Constitution for the manner of giving assent of the President to an Act of the State Legislature can be implied from the conduct. Therefore, when the President in 1969 agreed by giving his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 that the period of time during which the specially empowered officer could take steps for re-opening the proceeding suo motu for rectification of record of rights would be 15 years instead of existing 12 years it must be deemed that he had assented or agreed to the period being 12 years before that assent, otherwise he could not have assented to the substitution of the period of 15 years for the period of 12 years. But the assent of the President to the earlier Act cannot be deemed to have been given at any earlier point of time than when it was actually given.

The President having given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 it can be said that the President has given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act (IX of 1967) and such assent of the President to the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 must be deemed to have been given when the President assented to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969. F. M. A. 869 of 1974.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— The petitioners state that they took raiyati settlement of lands mentioned in paragraph 2 of the petition from the recorded landlords Kartick Chandra Shawoo and Tarit Kumar Ballav. The particulars of the lands have been mentioned in the petition and it is not necessary for the present purpose to refer to the said particulars. As the landlords' right had vested in the State of West Bengal, the petitioners' estate were recorded as raiyati in the current settlement record in respect of said lands mentioned in the petition and a notice under Section 10 (2) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 was served on the landlords and the said landlords had filed an objection petition on the ground that the property in question was tank fishery right and as such excluded from the operation of the Act, that they had submitted requisite returns for the lands in question to keep these in khas. On the 4th of December, 1967 the Revenue Officer specially empowered under Section 44 (2a) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 directed the record of rights and papers to be put up for his examination. On the 5th of December, 1967 on the ground that the classification of lands had been wrongfully recorded for some plots the said officer examined the record of rights and the connected record and papers and passed an order starting suo motu proceedings under Sec. 44 (2a) of the Act for revision of the classification of lands in respect of the above. On the 9th of December, 1967 an order was passed by the said officer for issue of notice upon the recorded tenants to appear before him on 8th of January, 1968 to adduce evidence. It appears that the Revenue Officer passed a final order correcting the records of rights in respect of classification of the said lands on 21st of March, 1968. The petitioners, thereupon, moved this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution and obtained a rule nisi. The petitioners disputed the jurisdiction of the revenue officer to initiate such proceedings under Section 44 (2a) of the said Act. By virtue of Section 2 of the amending Act being West Bengal Act IX of 1967 the time specified in Section 44 (2a) within which such proceeding could be initiated suo motu was extended from 9 years to 12 years. It is not in dispute in this case that but for the period of 12 years the said proceedings could not have been initiated. It was contended on behalf of the petitioners that the said Amending Act IX of 1967 had not been reserved for the consideration of the President and had not received the assent of the President. According to the petitioners the amending Act could not have the effect of law, in view of the provisions contained in the said amending Act without the assent of the President because of Article 31 (3) of the Constitution of India. The petitioners contended that the provisions of Clause (2) of Article 31 would be applicable to the Amending Act and without the assent of the President the said Act could not have been enforced as law. Mr. Justice P. K. Banerjee before whom the matter came up for hearing came to the conclusion that in view of the provisions of West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 and in view of the provisions of the Amending Act IX of 1967 the said Act in order to become enforceable as law required the assent of the President. But Mr. Justice Banerjee was, further, of the opinion that in view of the fact that assent of the President was obtained to the subsequent Amending Act of 1973 which was the West Bengal Act XXXIII of 1973 the defect of assent not being given to the earlier Amendment Act was cured. Mr. Justice Banerjee in coming to the said conclusion relied on the decisions of the Supreme Court in the case of Jawaharlal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1966 SC 764 as well as the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Venkatrao Esajirao Limbkar v. State of Bombay, AIR 1970 SC 126. In the premises the learned Judge dismissed the application and discharged the rule nisi. Being aggrieved by the said decision the petitioners preferred an appeal. The appeal came up for hearing before Mr. Justice Anil K. Sen and Mr. Justice M. N. Roy. After discussing the facts of the case the learned Judges observed that the appeal raised two questions of importance, the decision whereon might lead to far reaching consequences. The questions formulated by the learned Judges of the Division Bench were as follows:—

(a) Whether the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (Amendment Act of 1967) being West Bengal Act IX of 1967 was an Act which required under Article 31 (3) of the Constitution to be reserved for consideration by the President and his assent thereto in order to become law;

(b) Whether the President having given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Amending Act, 1969 and to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Amending Act of 1973, can be said to have given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Amendment Act of 1967 (West Bengal Act IX of 1967) and if so with effect from what date?

In view of the importance of the questions raised the learned Judges of the Division Bench were of the opinion that the matter should be heard by a larger Bench to be constituted by the learned Chief Justice and they reported accordingly. The matter has thus come up for hearing before us.

2. As mentioned hereinbefore it is not in dispute that if the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 had not become enforceable as law the impugned proceedings were beyond time. Section 44 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 which is in the Chapter V of the said Act deals with the draft and final publication of the record of rights. Sub-section (2a) of Section 44 authorises an officer specially empowered by the State Government to revise an entry in the record of rights finally published. Sub-section (2a) as it stands at present is to the following effect:—

“(2a) An officer specially empowered by the State Government may on an application within 9 months, or of his own motion within 21 years from the date of the final publication of the record of rights or from the date of coming into force of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (2nd Amendment) Ordinance, 1957, whichever is later, revise an entry in the record finally published in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) after giving the persons interested an opportunity of being heard and after recording the reasons therefor.”

3. The sub-section contains two provisos which are not material for consideration of the issues before us. Sub-section (2a) was inserted with retrospective effect by Section 7 (a) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (2nd Amendment) Act, 1957 being West Bengal Act XXV of 1957. Originally the power of the officer was limited to nine months, which was extended to six years. Then that was extended to 9 years by Section 9 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1963 — being West Bengal Act XXII of 1963. Thereafter it was, further, extended from the period of 9 years to 12 years by Section 2 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1967 being West Bengal Act IX of 1967. We are concerned in this reference with the effect of the said amendment. It was, further, extended from 12 years to 15 years by the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 being West Bengal Act of 1969. By the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1973 being West Bengal Act 1 of 1973 the period was further extended from 15 years to 18 years and by the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1975 being West Bengal Act XXXI of 1975 the period has now been extended from 18 years to 21 years. The provisions of the various Acts amending the period during which the empowered officer can take action for revision of the record of rights will have to be examined in little more detail. As mentioned hereinbefore the main contention in this reference before us, is, whether the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act IX of 1967 could be enforced as law. The Act in question was passed by the West Bengal Legislature. It received the assent of the Governor and such assent was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the 17th of April, 1967. The Act was, as the preamble indicated, an Act to amend the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. It has three sections, the first dealing with the short title and the second providing for the substitution of the words "within 12 years" for the existing words "within 9 years" in sub-section (2a) of Section 44 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. Section 3 of the said Amending Act repeals the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Ordinance 1966 and saves any action taken pursuant to the said ordinance which had commenced from 1st of November 1966. Thereafter, came the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969. The same was passed by the West Bengal Legislature and received the assent of the President which was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the 3rd of November, 1969. Section 2 of the said Act amended the provisions of Section 6 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 being West Bengal Act 1 of 1954. It is not material or necessary to refer to the said amendment. Section 3 amends Section 42 of the Act in certain manner and Section 4 amended sub-section (2a) of Section 44 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, by substituting 15 years to the then existing period of 12 years. The next amendment was made by the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1973 being West Bengal Act 1 of 1973. The said Act received the assent of the Governor which was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the 6th of March, 1973. Section 2 of the said amending Act substituted the words 'within 18 years' for the expression 'within 15 years'. Section 3 of the said amending Act repealed the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Ordinance of 1972 but saved actions taken under that Ordinance. Thereafter, came the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Second Amendment) Act, 1973. This Act was passed by the West Bengal Legislature and received the assent of the President which was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the 12th of July, 1973. It amended Section 7 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 by Section 2 of the amending Act. By Section 3, sub-section (4) of Section 44 the main Act was amended. It is not necessary to refer to the said amendments. By Section 4 of the amending Act Section 46 of the main Act was omitted. By Section 5 of the amending Act Section 57-B was inserted barring the jurisdiction of the civil courts in respect of certain matters. For the present purposes it is not necessary to refer to the said provisions of amendment. Thereafter, came the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1975 which was passed by the West Bengal Legislature. It received the assent of the President and was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the 30th of June, 1975. By Section 2 of the amending Act Section 10 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 was amended. For the present purpose it is also not relevant to refer to the said amendment. Section 3 of the amending Act amended Section 26 of the main Act. It is also not relevant for the present purpose to refer to the actual provisions of amendment. Section 4 of the amending Act amended sub-section (2a) of Section 44 of the main Act by substituting the words "21 years" for the existing words "18 years."

4. In the aforesaid background of the legislative history of amendments the present questions referred to this Bench will have to be determined. The impugned action has been challenged on the ground that at the relevant time when action was taken in this case namely between 6th of December, 1967 and 21st of March, 1968 the respondent authorities had no right to initiate proceedings for rectification of the record of rights as the said action was taken beyond the period of 9 years. The West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1967 being West Bengal Act IX of 1967 was not enforceable at the time having not received the assent of the President as such the proceedings for re-opening for rectifying the record of rights could not be taken within the period of 12 years. Therefore, the action of the respondent authorities was without the authority of law. The first question, therefore, that requires to be considered is whether West Bengal Act IX of 1967 was an Act which required the assent of the President to be enforceable. Clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution enjoins that no property shall be compulsorily acquired or requisitioned save for a public purpose and save by authority of law which provides for acquisition or requisition of the property for an amount which may be fixed by such law or which may be determined in accordance with such law; and no such law shall be called in question in any Court of law on the ground that the amount so fixed or determined is not adequate or that the whole or any part of such amount is to be given otherwise than in cash. The proviso to clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution is not material for the present purpose. Clause (2a) provides that where a law does not provide for the transfer of the ownership or right of possession to any property to the State or to a corporation owned or controlled by the State it shall not be deemed to provide for the compulsory acquisition or requisitions of the property, notwithstanding that it deprives any person of his property. Clause (3) of Article 31 enjoins that no law as is referred to in clause (2) made by the Legislature of a State shall have effect unless such law, having been reserved for the consideration of the President, has received his assent. The combined effect of Clause (3) and Clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution is that any law providing for compulsory acquisition or requisition of property passed by the Legislature of the State will require reservation for consideration of the President and until the assent of the President has been received such law will not be enforceable. In the case of State of Bihar v. Kameshwar

Singh, AIR 1952 SC 252 at page 304 of the report the Supreme Court had occasion to examine the provision of Cl. (3) of Article 31 of the Constitution. S. R. Das, J., as the learned Chief Justice then was, explained the meaning of the expression 'law' in Clause (3) of Article 31 of the Constitution. The learned Judge observed at page 305 of the report that the procedure to be followed if a Bill was passed by the State Assembly was laid down in Article 200. Under that article the Governor can do one of the three things, namely, he may declare that he assents to it, in which case the Bill becomes a law, or he may declare that he withholds assent therefrom in which case the Bill falls through unless the procedure indicated in the proviso is followed or he may declare that he reserves the Bill for the consideration of the President, in which case the President will adopt the procedure laid down in Article 201. Under that article the President shall declare either that he assents to the Bill in which case the Bill will become law or that he withholds assent therefrom in which case the Bill falls through unless the procedure indicated in the proviso is followed. A Bill passed by the State Assembly may become the law if the Governor gives his assent to it or if, having been reserved by the Governor for the consideration of the President, it is assented to by the President. The learned Judge, further, observed that the question whether the requirements of Article 31 (3) have been complied with will arise only when the State purports to acquire the property of any person under any law and that person denies that the asserted law has any effect. It is at that point of time that the Court has to ask itself "is it a law which having been reserved for the consideration of the President has received his assent". It is in this sense that the word 'law' has been used in Clause (3) of Art. 31 of the Constitution. In other words the word 'law' has been used to mean what at the time of the dispute purports to be or is asserted to be the law. The learned Judge went on to explain that Article 200 of the Constitution did not contemplate a second reservation which would be necessary if initially the Governor instead of himself assenting to the Bill had reserved it for the consideration of the President. In the case of Sundararamier and Company v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1958 SC 468 the Supreme Court observed at page 489 of the report that in considering the question as to the effect of the unconstitutionality of a statute it is necessary to remember that unconstitutionality might arise either because the law is in respect of a matter not within the competence of the Legislature, or because the matter itself being within its competence its provisions offend constitutional restrictions. A legislation on a topic not within the competence of the Legislature and the legislation within its competence but violative of constitutional limitations have both the same reckoning in a Court of Law; they are both of them unenforceable but it does not follow from this that both the laws are of the same quality and character and stand on the same footing for all purposes. While a law on a matter not within the competence of the Legislature is a nullity, a law on a topic within its competence but repugnant to the constitutional prohibitions is only unenforceable. If a law is on a field not within the domain of the Legislature, it is absolutely null and void, and a subsequent cession of that field to the Legislature will not have the effect of breathing life into what was a still-born piece of legislation and a fresh legislation on the subject would be required. But if the law is in respect of a matter assigned to the Legislature but its provisions disregard constitutional prohibitions, though the law would be unenforceable by reason of these prohibitions, when once they are removed the law will become effective without re-enactment.

5. Counsel in this connection also drew our attention to the observations to the similar effect in the case of Kodarap Laxmiah v. Hyderabad State, AIR 1955 Hyd 41. Inasmuch as the observations were made in the context of different facts and different question we do not feel it necessary to refer to the same in detail. Similar observations, that law which requires the assent of the President to be enforceable is not enforceable unless such assent is obtained, were made in the case of Rameshwar Kumar v. R. P. Mishra, AIR 1959 Pat 488 in a Bench decision of the Patna High Court. The Andhra Pradesh High Court in the case of Inamdars of Sulhagar Colony v. Government of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1961 Andh Pra 523 was dealing with the Hyderabad Tenancy and Agricultural Land Act, 1950. The said Act contained provisions bearing on the acquisition and requisition of lands. The Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court was of the view that the Act came within the purview of Article 31 of the Constitution and was inoperative as it had not been reserved for the consideration of the President and had not received his assent. Counsel for the petitioner drew our attention to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mahant Sankarshan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1967 SC 59; there the Supreme Court observed that the benefit of Article 31-A of the Constitution would be available not only to those laws which by themselves provided for compulsory acquisition of property for public purpose but also to laws amending such laws, provided the assent of the President was obtained to such amending Act. It was to be presumed that the President gave his assent to the amending Act in its relation to the Act it sought to amend and this was more so when by the amending law the provisions of the earlier law relating to compulsory acquisition of property for public purpose were sought to be extended to new kinds of properties. In assenting to such law the President assented to new categories of properties being brought within the operation of the existing law and he in effect assented to law for the compulsory acquisition for public purpose of these new categories of property. The Supreme Court observed that the assent of the President to the Orissa Estates Abolition (Amendment) Act, 1954 amending the Orissa Estates Abolition Act (Act 1 of 1952) brought the same under the protection of Article 31-A as a necessary consequence. The amending Act, according to the Supreme Court, should be considered in relation to the old law which it had sought to extend and the President assented to such an extension or in other words to a law for the compulsory acquisition of the property for public purpose. Our attention was also drawn to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of S. N. Medhi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1992, but the said decision does not carry the point any further.

6. The first question, therefore, is whether the West Bengal Act IX of 1969 comes within the purview of Clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution? We have noticed the provisions of the said Act. The West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 being West Bengal Act 1 of 1954 is undoubtedly an Act which is for compulsory acquisition of property. The question, however, is whether the provisions of the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 are inextricably linked up with the said acquisition of property under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. The said amending Act merely substituted the period of 12 years to the existing period of 9 years for taking steps by the empowered officer to revise the records finally published in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 44 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. Section 44 is in Chapter V of the said Act. Chapter V of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 deals with the preparation of the record-of-rights. Section 39 being the first section in Chapter V empowers the State Government for carrying out the purposes of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 to make an order directing that the record of rights might be prepared or revised in accordance with the provision of said Chapter V and such rules as may have been made by the State Government. The importance of the record-of-rights for implementing the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 cannot be over emphasized. The record-of-right determines the quantum of land and the particulars of the land to be retained. Such record-of-rights is the basis upon which the quantum and the persons entitled to the compensation for acquisition of properties will have to be determined. The right and extent of retention of land is inextricably linked up with the record-of-rights.

7. The right to obtain compensation and the quantum thereof are also dependent upon the record-of-rights. It follows, therefore, that the procedure and the method for the preparation of the record-of-rights are integral parts of the scheme of acquisition under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. A reading of the different provisions contained in Chapter V of the Act along with the rules namely Rule 23 onwards of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Rules, 1954 leads to that conclusion. In the case of Chabiran Bibi v. State, AIR 1976 Cal 15 a Division Bench of this Court observed that an order under Section 39 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 directing the record of rights to be prepared in respect of any district or part of a district was made only after the vesting of the estates. Preparation of record of rights, according to the said Bench decision, followed vesting and reflected the position after vesting. The revision of an entry in the record of right under Section 44 (2a) was permissible only to correct an existing error in the record so that the true position resulting from the acquisition of the estate was reflected in the record-of-rights. Section 44 (2a) thus not being, according to the Division Bench, inextricably connected with the object of the Act nor being an integral part of the machinery of acquisition was not invalid simply because the amending Act IX of 1967 had not been assented to by the President. As we have noticed before, preparation of record-of-rights, under the scheme of the Act, is inextricably connected with the machinery of acquisition as also with the object of acquisition. Therefore, in so far as the Division Bench held that Section 44 (2a) was not inextricably connected with the object of the Act nor was an integral part of machinery of acquisition, we are, with respect, unable to agree with the said view of the Division Bench. But this conclusion by itself does not solve the question whether the amending Act IX of 1967 not having received the assent of the President was enforceable. Though the preparation and the authority to revise the record of rights by the specially empowered officer are integral parts in the scheme of acquisition embodied in the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 the question remains whether an Act enlarging or curtailing the period of time during which such action could be taken is also an integral part of the scheme of acquisition engrafted in the main Act. In the case of S. Ahmed v. State of Mysore, AIR 1975 SC 1443 the Supreme Court had to consider this aspect of the matter in connection with the Mysore Silk Worm Seed and Cocoon (Regulation of Production, Supply and Distribution) (Amendment) Act, 1969. The Supreme Court found that the principal Act had the sanction of the President and enabled orders to be passed which had the force of law enabling restrictions to be imposed and was covered by the purposes of the Act. The amendment only varied the form of restrictiveness without appreciably adding to its context, the amendment did not go beyond a regulation which was fully authorised by the language of the provisions of the Principal Act. Even any additional licence involved did not go beyond the purview of the provisions of the Principal Act and the rules framed thereunder. The mere change in form was from statutory rules to statutory provisions. It was only an additional restriction from the special point of view of Article 304 (b) of the Constitution which required presidential sanction. As noticed before the facts of the instant case are distinctly different from the facts before the Supreme Court. By the amending Act IX of 1967 there has been an enlargement of the period of time within which the empowered officer can suo motu take steps for revision of the record of rights. Such enlargement of time affects fundamentally the procedure of the rectification of record of rights which is inextricably connected with the scheme of acquisition. In the case of Damodar Valley Corporation v. State of Bihar, AIR 1976 SC 1956 the Supreme Court had occasion to consider the effect of Clause (2) of Article 288 of the Constitution. Clause (1) of Article 288 of the Constitution deals with the exemption from taxation by States in respect of water or electricity in certain cases. Clause (2) of Article 288 provides that the Legislature of a State may by law impose or authorise the imposition of any such tax as is mentioned in Clause (1) but no such law shall have any effect unless it has received the assent of the President and if any such law provides for the fixation of the rates and other incidents of such tax by means of rules or orders to be made under the law by any authority, the law shall provide for the previous consent of the President being obtained to the making of such rule or order. The Supreme Court observed that it was not the effect of that clause that even if the requirements of two conditions mentioned in that clause were satisfied, the provisions which merely dealt with the manner and mode of payment of the aforesaid tax should also receive the assent of the President. In our view, however, the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 being, inextricably linked up with the scheme of acquisition comes within the purview of Clause (2) of Article 31 of the Constitution and without the assent of the President the same is unenforceable. The question No. (a) formulated by the referring Division Bench must, therefore, be answered in the affirmative.

8. The next question that requires consideration, is, whether the subsequent amending Act having received the assent of the President, can it be said that the President has given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1967 and if so with effect from what date.

9. After the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 the next amendment was by the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 being West Bengal Act XXXI of 1969; the said amending Act received the assent of the President. By Section 4 of the Amending Act sub-section (2a) of Section 44 of the main Act has been amended by substituting 15 years for 12 years. Thereafter, the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1973 was passed by the West Bengal Legislature. The said Act received the assent of the Governor only. Section 2 of the said Act substituted 18 years for 15 years in sub-section (2a) of Section 44 of the main Act has been amended by substituting 15 years for 12 years. Thereafter, the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1973 was passed by the West Bengal Legislature. The said Act received the assent of the Governor only. Section 2 of the said Act substituted 18 years for 15 years in sub-section (2a) of Section 44 of the main Act. But as mentioned hereinbefore the said amending Act being West Bengal Act I of 1973 did not receive the assent of the President. There was another amending Act in 1973 being West Bengal Estates Acquisition (2nd Amendment) Act, 1973—West Bengal Act XXXIII of 1973. Though the said Act had received the assent of the President the said Act did not contain any provision for extending the period of time during which the specially empowered officer could take steps to revise the record of rights. Therefore, for the purpose of considering the present question the said 2nd amendment Act may be ignored. In the premises the only material question, is, whether the President having given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 can it be presumed that the President has given his assent to the West Bengal Act IX of 1967?

10. Assent implies consent or in other words when the Constitution requires the assent of the President to a particular Bill either to become a law or for a particular Act to be enforceable, it requires that President must consent or agree to that. Assent can be express or implied. There is no specific mode of giving the assent. We enquired from counsel at the Bar whether there are any rules of business or any other rules framed under the Constitution indicating in what manner the assent of the President should be obtained whenever it is necessary.

No such rules were brought to our notice. Assent can therefore be implied from the conduct. Therefore, when the President in 1969 agreed by giving his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 that the period of time during which the specially empowered officer could take steps for re-opening the proceeding suo motu for rectification of record of rights would be 15 years instead of existing 12 it must be deemed that he had assented or agreed to the period being 12 years before that assent, otherwise he could not have assented to the substitution of the period of 15 years for the period of 12 years. This question was considered by the Supreme Court in the case of Jawaharlal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1966 SC 764. There the Supreme Court dealing with Article 255 observed at page 769 of the report that in the case of laws to which Article 255 of the Constitution applied the assent of the President given after the Act was passed served to cure the infirmity arising from the initial non-compliance with its provisions. In other words, an Act passed without obtaining the previous assent of the President does not become void by reason of the said infirmity; it might be said to be unenforceable until the assent was secured. Assuming such a law was otherwise valid, its validity could not be challenged only on the ground that the assent of the President had not been obtained earlier as required by the other relevant provisions of the Constitution. The said infirmity is cured by the subsequent assent and the law would become enforceable. As to the period of time when the President can be deemed to have given his assent the Supreme Court observed at p. 771 of the report that the assent of the President cannot by any legislative process be deemed to have been given to an earlier Act at a time when in fact it was not so given. The Supreme Court observed that in this context there was no scope for any retrospective deeming provision with regard to the assent of the President. We may emphasize that as the Legislature was incompetent to deem that the President had given his assent to an earlier Act at a time when in fact it was not so given, and are the courts of law incompetent by the process of interpretation to deem that the assent of the President was given to an earlier Act at a point of time when in fact it was not so given. It follows, therefore, that by subsequent assent to a subsequent Act if the facts and circumstances of the case so justify it can be deemed that the President has given his assent to an earlier Act but such assent must be deemed to have been given on the date when the subsequent Act received the assent required. In this connection reference may be made to the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Venkatrao v. State of Bombay AIR 1970 SC 126 at p. 129 of the report where the Supreme Court observed as follows:—

“Now the question of lack of assent of the President was never pressed before the High Court, nor have we been invited to examine it. We would, however, like to observe that, as noticed before, when Hyderabad Amending Act III of 1954 was enacted the assent of the President was duly obtained. Similarly when Bombay Act XXXII of 1958 which was meant for amending Hyderabad Act XXI of 1950 was enacted the assent of the President had been given. If the assent of the President had been accorded to the amending Acts, it would be difficult to hold that the President had never assented to the parent Act, namely, Hyderabad Act XXI of 1950. Even if such assent had not been accorded earlier it must be taken to have been granted when Amending Act III of 1954 was assented to.” For the aforesaid reasons we are of the opinion that the President, having given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969 it can be said that the President has given his assent to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1967 being the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 and such assent of the President to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1967 being West Bengal Act IX of 1967 must be deemed to have been given when the President assented to the West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1969.

11. The Division Bench has referred this appeal to the Special Bench and according to the relevant Rule we have to dispose of the appeal as a whole. Therefore, we have to consider whether the order of Mr. Justice P. K. Banerjee discharging the rule nisi has to be altered or upheld. Before Mr. Justice Banerjee only one contention was urged namely, that the proceedings initiated were at a point of time when the West Bengal Act IX of 1967 was unenforceable and, therefore, the officer, concerned had no jurisdiction.

12. In the view we have taken when the suo motu proceedings for rectification of the record of rights were taken the said proceedings were beyond time and as such without jurisdiction. The subsequent assent of the President to the subsequent amending Act can only be effective from the date of the subsequent assent to the subsequent amending Act. Inasmuch as the said proceedings have been initiated before that date, it must be held the said proceedings and the impugned order are without jurisdiction. In the aforesaid view of the matter, the appeal is accordingly allowed. The said proceedings and the rectification order in Case No. 86 of 1967 mentioned in the petition are hereby quashed and set aside. The respondents, however, will be at liberty to take fresh proceedings in accordance with law. There will be no order as to costs.

F. M. A. 100/74.

13. In view of the judgment and order passed today in F. M. A. 869 of 1974 (Ananda Kumar Chakraborty v. State of West Bengal), this appeal is also allowed. The proceedings under Sec. 44 (2a) are quashed with liberty to the respondents to proceed afresh in accordance with law. There will be no order as to costs.

Sm. Biva Banerjee and another, Appellants v. Manmatha Nath Banerjee, Respondent.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 33 — Suit for eviction decreed — Remand by appellate court only in the question of ownership of plaintiff in respect of suit premises — Appeal — Defendant raising the plea that plaintiff was benamidar — Such plea not raised in pleading but sought to be raised on the basis of evidence of plaintiff — Absence of any issue

— Such plea not allowed to be raised — Remand order, held, was uncalled for — AIR 1963 SC 1516, Rel. on. (Para 11)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 96, 100 and 101 — Question of fact and question of law — Commencement of tenancy is not a pure question of law — It cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in appeal — Especially when there is no pleading to that effect. AIR 1973 Cal 515, Ref. (Para 7)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 33 and 4 — Scope — Provisions to be liberally construed — Power to be used sparingly and is to be exercised to do complete justice.

Per R. Bhattacharya, J.—

Rule 33 of O. 41 should be liberally construed to give effect in practice to secure ends of justice and also for doing complete justice between the parties after proper adjudication of the disputes raised. This wide and special power under R. 33 of Order 41 should be used sparingly and with great caution by the appellate Court under special circumstances only when the Court's conscience will not be at rest unless it gives relief under Rule 33. The Court should see that by the relief granted under this provision, no party gets an unreasonable and undue advantage to make up his deficiency in the litigation. (Para 16)

(D) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 33 and O. 42, R. 1 — Applicability of O. 41, R. 33 in Letters Patent Appeal. (Letters Patent (Cal.), Cl. 15).

Per R. Bhattacharya, J.:

The High Court in Letters Patent appeal can apply O. 41, R. 33 in suitable cases. Order 41 of the C. P. Code relates to appeals from Original Decree, O. 42, R. 1 says that rules of Order 41 shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from appellate decrees. According to Clause 15 of the Letters Patent for the Calcutta High Court, an appeal lies from the judgment of the appellate Court as indicated therein. 'Decree' being but a formal expression of the adjudication in the judgment it is, therefore, not distinct from the judgment of the court in an appeal. Judgment of an appeal means a judgment and/or a decree based thereon. Judgment for the purpose of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent includes a decree. Where Letters Patent appeal is against the decision in a first appeal the provisions of Order 41 including R. 33 shall be applicable in the appeal by virtue of

B. K. Bhose, Dilip Kumar Banerjee (No. 2) and P. C. Matilal, for Appellants; Tarak Nath Roy and Sankarlal Seal, for Respondent.

A. K. JANAH, J.:— This appeal is on behalf of the tenants-defendants and it arises out of a suit for ejectment instituted by the landlord-respondent on the ground of reasonable requirement for his own use and occupation and also for the use and occupation of the members of his family. The suit premises consists of the north and western portion of premises No. 198, Upper Circular Road. Originally the defendants' father Bipin Krishan Banerjee was a tenant in respect of the disputed premises under the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiff. The plaintiff purchased premises No. 198, Upper Circular Road by a registered sale deed dated December 14, 1949 and became the owner of the said premises. The father of the defendant held the disputed premises at a monthly rent of Rs. 57.50 payable according to English Calendar month.

2. The plaintiff's case is that he purchased the disputed premises for his own use and occupation and for the use and occupation of the members of his family. It is alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff has a joint family dwelling house at 195, Upper Circular Road which is just in front of the disputed premises. It is stated that the plaintiff has six brothers and each brother has a large family. The total number of rooms in the said joint family dwelling house is not sufficient to accommodate the families of the plaintiff and his brothers. It is alleged that for want of accommodation the plaintiff is compelled to live in the house of his wife's brother at 271, Kalighat Road. His possession in the said house is merely permissive. The plaintiff has two sons, one of whom is married and the other is of marriageable age. The plaintiff's son's wife is compelled to live at her father's house since her marriage on account of want of accommodation. The family of the plaintiff consists of himself, his wife, two sons, wife of the eldest son and one unmarried deformed daughter and one married daughter. The defence of the defendants is a denial of the plaintiff's reasonable requirement for his own use and occupation and for the use and occupation for the members of his family. The defendants allege that the plaintiff is the owner of premises Nos. 8A and 8C, Rashbehari Avenue which stand in the names of his sons.

3. The learned Judge in the trial court upon a consideration of the evidence adduced in the case decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff. Against the said decision the defendants preferred an appeal, being F. A. No. 665 of 1972, to this Court. The appeal came up for hearing before Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. who affirmed the finding of the trial court with regard to plaintiff's reasonable requirement of the disputed premises for the plaintiff's own use and occupation and for the use and occupation of the members of his family, but remanded the suit to the trial court for a consideration of the question as to whether the plaintiff is the owner of the premises in question. His Lordship directed that in case the answer is in the affirmative, the trial court will grant a decree for eviction. On the other hand if the answer be in the negative the plaintiff's suit shall be dismissed. Against this decision of Chittatosh Mookherjee, J., the defendants have filed this Letters Patent Appeal.

4. Mr. Bhose, learned Advocate appearing in support of the appeal has argued in the first place, that the requirement of clause (ff) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Act') was not satisfied in the present case and as such the finding of the appellate court that the plaintiff reasonably requires the suit premises for his own use and occupation cannot be sustained. Mr. Bhose drew our attention to the statements made in paragraph 11 of the plaint to the effect that the plaintiff has no other house of his own in Calcutta, and contended that this averment is not sufficient for the purpose of clause (ff) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Act, inasmuch as, the said clause contemplates 'any reasonably suitable accommodation'. According to Mr. Bhose what the plaintiff is required to allege and to prove is that he has no other reasonably suitable accommodation. Such accommodation need not necessarily be in a house exclusively owned by the plaintiff. Mr. Bhose wanted to contend that since the plaintiff, according to his own case, had been living in his brother-in-law's house at Kalighat Road and since his son's wife was living in her father's house since her marriage, such accommodation was reasonably suitable accommodation within the meaning of clause (ff) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Act. We are unable to accept this contention of Mr. Bhose. In our view the averment made in paragraph 11 of the plaint is quite sufficient for the purpose of clause (ff). Moreover, in view of the concurrent finding of fact arrived at by the two courts below we do not think that we would be justified in this appeal to go into the question as to whether the plaintiff was in possession of any other reasonably suitable accommodation.

5. The next contention advanced on behalf of the appellants is that on the application filed on behalf of the defendants on 7th December, 1970 an additional issue, being issue No. 7, was framed on the 8th December, 1970. The said additional issue is as follows:

"Additional Issue No. 7:

Does the plaintiff reasonably require the premises for the use and occupation of his two sons and wife of one of the sons?"

It was pointed out that in the judgment of the trial court the issues which have been set out do not contain the aforesaid additional issue No. 7. It was argued that this omission on the part of the learned Judge in the trial court has resulted in one of the important aspects of the case being left out of consideration altogether. From the judgment of the trial court it appears, however, that although this issue was not specifically mentioned, the learned Judge considered the question of accommodation of the plaintiff and the members of his family or his two sons for the matter of that, at premises No. 8/A and 8/C, Rashbehari Avenue. The learned Judge has considered the evidence adduced in the suit in so far as the accommodation in the said premises is concerned, and has come to the conclusion that in so far as premises No. 8/C, Rashbehari Avenue is concerned there is no evidence as to who is the owner of the same. In so far as premises No. 8/A, Rashbehari Avenue is concerned the finding is that the said house does not belong to the plaintiff but it belongs to his son. These findings of the trial court have been affirmed by the first appellate court and we find no reason not to accept the said findings. If the plaintiff's son owns a house of his own that will not disentitle the plaintiff from claiming a decree for eviction on the ground of reasonable requirement for himself and the members of his family, including such a son. It was also argued on behalf of the appellants that the requirement of the two sons of the plaintiff and the wife of one of the sons is not the plaintiff's requirement in the present case in view of the fact that the sons have a separate house of their own and they are not going to come back and live with the plaintiff as members of his family. There is no evidence in the case that the sons are not coming to live with the father in the father's house. It cannot, therefore, be held merely on the basis of this suggestion made from the Bar that the son's requirement in the present case will not amount to the plaintiff's requirement.

6. Mr. Bhose made a grievance that Mookerjee, J. was not right in his view that because the defendants did not follow up their prayer for appointment of a Commissioner for local inspection to ascertain the accommodation available at premises No. 8/A, Rashbehari Avenue it was no longer open to them to agitate that point in the appeal before his Lordship. He contended that the trial court wrongly rejected his client's prayer for local investigation by order dated September 17, 1970. From the judgment of Mookerjee, J. it appears that in the course of the hearing of the appeal his Lordship was prepared to give the defendant another opportunity of having a local inspection of premises No. 8/A, Rashbehari Avenue but the learned Advocate for the defendants-appellants did not press his prayer for local inspection of the said premises. In these circumstances his Lordship was of the view that it was not open to the defendant to make any grievance that the trial court wrongly refused the defendants' prayer for local investigation. It also appears from the order passed by the trial court on September 17, 1970 that on the defendants' prayer a Commissioner was appointed for local inspection and the Commissioner had proceeded with his work to some extent, but ultimately the defendants themselves applied before the trial court for withdrawal of their application for local inspection. The writ issued to the Commissioner was accordingly recalled by the trial court. After the writ was recalled the defendants filed a fresh application for appointment of a Commissioner for local investigation. This prayer was rejected by the trial court. Mookerji, J. took into consideration this fact and came to the conclusion that in the circumstances the application for local investigation was rightly rejected by the trial court. We do not see how any exception can be taken to the view which Mookerjee J. took on this aspect of the case. Mr. Bhose drew our attention to the trial court's order dated April 16, 1970 and contended that the prayer made by his clients was wrongly rejected by the trial court and Mookerjee J. did not consider this aspect of the matter. The prayers made by the defendants before the trial court were as follows:

1. That the plaintiff may be directed to arrange for the production of the original map of premises No. 8/A, Rashbehari Avenue which does not belong to the plaintiff; and

2. That the plaintiff may be directed to cause the presence of all tenants and occupiers of the aforesaid premises with their respective rent receipts and ration cards at the time of local inspection.

This prayer was rejected by the trial court on the ground that the premises No. 8/A, Rashbehari Avenue admittedly does not belong to the plaintiff and that the tenants of the said premises who were not parties to the suit could not be compelled to produce rent receipts and ration cards. In our view this extraordinary prayer made by the defendants was rightly rejected by the trial court.

7. The next point canvassed on behalf of the appellants is that the predecessor-in-interest of the defendants was originally a tenant in the disputed premises under the plaintiff's vendor. It was contended that after the disputed house was purchased by the plaintiff a new tenancy came into existence and that tenancy is not in accordance with the English Calendar. In support of this proposition reliance was placed on behalf of the appellants upon the case of Bimalendu Bhusan Das v. Firm Mitra and Ghosh, AIR 1973 Cal 515. In our view the appellants cannot be permitted to raise this point at this stage. In the written statement no such averment was made. No issue was framed in the trial court regarding the commencement of the tenancy. It is true that the appellants tried to raise this point in the appeal before Chittatosh Mookerjee J. But his Lordship rightly held that the appellants in the circumstances of the present case could not be permitted to raise this point as the question as to the commencement of the tenancy is not a pure question of law. In order to determine such a point facts must be gone into, and there must be evidence on record upon which the court has to come to its conclusion. In the present case as there was no averment in the written statement and as there was no issue framed on this question the trial court had no occasion to consider the point which was sought to be raised in the appeal. The decision in Bimalendu Bhusan's case (supra) is distinguishable on facts. There it was found that by a mutual agreement dated 20th September 1965 there was a privity of contract between the parties establishing a new tenancy running from the 20th day of the English Calendar month. On that finding Amarendra Roy J. held that the ejectment notice was invalid and it did not terminate the tenancy. In the present case it was nowhere pleaded by the defendants that there was any fresh agreement between the plaintiff and the defendants' predecessor altering the date of commencement of the tenancy. If there was no fresh contract between the parties creating a fresh tenancy, then the old tenancy under the plaintiff's vendor would continue and the notice served in the present case would be quite sufficient and valid.

8. Lastly, it was urged on behalf of the appellants that the ejectment notice dated 19th December, 1966 served by the plaintiff-landlord upon the defendants terminating their tenancy on the expiry of the last day of January, 1967 is invalid inasmuch as there was an earlier ejectment notice dated 16th February, 1957 which was served by the plaintiff-landlord. In the present case the plaintiff landlord previously issued a notice dated 16th February, 1957 purporting to determine the tenancy of the predecessor-in-interest of the defendants. Upon the service of that notice the plaintiff brought the suit No. 1123 of 1957 in the City Civil Court for eviction of the tenant on the ground of reasonable requirement. The suit was decreed by the trial court. Bipin Krishna, the predecessor-in-interest of the defendants in the present case preferred an appeal against the said decree but it was dismissed by the learned Chief Judge, Small Cause Court, Calcutta. There was a second appeal to this Court during the pendency of which the original tenant died and the present appellants were substituted in his place. This Court held that the appeal preferred before the Court of Small Causes was not maintainable. Thereafter the memorandum of appeal was taken back from the lower appellate court and it was re-filed in this Court and it was registered as F. A. 61 of 1966. The Division Bench hearing that appeal was of the opinion that the notice dated 16th February, 1957 was not in compliance with the requirement of Section 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. Their Lordships without expressing any opinion on the other points involved in the appeal allowed the appeal on the said ground alone and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff thereafter issued a fresh notice dated 19th December, 1966 and on the basis of that notice had brought the present suit out of which this appeal arises. The contention advanced on behalf of the appellants that the present notice is invalid cannot be accepted for the simple reason that after this Court had dismissed the earlier suit the tenancy of the defendants continued and therefore the plaintiff could not institute a suit for eviction without determining the tenancy. The earlier notice dated 16th February, 1957 became ineffective by reason of the decision of this Court in F. A. 61 of 1966. No fresh suit could have been filed on the basis of that notice. Moreover, that notice was found to be defective and, therefore, no suit for eviction could be filed on the basis of that notice. Learned Advocate for the appellants relied upon the case of Tayebali Jafarbhay Tankiwala v. M/s. Ahsan and Co., AIR 1971 SC 102 in support of his contention. In that case the landlord gave a first notice to quit on the ground of arrears of rent. The tenant did not vacate in spite of that notice. Thereafter a second notice was served after about a year demanding rent for the period between the first notice and the second notice. In a suit for ejectment the landlord claimed damages for use and occupation for the period subsequent to the second notice which showed that the landlord had made a distinction between the rent and damages for use and occupation. It was held that the first notice was waived and the landlord had treated the tenancy as subsisting. In our view, this decision is of little assistance to the appellants in the present case.

9. During the course of hearing of the appeal, a question arose as to whether in the event of the appeal being ultimately dismissed and the order of remand passed by Mookerji, J. being set aside a decree for partial eviction could be passed in favour of the landlord. Mr. Bhose, learned Advocate for the appellants stated before us that in such an event his clients were prepared to have a decree of partial eviction being passed against them. By consent of both parties we, therefore, by our order dated 5th August, 1976 appointed a learned Advocate of this Court to hold a local inspection of the disputed premises to ascertain certain points as mentioned in the said order, with a view to decide whether a decree for partial eviction could be passed in the present case. The learned Advocate Commissioner submitted his report dated 10th August, 1976 together with a sketch map. The said report and the map were accepted by both parties and the learned Advocates for the appellants as well as the respondent referred to the same in support of their respective contentions. It appears from the said report and the map that although there are a number of rooms in the ground floor besides the rooms on the second floor, most of the rooms in the ground floor are in a dilapidated and dangerous condition and those are not fit for human habitation. After having carefully considered the said report and the map and the contentions of the respective parties we have come to the conclusion that it is not possible in the present case to pass a decree for partial eviction.

10. The only point which remains for our consideration in this appeal is whether the order of remand made by Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. should be allowed to stand or whether we would dispose of the entire suit ourselves in this appeal. Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. affirmed the finding of the trial court with regard to the reasonable requirement of the plaintiff but his Lordship has remanded the suit to the trial court with a direction to decide whether the plaintiff was the owner of the disputed premises. At the hearing of the appeal before his Lordship learned Advocate for the appellants raised a contention that the plaintiff in his evidence before the trial court stated that the premises No. 99/2, Hazra Road which belonged to his wife was sold, and with the sale proceeds the plaintiff purchased the disputed premises. It was contended on behalf of the defendants-appellants that the plaintiff did not adduce any evidence whether the sale proceeds of 99/2 Hazra Road had been gifted to him by his wife. Mookerjee J. took the view that the trial court was not right in coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff was the owner of the suit premises, and he therefore, remanded the suit to the trial court on that point alone.

11. In paragraph 1 of the plaint the plaintiff stated that the plaintiff became the owner of the disputed premises by purchase on December 14, 1949. To this averment made in paragraph 1 of the plaint the averment in paragraph 2 of the written statement is that the plaintiff is not the sole owner of the disputed premises. The defendants do not mention who else are the owners of the disputed premises along with the plaintiff. There is no dispute that the registered sale deed dated, 14th December, 1949 stands in the name of the plaintiff. The contention that the plaintiff is not the owner of the property has been raised on the basis of a statement made by the plaintiff in his evidence to the effect that the house at 99/2, Hazra Road belonged to his wife and that house was sold in 1944. With the sale proceeds of that house the plaintiff purchased the disputed premises. In the absence of any pleading the defendants cannot be permitted to set up a new case. In our view, the trial court was right in pointing out that the defendants cannot be permitted to say that the plaintiff is merely a benamdar for his wife in the absence of any pleading to that effect. What the defendants are now trying to say is that although the disputed premises stand in the name of the plaintiff the real purchaser is his wife and the plaintiff is merely a benamdar. The defendants cannot be permitted to make out such a case by utilising the statement made by the plaintiff in his evidence when there is no such pleading in the written statement and when there is no specific issue to the effect that the plaintiff is a benamdar of his wife. On the other hand, upon the defendants' pleading as contained in paragraph 2 of the written statement the issue was raised as to whether the plaintiff is the sole owner of the disputed premises and is the plaintiff alone entitled to sue. Amongst the other issues the parties went to trial on this issue. So far as this issue is concerned there is no material on record to hold that there are any other owners of the disputed premises who ought to have been joined as plaintiffs in the suit. That being the position we do not think that an order of remand on a point as has been made in the present case was called for. We, therefore, in exercise of the power conferred upon an appellate court by Order 41, Rule 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure set aside the order of remand passed by Mookerjee, J. and decree the suit in favour of the plaintiff. We are supported in this view by a decision of the Supreme Court in Pannalal v. The State of Bombay, AIR 1963 SC 1516.

12. For the reasons mentioned above this appeal is dismissed. The order of remand passed by the first appellate court is set aside and the decree of the trial court is restored. In the circumstances of the case we make no order as to costs in this appeal.

13. In view of the fact that the defendants have been residing in the disputed premises for a long time we allow them time, at first instance, upto the 15th November, 1976. If within that period they file a written undertaking to this Court to vacate the disputed premises and deliver up vacant and peaceful possession to the plaintiff the time will be extended till the 31st March, 1977 provided however they go on depositing the current damages or mesne profits at an amount equivalent to the rate of rent month by month within the 15th of next succeeding month in the trial court. In default, of such deposit or deposits being made the decree will become executable forthwith. If the deposits are made as aforesaid the plaintiff would be entitled to withdraw the same without security.

14. In view of the order which we have made it is not necessary for us to pass any separate order on the application under Order 41, Rule 27 filed on behalf of the respondent. The said application stands disposed of.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— 15. I agree but I add to what my learned brother has said on the question whether we can interfere with and set aside the limited order for remand passed in the first appeal by Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. for the decision by the trial court whether or not the plaintiff was the owner of the suit premises No. 198, Upper Circular Road.

16. It is needless to state the cases of the parties elaborately as they have been dealt with by my learned brother. The plaintiff as landlord has brought the action in ejectment against his tenants on the allegation that he purchased the premises for the purpose of the use and occupation of himself and the members of his family. He now reasonably requires the premises for such use and occupation and the suit has been started. The defence case is the denial of the reasonable requirement. The ground for eviction has been accepted by both the trial and the appellate courts. The first appellate court, however, sent back the case to the trial court to decide the question whether the plaintiff was the real owner of the suit premises or whether the money with which the property was purchased was made a gift of in favour of the plaintiff by his wife. A question has arisen on the contention of Mr. Bhose whether the plaintiff respondent can object to the order of remand without filing any appeal against the same. There is the provision in Order 41, R. 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with R. 4. The R. 33 should be liberally construed to give effect in practice to secure ends of justice and also for doing complete justice between the parties after proper adjudication of the disputes raised. This wide and special power under Rule 33 of Order 41 should be used sparingly and with great caution by the appellate Court under special circumstances only when the Court's conscience will not be at rest unless it gives relief under Rule 33. The Court should see that by the relief granted under this provision, no party gets an unreasonable and undue advantage to make up his deficiency in the litigation.

17. In the instant case we find that the plaintiff asserts in paragraphs 1 and 2 of his plaint that he became the owner of the suit premises by purchase on the basis of a sale deed and that he had 'purchased the premises for the purpose of his and family members' own use and occupation'. Against this statement, the defendants say in paragraph 2 of their written statement. "The defendants do not admit that the plaintiff is sole owner of the house..... and the suit as framed is not maintainable in law and also bad for non-joinder of parties". It is to be particularly noted that the defendants simply denied at best that the plaintiff was the sole owner of the house. They do not assert that the house belonged to several other co-sharers or that the house did not belong to the plaintiff or that the plaintiff purchased the house with money belonging to others. The trial court struck the following relevant issue on the pleadings of the parties.

1. Is the plaintiff the sole owner of premises No. 198, Upper Circular Road, now Prafulla Chandra Road, Calcutta, and is the plaintiff alone entitled to sue?

18. The plaintiff himself gave evidence and he stated that he had purchased the disputed premises by a conveyance dated 14-12-49. One of the defendants Biva Banerji was examined on commission. During the examination-in-chief the question put to her by her own Advocate, was "How long the tenants continued their occupation after the plaintiff became the owner?" and the answer was, 'For about 5/6 years'. The question itself suggested that the plaintiff was the sole owner. There is no indication or suggestion that the plaintiff was not the owner or that there were other co-sharer owners. The following question and answer in course of the examination-in-chief of Biva Banerji should be particularly noted:

Q. Regarding your assumption that the plaintiff does not require the premises for his own use and occupation, have you got anything further to state about it?

Ans. Manmatha Babu has purchased this premises at a very low price. He wants to evict us and sell the property at a higher price.

In view of the evidence of the defendant herself it is clear that the defendants admitted at the time of trial the plaintiff's case that he was the owner of the house by virtue of the purchase. There is no evidence on the side of the defendants that the plaintiff is not the sole owner or that there were other co-owners of the plaintiff in respect of the suit house. Besides the evidence as mentioned above, there is the deed of sale in favour of the plaintiff brought in evidence. In the circumstances the only irresistible and reasonable conclusion would be, as the trial court drew, that the plaintiff is the owner of the suit premises. Chittatosh Mookerjee, J., however, held that the plaintiff should prove that he was the owner of the house before he could get a decree for eviction. In this respect about onus, there is no dispute. Mookerjee, J., however, found that the evidence regarding ownership is inconclusive. His Lordship has felt this as during cross-examination the plaintiff stated that there was a house on Hazra Road belonging to his wife and the said house was sold away. It is also stated that with the money obtained by the sale of that house, the plaintiff had purchased the suit premises. There was no further question put to the plaintiff from the side of the defendant challenging the sole ownership of the plaintiff or suggesting that there were other co-sharers with the plaintiff relating to the suit premises. At the time of argument it was contended by the learned Advocate for the defendants that the plaintiff was the benamdar of his wife as he had purchased the premises with money coming out of sale proceeds of the plaintiff's wife's house. This new case set up at the time of argument contradicts the case of joint ownership of the plaintiff and non-joinder of other necessary parties. This new case was set up at the time of argument on speculation getting the evidence of the plaintiff that he purchased the suit premises with the money he got out of the sale proceeds of his wife's house. There was no suggestion to the plaintiff even that he was the benamdar on behalf of his wife or that the real owner was his wife. Had there been any such case pleaded or even suggested to the plaintiff during cross-examination, the plaintiff could have stated how he became the owner of the said money. In view of the pleadings of the parties and the clinching and unambiguous evidence on record, particularly the admission of the defendant, Biva Banerji regarding the sole ownership of the plaintiff, there was no scope for remanding the case to ascertain whether the suit premises was purchased with the money belonging to the plaintiff's wife. This question of benami is foreign to the pleading of the defendants and without any evidence on the defendants' side ought not to have been considered or allowed to be canvassed either by the trial court or by the appellate court. This order for remand passed by the first appellate court below was against the provision of law and has caused failure of justice. To remedy the injustice done to the plaintiff the order for remand and the connected findings of the first appellate court on issue No. 1 relating to the ownership of the suit premises are liable to be set aside in the exceptional circumstances of this case.

19. The next point that arises is whether the provision as contained in Rule 33 of Order 41 of the Civil Procedure Code is applicable in a Letters Patent Appeal. Order 41 of the C. P. Code relates to appeals from Original Decree. Order 42, Rule 1 says that rules of Order 41 shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from appellate decrees. According to clause 15 of the Letters Patent for the Calcutta High Court, an appeal lies from the judgment of the appellate court as indicated therein. In the present case the first appeal was finally decided by a judgment in favour of the plaintiff-respondent on all points except one which was to be reconsidered by the trial court on remand on taking further evidence to the prejudice of the plaintiff's case. 'Decree' is but a formal expression of the adjudication in the judgment. Decree is, therefore, not distinct from the judgment of the court in an appeal. Judgment of an appeal means a judgment and/or a decree based thereon. Judgment for the purpose of clause 15 of the Letters Patent includes a decree. The present Letters Patent appeal is against the decision in a first appeal and as such the provisions of Order 41 including Rule 33 shall be applicable in this appeal by virtue of Order 42, Rule 1.

20. In this connexion I may refer to the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Sabitri Thakurain v. Savi reported in (1921) 25 Cal WN 557 = (AIR 1921 PC 80). This was an appeal before the Board against the decision passed in a Letters Patent Appeal of this Court. A contention was raised whether the Orders and Rules made under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 had any application to appeals brought under the Letters Patent of 1865 and whether in particular Order 41, Rule 10 applied to such appeals. The decision in that case is as follows:—

"The Orders and Rules made under the Code are, by Section 121, given the same effect as if they had been enacted in the Code, and therefore Order 41, Rule 10, is one of the provisions of the Code. It applies to appeals in the High Court, including the present appeal, unless any particular section of the Act can be found to exclude it."

Considering several provisions of law their Lordships of the Privy Council further held:

"Thus regulations duly made by Orders and Rules under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, are applicable to the jurisdiction exercisable under the Letters Patent, except that they do not restrict the express Letters Patent Appeal." It is clear, therefore, that the Court in Letters Patent Appeal may apply Order 41, Rule 33 of the Code to suitable cases.

21. It should be noted that the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 is an Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature and the Court is to follow the prescribed procedure in Letters Patent Appeals. Even if it is assumed that Order 41, Rule 33 is not strictly applied, in the absence of any bar in law to the contrary, the Court can for just and proper decision act on the principles laid down in Order 41, Rule 33 under the inherent power and jurisdiction under Section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

22. In the case before us, we have no doubt that Order 41, Rule 33 of the Code will apply and under that provision we modify the judgment and the decree passed in the first appeal as indicated already by my learned brother.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 90

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.

A. F. A. D. No. 1472 of 1969, D/- 20-8-1976.

(A) Dissolution of Muslim Marriages Act (1939), S. 2 (ix) — Grounds for dissolution of marriage — Doctrine of 'Li'an' or false charge of adultery under Mahomedan Law can still be a valid ground. (Mahomedan Law — Divorce).

The doctrine of 'L'aan' or 'Li'an' has not become obsolete under the Mahomedan Law and, therefore, a Muhommedan wife can bring a suit for divorce against her husband on the ground that her husband has charged her with adultery falsely, by virtue of S. 2 (ix) of the Act. AIR 1927 All 56, Rel. on. (Para 5)

According to the Mahomedan Law the wife is entitled to a divorce if the husband makes a false charge of adultery against the wife. This false charge of adultery by the husband must be a voluntary and aggressive charge. If the allegation or the charge of adultery is by way of self defence or meant to disprove or counter-act some allegations of the wife in attack, it cannot be said that the allegation of the husband regarding the adultery is voluntary or actionable for getting a decree for divorce. Hence, if in a previous suit for dissolution of the marriage brought by plaintiff wife, the statement regarding the adultery of the wife made by the defendant-husband was relevant in the suit and necessary to meet the attack of the wife in the suit, it cannot be called voluntary accusation of adultery against the wife and cannot be a ground for dissolution of marriage in a subsequent suit by her. (Para 7)

JUDGMENT:— This second appeal is by the plaintiff Nur Jahan Bibi against the judgment and the decree passed by the Additional District Judge, Murshidabad in the first appeal setting aside the decision of the learned Munsif of the trial court decreeing the suit of the plaintiff.

2. Nur Jahan Bibi filed the original suit against the defendant Md. Kejem Ali for dissolution of her marriage with the latter. The allegation of the plaintiff is that she was married with Kajem Ali according to Mahomedan Law. In the year 1964, she brought a suit against the defendant for dissolution of her marriage. In that suit the defendant submitted a written statement and therein he stated that the plaintiff was of bad character, that she was enamoured of one Asgar Ali and that she committed adultery with him. During evidence also the defendant made such statement. In consequence of these statements of the defendant, she is entitled to dissolve her marriage with the defendant on the basis of 'Li'an'. It has been alleged by the plaintiff that those allegations are false and they were not retracted by the defendant. The defendant Kajem Ali filed a written statement and his defence is that whatever statements he made in the previous written statement and during evidence were true and the present suit is not maintainable. Other material allegations made by the plaintiff against the defendant have been denied. The learned Munsif decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff on ground that as the defendant failed to prove that the plaintiff had committed adultery with Asgar Ali, the plaintiff would be entitled to the decree prayed for. The plaintiff examined herself alone on her side, but the defendant besides himself examined several other witnesses. The learned Munsif was of the view that the wife should always be presumed to be devoted to her husband.

and when the defendant failed to prove the allegation of adultery against her, the learned Munsif was inclined to accept the evidence of the plaintiff as true. In the appeal the learned Additional District Judge in order to appreciate the allegation of the plaintiff as to whether the statements made in the previous suit amounted to a charge of adultery, on the prayer of the respondent-plaintiff and for ends of justice, admitted in evidence without objection from the side of the appellant, the deposition of the defendant given in the previous suit. The said deposition was marked Exhibit 3. On consideration of the pleadings of the parties as well as of the evidence of the defendant in the previous suit, the learned Additional District Judge held that the statements made in the previous suit did not amount to any charge of adultery which would give right to the plaintiff to dissolve her marriage with the defendant. On this finding the appeal was allowed with the setting aside of the judgment and the decree of the trial court and the suit was dismissed. Against that decision the present appeal has been taken to this Court.

3. I have heard Mr. Islam, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant and Mr. Roy for the respondent.

3-A. The parties in the suit are governed by the Muslim Law. The wife has come forward with the suit for dissolution of her marriage with the husband. The Dissolution of Muslim Marriages Act, 1939 was passed as it was found 'expedient to consolidate and clarify the provisions of Muslim Law relating to suits for dissolution of marriage by woman married under Muslim Law and to remove doubts as to the effect of the renunciation of Islam by a married Muslim woman on her marriage tie.' Section 2 of this Act enumerates several grounds of which one or more may be the basis on which the Court may pass a decree for dissolution of marriage in a suit brought by a Muslim woman. Ground No. (ix) says, "On any other ground which is recognised as valid for the dissolution of marriages under Muslim Law". Article 240 appearing in 12th Edn. of Mulla's Mahomedan Law is quoted below:—

240. Li'an or imprecation:—

(1) The wife is entitled to sue for a divorce on the ground that her husband has falsely charged her with adultery. She must file a regular suit for dissolution of her marriage as a mere application to the Court is not the proper procedure. If the charge is proved to be false, she is entitled to a decree, but not if it is proved to be true. No such suit will lie if the marriage was irregular.

At page 596 of Amir Ali's Mahomedan Law Vol. II 4th Edn. we get:

"When a false accusation is preferred against a woman, and the husband is unable to establish the charge, the woman is entitled to claim a divorce from the Court."

In this connexion two instances were mentioned as cited by Sautayra on the subject. The first was a case of Yehia bin Mohammad where he accused his wife of misconduct. She denied the charge and required him before the Kazi to establish it by formal evidence. As the husband failed to do so, an order was passed for dissolution of the marriage. The other case mentioned is a case decided by the Court of Algiers in 1871. There the husband demanded a cancellation of contract on the ground that the wife had been guilty of immorality before her marriage. The allegation was denied by the wife and wanted a divorce on that ground of false allegation. The husband could not prove the immorality of the wife and the Kazi passed order for a divorce.

4. In Zafar Husain v. Ummat-ur-Rahaman reported in (1919) 17 All LJ 78 = (AIR 1919 All 182) decided by a Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court, it was held that a Mahomedan wife is entitled to bring a suit for divorce against her husband and obtain a decree on the ground that the latter falsely charged her with adultery. In that case the plaintiff's wife's allegation was that her husband stated before several persons that she had illicit intercourse with her brother and imputed fornication to her. Among other grounds, a plea was taken that the law of 'L'aan' had no place on Anglo Mahomedan Law and must be considered obsolete. The ground was rejected and it was held that Kazi of the Muslim Law was replaced by the Court. Besides the judgment of Knox, J. there is a separate judgment of Banerji, J. where he referred to the decision of a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Jaun Beebee v. Sheikh Moonshee Beparee reported in (1865) 3 WR 93. It appears to me that Banerjee, J. had the impression that the decision was of the view that the charge-of adultery of the wife made by the husband could not be the ground of divorce by the wife and in this connexion only a part of a sentence from the judgment was quoted. The quotation is 'a charge of adultery does not operate as a divorce'. Of course Banerji, J. could not accept that view. I have gone through the said Calcutta case. There the husband Beparee brought a suit for restitution of conjugal rights against his wife Jan Beebee. The husband got the decree duly affirmed by the Principal Sudder Ameen in the appeal. The wife came up before the High Court with the special appeal. The matter was heard by a Bench consisting of Shamboonath Pandit and G. Campbell, JJ. In the original suit by the plaintiff a Mahomedan against his wife of the same religion, the latter pleaded that the husband had charged her with infidelity and proved it and that it operated as a divorce. There are several other pleas taken by the wife not relevant for our purpose. Regarding the charge of infidelity, the Bench held:

"On hearing the special appeal of the wife, we think that the Courts below have rightly held that a charge of adultery does not operate as a divorce, though a false charge might be an item of ill-usage towards making up a sufficient answer. A true charge would be no step towards such an answer."

Going through the entire judgment I do not find any decision to the effect that the false charge of adultery made by the husband against the wife would not be a ground for the wife to claim a decree for dissolution of her marriage with the offending husband. That was a case by the husband for restitution of conjugal rights against the wife and in that proceeding the defendant's claim for divorce against the wife did not arise. Moreover mere charge of adultery by the husband against the wife will not automatically terminate the relationship between the husband and the wife. For the dissolution of marriage on that ground, the wife has to start a separate suit in Court against the husband.

5. The principles laid down in the case of Jafar Husain were accepted by the Allahabad High Court in Rahima Bibi v. Fazul appearing in (1926) 24 All LJ 881 = (AIR 1927 All 56). My attention has not been drawn to any authority which has declared that the doctrine of 'L'aan' or 'Li'an' has become obsolete. I am, therefore, of the view, that a Mahomme-

6. An important point has been raised before me as to whether the statement made by the husband about the adultery of his wife by way of defence in a suit brought by the wife against him could be legally availed of by the wife in a subsequent suit for dissolving her marriage with the husband. In the present case before me, the plaintiff admittedly brought a suit against the defendant-husband for dissolution of marriage on the ground that the defendant, a 'Ghar-jamai' of the plaintiff's parents, had left her after ill-treating her and making no provision for her maintenance. There were other grounds not relevant for our purpose. That suit was registered as Matrimonial Suit No. 6 of 1964, Kajim Ali appeared there and filed a written statement denying the allegations made by the plaintiff. His case was that he lived with his wife at the house of his mother-in-law. He loved his wife. The plaintiff had fallen in love with her cousin Asgar. The defendant doubted that the suit had been brought at the instigation of Asgar and other relatives. It was also stated in the written statement that recently the plaintiff was residing at the house of Asgar. During evidence in that previous suit, the defendant said during examination-in-chief that at that time he was residing in his own house. As Asgar used to make frequent visits in the house of the plaintiff's mother, he fled away from that house. It was stated also that the plaintiff was given in marriage with Asgar on Baisak last meaning subsequent to the filing of the previous suit. The defendant was cross-examined and during such cross-examination from the side of the defendant, he said that the plaintiff was a bad woman and Asgar was residing in the house of the plaintiff with bad motive and that plaintiff and Asgar were in love with each other. That previous suit was dismissed by the learned Munsif and the findings were against the plaintiff. The grounds urged by the plaintiff in that suit were not accepted by the Court and the suit was dismissed.

7. According to the Mahomedan Law the wife is entitled to a divorce if the husband makes a false charge of adultery against the wife. This false charge of adultery by the husband must be a voluntary and aggressive charge. If the allegation or the charge is by way of self defence or meant to disprove or counteract some allegations of the wife in attack, it cannot be said that the allegation of the husband regarding the adultery is voluntary or actionable for getting a decree for divorce. If any wife brings a suit for dissolution of marriage on certain grounds against the husband and if the husband in his written statement makes allegation of the plaintiff's adultery with some other person by way of defence so that the plaintiff may not be believed and may not get a decree, such allegation cannot amount to a voluntary or aggressive or independent statement of adultery against the wife. The husband by way of defence is compelled to make such allegation for his own protection. Such allegation is certainly not a voluntary one which might give rise to a cause of action to the wife for dissolution of marriage. The law allows the defendant-husband to oppose the case of the plaintiff by appropriate grounds to defend himself. When the law allows the defendant to take up a relevant plea for self defence as against the plaintiff case, such plea cannot, in my view, be used as a weapon against him. If he is prevented from making such allegation in the written statement, it will go against the public policy and consequently proper justice and decision cannot be made in any civil action. If such allegation by the defendant made in the written statement be allowed to be used by the plaintiff-wife as a ground for a future litigation for dissolution of marriage, then certainly the privilege of law will be denied to the defendant who may be hesitant to make a relevant allegation due to the uncertainty of the decision to be made in the suit. This position for the defendant, if allowed, will mean denial of a legitimate right to the defendant. In my view if the statement regarding the adultery of the wife made by the defendant-husband is relevant in the suit and necessary to meet the attack of the wife in the suit, it cannot be called voluntary accusation of adultery against the wife and cannot be a ground for dissolution of marriage in a subsequent suit by her.

8. The other point which is relevant in the present second appeal is whether the statements made by the defendant in the previous suit would amount to accusation of adultery against the wife. The written statement of the previous suit has been marked Ext. 2. The relevant portion of the written statement says that the defendant did not misbehave with the plaintiff, that the plaintiff has recently been in love with her cousin Asgar and that she is now living in his house. His deposition in the previous suit has been marked Ext. 3. In Ext. 3 the plaintiff, it appears, says that he fled away from the plaintiff's mother's house as Asgar used to make frequent visits and that the plaintiff was given in marriage (Nika) with Asgar presumably by his mother on 10th Baisak last, that is to say, after the institution of the suit. During cross-examination the defendant says that the plaintiff and Asgar are in love with each other, that plaintiff is a bad woman and that Asgar has been residing in the house of the plaintiff with bad motive. On consideration of the statements made by the defendant, it cannot be stated, in my view, that there was any clear or positive allegation of adultery as required for the purpose of L'aan. At best there was the imputation of love and attachment between the plaintiff and Asgar and their ill motive. No accusation of plaintiff's adultery is there. The defendant never stated that the plaintiff and Asgar were living in the same room or sharing the same bed. I find that the learned Additional District Judge on consideration of the materials before him could not find any allegation of adultery made by the defendant and he was of the view that the defendant could resist the suit by the plea of justification. I find no reason to interfere with the decision of the learned Additional District Judge in the first appeal below. It appears that the learned Munsiff of the trial court did not consider the pleadings of the previous suit and also the evidence adduced before him. His decisions are not based upon evidence but mostly upon surmises. The evidence on record clearly proves that the defendant's allegations were acceptable and proved regarding the intimacy of the plaintiff with Asgar. There can be no doubt that the defendant's allegations were all bona fide. The first appellate court was justified in setting aside the judgment and the decree of the trial court. I find no reason to interfere with the decision of the first appellate court below.

9. In the result, the appeal fails and the same is hereby dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

M/s. Universal Trading Co., Appellants v. Prafulla Kumar Sarkar and another, Respondents.

First Appeals Nos. 1101 and 1102 of 1969, D/- 28-7-1976.

(A) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (1956), S. 13 (1) (ff) — Tenant — Eharatia under Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act is not a tenant — Suit for eviction for use and occupation — Tenancy validly terminated — Plaintiff entitled to decree under General Law. (T. P. Act (1882), S. 106).

A Bhartia under the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act cannot be regarded as a 'tenant' under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, vis-a-vis his landlord, the thika tenant, or the purchaser of the structure from the thika tenant. Consequently in a suit for eviction on the ground of reasonable requirement of premises for use and occupation even if the plaintiff does not satisfy the conditions of S. 13 (1) (ff), if the tenancy is validly terminated by a notice under general law, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. R. P. Bagchi, N. C. Chakravarty and Bhuban Mohan Saha, for Appellant; Ranjit Kr. Banerjee, Bidyut Kr. Banerjee and Mrinal Kanti Das, for Respondents.

JANAH, J.:— These two appeals arise out of two suits for ejectment which were instituted by the respondents against the appellant for the latter's eviction from two tenancies at No. 72, Baithakhana Road. The plaintiff-respondents alleged that the defendant-appellant held one residential tenancy in respect of 3 rooms at 72, Baithakhana Road under the plaintiffs at a rental of Rs. 21/- per month according to Bengali calendar. The defendant appellant also held another tenancy under the plaintiff-respondents at the aforesaid premises No. 72, Baithakhana Road in respect of a shop room at a rental of Rs. 32/- per month according to Bengali calendar. Ejectment suit No. 44 out of which F. A. 1101 arises was instituted in respect of the residential tenancy and Ejectment Suit No. 45 out of which F. A. 1102 arises was instituted in respect of the shop room. It was alleged that the plaintiffs had purchased the structure at 72, Baithakhana Road in which the disputed tenancies were situate, from the heirs of the original owner, late Gendu Khan, who was a thika tenant in respect of the land on which the said structure stood, by a kobala dated August 10, 1964. It was further alleged that after their purchase the plaintiffs informed the defendant about their purchase but the defendant did not pay rent to the plaintiffs, and the defendant was in default since Sravan, 1371 B.S. The plaintiffs further alleged that the shop room was required by them for their own occupation for business purpose and that the premises in the other suit was required by the plaintiff No. 2 for his own use and occupation and for the use and occupation of the members of his family as their residence. The defendant denied the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties and contended that the plaintiffs were not the sole owners of the structure in which the disputed tenancies were situate. The defendant denied the service and sufficiency of the notice to quit. Reasonable requirement on the part of the plaintiffs was also denied in the written statement.

2. As common questions of law and facts arose in both the suits the two suits were tried together. The learned Judge in the trial court accepted the plaintiff's case and decreed both the suits. Against the trial court's decrees the present appeals have been filed by the tenant defendant. The suit was filed on January 4, 1967 i.e. within 3 years from the date of plaintiffs' purchase. Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Premises Tenancy Act') was amended by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Second Amendment) Act, 1969 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Second Amendment Act') which came into force with retrospective effect on 14th November, 1969, after the suits were disposed of by the trial court. In view of the decision in the case of B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan, AIR 1975 SC 1146 the plaintiffs-respondents filed an application for amendment of the plaint praying for incorporating an averment in the plaint that the plaintiffs were not possessed of any other reasonably suitable accommodation. The said prayer having been allowed by this court the defendant-appellant filed an additional written statement denying the plaintiffs' allegations whereupon an additional issue was framed and thereafter the parties adduced evidence in support of their respective cases in this Court.

3. Mr. Nirmal Chandra Chakravarty, learned Advocate, appearing on behalf of the appellant has contended in the first place, that the plaintiffs are the purchasers of the interest of a thika tenant and hence they cannot file a suit under the Premises Tenancy Act for eviction of the defendant who was a 'Bharatia' under the plaintiffs' predecessors. He drew our attention to the deposition of plaintiff No. 2 where he has admitted that the interest of the plaintiffs is that of a thika tenant. He also referred to Exhibit 7 series which show payment of ground rent by the plaintiffs to the superior landlord, Mr. Chakravarty, therefore, contended that the defendant was not a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act and as such the suit for eviction under the said Act was not maintainable. It is not in dispute that the plaintiffs purchased the structure from the heirs of Gendu Khan whose status was that of a thika tenant. The question that arises for consideration, therefore, is whether a 'Bharatia' as defined in the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act, 1949 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Thika Tenancy Act') is a tenant within the meaning of Premises Tenancy Act vis-a-vis his landlord, the thika tenant, or the purchaser of the structure from the thika tenant. Mr. Chakravarty relied on a decision in Santilata Dey v. Sarjubala Devi, (1956) 60 Cal WN 642 in support of his contention. That is a case where tenant was inducted by virtue of a lease which expressly described it to be a lease of land with the building and structures situated thereon. In an action for ejectment the defendant in that case took the plea that his tenancy is governed by the Thika Tenancy Act. The courts below upheld the said contention. On revision a Division Bench of this Court held that the lease being one of land with the buildings etc. situated thereon the tenancy in question in that suit was not governed by the Thika Tenancy Act. There is, therefore, nothing in the said decision which can be of any assistance to the appellant in the present case. Mr. Chakravarty strongly relied upon the provisions of Section 10 of the Thika Tenancy Act in support of his contention that a Bharatia is not a tenant within the meaning of Premises Tenancy Act vis-a-vis the Thika Tenancy. He contended that the provisions in Section 10 to the effect that when any structure standing on any holding of a Thika Tenancy vests in the landlord on any of the grounds mentioned in Section 3 of the Thika Tenancy Act except clause (i) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 the Bharatia of such thika tenant shall be deemed to hold under the superior landlord as a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act, goes to show that only in such cases the Bharatia will be deemed to be a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act. This provision according to Mr. Chakravarty necessarily implies that the Bharatia does not hold his tenancy under the thika tenant or his transferee, as a tenant within the meaning of Premises Tenancy Act. Mr. Chakravarty strengthened his submission on the basis of certain observations in the case of Annapurna Seal v. Tincowrie Dutt, (1962) 66 Cal WN 338. In that case a Division Bench of this Court in construing the words 'land' and 'structure' in Section 2 (5) of the Thika Tenancy Act observed as follows:—

"No interpretation should be put upon this Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act which makes it a redundant duplicate of the cognate statute of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. To construe the words 'land' and 'structure' in Section 2 (5) of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act so liberally as to make them premises within the meaning of Section 2 (f) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 will be to duplicate statutes which could not have been the intention of the Legislature and will lead to utter confusion. If West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act or its precursors the Rent Control Act were applicable then it is difficult to understand the utility of another statute. It is because it was thought that these Acts were not sufficient to protect this class of tenant that the Calcutta Tenancy Act was enacted. This Calcutta Tenancy Act was fully alive to this situation and only permit the Rent Act to apply in the case of 'Bharatia' alone in the limited eventuality expressly mentioned in Section 10 (2) of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act."

Relying on these observations Mr. Chakraborty contended that a 'Bharatia' is not a tenant under the Thika Tenancy Act or within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act. According to him a 'Bharatia' cannot be said to be a tenant within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act by putting any construction upon the provision of the Thika Tenancy Act because Section 10 (2) of the latter Act contains a deeming provision, and it is only the Legislature which can make a deeming provision and the Court cannot introduce a deeming provision by a construction of the statute. In this connection Mr. Chakraborty drew our attention to the case of Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency v. Bombay Trust Corporation Ltd., (1930) 57 Ind App 49 = (AIR 1930 PC 54) where their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that "when a person is 'deemed to be' something the only meaning possible is that whereas he is not in reality that something an Act of Parliament requires him to be treated as if he were."

Mr. Chakraborty also relied upon the observations in S. R. Phate v. C. A. Kedar, AIR 1974 Bom 281 appearing at paragraph 11 of the report, and contended that a deeming provision cannot be introduced by construction and it is the exclusive privilege of the Legislature to apply a deeming fiction in a given case. It was accordingly contended that since a deeming provision has been incorporated in Section 10 (2) of the Thika Tenancy Act it goes to show that a Bharatia is not and cannot be a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act, except in the case contemplated by Section 10 (2).

4. In order to appreciate the contention of Mr. Chakraborty it is necessary to refer to certain provisions of the Thika Tenancy Act. The preamble to the Act says that the said Act has been enacted "to make better provision relating to the law of landlord and tenant in respect of Thika Tenancy in Calcutta". The Act accordingly makes provisions for regulating the rights and obligation of a thika tenant vis-a-vis his landlord. Barring a few provisions regarding the rights of a Bharatia under a thika tenant the Act makes no provision for regulating the relationship as between a thika tenant and his Bharatia. The rights which have been conferred upon a Bharatia under the said Act are to be found in Sections 10, 10-A and 32-B. Sec. 10 provides that in certain cases where the structures standing on the holding of a thika tenant vests in the landlord the Bharatia shall be entitled to continue in possession and he shall be deemed to be a tenant in respect of the portion in his occupation within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act. Section 10-A gives the thika tenant a right to erect pucca structure but in doing so the thika tenant cannot eject a Bharatia. If, for such purpose, the thika tenant wants to have vacant possession of the portion in occupation of the Bharatia then he is to make alternative accommodation for the Bharatia until the erection of such pucca structure. Similarly, Section 32-B creates an obligation on the part of the thika tenant to provide for essential amenities for the Bharatia, such as, supply of water, conservancy and sanitary services. It also gives a right to the Bharatia to apply to the Thika Controller if these amenities are not provided for or are insufficient. Apart from conferring some rights on the Bharatia under the aforesaid sections the Thika Tenancy Act does not make any provision as to the rights of a Bharatia as against the thika tenant. The rights of a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act are however much wider. To say that a Bharatia is a tenant within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act would be to confer much greater rights upon the Bharatia which the Thika Tenancy Act does not intend to do. Moreover, if a Bharatia is regarded as a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act vis-a-vis the thika tenant then two parallel provisions would be available to the thika tenant under the two Acts, as for instance, if the supply of water to the Bharatia is interfered with by the thika tenant the Bharatia would have a remedy under Section 32-B of the Thika Tenancy Act as well as under Section 34 of the Premises Tenancy Act. This is a situation which could never have been contemplated by the Legislature. Moreover, the rights conferred upon a thika tenant under the Thika Tenancy Act as it originally stood were very limited in character compared to those of a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act. If a Bharatia is regarded as a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act then the Bharatia would have greater rights than his landlord, the thika tenant himself has. It follows, therefore, that a Bharatia cannot be regarded as a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act.

5. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that as a Bharatia is not a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act his landlord, the thika tenant, cannot bring a suit for eviction under the Premises Tenancy Act, and the present suits are accordingly liable to be dismissed. In support of this contention reliance was placed upon the decision in Sahadeb Chandra Paul v. Manmathanath Mondal, (1971) 75 Cal WN 979, where a learned Judge of this Court sitting singly took the view that as landlords in that suit were thika tenants they had no right to bring a suit for eviction against the tenants defendants of that suit. That decision was arrived at by our learned brother on the basis of certain observations in Yogamaya Pakhira v. Santisudha, ILR (1968) 2 Cal 70 in which it was held that the expression 'owner' occurring in clause (f) of Section 13 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act prior to its amendment or in clause (ff) of the said section after its amendment must be given its ordinary connotation or dictionary or usual meaning, that is, a person having full and absolute ownership of the disputed property and would not include a permanent lessee. Reliance was also placed on the decisions in Nishikanta Roy v. Monomohan Sengupta, (1975) 1 Cal LJ 404 and Jagannath Sen v. Sriram Pasricha, (1975) 1 Cal LJ 413 in support of this contention advanced on behalf of the appellant. In these two cases however there was no dispute that the defendants in those suits were tenants within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act. In the case of Nishikanta the question was whether the plaintiff who was himself a tenant could be regarded as 'the owner' within the meaning of Section 13 (1) (ff) of the Premises Tenancy Act. It was held that the term 'owner' did not include the tenant of the tenanted premises; as such the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for ejectment. In the case of Jagannath Sen the question arose as to whether a co-sharer owner was 'owner' within the meaning of clause (ff) of Section 13 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act. Their Lordships held that a co-sharer owner did come within the expression 'owner' as used in Section 13 (1) (ff). But in the present case as we have seen the defendant is a Bharatia, and as such, he is not tenant within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act. The question, therefore, arises as to whether the plaintiffs in the present suit are disqualified from filing a suit for eviction against the defendant on the ground of non-payment of rent and also for requirement of the plaintiffs as the plaintiffs are not 'owners' within the meaning of Section 13 (1) (ff) of the Premises Tenancy Act.

6. It is to be remembered in this connection that suit for recovery of possession is not one under the Premises Tenancy Act, but it is under the general law, after determination of the tenancy by a notice to quit. The Premises Tenancy Act puts certain restrictions on the landlords' right to recover possession from the tenant unless certain conditions as enumerated in Section 13 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act are fulfilled. It is only after the bar is lifted that a decree for eviction can be passed against a tenant. Under the general law there is no such bar or restriction upon the landlord's right to evict a monthly tenant. The landlord is not required to satisfy the court as to whether he requires the subject-matter of the tenancy for his own use and occupation or a tenant is a defaulter or that any of the conditions mentioned in Section 13 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act exists in order to get a decree for eviction against the tenant. The only thing which the landlord is required to prove in such a case is, that the tenancy has been determined by service of a valid notice to quit. On that question the trial court has recorded a finding in favour of the plaintiffs. In fact it was not disputed before the trial court that the notice had been duly served on the defendants in respect of both the tenancies.

7. On behalf of the appellant it was contended on the basis of Sahadeb's case ((1971) 75 Cal WN 979) (supra) that the plaintiffs themselves being thika tenants they are not owner within the meaning of Section 13 (1) (ff) of the Premises Tenancy Act and therefore, their suits are liable to be dismissed. We have already held that the defendant is not a tenant within the meaning of the Premises Tenancy Act. That being so it matters little whether the plaintiffs are 'owner' within the meaning of Section 13 (1) (ff) of the Premises Tenancy Act or not. In Sahadeb's case it is not clear whether the defendants were Bharatia or not. On the other hand it appears that both the parties accepted the position that they were tenants within the meaning of Premises Tenancy Act. The said decision is, therefore, of no assistance to the defendant in the present case.

8. The next point urged on behalf of the appellant is that the plaintiffs have no title to the disputed property as the kobala by which they purchased the disputed property is a void document. The kobala was attacked on two grounds, first, that the original owner Gendu Khan had other heirs who were not parties to the kobala and the plaintiffs had not purchased the interest of those heirs. Secondly, it was contended that the said document is void as it offends Sections 5 and 23 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 and also Section 23 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. Mr. Chakraborty appearing on behalf of the appellant drew our attention to the evidence of Jatindra Kumar Sarkar, witness No. 1 for the plaintiffs at page 63 of the Paper Book where the said witness stated that the sum of Rs. 10,000/- was paid to the widow of Gendu Khan in Pakistan in presence of her two sons and daughter. He also stated that no money was paid at the time of execution and registration of kobala. Mr. Chakraborty also drew our attention to the disputed kobala, Ext. 3, in which it has been recited in the memo. of consideration that a sum of Rs. 10,000/- was paid by 100 pieces of currency notes of Rs. 100/- each. We were accordingly invited to hold that P.W. 1 was not speaking the truth. Mr. Chakraborty also criticised the evidence of P.W. 1 on the ground that the said witness did not, in fact, know anything about the transaction but the persons who knew about it namely, Prokash Chandra Sarkar and Prafulla Kumar Sarkar, were not examined in the suit. Having regard to the totality of evidence that has been placed before the court we are unable to agree with Mr. Chakraborty, and in our view, there is no sufficient reason why the evidence of P.W. 1 Jatindra Kumar Sarkar should not be accepted. With regard to the second objection raised by Mr. Chakraborty in this behalf we find no reason why the disputed kobala, Ext. 3, should be held to be void. Section 5 of Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947, inter alia, puts a restriction in making payment by a person in, or resident in India to or for the credit of any person resident outside India. Section 23 of the said Act provides for the penalty and procedure for imposing the same for contravention of Section 5 and certain other sections of the said Act. In the present case the evidence is that the money was paid in Pakistan by P.W. 1 who, at the relevant time, was residing in Pakistan. There is no evidence as to how Indian money was taken to Pakistan. In such a case, therefore, Section 5 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 can hardly have any application. Even if Section 5 is held to be applicable the result would be that the person concerned would make himself liable to the penalty under Section 23. But for that reason the document cannot be held to be void. Section 23 of the Contract Act provides that the consideration and object of an agreement is lawful unless it is forbidden by law, or it defeats the provisions of any law, or is fraudulent, or involves or implies injury to the person or property of another, or the court regards it as immoral or opposed to public policy. There is nothing in the present case which can be said to bring the disputed transaction within any of these six exceptions mentioned in Section 23 of the Contract Act. We are, therefore, unable to uphold the contention advanced by Mr. Chakraborty in this behalf.

9. Lastly, Mr. Chakraborty contended that in deciding the present appeals this Court should take notice of certain subsequent events and also take additional evidence in respect of certain documents, copies of which have been annexed to the application filed by him for that purpose under Order 41, Rule 27 read with Section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In the said application the petitioner has stated that although he was definite that Gendu Khan died leaving behind him surviving 8 persons as his heirs and legal representatives as mentioned in paragraph 4 of the said application the petitioner could not produce and/or adduce any documentary evidence in support of his defence. It has been stated further that it is only after the receipt of a letter dated 11th October, 1969 from one Sri K. B. Kanjilal, Advocate, that the petitioner made enquiries at different places and ascertained that Gendu Khan died leaving 8 persons as his heirs and legal representatives. The documents on which the plaintiffs rely in support of their title were all filed in the trial court. The defendant could easily obtain inspection of the same and make necessary enquiry regarding such particulars as were necessary according to him. The fact that the defendant could not produce or adduce any documentary evidence in support of his defence at the appropriate stage is no ground for reception of additional evidence by the appellate court. Moreover, we do not require additional evidence for deciding the present appeals.

The application for the reception of additional evidence is accordingly dismissed.

10. Mr. Chakraborty addressed us at length on the point of reasonable requirement of the suit premises on the part of the plaintiffs for their own use and occupation. For this purpose he relied upon the evidence which was taken in this Court on the additional issue which has been framed. We have already held that the defendant is not a tenant within the meaning of Premises Tenancy Act. That being so, it is immaterial whether the plaintiffs satisfied the conditions mentioned in clause (if) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Premises Tenancy Act. In view of what has been discussed above it follows that there is no bar to the suits being decreed. These appeals, therefore, fail and are accordingly dismissed. The judgment and decrees of the trial court are affirmed. In the circumstances we make no order as to costs.

S. K. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— I agree.

Appeals dismissed.

AND A. K. JANA, JJ.

Saraswati Debi and others, Appellants v. Satya Narayan Gupta, Respondent.

D/- 16-6-1976.*

(A) Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104 — Final decree passed in partition suit — Plaintiff instituting another suit for recovery of amount paid to discharge joint liabilities — Burden of proof.

When it has been proved that it was the plaintiff who acted as the karta upto the final decree in the previous partition suit and that he was collecting the income of the joint properties, the onus is upon the plaintiff who has brought the subsequent money suit for the recovery of amount alleged to have been spent by him to meet joint family liabilities to prove how much money he realised out of the joint property and how much money he had spent to meet the joint liabilities. He is the best person to render the accounts and not the defendants who are not expected to have any knowledge as to the actual income and expenditure.

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 2, R. 2 — Partition suit for partition of joint family properties and business and also for accounts — Final decree — Subsequent suit for recovery of amount paid to discharge joint liabilities — O. 2, R. 2, held, not attracted.

In the previous partition suit, the plaintiffs of that suit prayed for partition of all the joint properties and businesses and also for accounts against the defendants in respect of the said properties and businesses and claimed both preliminary and final decrees and in fact after the passing of the preliminary decree, the plaintiff filed accounts upto a certain date subsequent to the passing of the preliminary decree. The plaintiff claimed a decree for accounts upto the date of final decree in respect of the joint properties and businesses. In the subsequent suit the plaintiff had claimed certain amounts of money which he paid towards the liabilities of the joint properties.

Held, that for the subsequent suit there could not be any application of O. 2, R. 2. There was no omission of any claim in the earlier suit. (Para 5)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 54 and O. 20, R. 18 — Partition suit — Scope of — Separate prayer for rendition of accounts — Whether necessary.

In a suit for partition of common properties and businesses, the shares of the parties in the subject-matters should first be ascertained. Next, in order to make proper allotments to the parties, the subject-matters for partition should be properly assessed and valued and for that purpose and for fair valuation of the allotments for the parties, the assets and the liabilities of the estate for partition should be found out. Provision may be made for meeting the liabilities and in making allotments while considering the assets and liabilities of the joint properties owelty money, if necessary, is to be determined for assessment of the proper valuation of the allotments. In order to achieve these purposes, accounts of profits and liabilities are to be taken up for consideration at the time of final decree so that in future after the final decree, the parties may not have any occasion to file suits in connection with the liabilities or claims in respect of the properties already partitioned and in which the parties have been given possession. There should not be any scope for future litigation over the same matters after the determination of the partition suit. In a suit for partition of properties and businesses, the question of accounting becomes unavoidable for final determination and assessment of the valuation of the properties to be allotted to the parties. AIR 1951 Mad 938 (FB) and AIR 1961 Orissa 111, Rel. on. (Para 6)

In a partition suit where different properties and businesses are involved, the question of accounts and joint liabilities and assets of the estate to be partitioned becomes essential and for that purpose no separate prayer for rendering accounts need be mentioned in the plaint. (Para 6)

(D) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2; O. 14, Rr. 1, 3; O. 20, R. 4 — Decision on a plea not covered by pleadings and issues — Principles and tests for upholding such decision.

The parties must have fully known before going to the trial that the new plea taken would be thrashed out and decided in the suit to have a bearing on the ultimate result of the suit. None of the parties should be taken by surprise on account of a new plea foreign to the pleading of the party raising it.

The opponent of the party setting up the new plea must have accepted the challenge of the said plea without objection as to its absence in the pleading or issue by adducing rebutting evidence or otherwise dealing with the same.

The party challenging the plea must have reasonable opportunity to meet it effectively and to adduce evidence against the said plea.

The court must see that by allowing one party to raise a new plea or case not pleaded in his pleading, or for which no issue was framed, no prejudice or injustice is done to the other party.

The new plea set up should not be otherwise legally barred.

If the conditions mentioned above are fulfilled, then the Court can legitimately act upon the new plea not finding any place in the pleading and on which no issue has been framed when the said pleas are proved. The absence of issue in a case like this will be of no avail and the objection, if any, becomes technical having no value. (1869-1870) 13 M. I. A. 573, AIR 1956 SC 593, AIR 1966 SC 735, AIR 1971 SC 1676, Rel. on. (Para 8)

(E) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 Explanation 4 — Previous suit for partition and accounts — Subsequent money suit for recovery of amount paid to discharge joint liabilities — Bar of constructive res judicata — (Contract Act (1872), Ss. 69 and 70).

The principle of res judicata is well known and it is meant to avoid institution of frivolous and harassing suits and also to get rid of multiplicity of proceedings and litigations and to end for good the disputes between the parties on disputes of the same nature.

Where the plaintiff in the previous suit for partition and accounts did not make any claim regarding the payments alleged to have been made by him and the liabilities of the joint estate, it was held that he was estopped from raising it in a subsequent suit by the principles of constructive res judicata under Section 11 Exp. 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure. All the disputes regarding accounts, liabilities and claims in respect of the joint properties had been settled in the previous suit and no part of the claim connected with the previous joint properties and businesses as mentioned in the subsequent suit was maintainable. In the facts and circumstances, the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct in the previous suit by not claiming the amounts demanded in the subsequent suit. It also amounted to waiver of his claim.

When in the previous partition and accounts suit the plaintiff had the right to have a decree for the payments he had made towards the liabilities of the joint properties, such claim could not be made in a subsequent suit in the garb of a different form, alleging that it was a claim under Sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act. Bhupendra Kumar De and Sm, Archana Bhaduri, for Appellant; B. C. Dutta and Amiya Kumar Chatterjee, for Respondents.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— This is an appeal under the Letters Patent against the judgment and the decree passed by one of our learned brothers, A. K. Sinha, J. in a first appeal reversing the judgment and the decree passed by the Judge, 8th Bench of the City Civil Court at Calcutta in Money Suit No. 81 of 1960. The defendants are the appellants here. In the trial court the suit was dismissed, but in the first appeal the suit was decreed after the setting aside of the decision of the trial court.

2. The relevant facts for this appeal may be stated in brief. One Jhawalal Gupta, a Hindu governed by the Benaras School of Hindu Law was the owner of several properties. He died leaving a widow and four sons. They constituted a joint undivided family. Thereafter Satya Narayan Gupta for self and representing his minor sons filed a suit in the High Court for partition in respect of the properties left by Jhawalal. There were prayers for partition of the properties and also for accounts. A preliminary decree was passed on 23-5-1952 and before the Commissioner of Partition, the plaintiff being the managing member of the undivided family filed accounts upto 31st Chaitra, 1361 B. S. corresponding to 14th April, 1955 in respect of the properties and the business sought to be partitioned. The Commissioner submitted a report and the court on hearing the parties accepted the Commissioner's report after some modifications therein, and passed a final decree in the suit on the basis thereof on 8-9-58. The parties, thereafter, took possession of the allotments made by the court according to the final decree. Subsequently, however, on 9-3-60 the plaintiff of the previous partition suit, Satya Narayan Gupta filed a Money Suit in the City Civil Court at Calcutta for recovery of an amount of Rs. 4572/- against the widow of late Jhawalal Gupta and the other three step-brothers who were younger in age to the plaintiff and made defendants in the earlier partition suit. The allegations made in the plaint are that in connexion with certain certificate cases started by the Income-tax Department for certain liability of the joint family of the parties and also for joint liability for payments of sale tax of the undivided business of the parties, the plaintiff Satya Narayan had to make payments to the total amount of Rs. 5265.59 to avoid attachment of his own properties and that excluding his share of liability, the plaintiff is entitled to get the total sum of Rs. 4572/- from the defendants on account of the latter's share of the liability. It may be mentioned that some items of payments as mentioned in the plaint were made after the final decree and the rest during the pendency of the suit. The defendants who are appellants in this appeal filed a written statement denying the liability. It is stated that the suit is barred by the principles of waiver, estoppel and acquiescence, that the suit is hit by the principles of res judicata and that till the final decree was passed in the previous partition suit, the parties lived in joint mess and the defendants were under the control and management of the plaintiff. It is further stated in the written statement that all payments were made out of the fund of the joint estate and the defendants cannot be liable for any sum. It is also stated that if there was any liability, the plaintiff would have stated before the court in the partition suit or to the Commissioner of Partition and that in the absence of such assertion or claim in the partition suit, the plaintiff is not entitled to ask for contribution towards the alleged payments after the final decree. Such right, if any, was waived by the plaintiff. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court on a consideration of the evidence and circumstances came to the finding that there was abundant evidence to prove that till the date of final decree in the partition suit, namely, 8-9-58, the plaintiff controlled the affairs of the family relating to the immovable properties. The trial Judge disbelieved the plaintiff's evidence that his step-mother, one of the defendants, controlled the affairs of the joint property. The plaintiff himself admitted that he had brought a suit as Karta of the joint family against a tenant in respect of a joint property. According to the learned Judge of the trial court the plaintiff had in his hand money realised out of the joint family properties till the date of final decree and that the plaintiff failed to prove that he had made payment of the certificate dues and sale tax dues as mentioned in the plaint with his own money. In effect the trial court believed that upto the date of final decree, the plaintiff managed the joint family properties and handled the income of the same and as such the payments made were with the money of the joint fund. As the plaintiff could not prove that he spent his own money for meeting the joint liability, the suit was dismissed.

3. In the first appeal before this court preferred by the plaintiff two contentions were raised from the side of the appellants. The first one was that the onus of proving that the plaintiff continued to act as the karta of the joint family and received all the income of the properties lay on the defendants and the second one was that the burden was on the defendants to prove how much money was received by the plaintiff towards the income of the properties out of which he made payments of the dues towards the joint liability. On the points raised, Sinha, J. did not, however, confidently disturb the finding of the trial court that the plaintiff had been acting as the karta of the joint family till the dates of final decree in the partition suit. But according to him, it was for the defendants to prove how much money was actually realised by the plaintiff out of the joint family funds and further to prove that the plaintiff made payments towards the certificate and sale tax dues of the joint family out of the income of the joint properties coming to the hand of the plaintiff. On the question of res judicata, Sinha, J. held,

"it is desirable that any joint liability of the family if known to any of the coparceners or the karta should be brought in the matter of final accounting between the parties, but if for any reason the parties failed to bring those items in the account adjusted on a date prior to the payment of the liability that cannot mean that any party meeting that liability individually would be debarred from realising the proportionate amount by any legal action subsequently. This contention therefore fails."

Ultimately the appeal was allowed and the defendants were held to be liable to pay the amount claimed.

4. We have heard Mr. Dey, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellants and Mr. Dutt for the plaintiff-respondent. Mr. Dey has challenged the throwing of the onus upon the defendant to prove how much money the plaintiff realised towards the income of the joint properties as karta upto the date of final decree and also the contention that it was for the defendants to prove that the plaintiff had paid money out of the joint income towards the certificate and the sale tax dues. In my view, the onus has been wrongly placed upon the defendants in the present case to prove what amount of money was actually received by the plaintiff acting as the karta of the joint family towards the income of the joint properties. When it has been proved that it was the plaintiff who acted as the karta upto the final decree in the previous partition suit and that he was collecting the income of the joint properties, the onus is upon the plaintiff to prove how much money he realised out of the joint property and how much money he had spent to meet the joint liabilities. According to the plaintiff, he was managing the affairs of the joint properties, and, as such, he submitted accounts of the joint properties upto the 31st day of Chaitra, 1361 B. S. When it has been proved by evidence that the plaintiff also acted as karta and realised income of the joint property upto the date of the final decree, it was for him to submit accounts relating to the money which came to his hands and also the expenditure he incurred for the maintenance of the property and for meeting the joint liabilities. He was the best person to render the accounts and not the defendants who were not expected to have any knowledge as to the actual income and expenditure. Moreover, Mr. Dey has contended that in the facts and circumstances of this case, it should have been held that the respondent-plaintiff's suit was hit by the principles of res judicata and that the suit was barred by Order 2, Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It has been further contended that the plaintiff ought to have been held estopped from claiming any amount due to the alleged payments towards the income tax and sales tax liabilities which were alleged to have been made on account of his not having made any such claim before the final decree in the partition suit. Mr. Dutt, however, has contended that as there was no issue regarding res judicata in the trial court, and as the plaintiff made the payments subsequent to the submission of his accounts in the partition suit, a different cause of action arose under Sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act which entitled the plaintiff to file the second suit.

5. Before going to a detailed discussion on the points raised in this appeal, we should note that in the year 1951 the plaintiff Satya Narayan Gupta for self and as natural guardian on behalf of his minor sons Narendra Nath Gupta and Birendra Nath filed the partition suit against Lakshmi Narayan, Sew Narayan, Uday Sankar and Sm. Saraswati Debi, the present defendants, for partition of the joint family properties and businesses and also for accounts. Satya Narayan as the karta of the joint family, after the preliminary decree was passed declaring the shares of the parties, filed before the Commissioner of Partition accounts in respect of the joint family properties and businesses upto 31st Chaitra, 1361 B.S. The Commissioner made a report to the Court and the same is dated 25th May, 1956. This has been marked Ext. 3 in this suit. It may be mentioned that the preliminary decree in partition suit was passed on 23-5-1952. Thereafter, on some modifications of the Commissioner's report a final decree was passed on 8-9-58. Rule 2 of Order 2 of the C. P. Code provides that every suit shall include the whole claim to which the plaintiff is entitled in respect of the cause of action, but the plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of the court. Where a plaintiff omits to sue in respect of or intentionally relinquishes any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished. It is also stated that a person entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of such reliefs, but if he omits, except with the leave of the court, to sue for all such reliefs, he shall not afterwards sue for any relief so omitted. For the purpose of our present suit, there cannot be any application of Order 2, Rule 2 of the C. P. Code because in the previous partition suit, the plaintiffs of that suit including the plaintiff of the present suit prayed for partition of all the joint properties and businesses and also for accounts against the defendants in respect of the said properties and businesses and claimed both preliminary and final decrees, and in fact after the passing of the preliminary decree, the plaintiff Satya Narayan filed accounts upto a certain date subsequent to the passing of the preliminary decree. Clearly, therefore, it is evident that besides final decree for partition of the joint properties and businesses, there was a prayer for accounts claiming a final decree therefor. The plaintiff claimed a decree for accounts upto the date of final decree in respect of the joint properties and businesses. There was no omission of any claim in the suit. The plaintiff demanded his full claim for partition of the properties and the businesses owned by the members of the joint family and also accounts upto the date of the final termination of the suit. In the present suit the plaintiff has claimed certain amounts of money which he paid towards the liabilities of the joint properties, particularly the suit business, which come under the purview of the partition and accounts to be determined in the previous suit for partition and accounts. In my view, therefore, Order 2, Rule 2 of C. P. Code need not be considered to see whether the present suit is barred by that provision.

6. Before we pass on to the question of res judicata, we should consider the scope of a partition suit because this will be relevant for our consideration in this case. In a suit for partition of common properties and businesses, the shares of the parties in the subject-matters should first be ascertained. Next, in order to make proper allotments to the parties, the subject-matters for partition should be properly assessed and valued and for that purpose and for fair valuation of the allotments for the parties, the assets and the liabilities of the estate for partition should be found out. Provision may be made for meeting the liabilities and in making allotments while considering the assets and liabilities of the joint properties. Money, if necessary, is to be determined for assessment of the proper valuation of the allotments. In order to achieve these purposes, accounts of profits and liabilities are to be taken up for consideration at the time of final decree so that in future after the final decree, the parties may not have any occasion to file suits in connexion with the liabilities or claims in respect of the properties already partitioned and in which the parties have been given possession. There should not be any scope for future litigation over the same matters after the determination of the partition suit. In a suit for partition of properties and businesses, the question of accounting becomes unavoidable for final determination and assessment of the valuation of the properties to be allotted to the parties. In this connection the decision of the Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Babbru Basavabasavayya v. Babbru Guravayya reported in AIR 1951 Mad 938 (FB) may be considered. The Bench was constituted by Rajamannar, C. J., Biswa Nath Sastri and Panchapaksa Ayyar, JJ. In that case the nature and scope of an ordinary partition suit was discussed. In paragraph 7 of the judgment, we get:

"It may be necessary in a partition suit not merely to divide the properties but also to realise outstandings, discharge common liabilities, sell properties not capable of easy division, direct different shares to account for different periods of time in respect of profits of different properties, adjust equities between the parties and give directions from time to time to the Commissioners appointed to divide the properties or take accounts. It is not reasonable to suppose that the power of the court to give directions in respect of all or any of these matters must be exercised only at the time of passing the preliminary decree and is exhausted with the passing of that decree." In paragraph 8 towards the end we get:

"A suit for partition by a member of a joint Hindu family is substantially a suit for an account of the joint family properties on the date of the suit as well as all the profits received by the manager since that date, so that the profits should also be divided and his proper share given to him."

In paragraph 13 of the judgment a summary of the conclusion has been made and we quote a portion thereof as follows:

"A partition suit in which a preliminary decree has been passed is still a pending suit and the rights of the parties have to be adjusted as on the date of the final decree: Jadunath v. Parameswar, ILR (1940) 1 Cal 255 = (AIR 1940 PC 11). In such a suit the Court has not only to divide the common properties but has also to adjust the equities arising between the parties out of their relation to the common property the property to be divided. The preliminary decree determines the moieties of the respective parties and thereby furnishes the basis upon which the division of the property has to be made. There are other matters in addition to the moieties of the parties that have to be considered and decided before an equitable final partition can be effected. Among them are the realisation of common outstandings, the discharge of common liabilities, the distribution of the profits of the properties realised pending the suit either in cash or by allotment of property of the requisite value, the grant of owelty, the provision of maintenance to parties entitled thereto, the allotment of lands on which improvements have been effected to the sharer who has improved them, the allotment of alienated lands to the share of the alienor and other similar matters."

The above Madras case was considered by a Division Bench of the Orissa High Court in the case of Udekar v. Chandra Sekhar Sahu reported in AIR 1961 Orissa 111. In this case on consideration of different cases particularly the Full Bench decision of Madras High Court, the Bench held:

"Hence it is obvious that a claim for accounts in a partition suit is implicit in the original suit for partition by metes and bounds and it ought to be settled at the time of the preparation of the final decree."

We have no doubt that in a partition suit like the one before us, where different properties and businesses are involved, the question of accounts and joint liabilities and assets of the estate to be partitioned becomes essential and for that purpose no separate prayer for rendering accounts need be mentioned in the plaint. In the case before us however, besides the prayer for partition of the properties and businesses, there was, in addition a prayer for accounts made by the plaintiff in the plaint.

7. With regard to the question of res judicata raised from the side of the defendant-appellants. Mr. Dutt has first of all submitted that in the absence of any issue being framed on the question regarding res judicata the said point cannot be considered. In this connexion the case of Musummat Mitna v. Syed Fazul Rob reported in (1869-1870) 13 Moo Ind App 573 (PC) may be considered. In that case the Principal Sadar Ameen did not strike any issue according to the Code of Civil Procedure but witnesses were examined and a decree was made. In the appeal before the High Court the decree was affirmed. The matter was then taken to the Judicial Committee. Their Lordships, however, held that though no issue was framed in the trial Court, the parties had gone to trial having full knowledge regarding the real controversy between them, that on that question evidence had been taken and that the conclusion had been correctly arrived at from the evidence by the lower appellate Court. There was no reason for their Lordships to interfere with the decree passed. It was, however stated that although it was the duty of the Court to settle the issues before trial, yet mere omission to frame issue did not vitiate the trial in that case because there was no failure of justice.

8. There is the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Nagubai Ambal v. B. Samaroo reported in AIR 1956 SC 593. In that case the plaintiff did not make any averment regarding the Rule of his pendency relating to a sale either in his plaint or his reply statement, but he raised this point at the beginning of the trial and led evidence on it. The defendants at that time did not raise any objection to such evidence. The plaintiff was cross-examined on that point and the defendant also gave evidence on his side in that respect. When the matter came before the Supreme Court it held, "That the defendants went to trial with full knowledge that the question of his pendency was in issue, had ample opportunity to adduce their evidence thereon and fully availed themselves of the same and that, in the circumstances, the absence of a specific pleading on the question was a mere irregularity, which resulted in no prejudice to them". Ultimately the Supreme Court explained the principle in paragraph 12 of the judgment in the following words:

"The true scope of this Rule is that the evidence let in on issues on which the parties actually went to trial should not be made the foundation for decision of another and different issue, which was not present to the minds of the parties and on which they had no opportunity of adducing evidence. But that Rule has no application to a case where parties go to trial with knowledge that particular question is in issue, though no specific issue has been framed thereon, and adduce evidence relating thereto."

The Supreme Court in the case of Bhagwati v. Chandramaul appearing in AIR 1966 SC 735 gave a clear decision on this point in the following terms:

"The general rule, no doubt, is that the relief should be founded on pleadings made by the parties. Where the substantial matters relating to the title of both parties to the suit are touched, though indirectly or obscurely, in the issues, and evidence has been led about them, then the argument that a particular matter was not expressly taken in the pleadings would be purely formal and technical and cannot succeed in every case. What the Court has to consider is: did the parties know that the matter in question was involved in the trial and did they lead evidence about it? If it appears that the parties did not know that the matter was in issue at the trial and one of them has had no opportunity to lead evidence in respect of it, that undoubtedly would be a different matter. To allow one party to rely upon a matter in respect of which the other party did not lead evidence and has had no opportunity to lead evidence, would introduce considerations of prejudice and in doing justice to one party, the Court cannot do injustice to another."

Our attention has been drawn to the case of State of Punjab v. B. D. Kaushal decided by the Supreme Court and reported in AIR 1971 SC 1676. In connection with the point raised as to whether the principle of res judicata could be waived and was actually waived in that case, the Supreme Court held "Although no specific plea was taken in the written statement nor was any issue framed before the time of trial, but the necessary facts were present to the mind of the parties and were gone into by the Court." It was further found that the question of res judicata was agitated in the Courts below and in this view of the matter, the Supreme Court was unable to understand how in the circumstances, the question of waiver would arise when the point had throughout been under consideration and discussed. Considering the different case laws, the principles and tests for upholding the decision of a plea not covered by pleadings and issues struck in the trial Court may be generally summarised as follows:—

(i) The parties must have fully known, before going to the trial that the new plea taken would be thrashed out and decided in the suit to have a bearing on the ultimate result of the suit. None of the parties should be taken by surprise on account of a new plea foreign to the pleading of the party raising it.

(ii) The opponent of the party setting up the new plea must have accepted the challenge of the said plea without objection as to its absence in the pleading or issue by adducing rebutting evidence or otherwise dealing with the same.

(iii) The party challenging the plea must have reasonable opportunity to meet it effectively and to adduce evidence against the said plea.

(iv) The Court must see that by allowing one party to raise a new plea or case not pleaded in his pleading, or for which no issue was framed, no prejudice or injustice is done to the other party.

(v) The new plea set up should not be otherwise legally barred.

If the conditions mentioned above are fulfilled, then the Court can legitimately act upon the new plea not finding any place in the pleading and on which no issue has been framed when the said pleas are proved. The absence of issue in a case like this will be of no avail and the objection, if any, becomes technical having no value.

9. Remembering the above principles, let us now consider the facts of the case before us. Against the claim of the plaintiff, it was stated in the written statement that the suit was barred by the principles of waiver, estoppel and acquiescence. It was also stated therein that the suit was barred by res judicata. It was also alleged in the written statement that the plaintiff should have disclosed the liabilities before the Court or to the Commissioner for Partition while the previous partition suit was pending and that the plaintiff had waived his right, if any, and is neither competent nor entitled to ask for the contribution for the alleged payments made in the certificate cases before or after the final decree. According to the averment of the defendants all the payments were made out of the income and fund lying with the plaintiff in trust for and on behalf of the defendants. Admittedly, there was the suit for partition and accounts started by Satya Narain Gupta and his sons. The certified copy of the final decree passed in that suit has been marked Ext. 2 and the report of the Commissioner of Partition connected with the decree has been marked Ext. 3. Both the documents were marked exhibits on the side of the plaintiff. Admittedly, the plaintiff's case is that for the joint liability of all the parties including the defendants, he paid the amounts mentioned in the plaint to satisfy the income-tax and the sales tax demands relating to the income of the joint estate including the properties and the businesses which were partitioned in the previous partition suit. Admittedly, again, the plaintiff Satyanarayan submitted accounts of the joint estate including the businesses upto 31st Chaitra, 1361 B. S. He claimed partition as well as all accounts relating to the joint properties and businesses. As against the defence taken on the question of res judicata and waiver the plaintiff himself tried to explain the non-inclusion of the claims for the payments in the partition suit stating that before the final decree of the partition suit he informed his Attorney about the payment of the dues which ought to have been paid by all co-sharers. His plea in evidence was that he was told by the attorney that the matter could not be urged in the partition suit. In view of the defence the plaintiff also gave evidence that after 31st of Chaitra, 1361 B. S. he was not in charge of the joint estate and that his step mother, the defendant No. 1 herself began to look after the joint properties from Baisakh, 1362 B. S. In cross-examination the plaintiff admitted a large number of receipts which were granted on behalf of the co-owners to the joint tenants before the final decree in partition suit. The person who collected rents from the tenant was Manoranjan. He was examined on the side of the defendants and he stated that after collection, he paid rents to the plaintiff who received the same on behalf of all co-sharers. Admittedly again, the plaintiff brought a suit as the karta of the joint family against a tenant and the said suit was dismissed in September, 1958. Plaintiff examined no other witnesses on his side besides himself. On a consideration of the evidence, the trial Court held that not only upto 31st Chaitra, 1361 B. S. was the plaintiff the karta of the joint family and managed the affairs relating to the joint properties but also till the final decree in the partition suit did he act as such, and collect all the income of the joint property and also handled the same. In the facts and circumstances, therefore, it is quite clear that the plaintiff was aware of the defence plea of res judicata and waiver in view of the decision of the previous partition suit. The plaintiff also gave evidence to explain why there should not be any plea of res judicata. The absence of any specific issue regarding the question of res judicata or waiver will not matter in the present case as this will not cause any prejudice to the plaintiff. Both the parties adduced evidence keeping in mind the said plea raised by the defendant. In the present case, however, there was in the pleading of the defendants the pleas of res judicata, waiver, estoppel and acquiescence. It can be stated, therefore, that the absence of issue on the said plea will be of little value.

10. It has been next contended by Mr. Dutt on behalf of the respondent that there can be no application of the principles of res judicata in this case because the final decree was passed on the basis of the account as submitted upto 31st Chaitra, 1361 B. S. and that the period thereafter upto the date of disposal of the suit was kept open, and in that event when the plaintiff paid the income-tax and sale tax dues after the 31st of Chaitra 1361 B. S. there would be a fresh cause of action for the plaintiff to claim the money he spent for the joint liabilities of the parties. In this connection Mr. Dutt has submitted that when the plaintiff claims the money, he has paid towards the joint liability and claims the sum payable by the defendants under Sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act, it has no connexion with the decree for accounts and partition passed in the previous suit. As already stated earlier, the suit was filed for partition and accounts and the plaintiff prayed for final decree in that respect. The plaintiff as the karta of the joint family and as manager filed the accounts of the joint properties and businesses upto 31st Chaitra, 1361 B. S. It should be remembered that Satyanarayan is the plaintiff in the instant case and he was also the plaintiff and represented the other plaintiffs, his minor sons as their guardian. First of all it is the duty of the plaintiff to see that his claim for accounts in the suit be decreed according to his claim. He should take necessary steps for production of evidence to substantiate all his claims regarding the accounts. As the karta, he submitted his accounts upto 31st Chaitra 1361 B. S. The Commissioner for partition considered the same according to the direction of the Court and submitted his report. Before passing the final decree, the Court considered the claims of the parties and made certain modifications in respect of the allotments suggested by the Commissioner for passing a final decree. Before the final decree, therefore, it is but obvious, and also admitted that the plaintiff did not inform either the Commissioner for partition or the Court as to his claim regarding the payments he made for any liability of the joint properties for which his interest might be affected later on. The trial Court in the present suit has found that even after the 31st of Chaitra, 1361 B. S. and upto the date of final decree, the plaintiff Satya Narayan was acting as the karta and managing the joint family properties and also collecting income of the joint estate. This finding has not been set aside or disbelieved by the first appellate Court. The evidence on the other hand, clearly proves that he was in fact receiving rents from the tenants upto the date of the final decree. This is supported by reliable evidence adduced on the side of the defendant. When the plaintiff had managed the affairs of the joint family properties, it was for him to submit accounts for the period subsequent to the 31st of Chaitra, 1361 B. S. He did not submit any such account. It was his duty and it was only natural for him to claim the amounts of money he had paid towards the joint liabilities as has been claimed by him in the present suit. But, admittedly, the plaintiff did not set up any such claim or submit any account of any joint liabilities either after 31st of Chaitra, 1361 B. S. or at the time when the Court considered about the modification of the report of the Commissioner of Partition in order to pass a final decree in respect of the joint family properties and businesses. He claimed in the partition suit accounts upto the date of final decree and he had every right to make any claim which he was entitled to. The non-submission of the accounts before the final decree or non-mention of any claim in respect of payments, alleged to have been made by him or any liabilities in respect of the joint property supports the defence contention that he made payments in question with the money which were lying in his hands coming out of the income of the joint property. As he had not to pay from his own pocket, he made no claim in respect of the payments made by him. This non-assertion of claim or giving up of the claim will certainly give rise to the bar by the principles of res judicata if the plaintiff claims the same in a subsequent suit because this claim he could have made in the previous partition suit, but he did not.

11. Regarding the submission of Mr. Dutt that there was a fresh cause of action as the plaintiff now claims the money under Sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act, the answer is that the claim of the money relates to the accounting of the joint estate and that the plaintiff could have claimed this money in the partition suit when he was already found to be managing the affairs of the joint family upto the date of final decree and when he had already made payments of the same and had not alleged the same to be the liabilities of the joint estate. When in the previous partition and accounts suit the plaintiff had the right to have a decree for the payments he had made towards the liabilities of the joint properties, such claim cannot be made in a subsequent suit in the garb of a different form. In connexion with this point, the Commissioner's report referred to in the final decree may be looked into. According to the evidence of the plaintiff, the payments were made in connexion with the joint sweet meat manufacturing business now allotted to the plaintiff which was valued at Rs. 10,000/-. It is clearly stated in the item

No. 1 of Pt. II of the Commissioner's report relating to the said business that there were no outstanding and liabilities of the said business. According to the plaintiff's case the payments were made in respect of this business and that was subsequent to the report made by the Commissioners. The plaintiff did not object at the time of passing of the final decree regarding the absence of outstanding and liabilities of the business. The principle of res judicata is well known and it is meant to avoid institution of frivolous and harassing suits and also to get rid of multiplicity of proceedings and litigations and to end for good the disputes between the parties on disputes of the same nature. In the present case there can be no doubt that as the plaintiff in the previous suit for partition and accounts did not make any claim regarding the payments alleged to have been made by him and the liabilities of the joint estate, he is estopped from raising it in a subsequent suit by the principles of constructive res judicata under Section 11 Explan. 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure. All the disputes regarding accounts, liabilities and claims in respect of the joint properties have been settled in the previous suit and no part of the claim connected with the previous joint properties and businesses as mentioned in the present suit is maintainable.

12. In the facts and circumstances, the plaintiff is estopped by his conduct in the previous suit by not claiming the amounts demanded in the present suit. It also amounts to waiver of his claim. According to the final decree in the partition suit, he got the Sweet Meat business to his own allotment without there being any liability for any of the joint owners. But now, after getting the same for himself the plaintiff cannot say that there was joint liability either for payment of sale tax or income-tax. The plaintiff must be held to be estopped by his conduct from claiming any money from the previous joint owners on the ground of joint liabilities. Had there been any claim on the part of the plaintiff for such payment, then the other co-owners would have the right to demand accounts regarding the management of the plaintiff as the karta from 31st of Chaitra, 1361 B. S. to the date of final decree. This was certainly to the disadvantage of the defendants and this sort of claim, for ends of justice, should not be allowed.

13. In the facts and circumstances mentioned above, we find that the learned Judge was wrong to hold that the question of res judicata should not be allowed to be agitated. He was again wrong in holding that simply because the payment of sale tax and income-tax was admitted, the plaintiff was entitled to get a decree against the defendants. The first appellate Court came to its decision without properly considering the plea of res judicata. The judgment and the decree passed in the first appeal are, therefore liable to be set aside.

14. In the result, the appeal succeeds and the judgment and the decree in the first appeal are hereby set aside and the judgment and the decree of the trial Court are restored. We have no order, however, as to costs in this appeal or in the Court of appeal below.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 — Court can take notice of subsequent events in deciding application for amendment of plaint — Power of appellate Court.

A (landlord) filed a suit for ejectment of B (tenant) on the ground of forfeiture of lease. The suit was dismissed by the first Court and A filed an appeal. Pending appeal the period of lease expired and the appellant applied for amendment of plaint by claiming relief on the additional ground of expiry of lease.

Held: it is well settled that in proper cases the Court is entitled to take note of the subsequent events and grant relief to the parties accordingly, if by so doing it can shorten litigation and best attain the ends of justice. C. C. Ganguly and A. K. Chatterjee, for Appellant; B. K. Lal, for Respondent.

A. P. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— This is an appeal by the plaintiffs whose suit for ejectment of a monthly tenant on the ground of forfeiture of the lease for non-payment of rent was dismissed by the trial Court. The appeal is contested by the defendant. The defendant's prayer for relief against forfeiture under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act was allowed by the Court below and on compliance thereof the suit was dismissed. Mr. Ganguly arguing the appeal before us has submitted that the conduct of the defendant appellant has been such that the relief against forfeiture should not have been allowed to him as he had contested the suit and is also contesting the appeal with equal vigour.

2. Mr. Ganguly at the time of argument submitted that the lease had expired on 31st May 1976 and he made an application for amendment of the plaint by introducing an additional ground for eviction namely a ground which is now available to the plaintiffs appellants after the lease has expired by efflux of time on 31st May 1976 though this event happened during the pendency of this appeal. An application for amendment of the plaint by adding an alternative prayer to that effect as a ground for eviction is opposed by the respondent who has sworn an affidavit-in-opposition as a counter to the petition of the appellant. Mr. Ganguly contends that his application should be allowed not only for ends of justice but also for shortening litigation. He placed reliance upon a Bench Decision of Andhra Pradesh High Court reported in AIR 1959 Andh Pra 9, Amritlal N. Shah v. Alla Annapurnamma. The facts of the Andhra Pradesh case are identical to the facts of the instant case. The plaintiff in the reported case brought a suit for eviction of the defendant on the ground of forfeiture of lease for non-payment of rent. During the pendency of the suit, the lease expired and the plaintiff sought for an amendment of the plaint putting forward an alternative ground of claim for possession on the basis of expiry of the lease. It was held that the prayer for amendment should be allowed and the plaintiff could be granted relief on that basis without driving him to a separate suit. The identical facts are before us and we agree with the principles laid down by the Andhra Pradesh High Court. It is well settled that in proper cases the Court is entitled to take note of the subsequent events and grant relief to the parties accordingly, if by so doing it can shorten litigation and best attain the ends of justice. This power may be exercised even by the Court of appeal as an appeal is only in the nature of a re-hearing. Mr. Ganguly has also referred to a decision of the Supreme Court in Pasupaleti Venkateswarlu v. The Motor & General Traders, (C. A. No. 2120=22 of 1972) dated 18-3-1975 (1975 SC (Notes) 141) = (AIR 1975 SC 1409). It was held that the Court could take cognizance of subsequent events or of any facts which had a material bearing on the right claimed by the party. On the facts of the reported case the subsequent event of recovery of another accommodation by the landlord during the pendency of a suit for ejectment was taken into consideration though it happened during the pendency of the litigation. It has been observed that it would be unfair to drive parties to a new litigation of unknown duration. The landlord was accordingly allowed to amend the petition if he had a case for eviction on any other legally permissible ground. The proposition laid down by the Andhra Pradesh High Court thus finds support in the Supreme Court decision which has been placed before us. The instant application for amendment in our view should therefore be allowed. The plaintiff appellant is permitted to amend the plaint in Title Suit No. 59 of 1966. Leave is also given to re-verify the plaint as prayed for. In that view of the matter the decision of the trial Court is liable to be set aside.

3. It is ordered that the appeal be allowed and the decree under appeal is set aside and the suit is sent back on remand to the trial Court. After the amendment of the plaint is carried out and re-verification is made the defendant would be given reasonable opportunity of filing additional written statement against the said amendment of the plaint and the Court will frame the relevant additional issue and entertain additional evidence, if any, both oral and written and decide the case. With regard to the findings of the trial Court on the issue already before him we do not express our views on those findings as at present. We make no order as to costs in this appeal.

4. Let the records go down to the trial Court promptly and the Court below will dispose of the suit within three months of receipt of the record in the lower Court.

Appeal allowed.

FULL BENCH

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.

M. M. DUTT AND A. K. DE, JJ.

Gurudas Biswas, Appellant v. Charu Panna Seal and others, Respondents.

Full Bench Reference No. 1 of 1967 in A. F. O. D. No. 241 of 1960, D/- 17-7-1974.

(A) W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Sections 17 (3) and 13 (1) and (6) — Suit for ejectment — Defence as to delivery of possession struck out under Section 17 (3) — Tenant is not precluded from taking defence on non-existence or invalidity of notice under Section 13 (6). (Interpretation of Statutes — Heading of Section — Consideration).

Where in a suit for ejectment even if defence as to delivery of possession has been struck out under Section 17 (3) the defendant can take the defence of the non-existence or invalidity of a notice under Section 13 (6) in the Court below and in the Court of appeal. (1964) 68 Cal WN 184, Relied on. (Para 29)

On a reference to Section 13 it can be found that the grounds on which "recovery of possession" may be had are enumerated in its sub-section (1) and not in any other sub-section. Upon a reading of Sections 17 (1) & 17 (3), with Section 13, particularly its sub-section (1) it would be clear that the expression "defence against delivery of possession" in Section 17 (3) means the defence as may be taken on any or more of the "grounds" in Section 13 (1). When a defence against delivery of possession is struck out, the tenant's defence on the grounds in Section 13 (1) is only struck out. By Section 13 the tenants have been given special protection against evidence on grounds, enumerated in Clauses (a) to (k) of sub-section (1). In Section 13 (6) it has further been laid down that a landlord, before filing a suit for eviction, is required to give a notice of suit in addition to, or together with, his notice to quit under Section 106 of the T. P. Act to "ask for" a decree for possession considering

"if the tenant has disintitiled himself" to protection against eviction on any or more of the grounds introduced by Sec. 13 (1). (Paras 8, 9)

When a tenant is held evictable in law, the Court further considers whether he can seek or get protection against "eviction" on any grounds in sub-sec. (1). Sub-section (6) is not any protection against eviction. Sub-section (6) is part of Section 13. The heading of section is "protection of tenant against eviction". Heading prefixed to a section cannot restrict the meaning of the section, and, is only useful aid in cases of doubt. If the language of section is clear, heading is not to be taken into consideration. The heading cannot be used to cut down the clear words of the section. (Para 13)

(B) W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 17 (3) — Suit for ejectment — Tenant not appearing in Court and taking defence as to non-existence or invalidity of notice of ejectment — Decree passed ex parte — Defendant is barred from taking that defence in appeal. (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 20, R. 4, Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

To pass an ex parte decree in a suit for ejectment on one of the grounds in Section 13 (1), the Court is required to decide, whether the suit is defended or not (if the relationship of landlord and tenant is not disputed) (a) whether the tenancy has been validly determined by a notice under Section 106, T. P. Act, (b) whether a valid notice of suit was given before filing the suit, (c) whether the ground alleged in the plaint to take away the tenant's special protection conferred by Section 13 (1), has been established on the evidence. This is the requirement of Order 20, Rule 4, Civil P. C., whether the suit is contested or not. The Court cannot relieve itself of the necessity of complying with Order 20, Rule 4 even if it strikes out the tenant's defence against delivery of possession or the written statement. That being the position in law, it would be wrong not to permit the tenant to contend and show, if possible, on plaintiff's evidence and materials as are on record, both at the trial and also at the appeal stage, that the plaintiff is not entitled to the decree prayed for, though he would not be permitted either to cross-examine plaintiff's witnesses, when they give evidence, or to call his own witnesses at the trial, if his defence is struck out.

There is no finding in the ex parte judgment by the trial Judge that the defendant is a "defaulter". As it had not made any such finding, the Court could not pass a decree for eviction. (1969) 2 SCR 432, Rel. on. (Para 27)

When a suit is decreed ex parte, because of the defendant not appearing or not participating in the trial after appearance, law has given him the right to file an appeal against that ex parte judgment and decree and to show in that appeal that the judgment, on the materials on record, could, and should, not have been passed. He cannot, therefore be debarred from urging at the hearing of such an appeal his objections to the decree. Further because of his appearance on the day of trial and "Voluntary retirement" thereafter from the case it could not be said that he waived his "right" to object to the entertainability of the suit on the ground of absence or invalidity of the notice of ejectment. Voluntary retirement following an erroneous admission of the lawyer is no "waiver" by the defendant. Even if it were so, it would not be waiver as this "right to object" was not known. (Para 25)

A. K. DE, J.:— Charu Panna Seal started Ejectment Suit No. 1832 of 1958 on 8-10-1958 in the City Civil Court for eviction of Gurudas Biswas from Suite No. 1 on the first floor of premises No. 1, Jatindra Mohan Avenue.

2. In the plaint she stated that she had terminated the tenancy of Gurudas by serving a "notice to quit" on him on 13-8-1958 asking him to vacate the premises on the expiry of the last day of September, 1958. She further stated in the plaint that Gurudas had disintitiled himself to protection from eviction having "defaulted in the payment of rents for the suit premises from December, 1954".

3. Gurudas contested the suit filing a Written Statement. He denied that he was a defaulter in the payment of rents. He also denied receipt of the notice to quit and stated that the notice dated 13-8-1958 was illegal, insufficient and void and had not determined his tenancy under Charu Panna. Gurudas, the defendant, appeared in the suit on 12-3-1959 and on the same day filed a petition praying for "leave" to deposit rents for the months of January and February, 1959 and the subsequent current rents, month by month. The learned Judge by his order No. 5 dated 12-3-1959 granted it. After the issues were framed in the suit the plaintiff filed on 5-5-1959 a petition under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act with the prayer to strike out the defendant's "defence against delivery of possession". This petition under Section 17 (3) was taken up for hearing on 22-6-1959 when the learned Judge made the following order:—

"Petition under Section 17 (3) is taken up. Heard lawyers appearing on both sides. As the facts necessary to decide question of default which is one of the issues framed in the suit also are involved in the application under Sec. 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, it is desirable that both the matters should be heard on the same date and as such, the petition under Section 17 (3) is left for consideration at the trial".

4. On the same date the defendant filed a petition of objection against the plaintiff's petition under a Section 17 (3). On 14-3-1960 the plaintiff filed a petition for her own examination on commission. The learned Judge by his order No. 19 dated 14-3-1960 allowed that prayer. Her evidence was taken by a Commissioner appointed by the Court. The said Commissioner submitted his report on 16-3-1960. In the meantime, the learned Judge by his Order No. 20 dated 15-3-1960 fixed the suit for positive hearing on 16-3-1960. On that date both the parties came ready and the learned Judge had recorded this order.

"23. 16-3-60. Both parties ready. The plaintiff has tendered the commission evidence. The application under Section 17 (1) (a mistake for Section 17 (3)) W. B. P. R. C. Act, 1956 put up. The defendant's learned Advocate Sree R. L. Dutta examining after the Challans filed by the defendant submitted that the defendant did not, on the Challans filed, deposit rent on term of Section 17 (1), of the Act upto date and that his W. S. can't be saved from being struck off. Then Sree Dutta took leave of the Court and retired. The W. S. of the defendant is struck off. The plaintiff's evidence on commission submitted for judgment to 17th March, 1960, as the defendant has withdrawn from the suit.

Judge."

On 17-3-1960 the learned Judge decreed the suit ex parte for eviction of the defendant Gurudas by his order No. 25 dated 17-3-1960. The defendant filed First Appeal No. 242 of 1960 in this Court against the said judgment and ex parte decree.

5. In the first appeal the defendant-appellant appeared to have argued that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree in the suit as no notice of suit had been given under Section 13 (6) and that such notice, if any given, was invalid; that the evidence, on which the learned Judge had decreed the suit ex parte, was not sufficient to prove the validity of the notice of ejectment meaning the notice to quit under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act.

6. Two learned Judges of the Division Bench, hearing the first appeal, were of the view that when the defence against delivery of possession had been struck out under Section 17 (3) the defendant should not be allowed to agitate the ground as to the non-existence or invalidity of a notice under Section 13 (6), either in the Court below or in the Court of Appeal and that he should not be permitted to take the defence as to the non-existence or invalidity of a notice of ejectment for the first time in appeal as he did (not?) appear in the Court below at the final hearing. Their views, indicated above, did not agree, in their opinion, with the decision of another Division Bench of this Court in the case of Subodh Chandra Singha v. Santosh

Kumar Srimani reported in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 on those points. They had framed two points, quoted below, and had referred the case to the Full Bench for determination as to whether upon the two points, framed by them, the decision in the case of Subodh Chandra Singha v. Santosh Kumar Srimani, (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 has been rightly decided.

7. The two points, framed by them, are:—

(1) In our opinion, where a defence as to delivery of possession has been struck out under Section 17 (3) the defendant can no longer take the defence of the non-existence or invalidity of a notice under Section 13 (6) either in the Court below or in the Court of Appeal.

(2) In our opinion, where a defendant does not appear in the Court below and take the defence as to the non-existence or invalidity of a notice of ejectment he should not be permitted to take the defence for the first time in appeal.

8. Before introduction of Section 12 of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 and subsequent introduction of Section 13 (1) in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, on repeal of 1950 Act, a landlord was entitled to a decree for eviction of a tenant on proof that he had validly determined the tenancy of the tenant. By Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 the tenants have been given special protection against eviction on grounds, enumerated in Clauses (a) to (k) of sub-section (1). In Section 13 (6) it has further been laid down that a landlord, before filing a suit for eviction, is required to give a notice of suit in addition to, or together with, his notice to quit under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act to "ask for" a decree for possession considering "if the tenant has dis-entitled himself" to protection against eviction on any or more of the grounds introduced by Section 13 (1).

9. Section 17 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, to be hereafter called the Act, is that a tenant, against whom a suit on "any of the grounds referred to in Section 13" has been instituted will be required to pay or deposit arrear of rents, if any, and to continue depositing or paying current rents, thereafter, within periods specified therein. Consequence of non-compliance with Section 17 (1) is in Section 17 (3) which is that if a tenant fails to deposit or pay any amount "referred to in sub-section (1)....." the Court shall order, his defence "against delivery of possession" to be struck out and shall proceed with the hearing of the suit. When we refer to Section 13, we find that the grounds on which "recovery of possession" may be had are enumerated in its sub-section (1) and not in any other sub-section. Upon a reading of Sections 17 (1) and 17 (3), with Section 13, particularly its sub-section (1) we are of opinion that the expression "defence against delivery of possession" in Section 17 (3) means the defence as may be taken on any or more of the "grounds" in Sec. 13 (1). When a defence against delivery of possession is struck out, the tenant's defence on the grounds in Section 13 (1) is only struck out.

10. The decision in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 had been doubted by the Division Bench, referring to the Gellatly's case in 57 Cal WN 294 = (AIR 1953 Cal 409) to observe that "sub-section (6) of Section 13 is as much protection to the tenant as sub-section (1)" because of the "heading of Section 13". A similar argument based on Gellatly's case, was made and repelled in the case of Ajit Kumar v. Baijnath in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1110, Renupada Mukherjee, J., observing:

"That decision was made under the Rent Control Act of 1950 and to some extent the Lower Appellate Court has relied upon that decision. I am, however, of opinion that that decision has got no application to a case where a defence of the tenant against delivery of possession has been struck out under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. The reason is this. Mr. Roy Chowdhury rightly pointed that the Rent Control Act of 1950 did not make any provision for service of a notice of ejectment upon a tenant prior to the institution of the suit. The notice was governed by the provisions of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. The West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act of 1956 makes a separate provision for service of notice upon the tenant before the filing of an ejectment suit... ..

Section 17 (3) of the Act does not say that the whole defence of the defendant will be struck out if he incurs the penalty of non-payment of arrears of rent or of current rent. It says that the defence against delivery of possession will be struck out. The expression "defence against delivery of possession" is a relative expression, because the word "defence", is a counterpart of the word

"offence" which in this particular context means the case of the plaintiff. In an ejectment suit under Section 17 of the Act, the plaintiff claims recovery of possession of some particular premises on a ground or grounds referred to in Sec. 13. Where a suit is contested, the tenant puts forth a defence against the ground or grounds alleged in the plaint. Sub-section (3) of Section 17 lays down that a tenant who incurs the penalty contained in that sub-section shall not be permitted to press his defence against delivery of possession which should be struck out. This has no reference to the service of notice or to its validity. It may be that the service of a notice to quit is a condition precedent to the institution of a suit for ejectment under Section 17 of the Act, but it cannot be said by any stretch of imagination that the notice has any connection, direct or remote, with the several grounds of ejectment enumerated in Clauses (a) to (k) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Act. That being the position, it will be permissible for a tenant whose defence against delivery of possession has been struck out to contest the suit of the plaintiff landlord on the ground that the notice to quit has not been served upon him, or that the notice is not legal or sufficient."

11. In 57 Cal WN 294 = (AIR 1953 Cal 409) the suit was filed on the ground that the tenant, being a defaulter in payment of rents, was not entitled to any protection under Section 12 (1) (i) as his defence against "ejectment" had been struck out under Section 14 (4) of 1950 Act. It was held that for non-compliance with the provision of Section 14 (1) his defence against ejectment i.e. his defence so far as the "special protection" in Section 12 (1) (i) conferred on the tenant, would be unavailable to him. That case did not consider the question that has arisen in the instant case. There was no corresponding provision like Section 13 (6) in Section 12. Whether a defence as to the entertainability of a suit on the ground of absence of notice, enjoined under the 1950 Act, was also a "special protection" conferred to a tenant by that Act was not considered or decided. That case is of no aid in determination of the questions before us.

12. The conclusion, that we have reached above, is what two Division Bench decisions of this Court, namely in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 and 73 Cal WN 305 have made on the same question. P. M. Mukherjee, J., speaking for the Court in

"Mr. Sen appearing on behalf of the plaintiff respondent while realising that the impugned notice might be invalid or insufficient for purposes of Section 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, and this invalidity or insufficiency may lead to the dismissal of his client's suit, as aforesaid sought to argue that the above objection is no longer open to the defendant appellant in this Court. Mr. Sen argued that in the instant case the tenant's defence against delivery of possession was struck out under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Mr. Sen argues that the objection to the notice under S. 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 which according to him, is only part of the special defence, provided under the aforesaid Act, must be deemed to have been taken away from the defendant and it is no longer open to him to urge this point in support of this appeal..... The mere striking out of the tenant's defence — be it the general defence under the law or only the special defence, if any, under the above Act, would not, therefore, affect this position and improve the plaintiff's lot and its only effect will be that the tenant, whose defence has been struck out, will be placed merely in the position of one, who has not defended the suit and the suit would proceed ex parte. In other words, the result, will be that the suit will be heard ex parte. Even at this ex parte hearing, however, the plaintiff will have to prove that he has complied with all the requirements, which would entitle him to maintain the suit. The position in regard to the notice under Section 13 (6) in this respect, is in no way, different from the position in regard to a notice to quit and it is, certainly, well and firmly established that, even in an appeal from an ex parte decree for ejectment, the tenant is entitled to challenge the validity and sufficiency of the notice to quit".

R. N. Dutt, J., in the other case, speaking for the Court, observed as follows:

"We would rather hold that what is struck out is the defence against delivery of possession under Section 13 (1) of the Act. The special protection conferred on the tenant under the premises Tenancy Act, 1956, is contained in Section 13 (1) of the Act. What is struck out under Section 17 (3) of the Act is the defence against delivery of possession provided for under the Act, that is the special protection contained in Section 13 (1) of the Act. The effect of this conclusion is that apart from the question of jurisdiction the landlord will have to prove the service of notice of suit under Section 13 (6) of the Act of 1956."

13. The next point for consideration is whether sub-section (6) of Section 13 is also a special "protection" conferred by 1956 Act to the tenant. Sub-section (6) is part of Section 13. The heading of section is "protection of tenant against eviction". Heading prefixed to a section cannot restrict the meaning of the section, and, is only useful aid in cases of doubt. If the language of section is clear, heading is not to be taken into consideration. The heading cannot be used to cut down the clear words of the section. Lord Macnaghten speaking for Privy Council in the case of Thakurain Balraj Kunwar v. Rae Jagatpal Singh reported in (1904) 31 Ind App 132 (PC) observed at page 142

"It is well settled that marginal notes to the section of an Act of Parliament cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the Act. The contrary opinion originated in a mistake and it has been exploded long ago. There seems to be no reason for giving the marginal notes in an Indian Statute any greater authority than the marginal notes in an English Act of Parliament".

Sub-section (6) prescribed a step to be taken before filing the suit. "Protection against eviction" relates to a step after the suit is decided against the tenant for his eviction. When a tenant is held evictable in law, the Court further considers whether he can seek or get protection against "eviction" on any grounds in sub-section (1). Sub-section (6) is not any protection against eviction.

14. In I.-T. Commissioner v. Ahunbhai Umarbhai & Co. reported in AIR 1950 SC 134 at p. 141, para. 19 (middle) Supreme Court quoted with approval the observations in (1904) 31 Ind App 132 (PC).

15. Lord Thankerton in the case of Secretary of State v. Mask & Company reported in AIR 1940 PC 105-109 and Lord Sumner in the case of Abdul Rahim Mohamed v. Municipal Commissioners for City of Bombay reported in ILR 42 Bom 462 = (AIR 1918 PC 20) made similar observations.

16. Mostwell on Interpretation of Statutes — 11th Edition at page 48 quot—ing Lord Goddard in Rex. v. Surrey Assessment Commissioner reported in (1948) 1 KB 29 at page 32 writes:

"While the Court is entitled to look at the headings in an Act of Parliament to resolve any doubt they may have as to ambiguous words, the law is quite clear that you cannot use such headings to give a different effect to clear words in this section, where there cannot be doubt as to the ordinary meaning".

17. P. N. Mukherjee, J., has held in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 at page 187. Col. 2 that it refers to "Jurisdiction" observing as follows:—

"It is, in essence, a point of jurisdiction or, in other words, the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit in the absence of such a notice. It is not, strictly a part of the tenant's defence. It is a part of the requirement of the plaintiff to entitle him to maintain the suit."

18. If we accept the contention that the heading controls the whole of Section 13 in all its sub-sections, consequence that will follow will be that the defence of a tenant, sued for eviction on the ground under Section 13 (1) (f), pleading the bar laid down in sub-sec. (3-A), will also be unavailable to him on his "defence against delivery of possession" being struck out. That is a defence unconnected with "special protection", imposing restriction upon the landlord in the matter of commencement of his suit for eviction before a "certain period". "Special Protection", conferred by the 1956 Act, is only in Section 13 (1). Any other defence under any other sub-section of Section 13 or in any other section of the Act or in other Act is not "against delivery of possession". The words of Section 13 are clear. Meaning of any of its sub-section, is not to be ascertained with reference to the heading of the section.

19. By the notice under Sec. 106, Transfer of Property Act the landlord gets the right to possess. He has to enforce that right by a suit for recovery of possession. An embargo on his such right by a suit to recovery of possession is that he has to give a notice of suit under Section 13 (6) of 1956 Act. It was argued that by putting that "embargo" another protection against eviction was given to the tenant. This contention does not appear to us to be sound. This restriction has no connection with "eviction of the tenant". It is but a restriction on the "filing" of the suit. That means that the Court is to consider, on such objection when taken, as to whether it can hear the suit or go into questions relating to special protection and not to consider as to whether "special protection" is available or will be given or not.

20. The decision in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 cannot be said to have been reached incorrectly on this ground. Question (1) will be answered in the affirmative.

21. When a suit is decreed ex parte, because of the defendant not appearing or not participating in the trial after appearance, law has given him the right to file an appeal against that ex parte judgment and decree and to show in that appeal that the judgment, on the materials on record, could, and should, not have been passed. He cannot, therefore be debarred from urging at the hearing of such an appeal his objections to the decree. The question is whether because of his appearance on the day of trial and "Voluntary retirement" thereafter from the case he waived his "right" to object to the entertainability of the suit on the ground of absence or invalidity of the notice of ejectment. Whether he, has waived his "right" by voluntary retirement? N. H. Bhagwati J., in the case of Basheswar Nath v. I.T. Commissioner reported in AIR 1959 SC 149 in para. 53 while dealing with the connotation of "waiver" observed:

"It has been said that 'waiver' is a troublesome term in law. The generally accepted connotation is that to constitute waiver there must be an intentional relinquishment of a known right or the voluntary relinquishment or abandonment of a known existing legal right, or conduct such as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of a known right or privilege. Waiver differs from estoppel in the sense that it is contractual and is an agreement to release or not to assert a right, Estoppel is a rule on evidence. (See Dawson's Bank Ltd. v. Nippon Menkwa Kabushiki Kaisha, 62 Ind App 100 at p. 108 = (AIR 1935 PC 79 at p. 82))... and it would, I think, be going too far to hold that every unsuspecting submission to a law, subsequently declared to be invalid, must give rise to a plea of waiver; this would make constitutional rights depend for their vitality on the accident of a timely challenge and render them illusory to a very large extent."

ported in AIR 1972 SC 343 it has been held that "there cannot be any waiver by conduct or by implication of the requirement of a written notice" Voluntary retirement of the lawyer is only a 'conduct' of the defendant, if any.

22. P. N. Mukherjee, J., in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 at page 186, Col 2 observed:

"Assuming however, that the point was not raised earlier as aforesaid, even then we are of the view that the plea of waiver is utterly inappropriate in a case of this kind. Waiver, as it is well known, is intentional relinquishment of a known right. It is true, that such intention may be inferred from circumstances, but the right in question must be a known right. This, indeed is well established in this Court (Vide — Dhanukdhari Singh v. Nathima Sahu, (1907) 11 Cal WN 848) and it has only recently been re-affirmed by the Supreme Court in Manak Lal, Advocate v. Dr. Prem Chand Singhi, AIR 1957 SC 425 at p. 431. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court have in the case, just cited, categorically laid down that the party, against whom waiver is pleaded, must have known about the relevant facts and of his right, which was said to have been waived. Judged by this test, the plea of waiver in the instant case would be unavailing. The law on the point of the notice under Section 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, and particularly, whether it will be a notice to quit or a notice of suit or a combined notice to answer both the above descriptions, was unsettled and was in a state of confusion or in a fluid state until the recent Special Bench decision in F. A. 444 of 1961 (See also F.S.'s Nos. 101 and 102 of 1961), above cited. If the law was unsettled and the position was not clear as to the nature of this particular notice, it will normally, at least, and generally speaking, — that is, in the absence of very strong circumstances to the contrary — be utterly inappropriate to uphold a plea of waiver in respect of such a notice. It is significant to note, in this connection, that the plaintiff, in the instant case, refers to the notice in question only as a notice to quit. There is no reference, in the plaint to this notice as a notice of suit. It is difficult, in the above context, in the circumstances of this case, to sustain a plea of waiver of the disputed notice or of any defect thereof as a notice of suit, even assuming that no specific objection was taken on the ground that it is not a proper notice of

23. Waiver is "intentional withdrawal of a known existing right". The judicial pronouncement laying down that a notice is a necessary antecedent step before a trial for eviction was made only on 19-6-1963 when this Court in its Full Bench decision in AIR 1964 Cal 1 so ruled. The tenant when his lawyer retired on 16-3-1960 had not any knowledge of any such right to object to the filing of ejectment suit for absence of notice under Section 13 (6). So his retirement on 16-3-1960 was not waiver of a known right. The referring Judges when they felt unable to agree with P. N. Mukherjee, J. do not appear to have adverted to his Lordship's observations and had not given any reasons for their disagreement with him.

24. There was no statement in the plaint that two notices, one to quit and the other notice of suit, or one notice, combining both, was given. If the statements in paras. 3 and 4 of the plaint are taken as referring to the two notices, separate or combined, then the defence in paras. 4 and 5 of the written statement is a denial of the same, as to the existence and validity of both. No specific issue was raised as to the notice of suit. There was no waiver of the objection as to absence or invalidity of notice of suit. Objection as to that, in our opinion, was taken in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the written statement. The question is whether the tenant, not waiving his objection as to the notice, in his written statement, can be said to have waived it by "retirement" from the suit.

25. It was contended that there was "voluntary retirement" from the suit by the defendant when his lawyer, upon his reading of the defendant's challans, submitted "the defendant did not, on the challan filed, deposit rent on term of Section 17 (1) of the Act upto date and his written statement cannot be saved from being struck off". His retirement, with Court's leave, could not have been from the suit. The Court could not have given such 'leave' for his retirement from the suit wholly. For, even after his defence against delivery of possession was struck out, he could show that the notice to quit was not served at all. The allegation in plaintiff's petition under Section 17 (3) was that the "rents from December, 1954, to date of suit" had not been deposited in "Court". It was not his allegation that he had not deposited those in Rent Controller's Office. The point for determination in the application under Section 17 (3) was whether the deposit of rents, allegedly in arrears, by the defendants in Rent Controller's Office, as stated in his objection, filed on 20-6-1959 would be "good deposit" for the purpose of Section 17 (1) or were not deposit in Court. Defendant's learned Advocate on his view that those were not "good deposits" under Section 17 (1) asked for Court's leave to retire from the suit. In spite of defendant's clear case in his petition of objection dated 20-6-1959 to plaintiff's petition under Section 17 (3) the Court did not decide whether or not those deposits in Rent Controller's Office were "good deposits" under Section 17 (1). The entire trial was vitiated by lawyer's mistaken admission on a point of law. In the case of Secretary of State v. Shiba-prasad Jana reported in AIR 1919 Cal 972 the decision is that "an erroneous admission by a lawyer on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude a party from claiming his legal rights in the appellate Court". Voluntary retirement following an erroneous admission of the lawyer is no "waiver" by the defendant. Even if it were so, it would not be waiver as this "right to object" was not known.

26. To pass an ex parte decree in a suit for ejectment on one of the grounds in Section 13 (1), the Court is required to decide, whether the suit is defended or not (if the relationship of landlord and tenant is not disputed as here) (a) whether the tenancy has been validly determined by a notice under Section 106, Transfer of Property Act, (b) whether a valid notice of suit was given before filing the suit (c) whether the ground alleged in the plaint to take away the tenant's special protection conferred by Section 13 (1), has been established on the evidence. This is the requirement of Order 20, Rule 4, Civil Procedure Code, whether the suit is contested or not. The Court cannot relieve itself of the necessity of complying with Order 20, Rule 4 even if it strikes out the tenant's defence against delivery of possession or the written statement. That being the position in law, it would be wrong not to permit the tenant to contend and show, if possible, on plaintiff's evidence and materials as are on record, both at the trial and also at the appeal stage, that the plaintiff is not entitled to the decree prayed for, though he would not be permitted either to cross-examine plaintiff's witnesses, when they give evidence, or to call his

27. There is no finding in the ex parte judgment by the trial Judge that the defendant is a "defaulter". As it had not made any such finding, the Court could not pass a decree for eviction. This is the view taken by the Supreme Court in the case of Bahadur Singh v. Muni Subrat Dass in (1969) 2 SCR 432 where it has been held that the decree for delivery of possession to the landlord is a nullity if not made in a suit by the landlord for recovery of possession from the tenant on any of the grounds stated in Section 13 (1) of Delhi & Ajmir Rent Control Act, 1952 and unless the Court was satisfied that such a ground of eviction exists. Reference may also be made to the case of Smt. Kaushalya Devi v. K. L. Bansal in AIR 1970 SC 838 and Ferozilal Jain v. Man Mal in AIR 1970 SC 794 and K. K. Chari v. R. M. Seshadri in AIR 1973 SC 1311. The defendant cannot, therefore, be debarred from showing in the appeal Court absence of such finding.

28. The case of Subodh v. Santosh in (1964) 68 Cal WN 184 has been rightly decided on both the points, framed by the referring appeal Court.

29. We answer the points raised as follows:—

(1) Yes, can take.

(2) Should be permitted.

M. N. RAY, J.

Civil Rule No. (W) of 1977, D/- 18-1-1977.

Constitution of India, Article 226 — Writ petition by Prodhon challenging order of supersession of Panchayat — Panchayat not impleaded as party — Petition not maintainable — (West Bengal Panchayat Act (1 of 1956), Ss. 30, 67)

Held that the Panchayat which has a juristic character and has been superseded, in view of its incorporation, is not only a relevant but also a necessary and proper party because the right of the same has primarily been infringed or prejudiced by the order of supersession. The Prodhan, if at all, has some indirect right and such right cannot be claimed directly and in the absence of the said Panchayat, because his right, if any, is subject to the life of the same. (Para 8)

In this view the application at the instance of the Prodhan and in the absence of a relevant and proper party viz., the Panchayat, would not be maintainable even though the other members of the said Panchayat have been impleaded as respondents. A person who is directly affected by an order as in the present case can certainly throw a challenge but the position would be different if he himself is not directly involved by the impugned order because he cannot claim the right in the absence of the source of such right. If anybody who is interested in the said source of the right in the case it is the said Panchayat and none else. As such, the petition, in the absence of the said Panchayat would not be maintainable. Mr. Maitra, for Petitioner.

ORDER:— In this application, the petitioner, who is an elected member of the Kankuria Anchal Panchayat (hereinafter referred to as the said Panchayat), has impeached an order dated December 31, 1976 (Annexure B), whereby in terms of a notification issued under Section 67 of the West Bengal Panchayat Act, 1957 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the said Panchayat has been superseded for a period of one year from January 3, 1977. The said order was made on the basis of and under an order dated December 21, 1976 (Annexure 'A'), which the petitioner has also challenged.

2. Admittedly the petitioner is not the elected Prodhan of the said Panchayat and he has contended that because of abscondence of the erstwhile Prodhan of the said Panchayat and two other members, the same has suffered much and in fact such sufferings continued till the election of one Shri Pasupati Tah, Respondent No. 7 as Prodhan on the basis of a meeting convened in March 1972 with the prior approval and sanction in terms of law. He has stated that on such election the said Panchayat resumed its due functions with effect from March 31, 1972. As such, the petitioner has contended that since then he along with other members of the said Panchayat were discharging their functions duly. In fact the petitioner has contended that the administration and acts of the said Panchayat have been duly appreciated by the authorities concerned. Such appreciation, the petitioner has contended was made and received after an inspection on January 19, 1974 by the Panchayat Extension Officer, Kalna I.

3. Thereafter, there was another inspection of the said Panchayat by the said Panchayat Extension Officer and Block Development Officer, Kalna I, on November 30, 1976 and it was found and recorded by them that the Prodhan of the said Panchayat was not competent and authorised to spend any money on repair of bridges and as such the said expenditure should be reported to the said Panchayat at its next meeting. It was also recorded that the said Shri Tah (Respondent No. 7), the elected Prodhan made over the charge of his office to the petitioner along with Rs. 3,491.91 paise. Apart from the above, the working of the said Panchayat was otherwise found to be satisfactory. It has further been contended by the petitioner that he was duly elected by the other members of the said Panchayat to carry out the duties and functions of a Prodhan in the temporary absence on leave of the duly elected Prodhan viz., Respondent No. 7. It has been contended by him that even in spite of overall improvements of the said Panchayat and its commendable performances that by a notification dated December 21, 1976 (Annexure 'A'), the Governor was pleased to record his satisfaction on the report of the prescribed authority under the said Act and appointed for the purpose of Section 67 of the same that the said Panchayat was not competent to perform and was guilty of default in the performance of duties under the said Act and as such in exercise of powers under the said Section 67, the said Panchayat should be superseded for a period of one year from the date of publication of the notification and the impugned order in Annexure "C", particulars whereof have been mentioned earlier, was issued on December 31, 1976, directing thereby that during the period of supersession of the said Panchayat, all powers, duties and functions of the same shall be exercised by the Extension Officer of Panchayats, Kalna I, Development Block.

4. The order of supersession has been contended by the petitioner to be bad, void, illegal, irregular, unauthorised and against principles of natural justice. It was contended that at no point of time the said Panchayat was even given any notice or informed of any unsatisfactory work or any irregular or illegal act or action on their part. It has further been contended that such supersession has cast a stigma, an aspersion on the work and dealings of the said Panchayat and as such the same should have been given an opportunity to explain and that fact or failure alone would be enough to hold and find violation of principles of natural justice. Mr. Maitra appearing in support of the application further took me through Sections 67 and 68 and submitted that on the admitted facts of the case, read along with those sections, the petitioner should be deemed to be successful in establishing a prima facie case for a Rule and the corresponding order of injunction in terms of prayer (d) of the petition. Since a point whether the petition at the instance of the petitioner and not the Anchal Panchayat concerned which under Section 30 of the said Act, is a body corporate having perpetual succession and a common seal and can sue or be sued in its corporate name and that too because of the nature of the impugned order of supersession, would be maintainable, arose, Mr. Maitra submitted that since the petitioner has a right to hold the office of the Pradhan of the said Panchayat, he must be considered to be a person aggrieved and as such entitled to maintain the petition and that too because his right to the office was jeopardised by the patent illegal order of supersession. He submitted that since the effect of supersession of the said Panchayat would ultimately affect the petitioner's right to hold the office, he must also be deemed to be the person aggrieved and to maintain the petition. He submitted further that the office of the Pradhan is not an office of profit but one of prestige and when such right has been threatened or sought to be interfered with, although indirectly, the petition at the instance of the petitioner would be maintainable, the more so when other members of the said Panchayat have been impleaded as party respondent. It may be necessary here to mention also that the said Panchayat, which is not only a proper but a necessary party, in view of the incorporation, has not been impleaded either as a petitioner or as respondent. In support of his contentions that any person having a legal right to enforce any obligation or law, can apply for appropriate writ or writs under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India Mr. Maitra first relied on the case of Calcutta Gas Co. (Proprietary) Ltd. v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1962 SC 1044. It has been held in that case that:

"Article 226 confers a very wide power on the High Court to issue directions and writs of the nature mentioned therein for the enforcement of any of the rights conferred by Part III or for any other purpose. It is, therefore, clear that person other than those claiming fundamental rights can also approach the High Court seeking a relief thereunder.

Article 226 in terms does not describe the classes of persons entitled to apply thereunder; but it is implicit in the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction that the relief asked for must be one to enforce a legal right. The existence of the right is the foundation of the exercise of jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226. The legal right that can be enforced under Article 226, like Article 32, must ordinarily be the right of the petitioner himself who complains of infraction of such right and approaches the Court for relief. The right that can be enforced under Article 226 also shall ordinarily be the personal or individual right of the petitioner himself, though in the case of some of the writs like habeas corpus or quo warranto this rule may have to be relaxed or modified."

5. Mr. Maitra, thereafter relied on the case of Gadde Venkataswara Rao v. Government of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1966 SC 828, wherein it has been held that:

"A petitioner who seeks to file an application under Article 226 of the Constitution should 'ordinarily' be one who has a personal or individual right in the subject-matter of the petition. A personal right need not be in respect of a proprietary interest: it can also relate to an interest of a trustee. That apart in exceptional cases, as the expression 'ordinarily' indicates, a person who has been prejudicially affected by an act or omission of an authority can file a writ even though he has no proprietary or even fiduciary interest in the subject-matter thereof."

6. Mr. Maitra then referred to the case of Makhan Lal Chakravartty v. S. K. Chatterjee, AIR 1954 Cal 208, wherein it has been held that:

"following the usual procedure applicable to motions the position is as follows: (1) In an application under Article 226, all persons must be made parties, who are or are likely to be affected by the issue of a writ or order. In the case of mandamus or prohibition all parties must necessarily be before the Court who are required to obey the directions of the writ, or whose presence is necessary to make such directions effective. (2) The artificial rules under the English practice, where in certain cases such writs can be made ex parte in the first instance, do not prevail in Courts of India. (3) Any party likely to be affected by a writ or order, may appear at the hearing (or make a prior application), and ask for leave to join the proceedings, or to have the rule served upon it. (4) The Court may order that a petition used as grounds for the issue of a rule nisi be amended and/or a rule nisi be amended, by the addition of parties. (5) If a necessary party or a party likely to be affected by the writ or order, or a party whose presence may be necessary to make the writ effective is not before the Court, the Court may, either upon an application made for that purpose, or of its own motion direct that such a party be added and the rule nisi served upon him or even that he may be allowed to be present at the hearing without being served with a rule nisi. In such a case, the person served with the rule nisi or permitted to attend the hearing, would be deemed to be a party and be entitled to show cause or support or oppose a cause already shown. (6) Such amendments should ordinarily be done upon notice to the party proposed to be added or served. There is however no rule of law which prevents an ex parte order being made in a suitable case. (7) Upon such an amendment being effected, directions should be given for the use of affidavits and/or additional affidavits."

and contended that since all the other members of the said Panchayat have been impleaded as party respondent, the application should not be dismissed and at least a Rule should be issued as there is a strong prima facie case for the same and the question of locus standi of the petitioner should not at this stage stand in the way of issuing the Rule, the more so when all the necessary parties are before the Court on being impleaded as Respondents. In support of such contentions, Mr. Maitra relied on the case of Jivandas Khimji v. Smt. Narbada Bai, AIR 1959 Cal 519, where it has been observed on the question as to who is a necessary party that:

"the position in law undoubtedly is that in the absence of necessary parties a decree will not be made in favour of the plaintiff. The question as to what parties are necessary is often not easy to determine. One test which has all along been recognised as of great importance is that when in the absence of a party the Court cannot give an effective remedy, that party is a necessary party."

In order that a party may be considered a necessary party defendant, two conditions must be satisfied, first, that there must be a right to some relief against him in respect of the matter involved in the suit; and second, that his presence should be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit."

7. Mr. Maitra then referred to the prayers in the petition which include prayers for the issue of both the writs of Mandamus and Certiorari and submitted that if the prayer was only for Mandamus, then perhaps and if at all, the petition would not have been maintainable at the instance of the petitioner because the grant of the same is, as a general rule, a matter for the discretion of the Court and is not an order granted as of right and is also not issued as a matter of course. He submitted that accordingly, the Court may refuse the order, not only upon merits, but also by reason of the special circumstances of the case. Even then it was submitted by Mr. Maitra that the Rule at the instance of the petitioner should be issued because such power to issue a Rule and the writs asked for can be exercised for a two-fold purpose, viz., (1) the enforcement of (a) fundamental rights, as well as of (b) non-fundamental or ordinary legal rights and the more so and particularly when there is a prayer for Certiorari, which is a writ of course when the authorities concerned, having the legal authority to determine questions affecting the right of subjects and having the duty to act judicially, fail of refuse to act duly. Hence such writ is also available against quasi-judicial orders, which according to Mr. Maitra was one in the instant case and this it was submitted that a Rule at least for the prayer of certiorari should be issued. To substantiate his contentions that the order in the instant case was quasi-judicial, reliance was placed by Mr. Maitra on the case of Dr. A. N. Tendulkar v. C. F. Mathias, AIR 1965 Bom 187. In that case, the State Government, by an order dated July 16, 1964, in exercise of the powers under Section 23 (7) of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1961, removed the petitioner from the office of the President and it has been observed that the order passed by the State Government under the provisions as aforementioned removing the said President on the ground of neglect and incapacity in performing his duty properly, viz., his failure in disallowing the resolution passed by the members for suspending certain Councillors and thus preventing them from participating in a meeting, was a quasi-judicial one. It may be mentioned that the petitioner in that case was the President of the Municipality in question.

8. The propositions as submitted by Mr. Maitra are sound but still then the question is whether at the instance of the petitioner, who has just claimed to be the Prodhan of the said Panchayat, although the members of the same and not the said Panchayat, which under Section 30 of the said Act has a juristic character, have been impleaded as respondents. The said Panchayat which has a juristic character and has been superseded, in view of its incorporation, according to me is not only a relevant but also a necessary and proper party because the right of the same has primarily been infringed or prejudiced by the order of supersession. The petitioner, if at all, has some indirect right and such right cannot be claimed directly and in the absence of the said Panchayat, because his right, if any, is subject to the life of the same. Article 226 of the Constitution of India as has been observed by me in the case of Ganesh Chandra Das v. Director of Rationing, (1977) 1 Cal LJ 60 (61):

"Article 226 of the Constitution does not say anything about the person by whom an application for relief can be made but it does indicate the purpose for which writs, directions and orders can be issued and obtained. Under that Article, such writs etc. can be obtained only for enforcement of fundamental rights and for any other purpose. It follows therefore that the relief that may be sought for under the said Article can only be had if such relief is based on the existence of a right. The powers under the Article can normally be invoked only by a person whose personal rights or interests are adversely affected by any impugned law or Order. Hence the right which may be the basis of an application under Article 226 must be a personal and individual right. The person who complains of any infringement as the basis of his writ application must prove and establish either that he himself has been victim or that an action has been taken by any authority to his prejudice. Thus, the rights that can be enforced in writ petitions must ordinarily be the rights of the petitioners themselves."

In the view as aforesaid, although the order in the instant case was quasi-judicial, the application at the instance of the petitioner and in the absence of a relevant and proper party viz., the said Panchayat, would not be maintainable even though the other members of the said Panchayat have been impleaded as respondents.

9. The cases as cited by Mr. Maitra are distinguishable in the facts and circumstances of the present one. In the case of Calcutta Gas Company (Proprietary) Ltd. v. State of West Bengal, (AIR 1962 SC 1044) (Supra) the Company itself moved against the impugned action and the point arose whether the petition at the instance of the Company was maintainable. There the Company itself was directly affected by the order in question and that was not a case of indirect effect as in the present one. A person who is directly affected by an order as in the present case can certainly throw a challenge but the position would be different if he himself is not directly involved by the impugned order because he cannot claim the right in the absence of the source of such right. If anybody who is interested in the said source of the right in the case is the said Panchayat and none else. As such, the petition, in the absence of the said Panchayat, in my view would not be maintainable. If Mr. Maitra's submissions are accepted then that would create greater chaos and difficulty. If his contention are accepted then why a Prodhan, a petition would also be maintainable at the instance of any employee as after all he also be affected by the order of supersession as his terms of service or conditions of employment may in any way or adversely affected by the order. The right of a Prodhani or the members of a Panchayat being dependent on the existence of a Panchayat, if any one would be interested in such right is the Panchayat concerned and as such any petition without the Panchayat, in this case the said Panchayat, which as a juristic character under the said Act, would not be maintainable. The view which I have taken would also distinguish the case of Gadde Venkateswara Rao v. Government of Andhra Pradesh, (AIR 1966 SC 828) (supra) and furthermore when it is not apparent from the said determination whether the Panchayat concerned was a party respondent in the said proceedings. The case of Makhan Lal Chakravarty v. S. K. Chatterjee, (AIR 1954 Cal 208) (supra) is also distinguishable on the admitted position that the said Panchayat has not been impleaded as a party and the same view would also be applicable in the case of Javindas Khimji v. Smt. Narbada Rai, (AIR 1959 Cal 519) (supra).

10. In view of the above, I hold that the petition in the facts and circumstances of the case to be not maintainable in the absence of the said Panchayat which have a juristic character.

11. The petition is thus rejected.
Petition dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 122

N. C. MUKHERJI AND B. C. RAY, JJ.

Mahasukrai Ramrichpal, Appellant
v. Kishori Charan Law, Respondent.

18-1-1977.

(A) Transfer of Property Act (1882),

Necessity. (W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 13).

In case of monthly tenancies, provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act apply and the landlord is not required to serve a notice under Section 114-A of the Transfer of Property Act before filing a suit for ejectment on the ground of breach of clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act. (Para 5)

(B) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 106 — Monthly tenancy after holding over to commence on 2nd of a month to the 1st of following month — Notice calling upon a tenant to deliver possession on the expiry of the month of November 1963 or at the end of a month of his tenancy which would expire next after one month from the receipt of the notice — Notice to quit is good and valid.

Guruprasad Ghosh and Sundarananda Pal, for Appellant; Abhijit Banerjee, for Respondent.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an appeal against the judgment and decree passed by the learned Additional District Judge, 12th Court at Alipore in Title Appeal No. 1038 of 1970 dated 30th April 1971 affirming those of the learned Subordinate Judge, 6th Court at Alipore in Title Suit No. 67 of 1963 passed on 19th June 1970. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

The respondent filed a suit for eject-ment and mesne profits against the defendant, who was a monthly tenant at a rent of Rs. 400/- payable according to the English calendar month. According to the terms of the tenancy, the defendant was not to make any addition or alteration to the premises without the consent of the plaintiff in writing. The plaintiff was informed that the defendant has constructed a pucca temple and two sheds with pucca walls etc. with C. I. roof on the suit premises. These structures are of permanent nature and have been illegally made without the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff. Thus the defendant has acted contrary to the provisions of Clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act and is liable for ejectment.

2. The defence is that the structures in question were made in the year 1958 and in the first part of 1959 with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff.
The defendant also challenges the legality and validity of the notice of eject-ment. Both the Courts below found that the notice of ejectment was legal and valid and the defendant violated the provisions of Clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act and is liable for ejectment. Being aggrieved, the defendant has preferred the present appeal.

3. Mr. Guruprasad Ghosh, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant takes several points, most of which were not taken in the Courts below. In the first place, Mr. Ghosh contends as no notice of forfeiture was given by the landlord to the defendant according to the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act the suit is not maintainable. Mr. Ghosh submits that in the present case the lease was for five years which was to expire on 1-5-1958. But after the expiry of the lease, the defendant continued in possession with the consent of the plaintiff on payment of rent and thereby became a monthly tenant by holding over. But in such a case if the plaintiff wants to evict the defendant on the ground that he has violated the provisions of Clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, the landlord is required to serve a notice upon the defendant according to the provisions of Section 114-A of the Act. This section provides that "Where a lease of immovable property has determined by forfeiture for a breach of an express condition which provides that on breach thereof the lessor may re-enter, no suit for ejectment shall lie unless and until the lessor has served on the lessee a notice in writing— (a) specifying the particular breach complained of; and (b) if the breach is capable of remedy, requiring the lessee to remedy the breach.....".

4. Mr. Abhijit Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent contends that the landlord is not required to serve a notice under Section 114-A in case of monthly tenancy on holding over after the expiry of lease. In such a case the tenancy is governed under the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. This is a self contained Act and the provisions of the Act fully apply in case of monthly tenancies and that being so, when there is specific provision for ejectment for breach of the Clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act it is not required for the landlord to serve a notice under Section 114-A of the Transfer of Property Act. Mr. Banerjee in this connection also draws our attention that all along in the Courts below the tenant took up the position that the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act applies. Order No. 33 dated 8th of February 1965 is an order by which the plain-tiff's application under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act was allowed and the defendant's application against delivery of possession was struck off. The defendant at the time of hearing of the said application filed certain challans to show that certain amounts were deposited. The Court considered those deposits and was of the opinion that the defendant did not comply with the provisions of Section 17 (1) of the Act.

5. Mr. Banerjee next refers to Order No. 51 dated 25th of April 1966. That was an order passed on the defendant's application filed under Section 17-A of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. This application was rejected after contested hearing. Again it is seen from Order No. 76 dated 14th of January 1969 that the defendant filed an application under Section 17-C of the West Bengal Ordinance No. VII of 1967. That application was disposed of by the learned trial Court by ordering the defendant to deposit in Court the total sum of Rs. 7,600 within 60 days from date. Mr. Banerjee submits that this being the stand taken by the defendant, the defendant now cannot be allowed to say that the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act do not apply. We have considered the legal position and we are of the opinion that in case of monthly tenancies provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act apply and the landlord is not required to serve a notice under Section 114-A of the Transfer of Property Act before filing a suit for ejectment on the ground of breach of Clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act.

6. In the next place, Mr. Ghosh submits that the notice of ejectment which was served by the plaintiff on the defendant is illegal and invalid as after the holding over, the monthly tenancy was from second of a month to the first of the following month. The notice which sought to determine the tenancy by the end of the month cannot, therefore, be considered as a valid notice. In the present case the lease was for five years and was to expire on 1st of May 1958. The registered deed of lease is Ext. 2. Mr. Ghosh submits that according to the provisions of Section 110 of the Transfer of Property Act where the time by a lease of immovable property is expressed as commencing from a particular day, in computing that time such day shall be excluded. That being so the lease terminated on 1st of May 1963 and the monthly tenancy after holding over commenced from 2nd of May. The notice of ejectment is Ext. 3. Notice is dated 18th of October 1963. Mr. Ghosh contends that as by the notice the defendant was asked to deliver vacant and peaceful possession on the expiry of the month of November 1963, the notice is bad because the monthly tenancy was from second of a month up to the first of the following month. In support of his contention Mr. Ghosh refers to the decisions reported in 37 Cal WN 1 = (AIR 1932 PC 279), (Benoy Krishna Das v. Salsiccioni) and AIR 1975 SC 1111, (Dattonpant Gopalarao Devakate v. Vithalrao Marutirao). Both the cases support the contention raised by Mr. Ghosh. But in this particular case we are to consider carefully the expressions used in the notice. The relevant portion of the notice reads as follows:—

"You are hereby given notice to quit and vacate the premises No. 10, Kali Prosanna Singhee Road, Cossipore and deliver vacant and peaceful possession thereof to my client immediately on the expiry of the month of November 1963 or at the end of a month of your tenancy which would expire next after one month from the receipt of this notice".

If the landlord simply asked the defendant to deliver possession on the expiry of the month of November 1963 then according to the decisions referred to above the notice must be held to be invalid. But in this case alternatively it has been stated that the defendant is required to deliver possession on the expiry of the month of November 1963 or at the end of a month of his tenancy which would expire next after one month from the receipt of this notice. In this connection Mr. Banerjee refers to a decision reported in AIR 1953 Cal 352, (Jatindra Nath v. Malai Ram Show). The facts of the case are almost similar. P. N. Mookerjee, J. referred to the passage occurring in Mulla's Transfer of Property Act, Edition 3 at page 653 which runs thus: "It is usual after mentioning the date of the anniversary of the tenancy to add in the alternative some general words as at the end of the year of the tenancy which will expire next after the end of one half year from the date of the service of this notice". That passage suggests that demand for possession in the alternative form is perfectly valid and well recognised in law. His Lordship relying on some English decisions was of the opinion that "There is also nothing, either in principle or in the authorities, which runs counter to the suggestion of the learned Author and, accordingly, I am inclined to accept the same". His Lordship on this point relied on two other decisions Sankar Ram v. Tulsi Bhagat, AIR 1921 Pat 307 and Ganga Prasad v. Prem Kumar, AIR 1949 All 173, and came to the conclusion that the notice to quit was good, valid and sufficient. The relevant portion of the notice in the case before his Lordship is as follows:—

"Notice is hereby given to you to vacate and deliver up possession of the said two rooms with the end of 31-7-1945 or at the end of a month of your tenancy which would expire next after 15 days from the receipt of the notice".

We have already referred to the relevant portion of the notice in the present case and we find that the terms of the relevant portion of the notice are almost similar. We therefore negative the contention raised by Mr. Ghosh.

7. Mr. Ghosh next contends that the structures said to have been constructed by the defendant are of temporary nature and as such no decree for ejectment ought to have been passed. Both the Courts below have considered this question and have come to the conclusion that the structures are of permanent character. They have also come to the conclusion that the structures were made without the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff. This being the concurrent finding of the Courts below we are not inclined to interfere in the second appeal.

8. Mr. Ghosh lastly submits that by acceptance of rent the landlord has waived the right of forfeiture. We have already held that the present case is governed by the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and that a statutory tenant is required to pay or deposit rent and by acceptance of that rent the landlord does not waive his right of forfeiture. For the reasons stated above all the contentions raised by Mr. Ghosh fail and accordingly the appeal fails.

9. In the result, the appeal is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

B. C. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

M. N. RAY, J.

Civil Rule No. 9913 (W) of 1976, D/-17-1-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), Order 6, Rule 15 and Order 19, Rule 3 — Affidavit affirming petitions — Object of — Affidavits affirmed by Tadbirkars — Petitions under Article 226 should be verified by Petitioner. (1) High Court Rules and Orders — Calcutta High Court (Original Side) Rules, Chapter VII, Rule 8; (2) High Court Rules and Orders — Calcutta High Court Rules relating to Application under Article 226, Rule 13).

The purpose of having an affirmation of a petition or application under the provisions of Order 6, Rule 15, Civil P. C., Rule 8 of Chapter VII of Original Side Rules of Calcutta High Court and under Rule 13 of the Rules relating to the applications under Article 226 of the Constitution is to fix the responsibility about the validity of the statements as made on the maker of the same and affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent would be able of his own knowledge to prove or may prove the source from which he derived such knowledge. If such purpose is not achieved in an affidavit then the very purpose of having the affidavit would be frustrated. Affidavits on all matters other than purely interlocutory one must be restricted to facts which are within the personal knowledge of the deponent. Affidavits should also clearly express, how much is a statement of the deponents knowledge and how much is a statement of his information and belief and must also state the source and the grounds of information or belief with sufficient particulars without which an affidavit would be no affidavit at all. AIR 1934 Cal 694; AIR 1952 SC 317; (1910) ILR 37 Cal 259; AIR 1967 SC 295; AIR 1970 SC 652 and (1972) 1 SCC 826, Rel. on. (Para 6)

Since the right which can be enforced under Article 226 of the Constitution must ordinarily be the right of the petitioner himself and since Tadbirkars are available who for small gain affirm affidavits, where affidavits are affirmed by such Tadbirkars, Courts should be slow in exercising their discretion without being satisfied about the affidavit or the affirmation thereof. Therefore in spite of the provisions in the Rules for applications under Article 226, it is desirable and expected that verifications should not be done by Tadbirkars or persons who are not in a position to testify the statements as verified. (Paras 7 & 8)

Mrs. Diptikana Bose and G. S. Sarkar, for Petitioner; Bholanath Bhattacharjee, for Respondents.

ORDER :— On July 19, 1976, a Rule against notices in Annexures "B" and "C" to the petition was issued by this Court whereby suo moto proceedings were initiated under the provisions of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955. The said petition was signed and verified by one Ananda Bhairab Ghose claiming to be the Karmachari and Tadbirkar of the petitioner. All statements in the said petition excepting those made in paragraphs 6 and 11 to 19 were affirmed as true to his knowledge. There has of course been a certificate by the learned Advocate that the said deponent was the authorised Karmachari of the petitioner and was competent to affirm the affidavit and sign the petition on his behalf.

2. At the time of issuing the Rule, this Court was pleased to grant an order maintaining status quo as on July 19, 1976 for a period of six weeks, with liberty to the petitioner to apply for extension of the said order on the petition of motion with notice to the Respondents. The petitioner was further directed to file an affidavit of service after communication of the gist of the order as made along with the copy of the petition. Such affidavit of service appears to have been filed on September 16, 1976. The affidavit of service was of course affirmed by another Tadbirkar of the petitioner whose name is Bishnupada Chakrabartty. It further appears that another Rule being Civil Rule No. 8865 (W) of 1976 was also obtained by the petitioner against certain orders made and passed under the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 on June 24, 1976. The affidavit to that petition was affirmed by one Shri Purushottam Samanta, another Tadbirkar of the petitioner. There is also a certificate appended to that petition that the said Tadbirkar, Shri Purushottam Samanta was duly authorised by the petitioner to sign the petition and also to swear the affidavit. A petitioner may have any number of Tadbirkars as there is no legal restriction on such numbers.

3. Since at different stages different Tadbirkars have affirmed affidavits on behalf of the petitioner, I wanted to satisfy myself whether the Tadbirkar of the present petition viz., Shri Ananda Bhairab Ghose was really authorised and whether the affirmations made by him were correct and whether in a writ proceedings, where a petitioner would be asking for high prerogative writs or orders, affidavit by such Tadbirkar should be made.

4. For the purposes as aforesaid, I directed the said Tadbirkar Shri Ananda Bhairab Ghose to appear before me, since the High Court has power to be satisfied when it is required to exercise its discretion in this jurisdiction on the affidavit as filed and on January 6, 1977, his deposition was recorded. From his deposition it appears that although the said deponent had affirmed the affidavit as Tadbirkar and was working under the petitioner for a long time yet he had very little or scanty knowledge about the happenings and the statements as contained in the petition, which he affirmed as true to his knowledge were without any real or little knowledge, about them. In fact he had to admit that the statements as made by him in the petition were really based on informations from his employer. Thus it is apparent that there is no proper affirmation of the petition and on the basis of such improper affidavit this Court cannot and should not direct the issue of such high prerogative writs or orders as have been prayed for.

5. Under Order 6, Rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a pleading may be verified by one of the parties pleading or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case. Under Rule 8 of Chapter VII of the Original Side Rules, where any person, other than a party pleading, verifies a pleading under Order 6, Rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure, his fitness or authority to so verify shall be proved by his affidavit. Under Rule 13 of the Rules relating to applications under Article 226 of the Constitution of India every petition must be signed and dated by the petitioner or his duly authorised agent and Rule 14 requires that all petitions shall be verified by the solemn affirmation made by the petitioner or a person or persons having cognizance of the facts stated and shall state clearly with reference to paragraphs of the petition whether the statements are based on knowledge, information and belief or on records. Where a statement is based on information, the source of information should be disclosed and where the statements are based on records, sufficient particulars should be given to identify the records. Where the petitioner is a Company or a Corporation, under Rule 15 of the Rules there should be appended an affidavit of competency and where the petitioner or a respondent is a Corporation, the provisions of Order XXIX of the Code of Civil Procedure in so far as they are applicable, shall apply.

6. The purpose of having an affirmation of a petition or application under the provisions as mentioned hereinbefore is to fix the responsibility about the validity of the statements as made on the maker of the same and affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent would be able of his own knowledge to prove or may prove the source from which he derived such knowledge. If such purpose is not achieved in an affidavit then the very purpose of having the affidavit would be frustrated. Affidavits on all matters other than purely interlocutory one must be restricted to facts which are within the personal knowledge of the deponent. Affidavits should also clearly express, as has been held in the case of Durgadas v. Nalin Chandra, 38 Cal WN 771 = (AIR 1934 Cal 694), how much is a statement of the deponents' knowledge and how much is a statement of his information and belief and must also state the source and the grounds of information or belief with sufficient particulars without which an affidavit would be no affidavit at all. This Court in the case of Padmabati Dasi v. Rasik Lal Dhar, (1910) ILR 37 Cal 259 observed that the source of information should be clearly disclosed and that view was upheld by the Supreme Court in the case of State of Bombay v. Parshottam Jog Naik, AIR 1952 SC 317 and observed that verification should invariably be modelled on the lines of Order 19, Rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, whether the same applies in terms or not. Thereafter, in the case of Barium Chemicals Ltd. v. Company Law Board, AIR 1967 SC 295 "slipshod verifications" in an affidavit was deprecated. In the cases of A. K. K. Nambiar v. Union of India, (1970) 3 SCR 121 = (AIR 1970 SC 652) it has further been observed by the Supreme Court that the importance of verification is to test the genuineness and authenticity of allegations or statements and also to make the deponent responsible for them. It has further been observed by the Supreme Court in the case of Virendra Kumar Saklecha v. Jagjiwan, (1972) 1 SCC 826 that the grounds of sources of information are to be set out in an affidavit whether the Code of Civil Procedure applies or not. So relying on the tests as laid down in the cases as mentioned above it is an admitted position that there was or has been no proper affidavit in this case on the basis of which discretion in this jurisdiction can be exercised. The little evidence which was recorded practically disclosed that all the statements in the petition were at best true to the information of the deponent and not true to his knowledge i.e. the way in which he has affirmed the affidavit. Mrs. Bose, when requested to ask questions to the deponent, did not do so but submitted that since the deponent is not a professional Tadbirkar but an old employee of the petitioner, orders may be passed on the basis of his affidavit. She further and in the alternative submitted that the affidavit is at best an ill drafted one and for that the learned Advocate, who drafted the same, may be cautioned but no order should be passed which would prejudice the case of the client. It is very difficult to visualise what is meant by the term "Professional Tadbirkar" as used by Mrs. Bose. In legal parlance such term is not or has not yet been recognised. But one thing is certain that such Tadbirkars are available, who for some small gain, affirm affidavits and perhaps that is the reason why in proceedings taken by the petitioner we find three different Tadbirkars and at least two of them do not reside anywhere near the addresses as given by the petitioner in the petitions in the two Rules as referred to hereinbefore. This is all the more reason that where affidavits are affirmed by such Tadbirkars, Courts should be slow in exercising their discretion without being satisfied about the affidavit or the affirmation thereof. The learned lawyers in my view have also a solemn duty and obligation not only to Courts but also to their clients to have proper affidavits filed as otherwise their clients' cause may suffer or be prejudiced and as such they should also be slow or think twice before filing affidavits through such Tadbirkars. While making this observation, I am also conscious of the fact that the Rules relevant for matters under Article 226 as framed by this Court do authorise petitions to be filed through persons duly authorised or verified by persons having cognizance of the facts. But in all such cases the Courts as stated hereinbefore, should be satisfied about the authority of the persons making the affidavit and the veracity of the statements made and affirmed by them, the more so when the term "Professional Tadbirkar" as used by Mrs. Bose presupposes that Tadbirkars for some small gain are available.

7. The petitioner, in the Rule has asked for the issue of writs of Mandamus and Certiorari. A writ of Mandamus is not a writ of right but purely a writ of discretion, whereas a writ of Certiorari is a writ of right. The right which can be enforced under Article 226, as held by the Supreme Court in the cases of Kalyan Singh v. State of U. P., AIR 1962 SC 1183; State of Punjab v. Suraj Prakash, AIR 1963 SC 507; State of Orissa v. Ramchandra, AIR 1964 SC 685 and Jonala v. State of U. P., (1971) 2 SCC 163 = (AIR 1971 SC 2320) must ordinarily be the right of the petitioner himself. In other words, in terms of the determination of the Supreme Court in the cases of Calcutta Gas Co. v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1962 SC 1044 and Pratap Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 72, the right which is the foundation of an application, is a personal and individual right. In view of the above, the verification of such a petition or an affidavit as held in the case of Barium Chemicals Ltd. v. Company Law Board (AIR 1967 SC 295) (supra) should be modelled on the lines prescribed in Order 19, Rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code even though the Code does not in terms apply.

8. In view of the above, even in spite of the provisions in the Rules for applications under Article 226, it is desirable and expected that verifications should not be done by Tadbirkars or persons who are not in a position to testify the statements as verified.

9. Even though the verification in the instant case was improper and irregular, the petition on that ground in my view, following the determination in the case of Mishri Debi Agarwal v. Asst. Collector of Central Excise, (1967) 71 Cal WN 385, should not be dismissed and the more so when Mrs. Basu has categorically stated that for such defective verification, if any one is to be blamed, is the draftsman of the affidavit and not the deponent and I feel further that for such defective drafting, over which the petitioner had no control, his case should not be prejudiced.

10. In that view of the matter, although I hold that this Court cannot and should not act on such defective verification by the Tadbirkar (yet I am granting liberty to the petitioner and an opportunity to him to have the petition verified afresh by reaffirming the same or to file necessary supplementary affidavit for such purpose. I direct that steps in the light of the directions as mentioned above should be taken within 3 weeks, failing which the petition would be dismissed, as being not in form.

Ramani Mohan Barman, Petitioner v. Sm. Gouri Rani Barman and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 1050 of 1976, D/- 14-1-1977.

Arbitration Act (1940), S. 34 — Stay of suit — Dissolution of partnership — Relief is discretionary — Arbitration clause as to dispute vague — Firm carrying on not a big business — All issues could be decided in the suit — Suit ought not to be stayed.

There is an element of judicial discretion in staying a suit under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act. The language of this section shows that the Court may make an order saying legal proceedings provided it is satisfied (a) there is no sufficient reason why matter should not be referred to arbitration and (b) the party seeking arbitration was ready and willing to take recourse to the arbitration proceeding at the time when the suit or proceeding is filed in a Court of law by other party. (Para 4)

In the case of a partnership firm where the language of the arbitration clause is vague in respect of disputes in connection with dissolution of the partnership firm and also valuation of its assets and all the issues can best be decided in the suit which is comprehensive enough to decide the issues between the parties coupled with the fact that the partnership firm is not carrying a big business and the partners are also close relations it is not desirable that the parties should have their disputes decided by two arbitrators whose award may again be referred to an Umpire. A decision on the disputes between the parties before the Arbitrators would delay the matter and would not be advantageous to the parties. (Para 7)

Mrs. Banerjee, for Petitioner.

ORDER:— This is an application under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 for stay of a suit filed by the respondent Sm. Gouri Rani Burman for dissolution of a partnership firm under S. 44 (d) and (g) of the Partnership Act. The facts of the case may, briefly, be stated as follows:

2. On August 7, 1964, a registered partnership was constituted between Gouri Rani Debi, respondent No. 1, Ramani Mohan Burman, the petitioner, and 3 children of Gouri Rani, namely, Kumari Sajal Rani Burman, Kumari Bharati Burman and Kumari Bani Burman who were 15 years, 13 years and 11 years old in 1964. On December 1, 1973, the petitioner wrote a letter to the said Gouri Burman expressing his wish to discontinue as a partner of the said firm. In the said letter he has suggested her to buy his share in the partnership firm for a sum of Rs. 30,000/-. Thereafter, long correspondences took place till November 20, 1975, for settling the amount which would be payable to the petitioner as the value of his share. On November 11, 1976, a suit was filed by the said Gouri Burman and her children against Ramani Mohan Burman which is pending in this Court.

3. The said partnership agreement contained an arbitration clause which reads as follows:

"21. All disputes arising between the partners in any matter relating to the partnership business or regarding the interpretation of these presents shall be referred to the arbitration of two Arbitrators—one to be appointed by each of the parties hereto of the first and third part and the decision of the said Arbitrators or in case of difference between them the decision of the Umpire to be appointed by them shall be final and binding upon the partners."

4. It is well settled that there is an element of judicial discretion in staying a suit under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act. The language of this section shows that the Court may make an order staying legal proceedings provided it is satisfied (a) there is no sufficient reason why matter should not be referred to arbitration and (b) the party seeking arbitration was ready and willing to take recourse to the arbitration proceeding at the time when the suit or proceeding is filed in a Court of law by other party. In the facts of this case, I am satisfied that the stay of the said suit for dissolution of the partnership firm should not be granted. The reasons why I have come to the said conclusion are as follows:

5. At no stage before the suit was filed against the petitioner, the latter expressed any desire to go for arbitration although disputes were raised from December, 1973 till November, 1975 in large number of letters regarding the valuation of the petitioner's share. Thus, it cannot be said that the petitioner was ready and willing to decide the dispute by arbitration before the suit was filed.

6. It has been contended by Mrs. Banerjee, Counsel for the petitioner, that by the said letter dated December 1, 1973, the petitioner has expressed his desire to retire from the partnership firm and, as such, the partnership firm has already been dissolved, inasmuch as, the partnership consisted of two persons and 3 minors, who were only given the benefits of partnership. Reliance has been placed by her on Irch Mehta v. M. Mehta, AIR 1971 SC 1953. This contention of Mrs. Banerjee cannot be accepted. There are five partners three of whom were minors in 1964. They all have become majors in 1970 under Section 30 (5) of the Partnership Act. Further, no formal notice of dissolution has been given by the petitioner although he suggested to do the same in his lawyer's letter dated March 7, 1974. Thus, it is not correct to say that by petitioner's letter dated 1-12-73, the petitioner has expressed his desire to dissolve the partnership under Sec. 32 (1) (c) of the Partnership Act, 1932. The Supreme Court decision cited by Mrs. Banerjee is distinguishable. There, the arbitration clause was expressed in the widest possible language, and the petitioner expressed his readiness and willingness to go to arbitration at a very early stage. Further, admittedly, that was a case where dispute arose between two partners.

7. I am also satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for not referring disputes raised between the parties to arbitration. The arbitration clause in this particular case, is not wide enough to decide the question of the issues relating to dissolution of partnership or whether notice of dissolution under Section 32 (1) (c) has been served. Nor the Arbitrators have been empowered to decide the valuation of the petitioner's share as in the said Supreme Court case, where arbitration clause covered disputes raised before and after the dissolution of the partnership firm. Further, there is nothing to show that the petitioner ever expressed his desire to retire from the partnership firm to the other three partners, who have attained majority by operation of law, as set out above. The three children who have become adult partners have not been given in the arbitration clause their right to choose their own nominees as arbitrators. As there has been no formal notice of dissolution before the suit was filed, the respondent Gouri Burman has exercised her statutory right under Section 44 (d) and (g) of the Partnership Act. It is to be remembered that the plaint in this suit amounts to notice of dissolution: Vide Sailendra Nath Kumar v. V. Chillar Ramia, ILR (1951) 2 Cal 140 (141). The disputes between the parties should conveniently be decided in a suit which has been filed by Gouri Burman. In any event the language of the arbitration clause is vague in respect of the disputes in connection with dissolution of the partnership firm and also valuation of its assets. All the issues can best be decided in the suit which is comprehensive enough to decide the issues between the parties. Further, the partnership firm is not carrying a big business and the partners are also close relations. It is, therefore, not desirable that the parties should have their disputes decided by two arbitrators whose award may again be referred to an Umpire. Thus, in my view, a decision on the disputes between the parties before the Arbitrators would delay the matter and would not be advantageous to the parties. Reference may also be made to Ganesh Chandra Dey v. Kamal Kumar Agarwal, AIR 1971 Cal 317.

8. For all the reasons stated above, there will be no order on this application. The application is dismissed. Costs of this application be costs in the pending suit.
Application dismissed.

Sakti Nath Mukherjee and Ramapati Roy, for Petitioner; Kalipada Chakravarti, for Opposite Party.

LT/LT/E624/76/ABO

Third Court of Subordinate Judge, Alipore on March 24, 1975 registered as Title Suit No. 59 of 1975 for a decree of dissolution of partnership of the business called "United Syndicate" carried on by the parties and for accounts, for appointment of a Commissioner for accounts and of Receiver for running partnership business, day to day administration thereof and for collection of assets. The allegations were in short that the defaulting partner, who is the defendant in the suit and the petitioner before us, had been committing serious breaches of agreement of partnership which had been set out in the paragraph 9 of the plaint. It was submitted that as by reason of his conduct it had not been practicable for the plaintiff to carry on the partnership business, it was just and equitable that the partnership should be dissolved.

2. As the notice of the suit was served on the defendant he filed an application on 7th April, 1975 not verified by affidavit, stating that under the terms of the written partnership agreement all disputes arising out of the partnership should be referred to the Arbitration. Accordingly the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit which should be stayed. Thereafter the petitioner filed another application on April, 18, 1975, which was also not verified by affidavit and it was stated therein that "the defendant was and is ready and willing to go to Arbitration." On this application the learned trial Judge passed an order on May 7, 1975 allowing the application and stayed the suit and he further directed that the suit be referred to Arbitration of two Chartered Accountants named in the partnership deed.

3. On appeal the learned District Judge, Alipore, by his order dated July 4, 1975 allowed the appeal and rejected the petitioner's application for stay of the suit under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act. This Rule is against this order.

4. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee learned Advocate appearing for the defendant petitioner submitted that the Appellate Court was wrong in rejecting the application of the defendant on the ground that it was not verified by affidavit. He submitted that this point was not taken in the Trial Court and if there was any defect in verification, the Court should have given an opportunity to the defendant to take necessary steps to remove the alleged defect instead of rejecting the same on technical ground.

5. Under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act there must be the following conditions for grant of stay of suit as laid down in Anderson Wright Ltd. v. Moran & Co., AIR 1955 SC 53.

(i) The proceeding must be initiated by a party to arbitration agreement against another party to such agreement.

(ii) The legal proceeding sought to be stayed must be in respect of matter to be referred to Arbitration.

(iii) The applicant who must not take any step in suit, was at the time of commencement of proceedings and still remains ready and willing to do all things necessary for proper conduct of the Arbitration.

(iv) The Court must be satisfied that there is no sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred to arbitration.

6. Our attention has been drawn to the decision in Padmanabhan v. Srinivasan, AIR 1967 Mad 201 where the Court found that the averment for arbitration was insufficient. In Sri Venkateswara Constructions v. Union of India, AIR 1974 Andh Pra 278, even though there was absence of averment by the defendant about his readiness and willingness to go to arbitration and the other party's attention was merely drawn to arbitration clause, in the context in which such statement was made, the Court felt satisfied that the defendant was ready and willing to go to arbitration. In the case before us, the petitioner does not categorically and unequivocally or even at all say that he was always at the material time ready and willing to do all things for the proper conduct of arbitration and such readiness is not to be inferred by implication. An insufficient averment cannot be rectified by amending the verification only. We are conscious that this defect was condoned by the appellate Court for reasons we find difficult to accept and it seems to us to be too patent to be ignored.

7. Mr. Mukherjee next challenged as untenable the conclusion of the learned Judge that when grave charges of fraud, misappropriation and unfair conduct of the partner are alleged, such matters should conveniently be dealt with by a Court instead of by an arbitrator. It was said that the averments of fraud are only general allegations instead of being specific as is required. We have considered the pleadings and we find that the allegations cannot be said to be not specific as is required in pleadings. Sub-clauses (b), (c), (e), (f) and (g) of paragraph 9 of the plaint at least appear to be sufficiently specific allegations of fraudulent conduct which has to be established in evidence during trial.

8. It was then submitted on authority that the defendant against whom charges are made in such case has a choice of forum which is not available to the plaintiff. Reliance was placed on the decision in Manindra Chandra v. Low & Co. Ltd., AIR 1924 Cal 796, where it was held that the Court should refuse to send the dispute to arbitration when the party charged wants a public trial in Court while the Court would be less inclined to send it to public trial at the desire of the party making the charges instead of arbitration. It was also held in Eastern Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. v. India Coastal Navigation Co. Ltd., ILR (1942) 2 Cal 539 = (AIR 1943 Cal 238), that in case of charge of conspiracy and fraud which is directly an issue between the parties such charge should be publicly investigated in the suit if so desired by the party charged. In Ballavdas Acharjya v. Shyam Sundar, ILR (1946) 1 Cal 203, this Court followed the principle in Russell v. Russell 1880-14 Ch D 471, laying down that when objection to arbitration is by the party charging the fraud, the Court will never accede to the objection unless a prima facie case of fraud is proved. The Court in that case granted a stay as upon affidavits no prima facie case was at all made out.

9. Even in Manindra Chandra's case, (AIR 1924 Cal 796) the Court noticed that in Russell's case it was decided that where a prima facie case of fraud is made out, the action will be allowed to proceed. In view of the above authorities and in the case before us of the grave charges of fraudulent conduct on the part of the defendant, we also consider it desirable that the matter should have the trial in Court, as arbitration is not the most suitable method of determining the questions raised between the parties.

10. Next question relates to the scope, ambit and effect of Sec. 44 of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 on arbitration. Assuming that the arbitration clause in the partnership agreement includes the question of dissolution, which we think it does, even so when party approaches the Court to dissolve the partnership on ground that it is just and equitable to do, the jurisdiction of the Court is always there to give appropriate relief notwithstanding the provision for arbitration. In Rehmatunnissa Begum v. Price, AIR 1917 PC 116, the Privy Council observed:

"A partner's claim to decree for dissolution rests, in its origin, not on contract, but on his inherent right to invoke the Court's protection on equitable grounds, in spite of the terms in which the rights and obligations of the partners may have been regulated and defined by the partnership contract."

11. This proposition of law has since found its expression in Section 44 of the Partnership Act, 1932 and the Court's power to order dissolution of partnership under provisions of Section 44 is not conditioned by an agreement between the partners to the contrary. The jurisdiction, which a Court will exercise in such case, will however always be a judicial discretion in the context of pleadings and facts of a case against the background of the provisions for arbitration in the partnership agreement and the propositions of law set out by judicial decisions. In the case before us, we are of opinion that the judicial discretion was rightly exercised in the circumstances of the case.

12. Mr. Mukherjee referred us to the refusal of stay to arbitration in cases coming under Section 35 (f) of English Partnership Act, 1890 (our Section 44 (g)) asking for exercise of Court's discretion on just and equitable grounds and for appointment of receiver and manager laid down as a proposition of law in Olver v. Hillier, (1959) 2 All ER 220 and recorded as such in Supreme Court Practice, 1973. This principle in the attending circumstances of the respective cases was followed by A. N. Sen, J. in Award No. 105 of 1966 dated October 7, 1966 (unreported) and also in Ganesh Ch. Dey v. Kamal Kumar, AIR 1971 Cal 317. Mr. Mukherjee submitted that the above proposition of law as laying down that a stay to arbitration must be refused when there is a claim for dissolution on just and equitable grounds with prayer for appointment of Receiver/Manager was doubted in Phoenix v. Pope, (1974) 1 All ER 412 as it was observed, there could be no inevitable exercise of discretion.

13. In view however of the law enunciated by the Privy Council in Rehmatunnissa's case (AIR 1917 PC 116) and of the provisions of Section 44, we are of opinion that the Court's jurisdiction in appropriate cases is not ousted by any provisions for arbitration in the partnership agreement. The exercise of such jurisdiction being a matter of judicial discretion in the context of attending circumstances, there can be no inevitability in the exercise of jurisdiction by a Court of law.

14. For the reasons already indicated we are of opinion that the stay was rightly refused by the appellate Court.

15. The rule accordingly fails and is discharged. There will be no order for costs in the circumstances.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an appeal against the judgment and decree passed by the 5th Extra Court of the Additional District Judge, Alipore in Title Appeal No. 1137 of 1959 reversing the judgment and decree dated 21st August 1959 passed by the Subordinate Judge of 7th Court, Alipore in Title Suit No. 38 of 1956.

2. The respondents Nos. 1 and 2 filed a suit alleging that Sekandar Ostagar, predecessor of the plaintiffs and the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and Abdul Ostagar, predecessor of the defendants Nos. 3 to 14 were relations. By a registered patta dated 26-11-1909 they took a lease of the disputed property at a rental of Rs. 22/- and had eight annas share each in the property. Abdul Ostagar died first leaving the defendant No. 3 and one Amena Bibi, predecessors of the defendants Nos. 4 to 14 as his daughters. Those heirs began to possess the property in ejmali with Sekandar Ostagar. Then the latter died leaving the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as sons by his first wife, the plaintiff No. 3 as his daughter, the plaintiff No. 1 as his third wife and the plaintiff No. 2 as his son by the latter. After Sekandar's death Amena Bibi died leaving the defendant No. 16's wife Sayera Bibi, the defendants Nos. 4, 11, 12, 13, 14 and one Golam Kader as his heirs. Subsequently Golam Kader died leaving the defendants Nos. 5 to 10 as his heirs. The plaintiffs requested the defendants to effect an amicable partition. But the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 claimed that they are the 16 annas owners of the property and the C. S. Khatian was prepared accordingly. In fact, Sekandar Ostagar managed the property after Abdul Ostagar died. Later the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 used to manage the property on behalf of their co-sharers. Hence such erroneous entry was made in the C. S. Khatian. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 gave out that Sekandar Ostagar had gifted the property to them and they alone owned the property to the exclusion of others. The plaintiffs, however, assert that Sekandar Ostagar did not make any gift and the alleged gift was never acted upon. Even if such a deed was executed by Sekandar Ostagar it was obtained from the latter by practising fraud, misrepresentation and undue influence. As such the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 acquired no interest on the basis of the alleged gift. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 denied the plaintiffs' allegations. It has been alleged that Abdul Ostagar had no interest in the property. Abdul Ostagar was at best a tenant who had no paramount interest. The property belonged to Sekandar Ostagar alone and he gifted the property to the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 by a registered deed dated 29th Kartick 1328 B. S. and since then they are in possession of the property. They permitted the plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 3 to live on the property but that licence was revoked by the registered letter dated 12-6-1956. The C. S. Khatian was correctly prepared in their favour.

3. The learned Subordinate Judge disbelieved the case of the plaintiff and held that Sekandar Ostagar, in fact, executed a deed of gift in favour of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and the said deed of gift was acted upon. In that view of his finding the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit. Being aggrieved the plaintiffs preferred an appeal. The learned appellate court below was of the opinion that it is true that a deed of gift appears to have been executed by Sekandar Ostagar, but Sekandar Ostagar never parted with the possession of the property and that being so, there was no valid gift and the deed of gift was not acted upon. Such being the finding, the learned appellate court below reversed the judgment and decree passed by the learned Subordinate Judge and decreed the suit. Being aggrieved, the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 have come up before this Court.

4. Mr. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellants, in the first place submits that the plaintiffs being the heirs of Sekandar Ostagar cannot challenge the deed of gift which has been admittedly executed by Sekandar Ostagar on the ground that possession has not been delivered to the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the donees. The heirs of the donors are bound by the averments made in the deed of gift. The plaintiffs made out a case in the plaint that the deed of gift was obtained by practising fraud and misrepresentation but that case was abandoned by the plaintiffs. Mr. Banerjee next submits that the learned court below failed to see that in this particular case the gift was made by the father to his two sons, one of whom was minor. Admittedly, the father and the sons were living in the same homestead and in such circumstances it cannot be said that after executing the deed in favour of the sons the father is required to vacate the dwelling house. Moreover, Mr. Banerjee submits on perusal of the deed it will be clear that Sekandar Ostagar very much intended to make a gift of the property in favour of his sons, defendants Nos. 1 and 2, and the recitals are very clear to show that. In fact,

Sekandar Ostagar has in an unambiguous expression stated that he has been divested of all right, title and interest of the properties and from the date of the execution of the deed all right, title and interest devolved on the donees. He has further stated that the donees and their heirs and successors will enjoy the property as full owners. In such circumstances Mr. Banerjee submits that simply because Sekandar Ostagar or the plaintiffs were residing in the same dwelling house after the execution of the deed of gift, it cannot be said that the deed of gift is invalid because there was no delivery of possession. In support of his contention Mr. Banerjee draws our attention to the provisions of the Mohamedan Law and refers to us Tyabji's Mohamedan Law, 4th Edition and Hedya Book 30 Vol. 3 Chapter 2 Mr. Banerjee also cites before us several authorities to support his contention. He first refers to a decision reported in 59 Ind App 1 = (AIR 1932 PC 13) (Mohammad Sadiq Ali Khan v. Fakhr Jahan Begam). In this case a Mohamedan executed in favour of his wife a deed of gift of immovable property which declared that he delivered possession over it to her as absolute owner. The deed was handed to and retained by her, but there was no mutation of names. She did not take actual possession until after her husband's death but during his life she frequently resided with him on the premises. It was held that "Having regard to the declaration in the deed and its handing over to the donee, the gift was valid. In the case of an intended gift by a husband to his wife, Mohamedan law does not require an actual vacation by the husband and an actual taking of separate possession by the wife." Their Lordships further observed that "in the facts of the case it was unnecessary to decide whether, as held by High Courts in India, that principles applied universally between a Mohamedan donor and donee in joint occupation of immovable property." Mr. Banerjee submits that the High Courts in India in several cases have held that this principle applies between a Mohamedan donor and donee in joint occupation of immovable property specially when the donor and the donee are near relations.

5. Mr. Banerjee next relies on a case reported in (1885) ILR 9 Bom 146 (Shaik Ibham v. Shaik Suleman). In this case it has been observed "For the purposes of completing a gift of immovable property by delivery and possession, no formal entry or actual physical departure is necessary: it is sufficient if the donor and donee are present on the premises, and an intention on the part of the donor to transfer has been unequivocally manifested". In this case it may be mentioned that the donor and the donee were not related to each other. The donor made a gift stating "as my wife is dead, and as I have no issue, Ibham has done and will do service for me as son, and I, therefore, give the property to him." Mr. Banerjee with much emphasis states that the real point to see in such case is the intention on the part of the donor and that intention can be gathered from the recitals made in the deed, Ext. B.

6. Mr. Banerjee next refers to a case reported in AIR 1958 Mad 527 (S. V. S. Muhammad Yusuf Rowther v. Muhammad Yusuf Rowther) to substantiate his point that the recitals in the deed are binding on the heirs of the donor. It has been laid down "It is no doubt true that delivery of possession of gifted properties is an essential condition of the validity of the gift and its operative nature under the Muslim Law and it would be for the donees to establish it. But where in the deed of gift executed by the deceased, there is a recital that the possession of the property which is the subject-matter of the gift is delivered to the donees, it is an admission binding on the deceased and those claiming under him. Consequently the burden lies on those who claim under the deceased to prove that no delivery of possession was in fact effected in favour of the donees. Burden in such a case is not on the donees to prove the delivery of possession to them". Mr. Banerjee contends that in the present case the onus was wrongly placed by the appellate court below on the donees to establish that the delivery of possession was actually effected. The plaintiffs being the heirs of the donor, they are bound by the recitals and the burden that no delivery of possession was made lies on them. Mr. Banerjee also refers to a decision reported in (1888) 16 Ind App 205 (PC) (Sheikh Muhammad Mumtaz Ahmad v. Zubaida Jan). At page 216 of the said report it has been laid down that if possession was once taken and the deed of gift took effect no subsequent change of possession would invalidate it. Mr. Banerjee submits that in this case there is ample evidence to show that the appellants were in possession of the property, their names were recorded in the C. S. record and that being so, any subsequent change with regard to possession cannot invalidate the deed of gift.

7. The next case referred to by Mr. Banerjee has been reported in AIR 1974 Pat 54 (Ismail v. Idrish). In this case it was held that "Where a deed of gift of certain lands contains a clear recital that the donor has divested all his interest in the gifted lands and put the donees in possession treating them as full owner, the gift is valid and binding on the donor's heirs and the fact that subsequently one of the heirs of the donor who is disputing the validity of the gift is found in possession of the gifted lands cannot detract from the completeness of the gift." This is a Bench decision and their Lordships in order to come to the above conclusion relied on the case reported in AIR 1964 SC 275 (Kathessa Umma v. Naravanath Kunhamu (deceased) and after him his legal representatives and others). In the Supreme Court case a Hanif made a gift of properties including immovable property by a registered deed to his minor wife who had attained puberty and discretion, and the gift was accepted on her behalf by her mother in whose house the husband and wife were residing, when the minor's father and father's father were not alive and there was no executor of the one or the other. It was held that such a gift must be accepted as valid and complete although the deed was handed over to the minor's mother and possession of the property was not given to a guardian specially appointed for the purpose by the Civil Court. In this case there was no question that there was a complete intention to divest ownership on the part of the husband, the donor, and to transfer the property to the donee. Mr. Banerjee asserts that in the present case the recitals of the deed and the facts and circumstances clearly show that there was definite intention on the part of the donor to transfer the property in favour of the donees.

8. The next case cited by Mr. Banerjee has been reported in (1905) ILR 29 Bom 468 (Bibi Khaver Sultan v. Bibi Rukhia Sultan). In this case it has been held "As to the delivery of the house, the principle is to be borne in mind, that when a person is present on the premises proposed to be delivered to him, a declaration of the person previously possessed puts him into possession. He occupies certain part, and this occupation becoming actual possession by the will of the parties, extends to the whole which is immediate connection with such part where the possession is rightfully taken. An appropriate intention where two are present on the same premises may put the one out as well as the other into possession without any actual physical departure or formal entry and effect is to be given, as far as possible, to the purpose of an owner whose intention to transfer has been unequivocally manifested". Mr. Banerjee also cites before us a case reported in (1946) 50 Cal WN 81 (Sk. Golam Gous v. Sk. Raujan). It has been held that "under the Muhammadan law where a property the subject-matter of a gift is in actual possession of the donor and the donee, who are related and the donor declares in unequivocal language that he has divested himself of ownership and authorises the donee to take possession, the character of the donee's possession which already existed is altered and for all formal purposes the gift must be considered to have been perfected by such delivery of possession as is feasible in the circumstances".

9. Mr. Manindra Nath Ghosh, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents draws our attention to the deed of gift Ext. B. He refers to the recitals in the deed and contends that from the recitals it cannot be said that the donor delivered possession to the donees. The relevant portion of the recitals is quoted below:—

"From this day all my right, title and interest will devolve on you . . . you and your successors enjoy the property happily."

From the recitals at best it can be gathered that the donor gave out that he was divested of right, title and interest of the property and the same devolved on the donees. But from the recitals it cannot be concluded that the possession was also intended to be delivered or in fact delivered to the donees. Mr. Ghosh submits that in order to make a deed of gift valid under the Mohamedan law it is absolutely necessary that the possession should be delivered. Mr. Ghosh refers to several Articles in Tyabji's Mohamedan Law, 4th Edition to support his contention. In this connection Mr. Ghosh submits that the donor must in clear terms state "I give delivery of possession". Mr. Ghosh refers to a decision reported in AIR 1935 Bom 84 (Sugrabai v. Mohamedalli Ahmedalli). It has been held in this case that in order to constitute a valid gift by a father in favour of his minor children, it is not necessary to transfer possession, but proof of bona fide intention to give must be established. But where the trust is not merely for the benefit of the minor children of the settlor, but also of others and where the settlor has not constituted himself the sole trustee, but there are other persons appointed trustees, the transfer of possession is necessary under the Mohamedan Law". Mr. Ghosh submits that in the present case it is true that one of the donees was minor son but the other donee was major, and the major son was described as guardian of the minor son in the deed of gift. This being the position, it was absolutely necessary to transfer possession. But in the present case it must be remembered that both the donor and the donees were residing in the same house which was the subject matter of the deed of gift and that being so, on the authority referred to above it cannot be said that it was necessary for the father after executing the deed to vacate the said dwelling house.

10. Mr. Ghosh next submits that whether possession was delivered or not or what happened after the execution of the deed with regard to possession of the gifted property is a question of fact which has been decided by the final court of facts, and that being so, according to the provisions of Section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure there is no jurisdiction to entertain the second appeal on the ground of erroneous finding of fact. In support of his contention Mr. Ghosh refers to a decision reported in AIR 1959 SC 57 (Deity Pattabhramaswamy v. S. Hanumayya). We are of the opinion that in the facts of the case whether it was necessary to part with possession on the part of the donor is a question of law and on that point there has been difference of opinion between the courts below. In such circumstances we hold that this point can very much be agitated in the second appeal.

11. With regard to possession the C. S. record of rights is in favour of the appellants. There are also rent receipts and Municipal tax receipts in the name of the appellants. The case of the appellants is that they allowed the plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 3 to occupy the disputed land. The plaintiff No. 3 examined herself as P. W. 1 and she stated in examination-in-chief that her mother plaintiff No. 1 and brother Abu Bakkar, plaintiff No. 3, are too poor and they were permitted by her brothers, defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to live on the disputed land. The plaintiff No. 2 states in cross-examination that he asked his brothers Jabbar and Sattar (defendants Nos. 1 and 2) and they pointed out where his hut would be erected and that thereafter he erected the hut at the place pointed out by the former. These statements very clearly show that the plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 3 were permitted by the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to live on the disputed land as licensee. Considering the facts and circumstances of the case and evidence on record we are of the opinion that the learned lower appellate court was wrong in reversing the judgment of the trial court.

12. In the result the appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree passed by the learned appellate court below are set aside and those of the learned Subordinate Judge are restored. There will be no order as to costs in this appeal.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 184 of 1974, D/- 12-8-1976*.

(A) Letters Patent (Cal) Clause 15 — Ordinarily no question of law or fact to be pleaded for the first time in Letters Patent appeal. Where parties allowed to make fresh pleadings fresh issues arise and new point can be pleaded. AIR 1971 SC 2468, Foll.

(B) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (1956), Sec. 13 (1) (f) and (ff) — Reasonableness of requirement — Comparative inconvenience of tenant not required to be considered. AIR 1973 Cal 515 Overruled.

Clause (f) of Section 13 (1) of the present Act as it stood before the amendment, was on identical terms with the provisions of clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provision) Act, 1950, which is the forerunner of the present Act. In Clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the 1950 Act, there was an explanation, which required the court in determining the reasonableness of requirement of accommodation to have regard to the comparative advantage or disadvantage of the landlord or the person for whose benefit the premises were held and of the tenants. This guideline has been deleted from clause (f) of Sec. 13 (1) of the 1956 Act as it stood before the amendment. Consequently, these considerations which were imperative for the Court to consider are no longer in the statute and the Courts are, therefore, free to consider the reasonableness of the requirement in Clause (f) (now clauses (f) and (ff)) without advert-ing to the comparative advantage or disadvantage of the tenant or the landlord. The legislature advisedly dropped the explanation occurring in clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the old Act at the time of re-introducing clause (f) of Section 13 (1) of the new Act on substantially identical terms and it is no longer the legislative intent to test the reasonableness of the requirement of the landlord on the touchstone of the tenant's advantage or disadvantage. AIR 1973 Cal 515, Overruled. (Para 12)

(C) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (1956), Section 13 (1) (ff) — Expression 'reasonably required' — Test of reasonableness — Standard of requirement of a reasonable man under similar circumstances — Mere desire of landlord not sufficient — Need must also be established.

The expression 'reasonably required' in clause (ff) has not been defined in the Act. Such a requirement in order to be reasonable must have some relation to the actual need of the person for such kind of occupation and the test, must relate to the standard of requirement of a reasonable man under circumstances occurring in the particular case. The inconvenience caused to the tenant should not play any part although the landlord is bound to prove the reasonableness of his requirement, which signifies not merely a desire on the part of the landlord but he is further required to establish that there is an element of need, besides making out that he was not in possession of a reasonably suitable accommodation already. S. C. Dasgupta and Tapan Kumar Sen-
gupta, for Appellant; Manindra Nath Ghose and Jamini Kumar Banerjee, for Respondent.

S. K. BHATTACHARYYA, J.:— This appeal by the defendant under clause 15 of the Letters Patent is directed against the judgment and decree passed by M. M. Dutta, J. in Second Appeal No. 1162 of 1967 affirming the decision of the Courts below decreeing the plaintiffs' suit for ejectment against the defendant.

2. The suit out of which this appeal arises was for eviction of a monthly tenant-at-will upon service of notice to quit on the ground of reasonable requirement.

3. The plaintiffs' case, in brief, is that the defendant appellant had been in occupation of two rooms, kitchen and bath, in the ground floor of premises No. 16/1A, Ram Ratan Bose Lane, Shyambazar at a rental of Rs. 37/- per month payable according to English Calendar which was purchased by the plaintiff with the tenants in the premises. There were two other tenants, one in the first floor and another in the second floor and the plaintiff filed three suits of ejectment against three tenants separately. The plaintiff alleged that he was living in a rented house with his family and dependents and the accommodation therein was wholly insufficient. The plaintiff accordingly purchased the suit premises for better accommodation alleging that he reasonably required the same for his own use and occupation and thereafter caused a notice to quit to be served on the defendant-appellant requiring him to quit and vacate the disputed premises with effect from a certain date, but as the defendant failed and neglected to comply, the instant suit was instituted.

4. The defendant contested the suit raising various objections but in so far as the instant appeal is concerned, the defendant-appellant disputed the reasonableness of the plaintiffs' requirement and further contended that the plaintiff was already in possession of a reasonably suitable accommodation and as such was not entitled to a decree for ejectment. No other point was pressed in this appeal.

5. The learned Munsif on a consideration of the evidence adduced in this case found in favour of the plaintiff and decreed the suit.

6. On appeal by the defendant, the learned Additional District Judge, 5th Court Alipore, agreed with the learned Munsif that the plaintiff has been able to establish his case of reasonable requirement of the suit premises for his use and occupation and accordingly dismissed the appeal.

7. The defendant thereupon preferred a second appeal to this Court. In the said appeal, the defendant prayed for adducing certain additional evidence and further contended that the requirement of the plaintiff stood satisfied as he has already recovered possession of four rooms in the suit premises and constructed two other rooms on the top floor. It was further contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the suit having been instituted within a period of three years of the acquisition of landlord's interest by the plaintiff, was hit by the provisions of sub-section (3-A) introduced in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (to be hereinafter referred to as the Act) by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Second Amendment) Act, 1969. All these contentions were overruled by the learned Judge, who agreed with the Courts below on the question of reasonable requirement of the plaintiff. In that view of the matter, the learned Judge dismissed the appeal and affirmed the judgment and decree passed by the Court below. Hence, this appeal with special leave,

8. Whilst this appeal was pending in this Court, the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan reported in AIR 1975 SC 1146 held that Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, being Act 34 of 1969 read with Section 4 of the Amending Act shall have effect in respect of suits, including appeals, pending at the commencement of the Act and the courts were bound to give effect thereto in pending actions, regardless of isolated anomalies and individual hardships. By Section 4 of the Amending Act, clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Original Act was substituted by two new clauses (f) and (ff) and sub-section (3A) was introduced in the Statute Book prohibiting for a period of three years from the date of acquisition of a property, suits by new acquirers of landlord's interest in the premises, for recovery of possession on any of the grounds mentioned in clauses (f) and (ff). The Supreme Court further pointed out that as the plaintiff landlord did not seek eviction on the ground mentioned in amended clause (ff), the suit should have been dismissed on account of the omnibus inhibition on recovery of possession contained in Section 13 of the Act, but in working out the mechanics of this subsequently imposed ban and in order to give effect to the amendment, the Supreme Court permitted the parties therein to file fresh pleadings setting out the grounds under the amended clauses if they so wished. Accordingly, the plaintiff was permitted to amend the plaint in the instant appeal and the defendant also filed an additional written statement which were accepted and fresh issues, arising from the fresh pleadings were framed by us in the following terms:—

1. Is the premises in dispute reasonably required by the plaintiff-respondent for his own occupation and for the occupation of the members of his family?

2. Is the plaintiff-respondent in possession of any reasonably suitable accommodation?

9. Mr. Dasgupta the learned Advocate appearing for the appellant seeks to assail the decision of the courts below mainly on three grounds. It is contended in the first place that the reasonableness of the requirement of the landlord in the context of the subsequent pleadings stands self-condemned inasmuch as in the initial pleading the respondent-landlord set out a case for requirement of 18 persons, which could not be established in evidence for more than 11 persons, but at the time when the additional pleadings were filed in this court, pursuant to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan (AIR 1975 SC 1146) (supra) the landlord opened his mouth too wide and set out a case for requirement of 35 persons. This tailored requirement, according to Mr. Dasgupta, saw the light of the day only after the Supreme Court decision became known in or about June, 1975 and the landlord's requirement as such, was mala fide and motivated. In the next place, Mr. Dasgupta contended that even if the reasonableness of the requirement of the landlord is accepted, he has patently failed to establish that he was not in possession of a reasonably suitable accommodation already. On the contrary, Mr. Dasgupta contends that the existing accommodation available to the landlord at premises Nos. 16/1A, Ram Ratan Bose Lane, Shyambazar and 2/1A, Bhupen Bose Avenue Shyampukur is not only reasonably suitable but more than satisfied the requirement of the plaintiff on the basis of the case originally made out in the plaint. Mr. Ghose the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent landlord, on the other hand, contended that the reasonable requirement of the landlord can never be static and during the 12 years that the suit and the appeal are pending this requirement of the landlord increased several fold as the family has grown and the business of the plaintiff has expanded, with the result he now has to cater to the requirement of a larger number of persons daily, quite apart from the members of his own family. In the next place, Mr. Ghose contended that the appellant not having taken or canvassed any ground in the second appeal that the existing accommodation available to the plaintiff at that date was sufficient to satisfy his requirement and was also reasonably suitable, the appellant cannot now be permitted to contend that the accommodation available at Bhupen Bose Avenue premises, in which the plaintiff had a precarious stake, being a bharatia under a thika tenant in respect of a mud kotha. Mr. Ghose further contended that this being a Letters Patent appeal, the appellant cannot be permitted to increase its scope than he would have been entitled to in a second appeal.

10. To take up Mr. Ghose's last objection first, it is to be pointed out that ordinarily in an appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent a point whether involving a question of law or on fact cannot be allowed to be agitated when that point was never taken in the courts below or even in the second appeal before the High Court at any earlier stage. We need refer only to one case in this connection, namely the case of Shan- baggakannu v. Muthu Bhattar, reported in AIR 1971 SC 2468, but in the said appeal the Supreme Court pointed out that the question for consideration would be otherwise, if fresh pleadings are put in and the other party is granted a proper opportunity to meet such a case. In the instant case the plaintiff, pursuant to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan (AIR 1975 SC 1146) (supra), had been allowed to be amended by us and in our view, it would now be open to both parties to canvass those points that arise out of those fresh issues, even though those may not have been taken up at any earlier stage of the present proceeding including the second appeal in this Court.

11. Let us now examine the contention put forward by Mr. Dasgupta in so far as the reasonableness of the requirement of the plaintiff and the availability of a suitable accommodation by him is concerned. Before we advert to the evidence adduced in this case, it will be necessary to dispose of a point of law canvassed by Mr. Dasgupta in this connection. Mr. Dasgupta contends that the reasonableness of the requirement of the landlord under Section 13 (1) of the Act is not merely subjective, but also objective and should be ascertained by the court as a ground for eviction of the tenant not only by emphasizing the benefits to the landlord by way of his financial gain or convenience to his business, but by weighing his genuine or real requirement with the inconvenience that the tenant will suffer by his eviction. In support, Mr. Dasgupta relied on the decision of a learned single Judge of this Court in the case of Bimalendu Bhusan Das v. Firm Mitra and Ghose reported in AIR 1973 Cal 515. Applying the above standard, the learned single Judge in the above-cited case came to the conclusion that the requirement of the landlord was not a reasonable one. This decision, in our view, cannot be regarded as correct.

12. Clause (f) of Section 13 (1) of the present Act as it stood before the amendment, was on identical terms with the provisions of clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provision) Act, 1950, which is the forerunner of the present Act. In clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the 1950 Act, there was an explanation, which required the court in determining the reasonableness of requirement of the landlord for purposes of building or rebuilding to have regard to the comparative public benefit by extending or diminishing accommodation and for determining the reasonableness of requirement of accommodation the court was to have regard to the comparative advantage or disadvantage of the landlord or the person for whose benefit the premises were held and of the tenants. This guideline, which enjoined on the court to take into consideration the comparative advantage or disadvantage of both the landlord and the tenant in determining the reasonableness of the requirement of the landlord for his occupation has been deleted from clause (f) of Section 13 (1) of the 1956 Act as it stood before the amendment. Consequently, these considerations which were imperative for the court to consider in determining the reasonableness of requirement whether for the purpose of building or rebuilding or for the purpose of occupation is, in no longer in the statute and the Courts are, therefore, free to consider the reasonableness of the requirement in clause (f) (now clauses (f) and (ff)) without adverting to the comparative advantage or disadvantage of the tenant or the landlord. The legislature advisedly dropped the explanation occurring in clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the old Act at the time of re-introducing clause (f) of Section 13 (1) of the new Act on substantially identical terms and it appears to us that it is no longer the legislative intent to test the reasonableness of the requirement of the landlord on the touchstone of the tenant's advantage or disadvantage. The decision of the learned single Judge in the case of Bimalendu Bhusan Das failed to take into consideration this material change in the provision of Section 13 (1) (f) of the 1956 Act.

13. The expression 'reasonably required' in clause (ff) has not been defined in the Act. The requirement postulated by the legislature must be reasonable requirement of the landlord for his own occupation if he is the owner by which it must be taken to mean that the landlord requires it for the purposes of his occupation. Such a requirement in order to be reasonable must have some relation to the actual need of that person for such kind of occupation and the test, in our view, must relate to the standard of requirement of a reasonable man under circumstances occurring in the particular case and not to his whim or caprice. Judged by that consideration plaintiff's requirement has to be tested in the light of the requirement of a reasonable man with a family similar to that of the plaintiff. We, therefore, do not think that the inconvenience caused to the tenant should play any part in our consideration, although the landlord is bound to prove the reasonableness of his requirement, which signifies not merely a desire on the part of the landlord but he is further required to es-establish that there is an element of need, besides making out that he was not in possession of a reasonably suitable accommodation already.

14. The examination of the evidence adduced by the parties in this case both at the trial stage and in this court would undoubtedly show that the case as originally made out by the plaintiff in the plaint and in his evidence in the trial court has undergone substantial change. Admittedly, the plaintiff purchased the premises in suit on October 1, 1963 with the appellant and two other tenants in occupation of the suit premises. In 1964 he filed three suits for ejectment against the three tenants and obtained three decrees for eviction on the ground of reasonable requirement in each case. The premises contains six rooms, two in each floor besides kitchen, bath, privy and other amenities. At the time when the premises was purchased, the plaintiff with part of his family and some employees were putting up in a matkotha at 2/1A, Bhupen Bose Avenue as a bharatiya under one Shyamlal Sahu, who was a thika tenant. There is no denying the fact that the interest of this Shyamlal Sahu has since been terminated and the plaintiff has temporarily become a tenant under the landlord of the said premises Sm. Renuka Bose. The matkotha at No. 2/1A, Bhupen Bose Avenue contains three rooms and a kitchen, the size of each room, according to the plaintiff, being about 10 feet x 8 feet and that of kitchen being 6 feet x 4 feet. From the Commissioner's report submitted in this case it appears that the size of the rooms in the said premises was 10 feet 6 inches x 9 feet 6 inches, whilst the six rooms in the disputed premises at No. 16/1A, Ramratan Bose Lane, according to the Commissioner, measures more or less 12 feet x 8 feet 4 inches on the ground floor (one of the rooms being irregular in size), but according to the plaintiff the size of the six rooms in the said premises is 12 feet x 9 feet and that of the thakurghar on the top floor is 9 feet x 7 feet. Of these six rooms in premises No. 16/1A, Ramratan Bose Lane, plaintiff respondent admittedly obtained possession of four rooms after the disposal of the connected first appeals. Consequently, the plaintiff is now in possession of two rooms on the first floor, two rooms on the second floor and the thakurghar on the top floor of the premises plus four rooms at the tenanted premises at No. 2/1A, Bhupen Bose Avenue, Calcutta. This accommodation, according to Mr. Dasgupta, satisfied the tailored requirement of plaintiff in terms of clause (ff) of Section 13 (1) of the Act, Mr.

Dasgupta accordingly contends that as the plaintiff is already in possession of a reasonably suitable accommodation, he is not entitled to a decree for eviction against the present appellant on the ground of his reasonable requirement. We are unable to accept this contention of Mr. Dasgupta. Apart from the fact that all the three courts have found that the requirement of the plaintiff would not be satisfied by his occupation of five rooms of the disputed premises and the plaintiff really requires all the six rooms (now seven) of the said premises for his own use and occupation. It does not appear that in the second appeal the defendant took the position that the plaintiff's requirement would be fully satisfied by possession of the five rooms in the disputed premises together with occupation of the four rooms of the tenanted premises at No. 2/1-A, Bhupen Bose Avenue. We do not think that the accommodation at No. 2/1-A, Bhupen Bose Avenue should be taken into consideration in assessing the reasonableness of the requirement of the plaintiff in this case; for to do so would have the effect of splitting up of the family of the plaintiff into two parts, which the law does not require. There are no materials on record to show how far and at what distance is one premises from the other, Mr. Dasgupta concedes that the walking distance from one premises to the other would not be less than five minutes. That by itself would show that the family of the plaintiff perforce would have to be split up into two parts with all its attendant evil effects. Besides, the plaintiff has stated in his evidence that he has been permitted by the owner Renuka Bose to stay in the said premises till he recovers possession of his house at Ramratan Bose Lane, Calcutta. We, therefore, do not think that the accommodation available to the plaintiff at 2/1A, Bhupen Bose Avenue should be taken into consideration in assessing the suitability or otherwise of the accommodation now available to the plaintiff.

15. But the main argument of Mr. Dasgupta is that the plaintiff's requirement has been tailored to make it look reasonable and in his cross-examination, the plaintiff has opened his mouth very wide. For this purpose Mr. Dasgupta drew our attention to the case made out by the plaintiff in the original plaint where the requirement was for 18 persons, of whom 11 persons were the members of the family and 7 were employees. The same requirement has now been enlarged to accommodate 36 persons, of whom 22 are members of the family and 14 are stated to be employees. This according to Mr.

Dasgupta renders the plaintiff's case mala fide and motivated. The plaintiff in his evidence before this Court admitted that he when he filed the suit in 1964, he pleaded for the requirement for 18 persons but asserts that at present he had 36 members of whom 22 are members of his family and 14 are his employees engaged by him on weekly or monthly basis (vide answer to questions 240 and 245). The plaintiff was asked to produce the ration cards for the members of his family and his dependents and he produced 24 permanent ration cards of whom 17 belonged to the members of his family and 7 to persons employed by him. After the plaintiff obtained possession of the first and second floor rooms of Ramratan Bose Lane premises, 17 or 18 persons are stated to have shifted to that house and started living there and about 7 persons continued to live in the Bhupen Bose Avenue premises. The names of those persons, who were living at Ramratan Bose Lane premises were given out by the plaintiff in answer to question No. 97. On being asked to explain why there is a variation in his requirement, the plaintiff in answer to question No. 105, stated that when he instituted the suit, the number of the members of his family were 11. Subsequently children were born to his sons and the family increased. Not only the size of the family increased, but he also started a second shop and the number of the employees also increased. This was further elaborated in answer to question No. 52 where the plaintiff stated that some members of his family used to stay at his native place and one party would come here and stay for about three or four months and would then go back and another party would come and stay. It was mostly the ladies of the family, who continued to come in this fashion by rotation, because it was difficult to keep them all at the same time due to paucity of accommodation. Mr. Dasgupta sought to point out that the ration cards held by the plaintiff, particularly for his employees and also for some members of his family would show that they had been taken out recently and the case sought to be made out by the plaintiff cannot therefore be accepted. In answer to question No. 134, the plaintiff admitted that as against the ration cards, some of the holders were not at present residing with him, but in place of the old employee, a new employee was there and he used to draw ration for them against cards standing in the name of his old employees. This conduct on the part of the plaintiff may not have been strictly in accordance with the provisions of the rationing regulations, but we do not think, it should have an impact on his requirement here. It is not difficult to see that a man placed in a predicament as the plaintiff was placed, would probably have acted in more or less similar fashion. We therefore propose to scrutinise the case on the basis of the basic minimum requirement of the plaintiff. There is little doubt that the plaintiff's family has increased considerably since the institution of the present suit in 1964 and the volume of his business has also increased considerably. Instead of having one shop, he now owns two shops dealing in foodgrains and other edibles, both in retail and wholesale and his standing in the business has been fully made out before us. He has adduced evidence to show that he pays considerable amount by way of income and sales-taxes. We need not enter into the details of these evidence, but there can be little doubt that the plaintiff's family now consists of self, wife, father Deonandan, three married sons Sew Sankar, Uma Sankar and Rabi Sankar, one unmarried son, three married daughters-in-law, eight children of his eldest son and one very young child of his third son and his unmarried daughter Sharmila. Besides, he claims to have a durwan, a cook, a servant and a maid servant, who of course do not stay in the house. If we leave aside the employees, who according to the convention of the plaintiff's business, are to share accommodation and food in his family, the plaintiff's family as made out in evidence and as accepted by all the courts below, would certainly require six rooms, if not more, for their accommodation. The plaintiff and his wife between themselves would certainly require one room and his three married sons with their respective wives would also require a room each. The children numbering nine, (of whom two only are below five years) would require at least one room, if not more, for their study (and many of them are school going), one room for kitchen and another for the unmarried daughter. This would account for all the rooms in the premises and neither the servant nor other relations or visitors would have any accommodation for them left in the premises. So, for the basic minimum requirement of the plaintiff, he would require all the six rooms plus a thakurghar on the top floor and the existing accommodation whether in Ramratan Bose Lane premises singly or conjointly with that of premises No. 2/1A, Bhupen Bose Avenue would not satisfy the requirement of a reasonably suitable accommodation for the plaintiff. There are at least 7 persons residing in the Bhupen Bose Avenue premises, who by reason of convention or long-standing practice are required to reside with the plaintiff and have their meals with him. The defendant did not seriously dispute the existence of the number of members of plaintiff's family, but it was asserted by him that many of them usually stays or resides in his native village in Uttar Pradesh. Plaintiff has explained the circumstances why he had to keep a part of his family in his native village and we are satisfied that he was compelled to do so in the circumstances in which he found himself placed. The defendant further attempted, somewhat belatedly, to show that the plaintiff had some other alternative accommodation in the city, but in this he has totally failed. Such a case was not made out even in his additional written statement nor was it suggested to the plaintiff in his cross-examination in this court. Except for the muthkoti at Bhupen Bose Avenue, no other accommodation is available to the plaintiff in the City and this accommodation, we have already found, is not a reasonably suitable accommodation. In any view of the matter, therefore, we must hold that the plaintiff has been able to make out a case of reasonable requirement of the suit premises for his own use and occupation and it must further be held that the plaintiff does not have a reasonably suitable accommodation already. These two issues are, therefore, answered in plaintiff's favour.

16. It follows, therefore, that the instant appeal must fail and is accordingly dismissed. The judgment and decree of all the courts below are hereby affirmed.

17. The defendant appellant is granted time till 30th of November 1976 to vacate the premises in dispute provided that the defendant appellant continues to deposit an amount equivalent to the rate of rent month by month according to English Calendar by the 15th of each month in the trial court, the first of such deposits is to be made by the 15th August 1976 and the rent for the month of November 1976 is to be deposited by the 30th November 1976, failing which the plaintiff respondent would be at liberty to execute the decree.

18. In the circumstances of the case there will be no order as to costs in this appeal.

JANAH, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 142

R. BHATTACHARYA AND A. K. JANAH, JJ.

K. Vasudeva Rao, Appellant v. Jadu Nandan Trivedi, Respondent.

Section 100 C. P. C. is not strictly applicable to a Letters Patent appeal. The Bench is not barred by law from interfering with findings of fact in respect of a judgment of a Single Judge in first appeal, though in case of concurrent findings of fact it will be slow to interfere. In proper cases it has a right to review findings of fact for proper decision and ends of justice. AIR 1964 Pat 76 and AIR 1965 Pat 672 (FB), Dissent. from; AIR 1958 Punj 260 and AIR 1967 Delhi 128, Rel. on. C. A. No. 232 of 1961, D/- 11-1-1963 (SC), Foll. (Paras 4, 4A, 5, 7).

(B) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 13 (1) (f) and (ff) — Amendment introducing Section 13 (1) (ff) after institution of suit — No other suitable accommodation — Issue not framed — Plea already taken in plaint and answered in written statement and evidence adduced as well — Findings given by trial Court and appellate Court on the point by application of mind squarely covering the requirement of clause (ff) — No injustice or prejudice caused — Question of amendment of plaint that plaintiff landlord was not in possession of any other suitable accommodation, did not arise. AIR 1966 SC 735 and AIR 1977 Cal 99, Rel. on; AIR 1976 SC 479, Foll.

(C) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 13 (6) — Transfer of Property Act (1882), Sections 106 and 111 — Legality of second notice determining tenancy when first notice not acted upon by both parties.

Once a notice of termination of tenancy is given it cannot be unilaterally retracted by the landlord and when determination of tenancy is accepted by both parties the tenant cannot continue the tenancy again without the approval or consent of the landlord. But when the tenant does not accept the determination of that tenancy and the landlord also does not act upon that notice the question of consent of the tenant for giving a second notice does not arise. AIR 1968 SC 471, Dist. (Para 12)

Where even after the notice of determination of tenancy, the tenant asserts himself as a tenant and the landlord treats him as such, the first notice is waived. In such a case there is no illegality in the second notice given by the landlord. (Para 13)

(D) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 13 (1) (ff) — Word 'owner' not qualified or limited — Includes co-owner or co-sharer. (1975) 1 Cal LJ 413, Foll. (Para 14)

(E) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 13 (1) (ff) — Plaintiff-landlord co-owner — Other co-owners not necessary parties. (Civil P. C. (1908), Order 1, Rule 10).

Where there are other co-owners of a building and if the plaintiff is one of the co-owners letting out the premises to the tenant, then the other co-owners have no locus standi to bring a suit for eviction against a person who is not a tenant under them. They are neither proper nor necessary parties.

B. C. Dutt, and Ganpati Chunder, for Appellant; Tapas Roy and S. M. Mukherjee, for Respondent.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.— The defendant, K. Vasudev Rao, has come up with the instant Letters Patent Appeal challenging the decision arrived at in the first appeal before this Court affirming the judgment and the decree passed in favour of the plaintiff-respondent Jadu Nandan Trivedi in the original suit started in the City Civil Court at Calcutta.

2. Briefly stated, the plaintiff's case is that he is the owner of the premises No. 25A, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta and that the defendant was a monthly tenant under him in respect of a room on the ground floor of the said premises at a monthly rental of

Rs. 70/- payable according to the English Calendar. The plaintiff's allegation is that he reasonably requires the suit room for his own use and occupation because it is necessary for the use of his eldest son. Gaya Prosad Trivedi, a member of his family as his chamber in connexion with his legal practice. It has been stated that Gaya Prosad is in urgent need of a room on the ground floor to receive his clients. Other grounds for eviction of the tenant are that the defendant has been creating nuisance and annoyance to the plaintiff and other occupants of the house and neighbours by using a grinding machine, that he is guilty of acts of waste resulting in material deterioration of the condition of the house and that he made substantial additions and alterations of permanent nature by raising a wall, removing the door and digging out the floor of the room without the landlord's permission and consent. The defendant appeared and challenged the allegations made by the plaintiff. He has denied that the plaintiff requires reasonably the room in suit as alleged or that he did any act of waste or material deterioration of the house by making any construction or by digging the floor or by removing the door as alleged. The trial court on evidence found that the defendant is not guilty of either any nuisance or annoyance or of any act of waste or material deterioration of the house by making additions, alterations etc. as alleged. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court, however, was satisfied that the plaintiff required the suit premises reasonably for his own use and occupation as stated in the plaint. Ultimately the suit was decreed. In the first appeal taken by the defendant before this Court, one of our learned brothers, M. M. Dutt, J. on consideration of the contentions raised and materials on record held that the trial court had been justified in passing the decree on the ground of reasonable requirement of the plaintiff and affirmed the decision thereof. Against that decision the present appeal has been filed.

3. We have heard Mr. Dutt, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant and Mr. Roy for the respondent.

4. The first point that has been urged by Mr. Dutt on behalf of the appellant is that the learned Judge in the first appeal as well as the trial court did not properly consider the evidence on record regarding the alleged reasonable requirement of the plaintiff and for that purpose Mr. Dutt wants to discuss the evidence once again of each and every witness examined in the trial court, Mr. Roy from the side of the respondent, however, contends that in this Letters Patent Appeal Mr. Dutt cannot reargue the questions of fact, which according to Mr. Roy, have been finally settled in the first appeal before Mr. Justice M. M. Dutt. The respondent's contention is that the appeal before us is as good as second appeal and, therefore, the findings of fact as to the question of reasonable requirement of the plaintiff cannot be reopened at this stage and this Court cannot go into the evidence to reassess the same for its own finding. Mr. Dutt has replied, however, that the High Court, while dealing with an appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, will be at liberty to reconsider the evidence on the question of fact and should come to an independent finding. In this connexion we may consider some of the decisions referred to by the learned Advocates of both the parties regarding the scope of the Court in a Letters Patent Appeal relating to the finding of fact arrived at in the first appeal.

4A. In the case of M/s. Bholabhai v. Ratan Chand reported in AIR 1958 Punj 260 decided by a Division Bench, the powers of a Bench hearing an appeal under Clause 10 of the Letters Patent were considered. In that connexion the view of the learned Judges appears in the following words :

"Although there is not such rule either of procedure or practice by which a Bench hearing an appeal under Clause 10 of the Letters Patent is debarred from examining and reversing a finding on a question of fact given by the learned Single Judge, nevertheless, the appeal court would be reluctant to interfere with that finding unless there are very strong reasons for doing so."

5. There is the Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court in the case of Sm. Asho Devi v. Dhuki Shaw reported in AIR 1965 Pat 472 (FB). This is an appeal against the judgment of a single Judge of the Patna High Court reversing the judgment of the 3rd Subordinate Judge, Patna and dismissing the plaintiff's suit for recovery of certain amount. This Full Bench decision affirmed the decision of a Division Bench of the Patna High Court in Ram Swarup Singh v. Muneshwar Singh reported in AIR 1964 Pat 76, where it was held, on a construction of Clause 10 of the Patna Letters Patent, that in an appeal against the first appeal judgment of a single Judge the restrictions imposed by Section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure would apply and that the Division Bench will not be justified in interfering with mere findings of fact.

6. Our attention has also been drawn to the Division Bench decision of the Delhi High Court in Pt. Devi Charan v. Durga Prosad Chhannulal (AIR 1967 Delhi 128).

There also the question arose whether a Division Bench of a High Court, while hearing the Letters Patent appeal from a first appeal which was heard by a single Judge of the High Court, can review even a finding of a fact. The Bench is, however, of the view that a Division Bench of a High Court in hearing a Letters Patent Appeal from a first appeal heard by a single Judge of the High Court can reconsider the findings of fact, particularly, when the judgment by the learned single Judge is not of affirmance, but of reversal of the judgment of the trial Court. In this connexion a reference was made to an unreported decision of the Supreme Court dated 11-1-1963 in C. A. No. 232 of 1961 Alopati Kashi Biswanathan v. A. Sivarama Krishnaiya. A portion of the unreported decision of the Supreme Court has been quoted in the judgment. No other reported decision of the Supreme Court in this respect has been brought to our notice. We, however, quote the relevant portion of the unreported Supreme Court decision as follows:

"A Letters Patent appeal from the judgment of a Learned Single Judge in a first appeal to the High Court is not exactly equivalent to a second appeal under Section 100 of the Civil Procedure Code and, therefore, it cannot be held that a Letters Patent Appeal of this kind can only lie on a question of law and not otherwise. The matter would have been different if the Letters Patent Appeal was from a decision of a learned Single Judge in a second Appeal to the High Court. In these circumstances, it will be open to the High Court to review even findings of fact in a Letters Patent Appeal from a first appeal heard by a learned Single Judge, though generally speaking the Letters Patent Bench would be slow to disturb concurrent findings of fact of the two courts below. But, there is no doubt that in an appropriate case a Letters Patent Bench hearing an appeal from a learned Single Judge of the High Court in a first appeal heard by him is entitled to review even findings of fact".

7. On consideration of the judicial practice, the provisions of law and the decision of the Supreme Court, there can be no doubt for us to hold that S. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be strictly and legally speaking applicable to an appeal to be heard by the Letters Patent Bench. This Bench will have powers to reconsider the findings of fact. This interference with the finding of fact is not barred by law in respect of a judgment of a single Judge in the first appeal. In the case of concurrent findings of fact both in the trial court and in the first appeal, the Letters Patent Bench will be slow to interfere. In proper cases the Bench will have right to review the findings of fact for proper decision and for ends of justice. Such occasion may arise when, for example, the impugned finding of fact is based upon misreading of evidence or the pleadings or it is based on no evidence or it is based on evidence illegally admitted and in other cases where it is perverse and utterly unreasonable. The instances may not be exhaustively enumerated.

8. Mr. Dutt has contended that in view of the amendment of Section 13 (1) (f) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 made in 1969 by introduction of Section 13 (1) (ff), the suit should be dismissed or at least the appeal should be sent back on remand for amendment of the plaint in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan reported in AIR 1975 SC 1146. Going through the decision of that case we have no doubt to hold that there is no ground either of the dismissal of the suit or of sending back the case on remand, as contended by Mr. Dutt for amendment of the plaint. First of all, we should note that in that case the Supreme Court found that the suit as originally brought was defective since it did not contain averments complying with the new clauses (f) and (ff) of sub-s. (1) of Section 13. In the appeal before us, there is no question of transfer of ownership of the suit premises by the landlord within three years indicated in sub-section (3A). Secondly the old clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act was as follows:—

“(f) Where the premises are reasonably required by the landlord either for purposes of building or rebuilding or for making thereto substantial additions or alterations or for his own occupation if he is the owner or for the occupation of any person for whose benefit the premises are held.”

By the Amending Act XXXIV of 1969 previous clause (f) was practically sub-divided and substituted in its place by the two following clauses:

“(f) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3A) and Section 18-A, where the premises are reasonably required by the landlord for purposes of building or rebuilding or for making thereto substantial additions or alterations, and such building or rebuilding, or additions or alterations, cannot be carried out without the premises being vacated;

(ff) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3A) where the premises are reasonably required by the landlord for his own occupation if he is the owner or for the occupation of any person for whose benefit the premises are held and the landlord or such person is not in possession of any reasonably suitable accommodation”.

We are concerned with clause (ff) of Section 13 (1). Mr. Dutt's contention is that when the present suit was filed in the year 1968, there was no existence of clause (ff), and unless the plaintiff makes an amendment inserting in the plaint that he was not in possession of any other reasonably suitable accommodation, than the room in suit, the plaintiff cannot get any decision on that point and if the defendant is not given an opportunity to make a submission on that point or challenge the said ground, no proper decision can be arrived at. In this connexion Mr. Dutt has submitted that in the absence of the allegation in the pleading that the plaintiff was not in possession of any other reasonably suitable accommodation and in the absence of any issue on that point giving the opportunity to the defendant to adduce evidence, the defence case would be prejudiced and injustice would be done. To appreciate the contention raised, we have gone through the plaint and the written statement filed in this case. In paragraphs 5 and 6 of the plaint, the plaintiff has stated that his eldest son, Gaya Prosad, passed LL.B. examination and applied for enrolment as an Advocate and intends to practise at Calcutta. It has been further stated that his son Gaya Prosad is in urgent need of a room for his chamber to entertain his clients on the ground floor. It has also been clearly stated that the plaintiff has no other accommodation save and except what is mentioned to accommodate Gaya Prosad for the purpose of having a chamber. In the written statement the defendant has stated that he is not aware whether Gaya Prosad passed LL.B. examination or that he intends to practice as an Advocate. The defendant has denied that the suit room is required for the purpose of his chamber. He has asserted that the plaintiff has got not only more than sufficient accommodation, but also more than reasonable accommodation. The defendant has denied that the plaintiff got no other accommodation to use as a chamber. It is stated that the plaintiff has got sufficient accommodation to be used as a chamber. We, therefore, find that the plaintiff pleaded in the plaint that he had no other reasonable accommodation as required for the ground mentioned in cl. (ff), sub-sec. (1) of Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and in fact the defendant was aware of that pleading and asserted that the plaintiff had more than sufficient accommodation at his disposal. The question of amendment of plaint does not arise in the present case.

9. With regard to the submission of Mr. Dutt that unless there was the issue in particular as to whether or not the plaintiff had in his possession any other reasonable accommodation besides the room in suit the defence case would be prejudiced. We have considered the evidence adduced by the parties in this case and also the contentions raised in the trial court as well as in the first appeal. The plaintiff has been examined in this case. During evidence he affirmed on oath that he had no other accommodation save and except the room in suit on the ground floor for converting the same into a chamber for his son Gaya Prosad who had been practising as an Advocate of this Court. On the question of other accommodation, the plaintiff was cross-examined by the defendant. Several suggestions were thrown to the plaintiff from the side of the defendant to show that the plaintiff had other reasonable accommodation, but those suggestions were not accepted by any of the courts. The defendant during his evidence stated that the rooms which were in occupation of the plaintiff were sufficient for his accommodation and that the plaintiff's son was using a lobby on the 4th floor as his chamber. It appears that the trial court decreed the suit in April, 1971, long after the amendment of Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. From the judgment of the learned Judge, City Civil Court, it appears that the effect of amendment of Section 13 (1) (f) by the introduction of clause (ff) was considered and the parties were heard on that point. It further appears that the learned Judge quoted the relevant portion of the amended clause which says that the landlord is to prove that he is not in possession of any reasonably suitable accommodation. The learned Judge applied his mind and he was satisfied in spite of such amendment that the plaintiff proved that he reasonably required the suit premises in possession of the defendant on the ground floor for being used as a chamber of Gaya Prosad. In the first appeal before Mr. Justice Dutt, the defendant-appellant filed a petition to take note of the subsequent events that the plaintiff had other rooms at his disposal when some of the tenants left the premises. That application was challenged and on consideration of the affidavits submitted by the parties, the allegations made by the defendant were not accepted. It was held that the plaintiff had been able to prove that he reasonably required the suit premises and the decision of the trial Court was affirmed.

10. From the facts and circumstances there can be no doubt, therefore, that the plaintiff had all along been saying that he had no other reasonably suitable accommodation except the room in suit and that the defendant had been challenging the same. It also appears that the parties led evidence in this respect and both the parties knew about the contentions of their adversaries. There is no necessity for framing separate issue whether the plaintiff had, besides the room in suit, any other reasonably suitable accommodation for the purpose of using as the chamber of a lawyer. The general issue framed in this case relating to the reasonable requirement alleged by the plaintiff for his own use and occupation was there and both the parties fought throughout on the question whether the plaintiff had some other reasonably suitable accommodation besides the room in occupation of the defendant. The parties knew what the matter in issue was and they fought over it. In these circumstances, no particular issue as suggested by Mr. Dutt was necessary and in the absence of such an issue, the case of neither of the parties was prejudiced and no injustice has been done. In this connexion the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Bhagavati v. Chandramaul appearing in AIR 1966 SC 735 may be looked into on the question of framing issues. This Bench had occasion to discuss about the non-striking of issues and the effect thereof in the case of Saraswati v. Satya Narayan Gupta reported in 80 Cal WN 753 = (AIR 1977 Cal 99). In that case Mr. Dutt, the learned Advocate for the appellant before us in the present appeal represented one of the parties. We may further refer to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Maulavi Abdur Rub Firoz Ahmed and Co. v. Jay Krishna Arora reported in AIR 1976 SC 479. In that case an ejectment suit was filed in October, 1969 and subsequently the Second Amendment Act (West Bengal Act XXXIV of 1969) was introduced and came into force. There was also a ground for eviction of the tenant by the landlord under clause (f) of sub-sec. (1) of Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. There it was held by the Supreme Court:

"The High Court has recorded a finding in this case which squarely covers the requirement of clause (ff) introduced by the Amendment Act. The learned trial Judge has found, which finding was upheld by the High Court, that the respondent not only required the suit premises for his own occupation but was not in possession of any other reasonably suitable accommodation".

Similarly on consideration of the facts and circumstances in the present case, we can say that the findings of the trial Court as well as in the appeal squarely cover the requirement of clause (ff) introduced by Amendment Act of 1969. There has been no illegality in our view nor any prejudice to any of the parties in spite of the Amendment Act of 1969 and the contentions raised by Mr. Dutt as mentioned above cannot be accepted.

11. It has been next contended by Mr. Dutt on behalf of the appellant that the findings of the trial court in the appeal regarding the reasonable requirement of the plaintiff for his occupation of the room in suit are not acceptable. We have been taken through the evidence of the witnesses as also the judgments of the trial court as well as in the appeal. We find that the said findings are based upon proper evidence and in our view those findings are correct. We cannot say that the said findings are either perverse or unreasonable or without any basis. In this connexion our attention has been drawn to two applications filed by the appellant — one for additional evidence and the other for consideration of subsequent events as alleged in the petition. The alleged subsequent events, on which the respondent wants to rely, have been denied by the appellant. The said facts are disputed. Moreover, in the first appeal some facts were considered on an application by the defendant-appellant. But, no relief was granted. The contention of the defendant-appellant was rejected. In view of the fact that the events relied upon by the tenant are unaccepted and disputed by the plaintiff, they cannot be relied upon by this Court in the Letters Patent Appeal. Moreover, on a consideration of the allegations made regarding subsequent events we find that the rebutting statements of the plaintiff-respondent before us are acceptable. The fact of an ex parte partition decree is, however, admitted. The materials on record are sufficient to decide the suit as has been done by the trial court and duly confirmed by the learned Judge in the first appeal. We accordingly dispose of the two applications of the appellant as mentioned above. We also find no reason to interfere with the concurrent findings arrived at in the trial court and in the first appeal. It has been clearly proved that the plaintiff requires the room in suit for the use as chamber by his son, a practising Advocate of this Court. It has also been proved that there is no other reasonably suitable accommodation in possession of the plaintiff.

12. It has been further contended by Mr. Dutt that the notice of ejectment relied upon by the plaintiff is illegal and ineffective. The fact is that in 1965 the plaintiff served a combined notice upon the defendant under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and under Section 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 determining the monthly tenancy on the expiry of the last day of March, 1965. That notice was not acted upon. Subsequently, the plaintiff served another such combined notice dated 19-6-1967 determining the tenancy on the expiry of the last day of July, 1967. The argument of Mr. Dutt is that in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Calcutta Credit Corporation Limited v. Happy Homes Private Limited reported in AIR 1968 SC 471, the second notice is bad and did not determine the tenancy because no consent of the defendant had been obtained for the second notice. According to him, the first notice subsists. The principle laid down by the Supreme Court in the case relied upon is not applicable to the case before us. In that case a building was let out to the tenant for a period of 12 years. After the expiry of the period, the tenant continued to hold over the premises. On 12-8-1953 the tenant M/s. Allenbery and Co. Ltd. served a notice in writing upon the landlord intimating their intention to vacate the premises on 31-8-53 at 3-30 p. m. and requested the landlord to arrange to take delivery of possession. Later on by a letter dated 26-8-1953 the tenant-Company informed the landlord that they did not intend to vacate the premises as already notified. The landlord informed the tenant that the earlier notice dated 12-8-1953 could not be withdrawn except by mutual consent. In that case the Company gave notice about their quitting the tenanted premises thereby determining the tenancy and the said notice was accepted by the landlord. When the determination of tenancy was accepted by both the parties, the tenant cannot whimsically continue the tenancy again after such determination without the approval or consent of the landlord. In that case it was held that the notice determining the tenancy given by the tenant under the circumstances mentioned could not be waived by the tenant unilaterally without the consent of the landlord. In the present case, the evidence is that after the ejectment notice given in 1965, the defendant did not accept the determination of that tenancy, but in fact, paid rents in favour of the plaintiff asserting himself as a tenant. The plaintiff also did not act upon that notice. Subsequently, however, when the plaintiff felt that he required the suit premises for his son living with him in his family, he served the second notice in 1967. The first notice was, therefore, not accepted by the defendant nor followed up by the plaintiff at that time. In the circumstances the question of consent of the defendant for giving the second notice does not arise.

13. Moreover, a lease of immovable property as mentioned in Section 111 of the Transfer of Property Act determines on the expiration of a notice to determine the lease or to quit or of intention to quit the property leased duly given by one party to the other. In the present case the second notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act was served on the defendant as already mentioned. Section 113 of the said Act says that a notice under Section 111, clause (h), as in the present case, is waived, with the express or implied consent of the person to whom it is given, by any act on the part of the person giving it showing an intention to keep the lease as subsisting. There are two illustrations under this section. I have already mentioned about the conduct of the parties as indicated in illustration (a). After the expiration of the notice period as mentioned in the notice of the year 1965, the defendant asserted himself as a tenant under the plaintiff and the plaintiff also treated the defendant as such. Illustration (b), in addition, is applicable to the present case. Illustration (b) is as follows:—

“A, the lessor, gives B, the lessee, notice to quit the property leased. The notice expires, and B remains in possession. A gives to B as lessee a second notice to quit. The first notice is waived”.

In the present case also after the expiration of the notice of 1965, the defendant remained in possession of the suit room. The plaintiff again gave a notice in 1967. The first notice was, therefore, waived. There is no illegality in the second notice given by the plaintiff and served upon the defendant in 1967.

14. Lastly, it has been contended by Mr. Dutt that the suit ought to have failed for non-joinder of necessary parties, namely, the co-sharers-owners of the building in which the defendant is a tenant in respect of one room. To substantiate this argument copies of the decree and the judgment passed by the Subordinate Judge at Keonjhar in Orissa in Title Suit No. 25/66-I have been filed. This is a partition suit filed by Ramanandan Trivedi and Abhinava Kumar Trivedi against the present plaintiff Jadunandan Trivedi and some others in respect of several properties including the premises No. 25-A, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta. The room-in-suit is a part of this building and the plaintiff claims this property as exclusively his. There is no dispute that a decree has been passed ex parte against the plaintiff. Attempt was made to set aside that ex parte decree, but having failed in Orissa Courts, the plaintiff has filed a Title Suit in the City Civil Court, Calcutta for a declaration that the suit premises belongs to him exclusively and to no other person. This suit has been started to nullify the effect of the partition decree. According to the partition decree passed in Orissa Court, the plaintiff appears to be one of the co-owners of the property. The admitted fact again is that the defendant took the tenancy from the plaintiff and even in the written statement the defendant has stated “that the defendant submits that he is still a tenant under the plaintiff in respect of a room (back portion) on the ground floor on 25-A, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta-13”. Nowhere has it been stated in the written statement that the defendant had any other co-landlord. In fact the defendant has been always accepting the plaintiff as his landlord and he deposited rents in favour of the plaintiff alone as his landlord. Mr. Dutt’s point is that the sole landlord being a co-owner cannot evict the tenant under him unless all the co-owners of the suit property join as plaintiffs to evict the defendant. At the same time it has been argued that a co-owner cannot claim that he requires the suit room for his occupation because he is not the sole owner of the property in question. For this purpose Mr. Dutt has relied upon a Single Bench decision of this Court in Sriram Pasrisha v. Jagannath reported in 77 Cal WN 613 = (AIR 1974 Cal 80). According to that decision “it is not possible to hold that the part owner of the property in the circumstances is the owner as contemplated in Section 13 (1) (ff)”. This very decision relied upon by Mr. Dutt has been set aside by a judgment in a Letters Patent Appeal decided by a Division Bench of this Court appearing in (1975) 1 Cal LJ 413. There, according to Division Bench, the term “owner” in its ordinary sense as well as in its legal concept means and includes a co-sharer owner and in this connexion there has been a long discussion on the subject. We agree with the decision of the Division Bench and hold that a co-owner or a co-sharer owner of the property comes under the purview of clause (ff) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. In the present case, the plaintiff let out the shop room to the defendant. There is no dispute and also it is proved that the plaintiff is the sole landlord of the defendant. According to the sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Act, the landlord can obtain a decree for recovery of possession against his tenant on several grounds mentioned in different clauses. According to clause (ff) the landlord is entitled to evict the tenant when he reasonably requires the suit premises for his own occupation if he is the owner and further if the landlord is not in possession of any reasonably suitable accommodation. In the present case, even if it is assumed that the plaintiff is a co-sharer owner, it cannot be stated that for his own reasonable requirement for occupation he cannot get a decree for eviction of the tenant unless he is the sole owner. In clause (ff) the word "owner" is not qualified or limited. The word does not, therefore, exclude a co-owner. Moreover, according to law, the landlord is entitled to bring an action for eviction of the tenant. If there be other co-owners of a building and if the plaintiff be one of the co-owners letting out the premises to a tenant, the other co-owners have no locus standi to bring any suit for eviction against a person who is not a tenant under them. Those co-owners are neither proper nor necessary parties. The last contention of Mr. Dutt also fails.

15. In the result, the appeal is dismissed on contest with costs and the prayers of the appellant in the petitions for additional evidence and for noting the subsequent events as alleged have been dealt with in the judgment and are thus disposed of.

16. The records of the trial court may be sent down as early as possible.

A. K. JANAH J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

MASUD AND S. K. MUKHERJEE, JJ.

Appeal No. 207 of 1972, Suit No. 69 of 1963, D/- 21-5-1976.

Letters Patent (Cal), Cl. 15 — "Judgment" — Meaning of — Calcutta High Court Rules, Chap. 36, Rule 72 — Order under — Whether judgment — Appeal against — Whether maintainable.

A notice of motion was taken on behalf of the defendant and a bill of costs in respect of the notice of motion was taxed as a chamber application. In a review under Chapter 36 R. 72 of High Court Rules, the Court confirmed the order. The appeal was filed against this order. It was contended on behalf of respondent that the order of the Court under Chapter 36 Rule 72 was final and no appeal could lie against the order. It was further contended that the appeal was not maintainable under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent because it provides for an appeal against a final order deciding the issue between parties. In the instant case, the dispute was between the Solicitor and his client and not between original parties in the suit.

Held, that meaning of the word "parties" in Clause 15 of the Letters Patent was not restricted to the original parties. To decide the question whether an order was a "judgment" it was enough if the Court was satisfied that the order under appeal involves a final determination of a lis between two parties. In the instant case the Court finally decided that the appellant was to pay costs as those of Chamber application. The order under Chap. 36 R. 72 Calcutta High Court Rules was therefore "judgment" under Cl. 15, Letters Patent and the appeal was maintainable against that order. (Para 5)

MASUD, J.:— We delivered a judgment in this appeal on January 6, 1976 allowing the appeal, after hearing the Counsel for the appellant. On that day nobody appeared on behalf of the respondent. Thereafter, the matter was mentioned by the Counsel for the respondent and the said judgment and order were recalled. The facts of the case may, briefly, be stated as follows:

2. Suit No. 69 of 1963 was filed in this Court by Himangshu Sekhar Paul against Kishori Lal Paul and others. A consent decree was passed on August 21, 1964, whereby, inter alia, a special Referee was appointed to go into the accounts between the parties. On April 1, 1966, the Special Referee allowed the plaintiff to file additional statement of facts on his oral application. On May 9, 1966 a Notice of Motion was taken by M/s. J. N. Mitter and Co., on behalf of one of the defendants to set aside the above order of the Special Referee. On August 8, 1966, A. N. Sen J. set aside the order of the Special Referee and directed a formal application to be made before the Special Referee for the purpose of filing additional statement of facts. On April 26, 1969, a bill of costs in respect of this Notice of Motion dated May 9, 1966 was taxed. The Assistant Taxing Officer allowed the costs as those of the Notice of Motion as of a Chamber application. On April 29, 1969, an exception was taken before the Registrar of this Court against the said order of the Assistant Taxing Officer. On August 12, 1970, the said exception was allowed by the Registrar who held that the costs should have been allowed as those of a Notice of Motion. On September 7, 1970, a Master's Summons was taken out before R. M. Datta J. who after hearing the parties confirmed the order of the Assistant Taxing Officer. Thereafter, this appeal has been filed against the said order of R. M. Datta J.

3. Mr. Sen, Counsel for the respondent, has raised a preliminary point that this appeal is not maintainable under the Rules of this Hon'ble Court. Relying upon Kaluram Marwari v. Matilal AIR 1933 Cal 715, he has argued that there is no scope for an appeal against the order of R. M. Datta J. The learned Judge has passed the order under Chapter XXXVI Rule 72 of the Original Side Rules. Under the said Rules, according to him, a Judge can only review the taxation made by the Registrar and once the learned Judge passed the order under the said Rule, his decision is final. The Rules forming a self-contained Code, there is nothing in the Rules which would enable the party to prefer an appeal against such order of the learned Judge. He has also substantiated his argument by referring to Chapter VI R. 15 and Chapter XXXVI Rules 70, 71 and 72 where the words "appeal" and "review" have been used. He has also argued that in any event the appeal is not maintainable under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent inasmuch as the said Clause provides for an appeal against a final order deciding the issues between the parties. In this matter the dispute is between the Solicitor and his client and not between the original parties in the suit.

4. In our view, there is no substance in the demurrer. Under Chapter XXXVI Rule 116, the Taxing Officer includes any Assistant Registrar in the Taxing Office save and except where the words "Taxing Officer" have been mentioned in certain Rules of this Court which include Rules 70, 71 and 72 in the said Chapter. In the present case, the Assistant Registrar who happens to be the Assistant Taxing Officer has decided that the costs of the application before Sen J. should be taxed as those of a Chamber application. Against the said order the Registrar as a Taxing Officer reviewed the order of the Assistant Taxing Officer under Chapter XXXVI Rules 70 and 71. The Registrar set aside the order of the Assistant Taxing Officer and held that the cost of the application should be as those of a Notice of Motion. The respondent thereafter made an application under Rule 72 of the same Chapter before the learned Judge who reviewed the order of the Registrar and set aside the order of the Registrar. But Chapter XXXVI Rule 72 does not provide that no appeal would lie against an order passed under Rule 72 or that the order made on an application under Rule 72 would be final or conclusive. The relevant provisions of the said Rules are as follows:

"Any party, who may be dissatisfied with the decision of the Taxing Officer as to any item may apply to a Judge in Chambers for an order to review the taxation as to the same item..... and the Judge may thereupon make such order as to him may seem just; but the taxation of the Taxing Officer shall be final and inclusive of all matters which shall not have been subjected to in manner aforesaid". It is clear from this Rule that the Judge may confirm or modify or set aside the order of the Taxing Officer under this Rule but it does not say that the order of the said Judge is final. This Rule only provides that there is a finality of the taxation of the Taxing Officer in respect of those items in the bill of costs which have not been objected to by any of the parties. In the instant case, there was a dispute between the appellant and the respondents as to the costs in respect of the said application before Sen J. from the initial stage.

5. Nor can it be said that the order under appeal is not a "judgment" under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. From the order of Sen J. it is clear that the learned Judge has directed that the parties would bear their own respective costs and the said order was made, admittedly, upon a Notice of Motion taken out by a defendant other than the appellant. Nobody raised any objection that the said application should have been made on a Master's Summons. All the parties proceeded on the basis that an application for setting aside an order of the Taxing Officer could be made by a Notice of Motion. In fact, the formal order, as drawn up, expressly mentions the fact that the learned Judge passed his order upon a Notice of Motion. Not only the parties treated the said application as one which could be made on a Notice of Motion, the learned Judge decided that the parties would bear their respective costs as those of an application made by a Notice of Motion. The said order of Sen J. has not been challenged either. Under these circumstances, the learned Judge having made a decision that the costs of this application should be treated as those of an application by a Notice of Motion, the Assistant Taxing Officer had no jurisdiction to take a contrary view. The decision of Sen J. on the nature of application, though not expressly made, is clear and his order of costs is final and binding on the Assistant Taxing Officer. Thus, Datta J. and the Assistant Taxing Officer had no jurisdiction to make an order contrary to the order made by Sen J. It is well settled that when an order is made without jurisdiction appeal would always lie against such order. It is also contended that the present dispute is not between the original parties, and as such it cannot be a "judgment" under cl. 15 of Letters Patent. But, in my view, the meaning of the word "Parties" in clause 15 of the Letters Patent is not restricted to the Original Parties. To decide the question whether an order under appeal is a "Judgment" it is enough if the Court is satisfied that the order under appeal involves a final determination of a lis between two parties. As stated above, by order of Datta J. it has been finally decided that the appellant is to pay costs as those of a chamber application. The result is that the appellant solicitor and not the respondent will have to pay fees personally to the Counsel briefed in application before Sen J. The dispute here is between attorney and client, who are the parties before Datta J. This contention of Mr. Sen, therefore, also fails.

6. Mr. Sen has next argued that the application before Sen J. under Rules of this Court could not be made under a Notice of Motion and as the learned Judge has not specifically decided that point the Assistant Taxing Officer has correctly exercised his jurisdiction under the Rules. In our view, this contention also cannot be accepted. Chapter VI Rule 11 expressly mentions matters which can be disposed of in Chambers by a Judge. Item No. 18 of the said Rule reads as follows:

"Such other matters as are not expressly required to be disposed of in Court and which the Judge thinks fit to be heard in Chambers, and such other applications as are directed to be made in Chambers".

This item makes it clear that any matter other than matters mentioned in Items Nos. 1 to 17 may also be disposed of in Chambers, if the Judge thinks fit to be heard in Chambers. In the present case, no learned Judge has directed or thought fit that the said application before Sen J. should be heard in Chambers. Reliance may be placed upon Gobinda Das Bhattar v. Pran Kumar Das (1959) 63 Cal WN 877, 882. In Appendix Z to the Rules a long list of matters or applications other than those in Chapters VI and XI have been set out which could be dealt with or made in Chambers. The appellant in his application before Sen J. has asked for the following prayers:

"(e) The orders by Special Referee for filing an additional or amended state of facts by oral application on behalf of the plaintiffs may be set aside.

(f) In the alternative, Special Referee do file a special report as to why the plaintiff is allowed to file the additional state of facts in the manner sought to be done and at this stage".

Prayer (e) cannot be said to be one of the matters which is included in either Chapter VI Rule 11 or in Appendix Z and therefore the application before Sen J. could only be taken by a Notice of Motion under Chapter XX Rule 3, relevant portions of which read as follows:

"Except where otherwise provided by Statute or prescribed by these Rules all applications, which in accordance with these Rules cannot be made in Chambers, shall be made on Motion after notice to the parties affected thereby

7. Mr. Sen has drawn our attention to paragraph 21 of the petition before Sen J. which reads as follows:

"The Special Referee was requested by the Counsel on behalf of the defendants to make a special report before allowing the plaintiff to alter or amend the state of facts by filing an additional state of facts on oral application but the special Referee declined to make a special report."

As the Special Referee declined to make a special report, Mr. Sen has argued that under Chapter XXVI Rule 51 the said prayer (f) can only be granted in an application under Master's Summons as set out in the Rules. But Mr. Sen has overlooked the fact that Sen J. has passed the order in terms of prayer (e). Prayer (f) has been sought for as an alternative relief. Even assuming that the Special Referee has refused to make a Special Report the learned Judge has exercised his power to treat a Chamber matter as a matter to be decided by Judge in Court under Chapter VI Rule 10 of the Rules. In the instant case, the parties admittedly, by their conduct, represented to the Court that the application should be heard by a Notice of Motion. Even assuming that the said application may be treated as an application to be moved before a Judge in Chambers, Sen J. has finally adjudicated that the matter should be disposed of in Court. If the Parties were of opinion that the application should be treated as an application before a Judge in Chambers, Counsel could have asked for a Certificate that the application was a fit and a proper one where Counsel should have been briefed. In conclusion, I would like to state that I have read the judgment of my learned brother and respectfully agree with the same.

8. Lastly, Mr. Sen has urged that the application before Sen, J. was made in a proceeding under a decree or order and, as such, the said application should be treated as a Chamber application under Ch. VI R. 13. It is not necessary for me to decide the question whether the application could have been made in chambers under the said Rule, inasmuch as the learned Judge for reasons stated above disposed of the said application as an application under notice of motion and not as a chamber application.

9. I, therefore, hold that the appeal is allowed and the order of the learned Judge is set aside. The respondent shall pay costs of the appeal and the Court below to the appellant. It is certified that the application before R. M. Datta J. is a fit case for engaging a Counsel.

10. S. K. MUKHERJEE, J.:— I agree that the order should be as proposed by my Lord. I also agree that the order dated January 6, 1976 by which the learned Judge set aside the order of the Registrar and restored the order of the Taxing Officer on an application made under Rule 72 of the Chapter XXXVI of the Original Side Rules, is appealable under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. The order is a 'judgment' because it finally determines an independent proceeding for taxing the attorney's bill of costs to which the attorney and his client are parties. Clause 15 provides that an appeal shall lie from an order of a single Judge of the High Court, not being a judgment passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by a Court subject to the superintendence of the High Court and not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction. In the present case, the order was made on an application for review under Chapter XXXVI Rule 72, and not in exercise of revisional jurisdiction. Moreover, the order of the Registrar which was reversed by the learned Judge is not an order made by a Court subject to the Superintendence of the High Court.

11. It was contended that an order made on an application under Rule 72 is final and conclusive. The Rule does not say so. It merely says that the decision of the Taxing Officer as to any item or part of any item which has not been objected to by any party before him, shall be final and conclusive. In this context reference may be made to R. 63 of Order XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure which lays down that where an objection is preferred under Order 21 Rule 58 the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive. It has been held that the language of Rule 63 bars an appeal. The provisions of Rule 72 of Chapter XXXVI have nothing in common with Rule 63 of Order XXI of the Code in language.

12. The other argument, namely, that the order is in the nature of one made under Order XLVII of the Code of Civil Procedure is equally of no substance. The legal situation spoken of in Order XLVII is a far cry from the situation which Rule 72 of Chapter XXVI envisages. The procedure prescribed for review in Order XLVII is also radically different from the procedure enjoined in Rule 72.

13. The Assistant Taxing Officer, as also the learned Judge have relied on a rule of practice, which we were told, is being followed by the Taxing Office since 1917 pursuant to the directions of Chitty and Chaudhury JJ. The practice/direction is said to be as follows:

"Note by the Regr. (Mr. Hechle as Taxing Officer on 14-5-1917) I suggest that the profession should be informed that in future if applications which can be made in Chambers are made in Court the Taxing Office will in the absence of a certificate, tax the costs of the application as of a Chamber application.

"I see no particular objection to the Registrar in writing to the Incorporated Law Society to remind them of what are properly Chamber matters but I think the attorneys ought to learn the Rules for themselves. I do not allow them to evade responsibility or to plead ignorance of the Rules with regard to paragraph 2 of the note (I felt that I must take it that the Court considered that the application in question was proper for disposal in court) I think that counsel should not be allowed on taxation unless there has been a special certificate to that effect. This should apply to matters which have by inadvertence been dealt with in Court though they were really Chamber matters. It is the duty of the Counsel and Attorneys to see that the application is made in the proper place."

Chaudhury J.

"I do not think it is any use to write to the incorporated Law Society. Chamber application, if made in Court, should be taxed as Chamber application unless otherwise directed by the Court. The mere fact that they are disposed of in Court sometimes, does not affect the question of taxation. I do not usually certify for Counsel in Chamber Applications.

17-5-17"

"The Taxing Office will please note and act accordingly.

14. We asked for production of the original notes but were told that they were not available. The notes are capable of meaning that an application by chamber summons, if made in Court, should be taxed as chamber application. There is no unequivocal direction given by either of the learned Judges, and certainly not by Chaudhury J., that in the absence of any specific direction by Court, the costs of a motion should be taxed as of a chamber application, if the Taxing Officer is of opinion that the application should have been made not by a notice of motion but by a chamber summons. The application was made before A. N. Sen, J. by a notice of motion. No objection was raised from any quarters either before or during the hearing. The learned Judge, by his order dated 8th August, 1966, directed that each party do bear and pay its own costs, of and incidental to the application to be, if necessary, taxed by the Taxing Officer. The order recites that the application was made by a Notice of Motion. Assuming that the application should have been properly made by chamber summons, the application must be deemed to have been treated as a motion by Sen J. In that context, we must hold that Sen, J. by necessary intendment, directed that the bill of costs should be taxed as of a motion. No appeal was preferred from the order. With utmost respect, we are unable to subscribe to the proposition that the Assistant Taxing Officer, the Registrar or for that matter the learned Judge who heard the application for review under Order, Rule 72 of Ch. XXXVI of the Original Side Rules had any power or jurisdiction to direct taxation of the bill of costs in derogation of the order of Sen, J. No Rule of practice, if any such Rule exists, can invest a Taxing Officer with jurisdiction to revise by implication an order of a learned Judge of this Court.

15. An order of G. K. Mitter J. made in Hanumatmull Boid v. Federation Bank of India in Suit No. 2020 of 1947 was relied upon in support of the order of the Assistant Taxing Master. We closely looked into the judgment and order of G. K. Mitter J. and found, as did counsel on either side, that the judgment and order have no relevance to the facts of this case.

16. In these circumstances, the appeal succeeds. In future, Taxing Officers are directed to tax bills of costs according to the tenor of the Court's order. It is not for them to decide whether an application which is made by a notice of motion should have been made by chamber summons and vice versa. Their clear duty is to implement the Court's order and nothing more.

Appeal allowed.

Monmohan Mukherjee and Manick Chandra Banerjee, for Appellants; C. Tandon and Mrs. Gian Kaur, for Respondent.

S. K. BHATTACHARYYA, J.:— This appeal by the tenant defendant is directed against the judgment and decree passed by the Judge, 10th Bench, City Civil Court, Calcutta decreeing the plaintiff-respondent's suit for ejectment of the defendant-appellant. The respondent sued the appellant for eviction from premises No. 53, Mahatma Gandhi Road, Calcutta-9 on the ground of default in the matter of payment of rent as also for subletting a portion of the premises without the prior consent of the landlord, after service of a notice to quit. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant had failed or neglected to comply with the said notice served on him on September 26, 1966 and accordingly the suit was instituted on March 28, 1967. In the said suit the defendant entered appearance on May 17, 1967 and filed his written statement disputing the default and denying the alleged subletting. On May 23, 1967 the defendant filed an application under Sec. 17 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') for permission to deposit rent for the month of April and May 1967 and also for subsequent months. On the said permission being granted, the defendant deposited the rent for those months in court. On May 24, 1967 the defendant filed another application under Sec. 17 (2) of the Act raising a dispute as to the amount of rent in arrears and further contended that he had already over-paid a certain sum to the plaintiff. The plaintiff duly filed his objection against the defendant's application under Section 17 (2) of the Act on June 13, 1967 and simultaneously the plaintiff filed another application under Sec. 17 (3) of the Act for striking out the defence against delivery of possession. On September 25, 1967 the defendant filed an application under the provisions of the West Bengal Ordinance VI of 1967 inter alia praying that if the court finds any amount payable by the defendant as arrears of rent, the defendant prayed for payment of the said sum by instalments. To this application the plaintiff also filed his objection on January 27, 1968. On July 13, 1968 the defendant filed an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act for condonation of delay in filing the application under Section 17 (2) of the Act and an objection thereto was filed by the plaintiff on August 19, 1968. On September 6, 1968 the court below heard the application under Section 17 (2) of the said Act read with Section 5 of the Limitation Act and after hearing the learned Advocates of the parties rejected the application on the ground that Section 5 was not attracted to the facts of the instant case and besides the defendant had not been able to satisfactorily explain the delay in filing the application. On the same date, the court passed an order under Section 17 (3) of the Act striking out the defence of the defendant against ejectment and thereafter the suit was heard and decreed ex parte on February 11, 1969. Against this decision the defendant preferred the instant appeal.

2. Mr. Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing for the appellants in this appeal, has contended before us that the learned Judge was in error in rejecting the defence application under Section 17 (2) on the ground that it was barred by limitation. His contention was that the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act should have been made applicable by the learned trial Judge and in the circumstances explained on behalf of his client, delay of two days in preferring the application under Section 17 (2) of the Act, should have been condoned. In the next place, Mr. Mukherjee contended that assuming that the tenant was a defaulter in the matter of payment of rent, he not having obtained any such relief in respect of the premises on an earlier occasion, is entitled to the benefit of the proviso to sub-section (4) of Section 17 of the Act and the decree passed in the instant suit cannot, therefore, be sustained. Lastly, Mr. Mukherjee challenged the notice of ejectment which according to him did not specify anything about the termination of the tenancy of the defendant.

3. Mr. Tandon appearing for the respondent in this appeal joined issue on all the three points canvassed by Mr. Mukherjee before us and took us through the relevant materials on record. Mr. Tandon contends that even assuming that Section 5 of the Limitation Act is applicable to an application under Section 17 (2) of the Act, the tenant defendant would not be entitled to any relief inasmuch as his initial application for making deposit under Section 17 (1) of the Act was also barred by limitation and the subsequent deposit of rent for the month of April 1968 made by him on 18-5-1968 was also beyond time. Consequently, the tenant defendant was not entitled to claim the benefit of the proviso to sub-section (4) of Section 17 of the Act.

4. Coming now to the question of notice, it has to be pointed out that a composite notice of ejectment and of suit was issued on the defendant on September 21, 1966 and the same was received by defendant on September 26. The notice has been marked Ext. 1. This notice after reciting that the defendant was a monthly tenant under the plaintiff in respect of premises No. 53 Mahatma Gandhi Road at a certain rental, stated that the defendant was a defaulter in the matter of payment of rent since April 1964 and he had also sublet a portion of the premises without the previous consent in writing of the landlord. In para 4 of the said notice it was stated that the defendant should deliver quiet, peaceful and vacant possession to his landlord of the demised premises excluding the ground floor shop room on the expiry of the last day of October, 1966 and for non-compliance of the said notice a suit for ejectment would be filed against the defendant for recovery of possession. This notice, in our view, cannot be regarded as invalid or insufficient and it clearly requires the defendant to make over possession on the expiry of the last day of the particular month of the tenancy. The notice as such cannot be regarded as insufficient and invalid and the objection of Mr. Mukherjee on this score cannot, therefore, be accepted.

5. It was admitted by Mr. Mukherjee that the application under Sec. 17 (2) was filed two days beyond time but in view of the materials on record he contended that it had been improperly rejected by the learned Judge. The writ of summons in the instant case was served on the defendant on April 22, 1967 and the defendant entered appearance on May 17, 1967. Thereafter he filed two applications, one under Section 17 (1) and another under Section 17 (2) of the Act, respectively on 23rd and 24th May, 1967. Both the applications, it would appear, were barred by time inasmuch as Section 17 (1) contemplates that on a suit or proceeding being instituted by the landlord, the tenant shall subject to the provisions of sub-section (1) within one month of the service of writ of summons on him deposit in court an amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was last paid. Since the writ of summons was admittedly served on April 22, 1967, one month would expire on the corresponding day in the following month, which was a Monday. As the Court was open on that day both the applications under Sections 17 (1) and 17 (2) would thus appear to be beyond time. In fact the defendant filed an application for condonation of two days' delay in respect of his application under Section 17 (2) of the Act long afterwards, but no such prayer was made in so far as the application under Section 17 (1) was concerned. Section 17 (2) of the Act provides that where there is a dispute as to the amount of rent payable by the time fixed, the tenant shall within the time specified in sub-section (1), deposit in court the amount admitted by him to be due from him together with an application for determination of the rent payable. In the instant case the defendant no doubt raises a dispute, but at the time of hearing of the said application, it was admitted on behalf of the tenant defendant that he was in arrears to the tune of Rs. 4315.35 P. (Vide order No. 34/37 dated 6-9-1968). This amount was accepted by the learned Advocates of both the parties as representing the arrears of rent at the rate of Rs. 203.50P. per month calculated upto March 1968 after adjustment of all payments, including payments towards Corporation taxes. Thus the admitted position was that the defendant was in arrears to the tune of Rs. 4315.35 P. and this sum had not been deposited by the defendant within time. Mr. Mukherjee contends that since his application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act read with Section 17 (2) of the Act was pending, he did not have an opportunity of making the deposit before the court and that at any rate, he was entitled to protection under the proviso to sub-section (4) of Section 17. When the application under Section 17 (2) of the Act came up for hearing before the learned Judge, he rejected the application on two grounds. In the first place he held that Section 5 did not apply to a case like this and in the second place he found that no adequate reason for delay in filing the application beyond time had been made out. Mr. Mukherjee assailed the decision of the learned Judge on both the grounds. In so far as the first ground is concerned, he has relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mangu Ram v. Delhi Municipality (AIR 1976 SC 105). That case arose out of an appeal filed under Section 417 of the Code of Criminal Procedure against an order of acquittal and the Supreme Court therein held that the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 would be available to the appellant. It was held therein that unless any special or local law expressly excluded the applicability of Section 5, it would be available for extension of the period in view of the departure made in the Limitation Act, 1963 in so far as provisions contained in Section 29, sub-section (2) were concerned. In another case before the Supreme Court, the words 'sufficient cause' in Section 5 of the Limitation Act it was pointed out, should receive a liberal interpretation (State of West Bengal v. Administrator, Howrah Municipality (1972-2 SCJ 42) = (AIR 1972 SC 749). In M/s. Gurudayal v. Sagarmal Bengani (76 Cal WN 486) = (AIR 1972 Cal 430), a Division Bench of this court had laid down that the provisions of the Limitation Act of 1908 attracts the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 to the appropriate provisions of the Premises Tenancy Act including Section 17-B (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. The Division Bench pointed out that the intention of the Legislature had always been that Section 5 of the Limitation Act could be availed of in suitable cases. In view of the above authorities, it must be held that the learned Judge was not correct in coming to the conclusion that the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 did not apply to a case like this and we hold that this provision would be available to the tenant defendant in an application under Section 17 (2) of the Act in suitable cases.

6. The question as to whether the delay in the instant case has been satisfactorily explained, is a matter on which we do not find any reason to differ from the learned Judge of the court below, even if the expression "sufficient cause" is liberally interpreted in this case. Mr. Mukherjee sought to contend that the tenant defendant was an old and ailing man, having had several heart attacks and his case should therefore, have been viewed with a little more compassion by the learned Judge. It, however, appears from the record that in spite of his illness, the tenant defendant was not precluded from filing his defence on the date on which he appeared before the court and also in making an application under Section 17 (1) of the Act earlier to the application under Section 17 (2). In spite of his alleged illness, it appears from the verification of the application under Section 17 (2) of the Act that he attended his Advocate's chamber at 6, Madan Street, Calcutta on May 24, 1967 and again on September 25, 1967 at the City Court premises for signing the verification in connection with the application filed under Ordinance VI of 1967. It has not been satisfactorily explained and it does not also stand to reason why the tenant in the circumstances could not file the application within time and we see no reason to differ from the finding of the learned trial Judge that in spite of his illness, he was not precluded from filing the application under Section 17 (1) of the Act and his defence several days earlier. The tenant defendant, in our view, has not been able to make out a satisfactory ground for condonation of delay in the instant case and the application in the circumstances must be held to have been rightly rejected.

7. Mr. Mukherjee's next contention is that not having obtained relief on any previous occasion in respect of the above premises, his default, if any, was to be condoned under the proviso to sub-section (4) of Sec. 17 of the Act and in support of this contention he relied upon the Special Bench decisions in the cases of S. K. Mukherjee v. N. Ram Puria (77 Cal WN 30) = (AIR 1972 Cal 524 (SB)) and Jamuna Prosad Chaurashia v. K. L. Poddar (77 Cal WN 278) = (AIR 1973 Cal 204). In the first cited case the proviso to Section 17 (4) came under challenge as unreasonable and unconstitutional and the Special Bench held that the provisions of Act IV of 1968 or Act XXX of 1969 by which the proviso to sub-section (4) of Section 17 was amended, could not be considered as unreasonable or unconstitutional. In the last cited case the Special Bench in interpreting the amended proviso to Section 17 (4), no doubt held that the tenant will have to go only if he, having already obtained the relief against eviction provided under sub-section (4) of Section 17, has again committed a default in the payment of rent for four months within a period of twelve months. In the instant case we are not called upon to enter into that aspect of the matter, inasmuch as, the tenant defendant has patently failed to comply with the requirements of sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 17, and as such, he was not entitled to any protection under sub-section (4) of Section 17 of the Act.

8. This apart, the application by the defendant under the provisions of Ordinance VI of 1967 came to be filed before the court on September 25, 1967, that is long after the time stipulated in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of Section 17 of the Act. Mr. Mukherjee contends that the Ordinance VI of 1967 came to be promulgated on August 26, 1967 and he has filed the application within one month from the date of such promulgation. According to Mr. Mukherjee an application for extension of time as contemplated in Section 17 (2B) of the Act could only be made after the Ordinance amending Section 17 came into force and it would be unreasonable to expect any one to make an application for extension of time within the period stipulated in Sec. 17 (2B). Sub-section (2B) provides for the making an application for extension of time for deposit of payment of any amount under sub-section (2A) (a) or for making an application for the grant of instalments under sub-section (2A) (b) and no such application shall be entertained unless it was made before the expiry of the time specified therefor either in sub-section (1) or (2) or sub-section (1) as the case may be. It is evident from the above provisions that the applications for extension of time or for the grant of instalments, as the case may be, must be made within the period stipulated in sub-section (1) or (2) of Section 17 no matter at what point of time the Ordinance may have come into existence. Undoubtedly it operates harshly with regard to a particular class of defaulters, but we do not think we can stretch the language to give relief to any particular category of tenants. The identical point came up for consideration before a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Parekh Bros. v. Kartick Chandra Saha (AIR 1968 Cal 532). In that case, a verbal prayer was made before the court for extension of time specified in sub-section (1) or (2) of Section 17 of the Act as amended by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967. The Division Bench held that the application for extension of time for making the deposit or payment of any amount has to be made before the expiry of the time specified therefor in sub-section (1) or (2) of Section 17 and since there was no such application for extension of time, the appellant was not entitled to any extension for this purpose. It was pointed out by the Division Bench that the Ordinance has been framed in such a manner that very few tenants would derive any benefit from it, but it was not for their Lordships to speculate about the reasons as to why the Ordinance was drafted in that manner. Almost a similar view was taken by another Division Bench in the case of M/s. K. Gurudaya v. Sagarmal (AIR 1972 Cal 430) (supra). In that case the Division Bench was considering the applicability of the provisions of Section 17B of the Act originally introduced as Section 17C by the West Bengal Ordinance VI of 1967. The Division Bench after discussing the different Ordinances and Acts promulgated or enacted in this connection and after reciting the history of legislation of that particular section, held that an application under Section 17-B (1) could be made only from August 26, 1967. No other date had any relevance to the applicability of that section. The result of this interpretation may have led to an impossible situation, but it was not for the court but for the legislature to intervene and set the matter right.

9. The provisions of Ordinance VI of 1967 which was published in the Gazette (Extraordinary) on August 26, 1967, introduced material amendments in Section 17 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. By Section 2 of that Ordinance, after sub-section (2) of Section 17 two other sub-sections; being (2-A) and (2B), were introduced and the proviso to sub-section (4) was substituted. The introduction of the other sub-sections is not relevant for our purpose. Sub-section (2-B) provided that no application for extension of time for the deposit or payment of any amount under clause (a) to sub-section (2-A) shall be entertained unless it was made before the expiry of the time specified therefor in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) and no application for the grant of instalment under clause (b) of sub-section (2-A) shall be entertained unless it is made before the expiry of the time specified in sub-section (1).

10. It will be evident from a reading of this section that three classes or categories of cases could be contemplated to be in existence at the date when the Ordinance came into force, namely on August 26, 1967. In the first class would come those cases, where application for extension of time for making deposit or payment in terms of sub-sec. (2-A) (a) or grant of instalments in terms (2-A) (b) is yet to run out within the meaning of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) as the case may be. In the second class would come those cases where the time for making application for extension of time or grant of instalments under the above clauses of sub-section (2-A) had actually run out within the meaning of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) as the case may be and the third category of cases would be those where the defence against delivery of possession had already been struck off.

11. In so far as the first and third categories of cases are concerned, no difficulty arises; for the tenants of the first category would be entitled to make an application for extension of time or grant of instalments under sub-section (2B) and in so far as the third category is concerned, they would be entitled to proceed or apply under Sec. 17-B (1) as introduced by Section 4 of the Ordinance. In so far as the second category of cases is concerned, it appears to us that they would be left without any remedy and the instant case unfortunately falls within the second category. It is exactly such a case that was in contemplation of the Division Bench that decided Parekh Bros. v. Kartick Chandra (AIR 1968 Cal 532) (Supra) and their Lordships pointed out that it was not for them to speculate about the reasons why the Ordinance was drafted in that manner. Unfortunately for Mr. Mukherjee the instant case falls within the second class. Benefits available under the proviso to sub-section (4) of Section 17 would only be available to a tenant, if he conforms to the requirements of sub-section (4). Since the tenant in the instant case did not comply with the requirement of sub-section (4) benefits under the proviso is not available to him. For the reasons discussed above by us, we are unable to accept the contention raised by Mr. Mukherjee that he is entitled to relief under the proviso to sub-section (4) of Section 17 in view of the promulgation of Ordinance VI of 1967 on August 26, 1967.

12. In the result, therefore, this appeal fails and the appellants are not entitled to any relief. The appeal is accordingly dismissed. The judgment and decree of the court below are affirmed but the decree shall not be executed till the 31st of October, 1976 provided the appellants continue to deposit an amount equivalent to the rate of rent month by month by the 15th of each succeeding month according to English Calendar in the court below, the first of such deposits is to be made by the 15th of May, 1976. The rent for the month of October, 1976, is, however, to be deposited by the 31st of October, 1976. In default of any of these deposits the decree will become executable at once. There will be no order as to costs in this appeal.

13. No order is necessary on the application filed under Section 17 as amended by Act XXX of 1969 which was filed by the appellants in this Court on 24-3-1976.

JANAH, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 158

SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND G. N. RAY, JJ.

State of West Bengal, Appellant v. Smt. Jyotsna Bhowmik and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 954 of 1972, D/- 8-2-1977.

(A) Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act (1976), Section 40 — Scope — Amendment to Article 227 is prospective — Cases pending in High Court on 1-2-1977 not affected.

There being no express provision making the amendment to Article 227 retrospective and there being no provision whereby it can be held that by implication the provisions of Section 40 have been made retrospective, the amendment to Article 227 is not retrospective and will not affect the proceedings pending in the High Court on 1st February 1977 when the amendment was brought into effect. The right to move the High Court against orders of Tribunals under Article 227 is a substantive right and can only be taken away by express provision of the new statute or by a clear intention to vary such rights.

(B) W. B. Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), Section 44 (2a) — Entry in record of rights — Revision by Revenue Officer — Held, proceedings under Section 44 (2a) were invalid.

Certain lands were settled under a deed and the names of beneficiaries were entered in the record of rights. Subsequently the Revenue Officer started suo motu proceedings and struck off the names of beneficiaries on the ground that they were not in actual possession of the lands and the deed was not acted upon on the basis of bargadars' evidence that they delivered the settlor's share of crops to the manager of the settlor.

Held that mere fact of delivery of settlor's share of crops to his manager was no proof that the lands were not in possession of settlers under the deed and that the materials on record did not indicate a prima facie case for initiating proceedings under Sec. 44 (2a). P. K. Sen Gupta and S. N. Dutta, for Appellant; Sk. Tabarak Ali, for Respondents.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule is directed against an appellate order passed by the Tribunal under Section 44 (3) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act whereby the order of the learned R. O. under Section 44 (2a) of the said Act of Jadavpur C Camp 3 in Case No. 3 of 1970 was set aside.

2. The facts in brief are as follows:—

On 6-8-1970, the Revenue Officer concerned started a suo motu proceeding under Section 44 (2a) giving rise to Case No. III of 1970. It was stated in the order initiating the proceeding that whereas it had been brought to his notice that the finally published khatian No. 147 of Mouza Debipur-gurguria P. S. Joynagar had not been properly recorded, he directed the Peshkar to put up the relevant papers for his examination on 10-8-1970. On the said date the Revenue Officer recorded as follows:—

Thereafter notices were issued and at the hearing some bargadars in respect of the lands were examined. It was held by the Revenue Officer that a total area of 64.92 acres of land was recorded in the name of Bankim Chandra Bhowmick at a rental of Rs. 168-6-0. During the R. S. operation in respect of the said khatian 12 as 16 gds. share was recorded in the name of (1) Jyotsna Bhowmick, (2) Bijali Bhowmick, (3) Sabyasachi Bhowmick and (4) Chandan Bhowmick each with 3as 4 gds share and the remaining 3as 4gds share were recorded in the name of Bankim Chandra Bhowmick. It was further found that the above 12as 16 gandas were recorded in the names of the said persons who were the two wives of the two sons of Bankim and two of his grandsons. According to the opposite party Deba Prosad Bhowmick, son of Bankim, appeared and stated that his father was the owner of the above lands who executed a registered deed of settlement on 16-10-1952 and by that deed out of the total lands, about 52 acres were given to the two wives of his two sons and his two grandsons and the remaining 3as 4gds share continued to remain with Bankim. Bankim died on 12th April, 1953 before the date of vesting and as a result of vesting this remaining 3 annas 4 gandas were recorded in the name of his sons. The Revenue Officer examined the deed of settlement and found that the intention for the execution of the deed was not properly described therein and in order to evade payment of agricultural income-tax he might have purported to create this settlement in favour of the family members. The Revenue Officer further recorded that there was evidence on record to prove that the settlor Bankim was in possession of the land till his death which according to him, happened only a few years ago. On the evidence of the bargadars who deposed at the hearing, it was found that all the receipts given to them were in the name of Deba Prosad Bhowmick and others and only from 1375 BS. the names of Jyotsna and others were noted as ‘malik’. The Revenue Officer was of opinion that the beneficiaries under the deed of settlement were not in possession of the land otherwise their names would have been disclosed in the receipts and from the very recitals the deed of settlement appear to be a sham transaction being motivated. Further no satisfactory evidence was adduced to prove the genuineness of the deed of settlement which was found not to have been acted upon. Accordingly by the order dated 29-9-1970 he corrected the record of rights holding the deed of settlement to be a void document and directed that the khatian was to be recorded in favour of the four sons of Bankim each with 4 annas share. The names of the beneficiaries under the deed of settlement were directed to be struck off from khatian No. 147 and the Khanda khatian No. 415 in the name of Jyotsna was treated as cancelled and also was directed to be in ija Khatian of 147. There were further consequential orders recording that as the sons of Bankim were found to possess lands in excess of the ceiling and they did not exercise their right to retain the lands in B Form, the lands were directed to be vested.

3-4. An appeal was taken by Jyotsna and others to the Tribunal and the said Tribunal by its order dated the 16th September, 1971 allowed the appeal holding that the finding of the R. O. A. S. O. that the lands were inherited by the sons of Bankim overlooking the registered deed of settlement was beyond the scope of an enquiry under Section 44 (2a). The appeal, as already stated, was allowed on contest and the decision of the R. O. A. S. O. was set aside. The State has moved against this appellate order under Article 227 of the Constitution on which the present Rule has been issued.

5. During the pendency of the Rule in this Court, there has been far-reaching changes in law by way of amendment to the Constitution. By the Constitution (Forty Second Amendment) Act, 1976 which received the assent of the President on 18-12-1976 there has been substantial amendments to Article 227 of the Constitution. The amendments brought out by Section 40 are as follows:—

40. In Article 227 of the Constitution.—

(a) for clause (1), the following clause shall be substituted, namely:—

“(1) Every High Court shall have superintendence over all courts subject to its appellate jurisdiction.”;

(b) after clause (4), the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

(5) Nothing, in this article shall be construed as giving to a High Court any jurisdiction to question any judgment of any inferior court which is not otherwise subject to appeal or revision.”

A question arose in course of hearing as to whether the amendment is prospective or has to be considered as having a retrospective effect so as affect pending proceedings. Mr. P. K. Sen Gupta, learned Government Pleader submitted that the amendment brought to Article 227 of the Constitution under Section 40 is prospective in absence of any express provision or clear intention to indicate that it is to be deemed as retrospective. It has been laid down in Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edition, page 220 as follows:—

“In general, when the substantive law is altered during the pendency of an action, the rights of the parties are decided according to the law as it existed when the action was begun, unless the new statute shows a clear intention to vary such rights.”

Section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 also preserves the previous operation of any enactment so repealed as also a right accrued thereunder unless a different intention appears in the new enactment repealing earlier provisions. We may mention here as has been pointed out by Mr. Sen Gupta that there has been substantial changes in respect of Article 226 also under Section 38 of the said Act. These changes have been made retrospective as will appear from the provisions of Section 58 (1) of the Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976 Section 58 provides as follows:

Section 58— (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Constitution, every petition made under Article 226 of the Constitution before the appointed day and pending before any High Court immediately before that day (such petition being referred to in this section as a pending petition) and any interim order (whether by way of injunction or stay or in any other manner) made on, or in any proceedings relating to, such petition before that day shall be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of Article 226 as substituted by Section 38.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1) every pending petition before a High Court which would not have been admitted by the High Court under the provisions of Article 226 as substituted by Section 38 if such petition had been made after the appointed day, shall abate and any interim order (whether by way of injunction or stay or in any other manner) made on, or in any proceedings relating to, such petition shall stand vacated.....”

It may also be remembered that when any retrospective effect was intended to be given to any provisions of the Constitution, the Constitution Amendment Acts expressly provided for such retroactive operation. Reference may be made to Articles 19 (2) and 31-A (1) for purpose of illustration as also to other statutes. There is no express provision making the amendment to Article 227 retrospective and we do not find any provision whereby it can be held that by implication the provisions of the section of the said Articles have been made retrospective. In this view of the matter, we are of the opinion that the amendment to Article 227 are not retrospective and will not affect the proceedings pending in this Court on 1st February, 1977 when the amendment was brought into effect. The right to move the High Court against orders of Tribunals under Article 227 is a substantive right and can only be taken away by express provision of the new statute or by a clear intention to vary such rights which is not the case here.

6. We shall now consider the case on merits. It appears from a perusal of the order sheet of the Revenue Officer that on examination of the connected papers and records he was satisfied that there was a prima facie case for starting a suo motu proceeding under Section 44 (2a). The records of the case were produced before us and as far as we can see therefrom there were no materials on record to indicate that there was a prima facie case for starting a formal proceeding. We therefore do not find that there was any ground for satisfaction of the Revenue Officer to initiate proceedings under Section 44 (2a).

7. It will be seen that the evidence of the bargadars influenced the decision of the Revenue Officer to a great extent, The bargadars stated that they delivered the landlord's share of crop to the Manager of Bankim Chandra Bhowmick. That has led the Revenue Officer to conclude that there was no actual possession taken of the lands by the beneficiaries and the deed of settlement was not acted upon. The mere fact that the landlord's share of crops was being received by the Manager does not by itself indicate that the lands were not in possession of the land settlees under the deed. We may refer in this connection to the decision in Kanakarathanammal v. V. S. Loganatha Mudaliar reported in AIR 1965 SC 271 in which the Court observed that the rent was paid by the tenant and accepted by the appellant's father. It was held that would be consistent with what ordinarily happens in such matters in an undivided Hindu family. If the property belongs to the wife and the husband manages the property on her behalf, it would be idle to contend that the management by the husband of the properties is inconsistent with the title of this wife to the said properties. The court further observed that what has been said about the management of the properties would be equally true about the actual possession of the properties, because even if the wife was the owner of the properties, possession may continue with the husband as a matter of convenience. We are accordingly of opinion that the bargadars' evidence is not sufficient for holding that the properties were in possession of the original settlor or his heirs and that the document was not acted upon. It may further be noted that the deed of settlement was of October 16, 1952 long before the date even provided under Section 5-A and it could not be said that the settlement was a sham transaction to defeat the provisions of the Act without sufficient evidence.

8. It will further be seen that the Revenue Officer was of the view that Bankim retained possession of the land for years till his death only a few years ago. The judgment of the Revenue Officer is of 1970 and as we have already seen, it is now the admitted position that Bankim died on 12th April, 1953. The learned Revenue Officer therefore was under the impression that Bankim was alive long after the settlement till few years before the passing of the order and that he was in possession thereof during the period which had thus no factual basis. For all these reasons we are unable to sustain the order of the Revenue Officer. The Rule accordingly fails and is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND H. N. SEN, JJ.

Sm. Rukmini Debi, Petitioner v. Sm. Mihir Bala Sarkar, Opposite Party.

C. R. No. 70 of 1973, D/- 5-1-1977.

Evidence Act (1872), Section 115 — Estoppel — Principles — Representation by a party as to existence of facts or positions in law — Jurisdiction is not conferred upon Court — Determination of jurisdiction is to be made by Court on materials before it — ((i) Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9 — (ii) West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), Section 24).

(a) Estoppel arises when a party by act and conduct makes a representation to the other party of certain state of facts which is acted upon by such party to his detriment.

(b) Estoppel may even be available when there is a representation by one party in regard to a position in law which is accepted and acted upon by the other to his detriment.

(c) When however the jurisdiction of a Court or tribunal by statute is dependent on the existence of a certain state of facts or position in law a representation by one party to the other about the existence of a certain state of facts or position in law by themselves will not confer jurisdiction on the Court or the tribunal to adjudicate upon the controversy involved.

(d) The Court or the tribunal in such circumstances will have to determine on materials before it whether it has the jurisdiction to determine the controversy and there can be no estoppel on Court or tribunal by conduct or act of parties. In course of such adjudication, the parties will be required to produce evidence relevant to the question of jurisdiction whereon the Court or tribunal will decide if it has the jurisdiction to adjudicate the matters in controversy. AIR 1959 SC 135; AIR 1931 All 490 (FB); AIR 1925 PC 83; AIR 1924 Cal 600; AIR 1930 Cal 32; AIR 1959 Andh Pra 9 and AIR 1968 Andh Pra 336, Ref. (Para 13)

In the case of an application under Section 24 of the West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949, a party is not barred by the doctrine of estoppel to produce before the Court, relevant evidence which may have a bearing on the question of its jurisdiction on the application for pre-emption. The Court can entertain and decide the application under Section 24 of the Act only if the tenancy is a non-agricultural one which as a jurisdictional fact will have to be decided on evidence to be adduced by the parties and no estoppel accordingly arises on such question of jurisdiction which has been created by the statute.

Mr. Manindra Nath Ghosh, Mr. Mrinal Kanti Das, for Petitioner; Mr. Sakti Nath Mukherjee, Mr. Samaresh Banerjee, for Opposite Party.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.— This Rule is directed against the appellate order of the District Judge, Bankura dated November 27, 1972 in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 7 of 1972 affirming the order of the Subordinate Judge, Bankura dated January 15, 1972 in J. Misc. Case No. 14 of 1970, allowing an application for pre-emption under Section 24 of the West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949 (hereinafter referred to as the Act).

2. The disputed land measuring 12 acres of land is the northern half of R. S. Dag No. 203/1431 recorded in R. S. Khatian No. 1206 as Bastu. This plot was part of the big plot No. 203 under Khatian No. 533 in Cadastral Survey. This big plot measuring 1.21 acres was held by three brothers—Gopinath, Lakshmi and Ambika under landlord Gobinda Chandra Das whose interest was recorded in C. S. Khatian No. 529 as Madhya Sattadhikari Chirasthayi Mokarari under the Burdwan Raj as Ghatwali tenure. Gobinda was the benamdar of Jogendra whose sons Rash Behari and Bepin Behari sold their interest in Khatian No. 529 and the under Khatians to Nagendra. Ambika and Gopinath's successor-in-interest Karali sold their 2/3rd raiyati interest in C. S. Dag No. 203 to said Nagendra by a kobala of November 5, 1937 Lakshmi out of about .41 decimals or 1 bigha 4 cottahs 5 ch. of land in his 1/3rd share, sold 4 cottahs 13 ch. of land to Nagendra by kobala dated January 17, 1938, giving up about 4 cottahs of land for road. The balance of about 15 cottahs 9 ch. of land was held by him in raiyati interest at the proportionate rent of Rs. 1-2-4 gd under Nagendra, who, as we have seen, had already purchased the landlord's interest. By a registered pattah dated January 18, 1938, in consideration of a selami of Rs. 90/- Nagendra on receipt of a kabuliyat in similar terms gave permanent raiyati mokarari right to Lakshmi in respect of his raiyati interest aforesaid for agricultural purposes.

3. By a lease dated January 17, 1938 Nagendra out of his khas land of plot 203 settled 7 cottahs 3 ch. 6 gd equivalent to .12 decimals of land to Banewar Pal for the purpose of building structures. The deed recited that after acquisition of landlord's interest and thereafter of 2/3rd of tenant's share, Nagendra on amicable partition with Lakshmi had been in khas possession of his portion of land a portion whereof was leased out as aforesaid. This deed was signed by both Nagendra and Banewar and carried a jama of 15 annas, Banewar in his turn by a kobala dated February 28, 1939 sold to Mihirbala and Bibhabati his leasehold mokarari interest in 12 decimals of land of Dag No. 203 under the said jama with full rights to build and construct buildings, well, privy thereon for residence or letting out. Mihir Bala erected her house on the southern portion of the land under the lease which was incorrectly recorded only in her name as 'korfa' and under Section 48G (1) (2) B. T. Act and Rule 4 E. A. Rules raiyati Dakhalsatta to remain under the State. Bibhabati in Title Suit No. 230 of 1967 obtained a declaration of her moiety share in the said land and thereafter on February 1, 1969 sold to Sm. Rukmini, the petitioner before us, for a consideration of Rs. 10,200/- the northern half of the aforesaid plot which it was recited in the document as being in her exclusive possession by demarcation bounded by a compound wall, after their joint purchase obviously from Banewar, the proportionate rent for the land sold being 47-P payable to J. L. R. O. Bankura. It was not mentioned in the document that Mihirbala was a co-sharer in respect of the land held under the said jama and no notice of the sale was served on her.

4. Mihir Bala filed an application for pre-emption of the land sold under Sec. 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955 before the Revenue Officer, Bankura registered as Case No. 3 of 1969-70. The application was opposed by the petitioner contending that the land was within Bankura municipality and was not a raiyati holding but non-agricultural land governed by Non-agricultural Tenancy Act and not by Land Reforms Act. By order dated January 21, 1970 Revenue Officer held on merits that the land in dispute was non-agricultural land and accordingly the petition for pre-emption under the Land Reforms Act was rejected.

5. Mihir Bala thereafter filed on February 16, 1970 an application under Section 24 of the Act for pre-emption of the disputed land on deposit of the consideration money with 5% compensation in court. It was stated that in view of the dismissal of her application under Section 8 of the Land Reforms Act pursuant to the objection taken by the pre-emptee she was entitled to pre-emption of the land as a co-sharer of the non-agricultural tenancy of which the disputed land formed a part. A point was also raised that the price in the kobala was unreal being inflated, the real price being Rs. 7,000/-. This application was registered as J. Mis. Case No. 14/70.

6. The petitioner Rukmini opposed the application by filing a written objection contending, inter alia, that the tenancy of Nagendra and Lakshmi was raiyati sthitiban as recorded and Banerwar acquired no other right than 'korfa' under the Bengal Tenancy Act as recorded in respect of the tenancy. The record-of-right correctly described the tenancy as being raiyati and accordingly Non-agricultural Tenancy Act had no application. The parties were no longer co-sharers after vesting and the disputed land was in the separate tenancy of Bibhabati. It was denied that the consideration was inflated while the amount was in fact paid before the Registrar and improvements for over Rs. 2000/- were made in the disputed land. The petition, it was submitted, was accordingly liable to be rejected.

7. By order dated January 15, 1972 the learned Subordinate Judge held that the jama of Rs. 4.50 was not apportioned at any time and there was a merger of two interests in the hands of Nagendra in so far the demarcated area in his khas possession is concerned. Further as admitted by Lakshmi in Ext. 2 (a), there was a partition between him and Nagendra and the original jama of Rs. 4-8-0 ceased to exist. The lease in favour of Banerwar was for non-agricultural purpose and as such Banerwar was a non-agricultural tenant and the land held by him under his lease from Nagendra was non-agricultural land as defined in Section 2 (4) of the Act. Accordingly the provisions of the Act were applicable to the land under the lease. The allegation that the consideration of the sale was inflated was not pressed. The application for pre-emption was accordingly allowed.

8. On appeal the learned District Judge held that in fact there occurred a merger of the portion of the tenancy purchased by Nagendra which became a separate holding after upgrading the status of Lakshmi the remaining tenant to superior interest. There was an amicable partition by metes and bounds of the tenants two-third share acquired by Nagendra and the remaining interest of Lakshmi and the jama was apportioned and thereafter Lakshmi's interest was upgraded. This amounted to a surrender of the raiyati interest in the holding and the original occupancy raiyati holding with jama of Rs. 4/8/- ceased to exist. The ruling in Nirshi Dhobin v. Sudhir Kumar Mukherjee AIR 1969 SC 864 did not stand in the way in the circumstances. It was also held that the tenancy under the lease to Banerwar was a non-agricultural one for residential purpose which did not vest in the state and did not deprive Mihir Bala of her status as a co-sharer with Bibhabati in respect of the tenancy. The learned Judge further held that the doctrine of estoppel preventing the petitioner from contending that the land was agricultural land had no application as the case was decided on merits in the earlier proceeding. The appeal was accordingly dismissed and this rule, as already stated, is against the decision.

9. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee learned Advocate for the opposite party stated that the position taken by the petitioner in the earlier proceeding was that the land in question formed a part of the non-agricultural holding and as such the application under Section 8 of the Land Reforms Act was not maintainable in law. The Petitioner cannot be permitted to take a different and inconsistent position in a subsequent proceeding contending that the holding was and continued to be a raiyati holding. He referred to the decision in Dwijendra Narayan v. Joges Chandra, AIR 1924 Cal 600 wherein it was observed "that an estoppel is not confined to the judgment but extends to all facts involved in it as necessary steps or ground work: in other words, a judgment operates by way of estoppel as regards all the findings which are essential to sustain the judgment, though not as regards findings which did not form the basis of the decision or were in conflict therewith." In Hemanta Kumar v. Prasanna Kumar, AIR 1980 Cal 32 the Court observed that a party cannot be permitted to assume inconsistent positions in Court, to play fast and loose, to blow hot and cold, to approbate and reprobate to the detriment of his opponents and this principle applies when the second suit grows out of the judgment of the first. The principle that when one who without mistake induced by the opposite party, has taken a particular position deliberately in the course of litigation must act consistently with it was approved in Amritlal v. Alla Annapurnammer AIR 1959 Andh Pra 9, as also in Official Receiver Kurnool v. Vale Pedda AIR 1968 Andh Pra 336.

10. Mr. Manindra Nath Ghosh learned Advocate appearing for the petitioner submitted on the other hand that in the earlier proceeding, the Revenue Officer found on merits upon materials on record that the application under Section 8 of the Land Reforms Act was not maintainable as the holding involved was a non-agricultural land. Further, though there may be an estoppel against a party there can be no estoppel on Court or Tribunal to determine a controversy particularly when it involves jurisdiction of the Court or tribunal to adjudicate the matter before it, as a Court or Tribunal can have no jurisdiction by consent or on estoppel when the statute confers none. He referred to the decision Surajmull Nagoremull v. Triton Insurance Co. Ltd., 52 Ind App 126 = AIR 1925 PC 83 wherein it was laid down:

"No court can enforce as valid, that which competent enactments have declared shall not be valid, nor is obedience to such enactment a thing from which a Court can be dispensed by the consent of parties, or by a failure to plead or argue the point at the outset."

11. The Supreme Court in Sales Tax Officer, Benaras v. Kanhaiya Lal AIR 1959 SC 135 observed—

"Estoppel arises only when the plaintiff by his acts and conduct makes a representation to the defendant of a certain state of facts which is acted upon by the defendant to his detriment; it is only then that the plaintiff is estopped from setting up a different state of facts."

The Court further observed that this position can be availed of where the representation is in regard to a position in law, and even so the Court will refuse to award relief to the plaintiff if it is inequitable for the Court to do so.

12. In Mahabir Singh v. Narain Tewari AIR 1931 All 490 (FB) it was observed by Sulaiman, Ag. C. J. that the principle of estoppel cannot be allowed to defeat the provisions of a statutory enactment which affects the jurisdiction of a Court, as a party cannot by its admission or previous conduct confer jurisdiction on a Court where none exists.

13. On a review of the decisions cited above it appears that

(a) Estoppel arises when a party by act and conduct makes a representation to the other party of certain state of facts which is acted upon by such party to his detriment.

(b) Estoppel may even be available when there is a representation by one party in regard to a position in law which is accepted and acted upon by the other to his detriment.

(c) When however the jurisdiction of a Court or tribunal by statute is dependent on the existence of a certain state of facts or position in law a representation by one party to the other about the existence of a certain state of facts or position in law by themselves will not confer jurisdiction on the Court or the tribunal to adjudicate upon the controversy involved.

(d) The Court or the tribunal in such circumstances will have to determine on materials before it whether it has the jurisdiction to determine the controversy and there can be no estoppel on Court or tribunal by conduct or act of parties. In course of such adjudication the parties will be required to produce evidence relevant to the question of jurisdiction whereon the Court or tribunal will decide if it has the jurisdiction to adjudicate the matters in controversy.

14. In the context of the aforesaid propositions it cannot be said that the petitioner is barred by the doctrine of estoppel to produce before the Court, as in the instant case, relevant evidence which may have a bearing on the question of its jurisdiction on the application for pre-emption. In the instant case, the Court can entertain and decide the application under Section 24 of the Act only if the tenancy is a non-agricultural one which as a jurisdictional fact will have to be decided on evidence to be adduced by the parties and no estoppel accordingly arises on such question of jurisdiction which has been created by the statute.

15. Coming now to the question of merits, it appears that the superior interest which Nagendra held under the Burdwan Raj was a ghatwali tenure which was a service tenure. There is no legal bar to the creation of a non-agricultural tenancy under such service tenure as the definition in Section 2 (k) of the Estates Acquisition Act clearly indicates. Undoubtedly the jama under the landlord's interest, since acquired by Nagendra, was recorded as rayati shritiban and the said jama bore a rent of Rs. 4.50. Nagendra acquired 2/3rd of this interest as also further area out of the remaining 1/3rd share. Even so as he did not acquire the interest in its entirety there could not be merger of the rayati interest with landlord's interest. The pattah by Nagendra to Lakshmi Ext. 3 recited that on acquisition of 2/3rd interest Nagendra was in khas possession of his share in demarcated area while Lakshmi was in possession of his demarcated share. After surrender of about 4 cottahs of land for the road and sale of about 4 cottahs and 13 chattaks of land to Nagendra both out of share, Lakshmi was in possession of the balance area of 15 cottahs at a jama of Rs. 1-3-4 in raiyati right under Nagendra. By the pattah Lakshmi was granted permanent mokarari right in respect of the said jama with full rights to make pucca constructions therein and also compound walls, well privy for residence or otherwise. The schedule of the land therein clearly described the boundary indicating that the said land was in possession of Lakshmi in raiyati jama which was upgraded to mokarari right. Accordingly the original raiyati jama, on sale of about 4 cottahs of land to Nagendra on January 17, 1938 and gift of another 4 cottahs both by Lakshmi ceased to exist and in place thereof Lakshmi was holding his balance 15 cottah of land under separate jama upgraded to mokarari right as aforesaid. Out of the land of the said dag in his khas possession, Nagendra by lease dated January 17, 1938 Ext. 4 settled in permanent right with Banerwar 12 decimals of demarcated land for non-agricultural purpose, namely, for building residential house at a jama of fifteen annas whereby a non-agricultural tenancy in respect thereof was created. This leasehold interest was subsequently sold to Mihirbala and Bibhabati each of them held undivided moiety share. The jama continued to be in existence when the impugned sale of her undivided half share was sold to the petitioner though it was recited in the document of the petitioner that Mihirbala was in possession of the southern half and Bibhabati in possession of the northern half. Such amicable possession without partition and division of the jama did not affect their respective status as cosharers. Accordingly Mihirbala, as cosharer, was entitled to pre-empt the share of her other cosharer under Section 24 of the Act. The courts below were accordingly acted rightly in allowing the application for pre-emption.

16. The Rule in the circumstances fails and is discharged. There will, however, be no order for costs in the circumstances.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J., SABYASACHI MUKHARJI AND SALIL KUMAR DATTA, JJ.

Sen-Raleigh Ltd. Applicant v. Employees' State Insurance Corporation and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 458 of 1973, D/- 9-11-1976.

Employees' State Insurance Act (1948), Section 2 (9) (as amended by Act 44 of 1966) — Employer's special contribution — Liability — Head office at Calcutta — Factory at Assansol — Ch. V-A coming into force in 1951 — Demand for employer's special contribution from 28-1-1968 to 30-6-1968 is justified.

Where the head office and the factory are situate at different places the employees in the head office who are engaged in any type of work specified in Section 2 (9) of the Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948, as it now stands, are "employees" within the meaning of the Act. Even where the head office is at Calcutta where the provisions of the Act are applicable and the factory is at Assansol the employees in head office will be "employees" within the meaning of Section 2 (9) of the Act. Ch. V-A came into operation in the whole of India except Jammu and Kashmir on the 24th November, 1951. It ceased to have effect on the 1st July, 1973. Consequently demand by Employees' State Insurance Corporation from 28-1-1968 to 30-6-1968 is justified inasmuch as it is entitled to demand employer's special contribution till at least upto 30-6-1973. P. P. Ginwalla with Arijit Chowdhury and Jatin Ghose, for Applicant; Arun Dutt (Sr.) with Dipak Basu, for Respondents.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:— In our judgment delivered today in Matter No. 175 of 1973 (Cal) (India Jute Co. Ltd. v. The Regional Director, West Bengal Region Employees' State Insurance Corporation) we have held that where the head office and the factory are situate at different places the employees in the head office who are engaged in any type of work specified in Section 2 (9) of the Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948, as it now stands, are 'employees' within the meaning of the Act. In this case it has been urged before us that the head office of Sen-Raleigh Ltd., is in Middleton Row in Calcutta but the factory is in Asansol. The Act applies to Calcutta but not to Asansol. In the circumstances, the employees in the head office who are engaged in any type of work mentioned in Section 2 (9) of the Act would not be employees within the meaning of the Act.

2. On behalf of the respondents our attention has been drawn to various notifications issued in the Gazette of India from time to time on the applicability of this Act. On the 1st September, 1948, Chapters I, III and VIII of the Act came into force in all the Provinces in India. The Gazette publication was made on the 31st August, 1948. As we have pointed out in our aforesaid judgment sub-section (3) of Section 1 in Chapter I of the Act provides that the Act shall come into force on such date or dates as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, appoint, and different dates may be appointed for different provisions of this Act and 'for different States or different parts thereof' (the words within quotations were substituted by Act 53 of 1951, Section 2, for "for different States").

3. It is pursuant to the above provision that the Gazette Notification of 31 August, 1948, was published. The charging sub-section is sub-section (4) of Section 1 in Chapter I. It prescribes that that the Act shall apply, in the first instance, to all factories (including factories belonging to the Government) other than seasonal factories.

4. This shows that on the 1st September, 1948, Chapters I, II, III and VIII of the Act became applicable to all factories throughout India irrespective of location. The headings of these Chapters respectively are (a) preliminary, (b) corporation, Standing Committee, and Medical Benefit Council (c) Finance and Audit and (d) Miscellaneous. Sections 44 and 45 (Employers to furnish returns etc; Inspectors their functions and duties) were brought into force in all part 'A' states with effect from the 1st April, 1950.

5. On the 24th November, 1955, Chapter VA became applicable to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. This Chapter provides for 'Transitory Provisions'. During the transitory period every principal employer had to pay to the Corporation a special contribution subject to the other provisions in the Chapter.

6. On 14 August, 1955, Chapter IV (except Sections 44 and 45), Chapter V and Chapter VI (except Sections 76 (1), 77, 78, 79 and 81 of the Act came into operation with respect, inter alia, to the Calcutta Municipal areas. These Chapters deal respectively with (a) contributions, (b) benefits and (c) adjudication of dispute and claims. The marginal notes of Sections 44, 45, 76, 77, 78, 79 and 81 are respectively as follows:—

1. Employers to furnish returns and maintain registers in certain cases.
2. Inspectors, their functions and duties.
3. Institution of proceedings.
4. Commencement of proceedings.
5. Powers of Employees Insurance Court.
6. Appearance by legal practitioners and
7. Reference to High Court.

7. In 1966, Section 2 (9) was amended, as we have seen, by Act 44 of 1966, which came into force on 28 January, 1966. By this amendment an exhaustive definition was prescribed for the word "employee".

8. After the amendment came into force on the 29th May, 1968, the Regional Director, Calcutta, wrote to Messrs. Sen-Raleigh and Co. Ltd., Kannyapur, Post Office Asansol, Burdwan, inter alia, as follows:—

"That as per definition of the term 'employee' laid down in Section 2 (9) of the E. S. I. (Amendment) Act, 1966 the employees of your head office situated at Mercantile Building, Calcutta-1, are also now covered within the meaning of Section 2 (9) of the Act with effect from 28th January 1968 i. e., the date from which the amendment came into force. You are requested to please confirm that necessary action with regard to registration of your head office employees and deduction/payment of contribution in respect of them have been taken up by you." (Vide pages 16 and 17 of the Paper Book).

9. It appears, therefore, that Chapter IV and Chapter V of the Act became applicable to the head office of Sen-Raleigh Ltd. on the 14th August, 1955; but the State Insurance Corporation did not make any demands till the amended definition of 'employee' came into force. In other words, after the definition was amended the provisions relating to 'contributions' and 'benefits' except as hereinbefore stated, became applicable to the employees of Sen-Raleigh Ltd. working in its head office in Calcutta who were covered by the amended definition in Section 2 (9).

10. On the 3rd September, 1968, the Regional Director, Calcutta, again wrote to Sen-Raleigh and Co. Ltd. as follows:—

"It has been reported by this office Insurance Inspector who visited the Head Office of your factory that the following amount has been paid to the Head Office Staff for the period from 28th January 1968 to 30th June 1968 but no Employers' Special Contribution on the same has been paid.

Period.	Total Wages Bill,	ESE due,
28-1-68 to 31-3-68	Rs. 47,323.39	Rs. 355.30
1-4-68 to 30-6-69	Rs. 67,044.10	Rs. 503.00
	TOTAL	Rs. 858.30

Employers' Special Contribution as shown above may please be paid immediately." (vide pages 18 and 19 of the Paper Book.)

11. In this letter the Regional Director has demanded "Employers' Special Contribution" from 28 January, 1968 to 30 June, 1968. "Employers' Special Contribution" has been provided for in Section 73-A in Chapter VA of the Act which deals with "Transitory Provisions". Section 73-A is in these terms:

"73A. (1) For so long as the provisions of this Chapter are in force, every principal employer shall, notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, pay to the Corporation a special contribution (hereinafter referred to as the Employers' Special Contribution) at the rates specified under sub-section (3).

(2) The Employers' Special Contribution shall, in the case of a factory or establishment situate in any area in which the provisions of both Chapters IV and V are in force, be in lieu of the Employers' contribution payable under Chapter IV.

(3) The Employers' Special Contribution shall consist of such percentage, not exceeding 5% of the total wage bill of the employer, as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify from time to time.

Provided that before fixing or varying any such percentage the Central Government shall give by like notification not less than two months' notice of its intention so to do and shall in such notification specify the percentage which it proposes to fix or, as the case may be, the extent to which the percentage already fixed is to be varied.

Provided further that the Employers' Special Contribution in the case of factories or establishments situate in any area in which the provisions of both Chapters IV and V are in force shall be fixed at a rate higher than that in the case of factories or establishments situate in any area in which the provisions of the said Chapters are not in force.

(4) The Employers' Special Contribution shall fall due as soon as the liability of the employer to pay wages accrues, but may be paid to the Corporation at such intervals within such time and in such manner as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify, and any such notification may provide for the grant of a rebate for prompt payment of such contribution.

Explanation.— "Total Wage Bill" in this section means the total wages which have accrued due to employees in a factory or establishment in respect of such wage periods as may be specified for the purposes of this section by the Central Government by notification in the Official Gazette."

12. We have seen that Chapter VA came into operation in the whole of India except Jammu and Kashmir on the 24th November, 1951. It ceased to have effect, we have been told, on the 1st July, 1973.

13. In the instant case, the Employees' State Insurance Corporation by the Regional Director's letter of the 3rd September, 1968, demanded Employers' Special Contribution from 28 January, 1968 to 30 June, 1968. We do not think that this demand is unjustified inasmuch as on the facts stated above the Regional Director is entitled to demand the Employers' Special Contribution upto 30 June, 1973.

14. In the writ petition Sen-Raleigh Ltd., has challenged, the notice dated the 29th May, 1968 at pages 16 to 17 of the Paper Book. We have quoted above the relevant portions of this notice. It seems to us that this is a valid notice in view of the amended definition of Section 2 (9) and the various notifications referred to above which brought into operation different Chapters of the Act in different areas in India.

15. The result is that this application is dismissed. All interim orders, if any, are vacated. There will be no order as to costs.

(B) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 13 (1) (ff) — Suit for possession on ground of reasonable requirement of landlord for own use and occupation — Plaintiff already living in tenanted premises which he alleged to be insufficient, uninhabitable and inconvenient — Plaintiff if entitled to relief.

Held that the contention of the defendant that it was open to the plaintiff to take steps for effecting proper repairs to the tenanted premises and her inaction cannot be a ground for the defendant's eviction cannot be accepted, as possession of a reasonable accommodation of the landlord must be with reference to the state in which the accommodation of such landlord is at the material time. Simply because that some remedies were available to the plaintiff for remedying the inconveniences it cannot be said that the plaintiff ought to have availed of those remedies before she can approach the Court for appropriate relief.

Clause (ff) of Section 13 (1) provides for reasonable requirement of the landlord and there is no prohibition in the said sub-section against any further addition or alteration or renovation to the premises after the landlord obtains possession of such premises. There is thus no bar in law for the plaintiff making a case of own use and occupation of the premises with the further case that he on obtaining such possession will make further additions and alterations or even renovation to make it suitable for his own use and occupation. Accordingly, even though the accommodation in the suit premises is less than what the plaintiff had been enjoying in her tenanted premises such fact should not be an impediment on the way of plaintiff's getting a decree for her own use and occupation when she has established the requisite conditions for such relief.

R. N. Mitra, S. P. Sen and P. N. Bhattacharya, for Appellant; C. N. Mukherjee and Gopalchandra Mukherjee, for Respondent.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This appeal is from the judgment and decree of the learned Judge, 8th Bench, City Civil Court, Calcutta dated January 27, 1969 in a suit for recovery of possession of the suit premises. The plaintiff is the owner of premises No. 9-B, Mathura Sen Garden Lane P. S. Jorabagan, Calcutta which she purchased on October 12, 1966. The said premises had been in occupation of the defendant as a monthly tenant at a rental of Rs. 25/- payable according to the Bengali Calendar month. The plaintiff's case was that she with her family had been residing in a small house at 87-A, B. K. Pal Avenue, Calcutta as a tenant with three rooms in her possession. The said premises were insufficient for the accommodation of herself and her family consisting of her husband, eldest son, his wife, second son, a daughter, husband's sister and two employees of the business of the plaintiff's husband and her son. The plaintiff, it was stated required the said premises for her use and occupation and she intended to raise a second storey and to completely renovate the existing structure and she had means to effect such renovation and construction. It was further stated that the plaintiff and her family were living in extreme inconvenience and discomfort on account of the insufficiency of accommodation in the said premises. Further the landlords were asking the plaintiff to vacate the premises. The tenancy of the defendant was determined by a notice to quit expiring with the month of Falgun, 1373 B. S. The said notice was duly served but as the defendant did not vacate the premises the suit was instituted on May 17, 1967 for recovery of possession thereof by eviction of the defendant therefrom on the ground of her reasonable requirement.

2. The suit was contested by the defendant who filed a written statement denying the material allegations in the plaint. It was further stated that the accommodation the plaintiff had at 87 B. K. Pal Avenue was sufficient and the accommodation in the suit premises was insufficient and there was no scope for erection of second storey on the premises. Further the tenancy was not duly determined in accordance with law.

3. It appears that the defendant did not deposit the admitted arrears of rent within the time allowed under Section 17 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 and as a result the plaintiff's application under Section 17 (3) of the Act was allowed and the defence of the defendant against eviction was struck off. The suit was heard thereafter ex parte and by the judgment under appeal the suit was decreed on the finding that the plaintiff required the suit premises for her own use and occupation as also of her family. It was further held that the notice was valid in law and was duly served. The present appeal is against this decision.

4. It may be mentioned here that after the decree was obtained there was an amendment to the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. Section 13 (1) (f) was substituted by clauses (f) and (ff) by West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Second Amendment) Act, 1969. By the said amendment Act, sub-section (3-A) to Section 13 was inserted which provided that no suit for recovery of possession would be maintainable by the landlord on the ground of his own requirement unless three years have passed after his acquisition of the property concerned. By Section 13 of the said Act the provisions of sub-section (3A) of Section 13 of the parent Act were made applicable to pending cases. The Supreme Court in B. Banerjee v. Amita Pan, AIR 1975 SC 1146 upheld the vires of sub-section 3-A and further held that the provisions thereof applied to pending proceedings. Opportunity to the plaintiff was however afforded to amend his plaint in terms of the provisions of clause (f) or clause (ff) of Section 13 (1) and for further trial on evidence on such amended pleadings. In view of the aforesaid provisions, the plaintiff filed an application for amendment of her plaint incorporating fresh averments in consonance with the said provisions of the Act and this amendment application was allowed by this Court by order dated 2nd May, 1975. By this order also the Court confirmed the order of the trial court striking out defence of the defendant against eviction in view of his failure to comply with the first part of Section 17 (1) and accordingly the defendant was not allowed to file any additional written statement to the amended plaint. This Court by the said order framed two additional issues which are as follows:—

(1) Does the plaintiff-respondent reasonably require the suit premises for his own use and occupation?

(2) Is the plaintiff already in occupation of any reasonably suitable accommodation? The case was sent back to the trial court for recording evidence if adduced by the plaintiff and thereafter to transmit back to this Court its finding thereon together with the evidence recorded in that Court. In pursuance of this direction the plaintiff adduced evidence in support of her amended pleadings and the court found that in regard to issue No. 2 the plaintiff was not in occupation of a reasonably suitable accommodation. In regard to the first issue, the court found that the plaintiff reasonably required the premises for use and occupation of herself as also of her family and the inconveniences to which the plaintiff and her family were subjected to would be remedied if she could recover possession of the suit premises. Both the issues were decided in favour of the plaintiff. These findings are now before us for our consideration.

5. Mr. Mitra appearing for the appellant submitted that by the amendment of the plaint, the plaintiff improved her case in material particulars in her effort to bring it in conformity with clause (ff) of Section 13 (1). The case of plaintiff as being in occupation of an accommodation not fit for human habitation was made by the amendment of the plaint of which there is no whisper in the original plaint. It may be that the plaintiff by the amendment set up a case which was not made originally in that form in the plaint as it was filed but once an amendment has been allowed by this Court, it is no longer possible for us to take any exception to such amendment. The case will accordingly have to proceed on the basis of the amended plaint.

6. Now by the amendment, it was stated by the plaintiff in support of her case that she was not in possession of a reasonably suitable accommodation, that the wooden stair-case leading from the ground floor to the tenancy of the plaintiff in the first floor of of 87-A, B. K. Pal Avenue was seriously damaged and out of repair and that the plaintiff and the members of her family were using the same with risk as it was in a dilapidated condition. Further the roof could not be reached or used at all and the roof of the tenancy of first floor had become leaky and during the rains the plaintiff and her family members had to live with great difficulty and inconvenience as the accommodation became 'practically' unfit for human habitation.

7. A commissioner was appointed to survey the respective accommodation of the parties and it was found by the Commissioner that the plaintiff was in effect in occupation of four rooms. As the fourth room was a very small room measuring about 7' X 3' 6" it could not obviously be used for habitation. The Commissioner further found that the wooden stair-case was in grave dilapidated condition and the plaintiff and the members of her family suffered great difficulty and risk in using the same. The Commissioner further found that the roof was leaky and there was rain water in at least one room following rains which took place shortly before his inspection of the premises.

8. The son of the plaintiff gave evidence in the trial court after the records were sent back to that court by this Court as aforesaid. It was stated by him that the accommodation was wholly insufficient for his family members. It was stated that the family consisted of, apart from his parents, wife and brother, her married sister who was deserted by her husband. It may be mentioned here that by the amendment the plaintiff stated that her sister had all along been living with the plaintiff as her husband has deserted her. In view of the size of the plaintiff's family there can be no dispute that the accommodation of three rooms was wholly insufficient for their purpose. Out of three rooms one room was necessary for the plaintiff's husband's business and only two rooms were thus left for their accommodation. It was obvious that the plaintiff and her husband require one room, her married son with his wife require another and her daughter as also the sister's husband require another room while the son also is to be accommodated. We are, therefore, in agreement with the finding of the learned Judge that the plaintiff reasonably required the premises for occupation of herself and her family.

9. Apart from the question of requirements it will appear on evidence that the premises where the plaintiff and her family had been residing so long were uninhabitable for the risk involved as the access to such premises was highly inconvenient and risky while the roof was leaky causing additional inconvenience. Mr. Mitra has submitted that it was open to the plaintiff to take steps for effecting proper repairs to the premises and her inaction cannot be a ground for the defendant's eviction. We are unable to accept this contention as possession of a reasonable accommodation of the landlord must be with reference to the state in which the accommodation of such landlord is at the material time. Simply because that some remedies were available to the plaintiff for remedying the inconveniences it cannot be said that the plaintiff ought to have availed of those remedies before she can approach the Court for appropriate relief. We therefore, find that the plaintiff is not in possession of reasonably suitable accommodation at the tenanted premises where she has been living at the material time.

10. Mr. Mitra has next drawn our attention to the fact that the accommodation which is sought to be recovered is less in area than the plaintiff's tenanted premises. As the learned Judge has found, the defendant is in occupation of two rooms and two verandahs. The witness for the plaintiff has stated in evidence that after they obtain possession of the accommodation, the plaintiff will renovate the ground floor and construct a new storey over it for her accommodation as also of her members of the family. It was further stated that the plan had been submitted for sanction by the Corporation. It was however not sanctioned presumably on the ground, as pointed out by Mr. Mitra, that inspection of the premises was not given to the Corporation authorities. Mr. Mitra submitted that in considering a case under clause (ff) of Section 13 (1) the court has to take into consideration only the existing accommodation which would be available if a decree was passed and not to additional accommodation available after construction as it is covered by cl. (f) Mr. Mukherjee appearing for the respondent on the other hand drew our attention to the decision in Krishna Das Nandi v. Bidhan Chandra Roy 63 Cal WN 29 at p. 44 = (AIR 1959 Cal 181 at pp. 188, 189) in which the Court observed that it could not be believed that the Legislature intended to leave the landlord without a remedy and without a residence for himself and his family even though he had a premises and a reasonable requirement of it for his own occupation or residence and also the means of making it fit for his habitation. Under Clause (f) it is provided that when premises are required by the landlord for building or rebuilding then such requirement would be subject to the provisions of Sections 3-A and 18-A. In such a case under the clause (f) as amended the landlord does not require the premises for his own use and occupation but for the purpose of building and rebuilding or making thereto substantial alterations therein. Clause (ff) provides for reasonable requirement of the landlord and there is no prohibition in the said sub-section against any further addition or alteration or renovation to the premises after the landlord obtains possession of such premises. There is thus no bar in law for the plaintiff making a case of own use and occupation of the premises with the further case that he on obtaining such possession will make further additions and alterations or even renovation to make it suitable for his own use and occupation. Accordingly even though the accommodation in the suit premises is less than what the plaintiff had been enjoying in her tenanted premises we do not think that such fact should be an impediment on the way of plaintiff's getting a decree for her own use and occupation when she has established the requisite conditions for such relief. It may be further noted as observed by the trial Judge that the covered two verandahs on the two sides would also be available in the suit premises in which the plaintiff will accommodate herself and her family.

11. For all these reasons we accept the findings of the trial court on the both issues and hold that the plaintiff is not in occupation of any reasonably suitable accommodation, and that she requires the suit premises for her accommodation and also of her family. The appeal in the circumstances, fails and is dismissed. There will be no order for costs in the circumstances.

12. Mr. Mitra prays for one year's time to vacate the premises as, it is stated, he has been residing there for over 20 years. Mr. Mukherjee has submitted that if any time is given it should be before the rainy season. We think that in the circumstances of the case the defendant should be granted time till Sravan 1384 B. S. to vacate the suit premises. Accordingly the decree hereby confirmed by us will not be executable till the expiry of Sravan 1384 B. S. on the terms and conditions set out below. It is stated that the defendant is not in arrears of rent or damages. The defendant will go on paying to the landlord or deposit in the trial court to the credit of the plaintiff damages at the rate of rent month by month according to Bengali Calendar month by the 15th of the succeeding month. The first of such deposit or payment will be made of the month of Pous 1383 B. S. by the 15th of Magh 1383 B. S. Damages for the last month of Sravan 1384 B. S. shall be paid or deposited as aforesaid by the end of Sravan 1384 B. S. In default of any of the deposits aforesaid, the decree will be executable at once and in any event the decree will be executable on the expiry of Sravan 1384 B. S. The plaintiff however will be at liberty to receive from the defendant all damages or withdraw from the court all the rent or damages deposited by the defendant in respect of the suit premises without prejudice to her rights under the decree.

Appeal dismissed.

site Party.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— This re-visional application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been filed by the petitioner, Pradip Kumar Saha, alleged to be a minor represented by his natural guardian father, against an order passed by the learned Judge,
City Civil Court, Calcutta in Ejectment Suit No. 281 of 1975 refusing to allow the petitioner to be represented by his father.

2. The relevant facts in this case are simple. The plaintiff Lakshmi Narayan Dutt, a lunatic represented by his next friend and wife Parul Dutta filed the ejectment suit against the defendant on the allegation that he was the tenant in respect of the suit premises. The defendant was described as major. On several occasions processes were issued, but it appears that on one occasion the service return was to the effect that Pra-dip Kumar Saha was a minor. However, Maheswar Prasad Saha appeared in the suit representing Pradip Kumar Saha on the allegation that the said Pradip Kumar was a minor and that the said minor requires to be represented by him, his natural guardian, the father. It was objected to by the plaintiff. Certain documents were filed, but without taking any evidence the learned Judge held that the defendant was described as a major and had no locus standi to be represented by his natural guardian on the allegation that he was a minor. Moreover, it was stated that the plaintiff filed the suit at his own risk. The application filed by Maheswar Prasad for representation of the minor was rejected. Against that order the present application has been filed by the defendant represented by Maheswar Prasad Saha.

3. We have heard Mr. Ghosh, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner and Mr. Dutt on behalf of the opposite party. The contention of Mr. Ghosh is that when there was a petition filed on behalf of the defendant on the allegation that he was a minor and that when according to law his representation through guardian was essential, the Court ought to have made an enquiry into the matter and ascertained whether in fact the defendant was a minor or not.

4. Mr. Dutt, however, contended that Pradip Kumar who was described as major had no locus standi to appear as minor and in this connexion a reference was made to the case of Prabhat Kumar Chatterjee v. Latika Debi reported in 56 Cal WN 757 = (A.I.R. 1953 Cal 196).

5. Mr. Ghosh has, however, referred us to the decision in the case of Bhubaneswar Baidya v. Rabi Charan Baidya, reported in A.I.R. 1948 Cal 149, in support of his own contention. We have gone through both the cases. The case referred to by Mr. Dutt is a decision of the Division Bench of this Court. But the facts are quite different. In that case an ex parte decree was passed against the defendant described as major and subsequently an application was filed under Order 9, Rule 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure on behalf of the defendant for setting aside that ex parte decree describing himself as a minor represented by a guardian. It was held that that application was not maintainable. In that case it is clear that already a decree had been passed wherein the defendant was described as a major. In the present case, however, the defendant has been described as major, no doubt, but during the pendency of the suit he appeared describing himself as minor and wanted to be represented by his father, the natural guardian. It should be remembered that it is the duty of the court to see that a party to the suit who is minor should be properly represented and if there is any question as to whether the defendant is a minor or not, the court will certainly make an enquiry in that behalf and be satisfied about the status of the party. In the present case an application was filed alleging that the defendant was a minor and not a major, and that is why, the defendant wanted to be represented by his father, the natural guardian. The duty of the court is there and remains paramount to see that a minor is properly represented. In the present case, the learned Judge relied upon the decision of the Division Bench, we have already mentioned, but he failed to appreciate the real import of the decision and the facts stated therein. He misapplied the principles enunciated therein. On the other hand, we have gone through the decision relied on by Mr. Ghosh, a decision of Harries, C. J. of this Court, and the facts of that case are similar to those before us. The provisions of Order 32, Rule 3 were considered and it has been held that where there has been an allegation that defendant is a minor though sued as major, that question should be decided by the court and then the suit should be proceeded with. We agree with the decision in that case and we cannot say that the other case relied upon by Mr. Dutt is applicable here. We find that in the instant case there has been no proper enquiry by the learned Judge to ascertain whether or not the defendant was a minor, as alleged. The learned Judge ought to have made an enquiry after giving the parties an opportunity to adduce evidence in this respect. We are of the view that the order passed by the learned Judge complained against is quite illegal and with material irregularity, causing injustice to the parties and he refused to act in exercise of the jurisdiction vested in him by law. The order is liable to be set aside. We also find that subsequent to that order another order has been passed on the same day rejecting applications under Section 17 (2A) (b) and Section 17 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. Without being satisfied as to the status of the defendant the learned Court below ought not to have passed this order. This order is also liable to be set aside.

6. In the result, the application succeeds and the Rule is hereby made absolute. The orders indicated above are hereby set aside and the matter is sent back to the court below with a direction to the learned Judge to make an enquiry to ascertain as to whether or not the defendant was a minor at the date of institution of the suit after giving opportunity to the parties to adduce evidence according to law and after that decision he will deal with the applications under Section 17 (2A) (b) and under Section 17 (1) of the Act according to law.

7. We pass no order as to costs in this application.

Let the records be sent down as soon as possible so that the matter may be disposed of quickly.

JANAH, J.:— I agree.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 13 (1) (b) — Accommodation being sufficient a landlord cannot, by bringing in others, claim additional accommodation by evicting the tenant — Members of the family, who are.

Where the landlord sought eviction of a tenant so that he might accommodate his son-in-law and the facts showed that the son-in-law had an house and establishment in his village home and that he had parents to be looked after, the landlord's plea that the son-in-law being a member of his family required accommodation was rejected. Held that in the circumstances of the case the son-in-law could not be treated as a member of the landlord's family. A nephew whose parents died when he was quite young and was brought up by the landlord in his own house and was married was held to be a member of the family. Countering the landlord's further argument that the son-in-law was already occupying a room in the house, it was held that the accommodation for the landlord being sufficient, he could not by bringing persons who were not members of the family seek eviction of the tenant. Chandidas Roy Choudhury and Rejendra Nath Sarkar, for Appellant; Barun Kumar Roy Chowdhury, for Respondent.

* (Against decree of N. C. Dutta, Judge, First Bench, City Civil Court, Calcutta in E. S. No. 828 of 1971, D/- 27-7-1974.)

BANERJEE, J.:— This appeal at the instance of the defendant-tenant arises out of a suit for eviction by the respondent-landlord on the ground of reasonable requirement of the premises by the landlord. The admitted case of the parties is that the plaintiff has resided himself, his two wives, two sons, the plaintiff's nephew and 4 children, two of whom live in the disputed premises. Second daughter and her husband Kali Krishna Santra (Ghar Jamai) also live in the said premises. There are altogether 10 rooms, 6 in the first floor and 4 in the ground floor. Out of the 6 rooms of the first floor, 3 are bedrooms, one kitchen, one thakurghar and one kitchen-cum-store room. Out of the 4 rooms of the ground floor, 2 are bedrooms, 1 kitchen and one dining room besides a space underneath the staircase used for storing coal and fuel etc. The appellant defendant is in occupation of 1 room and 1 kitchen of the first floor of the house. The only point for consideration in this appeal is whether the decree passed by the Judge, City Civil Court, holding that the landlord requires the premises in question reasonably on the ground that the son-in-law and the daughter and the nephew are the members of the family of the plaintiff landlord is tenable.

2. Mr. Chandidas Roy Chowdhury on behalf of the appellant contended that neither the son-in-law nor the nephew can be treated as a member of the family of the plaintiff and therefore the plaintiff is not entitled to the decree. It is argued further by Mr. Roy Chowdhury that the ejectment suit being Title Suit No. 828 of 1971 was also against the brother of the appellant and the decree was passed against him. The appeal was preferred by the brother Subol Chandra Datta but the appeal has not been pressed at the hearing. Therefore it is argued that the plaintiff has already got a decree for 1 room which will be sufficient for the plaintiff's accommodation. The plaintiff, after the decree has been passed, is now in occupation of 3 rooms including kitchen and therefore his requirement should be satisfied with those 3 rooms.

3. Mr. Barun Roy Chowdhury appearing for the respondent contended that these 3 rooms will not be sufficient, inasmuch as, the son-in-law, who is Ghar Jamai, is in possession of 1 room in the ground floor and therefore it is argued that the learned Judge, City

Civil Court, is right in decreeing the suit. In our opinion, the son-in-law, in the facts and circumstances of the case, cannot be treated as a member of the family of the father-in-law. It appears that the son-in-law who was married 3 years before is now working in Calcutta. Before the marriage, he was staying in the mess. It is stated that his village home is about 70 miles from Calcutta and therefore it is inconvenient for his son-in-law to come to Calcutta in order to perform the duties here. It is further stated that the plaintiff is an illiterate person and it is necessary for the son-in-law to stay with him in the same mess to help the old father-in-law. This argument has no leg to stand upon on the facts of this case. At the present moment it appears to us that the landlord has 2 sons and a nephew who admittedly stays with the uncle from his very childhood. The son of the landlord is also educated and at the present moment is studying Bachelor of Commerce Degree. The son-in-law has a house and establishment in his village home. He has father and mother who live in village home and the son-in-law of the plaintiff looks after the father and mother. In our opinion, therefore, in the facts of the present case, the son-in-law, cannot be treated as a member of the family and therefore his accommodation cannot be treated as a reasonable requirement for his own use and occupation of the plaintiff landlord.

4. We agree with Mr. Barun Roy Chowdhury that the nephew and his wife are members of the family of the landlord. It appears that the parent of the nephew died leaving the nephew under the care of the landlord uncle and since then he was brought up by him in his own house and was married. In our opinion, the nephew is a member of the family in the facts and circumstances of the case.

5. Mr. Barun Roy Chowdhury however contended that admittedly the son-in-law is in possession of 1 room, if he is not a member of the family. But the facts remain that the prayer cannot be taken into consideration when considering the availability of accommodation of the landlord and therefore the landlord is entitled to a decree. In our opinion, this argument is fallacious. If it is found that the landlord's accommodation is sufficient but he has himself brought in persons who are not members of the family that cannot be taken to be a ground for ejection of the tenant. Mr. Roy Chowdhury referred to some decisions of the different High Courts including our High Court, namely, (1966) 70 Cal WN 967 (Mrs. E. Davidson v. A. Khatun); AIR 1968 Cal 49 (Sukumar v. Naresh Chandra) and contended that the son-in-law is a member of the family. All these decisions make it clear that on the facts of the case appearing before the Hon'ble Court it was held that a particular person is a member of the family. It has been held in paragraph 30 that the boundaries of the family depend on particular facts of each case and the structure and outlook of each family. In our opinion, in the facts and circumstances of this case, the son-in-law, cannot be treated as a member of the family of the landlord.

6. In the result, the appeal must, therefore, be allowed and the suit must stand dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

R. K. SHARMA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

(A) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Section 388, Sch. 16, Rr. 23, 30 — Premises divided and renumbered as different premises belonging to different owner — Applicability of Act and Rules.

In the Municipal Act and the Building Rules contained therein there is no such thing as a "mother premises". The unit of computation under the said Act and the rules is a holding numbered as premises. When a plan is submitted for the sanction of the construction or reconstruction of a building, in a particular premises, the building rules must be applied to the plan in connection with the said premises. There is no scope for deeming the said premises to be a part of a larger premises, which it formed in the past, but which now has been divided and renumbered as different premises and belongs to a different owner. When accordingly the back space of certain original premises cannot be said to exist after the original premises is divided into two separate parts between two brothers after partition between them and is treated as a separate premises, the ordinary rules relating to the back space of a premises will not apply to such a case. Gopal Chandra Mukherjee, for Appellants; Manindra Nath Ghosh, for Respondents.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an appeal by the defendants against the judgment and decree passed by Sri. M. Roy, Additional District Judge, 13th Court at Alipore in Title Appeal No. 1854 of 1966 dated 29th September 1967 affirming the judgment and decree dated 30th September 1964 passed by Sri N. C. Mahanty, 2nd Court Munsif, Sealdah in Title Suit No. 16 of 1963.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:— Premises No. 4/1, Jadu Mitra Lane, Calcutta, belonged to two brothers Lalit (defendant No. 1) and Pramatha. The above premises comprised an area of about 5 cottas and odd. To the adjacent of the above premises is the residential premises of the plaintiffs. Formerly there was a back space of 10 feet in respect of the joint premises of the two brothers at 4/1, Jadu Nath Mitra Lane. The joint premises was constructed in terms of the sanctioned plan of the Calcutta Corporation in 1932. Sometime in 1933 the defendant No. 1 tried to make an unauthorised pucca construction in the above back space without a sanctioned plan. This was immediately objected to by the plaintiffs and it was found by the Corporation that the defendant No. 1 constructed in accordance with the sanctioned plan. According to the plaintiffs they noticed once again attempts by the defendant No. 1 at laying a foundation of third storied building in the above back space. On enquiry the plaintiffs came to know that the defendant No. 1 in collusion with the officers of the Corporation managed to obtain previously a separate premises being No. 14/1-A, Radhakanta Jew Street out of the former premises at 4/1, Jadu Nath Mitra Lane. Premises No. 14/1, Radhakanta Jew Street was shown as a separate unit in respect of which it was alleged by the plaintiffs that the defendant No. 1 managed to obtain a sanctioned plan for the proposed third storied building in the back space of 4/1, Jadu Nath Mitra Lane. It is the case of the plaintiffs that the proposed plan was in violation of the statutory rules of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951. In such circumstances, the plaintiffs brought the suit praying for a perpetual injunction against the defendant No. 1 from constructing any structure on the basis of the said plan. The Corporation of Calcutta and the Commissioner of Calcutta Corporation were made parties. It was prayed that they be directed to cancel the said plan sanctioned by them. The plaintiffs also prayed for a mandatory injunction to demolish the structure already raised.

3. The defence was that by a partition deed of 1949 between the two brothers Lalit and Pramatha the premises at 4/1, Jadu Nath Mitra Lane was divided into two parts. The northern portion of the said premises was allotted to Lalit, the defendant No. 1, which was adjacent to the plaintiffs' premises at 16, Radha Kanta Jew Street. The southern portion was allotted to Pramatha who was not made a party in the present suit. After the partition deed was effected, the de-defendant No. 1 Lalit enjoyed the southern half of the above premises as a separate unit and mutated his name in the Calcutta Corporation. The said premises was numbered as 14/1-A, Radha Kanta Jew Street. In 1960 the defendant No. 1 obtained a sanctioned plan of a three storied building. The defendant relied upon the Corporation tax bills which showed that the other brother Pramatha enjoyed the separate premises at 4/1-A, Jadu Nath Mitra Lane. On behalf of the Corporation of Calcutta it was asserted that the plan was legally sanctioned by them and there was no violation of the rules of the Calcutta Municipal Act. The learned Munsif held that the building plan was in violation of the statutory building rules and the defendant No. 1 was not entitled to construct in terms of such plan. In that view of his finding the learned Munsif decreed the suit. Being aggrieved, the defendant No. 1 preferred an appeal. The learned appellate Court below agreed with all the findings of the trial Court and dismissed the appeal. Being aggrieved, this present appeal has been filed by the defendants.

4. On a previous occasion this appeal was heard by M. M. Dutt, J. and his Lordship after hearing the matter for sometime was of the opinion that important points of law are involved in this appeal and in that view of his finding his Lordship referred the case to the Division Bench.

5. Mr. Gopal Chandra Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant, challenges the judgment passed by the Courts below on several grounds. In the first place he submits that ordinary rules relating to the back space of a premises will not apply to the facts of the present case inasmuch as the back space of the original premises is no longer in existence as the original premises was divided into two parts—each forming a separate unit. There is nothing known in the Calcutta Municipal Act as “mother premises” and as such the back space of the original premises cannot be said to exist even after the original premises is divided into two separate parts and each is treated as a separate premises. In support of his contention Mr. Mukherjee refers to a decision reported in (1964) 68 Cal WN 1049, (Kanai Lal Paul v. Corporation of Calcutta). This case was cited by Mr. Mukherjee to show that in the Municipal Act and the Building Rules contained therein there is no such thing as a “mother premises”. In that case prior to the partition decree, the disputed premises formed a part of the larger premises Nos. 67 and 69, Simla Street, which belonged to common owners. His Lordship observed:

“If we take the whole premises as it then stood, it would form a corner premises, situated at the intersection of Simla Street and Vivekananda Road. In other words, notwithstanding partition which took place by decree passed on 4-2-1918, and notwithstanding the division of the original premises into different units by allotting different premises Nos. and notwithstanding the fact that the respondent No. 13 is the owner only of premises No. 57/3/A, Simla Street which does not abut either on Simla Street or on Vivekananda Road, it should be considered as a corner premises at the intersection of Simla Street and Vivekananda Road, because many many years ago it formed part of a larger premises which was a corner premises, facing the intersection. In my opinion, this is an absurd argument. In the Municipal Act and the Building Rules contained therein there is no such thing as a “mother premises.” The unit of computation under the said Act and the rules is a holding numbered as premises. When a plan is submitted for the sanction of the construction or reconstruction of a building, in a particular premises, the building rules must be applied to the plan in connection with the said premises. There is no scope for deeming the said premises to be a part of a larger premises, which it formed in the past, but which now has been divided and renumbered as different premises and belongs to a different owner”.

In the present case the fact that the original premises was divided into two parts and belonged to two different owners is admitted. It is also the admitted position that the plan was sanctioned in respect of the new portion which belonged to the defendant No. 1. That being so, the principles laid down in the case referred to above apply with full force to the facts of the present case.

6. In the next place Mr. Mukherjee contends that the defendant has obligation only to the Corporation and not to the plaintiffs. If the defendant makes construction in violation of the sanctioned plan then it is for the Corporation to start action against the defendant. The plaintiff cannot come to Court only for the simple reason that the plan has not been sanctioned properly by the Corporation and the defendant is making construction in violation of the plan. In support of the contention Mr. Mukherjee refers to a decision reported in AIR 1952 Cal 74, (Nandalal Ladia v. Provudayal Tikriwalla). In this case on the facts it was held that "Where the plaintiffs and the defendants are adjoining owners, the plaintiffs have no right to pray either for a mandatory injunction or a perpetual injunction merely on the ground that certain proposed construction on the defendants' land may be in breach of Municipal Rules and bye-laws. There is no obligation contractual or otherwise, on the part of the plaintiffs towards the defendants which requires that the defendant should construct on his own land in accordance with the Municipal Rules and Regulations." Mr. Mukherjee submits that in the present case also there is no contractual obligation between the plaintiffs and the defendant and as such even assuming that there was violation on the part of the defendant, the plaintiffs cannot only for that bring an action against the defendant and pray for injunction. Mr. Mukherjee also refers to another decision reported in AIR 1952 Cal 364, (Sm. Parul Bala Roy v. Srinibash Chowmal). In this case it was held "In order to entitle the plaintiff to obtain an injunction, there must be an invasion or threatened invasion of the plaintiff's right to or enjoyment of property. Simply because the enjoyment of the plaintiff is rendered less beneficial that would not entitle him to obtain an injunction unless he can show that there is a legal duty on the part of the defendant towards him and that by non-performance of that legal duty the enjoyment of his property is materially affected". Mr. Mukherjee contends that in this case it cannot be said that there was any legal duty on the part of the defendant towards the plaintiff and that as there was a breach of that duty the plaintiff can start an action praying for injunction.

7. Mr. Mukherjee puts forward another argument to the effect that even assuming that the plan was not sanctioned strictly in accordance with the Rules even then the Commissioner can under the provisions of the Act make relaxation in any particular case. It is further contended that even in respect of matters which involve violation of unrelaxable building rules, the Commissioner has discretion not to order demolition if the violation is not of serious nature. That discretion must be used bona fide stating reasons therefor. In support of this argument Mr. Mukherjee refers to a decision reported in AIR 1972 Cal 459, (Purusottam Lalji v. Ratan Lal Agarwalla) which is a Full Bench decision.

8. Mr. Mukherjee's last point is that even assuming that by proposed construction there will be some diminution of light and air as enjoyed by the plaintiff even then the plaintiff is not entitled to get an order of injunction unless the defendant's action amounts to actionable nuisance. In support of this contention Mr. Mukherjee refers to a decision reported in 41 IA 180 = (AIR 1914 PC 45), (Paul v. Robson). In this case it was laid down "The owner or occupier of a tenement in respect of which an easement of light has been acquired by prescription is entitled to a quantity of light the measure of which is what is required for the ordinary purposes of inhabitancy or business of the tenement, according to the ordinary notions of mankind. The actual user will neither increase nor diminish the right. The question, in an action for obstruction, is whether the obstruction amounts to a nuisance". It is not the case of the plaintiff that the proposed obstruction will amount to nuisance. No issue was framed in this respect in the Court below and though the number of witnesses have been examined by the plaintiff no evidence has been laid to this effect.

9. Mr. Manindra Nath Ghosh, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents relies on a decision reported in 68 Cal WN 757 = (AIR 1965 Cal 148), (Krishna Kali Mallik v. Babulal Shaw). In this case it was held "Under the Calcutta Municipal Act there is a duty to construct buildings in accordance with the terms of the statute and a duty not to construct buildings in violation of the statute. The purpose of the statute as also the terms thereof will show that building rules have been designed for the protection of rights and interests of persons who are the adjoining owners. It is indisputable that infraction of light and air or any other kind of actionable nuisance will give rise to a right of action against infringing landowner or owner of the building. We have gone through the judgment carefully and we do not find how the principle laid down in this case helps the plaintiffs rather it supports the contention advanced by Mr. Mukherjee that unless the defendant's act amounts to actionable nuisance the plaintiffs cannot start an action.

10. Mr. Ghosh refers to a decision reported in 31 Cal WN 32 = (AIR 1927 Cal 1), (Brojendra Kishore Roy Chaudhuri v. Mohim Chandra Bhattacharji) to show that if there is evidence on record the High Court in a second appeal can determine not only any issue of fact which has not been determined by the lower appellate Court but also such issue which has been wrongly determined by such Court by reason of any illegality, omission, error or defect such as referred to in sub-sec. (1) of Section 100. In this connection Mr. Ghosh also refers to decisions reported in 34 Cal WN 951 = (AIR 1931 Cal 129 (2)), (Sm. Kshirodamoyi Dasi v. Kashi Lal Seal) and AIR 1961 Cal 359, (A. E. G. Carapiet v. Derderian). We have gone through the evidence on record carefully and we do not find that the evidence is such from which a conclusion can be drawn that by the proposed construction the defendant made and the further construction which defendant may make it has amounted to or will amount to actionable nuisance so as to entitle the plaintiff to start an action and pray for injunction. For all the reasons stated above we are of the opinion that there has been no violation of the statutory rules and that the plaintiff has no cause of action.

11. In the result, the appeal succeeds. The judgment and decree passed by the Court below are set aside. The plaintiff's suit is dismissed. There will be however no order as to costs in this appeal.

B. C. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

(A) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 114 — Forfeiture — Right of sub-lessee.

If the provision of the lease itself gives right to the lessee to sub-let, the sub-lessee has right to avoid the forfeiture by payment of rent within the terms of Section 114. A lease for 21 years contained a provision of re-entry for non-payment of rent for 3 consecutive months. The head-lessee had a power to sub-let. Therefore for the purpose of the lease, the sub-lessee would have same powers during the continuance of the lease as head-lessee had. The sub-lessee thus has a power to avoid forfeiture on the ground of non-payment of rent under Section 114 and unless he is disentitled on the exercise of discretion in his favour. AIR 1914 All 411, Foll.; AIR 1953 Bom 129, Dist.

(B) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 114 — Relief against forfeiture — Appellate Court has discretion to grant relief at appellate stage. (AIR 1946 All 328 Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1969 SC 1349).

Where sub-lessees defending eviction and claiming protection under Section 114 showed their willingness to pay the arrears of rent against lessee if any, unless the trial Court finds that the lessee is in arrears for payment of rent or there is dispute about the arrears of rent the question of tendering or paying arrears by sub-lessee does not arise. In such a case when an appeal against order of eviction against sub-lessees is filed the appellate Court can relieve the sub-lessees against forfeiture by requiring them to pay the arrears as the order of ejectment by the trial Court does not take away the jurisdiction of the appellate Court to grant equitable relief. The appellate Court can exercise its discretion to grant such equitable relief. AIR 1946 All 328 held no longer good law in view of AIR 1969 SC 1349; (1904) 31 Cal 1057; ILR (1970) 1 Cal 117, Dist.

S. C. Das Gupta and Anath Nath Mondal, for Appellants; P. K. Das and Bidyut Banerjee, for Respondents.

BANERJEE, J.:— This appeal is at the instance of the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 arising out of a suit for eviction of the lessee and sub-lessee in respect of a portion of the suit premises being No. 122, Surendra Nath Banerjee Road, Calcutta, P. S. Taltolla, Calcutta, which was leased out for a term of 21 years commencing from 1st day of February, 1957 to last day of January, 1978 at a monthly rental of Rs. 80/- payable by the 15th day of the following month for which the rent became due. The plaintiff became the owner of the premises by purchase on 7th March, 1962 and the lessee tenant Probodh Chandra Dey on receiving letter of attornment paid rent to the plaintiff as per terms of lease of 21 years commencing from 1st day of February, 1957 to last day of January, 1978. Probodh Chandra Dey died intestate in or about the month of June 1969 leaving the defendants Nos. 1 to 8 as his heirs and legal representatives and they became the tenants under the plaintiff on the terms of the lease and paid rent to the plaintiff at the rate of Rs. 80/- per month till the month of February, 1970. The said defendants failed and neglected to pay rent to the plaintiff in respect of the said premises from the month of March 1970 and thereafter the plaintiff determined the lease by way of forfeiture in view of the clause in the Deed of Lease that if the rent hereby reserved or any part thereof shall remain unpaid for three consecutive months it will be lawful for the lessor to enter in the premises on determination of the lease. The plaintiff filed the suit for eviction therefrom. In the suit they made defendants Nos. 9 and 10 who are under-lessees of the other defendants whose lease has been forfeited, parties and the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 are in the occupation of a part of the premises and rent payable by them are mentioned in Schedules "B" and "C".

2. The defendants Nos. 1 to 8 did not contest the suit. Defendants Nos. 9 and 10 however filed the written statements, inter alia, stating that they are under-lessees of the other defendants and they are not bound to vacate the portion of the premises occupied by them. Defendants Nos. 9 and 10 stated that they were inducted as tenants in respect of a room only on the 3rd floor at premises No. 122, S. N. Banerjee Road, Calcutta, at a monthly rental of Rs. 55/- payable according to English Calendar month. It is further stated that on 28th February, 1970 at the time of the commencing of the tenancy, he paid a sum of Rs. 500/- in advance to the defendant No. 1 against a receipt with a term that a sum of Rupees 27-50 out of the said sum of Rs. 500/- shall be adjusted towards the rents from the month of February, 1970 and onwards. Similarly, the defendant No. 10 also paid a similar amount on the same date with a similar stipulation that a sum of Rs. 20/- shall be adjusted towards his monthly rents from the month of February, 1970 and onwards. According to the said arrangement and mode of payment of the monthly rent of the respective tenancy of the defendants Nos. 9 and 10, they went on paying and there is no arrear and if any arrear is found these defendants are ready to pay the same (Vide — Paragraph 14 of the written statements). The tenancy of these defendants is well protected under the provisions of law and even in case a decree for eviction is passed against defendants Nos. 1 to 8 the said decree is not binding and enforceable against these defendants and as such they prayed for a dismissal of the suit. On these pleadings, number of issues were framed and for the purpose of consideration of the argument at the Bar, Issue No. 4 is relevant. Issue No. 4 is as follows:— "Are the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 under-lessees under defendants Nos. 1 to 8? If so, has the lease been forfeited?" The learned Judge, City Civil Court having held against the defendants Nos. 9 and 10, appellants herein, they preferred the present appeal.

3. Mr. Das Gupta on behalf of the appellants contended, inter alia, that under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act, the defendants are entitled to protection and the appellants are agreeable to pay any amount which may be found due by the plaintiff to the defendant No. 1. It is argued by Mr. Das Gupta that under the registered indenture of lease dated 29th January, 1957 the lessee has the right to sub-let any portion of the demised premises and on the basis thereof the lessees defendants Nos. 1 to 8 had sublet the portion of the demised premises to defendants Nos. 9 and 10. It may be stated herein that the right to sub-let is to be found in the proviso to the clause which gave the right of re-entry to the lessor of the premises in case the lessee fails to pay, during the continuance of the lease, the rent reserved by the indenture for three consecutive months. It is contended by Mr. Das Gupta that the lessee has let out to the appellant a portion of the premises under the lessee's right to sub-let any portion and it is open to the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 to pay the same or tender the same in terms of Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act and thereby avoid the forfeiture in so far as the portions of the premises let out by the lessee are concerned.

4. Mr. Das on behalf of the respondent however contended, inter alia, that the case is covered by Section 115 and as soon as the right of lessee goes, all the subsequent rights created under the lease comes to an end with the determination of the original lease. The lessee cannot give more right to his sub-tenant. Mr. Das next contended that in the facts of the present case, Section 114 has no application as the essential conditions were not fulfilled. The provision, according to Mr. Das, under Section 114 is discretionary as they did not ask for relief against forfeiture before the trial Court, the appellant's contention cannot be upheld. In order to get relief under Section 114 under-lessee must pay or tender all the rents with interest and costs as stated in Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act. In the present case this was not done. In that view of the matter, it is argued by Mr. Das that the under-lessee, appellant herein, has no right to avoid the forfeiture.

5. The point for consideration is whether in the facts and circumstances of the case, the appellant has a right to avoid the forfeiture of the lease on the ground of admitted non-payment of three consecutive months' rent by the lessee.

6. Mr. Das Gupta contended that the lessee has the right under the terms of the lease to sub-let a part of the premises and in fact it was sub-let by the lessee. If the lessee has made a default in payment of rent, the sub-lessee is within his right to offer the rent in default and get the relief against forfeiture under Section 114 of Transfer of Property Act.

7. Mr. Das however contended that, that is not so. If the lease is determined, the sub-lessee cannot have any right to continue. Mr. Das further contended that under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act, the first condition is that the lessee must pay or tender the rent together with interest and costs which according to Mr. Das, the lessee did not tender at all. Mr. Das is not correct in his contention. From the judgment appealed against it is found that the appellant all along argued that under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act they are entitled to protection. Unless the Court finds that the lessee is in arrears for payment of rent or there is dispute about the arrears of rent, the Court comes to a proper finding, the question of tendering or paying does not arise in case the under-lessee who is in possession in terms of the indenture of lease can seek protection against the forfeiture under Section 114 of the T. P. Act. In view of the said offer to pay it cannot be said that at the time the defendant failed to make the offer to tender the payment. On the other hand in the judgment appealed against the plea of forfeiture was the only plea which was taken by the appellants and defendants Nos. 1 to 8 did not contest the suit and defendants Nos. 9 and 10 alone contested. The learned Judge was pleased to hold that under the law if there is a lessee and he has created an under-lease or any other legal interest then after the lease is forfeited, the under-lessee, or the person who claims under the lessee, loses his estate as well as the lessee himself. This plea however will not be available to the lessor if under the lease the lessee had the right to transfer or sublet a part or whole of the tenancy and as such if a lessee has transferred his interest in the lease it is binding on the same terms and condition on the lessee for the period of 21 years.

8. Mr. Das further contended that the case reported in (1914) 12 All LJ 1085 = 25 Ind Cas 186 = (AIR 1914 All 411), (Ahmad Hussain v. Riaz Ahmad) is not correctly decided. In our opinion, Mr. Das is not correct in his submission. We respectfully follow the reasons of the Hon'ble single Judge of the Allahabad High Court which held in 25 IC 186 = (AIR 1914 All 411), (Ahmad Hussain v. Riaz Ahmad) as follows:—

"Under the English Law, an under-lessee is entitled to claim relief from forfeiture, on the same way as the tenant (see page 545 of the same work) under the Common Law Procedure, 1852 (15 and 16 Vic., Section 76). There is no similar statutory enactment in India. Relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent used to be granted in India long before the enactment of the Transfer of Property Act. It is still granted on equitable grounds in the case of agricultural leases to which the provision of the Transfer of Property Act do not apply. I have not been able to lay my finger on any case decided in India in which an under-lessee has been given the privilege that Section 114 of Transfer of Property Act confers upon the lessee, nor am I aware of any decided case to the contrary. In England a liberal interpretation has been placed upon the term "tenant" as used in Section 4, George II, C. 28, which has been held to include an under-lessee (Moore v. Smee), (1907) 2 KB 8). In my opinion where a lessee is permitted by law to transfer mortgage, or sub-lease his rights, as in this case, the transferee of the rights must be deemed to stand in the shoes of the transferor for the purpose of making payment of the rent in arrears and costs of the suit under Section 114 of the Act. I am inclined to think that he is as much entitled to be relieved of the forfeiture as the original tenant. This is more especially so where the original tenant has transferred his entire rights to the defendant. The heirs of the original lessee are certainly entitled to pray for the relief which the lessee is entitled to and ask for relief against forfeiture under Section 114. Act IV of 1882. I see no reason for holding that the assignee of the rights of the tenant should be in a worse position. I dismiss the appeal but without costs, as the respondents have not appeared".

In our opinion, in view of the provision of the lease itself giving right to the lessee to sub-let, the sub-lessee has right to avoid the forfeiture by payment of rent within the terms of Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act.

9. Next contention of Mr. Das is that in the appellate stage, the appellant cannot apply for avoiding the forfeiture by making a payment. This contention, however, is not tenable in view of the Supreme Court Judgment reported in AIR 1969 SC 1349, (Praduman Kumar v. Virendra Goyal). In paragraph 7 of the said judgment it has been stated that "in terms Section 114 makes payment of rent at the hearing of the suit in ejectment a condition of the exercise of the Courts' jurisdiction but an appeal being a rehearing of the suit in appropriate cases it is open to the appellate Court at the hearing of the appeal to relieve the tenant in default against forfeiture. Passing of a decree in ejectment against the tenant by the Court of First Instance does not take away the jurisdiction of the appellate Court to grant equitable relief".

Mr. Das Gupta's contention is that the appellate Court has power to grant equitable relief in appropriate cases even in the appellate stage. Mr. Das however referred to a case reported in (1904) 31 Cal. 1057 as also I. L. R. (1970) 1 Cal. 117 which is equally distinguishable in the facts of the present case. It appears to us that Mr. Das is not right in his contention that the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 did not apply for relief under Section 114 of the Act. Mr. Das's contention is that even if the appellate Court has the power to grant a relief under S. 114, this power should not be exercised unless the tenant has prayed for such relief at the earliest stage of the suit. Once a decree is passed without any prayer for relief, no such relief can be granted by the Appellate Court. Mr. Das contended that the power of the appellate Court to grant relief is to be exercised if such relief is prayed for in the trial Court. Moreover this is the question of direction of the Court and in the facts of the present case Mr. Das contended that the discretion should not be exercised in favour of the appellant. In our opinion, the discretion should be exercised in favour of the sub-lessee in the facts and circumstances of the present case. In the present case it must be held that the lessor was granted a lease for 21 years. In the said lease there is a provision of re-entry for non-payment of rent for 3 consecutive months. The head-lessee has a power to sublet. Therefore for the purpose of the lease, the sub-lessee has same powers during the continuance of the lease as head-lessee had. Admittedly in this case the head-lessee has a power to avoid forfeiture on the ground of non-payment of rent under Section 114 of the Act and unless he is disentitled on the exercise of discretion in his favour. Even at the stage of the trial the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 wanted to pay as will appear from the judgment itself but they contended that they never knew that the head-lessee made a default and they paid all rents to their head-lessee. In the facts and circumstances of the present case, we are not inclined to accept Mr. Das's contention that the discretion should not be exercised in favour of the sub-lessee. Therefore the sub-lessee has power to avoid the forfeiture by making payment under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act. Mr. Das however referred to the case reported in AIR 1953 Bom 129, (Bhagwant v. Ramchandra), AIR 1946 All 328, AIR 1953 SC 228 and AIR 1969 SC 1349, (Praduman Kumar v. Virendra Goyal). In our opinion, however, in the facts of the present case, the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 are entitled to relief. In AIR 1953 Bom 129, (Bhagwant v. Ramchandra) what the Bombay High Court held is clearly distinguishable in the facts of the present case. It has been held by the Bombay High Court in paragraph 11 as follows:—

"The word 'forfeiture' used in Section 114 has a technical meaning which must be ascertained by reference to Section 111 (g) of the said Act. Forfeiture in this technical sense is incurred in case the lessee breaks an express condition which provides that on breach thereof the lessor may re-enter, and even in such a case the lessor has to give notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease. The lease between the parties in the present case is not on the record and it is impossible to say that the requirements of Section 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act have been satisfied. No plea under Section 114 was made in the Courts below and it is obviously difficult to entertain this plea for the first time in second appeal. The plea clearly raises a mixed question of fact and law which we cannot decide in the absence of adequate material on the record".

In the said case it will appear that no plea of Section 114 was taken in the Court below and the matter was dealt with in the second appeal and moreover the lease between the parties was not in the record. In the present case however the lease is exhibited and sub-lessee is a party in the proceeding and the lease provides that the lessee shall be entitled to sub-let any portion of the demised premises. In AIR 1946 All 328, (Habib Ahmad v. Keoti Kuer) it has been held that the payment or tender cannot be made in the appellate Court under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act and in view of the judgment of the Supreme Court reported in AIR 1969 SC 1349, (Praduman Kumar v. Virendra Goyal) we do not think that the Allahabad High Court's decision reported in AIR 1946 All 328, (Habib Ahmed v. Keoti Kuer) can be stated to be correctly decided.

10. The appeal is therefore allowed. The judgment and decree passed by the Court below is set aside.

11. We direct that the appellants (defendants Nos. 9 and 10) will remain in occupation of the premises till the expiry of the terms of the lease on payment of stipulated rent.

12. It is further directed that the plaintiff will be entitled to all the arrears of rents from the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 including the rents for the premises in occupation by the defendants from the date of the suit up-to-date and he will be entitled to withdraw the money already deposited during the pendency of the suit and appropriate the same towards his dues. The plaintiff will also be entitled to the interest as provided in Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act.

13. There will be no order as to cost in this appeal.

14. In view of disposal of the appeal no order is passed on the application.

R. K. SHARMA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

G. N. RAY, JJ.

Gobinda Lal Daga and another, Petitioners v. State of West Bengal and another, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 4249 of 1975, D/- 7-1-1977.

(A) Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act (30 of 1952), Sections 8 (1) (g) and 25 — Applicability — Provisions of Section 8 apply only to requisition by Central Government under Defence of India Act, 1962 — Section 25 does not apply — Provision of Arbitration Act apply. (Defence of India Act (1962), Section 29).

Provisions of Section 8 of the Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act apply to a requisition of any immovable property by the Central Government or by any officer or authority to whom powers in this behalf have been delegated under Defence of India Act, 1962 and the Rules framed thereunder. Where the requisition is made by the State Government under powers conferred under Section 29 of the Defence of India Act, 1962, the provisions of Section 25 do not apply. The Arbitration Act, therefore, applies to the proceedings. (Faras 4 and 5)

(B) Defence of India Act (1962), Sections 29 and 30 — Requisition of Property — Compensation — Determination —

BU/BU/A331/77/GGM

Provisions of Arbitration Act apply to statutory arbitration. (Defence of India (Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property) Rules, 1962, Rules 12 and 13).

Considering the provisions of Sections 29 and 30 of the Defence of India Act, 1962 and Defence of India (Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property) Rules, provisions of the Arbitration Act are applicable to the statutory arbitrations contemplated under the Defence of India Act, 1962 except in respect possibly of the reasons forming the basis of the award. Accordingly an application filed by the party under Section 14 (2) of the Arbitration Act appears to be otherwise maintainable in law. AIR 1964 All 185; AIR 1969 Cal 286 and C. R. A. C. Bhabra, J. Pugalka, for Petitioners; S. N. Bakshi, for Opposite Parties.

S. K. DATTA, J.:— The petitioners are the owners of premises No. 902 Barackpore Trunk Road, 24-Parganas. A part of the said premises was requisitioned under Section 29 (2) of the Defence of India Act, 1962 (Act 51 of 1962) on 30th September, 1965 for setting up a fire station at Kamarhati for Civil Defence purpose. The possession of the premises requisitioned, it appears, was taken on October 6, 1965. The petitioners submitted their claim for rent compensation at the rate of Rs. 2,500/- per month and electric charges at the rate of Rs. 175/- per month. The Additional Collector (North) Barasat, 24-Paraganas on June 10, 1968 fixed rent compensation at the rate of Rs. 227/- per month for the period from 1st of March 1968 to 28th February, 1969. The premises was derequisitioned on July 10, 1968 on the expiry of the Defence of India Act and, it is said, it was requisitioned again under the West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947 according to the petitioners. The petitioners were not satisfied with the determination of the rent compensation made by the Additional Collector as aforesaid and they prayed for a reference to arbitration under the provision of the Defence of India Act. The State of West Bengal accordingly by order dated 27th August, 1973 appointed Mr. S. Ahmed, Additional District and Sessions Judge, 24-Parganas as an Arbitrator for determination of compensation payable for such requisition of the property, that is, the requisition for the period from 6th October, 1965 to 9th July, 1968. As Mr. Ahmed was transferred, the State Government by subsequent order dated June 27, 1974 appointed in his place Mr. L. K. Pal, Additional District and Sessions Judge, 24-Parganas as an Arbitrator for such determination. The award was, it appears, made by the Arbitrator on 13th September, 1974 and same rate of compensation was awarded as rent compensation for the aforesaid period. According to the petitioners, no notice of appointment of Mr. Pal as an Arbitrator was served on the petitioners nor they were given any notice of the proceeding before him. On enquiry through their advocate the petitioners came to know on March 14, 1975 about the award that was passed ex parte as stated above. On April 2, 1975 the petitioners requested the Arbitrator to file his award in Court under the provision of S. 14 (2) of the Arbitration Act, 1940. On his failure to do so, the petitioners on April 16, 1975 filed an application before the District Judge at Alipore giving rise to Misc. Case No 75 of 1975 for a direction on the Arbitrator to file the award in Court. This application came up for hearing before the District Judge and by his order dated August 16, 1975 the application was dismissed as not maintainable. The learned Judge held that in view of the provisions of Section 25 of the Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act, 1952 (Act XXX of 1952) which was inserted by an amendment Act 31 of 1968, the provisions of the Arbitration Act did not apply to proceeding before the Arbitrator. Accordingly, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain, consider or dispose of such application. The petitioner have obtained this Rule against the aforesaid order.

2. Mr. Bhabra, learned advocate appearing for the petitioners, submitted that the learned Judge committed an error in the exercise of jurisdiction in thinking, in any event, that the provisions of Act 30 of 1952, as amended, were applicable to the facts of the case. Section 25 provides as follows:—

"25. Special provision as to certain requisitions under Act 51 of 1962— (1)

Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, any immovable property requisitioned by the Central Government or by any officer or authority to whom powers in this behalf have been delegated by that Government under the Defence of India Act, 1962, and the rules made thereunder (including any immovable property deemed to have been requisitioned under the said Act) which has not been released from such requisition before the 10th January, 1968, shall, as from the date, be deemed to have been requisitioned by the competent authority under the provisions of this Act for the purpose for which such property was held immediately before the said date and all the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly...."

3. If Act XXX of 1952 as amended applied to the arbitration in the instant case at least for a part of the period of requisition, in view of the provisions of Section 8 (1) (g) thereof, nothing in the Arbitration Act, 1940 would apply to arbitration under challenge before us. The learned Judge held that the application before him was not maintainable as the Act XXX of 1952 applied to the requisition in question.

4. The provisions of this section it is to be noted, apply to a requisition of any immovable property by the Central Government or by any officer or authority to whom powers in this behalf have been delegated by the Government under the Defence of India Act, 1962 and the Rules framed thereunder. In the instant case, the requisition was made by the State Government under powers conferred by Section 29 of the Defence of India Act, 1962. That the requisition was made by the State Government will be evident from the preamble of the orders dated August 27, 1973 and June 27, 1974 which we have referred to above. The preambles are as follows:

"(i) Government of West Bengal Land Utilisation and Reforms and Land and Land Revenue Department Requisition (L. I.) Branch.

ORDER.

No. 16348-Reqn. (D. I)/2A-12/72, dated the 27th August, 1973.

Whereas the property specified in the Schedule below as requisitioned by the State Government under Section 29 of the Defence of India Act, 1962 (Act 51 of 1962).

(ii) ORDER.

No. 11304-Reqn. (D. I)/2A-12/72, dated Calcutta the 27th June, 1974.

Whereas the property specified in the schedule below was requisitioned by the State Government under Section 29 of the Defence of India Act, 1962 (Act 51 of 1962)."

5. In view of this requisition, the provision of Section 25 of Act 30 of 1952 have no application and this aspect of the controversy escaped the attention of the learned Judge.

6. We shall now consider the other contention raised on behalf of the petitioners about the applicability of the provisions of the Arbitration Act to the instant arbitration. It will appear from Section 45 of the Arbitration Act that the provisions of the said Act shall be binding on the Government which obviously include both the Central Government and the State Government as provided in Section 3 (23) of the General Clauses Act, 1897. Section 46 of the Arbitration Act is to the following effect:

"46. The provisions of this Act except sub-section (1) of Section 6 and Sections 7, 12 and 37, shall apply to every arbitration under any other enactment for the time being in force, as if the arbitration were pursuant to an arbitration agreement and as if that other enactment were an arbitration agreement, except in so far as this Act is inconsistent with that other enactment or with any rules made thereunder."

7. It is therefore, obvious that when there is no prohibition in other statutes wherein there is a provision for arbitration as regards applicability of the provisions of the Arbitration Act, such provision would be applicable to arbitrations under the other statutes unless they are inconsistent with the other enactments or with any rules made thereunder. Section 19, clause (g) of the Defence of India Act, 1939 provides that nothing in any law for the time being in force shall apply to arbitrations under this section. Clause (g) is worded in the following manner.

"Save as provided in this section and in any rules made thereunder, nothing in any law for the time being in force shall apply to arbitrations under this section."

8. Again, in the Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act, 1952 (Act 30 of 1952), it is provided in Section 8 (1), Clause (g) as follows:—

"Nothing in the Arbitration Act, 1940 (Act X of 1940) shall apply to arbitrations under this section."

9. It will further be found that under the provision of Section 19 (1) (f) of the Defence of India Act, 1939, there is a provision for an appeal to the High Court against an award of an arbitrator except in cases where the amount thereof does not exceed an amount prescribed in this behalf by rule made by the Central Government. Section 11 of Act 30 of 1952 provides for an appeal from the award of an arbitrator to the High Court within whose jurisdiction the requisitioned or acquired property is situate.

10. It will thus be seen that the application of the provision of the Arbitration Act was expressly excluded by the provisions cited above and, accordingly, in cases of an award passed under those Acts, it is not possible for any aggrieved party to avail himself of the provision of the Arbitration Act.

11. We do not find any similar provision or prohibition in the Defence of India Act, 1962. The relevant sections are Sections 29 and 30. Section 29 provides for requisitioning of immovable property by the Central Government or the State Government. Section 30 provides for payment of rent compensation in respect of the requisition of any immovable property and such amount shall be determined by taking into consideration the factors mentioned in that section. It is further provided that if anybody is aggrieved by the amount of compensation so determined, he may apply to the appropriate Government for referring the matter to an Arbitrator for determining the amount of compensation in respect of such requisition. There is no other provision providing for any appeal against the award as may be passed by the Arbitrator appointed in that behalf. There is also no provision excluding operation of the provision of the Arbitration Act in respect of such arbitration proceeding.

12. Mr. Bakshi, learned advocate appearing on behalf of the State, submitted that the Defence of India Act, 1962 and the Rules framed thereunder constitute a complete Code and, accordingly, there is no scope for application of any provision of the Arbitration Act to such proceeding. He drew our attention to the Rules framed under Section 38 of the Defence of India Act which lays down that the Central Government or the State Government may make rules for carrying out the purposes of this chapter, the chapter being Chapter VI — requisitioning and acquisition of immovable property and it further provides that in particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing powers, such rules may prescribe the procedure to be followed in arbitration proceedings under this Chapter. In pursuance thereof, the Central Government has framed rules called the Defence of India (Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property) Rules, 1962. Under these Rules, an Arbitrator has been given certain powers of Civil Court by Rule 12, Rule 13 provides for making of the award by the Arbitrator in writing. It further provides that the award shall thereafter be signed setting forth the grounds for his decision of the amount of compensation which in his opinion should be allowed for the property and for the apportionment thereof between the persons interested in the property. It is further provided that a copy of the award should be sent by post to all parties to the reference and to the competent authority together with the ground on which the award is based. Rule 15 provides for payment of compensation determined in accordance with Section 30, Clause (i) of the Act which shall be payable on the expiry of every three months in respect of a building on an urban land and on the expiry of every six months in respect of rural land. These are the provisions under the Rules in respect of the arbitration under the said Act. In these Rules as in the Act, as we have seen, there is no provision for any appeal from the award of the arbitrator as in other like two statutes we have considered above. It will also be seen that there is also no provision excluding the application of the Arbitration Act to such proceeding. The Rules, as we have seen, provide for the procedure of the arbitration till the making of the award and the payment thereof but there is no procedure laid down as to what will happen if any party feels aggrieved by the award for any reason whatsoever. Mr. Bakshi has drawn our attention to the applications made in similar circumstances by the aggrieved party in this Court under Article 227 of the Constitution. He has referred us to a decision in Smt. Narayani Debi Sureka v. Union of India, reported in AIR 1969 Cal 286 where this Court on an application under Article 227 of the Constitution interfered with the award setting aside the same and sent back the matter before the tribunal below for assessment of the compensation in accordance with law in the light of the observation made in the judgment. He also referred us to an unreported decision in

C. R. No. 2568 of 1972, (Srimati Roy v. Union of India) dated March 6, 1975 (Cal) where another Division Bench of this Court interfered with an award made in respect of a requisition of a property under Section 29 of the Defence of India Act. It may be that an application under Article 227 of the Constitution may be a convenient mode of challenging the award on grounds permissible in law under that Article and we also note that it has been practically the uniform and consistent practice in this Court to interfere with the award on proper grounds. Even so, Article 227 is no part of the Defence of India Act and interference in that Article is also circumscribed by limitation imposed by judicial decisions. As a substantive right has been conferred on a party under the relevant provision of the statute under Section 46 of the Arbitration Act, in absence of any prohibition, we do not think that the provision of Article 227 can in any way limit such right. Further, the Rules to which our attention has been drawn and with the making of the award and sending a copy of the award to the competent authority and other interested parties. It may also be of interest to note that in the relevant provisions unlike those in Arbitration Act, the arbitrator has to give his reasons as the basis of the award and to that extent the provision of the Arbitration Act may be said to be superseded but it cannot be extended beyond. After considering the relevant provisions, we are of opinion that in the context of the statutory provision it must be held that the provisions of the Arbitration Act are applicable to the statutory arbitrations contemplated under the Defence of India Act, 1962 except in respect possibly of the reasons forming the basis of the award which we have just referred to. Accordingly, the application filed by the petitioners under Section 14 (2) of the Arbitration Act appears to be otherwise maintainable in law. In Nawabzada S. M. Ali Dabir v. Nawabzada S. M. Ali Kabir Khan, AIR 1964 All 185 it was held that in respect of award under Section 58 of U. P. Court of Wards Act, provisions of the Arbitration Act were applicable for enforcement of the award in absence of any provision to the contrary. In Sachindra v. Chief Commissioner Tripura, AIR 1970 Tripura 94, it was held that determination of compensation for requisition by Arbitrator is subject to Sections 45 and 46 of the Arbitration Act, 1940.

13. The next point for consideration is whether the District Judge had any jurisdiction to entertain such application in his original jurisdiction. Under Section 2 (c) of the Arbitration Act, an application under Section 14 (2) has to be filed in Court which would otherwise have jurisdiction to try a suit in respect of the subject-matter of reference. Mr. Bakshi submitted that the District Judge has been conferred with original jurisdiction only in respect of specific matters like matrimonial cause or guardianship award matters and not suits as contemplated in Section 2 (c). Mr. Bhabra referred to Section 18 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887 and submitted that competency used in that section is a rule of procedure and not of jurisdiction and does not therefore oust the jurisdiction of the Courts of higher grade who had concurrent jurisdiction in the matter. Mr. Bhabra relied on a decision in Matra Mondal v. Hari Mohun Mullick alias Mothura Mohun Mullick, reported in (1890) ILR 17 Cal 155 wherein it was held that the words "not affecting the jurisdiction of the Court" in Sec. 578 of the same Code mean "not affecting the competency of the Court to try". It was further held that the error in instituting a suit in a Subordinate Judge's Court instead of in that of the Munsiff is not an error which affects the jurisdiction of the former Court within the meaning of Section 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. Accordingly, the District Judge, Mr. Bhabra submitted, has ample jurisdiction to entertain an application according to law and pass appropriate directions. As we propose to remit the case to the learned Judge, we do not feel inclined to consider the points raised before us for the first time when this aspect of the question was not considered by the learned Judge.

14. In the view we have taken, this Rule is made absolute and the impugned order is set aside. The learned Judge will now consider the application in accordance with law keeping in mind the above contentions raised on behalf of the respective parties if they are raised before him in regard to his jurisdiction to entertain and dispose of the application. We also make it clear that we are expressing no opinion about the merits of the contentions of the parties made before us on the point of jurisdiction.

15. Mr. Bakshi prays for stay of operation of this order. Let the operation of this order be stayed for two months from date.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Rule made absolute.

Narendra Nath Biswas, for Petitioner; Asoke Kumar Sen Gupta, for Respondent.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This Rule arises on an application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against an order striking out defence on defendant's failure to comply with an order for making further discovery and an order refusing to vacate the said order by re-consideration of the matter under Section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

The opposite party filed a Money Suit against the petitioner. After the petitioner filed written statement the opposite party filed an application for direction to make discovery of documents that might be relied on by the petitioner. The petitioner through her husband made discovery of documents in her possession or power on 21st of April, 1972 stating therein that the most important document had already been filed in Court. Thereafter on the application of the opposite party for further discovery of documents, an order was passed on June 29, 1972 directing the petitioner to make further discovery on oath by way of supplying further particulars regarding the discovery made on behalf of the petitioner. As the petitioner being a lady and not being familiar with Court affairs and the petitioner's husband having left Calcutta in August 1972 and then was attacked with Jaundice and could not return to Calcutta in due time no steps could be taken on behalf of the petitioner. On 25th of August 1972 the learned Subordinate Judge rejected the written statement and fixed the suit for ex parte hearing on September 13, 1972 although there was no application on behalf of the opposite party for rejecting the written statement. On September 13, 1972 an application was filed by the petitioner praying for vacating the order dated 25th of August 1972. The said application was rejected. Being aggrieved, the petitioner has come up before this Court.

3. Mr. Narendra Nath Biswas, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner, in the first place submits that the learned Court below was wrong in rejecting the written statement as no application was filed on behalf of the opposite party, and that being so, the Court cannot pass an order rejecting the written statement suo motu under Order 11, Rule 21 of the Code. In support of his contention Mr. Biswas places before us a Bench decision of this Court reported in ILR (1963) 2 Cal 309, (Braja Behari Sen v. Arun Coomar Bose). At page 313 it has been held that "to dismiss a suit for failure of the plaintiff to comply with an order for inspection is not automatic in its operation. Under Order 11, Rule 21 the Court can act on the application of a party and not suo motu". It was also held that "the Court does not impose the penalty under Order 11, Rule 21 except in clear cases and where the party refusing inspection is contumacious or has deliberately disobeyed the order of the Court with full knowledge thereof". Mr. Biswas submits that in this case no application was filed and, moreover, circumstances were not such that the extreme penalty should have been imposed by the Court.

4. Mr. Ashoke Kumar Sen Gupta, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite party, submits that in this revisional application the petitioner cannot challenge the order which was passed under Order 11, Rule 21. Assuming that the said order was passed illegally the petitioner ought to have preferred an appeal against the said order, instead he filed an application under Section 151 of the Code and the learned Court below rightly held that as the order challenged was appealable the application under Section 151 was not maintainable. The learned Court below relied on the decision reported in 98 Ind Cas 70 = (AIR 1927 Cal 158), (Asutosh Ghose v. Indu Bhusan Ghose). It is a Bench decision of our Court and it has been laid down "An order under Order 11, Rule 21. Civil P. C. dismissing a suit for failure to answer interrogatories being appealable, a Court has no power to review such an order in the exercise of its inherent power under Section 151, Civil P. C. A Court cannot invoke an inherent jurisdiction where there is a provision in the Code which, if applied, will meet the justice of the case, however desirable it may deem that an order should be passed under Section 151, Civil P. C."

In this connection Mr. Sen Gupta also relies on a decision reported in AIR 1947 All 343, (Chander Bhan Singh v. Lallu Singh). It was held in this case that "An order under Section 151 cannot be made where there is a specific remedy provided by the Code applicable to the circumstances of the case. Order 43, Rule 1 gives a party a right to appeal from an order passed under Order 11, Rule 21 and if he fails to avail himself of that remedy the order under Order 11, Rule 21 cannot be set aside under Section 151". Mr. Sen Gupta in support of his contention relies on the Supreme Court decision reported in AIR 1970 SC 997, (Nainsingh v. Koonwarjee). In this case it has been held that "If no appeal is preferred against an appealable order, its correctness is no more open to examination". It was further laid down that "Under the inherent power of Courts recognised by Section 151, Civil P. C., a Court has no power to do that which is prohibited by the Code. Inherent jurisdiction of the Court must be exercised subject to the rule that if the Code does contain specific provisions which would meet the necessities of the case, such provisions should be followed and inherent jurisdiction should not be invoked. In other words the Court cannot make use of the special provisions of Section 151 of the Code where a party had his remedy provided elsewhere in the Code and he neglected to avail himself of the same". In short, Mr. Sen Gupta contends that assuming that the order rejecting the written statement was not a proper order even then the same cannot be challenged in an application under Section 151 of the Code as the order was an appealable one. It may be noted that Mr. Sen Gupta, however, submits that the Court may pass an order under Order 11, Rule 21 suo motu. He submits that R. 21 has two parts. The first part says about the liability of the plaintiff to have his suit dismissed and the liability of the defendant to have his defence struck out, and the second part provides that the party interrogating or seeking discovery or inspection may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and an order may be made accordingly. Mr. Sen Gupta wants to say that when a liability has been provided in the first part of R. 21 it means that the Court can pass an order suo motu. The second part only provides that a party interrogating or seeking discovery or inspection may file an application for getting an order from the Court. On reading R. 21 carefully we do not accept this submission of Mr. Sen Gupta and we hold that a Court cannot pass an order suo motu under Order 11, Rule 21. We therefore find that the order passed by the learned Court below in striking out the defence was not a proper order. But in this case the only point that requires to be decided is whether the said order can be challenged in this revisional application when without preferring an appeal an application was filed under Section 151 of the Code.

5. Mr. Biswas contends that it is true that the order rejecting the written statement was an appealable order, but that appeal lay to the District Judge and not to this Court and that being so, the petitioner can very well challenge the said order in this Court under Section 115 of the Code. In support of his contention he refers to a decision reported in AIR 1944 Cal 309, (Maharani Nilimaprova v.

Kadambini Dasi). Mr. Biswas refers to Section 115 of the Code which provides "The High Court may call for the record of any case which has been decided by any Court subordinate to such High Court and in which no appeal lies thereto". In the case referred to above it has been held "The precise meaning of the word 'thereto' has given rise to some controversy, but it seems to us that it can only refer to the High Court and not to a Court subordinate to the High Court", and their Lordships held that in such a case where an appeal lies not to the High Court but to the lower Court and the petitioner instead of preferring an appeal to the lower Court files an application under Sec. 115 of the Code, that application can be entertained by the High Court. But the facts of the present case are completely different. In this case the petitioner did not come up to this Court against the order striking out the written statement. But he filed an application under Section 151 of the Code which was completely misconceived. That being so, this decision does not help the petitioner. For the facts and circumstances of the case stated above and relying on the decisions referred to above we are of the opinion that the learned Court below was correct to hold that an application under Section 151 was not maintainable. In the circumstances we find nothing to interfere.

6. In the result, the application fails and the Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 — Amendment of plaint — Principles.

All amendments will be generally permissible when they are necessary for determination of the real controversy in the suit.

All the same, substitution of one cause of action or the nature of the claim for another in the original plaint or change of the subject-matter of or controversy in the suit is not permissible.

Introduction by amendment of inconsistent or contradictory allegations in negation of the admitted position on facts, or mutually destructive allegations of facts are also impermissible though inconsistent pleas on the admitted position can be introduced by way of amendment.

In general, the amendments should not cause prejudice to the other side which cannot be compensated in costs.

Amendment of a claim or relief which is barred by limitation when the amendment is sought to be made should not be allowed to defeat a legal right accrued except when such consideration is outweighed by the special circumstances of the case. Case law referred.

(Para 5)

Held, on facts, that there was no substitution of new case in place of original one and there was no change in respect of the real nature of controversy or the subject-matter of the suit.

(B) Limitation Act (1963), Article 58 — Limitation under — Starting point — Knowledge — Relevancy.

"The right to sue" in Article 58 which is the residuary article on suits relating to declarations is not there until an accrual of the right asserted and its infringement or at least a clear and unequivocal threat to infringe that right by the defendant against whom the suit is instituted.

(Para 9)

Though there is no reference in the Article to the knowledge of the plaintiff, there may be cases where the nature of the right imports knowledge of certain facts and in such case the right to sue cannot be said to arise until the plaintiff have the necessary knowledge. Case law referred.

(Paras 9 and 10)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), Order 1, Rule 3 — Suit for partition on declaration of plaintiff's title to suit property — Allegation that ostensible owner was merely name lender — Person who would be otherwise interested in the property in case such owner be found to have a share, held, was a necessary party — Similar was the case when a stranger also claimed to be interested in the property in suit on basis of documents impugned by the plaintiff was not binding on him.

Sakti Nath Mukherjee and Bhaskar Ghosh, for Petitioners; S. P. Roy Choudhury and Phani Bhusan Das, for Opposite Party No. 1.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule is directed against order No. 112 dated 30-9-1975 allowing the amendment of the plaint in a suit filed on 19-8-1970. The plaintiff opposite party instituted the suit for declaration on his share in 'ka' and 'kha' schedule properties of the plaint and for partition of his share by metes and bounds on allegations stated in brief as follows:—

One Behari Lal Das acquired 'ka' schedule property in the benami of his daughter-in-law Siddeswari; 'kha' schedule property was acquired by mortgaging 'ka' schedule property as also out of its usufructs in the name of Siddeswari aforesaid who had no income or fund by herself. The defendant No. 1 who is full brother of the plaintiff obtained the deed of gift of the said property in his favour on 7-10-1967 from Siddeswari by exercising of fraud and undue influence on revocation of the earlier deed made in favour of defendant No. 2 their full sister, in respect of 'ka' schedule property. The said deed of 1967 was not binding on the plaintiff and as Siddeswari acquired 1/4th interest by inheritance, by the aforesaid deed she could convey only her 1/4th share to the defendant by the said deed executed by her. The plaintiff accordingly prayed for declaration that her mother Siddeswari was merely a name lender in respect of suit properties and the deed of 7-10-1967 was not binding on him. He claimed as 1/4th share in the property and 1/12th share as heir to his mother Siddeswari in all his 1/4th share and for partition of his share by metes and bounds.

2. In their joint written statement the defendants 1 and 2 denied the allegations and the claims made in the plaint and further stated that Siddeswari acquired the properties herself. By deed of 1967 and further three deeds executed by her free will dated 31-7-1968 she transferred respectively 'ka' schedule property to the defendant No. 1 and different portions of 'kha' schedule property to the defendant No. 1, to his son and also to the defendant No. 2 and the plaintiff had thus no title or interest in the suit property. The plaintiff thereafter by an application for amendment dated 13-3-1974 wanted to amend the plaint alleging that through misconception of law his share in the said property was not correctly stated and further because of his absence of knowledge of the deeds of 31-7-1968 which he came to know for the first time from the written statement he could not make specific allegations in respect thereof in the plaint. For these reasons he wanted to amend the plaint stating in addition that the deed of 31-7-1968 were obtained by taking advantage of the senility and mental weakness of Siddeswari due to old age and they were not binding on the plaintiff; further on the death of Behari Lal Das according to the Hindu Law of succession the plaintiff as also the defendant No. 1 inherited the suit properties in equal share. It was also stated that the son of the defendant No. 1 was also to be impleaded in the suit as defendant No. 3 in the aforesaid circumstances. There was further prayer for insertion of specific particulars relating to description of the suit property.

3. This application was opposed by the defendants 1 and 2 and by the impugned order the learned Judge allowed the amendment subject to payment of costs of Rs. 100/-. It was held that the proposed amendment should be allowed for determining the real question in controversy between the parties and there was no question of any prejudice to the defendants as they would be given opportunity to meet the case made out by the amendment and would be compensated with costs. Further there was no question of limitation as these three years had not elapsed from the filing of the written statement.

4. Mr. Sakti Nath Mukherjee, learned advocate appearing for the petitioner referred to various decisions and submitted that the proposed amendments brought in new facts inconsistent with the original case. The amendments proposed formed no part of the original controversy and amounted to a negation of the admitted position previously taken by the plaintiff in his plaint. In such case the amendment was impermissible according to the judicial decisions. He referred to the decision in Ma Shwe Mya v. Maung Mo Hnaung, AIR 1922 PC 249 in which it was noted that the real question in controversy between the parties was the existence and character of the agreement made in 1912. When the existence of that contract had been negated, to permit the plaintiff to set up and establish another and an independent contract would be altogether outside the provisions of the Code. The Court observed as follows:—

"All rules of Court are nothing but provisions intended to secure the proper administration of justice and it is, therefore, essential that they should be made to serve and be subordinate to that purpose so that full power of amendment must be enjoyed and should always be liberally exercised, but nonetheless no power has yet been given to enable one distinct cause of action to be substituted for another, nor to change, by means of amendment, the subject-matter of the suit."

He also referred to the earlier decision in Md. Baksh Khan v. Hussein Bibi, (1888) 15 Ind App 81 at p. 86 (PC) for the proposition that though inconsistent pleas are permissible, inconsistent or mutually destructive facts are not permissible in pleading and accordingly the contradictory allegations to the admitted position is also not permissible in law. He referred to the decision in Kanda v. Waghu, AIR 1950 PC 68 in which the Privy Council held that the amendment which involves the setting up of a new case and alters the real matter in controversy between the parties cannot be allowed. He referred to the decision in Nir Singh Prosad v. Steel Products Ltd., AIR 1953 Cal 15 for the proposition that the plaintiff cannot be allowed to amend his plaint so as to alter materially or substitute his cause of action or nature of the claim made earlier. Reference was made to Sk. Masthan v. Palayani Balarami Reddi, AIR 1953 Mad 958 for the proposition that proposed amendment of written statement in direct negation of admission contained in the written statement is not permissible in law and this rigour applies in greater force in respect of amendment to plaint. In Jaldu Anantha v. Jaldu Bapanna, AIR 1959 Andh Pra 448 the Court disallowed the proposed amendment to written statement which displaced the original one and destroyed all that was stated and claimed therein. According to Mr. Mukherjee on all these authorities, in the facts of the present case, the proposed amendment substituting the new case in alteration of the admitted position should not have been permitted by the trial Court.

5. The principles established by judicial decisions in respect of amendment of plaint are as follows:—

(i) All amendments will be generally permissible when they are necessary for determination of the real controversy in the suit.

(ii) All the same, substitution of one cause of action or the nature of the claim for another in the original plaint or change of the subject-matter of or controversy in the suit is not permissible.

(iii) Introduction by amendment of inconsistent or contradictory allegations in negation of the admitted position on facts, or mutually destructive allegations of facts are also impermissible though inconsistent pleas on the admitted position can be introduced by way of amendment.

(iv) In general, the amendments should not cause prejudice to the other side which cannot be compensated in costs.

(v) Amendment of a claim or relief which is barred by limitation when the amendment is sought to be made should not be allowed to defeat a legal right accrued except when such consideration is outweighed by the special circumstances of the case.

6. The contention of Mr. Mukherjee in our opinion appears to be unsubstantial as contended by Mr. S. P. Roy Chowdhury learned advocate appearing for the plaintiff opposite party. The case before us is a suit for partition on declaration of plaintiff's title to the suit property. In the original plaint it was stated that the ostensible holder of the property was merely the name lender and the 'ka' schedule property was in fact acquired by Lal Behari in benami of Sidheswari while 'kha' schedule property was acquired against and out of 'ka' schedule property and its usufructs. Thereafter it is stated in the original plaint that Sidheswari acquired 1/4th interest by inheritance. This was according to the plaintiff a mis-statement made on the misconception of law of Hindu Succession and by the amendment it was merely stated that Sidheswari never acquired any share under the law of Hindu succession, while the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 together inherited 8 annas share in the suit property. This is not substitution of a new case in place of the original one and nor a change in respect of the real nature of controversy or the subject-matter of the suit. Accordingly we do not find that the authorities cited by Mr. Mukherjee are of any assistance to him on the contrary they support the case for the amendment as sought for by the plaintiff.

7. The next point is urged by Mr. Mukherjee that in any event amendment should not be allowed as the claim sought to be made by the amendment is otherwise barred by limitation. He submitted that by the proposed amendment the subsequent deeds are being sought to be set aside. The deeds were exempted in 1968 as already stated and on the day the amendment application was filed in 1974, clearly three years passed away therefrom and accordingly on the date the amendment was sought for the claim in respect of the deeds aforesaid was barred by limitation under Article 113 of the Limitation Act, 1963. Reference was made in support to the decision in Md. Fahimal v. Jagat Ballav, AIR 1923 Pat 475 in which it was held that the suit to contest alienation by Mutwali and for possession must be brought within six years from date of alienation under the old Limitation Act. Reference also made in the decisions in Ottappurakkal Thazhate Soopi v. Cherichil Pallikkal Uppathumma, (1910) ILR 33 Mad 31 and C. Parasanna Venkatachella Reddiar v. The Collector of Trichinopoly, ILR 38 Mad 1064 = (AIR 1914 Mad 708), in support of the above proposition. He accordingly submitted that the Court had no jurisdiction to allow the amendment after the period of limitation in respect of the claim has already expired.

8. Mr. Roy Chowdhury contended on the other hand that the starting point of limitation is not the date of alienation but the date on which the aggrieved party comes to know of the alienations or an invasion of his right to the property in dispute. He submitted that the case is governed by Article 58 of the Limitation Act which provided for three years limitation from the date of accrual of the cause of action as aforesaid. In the instant case according to Mr. Roy Chowdhury the cause of action arose on the date of knowledge of the plaintiff from the written statement that there has been such alienations and invasion of his right therein against which he prayed for declaration that such documents are not binding on him. He referred to the decision in Ahmed Ali v. Banguluru, AIR 1959 Andh Pra 280 in which it has been held that suit for declaration that alienation is not binding on the creditor under Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act is governed of Article 120 of the old Limitation Act. It was held that the cause of action does not arise on the date of alienation but on the date when the creditor who seeks to set aside the alienation knows that he has been defrauded, defeated or delayed. He also referred to an earlier decision in Bhagatram v. Param, AIR 1934 Lah 574 where it was held that the cause of action arose from the date of knowledge of fraud though governed by Article 120. In any event in L. J. Leach and Co. Ltd. v. Jardine Skinner and Co. Ltd., AIR 1957 SC 357 following Charan Das v. Amirkhan, AIR 1921 PC 50 the Court allowed the amendment even when the effect was to take away the legal right which had accrued to the defendant by lapse of time as even so there might be cases where such considerations are outweighed by the special circumstances of the case. Mr. Bhaskar Ghose's rejoinder appearing for the opposite parties was that Article 58 applied when the claim on documents was the substantive claim in the suit and not an ancillary claim as here.

9. It has been held that "the right to sue" in Article 58 which is the residuary Article on suits relating to declarations is not there until an accrual of the right asserted and its infringement or at least a clear and unequivocal threat to infringe that right by the defendant against whom the suit is instituted as was held in Mt. Bolo v. Mt. Koklan, AIR 1930 PC 270 as also in Md. Yunus v. Syed Unnissa, AIR 1961 SC 808. Though there is no reference in the Article to the knowledge of the plaintiff, there may be cases where the nature of the right imports knowledge of certain facts and in such case the right to sue cannot be said to arise until the plaintiff have the necessary knowledge, as was held in Sheonandan v. Ugrah Sao, AIR 1960 Pat 66. It was further held that there can be no apprehension of threat to right where due to mistake or fraud things are done in secrecy or at the back of the plaintiffs.

10. According to the plaintiff he was not aware of the purported transfers of 1968 prior to the filing of the written statement by the defendant and that was the date of his first knowledge in respect thereto when there was the invasion of his right in the suit properties. On the fact of these allegations we are prima facie satisfied that the claim that the said deeds are not binding on him was within the period of limitation being within three years from the date of filing of the written statement which is to be deemed to be the accrual of the cause of action subject however to the determination of the controversy in the suit during the trial.

11. The last contention raised is that the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were the unnecessary parties even according to the amended plaint as proposed and as such their names should be struck out from the suit. Mr. Roy Chowdhury has referred to the decision of the Full Bench in Sebarani v. Ramandra Nath, 66 Cal WN 828 = (AIR 1963 Cal 46) (FB) in which the Court was considering that whether the suit should come out of Clause V-A of Article 17, Schedule II of the Court-fees Act, 1870 where a stranger was a party in a partition suit. In this case the plaintiff joined as a defendant a stranger that is the person who was not the co-sharer or co-owner, for enforcing in his presence the right of the plaintiff to a share in the suit property claimed by him. This involved construction of documents of suit properties in which the stranger was or claimed to be interested. It was observed by P. N. Mookerjee, J. in the concurring judgment as follows:—

"If the determination of the question whether the suit property is a joint property or joint family property of the persons between or amongst whom partition or joint possession is claimed that is of the plaintiff and the persons against whom the said relief is claimed, depends only on the construction or avoidance of any document, not necessitating its setting aside or cancellation, it is in substance and may well be in form too, a suit for partition and separate possession or enforcement of a right to a share of the alleged joint property or joint family property even though a stranger may be interested in or affected by the result or decision of the suit."

12. In such case the party who would be otherwise interested in the property in case Sidheswari be found to have a share in such property is a necessary party in the partition suit on declaration. Similar is the case when a stranger also claims to be interested in the property in suit on the basis of document impugned by the plaintiff is not binding on him. Accordingly the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are also necessary parties in the suit and the suit should be decided in their presence.

13. For all these reasons the impugned order suffers from no infirmity and has to be sustained. The rule accordingly is discharged. There will be no order as to costs. We are making it clear that we are not expressing any opinion on the merits of the case or otherwise of the parties before us in the suit.

14. Let the order be communicated to the trial Court at once, as prayed for.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

Sm. Sundari Dasi, Petitioner v. Basudeo Lal Guraliar, Opposite Party.

F. A. No. 227 of 1970, D/- 10-2-1977.

Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act (1976), Section 39 — Scope — Amended provisions of Act are intended by Section 39 (1) to apply to all pending proceedings whether pending in Court of first instance or in appeal — Thus petition for judicial separation under Section 10 of Hindu Marriage Act can be amended by taking grounds under Section 13 (1) as amended even in appeal by virtue of Section 39 (2). (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), Sections 10 and 13) — (Interpretation of Statutes — Duty of Court to apply law as it stands and not to question its wisdom).

It may be that if the amended provisions are made applicable at the appellate stage, it would result in denying the right of appeal to a party to the litigation. That is a situation which cannot be helped. If the Parliament has enacted a provision which is meant to apply to all pending proceedings, the Court has to apply the law as it stands. It is not for the Court to go into legislative wisdom of the Parliament. (Paras 2, 3)

CU/CU/A655/77/KSB

ORDER:— This is an application for leave to amend the plaint under Section 39 (1) (i) and (2) of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 (Act LXVIII of 1976) filed on behalf of the respondent. The respondent filed a petition against the appellant for judicial separation under Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 on the ground of cruelty and desertion. The suit was decreed by the trial Court. Against that decree the present appeal has been filed by the appellant. During the pendency of the appeal the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 came into force on the 27th May, 1976. Several changes have been introduced in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 and the Special Marriage Act, 1954 by the said Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976. Section 10 of the Hindu Marriage Act enumerates the grounds on which a decree for judicial separation could be passed. By Section 4 of the amending Act, Section 10 of the Hindu Marriage Act as it originally stood, has been changed entirely by a new sub-section (1). The amended sub-section (1) of Section 10 provides that a petition may be presented for a decree for judicial separation on any of the grounds specified in sub-section (1) of Section 13. Section 7 of the amending Act has replaced Cl. (i) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. Section 13 (1) (i) as it stood prior to the amendment was as follows:

"13 (1). Any marriage solemnized, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, may, on a petition presented by either the husband or the wife, be dissolved by a decree of divorce on the ground that the other party

(i) is living in adultery; or"

The amended clause (i) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 is as follows:

"(i) has, after the solemnization of the marriage, had voluntary sexual intercourse with any person other than his or her spouse; or

(ia) has, after the solemnization of the marriage, treated the petitioner with cruelty; or

(ib) has deserted the petitioner for a continuous period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition; or"

The effect of these two amendments has been that a petition for judicial separation may be presented on the ground mentioned in Section 13 (1) (i) as amended. Similarly, the ground for granting a decree for divorce has also been changed.

The respondent-petitioner wants to take advantage of the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act as amended by the amending Act in view of Section 39 of the amending Act. Section 39 of the amending Act makes special provision as to pending cases. The relevant portion of the said section is as follows:

"39 (1). All petitions and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial which are pending in any Court at the commencement of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 shall be dealt with and decided by such Court.

(i) if it is a petition or proceeding under the Hindu Marriage Act, then so far as may be, as if it had been originally instituted therein under the Hindu Marriage Act, as amended by this Act;

(ii)

(2) in every petition or proceeding to which sub-section (1) applies, the Court in which the petition or proceeding is pending shall give an opportunity to the parties to amend the pleadings, in so far as such amendment is necessary to give effect to the provisions of sub-section (1), within such time as it may allow in this behalf and any such amendment may include an amendment for conversion of a petition or proceeding for judicial separation into a petition or proceeding, as the case may be, for divorce."

In view of this provision contained in Section 39, the learned Advocate for the respondent-petitioner contends that he is entitled to amend the original petition which was filed by him for judicial separation.

2. The learned Advocate for the appellant opposite party has contended that the provisions of the amending Act cannot have any application to proceedings under the Hindu Marriage Act or the Special Marriage Act which have been disposed of by the Court of first instance. In other words, he wants to restrict the amended provisions only to proceedings pending in the trial Court. He has contended that if the amended provisions are made applicable to any proceeding other than proceedings pending before the Court of first instance, it will have the effect of depriving the party of a right of appeal which he has under the law. In considering whether the special provisions contained in Section 39 are applicable only to proceedings pending before the Court of first instance or proceedings pending in appeal, the language used in Section 39 should be carefully looked into. The section opens with the words

"all petitions and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial which are pending in any Court". If it was intended that the amended provisions would be applicable only to proceedings pending in the trial Court, there was no necessity of using the words "petitions" and "proceedings". Then again sub-section (1) says, "causes and matters matrimonial which are pending in any Court." The obvious intention therefore is to make the amended provisions applicable to all proceedings whether pending in the trial Court or in appeal. This would be clear from the statement of objects and reasons of the Bill which was introduced in the Parliament. It would appear from the bill that the objects of the legislation were mainly (1) to liberalise the provisions relating to divorce, (2) to enable expeditious disposal of proceedings under the Act and (3) to remove certain anomalies and handicaps that have come to light after the passing of the Act. In the statement of objects and reasons it is stated as follows:

"To avoid multiplicity of litigation and consequent delay, it is also proposed to apply the amended law in relation to all pending proceedings under the relevant Acts."

It is clear therefore that the amended provisions are intended to apply to all pending proceedings whether pending in the Court of first instance or in appeal.

3. The learned Advocate for the appellant opposite party contended that if the amended provisions are made applicable at the appellate stage, it would result in denying the right of appeal to a party to the litigation. That is a situation which cannot be helped. If the Parliament has enacted a provision which is meant to apply to all pending proceedings, the Court has to apply the law as it stands. It is not for the Court to go into legislative wisdom of the Parliament. In the above view of the matter we allow this application and grant leave to the respondent-petitioner to amend the petition under Section 10 of the Hindu Marriage Act in terms of the prayer made in paragraph 7 of the petition. The appellant-opposite party will be entitled to file an additional written statement within four weeks from this date. The application is allowed. There will be no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

Where property belonging to deities was acquired by Government and compensation money which had been lying in Court on investment was fetching an income annually and the petitioners as shebait moved an application praying for funds for purchase of land for erection of temple thereon but the prayer was rejected and subsequently they filed another petition praying for funds for construction of a temple on the land which had been purchased by them as shebait.

Held that (i) the prayer made in the subsequent application was in terms of S. 32 (1) (a) if other requisite conditions were satisfied, AIR 1921 Cal 536, Followed; and (ii), the order on previous application did not stand as a bar to the grant of the prayer in the subsequent application as in the earlier order the prayer for funds for acquisition of land was rejected. Ramesh Banerjee, Manohar Saha, Rabindra Nath Datta, for Petitioners; C. D. Roy Choudhury, A. K. Basu Choudhury, for Opposite Party.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— A property belonging to deities was acquired by the Government and the compensation money had been lying in Court invested fetching an income of Rs. 235/- annually. The petitioners claiming to be shebait of the deities moved an application for purchase of land for erection of a temple thereon for the deities for a consideration of Rs. 4,355/-. This prayer was rejected by the Additional Special Land Acquisition Judge, 4th Court, Alipore by order No. 145 dated 27-11-1973. As no steps appear to have been taken against that order the learned Judge was of opinion that the said order acquired finality. Thereafter it appears these petitioners filed another application before the Judge stating that they as shebaita had purchased a piece of land and wanted to build a temple thereon in fulfilment of the wishes of the settlor in the deed of settlement executed by him in respect of acquired property. This application was rejected by order No. 158 dated 3-4-1976 by the learned Judge holding that in view of the earlier order it was not permissible to pass any order in favour of the petitioners on their present petition. The petitioners have challenged the propriety of this order by the instant Rule.

2. Sections 31 and 32 of the Land Acquisition Act 1894 provide as follows:—

31. Payment of compensation or deposit of same in Court.

(1) On making an award under Section 11, the Collector shall tender payment of the compensation awarded by him to the persons interested entitled thereto according to the award and shall pay it to them unless prevented by some one or more of the contingencies mentioned in the next sub-section.

(2) If they shall not consent to receive it, or if there be no person competent to alienate the land, or if there be any dispute as to the title to receive the compensation or as to the apportionment of it, the Collector shall deposit the amount of the compensation in the Court in which a reference petition would be submitted....

32. Investment of money deposited in respect of lands belonging to persons incompetent to alienate.

(1) If any money shall be deposited in Court under sub-section (2) of the last preceding section and it appears that the land in respect whereof the same was awarded belonged to any person who had no power to alienate the same, the Court shall

(a) order the money to be invested in the purchase of other lands to be held under the like title and conditions of ownership as the land in respect of which such money shall have been deposited or held, or

(b) if such purchase cannot be effected forthwith then in such Government or other approved securities as the Court shall think fit....

It was submitted on behalf of the State that in view of the provisions of Section 32 as quoted above, the Court was not in a position to entertain such application as it did not relate to purchase of the land but to construction of a temple on the land alleged to have been purchased by the shebaita. Accordingly, the impugned order does not suffer from any infirmity.

3. In Re: Ganendra Mullick, reported in 25 Cal WN 597 = (AIR 1921 Cal 536) a Division Bench was considering the provisions of Section 32 of the Land Acquisition Act as amended by the Calcutta Improvement Act and it was held— ...

"Section 32 of the Land Acquisition Act, as amended by the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act provided that the Tribunal shall order the money to be invested in the purchase of other lands to be held under like title and conditions of ownership as the land in respect of which such money shall have been deposited was held. Here there can be no question as to the land being under like title and conditions of ownership because the proposal is to erect buildings on the land belonging to the trust estate. The only question for consideration, therefore, was whether the erection of buildings would come within the words "invested in the purchase of other lands" in Section 32 of the Act. Having regard to the definition of the expression "land" we think that the words of Section 32 quoted above would include the erection of buildings upon the land and if the President is satisfied that the money would be invested in the erection of buildings as proposed by the petitioners, we are of opinion that he is bound to pay the money over to the petitioners... We think under these circumstances that the case should go back to the learned President of the Improvement Tribunal in order that he may satisfy as to whether the petitioners are the sole trustees of the trust estate and if so, whether money would be invested in erection of building on the land and whether there is an agreement between them and their lessees for the erection of the buildings on the portion of the land not acquired as mentioned in their petition and if he is satisfied upon those points, we think that he should pay out the money to the petitioners."

4. It is thus obvious that provisions of Section 32 (1) (a) of the Land Acquisition Act apply to construction of buildings on the land acquired by a person incompetent to alienate such land, apart from application of the section to the acquisition of such land by him.

5. In the present petition before the Judge the petitioners have prayed that they have already acquired the land as such shebait and the funds are now needed for construction of the temple on such land. Accordingly following the above decision we are of opinion that the prayer made is in terms of the provisions of Section 32 (1) (a) if other requisite conditions are satisfied. The previous order of the learned Judge does not stand as a bar to the grant of the prayer on this application as in the earlier order the prayer for funds for acquisition of land was rejected. The learned Judge accordingly is in error in thinking that the previous order stood as a bar to a consideration of the present application made by the petitioners. We accordingly make the Rule absolute and set aside the impugned order and direct the learned Judge to consider the application of the petitioners in accordance with law keeping in view the decision we have cited above in extenso. There will be no order as to costs.

6. Let the records be sent down at once.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Rule made absolute.

L. P. A. No. 186 of 1974, D/- 31-1-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), Section 151 — Appeal by tenant — Direction to deposit arrears of rent and damages — Whether can be given in exercise of inherent powers — W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (1956).

The powers under Section 151 of the Code cannot be extended to defeat any provision of law or a substantive right conferred by law. The Code has provided for an appeal to higher Courts and it is nowhere the condition under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 or under the Code that unless arrears of rent and damages are deposited the appeal filed by the tenant would be liable to be dismissed. This substantive right of appeal conferred under the law cannot be defeated or frustrated by exercise of inherent powers which would thus be contrary to provisions of law. Any condition in regard to deposit, if imposed on the tenant-appellant, would amount to a clog on the appeal which is not warranted by the provision of the relevant statute. Case law referred. (Para 4)

S. P. Roy Chowdhury and Phani Bhusan Das, for Applicant; Saktinath Mukherjee and Nihar Ranjan Chatterjee, for Respondents.

S. K. DATTA, J.:— This is an application by the plaintiffs landlords respondents for a direction on the tenant appellant to deposit all arrears of damages in respect of the suit premises. The plaintiffs respondents, the petitioners in this application obtained on May 20, 1967 a decree before the trial Court for recovery of possession of the suit premises on eviction of the defendant therefrom. The said decree was modified on appeal in this Court by the learned Judge on June 26, 1973 by a decree for partial eviction. The learned Judge, it is alleged, on concession by the tenant appellant decreed the suit in respect of the ground-floor and first-floor of the premises leaving the defendant to remain in possession of the other portion of the premises and the monthly rent was apportioned from Rs. 85/- to Rs. 40/- in respect of the premises allowed to be retained by the tenant. The tenant defendant however was dissatisfied with the judgment and preferred the instant appeal. It has also been stated before us that the landlord has also filed an appeal thereafter against the decree for partial eviction and both the appeals are pending.

2. Mr. Roy Chowdhury, learned advocate appearing for the respondents in this appeal, submitted that the tenant filed his appeal mala fide in spite of his concession before the learned Judge in this Court. He further stated that taking advantage of the appeal filed by the landlord the tenant has stopped paying or depositing any rent or damages in respect of the suit premises of which he is to be deemed to be in occupation and thus liable to pay rent or damages in respect thereof. He accordingly submitted that the appellant should be directed to deposit all arrears of rent or damages in Court during the pendency of the appeal.

Mr. Roy Chowdhury submitted that such order could be passed by the Court in exercise of powers under Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code in the interest of justice. He referred to the decision in Manohar Lal Chopra v. Rai Bahadur Rao Raja Seth Hiralal reported in AIR 1962 SC 527 in which in paragraph 23, the Court has noted that Section 151 of the Code itself says that nothing in the Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Court to make orders necessary for the ends of justice. The Court further observed that the inherent power had not been conferred upon the Court but it is a power inherent in the Court by virtue of its duty to do justice between the parties before it. Mr. Roy Chowdhury also referred to the decision in Sibani Rani Dutta v. Balai Chandra Dutta, reported in (1964) 68 Cal WN 1064 in which the Court observed that there may be extraordinary cases when the application of Section 151 of the Code may be justified even though there may be alternative remedy. Reliance was also placed on the decision of this Court in Smt. Bimla Devi v. Aghore Chandra Mallick reported in AIR 1975 Cal 80 (FB) in which it was observed that there is no reason why, specially when the legislature has in this country taken special care to provide for the exercise of special powers to prevent injustice in special circumstances in the form of Section 151 the Court should hesitate to exercise these powers because of their fondness for a formula. It was further observed that the Court ought not to take an attitude which would deny to litigants the assistance of the beneficial provisions of Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code unless it was compelled to do so by a binding authority or principle. Strongly relying on these decisions, Mr. Roy Chowdhury submitted that this was a fit case where the Court should exercise this inherent power under Section 151 of the Code and direct the opposite party to deposit or pay all damages payable by him in respect of the suit premises.

3. In this appeal by the tenant defendant, there is no application for stay of proceedings in execution. Mr. Roy Chowdhury's contention is that even if there is no such application in view of the fact that the tenant has been or is deemed to be in possession of the suit premises he is liable to pay rent or damages in respect thereof during the period of his occupation. He accordingly cannot be allowed to proceed with his appeal unless he deposited or paid the rent in respect of the suit premises.

4. We are afraid we are unable to accept this contention of Mr. Roy Chowdhury. The powers under Sec 151 of the Code cannot be extended to defeat any provision of law or a substantive right conferred by law. The Code has provided for an appeal to higher Courts and it is nowhere the condition under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 or under the Code that unless such amounts are deposited the appeal would be liable to be dismissed. This substantive right of appeal conferred under the law cannot be defeated or frustrated by exercise of inherent powers which would thus be contrary to provisions of law. We may profitably refer to the provisions of Section 14 (4) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 which provide that in a case for recovery of possession where the suit is contested by a tenant, the tenant on the application of the landlord may be directed to deposit all arrears of rent as also current rent within a specified date and in default the Court shall order defence to be struck out and the tenant to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended the claim for ejectment. In sub-section (5) of Section 14 it is provided that the power given under sub-section (4) may be exercised by Courts of appeal with necessary adaptation. It could therefore be contended that in a case governed by this Act the Court could order under sub-section (5) that an appeal by the tenant would be liable to be dismissed if there was non-compliance with the provision of sub-section (4). We however do not find any similar provision in the Act of 1956. Any condition in regard to deposit, if imposed on the tenant appellant, would, in our view, amount to a clog on the appeal which is not warranted by the provision of the relevant statute.

5. It would further appear that problem in this case had arisen because of the fact that the landlords had preferred an appeal against the decree for partial ejectment which may not thus be put into execution. But for the filing of the appeal, there was no difficulty in executing the decree and in such case if the decree was to be put into execution, the Court could impose terms on the tenant in granting a stay of execution of such a decree. There is in this case no necessity for tenant's applying for stay of execution of the decree as by reason of their appeal the landlords have not to put the decree into execution. Accordingly we cannot saddle the defendant appellant with the obligation to deposit the arrears of rent or damages on penalty of dismissal of his appeal. It is not a case where the Court would be justified in exercising its power under S. 151 of the Code and we are not prepared to pass an innocuous order. We therefore reject the application but feel that in the circumstances the appeal should be heard out with utmost expedition. We accordingly direct the tenant-defendant to file the requisite number of typewritten paper-books within a fortnight from date; in default, the appeal will be placed for orders before us.

6. We also make it clear that we are making no observation in respect of the landlords petitioners' right to move this Hon'ble Court against certain alleged orders passed in S. C. C. Suit No. 555 of 1974 staying deposits of rents or damages in respect of the suit premises in a suit for recovery of the same instituted by the landlord.

7. Mr. Roy Chowdhury states that he will also file paper-books in his appeal against the said judgment. If such paper-books are filed, liberty is given to Mr. Roy Chowdhury to pray for analogous and expeditious hearing of the appeals.

8. Liberty is given to mention for early hearing of the appeals after the paper-books have been filed.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Orders accordingly.

Second Appeal No. 728 of 1971, D/-
17-1-1977.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), Order 2, Rule 2 — Requirement of — Subsequent suit when barred because of an earlier suit — Test for determination. (T. P. Act (1882), Section 108).

The object of Rules 1 and 2 of Order 2 is to prevent multiplicity of suits. The Rule in Order 2, Rule 2 is founded on the principle that a person shall not be vexed twice for one and the same cause. The terms of Order 2, Rule 2 require only that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and not that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff may have against the defendant and if the cause of action in the subsequent suit is not barred.

The test for finding out whether the subsequent suit would be barred because of an earlier one, is whether the claim in the subsequent suit, is, in fact, founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit. Case law referred.

The plaintiff-respondent, as owner of suit premises brought suit against defendant-appellant for ejectment and mesne profits and for compensation for damages caused to the same on allegations that defendant-tenant broke open a portion of wall in between two bed-rooms, made a hole in privy and thereby contravened clauses (m) and (o) of Section 108, T. P. Act and as such became liable for eviction. The plaintiff previously filed suit for mandatory order of injunction directing defendant to restore rooms to their former position and the suit was decreed. Damages which were caused were duly repaired by the defendant subsequent to the decree.

Held: Since such damages were admittedly repaired duly, the same could not be a ground for ejectment in the subsequent suit because at that time damages as alleged were not subsisting. A suit for ejectment can only be brought on subsisting cause of action viz., damage to the premises in the instant case. The instant suit, being founded or based upon the same damages which were in issue in the earlier one, would not be maintainable and that too when the claim in question was made on a cause of action not quite distinct or practically and in effect the same as in the earlier suit and all the more so when the breach alleged or complained of is the same. (Paras 10, 15)

(B) Words and Phrases — "Damage" — "Damages" — Meaning.

The words "damage" and "damages" form more than one meaning. It may mean injury; the words may mean sums paid under the order of the Court for compensation for a breach of contract. Damage means any loss whether actionable as an injury or not. It may be defined as the pecuniary compensation which the law awards to a person for the injury he has sustained by reason of the act or default of another where that act or default is a breach of contract or a tort. Damages are the recompense given by process of law to a person for the wrong that another has done to him. "Damage" connotes a genus while "deterioration" and "destruction" connote two species. (C) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 13 — Provisions do not create any new cause of action for landlord — Grounds of ejectment remain as they are under Transfer of Property Act — (T. P. Act (1882), Section 108, Cls. (m) and (o)). (Para 15)

Jnanendra Nath Bakshi, for Appellant; A. K. Dutt and M. M. Saha, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT:— This appeal from appellate decree is directed against the judgment and decree dated August 30, 1970, made in Title Appeal No. 337 of 1970 by Shri S. K. Dutta Additional District Judge, 1st Court, Alipore, affirming thereby the judgment and decree dated January 30, 1970, made in Title Suit No. 234 of 1968, by Shri D. K. Panda, Munsif, 2nd Court, Alipore.

2. The plaintiff-respondent, being the owner of the premises in suit brought the Title Suit in question against the defendant appellant for recovery of khas possession by eviction and for mesne profits and also for compensation for damages caused to the same. It was alleged that the defendant appellant was a tenant in respect of two bed rooms, one privy and one verandah at a monthly rent of Rupees 35/-, payable according to English calendar month. It was contended that the tenant defendant broke open a portion of the wall in between the bed rooms of his tenancy, made a hole in the wall of the privy and broke other portion of the rooms of the tenancy and thereby contravened the provisions of clauses (m) and (o) of Section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act and as such became liable for eviction. The tenancy was alleged to have been duly determined by necessary service of notice to quit.

3. The tenant-defendant, apart from denying the material allegations, contended that he was a tenant in the premises in question from the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiff respondent at a rent of Rs. 24/- per month, payable according to English calendar month and at first his tenancy consisted of 2 rooms and a privy which was used by him jointly with other tenants. He alleged that after her purchase there was some rearrangement of the tenancy at the request of the plaintiff respondent and the tenant defendant left possession of one of his rooms in exchange of another room of similar size. He has further alleged that the room so surrendered by him was converted into two privies and he was given exclusive possession of one of the said two privies. Thus the tenant defendant has contended that the extent of his tenancy was thus changed to two rooms, one privy and a verandah and the rent of the same was correspondingly increased to Rs. 35/- from Rs. 24/- per month. The tenant defendant has stated that since there was neither any intercommunicating door between the two rooms of the tenancy as subsequently created nor there was any ventilator in the newly constructed privy, for which he was facing great trouble and difficulties, he with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff respondent's husband and/or with intimation to him got an opening in the common wall of the two rooms and so also a ventilator in the privy. On such happening, the plaintiff respondent filed Title Suit No. 122 of 1968 for permanent injunction restraining him from breaking or demolishing any portion of the structure within his tenancy. A prayer for mandatory order of injunction directing him to restore the walls of the rooms to their former position was also made. On admissions made by him in the written statement, the said Title Suit was decreed on contest and thereafter the tenant defendant has filled up the portions he broke open for the purposes as aforesaid. Since the damages which were caused were duly repaired the tenant defendant contended that the subsequent suit for ejectment on the ground of causing damages was not maintainable. In that view of the matter it was also contended by him that the plaintiff respondent was not entitled to any damages at all, apart from contending further that the present suit in view of the earlier determination was barred.

4. On the pleadings as aforesaid the parties went in trial on the following issues:—

1. Has the plaintiff any cause of action?

2. Has the defendant illegally demolished the portion of the suit premises as mentioned in the plaint without the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff, causing material deterioration of the suit premises?

3. Is the notice to quit legal, valid and sufficient to determine the tenancy?

4. Is the plaintiff entitled to a decree for ejectment and damages against defendant?

5. To what relief, the plaintiff is entitled?

5. The contentions of the defendant appellant were negatived by the learned Munsif excepting the plaintiff respondent's claim for damage and he held that the defendant appellant was guilty of causing damages to the tenancy and as such decreed the suit holding further that the notice to quit was due, valid and proper.

6. From such determination the defendant appellant preferred the connected appeal which was contested by the plaintiff respondent by filing a cross-objection on the question of damages to be paid to her. The learned appellate Court formulated the following points for consideration:—

1. Whether the present suit is maintainable?

2. Whether the notice to quit was valid and sufficient?

3. Whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover khas possession of the premises in suit by evicting the defendant from there?

4. Whether the plaintiff is entitled to compensation for the damages said to have been committed by the defendant to the rooms in the premises in suit? And, if so, to what extent? And whether the plaintiff is entitled to the cost of the suit?

5. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled in the suit?

and held that since the instant suit does not come within the purview of Order 2, Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure so the same was not barred, the tenancy was according to English calendar month and there was no defect in the notice to quit and furthermore the same was duly served and there were obvious damages caused to the tenancy by the openings as mentioned hereinbefore and for that the defendant appellant was liable to be evicted. It has of course been held that the plaintiff respondent's claim for damage was unfounded and she was not entitled to the same. In view of the above both the appeal and the cross-objection was rejected.

7. The present appeal has been preferred by the tenant defendant and there has been no cross objection by the plaintiff respondent.

8. Mr. Bakshi appearing in support of the appeal, apart from reiterating the arguments as advanced before the learned appellate Court, submitted further that because of the repairs of the damages which were admittedly done, the subsequent suit for ejectment on the grounds of damage was not maintainable and in any event such opening of a door and ventilator as alleged would not be a case of damage but they should be considered as improvements.

9. Mr. Dutt, appearing for the plaintiff respondent submitted that since the damages in question were repaired after the decree and there were admitted damages caused to the premises, the subsequent suit would be maintainable. He also submitted that the subsequent suit would also be maintainable because the scopes of the two suits were different and such difference would be apparent from a reference to the prayers in the respective plaints. It was also submitted that since there were admitted breaches of clauses (m), (o) and (p) of Sec. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, the suit as instituted on due and proper service of notice, would also be maintainable and the more so when protections under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act would not be available for subsequent repairs.

10. Mr. Bakshi submitted that the connected suit was barred under Order 2, Rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code in view of the previous Title Suit No. 122 of 1968, which as stated hereinbefore was instituted by the plaintiff respondent in respect of the premises in suit and she could have asked for the reliefs as in this suit in the said earlier suit. In fact, it was submitted by him that the cause of action in the two suits was identical. In support of his contentions and to establish his case on cause of action and the bar of the connected suit for the earlier one, Mr. Bakshi first relied on the case of Moonshu Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, (1867) 11 Moo Ind App 551 (PC). In that case the test which has been held to be correct and applicable in the matter of finding out whether a subsequent suit would be barred because of an earlier one, is whether the claim in the new suit is, in fact, founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit. Thereafter, reliance was placed on the case of Mussummat Chand Kour v. Pratab Singh, (1888) 15 Ind App 156 (PC). In that case it has been observed that the subsequent suit would not be barred if the same was founded upon a different and subsequent cause of action. The next case on which reliance was placed by Mr. Bakshi is the case of Muhammad Hafiz v. Mirza Muhammad Zakariya, 26 Cal WN 297 = (AIR 1922 PC 23). In that case a hypothecation bond contained a clause stipulating that if interest was not paid for six months the creditor might sue either for interest alone or for both principal and interest without waiting for the expiration of the period fixed for repayment (which was three years) and the debtor was "to have no objection whatever." More than three years after, no interest having been paid, the creditor brought a suit for interest alone and obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. The decretal amount was deposited in Court and satisfaction entered. On a subsequent suit by the creditor for the principal sum and arrears of interest, it was held that:

"the provisions of Order 2, Rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code were applicable and the subsequent suit was not maintainable and the cause of action which gives occasion for and forms the foundation of the suit, and if that cause enables a man to seek for larger and wider relief than that to which he limits his claim, he cannot afterwards seek to recover the balance by independent proceedings." Thereafter, reliance was placed on the case of Mohammad Khalil Khan v. Mahub Ali Mian, 52 Cal WN 812 = (AIR 1949 PC 78) wherein it has been laid down that the correct test in cases falling under Order 2, Rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code is whether the claim in the new suit is in fact founded upon a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit, and it has been further held that the cause of action means every fact which will be necessary for the plaintiff to prove if traversed in order to support his right to the judgment. It has also been observed in that case that the cause of action in two suits may be considered to be the same if in substance they are identical. The same has no relation whatever to the defence that may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff but refers to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour. These apart, Mr. Bakshi relied on the case of Wright v. Bonnet, (1948) 1 All ER 227.

"In that case the plaintiff failed in an action in which he claimed damages for fraudulent misrepresentation against two defendants and damages for negligence against one of them. He then began a second action against the same defendants, covering substantially the same ground as the first, but based on an allegation of fraudulent conspiracy. It was held on an application by the defendants to have the statements of claim struck out on the ground that the action was frivolous and vexatious, that the proceedings were an abuse of the process of the Court, which should exercise its inherent jurisdiction to prevent the defendants being called on to meet what in substance and reality was the same charge as that in the earlier action."

11. On the admitted facts that the damages, which are the basis of the cause of action having been duly repaired and rectified although after the decree in the previous suit, Mr. Bakshi submitted that the subsequent suit would not also be maintainable and in support of such contentions relied on the case of Brij Kishore v. Kishwa Mitter Kapur, AIR 1965 SC 1574. Two appeals were heard analogously by the Supreme Court wherein a common question with respect to the application of the first proviso to Section 57 (2) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, came up for consideration and the said provision is in the following terms:

Section 57 (2): Notwithstanding such repeal, all suits and other proceedings under the said Act pending, at the commencement of this Act, before any Court or other authority shall be continued and disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the said Act, as if the said Act had continued in force and this Act had not been passed:

"Provided that in any such suit or proceeding for the fixation of standard rent or for the eviction of a tenant from any premises to which Section 54 does not apply, the Court or other authority shall have regard to the provisions of this Act."

In Appeal No. 879 of 1962 the landlord brought the suit for ejectment on the ground that the tenant had removed some structures in the shape of closing and opening verandah and removed a portion therein. On account of this, notices were sent to the landlord as well as to the tenant by the authorities concerned to remove those unauthorised structures. Since the tenant did not do so, the suit was filed by the landlord under Section 13 (1) (k) of the Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act, 1952.

12. In the other Appeal, being Appeal No. 121 of 1963, also the facts were similar and the suit was filed on the basis of the provisions as mentioned hereinbefore. In that case also the tenant had closed the verandah without the permission of the authorities concerned and notice was given to the landlord on that count by the authorities concerned and he in his turn asked the tenant to remove the unauthorised structures. On the tenant's failure and neglect to do so, the landlord filed a suit. It appeared that during the trial of the suit, the tenant made certain changes in the structure and removed the glazing and instead he closed the verandah with wire gauze net.

13. In the circumstances, as aforesaid, the question that arose for determination in both the cases was whether the tenant could still be ejected after he had removed the unauthorised structure and there was no further danger to the landlord's lease being forfeited and in that connection the application of the first proviso to Section 57 (2) of the Act as mentioned hereinbefore arises and it has been held that the first proviso of the said section must be read harmoniously with the substantive provision contained in sub-section (2) and the only way of harmonising the two was to read the expression "shall have regard to the provision of the Act" as merely to mean that whether the new Act has slightly modified or clarified the provisions, these modifications and clarifications should be applied. Those words did not take away what was provided by sub-section (2) and ordinarily the old Act would apply to pending proceedings. It has further been observed that Section 114-A of the Transfer of Property Act gives power to Court to give relief to tenant against forfeiture where it held that the landlord did not give reasonable time to the tenant to remedy the breach. In such case it can dismiss the suit as not maintainable. It has also been observed that it is true that the said Section 114-A would not in specific terms apply to cases of ejectment on the ground specified in Section 13 (1) (k) of the 1952 Act but it was somewhat analogous to forfeiture on breach of an express condition of a lease for it also requires previous notice to the tenant before the suit is filed. The Supreme Court has also held that it cannot be said that 1952 Act forbid the Court from granting the relief where the offending structures were removed by the tenant even during the pendency of the suit for ejectment. It has also been observed that what is reasonable time within which the breach should be remedied it is always a question of fact and it would have been possible for the Court in a suit based on Section 13 (1) (k) of the 1952 Act to give relief against forfeiture in a proper case where the tenant had removed the offending structure before the suit was filed or even during the pendency of the suit, if reasonable time was not allowed in the notice in question.

14. Mr. Bakshi, as stated hereinbefore contended thereafter that the opening of a door or verandah would not constitute damages caused to the premises but the same would be an improvement. He submitted that on the analogy of the determination of this Court in the case of Sunil Baran Roy Chowdhury v. Purna Chandra, (1955) 59 Cal WN 974, it must be held that when admittedly the damages were repaired in the manner and circumstances as stated hereinbefore, there was no damage subsisting on the date of the subsequent suit and as such the said determination as referred to and relied on both by the Courts below and by Mr. Dutt has got no application to this case. In that case it has been observed that the act of a tenant in putting down a door contrary to the provisions of Sec. 108 (o) of the Transfer of Property Act would attract the proviso to Section 12 (d) of the Rent Control Act, 1950. That apart, Mr. Bakshi relied on the dictionary meaning of the word "damage" in support of the contentions as referred to hereinbefore. "Damages" according to Byrnes Law Dictionary occurs where one person has done a wrongful act for which the person injured may obtain compensation in an action. According to Stroud the word damage, neither in any common parlance, nor any legal phraseology, is used as applicable to injuries done to persons; but solely as applicable to mischief done to property. It has also been observed that "damage" occasioned by the erection of a urinal etc., means only direct damage caused by the structure itself; not consequential damage by reason of its being so erected as to cause a nuisance. It has also been laid down that the word "you damage" would mean a circumstances or a thing if "you" render it imperfect or inoperative. "Damage" in contrast with injury, means loss or harm occurring in fact, whether actionable as an injury or not. Where a lessee authorised the lessor to enter and execute repairs making good of damages thereby occasioned it has been held in the case of Greg v. Planone, (1936) 1 KB 669 that "damage" was not confined to structural damage but included damage done to the lessee's stock in trade by soot brought down on the cleaning of a flue. Such word damage to an English lawyer, as has been held in the case of Hall Brothers S. S. Company Limited v. Young, (1939) 1 KB 748 to imply the sums payable by reason of some breach of duty or obligation, whether the duty or obligation is by contract, by general law or by relation. Damages would fall under two heads (1) general damage i. e. such damages as the law will presume to flow from that which forms the subject-matter of the action and (2) special damage i. e. other damages as can be recovered only if it is specially alleged and specially proved. There may be another case of actual damage which would mean real, substantial and just damages, or amount awarded to a complainant in compensation for his actual or and real loss or injury as opposed on the one hand to "nominal damage" and on the other to "exemplary", or "punitive damages". Damage would also mean loss or harm resulting from injury to person, property or reputation, compensation in money realisable by law for loss or injury. The words "damage" and "damages" form more than one meaning. It may mean injury; the words may mean sums paid as has been held in the case of Swansea Corporation v. Harpur, (1912) 3 KB 493 under the order of the Court for compensation for a breach of contract. Damage means any loss whether actionable as an injury or not. It may be defined as the pecuniary compensation which the law awards to a person for the injury he has sustained by reason of the act or default of another where that act or default is a breach of contract or a Tort; or can more shortly, damages are the recompense given by process of law to a person for the wrong that another has done to him. "Damage" as has been held in the case of Central India Chemicals (P.) Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 301 to connote a genus while "deterioration" and "destruction" connote two species. According to Chambers's Dictionary damage means hurt, injury, loss, the value of what is lost, the pecuniary reparation due for loss or injury sustained by one person through the fault or negligence of another and according to Oxford Dictionary such word would mean loss of value or efficiency inflicted harm, some claim adjudged as compensation. It is meant by the word "damages", pecuniary satisfaction awarded by a judge, a jury in a Civil action for the wrong suffered by the plaintiff.

15. The admitted facts in the instant case are that some damages were caused to the premises in suit by the defendant appellant for which on the definition of the word "damage" as mentioned hereinbefore, the plaintiff respondent was entitled to be recompensated and in fact for such recompense she brought the earlier suit and the said suit being decreed on the findings of damage, damages as caused were repaired and rectified after the decree and thereafter for the self same damage to the premises in suit, the later suit was filed. What then should be the effect of such repairs and whether after such repairs, the damage would be still continuing or subsisting, for which the later suit could be filed? The answer to the question would in fact decide the question of maintainability of the appeal and thereby the appeal itself, because if the subsequent suit itself is not maintainable then the present appeal will have to be allowed after setting aside the judgments and decrees of the learned Courts below and otherwise they will have to be affirmed and thus to dismiss this appeal, as there is no other point involved in the appeal, which can be gone into or considered in second appeal because of the restricted nature and power of interference by this Court in this jurisdiction and the more so when such findings are concluded by findings of fact arrived at on due consideration of the evidence on record. There is no denying the fact that on the repairs as done, although after the decree in the earlier suit, the nature and character of the damages as claimed or mentioned in the later suit could not be existing in respect of the premises in suit and as such the basis of the suit in the subsequent suit could not in any event be claimed to be subsisting and in fact it cannot in any way be claimed or considered that there were damages in terms of the definition of the word 'damage' as mentioned hereinbefore. The object of Rules 1 and 2 of Order 2 is to prevent multiplicity of suits. The Rule in Order 2, Rule 2 is founded on the principle that a person shall not be vexed twice for one and the same cause. The term of Order 2, Rule 2 requires only that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and not that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff may have against the defendant and if the cause of action in the subsequent suit is not barred. The provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act do not create, as found by the learned appellate Court, any new cause of action for the landlord and grounds of ejectment remain as they are under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. Thus causing damages to the suit property was certainly a good ground for ejectment under the provisions of the Premises Tenancy Act but since such damages were admittedly repaired duly, the same could not be a ground for ejectment in the subsequent suit because at that time damages as alleged were not subsisting. A suit for ejectment can only be brought on subsisting cause of action viz., damage to the premises in the instant case. The instant suit, being founded or based upon the same damages which were in issue in the earlier one, would not be maintainable and that too when the claim in question was made on a cause of action not quite distinct or practically and in effect the same in the earlier suit and all the more so when the breach alleged or complained of is the same. The findings of the learned Courts below on the question of the notice require no interference and they are proper and as such affirmed.

16. In view of the above and applying the tests as laid down in the cases as cited, this appeal should succeed and the same is thus allowed. The judgments and decrees of the Courts below are set aside. There will however be no order for costs.

Appeal allowed.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND
H. N. SEN, JJ.

Nirmala Bala Sen, Petitioner v. Jatindra Nath Sen, Opposite Party.

C. R. No. 2848 of 1973, D/- 22-12-1976.

(A) Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 12 (2) — Notice of award — Persons not present 'personally or by their representatives'.

Steps were taken on behalf of the petitioner to produce the relevant documents before the Collector prior to making of the Award in support of her claim.

Held such appearance cannot be accepted as appearance at the time the Collector made his award, for an award is in the nature of an offer for acceptance by persons interested and their personal presence or presence through representative at the time of making the award is essential for acceptance or otherwise of the offer contained in the award. The petitioner was therefore entitled to notice under Section 12 (2). (Para 3)

(B) Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 45 (2) and (3) — Service of notice — When can be made on person other than one mentioned in notice.

Under sub-section (2) of Section 45 it is always desirable whenever practicable that the service of the notice shall be made on the person named therein. Sub-section (3) provides that if such person cannot be found service may be made on any adult member residing with him. This provision, does not imply that in the event of a casual absence of the person interested, the notice is to be served on any other adult member of the family. The use of the word 'cannot' in sub-section (3) is of significance and it amounts to habitual absence of the person interested at the recorded address and not to a casual absence of such person.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule is directed against an order of the Additional Land Acquisition Officer dated 28/30-7-1973 whereby the application for reference filed by the petitioner under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act in L. A. Case No. 3 of 1972-73 was held to be time barred. It appears that in the above land acquisition case an Award was passed in respect of acquisition of various plots of land. The Award, as it appears from the record, contained provisions for payment to more than 900 persons interested and specific amounts were mentioned as payable to such persons. In the application for reference which was filed on 6-12-1972 it was stated that there has been joint Award in favour of the petitioner with other persons in respect of certain plots even though the said persons were not entitled to any amount as they had no right, title or interest in the lands acquired. Schedule of the lands was given in respect of which the Award in the above case was challenged. The petitioner moved against these orders rejecting her application for reference and obtained the instant Rule with a blanket injunction restraining the Land Acquisition Officer from making payment of money to the opposite parties till the disposal of the Rule.

2. The point for consideration is whether the impugned order holding that the application for reference was barred by limitation, is sustainable in law. Section 12 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act is as follows:—

The Collector shall give immediate notice of his award to such of the persons interested as are not present personally or by their representatives when the award is made.

Section 18 (1) provides that any person who has not accepted the award may, by written application to the Collector require that the matter be referred by the Collector for the determination of the Court and the objection which can be raised is inter alia about the person to whom the amount is payable or the apportionment of the compensation amongst the persons interested.

Sub-section (2) is as follows:—

"The application shall state the grounds on which the objection to the award is taken:

Provided that every such application shall be made,—

(a) if the person making the application was represented before the Collector at the time when he made his award within six weeks from the date of the Collector's award;

(b) in other cases, within six weeks from the receipt of the notice from the Collector under Section 12, sub-sec. (2), or within six months from the date of the Collector's Award, whichever period shall first expire."

Section 45 provides the mode of service in the following manner:

(1) Service of any notice under this Act shall be made by delivering or tendering a copy thereof signed, in the case of a notice under Section 4, by the officer therein mentioned, and, in the case of any other notice by or by order of the Collector or the Judge.

(2) Whenever it may be practicable, the service of the notice shall be made on the person therein named.

(3) When such person cannot be found the service may be made on any adult male member of his family residing with him; and if no such adult male member can be found, the notice may be served by fixing the copy on the outer door of the house in which the person therein named ordinarily dwells or carries on business, or by fixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous place in the office of the officer aforesaid or of the Collector or in the Court house and also some conspicuous part of the land to be acquired.

It may be noted that the last portion of the sub-section (3) is analogous to the provisions of Order 5, Rule 20 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code.

3. In this case, there is no dispute that the petitioner was not present at the time when the Award was made. Of course, it appears from the record that steps were taken on her behalf to produce the relevant documents before the Collector prior to making of the Award in support of her claim. But such appearance cannot be accepted as appearance at the time the Collector made his award, for an award is in the nature of an offer for acceptance by persons interested and their personal presence or presence through representative at the time of making the award is essential for acceptance or otherwise of the offer contained in the award. There is accordingly no dispute that the petitioner was entitled to a notice under Section 12 (2) of the Act and in fact such notice was sought to be served on the petitioner.

4. The petitioner states that she did not receive any notice under Section 12 (2) though it appears, it was served on her son. It will be seen under sub-section (2) of Section 45 that it is always desirable whenever practicable that the service of the notice shall be made on the person named therein. Sub-section (3) provides that if such person cannot be found service may be made on any adult member residing with him. This provision, it appears to us, does not imply that in the event of a casual absence of the person interested, the notice is to be served on any other adult member of the family. The use of the word 'cannot' in sub-section (3) is of significance and it amounts in our opinion to habitual absence of the person interested at the recorded address and not to a casual absence of such person. In the facts and circumstances of the case it would appear that the notice was served on the very first attempt on the son of the petitioner and this service cannot be considered to be a proper service of the notice under Section 12 (2) of the Act in the context of the discussion indicated above. We accordingly hold that in this circumstance, the question of limitation of the application under Section 18 does not arise and accordingly the Additional Land Acquisition Officer committed error in exercise of jurisdiction in holding that the application for reference was time barred. We therefore set aside the impugned order and hold that the application under Section 18 was not time barred. We further direct that this application will not be entertained and considered in accordance with law. It however appears that the application under Section 18 suffers from lack of material particulars. The petitioner will furnish the number of items in the award in respect of which reference is sought to be made together with the names of the persons concerned against whom the relief is claimed. Such supplementary statement will be filed by the petitioner within a month from the date of arrival of the records at the office of the L. A. Collector and in default, the application as originally filed will be dealt with and disposed of by the authority concerned in accordance with law.

5. The Rule is accordingly made absolute. There will be no order as to costs.

Re: Application dated 9-9-1975.

6. Some of the opposite parties have filed an application on 9-9-1975 asking for release and payment of the amount of compensation to them which was restrained by the interim order issued on 14-8-1973. It is stated by the petitioners to this petition that in respect of the award made in their favour, the petitioner in the Rule was not in any way connected nor there was any joint award with her. In this state of affairs there is no reason why the interim order in respect of the petitioners of this petition should be allowed to stand. We accordingly modify the interim order confining it to the persons with whom the petitioner was given a joint award in L. A. Case No. 3 of 1972-73. In respect of others the interim order will stand vacated. The application is thus disposed of. There will be no order as to costs.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Rule made absolute.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND

H. N. SEN, JJ.

Sm. Safura Bibi, Petitioner v. Ram Prasad Saw and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 2984 of 1975, D/- 1-12-1976.

Partition Act (1893), Section 4 — Right of pre-emption — Who can claim — One share-holder making application under Section 4 to purchase share of stranger transferee but losing status as share-holder before passing of order of sale — He loses benefit of his application — The benefit is not available even after such status is re-acquired by him.

When a stranger purchaser sues for partition, an application under Section 4 can be made by any member of the family being a co-sharer undertaking to buy the share of the transferee. On such application, a valuation of such share is to be made in such manner as the Court thinks fit and, thereafter, the sale of such share to "such shareholder" is to be directed by the Court and the Court may give all other necessary and proper directions. Thus the share-holder who applies for pre-emption under Section 4 of the Partition Act must continue and retain his status as such shareholder when the order for sale to him is directed by the Court and the sale is completed accordingly. Therefore, if there is any change in the status of such shareholder by any intervening act whereby the interest of such shareholder in the property is lost, subsequent acquisition of such interest by him again will not make the same shareholder reacquire his status as was his at the time when he made the application under Section 4. And if there is such cessation of the interest of the shareholder in the property within the said period leading to a change of the status of the shareholder by reason of any intervening factor, such shareholder will not retain the same capacity he had by reason of such transfer and, as such, will not be entitled to the benefit under Section 4 (1) of the Act. AIR 1950 Cal 111, Dist.

(Para 4)

Provisions of Section 4 are clear and it could not be contended that the provisions should be construed liberally so as not to destroy the integrity of the family dwelling house.

Shyma Prasanna Roy Choudhury, for Petitioner; Sushil Kumar Biswas, for Respondents.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule was obtained against Order No. 170 dated 9th July, 1975 in a Partition Suit whereby the application of the plaintiff was allowed. The effect of the order is that the defendant No. 2's application under Section 4 of the Partition Act which was earlier allowed stood disallowed in view of some subsequent events. The facts, in short, are as follows:—

On 5th March, 1953 the Partition Suit was filed by the plaintiff who, admittedly, acquired a share of the dwelling house of the defendants. In course of the proceedings, the defendant No. 2 filed an application on 30-4-1957 under Section 4 of the Partition Act, 1893 for purchase of the share of the plaintiff who was, admittedly, a stranger purchaser. This application was allowed on 17-5-1957 when the preliminary decree was also passed. The preliminary decree contained direction on the Commissioner to make a valuation of the plaintiff's share which was determined at two annas six gondas two karas and two krantis and the Court also recorded further directions to the effect that if the amount be paid within 30 days by the defendant No. 2, the plaintiff's interests would vest in her and the plaintiff would execute a kobala in respect of the said share in her favour and the plaintiff's suit for partition would stand dismissed. It appears that on 18-11-1960 the defendant No. 2 transferred her share in favour of her nephew Sheikh Sajahan by a registered Heba-bil-ewaj and, subsequently, Sheikh Sajahan again transferred the said share to the defendant No. 2 by a registered Haba-bil-Ewaj on 22-4-1965. The plaintiff, in the context of the aforesaid facts, made an application for effecting a final decree for partition by metes and bounds and also for a direction that no further steps should be taken for determination of the value of the plaintiff's share as directed earlier by the Court on the defendant No. 2's application under Section 4. This application was allowed. The learned Judge held that there was no necessity for proceeding further regarding the determination of the valuation of the plaintiff's share as the defendant No. 2 had lost her right of pre-emption by virtue of the transfer dated 18-11-1960. The present Rule is against this order.

2. Mr. S. P. Roychowdhury, learned Advocate appearing for defendant No. 2 who is the petitioner before us, contended that it was not necessary for the Court to look into the intervening facts because the defendant No. 2 subsequently acquired the interests transferred by her earlier in full. It was further contended by Mr. Roychowdhury that as soon as the defendant No. 2 re-acquired her share, her right of pre-emption revived and the Court should proceed, as directed already, on basis of her application under Section 4. Mr. Roychowdhury also contended that provisions of the Partition Act should be construed liberally so as not to destroy the integrity of the family dwelling house, as was held by several decisions cited by him. In any event, Mr. Roychowdhury contended that his client still has the right to file an application under Section 4 of the Partition Act and to prevent multiplicity of the Court proceedings, the Court should not relegate the defendant No. 2 to further proceedings under Section 4 of the Act. These contentions are disputed by Mr. Biswas, learned Advocate appearing for the substituted plaintiffs.

3. Strong reliance has been placed on the decision in the case of Boto Krishna Ghosh v. Akshoy Kumar Ghosh, reported in 54 Cal WN 660 = (AIR 1950 Cal 111) where it was held that there is nothing in Section 4 of the Partition Act which disqualifies a member who, having previously alienated its share, has re-acquired it and is owning it at the time he makes his claim under Section 4. The qualification of the applicant, it was held, is to be judged with reference to his position at the date of the application. In the case before us, it would appear that the transfer which has resulted in the impugned order was made after the application under Section 4 of the Partition Act was filed. Section 4 of the Partition Act is on the following terms:

"Partition suit by transferee of share in dwelling-house.— (1) Where a share of a dwelling-house belonging to an undivided family has been transferred to a person who is not a member of such family and such transferee sues for partition the Court shall, if any member of the family being a shareholder shall undertake to buy the share of such transferee, make a valuation of such share in such manner as it thinks fit and direct the sale of such share to such shareholder and may give all necessary and proper directions in that behalf."

4. On a plain reading of this section, it appears to us that when a stranger purchaser sues for partition, an application under Section 4 can be made by any member of the family being a co-sharer undertaking to buy the share of the transferee. On such application, a valuation of such share is to be made in such manner as the Court thinks fit and, thereafter, the sale of such share to "such shareholder" is to be directed by the Court and the Court may give all other necessary and proper directions. Thus the shareholder who applies for pre-emption under Section 4 of the Partition Act must continue and retain his status as such shareholder when the order for sale to him is directed by the Court and the sale is completed accordingly. In view of this position if there is any change in the status of such shareholder by any intervening act whereby the interest of such shareholder in the property is lost, subsequent acquisition of such interest by him again will not make the same shareholder re-acquire his status as was his at the time when he made the application under Section 4. Accordingly, it appears that, if there is such cessation of the interest of the shareholder in the property within the said period leading to a change of the status of the shareholder by reason of any intervening factor, such shareholder will not retain the same capacity he had by reason of such transfer and, as such, will not be entitled to the benefit under Section 4 (1) of the Act. This aspect of the question was not required to be considered and accordingly not considered in the decision cited above. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the defendant No. 2 by reason of intermediate transfer made by her, notwithstanding subsequent acquisition of such interest by her by a subsequent deed before the final order, lost the benefit which the Court gave her by allowing her application under Section 4 of the Partition Act.

5. In view of the express and clear provisions of the section, as stated hereinbefore, there is no scope to give any liberal interpretation to the section, as contended by Mr. Roychowdhury. The status of the shareholder is required to be the same in the proceedings throughout till the final decree and directions are made and the sale is effected and, if that status is lost by a shareholder by reason of any intervening factor, such benefit cannot be granted to the applicant under Section 4 as grant of such benefit would cause a departure and violation of the provisions of Section 4 (1). There are also authorities which advocate strict interpretation of Section 4.

6. Mr. Roychowdhury contended that, since his client is still entitled to make an application under Section 4 by virtue of her acquisition of the share in the property, the Court should not relegate her to a further proceedings under Section 4 once again. If it is still open to Mr. Roychowdhury's client to apply under Section 4 and if she is so advised, such application if made will be considered on merits. But it is not possible for us at this stage to allow her to reap the benefit of the application under Section 4 which in view of the subsequent event disentitles her to get the benefit on her application filed on 30-4-1957.

7. For all these reasons, we are of the opinion that the impugned order has to be sustained. The Rule, accordingly, fails and is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

8. We make it clear, however, that we are expressing no opinion on the merits of the case of parties in the proceedings, particularly, in respect of any fresh application under Section 4, if at all filed by the petitioner.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

LT/AU/E571/76/PKK/WNG

Though under the law the decree for possession against the lessee is binding on the sub-lessee, the sub-lessee is entitled to take steps to resist the decree on the grounds as may be available to him. This right does not mean or imply that the sub-lessee is entitled on his own to be added as a party in the eviction suit against the lessee in his own right when he is not made a party and on his case he has an independent right in respect of his tenancy and is thus not bound by any decree as may be obtained by landlord in the eviction suit against the lessee or when the decree is obtained in fraud of the sub-lessee. (Para 11)

Even so if the landlord in such case elects to sue the lessee and according to his case in the plaint sub-lessees and others in illegal possession of the property through him, such sub-lessees and others may defend their tenancy claiming independent title or statutory protection. But in a suit for eviction of the lessee the alleged sub-lessee who is not made a party, is not entitled to be impleaded in such suit on his own to assert his alleged independent right or statutory protection as a necessary party. S. K. By the impugned order the petitioner's petition under Order 1, Rule 10 of C. P. Code was dismissed. The case in plaint is as follows:—

2. The suit premises being flat No. 3 of 1st floor rear side of 184, Lenin Sarani, Calcutta hereinafter referred to as the said premises was taken on lease by Chatter Singh Dugar from Ajoy Krishna Daw on the basis of a registered lease-deed dated 22nd June, 1963 for a period of 22 years commencing from July 1, 1963 and expiring on June 30, 1985.

Chattur Singh died leaving the opposite party No. 3 as his heir and legal representative. Ajoy Krishna also died leaving a will whereby the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 were appointed Executors and the probate of the said will was granted in their favour. It was stated that Chattur Singh and/or his heir defaulted in payment of rent and were in heavy arrears in the sum of Rs. 30,600/- as per account set out. It was further stated that under the lease aforesaid, lessee was not to assign, sub-let or part with possession of the premises or part thereof without the written consent of the lessor. In violation of the said terms, the opposite party No. 3 sub-let, assigned or transferred possession of the premises to various companies and firms named including the petitioner without the consent of the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 or their predecessor-in-interest. The notice was duly given upon the said opposite party forfeiting the lease and indicating the intention of the lessors to enter the said premises. The said opposite party failed to vacate the premises as required. The present suit was accordingly instituted by the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 against the opposite party No. 3 for recovery of possession of the suit premises.

3. It appears that an application was filed in the said suit by the petitioner before us stating that under the terms of the lease Chattur Singh was entitled to use the suit premises for office purposes and also to accommodate therein company or firm in which he himself or his associates were interested without in any way affecting the terms of the said lease. It was further stated that the petitioner was accommodated on the basis of the right referred to above and Chattur Singh was interested in the petitioner firm as his relative was a partner therein. Further, after the death of Chattur Singh the petitioner paid all amount of rent on behalf of his heir and rent upto September 1970 was cleared. Thereafter though the rent was tendered within the prescribed time the said opposite parties refused to accept the same from the petitioner. It was further stated that the defendant opposite party No. 3 did not enter appearance in the suit and was acting in collusion with the plaintiffs to create trouble on account of family dispute. The suit was also fixed for ex parte hearing and in these circumstances the petitioner made an application for being added as party defendant to the suit and to contest the same by filing a written statement.

4. This petition was rejected by the impugned order as according to the learned Judge the petitioner was not at all necessary party in a suit simpliciter for eviction and he could file a separate suit for appropriate relief. The rule is against this order.

5. Mr. Sakti Nath Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing for the petitioner sub-lessee contended that the petitioner was a necessary party in the suit and accordingly the trial Court failed to exercise jurisdiction in declining him to be added as a party in the suit. In support, he referred to the decision in South Asia Industries Pvt. Ltd. v. Sarup Singh, AIR 1966 SC 346. In this case it appears that the respondent's predecessor leased the premises to Allen Berry & Co. (Calcutta) Ltd., which company transferred the lease to the appellant. On the ground that the transfer was made without the consent of the landlord, the respondent made an application under S. 14 (1) (b) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958 to the Controller against the tenant company as also the appellant for an order for recovery of possession of the premises on the ground that the transfer of lease was without the consent of the landlord. In course of proceedings, the tenant company went into liquidation and was subsequently dissolved and its name was struck off from the proceedings. The Controller thereafter made an order in favour of the landlord for recovery of possession of the premises and this order was affirmed ultimately by the High Court. On appeal to the Supreme Court it was held by the majority judgment that the order for recovery of possession was not only confined to tenant but the order would be binding on all persons in actual possession of the premises in view of Section 25 of the Act. This section provided that the order for recovery of possession would be binding on all persons in occupation of the premises. Accordingly as the assignee was also bound by the order, it was observed by Sarkar J. (as he then was) that assignee should be a proper party in the proceeding to show that there was such requisite consent to assignment or sublease. It was further observed that the direct tenant may neglect or be incompetent in his defence or he may even collude with the landlord or he may just not bother. But if the assignee or sublessee was entitled to be heard to oppose eviction, it would be unnatural to say that he cannot be made party to the proceedings and in view of Section 25 the eviction order would be binding on him and he would be liable to be condemned unheard. In the concurring judgment Bachawat, J. observed that the tenant and the assignee were proper parties to the proceeding for possession.

6. This decision was strongly relied on by Mr. Mukherjee in support of the contention that the petitioner as sublessee was entitled to be made party in the proceedings, particularly when it was alleged that the tenant was colluding with the landlord in suffering a decree by not contesting the suit at all.

7. This decision, in our opinion does not lay down the broad proposition that in all actions for recovery of possession between the landlord and the lessee or the tenant, the sub-lessee or the subtenant are necessary parties therein. The proposition laid down therein was in the context of the provision of the Delhi Rent Act 1958 and the sub-lessee's case that he was not a proper party in the proceeding in absence of the tenant was not accepted while the landlord impleaded him as an illegal assignee.

8. In Sailendra Nath Bhattacharjee v. Bijan Lal Chakravarty, 49 Cal WN 133 = (AIR 1945 Cal 283) B. K. Mukherjee J. (as he then was) speaking for the Division Bench considered the position of law in our country with reference to the law prevailing in England. In English law, it was observed, the subtenant has no right as his interest is annulled with that of the lessor, but if he claims an independent interest in the property against the landlord, he has a right to be added as a party to the suit and defend it. In regard to the law in our country it was observed—

"If the interest of the subordinate holder is of such a character that it is entirely dependent on that of the superior holder, and automatically comes to an end as soon as the superior interest is extinguished, the subordinate holder would be a privy to the judgment obtained against the superior holder even though he was not a party to the action ... a sub-lessee would be bound by a decree for possession obtained by the lessor against the lessee, if the eviction is based upon a ground which determines the underlease also, unless he succeeds in showing that the judgment was vitiated by fraud or that the lessee collusively suffered the decree to be passed against him. If, however, the decree for possession proceeds on a ground which does not by itself annul the sub-lease, the decree would not be binding on the sub-lessee nor could the sub-lessee be evicted in execution of the decree if he had acquired a statutory right or protection, e.g. under the Bengal Tenancy Act which he could assert against the lessor. Within these limits we think a sub-lessee could be held to be bound by a decree obtained against his lessor and when he is so bound he can undoubtedly be ousted in execution of the decree obtained against his lessor under Order 21, Rule 35 of the Civil Procedure Code, though he was not made a party to the suit itself."

9. The position therefore appears to be as follows:—

(i) The decree for possession against the lessee would be binding on the sub-lessee when the interest of the sub-lessee is extinguished along with it i.e. to say the determination of the lessee's right necessarily extinguished the right of the sub-lessee; (ii) the above proposition will not apply if the interest of the sub-lessee is not annulled by the decree for possession against the lessee and the sub-lessee is entitled to his tenancy, independent of lessee or if the sub-lessee acquires the statutory right or protection which he could assert against the lessor; (iii) the sub-lessee will also be entitled to challenge the decree on the ground that it was obtained by fraud or collusion. Under Section 115 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the forfeiture of a lease in fraud of the under-lessee or, where relief against forfeiture is granted does not annul the sub-lease.

10. In such circumstances it will be open for the sub-lessee to challenge the decree for recovery of possession passed against the lessee in appropriate proceeding. It was so done in the said suit by the sub-lessee where his suit was for declaration of his tenancy right independent of the lessee and for permanent injunction restraining the landlord decree holder from taking khas possession thereof in execution of the decree against the lessee.

11. It thus appears to us that though under the law the decree for possession against the lessee is binding on the sub-lease created by him, the sub-lessee is entitled to take steps to resist the decree on the above grounds as may be available to him. This right does not mean or imply that the sub-lessee is entitled on his own to be added as a party in the eviction suit against the lessee in his own right when he is not made a party and on his case he has an independent right in respect of his tenancy and is thus not bound by any decree as may be obtained by the landlord in the eviction suit against the lessee or when the decree was obtained in fraud of the sub-lessee.

12. Mr. Mukherjee has drawn our attention to the decision in Bholanath v. Somendra Chandra, AIR 1971 Cal 425 in which it was held that in the suit for recovery of possession it is competent for the plaintiff to pray for relief against such persons as, according to him, may be in possession of the suit premises as illegal assignees, transferees or sub-lessees. In fact, under the various laws governing "premises" tenancies the sub-tenants who have been recognised as having a lawful right, are necessary parties in the eviction proceedings against the tenant. Under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 under provisions of sub-sections (2), (3) and (4) of Section 13, the sub-tenants mentioned therein are necessary parties in eviction proceedings against the tenants as otherwise the decree against the tenant will not be binding on them.

13. The lease we are concerned with in this proceeding is outside the ambit of the said Act. Even so if the landlord in such case elects to sue the lessee and according to his case in the plaint sub-lessees and others in illegal possession of the property through him, such sub-lessees and others may defend their tenancy claiming independent title or statutory protection. But in a suit for eviction of the lessee the alleged sub-lessee who is not made a party, in our opinion, as already indicated, is not entitled to be impleaded in such suit on his own to assert his alleged independent right or statutory protection as a necessary party. The sub-lessee in such case has his right to assert and defend his right or to challenge the decree as being in fraud of his rights all in other appropriate proceedings to be initiated by him.

14. The Rule accordingly fails and is discharged. There will be no order for costs in the circumstances.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

(A) Hindu Marriage Act (1955), Section 12 (1) (a) (as amended in 1976) — Impotency — Curability of impotency is not relevant consideration.

The question of curability of impotency is not a relevant consideration for the purpose of the decision under Section 12 (1) (a) as amended in 1976. If it is found that there was no consummation of marriage due to the impotency of the respondent the petitioner is entitled to a decree. Before the amendment, if a party to the marriage was not impotent at the time of the marriage but became impotent before the institution of the suit, the petitioner was not entitled to a decree. Alternatively if the respondent was impotent at the time of marriage but was not impotent at the institution of the suit, the decree must be refused. Now, however, the statute has placed emphasis equally on the consummation of the marriage and the impotency of the respondent. If there was no consummation due to the impotency of the respondent, the petitioner is entitled to a decree. Case law discussed.

(B) Hindu Marriage Act (1955), Section 12 (1) (a) — Impotency of wife — Consummation — What constitutes.

Sexual intercourse or consummation is sometimes referred to as vera copula.
Vera copula consists of erection and in-tromission, that is, of erection and penetration by the male of the woman. Full and complete penetration is an essential ingredient of ordinary and complete intercourse. The degree of sexual satisfaction obtained by the parties is irrelevant. Thus where the respondent wife was suffering from the disease of vaginismus and the coitus or complete penetration was not possible, held, the petitioner was entitled to a decree.

BANERJEE, J.:— This appeal arises out of an application made under Section 12 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 at the instance of the husband against the wife for annulment of the marriage celebrated on 13th May, 1973. The application was filed on 13th December, 1973. The husband in his petition stated that they were married according to the Hindu rites on 13th May, 1973. On 14th May, 1973 the couple returned to the residence of the petitioner at 7, Haridas Daw Road, P. S. Behala. On the night of 15th May, 1973 which was the Fulsajja night, the petitioner, it is alleged, desired and demanded to consummate the marriage but the respondent refused to agree and in fact she made terrible opposition amounting to invincible repugnance to the act of consummation and the petitioner found her to be mentally depressed which deterred the petitioner from making further progress for consummation of marriage. On May 20, 1973 the couple went back to the quarters of Ashis Bhow-mick, brother of the wife, where the marriage was celebrated and stayed there for the night. It is alleged that the petitioner husband made an attempt for consummation of marriage at Garia house but the consummation could not be made due to the opposition of the wife respondent.
On or about 4th June, 1973 the respondent went to live at Poddar Park residence from her brother's quarter and on 27th June, 1973 the wife returned to the residence of the petitioner at Behala. Because of the repeated refusals by the respondent to consummate the marriage, the petitioner persuaded the respondent to be examined by a doctor and accordingly with her consent the respondent in or about the first week of August, 1973 was examined by a Gynaecologist. The doctor after due examination found the respondent to be suffering from malformation of her organ and that in her present condition she was unable to allow the consummation of the marriage and penetration is impossible. It is alleged by the husband that during short stay of the respondent at the petitioner's residence or the short stay of the couple at the quarter of Ashis Bhowmick the petitioner made repeated attempts for consummation of the marriage but there could not be any conjunction of the body. It is alleged that the respondent suffers from low physical infirmity and/or abnormality. It is stated that the petitioner possesses sound normal health of young person with the ability to consummate marriage. It is further stated that the respondent is impotent and her mental and physical condition makes consummation of the marriage a practical impossibility and such condition existed at the time of marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceeding. Due to the physical malformation of her female organ the wife is physically unable to have sexual intercourse. She is also mentally so high-strung that it is impossible for the petitioner to have normal sexual intercourse with the respondent. It is further stated that the respondent is physically, mentally and psychologically impotent of the type known as quoad hunc or quoad hanc or in other words the respondent is at least impotent to the petitioner and the marriage cannot be consummated. On these allegations, the petitioner-husband prayed for annulment of the marriage. On 9th February, 1974 the wife respondent filed written statement to the allegation made in the petition. It is alleged that it was the petitioner who on Fulsajja night suggested that he would proceed cautiously to consummate the marriage and asked the respondent to be ready for the coitus gradually. The respondent did not at all oppose the desire of the petitioner for consummation or demonstrate any repugnance in the said act. It is alleged that there was a consummation of the marriage on 20th May, 1973 at the quarter of the respondent's brother but the penetration was slightly painful. It is stated that both the petitioner and the respondent felt and understood that it was the usual experience of a virgin girl who is married more than a decade after attaining puberty. Both of them agreed at that time that the trouble would be over in course of time and naturally. The respondent further stated that she never demonstrated any reluctance for cohabitation. On the contrary, it is alleged, on a few occasions the petitioner enjoyed the respondent but the respondent felt considerable pain during coitus. It is alleged that the respondent believed that the petitioner did not allow time for preparation in respondent's body and the pain she had experienced was mainly due to rashness and want of reciprocal sympathy from the husband. It is further stated that having regard to the wishes of the petitioner the respondent agreed to consult a Gynaecologist and she was taken to Dr. D. L. Poddar who suggested a minor operation. It is stated by the Doctor that the difficulty could be over without the minor operation but that would require some time and co-operation amongst the spouses. The respondent denied any malformation of female organ or that penetration was impossible. It is stated that as Dr. Poddar suggested the minor operation, the respondent was willing to have the same but the petitioner and his relatives did not agree to bear the expenses whereupon the elder brother of the respondent undertook to pay the costs but the petitioner refused to co-operate. The respondent registered herself as a patient of E. E. D. F. Health Centre in or about June 1973 in order to seek assistance or advice in the matter. The attending Gynaecologist however was of the firm view that no operation was necessary and/or advisable and that the little difficulty that might have been experienced would be over by sympathetic co-operation of the husband. It is alleged that on 17-8-1973 the doctor of E. E. D. F. Health Centre wanted to talk with the petitioner but he avoided meeting the doctor. It is alleged that the respondent possesses normal health and the marriage between the parties was consummated. The allegations of mental incapability or repugnance to sexual intercourse when approached by the husband were denied by the respondent. It is alleged that the husband never enjoyed love plays. To the husband sex acts meant absolutely casual satisfaction, that is, mere physical action and nothing more. It is alleged that the elder sister-in-law of the petitioner was the first lady of the family and the wife found out that she has no claim on her husband's income. It is alleged that all the marriage gifts were made over to the elder sister-in-law. It is stated that it is really shocking to find that such thing could happen. The respondent suggested that she should be given some money to defray her personal expenses, the petitioner directed her to seek for the money from her sister-in-law. It is further stated that the petitioner husband was habituated in drinking and suffered from guilty conscience.

2. The petitioner was himself examined and the sister-in-law was also examined and two friends to whom the petitioner talked about the non-consummation of the marriage just after the marriage were also examined. On behalf of the respondent, two doctors, whom the respondent consulted, were examined and the respondent herself deposed. It appears from the evidence of the doctors that the respondent is suffering from painful "vaginismus" or "narrow vaginal introitus". It also appears from the evidence of the doctor that the respondent is not suffering or was not suffering from any physical defect or malformation which is of permanent nature. The court below held that the respondent was not physically impotent as the impotency is not of permanent nature and is curable. Regarding the consummation of marriage the learned Judge held that there was consummation of marriage but the consummation was painful for her as the husband was hasty in his act. From the evidence it appears that though the respondent wanted to have the operation as suggested by the doctor, the petitioner and the members of his family were not agreeable. It appears that even after the case was filed, the respondent got herself operated as suggested by the doctor. It is held by the learned Judge that she was eager to make the marriage a success. The Court believed the respondent that she was not repugnant to the consummation with the petitioner and therefore did not accept the evidence of the husband that the wife was repugnant to the consummation of the marriage.

3. At the time of hearing of the case, we asked the husband and the wife whether they can reconcile between themselves even now. It must be stated that the husband was not agreeable and the wife wanted to live with the husband.

4. The short point for consideration, therefore, before us in this case, is whether there was consummation of marriage and if it is not consummated whether it is due to impotency of the wife.

5. While the matter was pending in this Court, the Marriage Law of 1976 was enacted. The Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act of 1976 amended S. 12 (1) (a) of the Hindu Marriage Act by S. 6 of Act 68 of 1976. Section 12 (1) (a) was amended by S. 6 (1) (a) of the new Act and for Cl. (a) the following clause was substituted.

"(a) that the marriage has not been consummated owing to the impotency of the respondent."

Before the amendment the words were as follows:—

"12 (1) (a). that the Respondent was impotent at the time of marriage and continued to be so until the institution of proceeding."

6. Mr. M. N. Ghose followed by Mr. Sakti Nath Mukherjee on behalf of the appellant and Mr. Sadhan Gupta followed by Mrs. Gupta on behalf of the respondent conceded that the change of law has not in any way changed the scope of the appeal and both of them agreed that no further opportunity need be given for the disposal of the case as envisaged in S. 39 of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976.

7. Mr. Mukherjee on behalf of the appellant contended that there was no consummation of marriage and that on the date of filing the application for divorce the respondent was impotent and therefore the petitioner is entitled to a decree for nullity of the marriage being voidable. It is nobody's case that there was consummation after the filing of the suit. But it is argued by Mr. Mukherjee that the Court below was wholly wrong in disbelieving the evidence of the petitioner husband for the alleged fact that even after the filing of the suit the respondent underwent the operation and corrected her defect in the female organism and after correction she can no longer be impotent or on the other hand the impotency must be of a permanent nature so that the husband can get a decree. It is argued by Mr. Mukherjee that under the section it is not stated that only in case of permanent impotency or incurable impotency, the husband can get a decree. It is argued by Mr. Mukherjee that the question of impotency is relevant only during the period of marriage and filing of the suit for dissolution.

8. Mr. Sadhan Gupta on the other hand contended that there was no doubt that the respondent was suffering from the disease and there was a defect. In the words of Mr. Gupta "undoubtedly there was a defect in the respondent but the defect was curable and in fact was cured though after the suit was filed". Therefore it is argued by Mr. Gupta that the learned Judge is right in his finding and he held that there was no repugnancy to the act of consummation on the part of the respondent.

9. In so far as the consummation is concerned only two direct evidences are available, as usual, these are of the husband and of the wife. The husband stated that he tried to consummate on the date of Fulsajiya but it could not be consummated due to the violent resistance by the wife. It is further stated that the respondent did not agree to consummate the marriage. Between 15th May, 1973 and 20th May, 1973 the husband made several attempts to consummate the marriage but failed as the respondent did not co-operate. Even on 20th May, 1973 when the husband and the wife stayed at Garia house of the brother of the wife, the attempted consummation failed. He stated that there was no penetration at all in view of the respondent's malformation of the female organ though the husband tried for consummation. As against this, the wife stated in her evidence that there was consummation for 2 or 3 days out of 8 days of attempted coitus. It is admitted by the respondent wife that the intercourse for those 2 or 3 days was painful. It is stated that the respondent wife consulted a doctor in E. E. D. F. Health Centre at the insistence of the husband. It is further stated that the husband and the sister-in-law of the husband took her to Dr. D. L. Poddar on 8th August, 1973 and it is stated that none of the doctors detected any organic defect in the respondent. Dr. D. L. Poddar suggested to use a jelly; but the husband did not use it. She denied that the respondent was impotent. It is stated that the husband did not make any approach to consummate the marriage. She stated that there was consummation of marriage on 20th May, 1973 in normal course but the respondent felt some pain and there was a full penetration by the husband. It is, however, admitted by the respondent that the coitus was painful and that the wife had to see the doctor on 9th June for the purpose as there was pain. The wife contradicted herself in cross-examination when she said that she had sex acts for 7 or 8 days between 8th July, 1973 and 15th August, 1973. It appears from the examination-in-chief that out of 15 days there were attempts to have coitus for 8/9 days and the marriage was consummated for 2/3 days only but the intercourse was painful.

10. We are, therefore, to see whether the wife is impotent and whether coitus is possible or not. According to the Rayden on Divorce, Eleventh Edition, page 156, "sexual intercourse or consummation is sometimes referred to as vera coupla". Vera coupla consists of erection and intromissio, that is, of erection and penetration by the male of the woman. Full and complete penetration is an essential ingredient of ordinary and complete intercourse. The degree of sexual satisfaction obtained by the parties is irrelevant. In the case reported in AIR 1970 SC 137, (Digvijay Singh v. Pratap Kumari) it has been stated by the Supreme Court as follows:—

"A party is impotent if his or her mental or physical condition makes consummation of the marriage a practical impossibility. The condition must be one, according to the statute, which existed at the time of the marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceedings. In order to entitle the appellant to obtain a decree of nullity, as prayed for by him, he will have to establish that his wife, the respondent, was impotent at the time of the marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceedings."

For the purpose of consideration whether the consummation of marriage was a practical impossibility due to the incapacity of the wife being impotent, we are to consider the medical evidence adduced in this case. On behalf of the respondent two doctors were examined, D. Ws. 1 and 2 and P. W. 1 the other doctor who deposed, was appointed by the Court on an application being made by the petitioner husband for the medical examination of the wife. The Court directed the parties to suggest the name of the doctors. The petitioner gave 3 particular names of Gynaecologists and further prayed that any Presidency Surgeon to be appointed by the Court might examine the respondent. The respondent also suggested three names who had examined the respondent before. The learned Judge by his order appointed P. W. 1 as a doctor to examine the respondent. The respondent was examined by P. W. 1 on 23rd September, 1974. The doctor of E. E. D. F. Hospital examined the respondent on 9th June, 1975. The suit was instituted on 13th December, 1973. The doctors D. Ws. 1 and 2 examined the respondent wife on 6th March, 1974 and 7th June, 1974. One of these doctors examined the respondent on 9th June, 1973.

11. D. W. 1, stated that he examined the respondent at the Health Centre on 6th and 7th March, 1974 and stated that an operation named dilatation of introitus under general anesthesia was performed by him on 7th March, 1974. The operation was advised by a senior doctor being D. W. 2. It is further stated that after operation there should not be any mechanical defect in the marital life. He however, did not know whether the patient is psychologically impotent even after the operation.

12. From the evidence of D. W. 1 it is clear that when he first examined the respondent wife she was suffering from some ailment and was advised an operation named "dilatation of introitus". D. W. 2, however, did not name any disease. He stated that after the operation the vaginal passage becomes normal in size and shape and that post operation examination revealed that the passage was clear and normal and there should not be any relapse to narrow introitus. It appears further that the respondent wife was the patient for the ailment in the private parts on 28-2-1974. D. W. 2, another doctor of repute did not say that the respondent has any malformation of female organ on clinical examination. It is stated that the patient respondent wife complained of 'dyspareunia' which means painful intercourse. He further stated that there was some functional spasm during the intercourse and the term "vaginismus means spasm of the vagina". He stated that the respondent is capable of normal intercourse. P. W. 1, another doctor, who examined the respondent wife after he was appointed by the Court, was directed to give report. He examined the respondent on 23rd September, 1974. He stated in his report as follows:—

"On touching the vaginal introitus there was vaginismus and she adducted her thighs, the palpitation was painful. It did not permit admittance of two fingers. The right index finger can be introduced through the tough hymenal ring and there was painful vaginismus".

It appears that all the doctors were one in respect of the diagnosis of the illness of the respondent wife to be vaginismus. The doctor who examined the respondent wife and performed some operation of dilatation of vagina felt that she is physically capable of having normal marital life but they could not say whether they are psychologically so. The doctor (P. W. 1) who was appointed by the Court however examined the respondent wife long after the operation was performed on 6th March, 1974 was of the opinion that the respondent is still suffering from vaginismus and it is not possible according to him to have a normal marital life with the functional spasm of the vagina. The ratio of the evidence is according to us that the respondent was suffering from vaginismus and the intercourse was painful and even after the operation when the doctor appointed by the Court examined the respondent she was suffering from vaginismus and he reported that on touching the vaginal introitus there was vaginismus and the respondent wife adducted her thighs and the palpitation was painful. It must be stated that on 23rd September, 1974 the respondent wife was examined. The doctor appointed by the Court was asked to send the report in a closed cover which he did. The parties to the proceeding applied for inspection of the report of the doctor appointed by the Court and in presence of both the sides, the sealed cover was opened and both the sides had the opportunity to see the report. The doctor himself was examined as P. W. 1 on 11th March, 1975. On this very relevant portion of the report, namely, that there was no cross-examination on behalf of the respondent. It appears, therefore, that the report, in so far as the Court appointed doctor is concerned was not challenged when the doctor was in the box and deposed long after the report was made. The parties had opportunity of looking at the report. It must be stated that the Court appointed doctor examined the respondent about 9 months after the suit was filed and about 6 months after the alleged operation for dilatation of vagina was performed by D. W. 1.

13. We must therefore hold that the respondent wife was suffering from vaginismus even on 23-9-1974 after the operation for vaginal dilatation was performed in March, 1974. It appears further that when the respondent was first examined by Dr. Poddar on 8th August, 1973 he advised fenton operation as remedy of the disease from which the respondent was suffering but which was not performed at all.

14. Mr. Mukherjee contended that she was ill on the date of the marriage and at the time of filing of the present suit and there cannot be any consummation of marriage due to the impotency of the wife. It is no concern of the petitioner to see whether the impotency is curable or not in future.

15. Mr. Gupta however contended that unless the impotency is incurable the petitioner is not entitled to a decree. It is conceded by Mr. Mukherjee and Mr. Gupta that the change in law during the pendency of this case does not affect this application at all. Mr. Gupta however contended that if the impotency is curable the petitioner is not entitled to a decree for nullity.

16. From the evidence as hereinbefore made, the respondent must be held to be suffering from vaginismus. In Novak's Text Book of Gynaecology, at p. 663, it has been found that "dyspareunia, or painful coitus, may be due to the presence of an actual lesion or it may be of psychic origin. The latter variety is not infrequently a defence mechanism built up by the woman who for one reason or another finds coitus distasteful."

It has also been stated by the Author that "the sexual response is a complex phenomenon theoretically divisible into at least three components: psychogenic, anatomical, and hormonal. The importance of the first factor in the female is undisputed. The importance of the last two factors has been difficult to evaluate".

"Conditions in the pelvis which make coitus difficult or painful obviously call for correction. Certainly there is not justification for the superficial habit of those physicians who, without making a thorough survey of the individual woman's problem, merely give her a pat on the back or recommend dilatation of the vagina. Such treatment is quite sure to be unsuccessful".

In the present case, in view of the doctor's evidence it is quite clear that the dilatation of vagina performed in March 1974 did not correct the condition of the wife for successful "vera copula" even 6 months after the operation of dilatation of vagina, the disease of vaginismus was still there and if a wife is suffering from vaginismus, the coitus or complete penetration is not possible. It has been stated by the respondent that the coitus when attempted by the husband was painful and the husband categorically stated that there was no sexual intercourse between the parties due to the impotency of the wife.

17. Mr. Gupta however strenuously argued that there was no doubt that there was some defect in the respondent wife but the defect is curable and not incurable and the petitioner is not entitled to a decree. It will appear that the question of curability was considered by English Cases and it has been found that if the respondent is agreeable to cure the defect by operation that will not be a cause for granting the nullity of the marriage.

18. Mr. Gupta referred to (1947) 2 All ER 886 at p. 890 and (1954) 3 All ER 736 in support of his contention. It is true that all the cases referred to by Mr. Gupta make it clear that the impotency if curable even after the action has been taken and even after the action is pending if the wife agrees to go in for operation for curing the defect the decree may be refused; but in so far as the Hindu Marriage Act is concerned, in our opinion, the curability of the disease of impotency is of no consequence if there was no consummation of marriage owing to the impotency of the respondent. It appears that before the amendment by 1976 Act, the period of continuance of impotency was that the respondent must be impotent at the date of marriage and must continue to be so till the date of the institution of the proceeding. It has now been amended and the husband is entitled to a decree if the marriage has not been consummated due to the impotency of the respondent. In this case we are of the opinion that the marriage could not be consummated and the consummation was practically impossible due to the respondent's suffering unfortunately from vaginismus and vera copula is not possible. In the facts of the present case the full and complete penetration by the male of the female is an impossibility due to the respondent being suffering from vaginismus. During the time and long thereafter the respondent was suffering from the said disease and even by operation admittedly performed by D. W. 1 on 7th March, 1974 the disease could not be cured and it was so found to exist on 23rd September, 1974 when the Court appointed Doctor examined the respondent wife.

19. In our opinion the curability of impotency is not a consideration for the purpose of deciding the case whether the marriage is voidable under S. 12 (1) (a) of the Act under the amended or un-amended section. It will appear from S. 13 of the Act that when Legislature thought that the question of curability is to be one of consideration for the purpose of the decision whether the divorce should be granted they made provision to that effect in the Act. It has been specifically provided in S. 13 (iii) and (iv) that to get a divorce the respondent must be "of unsound mind for a continuous period of not less than 3 years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition or suffering from a virulent and incurable form of leprosy". In the present S. 12 (1) (a) curability is not mentioned at all. It is therefore clear that the question of curability of impotency is not a relevant consideration for the purpose of the decision under S. 12 (1) (a) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 as amended by the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976. It appears to us that if it is found that there was no consummation of marriage due to the impotency of the respondent the petitioner is entitled to a decree.

20. The case reported in AIR 1921 Cal 459, (Birendra Kumar v. Hemlata Biswas) is a case under S. 19 of the Indian Divorce Act, 1869. The said case, in our opinion, is clearly distinguishable. At p. 462 it has been made clear that due to the syphilis for which one of the parties was suffering, the capacity for sexual intercourse is not necessarily affected. It will be further found that in the said case the Division Bench of this Court considered the effect of S. 56 of the Contract Act in the matter of marriage contract. In the said case it has been stated in respect of the impotency vis-a-vis disease as follows:—

"The fact that one spouse is afflicted with syphilis does not necessarily make him or her impotent. Impotency is ordinarily understood to mean incapacity which admits of neither copulation nor procreation, capacity for sexual intercourse seeming to the matter chiefly regarded in the adjudged cases on the subject. Hence impotency has been taken to mean physical and incurable incapacity from entering into the marriage, that is incapacity to consummate the marriage". We have already held that in view of the different wording of the section and in view of the fact that the Legislature has used the word "incurable" repeatedly in S. 13 and did not use the word "incurable" in S. 12 (1) (a), in our opinion, curability of the disease making the respondent impotent does not fall for consideration of the Court if it is found that the marriage has not been consummated due to the respondent's impotency.

21. In the case reported in AIR 1943 Nag 185 (SB) on which Mr. Gupta relied, it has been held that if the marriage is consummated the decree for nullity cannot be granted and held that the impotency must be present at the time of the marriage and when the suit was filed. Admittedly in the present case, in our opinion, the respondent was suffering from vaginismus at the date of marriage and it continued at least till 23rd September, 1974 when the Court appointed doctor P. W. 1 examined her.

22. It appears to us from S. 12 (1) (a) of the Act, even before the amendment was concerned, that the impotency of the respondent must be between the date of marriage and the institution of the proceeding. It appears before the amendment that the condition for getting a decree was that the respondent must be impotent at the time of the marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceeding. If one of these conditions is absent, the decree cannot be passed. The English case, in so far as the curability of the impotency is concerned, cannot be applied in the present case as in our opinion the wording of S. 8 (1) (a) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950 or for that matter the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 are quite different to S. 12 (1) (a) of the Hindu Marriage Act.

23. Mr. Mukherjee relied upon a case reported in (1882) 7 PD 16 (L. v. L.) in support of his contention. In the said case the ceremony of the marriage was performed between the parties on 29th August, 1876, the man being then 27 and the woman 23 years of age. They slept together at her father's house for 3/4 nights but the marriage was not consummated as the woman told the husband that she was not fitted for it. In February, 1879 the woman was examined by a medical man who gave evidence that she was suffering from vaginismus, that there was a spasmodic affection of the parts which were extremely painful to touch and the connexion was then impossible, but that a cure might be effected with no great risk to life. The woman was informed of this, and was requested to submit to the operation, but refused. The woman having refused, the Court granted a decree nisi for nullity of the marriage on the ground of the ends of marriage have not been attained, and it is therefore desirable that the tie between the parties should be put an end to. In our opinion, in the present case, on the evidence, as it is, the wife was suffering from vaginismus and there was no consummation during the period because of the disease of the wife.

24. Mr. Mukherjee relied upon the case reported in (1956) 3 All ER 769 (M. v. M.) in support of his contention. In the said case the lady was also suffering from vaginismus and the decree was granted as the lady took no step for correction and as such the respondent was incapable of sexual intercourse.

25. Mr. Gupta however contended that the case supports the same, inasmuch as, though the respondent might be suffering from the disease she was always agreeable to have the disease corrected by operation. In fact she was operated and the respondent is not cured of the disease. In our opinion, the consideration of this Court is not that the disease is curable at a future date but whether for the impotency of the respondent, the marriage has not been consummated. If that is brought home, the Court is not to enquire whether the disease can be cured in future. It is for the Court to see whether the ends of the marriage have been attained or not when the action was initiated.

26. Mr. Gupta referred to the case reported in AIR 1968 Delhi 79 (S. v. R.) in support of his contention. In our opinion, this case has no application. In the case the Court below came to a finding that the petitioner husband was impotent at the time of the marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceeding and therefore they came within the mischief of the un-amended S. 12 (1) (a) of the Act.

27. The case reported in AIR 1957 Mad 243, (T. Rangaswami v. T. Arvindammal), in our opinion, does not carry Mr. Gupta's argument any further because in the said case it was found on fact that the impotency either organic or atonic impotency had been made out. In the said case the Bench relied upon the observation of Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950. In our opinion, this observation supports the case of the petitioner and not the respondent. In so far as the curability is concerned in the Hindu Marriage Act as amended, that is beyond the scope of scrutiny of the Court. The provision as amended is more simple than what was there before the amendment. Before the amendment, if a party to the marriage was not impotent at the time of the marriage but became impotent before the institution of the suit, the petitioner was not entitled to a decree. Alternatively if the respondent was impotent at the time of marriage but was not impotent at the institution of the suit, the decree must be refused. Now however the statute has placed emphasis equally on the consummation of the marriage and the impotency of the respondent. If there is no consummation due to the impotency of the respondent as in this case, the petitioner is entitled to a decree.

28. In an unreported case being F. A. No. 313 of 1972, Reba Banerjee v. S. Banerjee decided by Mr. Justice Dutt and Mr. Justice Sharma on 14th July, 1976 (Cal) it has been held while deciding the case under the un-amended S. 12 (1) (a) of the Hindu Marriage Act that the "respondent was impotent at the time of the marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceeding even subsequent potency of the appellant long after the institution of the proceeding will not stand in the way of granting a decree in favour of the appellant wife".

We respectfully agree with the said decision. The position in law has changed to an extent hereinbefore stated, the emphasis has been laid now on the question of non-consummation of marriage due to the respondent's impotency.

29. In our opinion, therefore, the learned Judge was wrong in rejecting the application of the husband. In the facts and circumstances of the case, the petitioner is entitled to a decree prayed for. The appeal is, therefore, allowed. The judgment and decree of the Court below are set aside.

30. There will be no order as to costs.

31. Let the operation of the order be stayed till one month after the long vacation.

SHARMA, J. :— I agree.

BY THE COURT 3-12-1976.

Let the operation of the Judgment and decree be stayed for a fortnight. Office is directed to supply certified copy of the Judgment and decree immediately to Mr. Gupta.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 221NIRMAL CHANDRA MUKHERJI AND BANKIM CHANDRA RAY, JJ.

Samarendrajit Shaw, Petitioner v. The Collector of Excise, Calcutta and others, Respondents.

Civil Rule No. 3626 of 1971, D/- 5-7-1976.

Constitution of India, Art. 227 — Power of superintendence — Scope — Error of fact, even though apparent on face of record, cannot be corrected — Proceeding and show cause notice for breach of term of excise licence — Writ petition — Held, no scope for interference under Art. 227.

The jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 227 is limited only to seeing that the subordinate Court functions within the limits of its authority and does not extend to correction of mere error of fact by examining the evidence and re-appreciating it. An error of fact, even though apparent on the face of the record is not subject to correction by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 227. An error of fact can be corrected only by a superior court in exercise of its statutory power as a court of appeal. The High Court cannot in guise of its exercising jurisdiction under Art. 227 convert itself into a court of appeal when the Legislature has not conferred a right of appeal and made the decision of the subordinate court or tribunal final on facts. AIR 1975 SC 1297, AIR 1954 SC 215 and AIR 1951 Cal 193 (SB), Relied on.

On the basis of the inspection report submitted by the Inspector of Excise disclosing that there had been breach of the term of excise licence, the impugned proceeding was started against the petitioner and show cause notice was served upon him. The petitioner did not submit his explanation and before the case had been heard and decided the petitioner filed writ petition under Art. 227 challenging the impugned proceeding and show cause notice.

Held, that there was no room for any interference by the High Court under its power of superintendence. Moreover, the impugned proceeding which had been started by the Collector on the report of the Inspector was not per se without jurisdiction. The petitioner had been given opportunity of show cause against charges mentioned in the said notice. The petitioner could state his objections against the said proceeding. If the Collector of Excise after hearing would hold against the petitioner there was provision for appeal before the Excise Commissioner and a further appeal to the Board of Revenue. Moreover, if the Collector of Excise approached in an arbitrary manner and if he did not consider all the relevant materials that would be produced by the petitioner before him in deciding the case and if his decision be biased then the petitioner could challenge the same on an application under Art. 227. Manjula Bose, Kalyanbrata Roy, for Petitioner; Bhabani Shankar Bagchi, Mrs. Archana Sengupta, for Respondents.

B. C. RAY, J.:— This is an application under Art. 227 of the Constitution of India and it is directed against the order No. 648 R. E. dated 25th of October, 1971 passed by the Collector of Excise, Calcutta as well as against the show cause notice dated 24th December 1970 issued by the Collector of Excise, Calcutta in Misc. Case No. 61 (F. L.) of 1970-71.

2. The petitioner is the proprietor of foreign liquor 'off' shop under the name and style of M. L. Shaw and Co. at 15, Ashutosh Mukherjee Road, Bhowanipore, Calcutta and the petitioner has been running the said business under licence granted by the Collector of Excise, Calcutta, the respondent No. 1 from year to year for more than 43 years. The petitioner furnished a security deposit of more than Rs. 10,000/- in cash including a lump fee of Rs. 300/- for the year 1971-72 in the Calcutta Collectorate Treasury in favour of the Excise Department for the E. L. 'off' licence for the said shop. On November 23, 1970, the respondent No. 2, Utpal Chakraborti, the then Inspector of Excise, Bhowanipore range, inspected his shop at about 2.20 P. M. At that time the salesman Mathurmohon Shaw was alone present in the said shop. On the demand of the Inspector the said salesman handed over to him the Inspection Report Book as well as Excise Daily Account Book. The Inspector after going through the daily Account Book enquired of him as to why the sale of liquor of 21st and 22nd of November, 1970 were not entered in the said Daily Account Book whereon the salesman Mathurmohon Shaw intimated him that Pradip Kumar Dey who was incharge of transferring the sale figures of liquor bottles in the daily Excise Account Book from the daily Excise Ledger Book of the excise shop disappeared suddenly from the shop after closing the daily Account Book on 20-11-1970. The said salesman also stated that on 22nd November, 1970, the said salesman Pradip Kumar Dey sent a letter to the petitioner in the evening intimating that he had to leave the shop without informing anybody as he was frightened by some antisocial people on the night of 20th November, 1970 as he refused to give them liquor bottles without payment of the price for the same. The Inspector, therefore, asked the salesman to produce the daily Excise Ledger Book and daily Excise Stock Book of the shop and he accordingly handed over the same to him. The petitioner was not present in the shop at the time. The Inspector, the respondent No. 2, looked into the last entries of sales of liquors as well as of receipts in the daily Excise Ledger Book and also daily Excise Stock Book of the shop which were made upto date.

3. - The Inspector, thereafter, directed the salesman Mathur Mohan Shaw to show and count the liquor bottles (whisky in the Almirah) and the salesman began to count the same. But all of a sudden it was stopped by the Inspector who asked him to open the lock of the collapsible gate of the godown in the shop room. The salesman opened the godown and started showing him the bottles lying in the case of whisky. The Inspector, however, asked the salesman that his help was not required in the counting of bottles there in the godown and directed him to send the cooli-bearer in the godown. The salesman followed the bearer inside the godown and reminded the Inspector that the responsibility of showing and counting of the stock of liquors to him lay on the salesman and as such the salesman should be allowed to be present at the time of counting the stock of liquor bottles, but, unfortunately the Inspector refused to allow him to be there and asked him to go out. The salesman then told the Inspector that he would report the matter to the licensee and would call him over the phone but the Inspector told him that there was no necessity of informing the licensee. The salesman, however, told the petitioner over the phone about this. Subsequently, Dipendra Lal Shaw, the Sales Manager of the said shop also came and requested the Inspector to permit him to be present to help him to count the liquor bottles but the said request was turned down by the Inspector. The petitioner, thereafter, came to the shop and found the Salesman as well as the Sales Manager standing outside the godown as they were prevented from entering into the godown for counting and verifying the stock of liquors. On the direction of the petitioner the salesman and the Sales Manager counted the stock of liquors (whisky) and found that the same tallied with the stock of liquors as entered in the daily Excise Ledger Book and Excise Stock Book of the shop. The petitioner's son Dipendra Lal Shaw then challenged the incorrect recording of figures by the Inspector and requested him to recount and verify the stock of whisky bottles in their presence. The Inspector Sri Utpal Chakraborti, however, declined to recount the stock of liquors or to verify his counting of liquor bottles as recorded by him. The Inspector hurriedly completed the writing of the Inspection Report on the Inspection Book and asked the petitioner to sign the Report Book for the alleged irregularities. The petitioner, therefore, expressed his inability to sign. On the basis of the said inspection report the Misc. Case No. 61 (F.L.) of 1970-71 was started and the petitioner was served with a notice No. 163 (F.L.) dated 24th of December, 1970 asking the petitioner to show cause within seven days of the receipt of this notice to explain as to why his licence would not be cancelled or action otherwise would not be taken against him for the irregularities mentioned therein as he violated the condition No. 15 of the licence. This notice has been marked as Annex. D to the petition.

4. It has been stated that the salesman Mathuramohon Shaw wrote a petition dated 3rd December, 1970, addressed to the Collector of Excise describing the incidence that occurred at the time of inspection by the Inspector of Excise on 23rd of November, 1970. The petitioner also stated that in the Excise daily Ledger Book liquors that have been purchased from licensed dealers under excise pass and challans have been entered and the liquors that are sold to the public under cash memos after closing of all transactions of the day are also entered in the said Ledger Book of the shop. It is from the entries of the Excise Daily Ledger Book the figures are posted in the Excise Daily Account Book. The said Excise

Daily Ledger Book and the Excise Daily Stock Book and cash memos were handed over to the Excise Inspector, the respondent No. 2 and as such there was no difficulty for him to verify the actual stock of whisky in the godown. The petitioner has also stated that he submitted monthly statements for the month of November, 1970 in the Office of the Collector of Excise on 7-12-1970 and the same was duly acknowledged by the Office. On December 16, 1970, the Inspecting Officer visited the shop and checked the daily Account Book and found the same as correct. It has also been stated that the self-same inspecting Officer also visited the shop on 24th December, 1970 and looked into the daily Account Book and no discrepancy could be found out in the stock balance of 'India-made' whisky. It has been submitted that in view of the said monthly statements being found correct the litterage fee being accepted on its basis the impugned cases as well as the impugned show-cause notice ought not to have been started against the petitioner and the same are liable to be set aside.

5. On the 16th of December, 1971, the instant Rule issued but no interim order was passed. The petitioner was given liberty to move for interim order after serving notice of the application on the opposite parties. On December 20, 1971, an order of interim injunction was made restraining the Collector of Excise, the opposite party No. 1 from proceeding with the show-cause notice till the disposal of the rule. It was also ordered that the Collector the respondent No. 1 will be at liberty to extend the excise licence for such period as he might think fit.

6. An affidavit-in-opposition sworn on 27th June, 1972 by Sri Debesh Chandra Sengupta, Collector of Excise, Calcutta has been filed. It has been stated that the Inspector of Excise, Sri Utpal Chakraborti on November 23, 1970, checked the physical stock of India-made whisky with the book balance of the prescribed Account Book namely daily Account Book and found discrepancies in the stock as noted in his inspection report. On the basis of the said inspection report the Collector of Excise, Calcutta drew up a miscellaneous proceeding being case No. 61 (F.L.) of 1970-71 and asked the licensee by memo No. 163 (F.L.) dated 24-12-1970 to show cause why his licence should not be cancelled. The petitioner without giving any explanation to the said show-cause notice moved this application. It was also averred that the stock of whisky on counting did not tally with the stock as entered in the daily Excise Account Book. It has been submitted that the said misc. case was not started mala fide by the Collector nor the Collector acted in excess of his jurisdiction in starting the said misc. case. It has also been averred that the petitioner's licence has been renewed from time to time.

7. An affidavit-in-opposition sworn by Sri Utpal Chakraborti, the Inspector of Excise, Bhowanipore range, the respondent No. 2 was also filed. It has been stated that on 23-11-1970 he inspected the shop in question from 2-20 p.m. to 4-30 p.m. and after counting the physical stock of India made whisky thrice he was sure about the discrepancy in the stock that was shown in the daily Excise Account Book. He denied that he abused the petitioner's salesman Mathuramohon Shaw nor did he prevent him to be present in the godown at the time of counting the said stock of liquors.

8. An affidavit-in-reply sworn by the petitioner reiterating the statements and allegations made in the petition have been filed on behalf of the petitioner. A supplementary affidavit has been filed on behalf of the petitioner on 22nd August, 1972. It has been stated that the Inspection Reports in respect of the shop made by Sri S. Biswas, the Inspector of Excise, Foreign Liquor (G) dated 10-6-1972 and 11-7-1972 are necessary to be considered for the decision of this case and the said reports be considered for the decision of this case and the said reports have been annexed as Annexs. A-2 and A-3 respectively to the supplementary affidavit.

9. Mr. Kalyanbrata Roy, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner has submitted that the inspection report submitted by the Inspector of Excise, the respondent No. 2, is wholly mala fide and bad inasmuch as the Inspector did not at all consider the daily Excise Ledger Book and the daily Excise Stock Book where the stock that was left after closing of the transactions on 21-11-1970 and 22-11-1970 had been correctly entered. The said books were handed over to the Excise Inspector but he though considered the same did not refer to them and the alleged discrepancies in stock was found by him in his inspection report on the basis of the excise Account in which the entries after closing of the transactions on 21-11-1970 and 22-11-1970 had not been entered.

10. Mrs. Manjula Bose, learned Advocate appearing subsequently on behalf of the petitioner has contended vehemently that in the shop the daily sales and purchases are entered in the daily Excise Ledger Book and the stock that remains after the closing of the sale is entered in the daily stock book. In the daily Excise Account Book the figures are entered from the daily Excise Ledger Book and from the daily Stock Book. The said Books were handed over to the Inspector of Excise who could have easily verified the actual stock position after closing of all transactions of the said two days i.e. on 21-11-1970 and 22-11-1970 from the two books and the Inspector could have verified the actual stock as entered in the said daily Excise Ledger Book and the daily Stock Book as the daily Account Book was not written up-to-date. It has also been submitted that in view of the fact that in the daily Excise Ledger Book and the daily Stock Book entries made of all the transactions that took place on the said dates and the stock that remained at the close of the transactions the respondent No. 2 ought to have verified the stock with reference to the said two books. As such there has been no violation of the terms and conditions of the licence. Moreover, sufficient explanation has been given as to why the figures could not be posted in the daily Account Book on 21-11-1970 and 22-11-1970. It has next been contended that the monthly statement of November, 1970 was submitted on 7th Dec., 1970 and the said monthly statement was checked by the Inspector of Excise, Foreign Liquor (G) on 10-6-1972 and the Inspector found the statement to be in order and litterage fee on the basis of the said monthly statement was also accepted. As such it has been contended that there is no discrepancy in the stock of India-made whisky and so the proceeding in question is a mala fide one and the same is biased and without jurisdiction. The said proceeding as well as the impugned notices are liable to be set aside.

11. It has also been submitted that the impugned proceeding is also bad inasmuch as there has been no violation of condition No. 15 of the licence. It has been submitted that the petitioner produced his licence and also produced the daily excise Ledger Book and daily Excise Stock Book as well as the cash memo which will clearly show the correct account of the sale of liquor and the position of the stock after such sale. The petitioner also produced the daily Excise Account Book and explained the reason for not posting the figures in the Daily Account Book on 21-11-1970 and 22-11-1970.

12. Mr. Bhabani Shankar Bagchi, learned Advocate for the respondent has urged that the Collector has power to initiate proceeding for breach of the terms and conditions of the licence. In this case Mr. Bagchi submitted that the impugned proceeding has been started on the basis of the Inspector's report and notice was issued directing the petitioner to show cause against the charges mentioned in the said notice. The petitioner without submitting any explanation has challenged the said notice in this application. This application, Mr. Bagchi submitted, is premature and should be dismissed inasmuch as the proceeding started by the Collector is not without jurisdiction. It has also been submitted that whether the report of the Inspector is biased or not and whether the petitioner has violated the terms of the licence or not can be decided only after the petitioner submits his explanation and after the petitioner is heard.

13. It appears that the petitioner in this application has challenged the validity of the proceeding started by the Collector as well as the issue of the notice directing the petitioner to show cause on the charges mentioned in the notice as to why the licence should not be cancelled. The petitioner has challenged the said notice on the main ground that the proceeding was arbitrary and mala fide and as such the same should be set aside. The petitioner does not dispute that the Collector has got jurisdiction to initiate proceeding for breach of the terms and conditions of the licence and as such the instant proceeding is not per se without jurisdiction. The only challenge to the initiation of the said proceeding is that the report of Excise Inspector on the basis of which the impugned proceeding has been initiated is a biased and mala fide one inasmuch as there was no discrepancy as regards the stock of India-made whisky after the close of sale on 21-11-1970 and 22-11-1970 as the monthly statement of November was accepted as correct. To decide this question it is necessary to consider the scope of the provisions of Article 227 of the Constitution. In AIR 1951 Cal. 193 (SB), Dalmia Jain v. Sukumar Mukherjee it has been held that power of superintendence is to be exercised only to keep the subordinate courts within the bounds of their authority and not for correcting mere errors. The said decision was relied upon in 1954 SCR 565: (AIR 1954 SC 215), Waryam Singh v. Amarnath. In (1975) 1 SCC 858: (AIR 1975 SC 1297), Babhutmal Raichand Oswal v. Laxmi Bai R. Tarta it has been observed by the Supreme Court that the jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 227 is limited only to seeing that the subordinate court functions within the limits of its authority and does not extend to correction of mere error of fact by examining the evidence and reappraising it. An error of fact, even though apparent on the face of the record is not subject to correction by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 227. An error of fact can be corrected only by a superior court in exercise of its statutory power as a court of appeal. The High Court cannot in guise of its exercising jurisdiction under Art. 227 convert itself into a court of appeal when the Legislature has not conferred a right of appeal and made the decision of the subordinate court or tribunal final on facts.

14. In AIR 1965 Madh Pra 142, Durg Transport Co. v. R. T. A., Raipur the petitioner company applied for renewal of its stage carriage permits in three different routes before the Regional Transport Authority, Raipur and Janata Motor Transport Co-operative Society Ltd., Durg also applied for grant of fresh permits in the said three routes in lieu of permits held by the petitioner. The R. T. A. refused to renew the permits of the petitioner and granted permits to the said co-operative society in respect of two of the said three routes and directed for inviting applications for permit in respect of the third route. Against the said order appeals were filed before the State Transport Appellate Authority and application for an interim stay of operation of the order granting permits to the respondent Society for two routes and the invitation of fresh applications for third route. The appellate authority stayed the operation of the order inviting application for the third route but it rejected the prayer for interim stay of operation of the order granting permits to respondent Society. Against the said order an application under Art. 227 of the Constitution was filed. It has been held that the Appellate Authority is undoubtedly vested with the discretion whether to grant stay or make any interim order in an appeal pending before it. But the discretion has to be exercised according to settled legal principles and not contrary to them. The Appellate Authority in making the impugned order approached the matter in an arbitrary manner and against all legal principles and as such the said order can be quashed on a petition under Art. 227 of the Constitution. It has also been observed relying on the decision in AIR 1954 SC 215 that the power of superintendence is not restricted to cases of non-exercise or illegal exercise of jurisdiction but extends also to cases where there has been a miscarriage of justice occasioned by errors of law or procedure which cannot be corrected otherwise. This decision does not apply to this case.

15. In this case only a show-cause notice has been issued to the petitioner. The petitioner has not submitted his explanation and the case has not yet been heard and no decision has been arrived at by the Collector of Excise. As such there is no room for any interference by this Court under its power of superintendence. Moreover, as we have already pointed out that the impugned proceeding which has been started by the Collector on the report of the Inspector is not per se without jurisdiction. The petitioner has been given opportunity of showing cause against charges mentioned in the said notice. The petitioner can state his objections against the said proceeding. If the Collector of Excise after hearing holds against the petitioner there is provision for appeal before the Excise Commissioner and a further appeal to the Board of Revenue. Moreover, if the Collector of Excise approached in an arbitrary manner and if he does not consider all the relevant materials that will be produced by the petitioner before him in deciding the said misc. case and if his decision be biased then the petitioner can challenge the same on an application under Art. 227 of the Constitution.

16. It has been strenuously urged by the learned Advocate for the appellant that the entries regarding sales and purchases of liquor of every day including 21-11-1970 have been duly made in the daily excise Ledger Book and daily Stock Book from where the figures are noted in the daily Excise Account Book. The transactions in respect of the said dates were not entered as Pradip Kumar Dey, the salesman disappeared from the shop after writing the Daily Excise Account Book on the night of 20-11-1970 without leaving any intimation to the petitioner or to the other employees of the shop. It was only in the evening of 22-11-1970 that he intimated about his unwillingness to work in the shop any longer by his letter to the petitioner and as such in the daily excise Account Book the entries in respect of transactions of the said two dates have not been made. It has also been submitted that the cash memos were produced before the Excise Inspector, the respondent No. 2, and from the same the sales of liquor on the said two dates would be evident.

17. The Inspector ought to have considered the said cash memos as well as the daily Excise Ledger Book and daily excise Stock Book and it would have revealed that there was no discrepancy regarding the stock of liquor (India-made whisky) on 23-11-1970. It was also submitted that the petitioner submitted monthly return of November, 1970 on 7-12-1970 and litterage fee was accepted on its basis by the respondents. The said return was duly checked by the Inspector of Excise, Foreign Liquor (G) on 10-6-1972 as will be evident from the inspection report and there was no discrepancy regarding stock of India-made whisky. So the charges are baseless. We have already held that the Collector of Excise had jurisdiction to start the misc. case on the basis of the Inspector's report which disclosed that there has been a breach of term No. 15 of the excise licence. Now whether there has been no violation of the said term and misc. case shall be dropped is a matter to be decided by the Collector after considering the causes shown by the petitioner and after hearing him. It is neither proper nor expedient and just to express any opinion on the merits of the said misc. case.

18. In the premises aforesaid all the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioner having failed the Rule is discharged. All interim orders are vacated. There will be no order as to costs in the circumstances of the case. Let the operation of the order be stayed for a period of six weeks.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

Syed Ali Kaiser, Appellant v. Mst. Ayesha Begum, Respondent.

A. F. O. D. No. 238 of 1969, D/- 23-2-1977.

(A) W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 3 (1) (b) — Leases exempted from the provisions of the Act — Original lease of 15 years with option of renewal for a further period of one year — Exercise of option for renewal does not constitute a fresh lease for one year.

Held that the subsequent period of one year for which the lessee had exercised his option in terms of the lease could not be called to be a fresh lease. It was a continuation of the lease as originally executed. The lessee was therefore, not entitled to any protection under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act because such lease was outside the provisions of the said Act by virtue of S. 3 (1) (b) of the Act. AIR 1965 Cal 55, Followed.

(B) Contract Act (1872), S. 74 — Payment of reasonable compensation for breach of contract — Wrongful occupation of lessee after expiry of period of lease.

Held that there being no fraud or misrepresentation as to the period of 15 years fixed in the lease a sum of Rs. 50/- per day agreed to be reasonable compensation for the breach of condition was not unjustified.

P. N. Mitter, Sudhir Kr. Bose, Hari Narayan Mukherjee, Pronob Kumar Ghosh, for Appellant; Ranjit Kumar Banerjee and Monon Kumar Ghosh, for Respondent.

JANAH, J.:— This appeal is by the defendant and it arises out of a suit for recovery of possession of a cinema house on the expiry of the lease. The plaintiff's case is that she is the owner of premises No. 2-C, Krishna Lal Das Road on which the disputed cinema house stands. The major portion of the suit premises along with fittings, fixtures and furniture was demised to the defendant under a registered Deed of Lease dated June 29, 1951 for the purpose of showing cinema films and for variety shows and other light entertainments. The lease was for a term of 15 years commencing from 1st June 1951 with option of renewal by the lessee for a further period of one year. The rent reserved was at a progressive rate, the rent for the last five years being at the rate of Rs. 1,150/- per month and the same rate of rent was also reserved in case the lessee exercised the option for a further period of one year. On the expiry of the original term of 15 years the defendant exercised his option for a further period of one year and on the expiry of the said further period on 31st May 1967 he was served with a notice by the plaintiff demanding possession. The defendant having failed to comply with the notice the plaintiff instituted the suit for recovery of possession. In the suit the plaintiff claimed liquidated damages at the rate of Rs. 50/- per diem on account of wrongful occupation of the defendant in terms of a covenant contained in the lease.

2. The suit was contested by the defendant and his defence, inter alia, was that the plaintiff had no locus standi to institute the suit inasmuch as she is a Pakistani National and in view of the Government of India, Ministry of Commerce Notification No. 12/2/65 E. PTY. dated 10th September 1965 issued under R. 133 (V) of the Defence of India Rules, 1962 the suit property vested in the Custodian of Enemy Property with effect from 10th September 1965. The further defence of the defendant was that he was persuaded and induced to sign the lease on the express representation and assurance that the lease was for the term of 25 years and the signature of the defendant was obtained by fraud and mis-representation. The defendant alleged that he had put his signature without knowing the contents of the document. Accordingly it was claimed that the document was vitiated for want of intelligent execution, and also fraud on the part of the plaintiff. The defendant claimed that he was in lawful occupation in accordance with the real agreement between the parties which, however, was not fraudulently incorporated in the lease.

3. The trial court upon a consideration of the evidence adduced in the suit came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not a Pakistani citizen but that she was an Indian citizen and held that the suit was perfectly maintainable by her. On the question of fraud and mis-representation the trial court found in favour of the plaintiff and came to the conclusion that the document was executed by the defendant with full knowledge about the terms and conditions of the lease. The trial court held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the demised premises on the expiry of the period fixed by the lease. The trial court, further held that the amount fixed in the document by way of liquidated damages should be paid by the defendant for his wrongful occupation. The suit was accordingly decreed in favour of the plaintiff. Against the said decision the defendant has come up in appeal.

4. Mr. Mitter learned Advocate for the appellant has not pressed the defence case regarding fraud and mis-representation in the matter of execution of the document by the defendant. He has contended before us that the finding of the trial court that the plaintiff is an Indian citizen is not warranted by the materials on record. According to him, the trial court ought to have held that the plaintiff who was admittedly an Indian citizen on the date of execution of the lease which has been marked Ext. 1 in the case, lost her Indian citizenship as she had acquired Pakistani citizenship. In order to substantiate this contention Mr. Mitter has drawn our attention to the notice of demand upon the plaintiff by the Income-tax Department, Ext. 3 series, in which the address of the plaintiff has been mentioned as 6, Hastings Street, Calcutta. Our attention was also drawn to the Assessment Orders passed by the I.-T. O, Ext. 4 series, wherein the address of the plaintiff has been mentioned as C/o. M/s. A. N. Tagore and Company, 6 Hastings Street, Calcutta-1. From this it was contended that the plaintiff had no permanent residential address in Calcutta and that is why her address was mentioned as C/o. M/s. A. N. Tagore and Company. It appears that M/s. A. N. Tagore and Company was dealing with the income-tax matters of the plaintiff. The plaintiff being a lady obviously entrusted her income-tax matters with her lawyer and that is why such address was given. It is significant to note that in the assessment orders, Ext. 4 series, the plaintiff has been described as a "resident and ordinarily resident". This would show that the plaintiff was a resident and ordinarily resident in India and she was an assessee under the Indian I.-T. Act. In this connexion a great deal of criticism was made over the petitions filed on behalf of the plaintiff in connexion with the defendant's petition under O. 11, R. 12 of the C. P. C. By that application which was filed on the 13th of March 1968 the defendant prayed for an order directing the plaintiff to make discovery on oath of the documents which were in her possession. In the petition of objection filed on behalf of the plaintiff on the 26th of March 1968 against the defendant's petition for discovery it was categorically stated that the plaintiff is not a Pakistani National but she was an Indian by birth and nationality and she was a holder of Indian passport. Some time, however, was prayed on the ground that the defendant was out of town. Subsequently, on the 8th July 1968 another application was filed on behalf of the plaintiff praying for some further time on the ground that the plaintiff had been to Dacca to see her sons and had not come back yet. The application was filed on the 8th July 1968. It was contended by Mr. Mitter that the plaintiff could not have returned to India within the period of validity of the passport. The passport, Ext. 2, shows that the period of validity of the passport was upto the 10th of July 1968. Mr. Mitter contended that the petition for time was filed on the 8th July 1968 and it was not possible for the plaintiff to come back to India within the 10th of July 1968. Mr. Mitter contended that this Court should, therefore, presume that she returned to India with a Pakistani passport. Apart from the fact that such a presumption is not permissible in law, the Passport, Exhibit 2, itself bears an endorsement showing that the plaintiff did, in fact, return to India on the 9th July 1968. This contention advanced by Mr. Mitter on the basis of the photostatic copies of the passport which were marked Ext. 2 (a) has, therefore, no substance in view of the endorsement appearing on the original passport Ext. 2. The oral evidence which has been placed before the Court in this connexion is that of the two witnesses examined on behalf of the plaintiff and the only witness examined on behalf of the defendant P. W. 1 is the son of the plaintiff. He has stated that his mother, that is, the plaintiff, is an Indian National and not a Pakistani National. To the same effect is the evidence of P. W. 2 the brother of the plaintiff. On the other hand, the defendant, who examined himself as D. W. 1, has stated that he has no personal knowledge if the plaintiff is a Pakistani National or not. He said that he 'heard it from them'. Apart from the fact that the plaintiff was granted an Indian passport by the Central Government there is the undisputed fact that at the time of execution of the Deed of Lease the plaintiff was an Indian Citizen and she was an Indian citizen by birth. By merely going to Pakistan and staying there for some time the plaintiff could not have lost her Indian Citizenship unless she renounced the Indian citizenship and voluntarily opted for citizenship of another country. In this state of evidence it must be held that the trial court has rightly found the plaintiff to be an Indian citizen.

5. The next contention advanced by Mr. Mitter in support of the appeal is that the defendant was entitled to protection under West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. This contention was advanced on the basis that the original lease which was for 15 years, expired on the 31st of May 1966. Thereafter by the clause for renewal contained in the lease the defendant exercised the option and the term of the lease was extended by one year. The contention is that this exercise of option for renewal constitutes a fresh lease for one year and, therefore, it is not covered by S. 3 (1) (b) of the Premises Tenancy Act. In support of this contention Mr. Mitter relied upon the decision in Basanta Charan Sinha v. Rajani Mohan Chatterji, reported in 26 Cal WN 711: (AIR 1922 Cal 514). In that case the parties entered into an agreement for a lease of certain premises at a certain rent for three years with option to the lessee to renew it for a further period of three years. After the Calcutta Rent Act of 1920 was passed an application was made to the Rent Controller for fixing standard rent. This was refused on the ground that the lease was one for five years and upwards. On revision this Court held that the lease could not be held to be one for a period of over five years inasmuch as the application for standardisation of rent was filed before the Rent Controller before the expiry of three years from the date on which the lessee was put into possession by virtue of the agreement. This case, therefore, is very much different on facts and it cannot be held to be an authority for the proposition contended for by Mr. Mitter. The next decision cited by Mr. Mitter in support of his contention is the case of Purushottam Das Murarka v. Harendra Krishna Mukherjee, reported in (1975) 1 Cal LJ 581. In that case the lease was initially for a period of five years. There was a condition that "if the lessee so desire" the lessor shall "grant a fresh lease for a term of seven years". The question which came up for consideration was whether such a lease would be governed by the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act or whether such a lessee was excluded from the definition of a Thika tenant by virtue of S. 2 (5) (b). Section 2 (5) (b) of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act provides that a tenant holding under a registered lease in which the duration of the lease is expressly stated to be for a period of not less than 12 years is not a Thika tenant. Moreover, in that case the stipulation was that the lessor shall "grant a fresh lease for a term of seven years". In view of the provision of S. 2 (5) (b) of the Act it was held that the period of the two leases could not be added up to make it a lease for a period of not less than 12 years. There was in fact no renewal of the original lease but a fresh lease was executed. That decision, therefore, is of no help to the appellant in the present case. In considering the said question the Division Bench had occasion to consider the decision of another Division Bench of this Court in the case of Satadal Basini Das v. Lalit Mohan Dey, reported in 68 Cal. WN 1036: (AIR 1965 Cal 55). In the case of Purushottam Das Murarka the Division Bench took the view that as the lease in Satadal Basini's case was initially for a period of twenty years the lessee could not have been a thika tenant. Their Lordships, therefore, did not examine Satadal Basini's case any further. It would, however, appear that in Satadal Basini's case the initial lease for twenty years was continuing when the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act came into force on the 28th of Feb. 1949. That lease eventually came to an end on the 15th Sept. 1949. Thereafter by virtue of a clause for renewal contained in the lease the lease was renewed for a further period of six years. Therefore, although the lease was initially for a period of twenty years the subsequent period for which it was renewed was only for six years. This aspect of the matter was considered by the Division Bench in Satadal Basini's case as would appear from the following passage in the judgment of the said case:

"The controversy then reduces itself to this: what was her status after the said date? Was she a tenant? If so, was she a thika tenant? Obviously, if the defendant was not a tenant after the above date, September 15, 1949, she can have no defence to the present action for ejectment and her present appeal must fail on that single and simple ground. If, however, she was or continued to be a tenant after the aforesaid date, the question would naturally arise as to what was the nature and character of her said tenancy." Their Lordships then proceeded to consider the two possible views of this aspect of the case, namely, that it was a new tenancy or that it was the old tenancy continued under its renewal clause subject to its terms. On a consideration of several authorities of this Court as well as of the Supreme Court their Lordships came to the conclusion that the old relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties continued and did not come to an end and the lease between them did not determine, merely by reason of expiry of the original period of twenty years but survived in or by reason of its renewal clause aforesaid, which, as one of its terms, still retained its full vigour. We respectfully agree with the view taken by the Division Bench in Satadal Basini's case and in our view the said decision applies to the facts of the present case with full force. Mr. Mitter also relied on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Chhatu Ram Horil Ram Pvt. Ltd. v. State of Bihar reported in AIR 1969 SC 117. In that case the Supreme Court was considering the effect of S. 4 (1) (a) of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 upon a lease which contained a clause for renewal at the option of the lessee. It was held that such a clause was merely in the nature of an encumbrance, and it did not confer upon the lessee any right to the leasehold land. It was held that by virtue of S. 4 of the Act a fresh statutory lease would come into being for the remainder of the term of that lease and the lessee had no right to exercise the option against the State. This case, in our view, can have no application to the facts of the present case. Mr. Mitter also drew our attention to certain observations of Lord Denning in Regor Estates Ltd. v. Wright, (1951) 1 KB 689 at p. 703. The observations referred to by Mr. Mitter were made in connexion with a different Act in which the language was different and the purpose of which was also different. We do not think that the said observations are of any assistance to the appellant in the present case. In our view, the subsequent period of one year for which the lessee had exercised his option in terms of the lease, Ext. 1, cannot be called to be a fresh lease. It must be held that it was a continuation of the lease as originally executed. The defendant is, therefore, not entitled to any protection under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act because such lease is outside the provisions of the said Act by virtue of S. 3 (1) (b) of the Act.

6. The next point urged by the appellant is that the learned Judge was wrong in decreeing the suit with regard to liquidated damages at the rate of Rs. 50/- per diem. Reference was made to S. 74 of the Contract Act which provides for the payment of reasonable compensation for breach of any contract whether or not actual damages or loss is proved to have been caused thereby. It was contended that the distinction between the penalty and liquidated damages and all the intricacies of the English Common Law has been done away with by the provisions of S. 74 of the Indian Contract Act. It was accordingly argued that the court below was not right in not considering this aspect of the case. In the present case the lease provides for payment of rent at the rate of Rs. 1,150/- per month for the last five years of the period of lease as well as for the period of renewal. The finding being that there was no fraud or misrepresentation as to the period fixed in the lease, it must be held that the lease stood terminated on the expiry of the period mentioned in the lease, that is to say, on the 31st May, 1967. The defendant had been in unlawful possession of the property since that date. In the circumstances it cannot be said that the sum of Rs. 50/- per day will not be a reasonable compensation for the wrongful occupation of the defendant. In the absence of any material before the court we do not think that the learned Judge was unjustified in taking into account what the parties at the time of the contract agreed to be the reasonable compensation for the breach of any of the terms and conditions of the lease.

7. The last point urged in support of the appeal is that this Court should take additional evidence and decide the question regarding the nationality of the plaintiff. An application has been filed for the reception of the additional evidence under O. 41, R. 27 of the C. P. C. annexing therewith the original letter dated the 4th July 1969 addressed to the defendant by the Deputy Controller of Enemy Firms. After reciting the Government of India, Ministry of Commerce Notification the defendant is informed that the writer of the letter has received information that the disputed Cinema Hall which is known as Regent Cinema is owned by Must. Ayesha Begum a Pakistan national. The defendant was accordingly asked to produce evidence before the authority concerned to dispute the aforesaid information. In the application the reason why this document could not be filed earlier has been mentioned in para. 7 in which it has been disclosed that all the papers were lying with Sri Mohini Mohan Roy learned Advocate for the defendant in the trial court and through inadvertence the said document escaped his notice and as such it could not be filed before the trial court. This mistake it is stated was detected only on the 5th of February 1977 at the house of the defendant appellants' learned Senior Advocate at the time of conference which was held on the 5th of February 1977. It has, therefore, been prayed that the said letter could not be produced before the trial court on account of the circumstances beyond the control of the appellant. The suit was decreed by the trial court on the 7th of November 1968 and the appeal was filed before this Court on the 8th of January 1969. The letter sought to be put in as additional evidence is dated the 4th of July 1969. It is beyond one's comprehension how this letter could have been filed before the trial court. The letter had no existence at that point of time. The story now set up by the appellant for reception of additional evidence appears to us to be clearly an afterthought. Moreover, the said letter cannot be a piece of evidence. Paragraph 3 of the letter reads:

"Information has been received that the "Regent" Cinema hall situated at 2-C, Krishnalal Das Road, Calcutta-2 is owned by Must. Ayesha Begum, a Pakistan national and that you have been managing the property and realising income therefrom on her behalf. If that be the case, the property in question may be deemed to have been vested in the Custodian as from 10-9-1965 and all sums realised as income from the property as from that date are payable to him".

It is clear, therefore, that there has been no decision as to whether Must. Ayesha Begum is a Pakistan national or not. The letter even does not disclose what are the information received and from whom those have been received. Moreover after a determination of the question by the civil court it was not competent for the Deputy Controller of Enemy Firms to come to a decision as to the nationality of the plaintiff.

8. For the reasons mentioned above this appeal fails and it is accordingly dismissed with costs and the application for additional evidence is also rejected.

A. N. BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.
Appeal dismissed.

v. Sm. Sabita Guha and others, Respondents.

A. F. O. D. No. 344 of 1974, D/- 3-11-1976.*

Suits Valuation Act (1887), S. 8 — Partition suit — Preliminary decree passed — Enhancement of valuation for purposes of Stamp duty before final decree — At the time of final decree the value of suit shown as the enhanced sum — Forum of appeal against final decree — Parties not entitled to approach such Appellate Court which has jurisdiction over such enhanced valuation.

In a suit for partition which was valued at Rs. 8,000/- a preliminary decree was passed. Before, however, the final decree was passed the trial Court valued the suit at Rs. 24,000/- for stamp duty and directed the plaintiff to pay stamp duty on that valuation. In the final decree the suit was shown to be valued at Rs. 24,000/-. Appellant preferred an appeal against preliminary decree before District Judge. The final decree also having been passed an appeal was filed in High Court in view of the enhanced valuation of the suit shown in the final decree. The appeal before District Judge was dismissed as it was not pressed. In appeal in the High Court against final decree:

Held that Court could not enhance the valuation of the suit once the preliminary decree was passed and it was a mistake that the suit was shown as valued at Rs. 24,000/- in final decree and the appellant instead of approaching High Court ought to have pointed out the mistake before District Judge. Hari Prasanna Mukherjee, B. K. Panda and Mrinal Kanti Roy, for Appellant; Nripal Chandra Ray Chowdhury and Rathindra Kumar Dey, for Respondent No. 1.

JANAH, J.:— This appeal arises out of a final decree passed in a suit for partition. The appellant as well as the respondent No. 1 are purchasers from the original owners of the land in dispute. One of the original co-sharers, namely, Binapani Biswas instituted a suit for partition against her co-sharer Pranab Gopol Biswas. The suit was valued at Rs. 8,000/-. A preliminary decree was passed on April 11, 1967 and thereafter a final decree was passed on December 13, 1971. Before the final decree was passed, the trial court went into the question of valuation of the disputed property for the purpose of payment of stamp duty. Upon a consideration of the materials on record the learned Judge in the trial court came to the conclusion that the disputed property was valued at Rs. 24,000/-. The trial court directed the plaintiff to pay the stamp duty on that basis. When the final decree was drawn up, it appears that the suit was shown to be valued at Rs. 24,000/-. Against the preliminary decree the present appellant filed an appeal before the learned District Judge on February 3, 1972 upon the footing that the suit was valued at Rs. 8,000/-. On February 10, 1972 the appellant preferred the present appeal to this Court on the basis that the suit was valued at Rupees 24,000/-. It appears that on June 6, 1973 when the appeal was taken up for hearing by the learned Additional District Judge, the learned Advocate for the appellant stated that he would not proceed with the appeal any further and prayed that the appeal might be dismissed for non-prosecution. The learned Additional District Judge accordingly dismissed the appeal for non-prosecution.

2. The learned Advocate for the respondent has taken a preliminary objection before us that the present appeal is not maintainable in this Court inasmuch as the decree was passed in a suit which is valued at Rs. 8,000/-. The learned Advocate for the appellant, however, contends that the appeal being against the final decree in which the suit is shown to have been valued at Rs. 24,000/- the present appeal is maintainable in this Court. The question which arises for consideration therefore, is what is the value of the suit in which the decree appealed against has been passed? There is no dispute between the parties that the suit was originally valued at Rs. 8,000/-. That being so, an appeal would lie before the learned District Judge. The learned Advocate for the appellant has contended that by Order No. 149 dated February 12, 1971 and Order No. 154 dated September 9, 1971 the learned Judge in the trial Court while dealing with the question of valuation of the suit-land for the purpose of payment of stamp duty had come to the conclusion that the suit-land was valued at Rs. 24,000/-. He has accordingly contended that after this finding by the learned Judge in the trial court the valuation of the suit was raised to Rs. 24,000/-. In support of this contention he relies upon the valuation as given in the final decree. We are unable to accept this contention advanced on behalf of the appellant. In the two orders mentioned above there is no indication that the learned Judge raised the valuation of the suit from Rs. 8,000/- to Rs. 24,000/-. On the contrary it appears from the said two orders that the learned Judge made it quite clear that he was considering the question of valuation only for the purpose of payment of stamp duty for a final decree. Apart from this it is doubtful whether it is open to a court to enhance the value of a suit after the preliminary decree has been passed in the suit in which the value of the suit has been fixed at a certain amount. In such a case it is likely to affect the right of a party to file an appeal before the appropriate forum against the preliminary decree on the basis of the valuation of the suit as stated in the preliminary decree. It is not however necessary for us to go into this aspect of the matter in details as we find that in the present case the learned Judge in the trial court did not enhance the valuation of the suit. When the final decree was drawn up by the office of the learned Subordinate Judge, the suit was shown to be valued at Rs. 24,000/- by mistake. This mistake however did not prevent the appellant from filing the appeal before the learned District Judge. As already stated the appellant filed an appeal before the learned District Judge but allowed the same to be dismissed for non-prosecution. The appellant could have drawn the attention of the trial court about this mistake in the valuation as given in the final decree and they could have proceeded with the appeal which they had filed before the learned District Judge. It is well established that the forum in which an appeal is to be filed is determined by the valuation of the suit (Vide Ijjatulla Bhunia v. Chandra Mohan reported in (1907) ILR 34 Cal 954).

3. We have also heard the learned Advocate for the parties on the merits of this appeal. In the facts and circumstances of the present case we are of the opinion that the preliminary objection raised on behalf of the respondents must be upheld. In view of the fact that the appeal fails on a preliminary ground regarding its maintainability in this Court we refrain from dealing with the merits of the case. This appeal, therefore, fails on the preliminary ground and it is, accordingly, dismissed. In the circumstances of the case, however, we make no order as to costs.

A. N. BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

ORDER:— This application under Article 226 of the Constitution is directed against an order of requisition passed on 22nd June, 1976 under sub-s. (1) of S. 3 of the West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act).

BU/DU/A568/77/CWM

2. The petitioner's case, as made cut in the petition, is as follows: The petitioner is a partnership firm registered under the Partnership Act, 1932 and having its office at No. 9, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta-1. It is stated that one Messrs. Cutch Oil & Allied Industries (1949) Private Ltd. is the owner of No. 9, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta, formerly known as No. 165, Lower Chitpur Road, Calcutta. It is stated that the petitioner is the landlord and/or lessee of a portion of the second floor of No. 9, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta. The second floor of the said building contains two main halls and they have been let out and/or rented to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta. The first hall is in the possession of Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, on and from 30th June, 1971 and the second hall is in possession of the respondent No. 3 on and from 7th August, 1971. The rent agreed to be paid on account of the said two halls at the second floor of the said building was Rs. 2,030/- per month. The rate of rent was inclusive of taxes and cost of repairs but exclusive of service charges for electricity, water supply, cleaning etc. The service charges excluding the electricity were agreed to be Rs. 385/- per month. It is the case of the petitioner that the respondent No. 3, the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, has wrongfully and illegally failed and/or neglected to pay the aforesaid rent on account of the said premises as also the service charge and the charges on account of electricity. The dues on account of the said charges would be a sum of Rs. 73,898.56 p. for the period from 30th June, 1971 to March 1976 for which the petitioner had already submitted its bills and have demanded the payment on account of the same. However, in spite of repeated demands, the respondent No. 3 is wrongfully and illegally not paying the said dues to the said petitioner. Subsequent to the said bill, the petitioner had submitted its bill for the period of April and May 1976. All the aforesaid amounts are still due and owing from the respondent No. 3 to the petitioner. It is alleged that on 21st June, 1976 at 4-10 P. M. the petitioner received a communication from the respondent No. 1 containing purportedly two orders. The first order dated 22nd June, 1976 is the order of requisition issued by the respondent No. 1 and the second order numbering 1818 is by the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta directing the petitioner to place the property at the disposal and control of the said respondent on and from 22nd June, 1976 at 10-30 A. M. This is the order challenged in this proceeding.

3. In this case two affidavits have been affirmed on behalf of the respondents. In one affidavit affirmed by Nirmal Chandra Roy, the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, on the 12th July, 1976 it has been stated that the notices were duly served on the owner of the said premises. It is stated that the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, was a tenant of second floor of the said premises No. 165, Rabindra Sarani and it was in possession of the Commissioner of Police. It was further stated that the second floor was requisitioned for the accommodation of the Branch Office of Home (Special) Department, Government of West Bengal. It was further stated that the said order was duly served upon Sm. Sabitri Debi, Sm. Sita Devi, Sm. Radha Devi Shraff and Sm. Sajana Devi Sharaff of 136, Cotton Street, Calcutta and Messrs. J. K. and Sons of No. 9, Rabindra Sarani the owners of the said premises and also the Commissioner of Police who was the tenant of the same at the relevant time. The persons accepted the service of the order. It is stated that by an order dated 21st June, 1976, The First Land Acquisition Collector directed the aforesaid persons to place the said property at the disposal and control on and from 22nd June 1976 at 10-30 A. M. The said order was also served upon them on 21st June, 1976. Notice was also served on the Deputy Secretary. Pursuant to the above, an officer went to take possession of the said premises at the appointed time. Representatives of the Home Special Department and of the Commissioner of Police were present in time but none on behalf of the owners turned up. The possession of the entire second floor was taken from one Sri Sibaji Gupta, Sergeant, representative of the tenant and the possession was again delivered to Ajit Kumar Chakravarty, Special Officer, the representative of the allottee department Home (Special). The possession certificates were duly signed.

4. In an other affidavit affirmed by one Nalini Kumar Chakrabarty Assistant Secretary, Home (Special) Department on the 12th July, 1976, it has been stated that due to increase of work in the Department for Home (Special Branch) the space occupied by the said department in the Writers' Buildings became insufficient and further accommodation had become needed to run the department efficiently. Thereafter the question of further accommodation of the said department was taken up with Public Works Department, Government of West Bengal. That department having failed to spare further accommodation in Writers' Buildings attempts were being made to secure additional accommodation as near the Writers' Buildings as possible. As soon as the Home Department came to know that Second Floor of the said premises No. 165, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta, would be vacated by the Commissioner of Police, a tenant for the Second floor of the said premises, it was visited and found that the said premises (second floor) would be suitable for housing a record room as well as skeleton staff for the Home, Special Branch. The said premises are at 5/6 minutes' walk from Writers' Buildings. Thereafter the said department sent proposal to Land and Land Revenue Department to requisition the second floor of the said premises.

5. On behalf of the petitioner it was contended firstly that the order has been passed mala fide. In this connection, my attention has been drawn to paras. 3, 4 and 5 of the petition wherein allegations have been made regarding the tenancy of the Commissioner of Police and the alleged non-payment of rent which I have already set out. Even if the Commissioner of Police was a tenant in respect of the requisitioned premises and even if a huge amount was due on account of rent of the same, that cannot, in my opinion, by itself, make the order bad or mala fide. In this particular case I am satisfied that order of requisition in question was made for public purpose which in fact was not disputed before me. Accordingly, even if the Commissioner of Police did not pay rent that would not make a subsequent requisition order invalid. Accordingly, there is no merit in this contention and I reject the same.

6. The only other point sought to be argued before me was that the requisition was being made in respect of a wrong house and it was served on the wrong person. In my opinion this point cannot be allowed to be urged before me because this has not been taken in the petition and this involves questions of fact. It was stated that this point was taken in a supplementary affidavit but it does not appear that any leave of the Court was obtained to affirm or use any such supplementary affidavit. Moreover, the respondents had no opportunity to deal with the same. In any event there is no merit in this contention. Regarding the allegation that wrong persons have been served, I should point out that in para. 5 of the petition itself it is stated that the petitioner had suddenly received communication from the respondents Nos. 1 and 2 containing purportedly two orders. In that view of the matter it is not open to the petitioner to raise any such contention. In this context I may also refer to the affidavits affirmed on behalf of the respondents mentioned by me earlier. In any event, in this application the petitioner cannot challenge the order on such ground because an objection as to non-service of notice can properly be taken not by third parties but only by the persons on whom the notice is not served. Invasion of the rights must be of the petitioner. Noorbanu v. Deputy Custodian General, AIR 1965 SC 1937 (Para. 10); Chandra Kumar Datt v. Secy., Frank Ross & Co. Ltd., 1971 Lab IC 790 (Cal). (Paras 6 and 14).

7. Regarding the allegation that wrong premises have been requisitioned it is purely an afterthought. This premises is known as Suraiya House. It appears that previously this premises was numbered as 165, Lower Chitpur Road. Now it is known as 9, Rabindra Sarani. The description given in the Order of requisition is "Suraya House 165, Rabindra Sarani (entire second floor) Calcutta." The petitioner had no difficulty in realising which was the premises which was the subject-matter of requisition. It was specifically mentioned that it was 'Suraya House' and the petitioner also proceeded on that basis. Sufficient particulars had been given in the order of requisition. It is not being stated that there is any other 'Suraya House' in that street. There is only one 'Suraya House' the 2nd floor of which was previously occupied by the Commissioner of Police. The letter of demand also described the same in such fashion. Under these circumstances, merely because due to the change of name of some street there is any mistake, at the most this is a mere irregularity which would not make the order bad. The petitioner had no difficulty in ascertaining which premises are being requisitioned. Accordingly, there is no merit in this contention.

8. No other point was raised before me. Accordingly, the application is dismissed and the Rule discharged. All interim orders are vacated. No order as to costs.

9. Prayer for stay of the operation of the order is rejected.

10. Sometime after the matter was heard and judgment delivered by me, Mr. S. L. Saraf appeared before me and said that I should recall the order as he had no opportunity to make submissions on behalf of the petitioner on whose behalf he was appearing. I rejected such prayer for the reasons which would appear from the "Dictated Order" passed by me.

Rule discharged.

Jyotish Chandra Rakhit, Petitioner v. Smt. Parbati Bala, Opposite Party.

C. R. No. 4436 of 1974, D/- 12-7-1976.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, Rr. 66 (Cal), 90

— Sale proclamation — Value of property — Fraud on Court — Court's carelessness in accepting low value — Real value more than 10 times the value put on sale proclamation by decree-holder — Court accepting low value without verification — Sale in execution — Can be set aside on grounds of fraud of decree-holder on Court and also carelessness of Court in approving sale proclamation — No question of limitation arises in the circumstances — (Lim. Act (1963), Art. 127).

Where there was no dispute that, the valuation of the property found in the suit itself in the same Court, the decree of which was sought to be executed, was more than 10 times the value which was put on the sale proclamation by the decree-holder, it was incumbent on the Court to satisfy itself that there was proper valuation for execution. The Court, in approving the sale proclamation without considering the records acts most carelessly and such carelessness is not protected by O. 21, R. 66 (as amended in Calcutta). The execution sale held on the basis of such sale proclamation, cannot be sustained on the two grounds of fraud of the decree-holder on Court and the carelessness of the Court in approving the sale proclamation in the circumstances of the case. AIR 1945 PC 67, AIR 1954 Cal 604; AIR 1971 Cal 203; (1967) 71 Cal WN 649; AIR 1956 Cal 59, Ref. (Para 3)

The valuation of the property was so grossly inadequate that the Court of law should not allow such fraud to be perpetrated particularly when it is also guilty of gross carelessness in approving the sale proclamation. It is, therefore, not merely a question of the judgment-debtor's being prevented from agitating a point after a long period of time but it is a case where the court would be justified not to uphold the sale on the basis of the evidence of clear fraud and its own carelessness, and no question of limitation arises in the circumstances AIR 1949 Cal 212, Ref. Ashoke Banerjee, for Petitioner; Badri Narayan Sur, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— This rule has been obtained against the appellate order dismissing the appeal filed by the decree-holder against an order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge, First Court, Alipore allowing an application under O. 21, R. 90 of the C. P. C. setting aside the sale in execution of the decree. This decree arises out of a suit for partition and it appears that the title of the parties was declared in eight annas share in respect of the suit properties. The value of the portion allotted by the pleader commissioner to the judgment-debtor, the opposite party before me under the decree is Rs. 8,392/-. It appears that the decree-holder started a title execution case No. 22 of 1970 in respect of the said decree for getting possession of his allotment as also for realisation of the costs of the suit which, I am told, amounts to Rs. 700/-. In this case it appears that the sale proclamation was served on the judgment-debtor on 29-4-1971 and after the sale proclamation was settled which it appears, was done in absence of the judgment-debtor, the sale was fixed on 8-9-1971 at 10.30 a.m. On that very day, the decree-holder applied for permission to bid which was granted. In the sale proclamation the price of the property was given by the decree-holder as Rs. 700/-. As no objection was raised on behalf of the judgment-debtor, this price appears to have been accepted by the court in approving the sale proclamation. The property was sold on the date fixed, that is, on 8-9-1971 at Rs. 2,000/- and was purchased by the decree-holder. Long thereafter, on 11-12-1972 the judgment-debtor filed an application for setting aside the sale. The application came up for hearing on contest before the learned Judge who held, inter alia, that the sale proclamation was served. Nonetheless the learned Subordinate Judge set aside the sale on the ground that there was fraud on court on the part of the decree-holder which vitiated the entire proceeding. Accordingly, the impugned sale was set aside. This judgment was affirmed in appeal and the present Rule as already stated is against this decision.

2. Mr. Banerjee, learned advocate appearing for the decree-holder petitioner, has submitted firstly that the opposite party is estopped from challenging the sale as she did not appear when the sale proclamation was approved by the court as she was aware of the proceeding. It was secondly submitted that the application was hopelessly barred by limitation in that the requisite time for filing objection to the sale had long passed when the application for setting aside the sale was made. It was next submitted that under the Calcutta Amendment to R. 66 of O. 21 there was no obligation on the part of the court to give its own estimate of price of the property. Accordingly it could not be said that there was any fraud on the part of the decree-holder in the sale of the property. These contentions have been disputed by Mr. Sur who is appearing on behalf of the judgment-debtor. The Privy Council in Marudanayagam Pillai v. Manickavasakam Chettiar, 49 Cal WN 292: (AIR 1945 PC 67) held that in drawing up a sale proclamation the court is not to act blindly on information supplied by the parties but is under a duty to check that information as far as possible in order that there may be, so far as possible, a fair and accurate statement of the particulars required, among them being any incumbrance to which the property is liable. The court further held that when material is readily available to check the information, it must be availed of and failure in this respect is carelessness of which the Court cannot be acquitted. The court further held that when a sale takes place at a serious under-value occasioned by failure on the part of the Court and of the decree-holder to carry out the obligations stated above, the case falls within the language of O. 21, R. 90 and the sale must be set aside, when the judgment-debtor has suffered injury thereby, although the decree-holder may not have been guilty of fraud and however dilatory the judgment-debtor may have been, provided there has been nothing on his part to constitute waiver. When the decree-holder, knowing the real facts, puts a low valuation, he is guilty of fraud and cannot take advantage of it by retaining the sale, whatever the conduct of the judgment-debtor may be. This judgment came up for consideration in Majibar Rahman Molla v. Rahu Bux Dhali, (AIR 1954 Cal 604) where it was held that mere understatement in the valuation of sale proclamation does not amount to such fraudulent concealment as would bring the sale within the scope of S. 18 of the Lim. Act. In Bibhuti Bhusan Dey v. Bankim Chandra Ghosh, (AIR 1971 Cal 203), the court held that in view of the amendment to sub-r. (2) of R. 66 of O. 21, it is not obligatory on the executing court to determine the value of the property. These cases have been relied upon by Mr. Banerjee in support of his contention that in view of the Calcutta amendment to the Rule the Privy Council decision cited above has no application and court is under no obligation to put its own valuation. Mr. Sur, on the other hand, referred to the decision in Prabodh Chandra Mukherjee v. Pashupati Mukherjee, (1967) 71 Cal WN 649 in which it has held that when the decree-holder puts in a gross under-valuation to the property and there was blind acceptance thereof by the court, such conduct on the part of the decree-holder amounted to fraud on the court as distinguished from fraud on the party and such blind acceptance by the court of so shockingly low a value amounted to gross carelessness on its part. It was further held that limitation cannot show its head in a matter if the matter be looked at from the stand point of fraud on the court or from the court's inexcusable carelessness. In an earlier judgment in Manmatha Chakraborty v. Sachindra Kumar Chakraborty, 59 Cal WN 1082: (AIR 1956 Cal 59), it was held that it would be a case where the decreeholder would be guilty of deliberately putting a shockingly low valuation for the disputed property in the proclamation for sale and the sale amounts to fraud on court and would vitiate the sale apart from the question of any other material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.

3. In the facts of the present case, we will have to make decision on the authorities, we have indicated above. There is no dispute that the valuation of the property found in the suit itself in the same Court, the decree of which was sought to be executed, was more than ten times the value which was put on the sale proclamation by the decree-holder. These facts were before the court and before approving the sale proclamation it was incumbent on the court to consider the records of the connected proceeding before it to satisfy if there is proper valuation for execution of the decree for costs against the other co-sharer in the partition suit decreed by it. The court in approving the sale proclamation acted most carelessly and such carelessness is not protected by the provision of O. 21, R. 66 with the Calcutta Amendment. There are, therefore, two grounds for which the sale cannot be sustained, namely, fraud of the decree-holder on court and the carelessness of the court in approving the sale proclamation in the state of affairs indicated above.

4. It has been held in Mahipati Halder v. Atul Krishna Maitra, (AIR 1949 Cal 212) that S. 18 of the Lim. Act can be availed of to extend the period of limitation for an application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code where fraud has been committed by the decree-holder though not by the stranger auction purchaser. In this case, we have seen that the decree-holder obtained ex parte permission to bid on the very day the sale was fixed at 10.30 a.m. and such permission was granted without notice to the judgment-debtor. It has however been contended that the judgment-debtor should be deemed as estopped from challenging the sale as she was aware of all facts and reliance was placed on the decision in Hardani Lal v. Ram Nath, (AIR 1929 All 704) as also in Sakarlal Jannadas v. Jerbai Sorabji Patel, (AIR 1934 Bom 348). Undoubtedly, in the facts of the case, as it transpires, the judgment-debtor was served with a notice for settlement of sale proclamation long before the sale was held but no objection was filed by her against such proclamation. It however appears to me that the valuation of the property was so grossly inadequate that the court of law should not allow such fraud to be perpetrated particularly when it is also guilty of gross carelessness in approving the sale proclamation, at Rs. 700/- when it has itself fixed the price of the property put up for sale at a valuation of Rs. 8,000/- in the connected title suit. It is, therefore, not merely a question of the judgment-debtor's being prevented from agitating a point after a long period of time but it is a case where the court would be justified not to uphold the sale on the basis of the evidence of clear fraud and its own carelessness, and no question of limitation arises in the circumstances.

5. For all these reasons, I am of opinion that the learned courts below were justified in allowing the application for setting aside the sale in the attending circumstances. The Rule accordingly fails and is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

Rule discharged.

Although the question whether the provisions of an Act fulfil or ensure the objects stated in its preamble is a matter of legislative judgment and therefore beyond the court's purview, cases of colourable exercise of power are excepted. The provisions under S. 3 of the Police Forces (Restriction of Rights) Act, 1966 and the Rules framed thereunder abrogating their right to form or participate in Labour Unions or political activities etc. having nexus with the object of the Act viz., ensuring proper discharge of duties and maintenance of discipline among the forces charged with the maintenance of public order, fall within the legislative power of the Parliament under Art. 33 of the Constitution, irrespective of Arts. 14 and 19. S. Chatterjee and S. C. Ukil, for Petitioner; B. Gupta and S. Pal, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— This is an application by one Chinta Haran Dutta who is the honorary general secretary of the Calcutta Police Association. In this application, the petitioner on behalf of the said association challenges the enforcement of the Police Forces (Restriction of Rights) Act, 1966 and the rules framed thereunder which have been made applicable to the State of West Bengal from 1st November, 1970 by the notification dated 22nd October, 1970 and by the directions dated 22nd October, 1970. The petitioner contends that the said association was recognised long ago and by the impugned Act and the notification being made enforceable in West Bengal rights under Art. 14 and Art. 19 of the Constitution have been violated. Rights of the members of the armed forces or of the forces charged with the maintenance of public order can, however, be restricted or abrogated so as to ensure proper discharge of their duties and maintenance of discipline among them by any Act passed by the Parliament pursuant to Art. 33 of the Constitution. Therefore, by virtue of Art. 33 of the Constitution the rights of those who are charged with the maintenance of public order can be abrogated or restricted by any Act passed by Parliament, irrespective of Arts. 14 and 19 of the Constitution so as to ensure proper discharge of duties by them and maintenance of discipline among them.

2. The Police Forces (Restriction of Rights) Act, 1966 is an Act which was passed, as preamble to the said Act states, to provide for restrictions of certain rights conferred by Part III of the Constitution in their application to the members of the forces charged with the maintenance of public order so as to ensure proper discharge of their duties and maintenance of discipline among them. Counsel for the petitioner contended that the provisions of the Act were not to ensure proper discharge of the duties and maintenance of discipline among them. He, therefore, submitted that the provisions of the Act and the rules framed thereunder were not protected by Art. 33 of the Constitution. Whether particular provisions of the statute ensure the particular objects of the legislation is a matter for legislative judgment. Whether certain provisions fulfil certain objects or not or whether other provisions could have better fulfilled those objects, is a matter on which the legislative wisdom cannot, prima facie, be questioned except on the question of colourable exercise of power. It was contended that under the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution, Entries 1 and 2 of List II, namely the State List deals with public order and police forces. Therefore, it was urged that the State Legislature had competence to legislate on public order as well as regarding the police force. The Parliament by pretending to make law so as to ensure proper discharge of duties and maintenance of discipline of those who are charged with maintenance of public order which in fact, the provisions did not, cannot usurp that jurisdiction or competency of the State Legislatures. It is, therefore, necessary to examine whether the provisions of the Act can be said to ensure proper discharge of the duties and maintenance of discipline among those who are charged with maintenance of public order. If there is rational nexus between the provisions of the Act and the Rules framed thereunder with the purpose stated in the preamble to the Act, then in my opinion, the Act can be said to be to ensure proper discharge of the duties and maintenance of discipline among those who are charged with maintenance of public order. Only to that limited extent there is scope of judicial review of the effect of this legislation, where, however, the legislation is governed by Art. 31-C of the Constitution different considerations might apply.

3. Section 3 of the Police Forces (Restriction of Rights) Act, 1966, provides as follows:

"3. Restrictions respecting right to form association, freedom of speech, etc. (1) No member of a police force shall, without the express sanction of the Central Government or of the prescribed authority,—

(a) be a member of, or be associated in any way with, any trade union, labour union, political association or with any class of trade unions, labour unions or political association, or

(b) be a member of, or be associated in any way with, any other society, institution, association or organisation that is not recognised as part of the force of which he is a member or is not of a purely social, recreational or religious nature; or

(c) communicate with the press or publish or cause to be published any book, letter or other document except where such communication or publication is in the bona fide discharge of his duties or is of a purely literary, artistic or scientific character or is of a prescribed nature.

Explanation.— If any question arises as to whether any society, institution, association or organisation is of a purely social, recreational or religious nature under Cl. (b) of this sub-section the decision of the Central Government thereon shall be final.

(2) No member of a police force shall participate in, or address, any meeting or take part in any demonstration organised by anybody or persons for any political purposes or for such other purposes as may be prescribed."

Sub-section (1) of S. 6 empowers the Central Government to make rules. I am not concerned with the provisions of Cl. (c) of sub-s. (1) of S. 3 of the Act. But, I am clearly of opinion, that between the provisions of Cls. (a) and (b) of sub-s. (1) of S. 3 there is nexus with the object, that is to say, ensurment of proper discharge of duties and maintenance of discipline among those who are charged with maintenance of public order. If that is the position, then, in my opinion, no question of violation of Art. 14 or 19 arises in the instant case. Counsel also drew my attention to the rules framed by virtue of sub-s. (1) of S. 6 of the said Act. The said Rules are Police Forces (Restriction of Rights) Rules, 1966 and the Police Forces (Restriction of Rights) Amendment Rules, 1967. The said rules so far as they are relevant for the purpose of this application in my opinion, are also not beyond the object, namely, ensuring proper discharge of duties and maintenance of discipline among those who are charged with maintenance of public order. If that is the position, then, in my opinion, the challenge made in this application cannot be sustained.

4. Counsel for the petitioner drew my attention to the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Kameswar Prosad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1962 SC 1166 and in the case of O. K. Ghosh v. E. X. Joseph, AIR 1963 SC 812. These were made in the context of the rules regarding civil servants and the Supreme Court had no occasion to consider in those cases the question of the rights under Arts. 14 and 19 of the Constitution in so far as they are modified by Art. 33 of the Constitution. In the premises of the said decisions cannot, in the view I have taken about the applicability of Art. 33 to the relevant provisions, have any application in the facts and circumstances of this case.

5. Inasmuch as Art. 33 applies to the impugned legislation and in view of the nature of the provisions no question of usurping jurisdiction of the State Legislature as contained in Entries 1 and 2 of List II of the Seventh Schedule arises in the instant case.

6. In the aforesaid view of the matter, this application fails and is accordingly dismissed. The rule nisi is discharged, Interim order, if any, is vacated.

7. There will be no order as to costs.

8. There will be a stay of operation of this order for three weeks.

Petition dismissed.

Miss. Sukla Choudhury, Plaintiff v. Miss. Manjolyn Tweedie and others, Defendants.

Suit No. 491 of 1974, D/- 7-5-1976.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 372 and Art. 225 — Letters Patent (Calcutta), Cl. 12 — Letters Patent is valid law even after independence and promulgation of Constitution.

The plea that after independence and promulgation of the Constitution the Letters Patent of the High Court ceased to exist and that therefore jurisdiction of the High Court on its original side being one drawn from Letters Patent also ceased to exist with the result that suits could not be entertained, was rejected. ORDER:— This is a suit filed by the plaintiff Miss. Sukla Choudhury against the defendants for ejectment and consequential reliefs. According to the plaintiff, the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are her tenants and defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5 are trespassers.

2. The main allegation of the plaintiff is that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, being two young girls, were her tenants in respect of the portion of premises No. 5, Kyd Street and these two girls were of easy virtues and as such committed various acts of nuisance and immorality and under sub-ss. (m), (n) and (o) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, (sic) their tenancy has been forfeited and they should be ejected. Apart from that, it is also alleged that the defendants did not pay rent and are defaulters. According to the plaintiff, the defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5 are trespassers who have trespassed into the said premises and likewise they should be ejected.

3. The main defence of the defendants is that the defendant No. 3, the alleged trespasser, who is the mother of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, is the real tenant and there is no truth in the allegations against them as alleged by the plaintiff and according to the defendant No. 3, the plaintiff improperly and illegally refused to accept rent and as such rents were deposited with the Rent Controller. The other defence, of course, was legal defence, taken by the defendants' counsel Mr. John about the jurisdiction of this court and misjoinder of parties.

4. The following issues were raised:

1. Whether this Court has jurisdiction to try and determine this suit?

2. Whether this suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action?

3. Is the defendant No. 3 a tenant under the plaintiff as alleged in para. 12 of the Written Statement?

4. Has the plaintiff any cause of action against the defendants?

5. To what relief, if any, the plaintiff is entitled?

5. About the first issue Mr. John's first submission before me was that after independence and promulgation of the Constitution, the Letters Patent, which gives jurisdiction to the Original Side of this Court has become non est or non-existent and as such the Original Side, which takes jurisdiction from the Letters Patent, cannot lawfully hear and determine this suit. This point was actually taken by Mr. John in a reported judgment and in that matter Mr. John's contention was rejected. The said matter is reported in AIR 1972 Cal 470 and the same view was taken in AIR 1956 Andh Pra 161 (FB). I therefore answer issue No. 1 in the affirmative.

6. Now coming to issue No. 2, Mr. John's contention was that this court's jurisdiction has been brought by valuing the suit at Rs. 54,000/- and by adding the defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5 as trespassers and, therefore, this suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and valuation etc. This identical point was taken by Mr. John before my learned brother Sabyasachi Mukharji, J. and His Lordship rejected the contention of Mr. John. This case has been reported in AIR 1975 Cal 427 and I agree with that decision. I, therefore, answer the issue No. 2 in the negative and hold that this suit is not bad for misjoinder of parties or causes of action.

(In Paras. 7 to 13 the judgment considers the evidence and holds that it is the defendant No. 3 who is the tenant and not defendants 1 and 2).

14. Coming to issue No. 4 as the suit has been filed against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as tenants and no notice of ejectment has been served on the real tenant, the defendant No. 3, I hold that the plaintiff has no cause of action in this suit against the defendants and I answer the issue accordingly.

15. In the result, the suit is dismissed. In the circumstances of this case as some of the issues were held in favour of the plaintiff. I make no order as to costs.

Suit dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 241N. C. MUKHERJI AND B. C. RAY, JJ.

State Bank of India, Petitioner v. S. Wazir Singh and others, Respondents.

Civil Revn. No. 14 of 1975, D/- 24-2-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 115 and O. 22 — Revision Petition — Death of one of respondents — Substitution of legal heirs — Application must be filed within 90 days and not 3 years from date of death. (1976) 1 Cal LJ 492, Overruled — (Lim. Act (1963), Art. 120).

The Provisions of O. 22, C. P. C. apply in the case of revisional applications as well. Therefore an application for substitution of legal heirs of a deceased respondent must be filed within 90 days of the date of death and not within three years from such date. Consequently an application filed beyond 90 days is barred by limitation and the revision abates as against the deceased respondent. (1913) 18 Cal LJ 141 and AIR 1970 SC 1, Followed (1975) 2 Cal LJ 191, Approved; (1976) 1 Cal LJ 492, Overruled. (Para 7)

Subrata Ray, for Petitioner.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an application for setting aside the order dated 18th November 1976 passed in Lawazima by the Additional Registrar recording the note of abatement of the Rule as against the opposite party No. 1.

2. On May 1, 1975 S. Wazir Singh, the opposite party No. 1, died intestate. From an affidavit-in-opposition it appeared that S. Wazir left behind besides Smt. Surendra Kaur another daughter and one son. In spite of the best efforts the petitioner could not ascertain their names and address. Subsequently the petitioner filed an application for substitution of the heirs and legal representatives of the opposite party No. 1. The Additional Registrar recorded an order of abatement of the Rule as against the opposite party No. 1 presumably on the ground that the said application for substitution was not filed within 90 days. It is stated that the petitioner was advised by the learned Advocate that in cases of revision application the time to file an application for substitution will be three years and not 90 days. In the circumstances it is prayed that the order dated 18th November 1976 passed by the learned Additional Registrar recording the note of abatement of the Rule as against the opposite party No. 1 be set aside.

3. The only point for consideration is whether an application for substitution of the legal heirs in a revision case is required to be filed within 90 days from the date of death or within three years. It may be stated at the beginning that there are conflicting decisions on this point.

4. Mr. Subrata Ray, learned Advocate for the petitioner first refers to a Full Bench decision of Lahore High Court reported in AIR 1949 Lah 186, (Mohd. Sadaat Ali Khan v. The Administrator, Corporation of City of Lahore). It has been held in this case: "O. 22, R. 3, C. P. C. is not applicable to revisions. It cannot be read in conjunction with S. 141 as S. 141 is so drafted as to enable a court to apply the procedure in regard to suits to such proceedings as are in pari materia with suits and thus original in character. A revision is very much unlike a suit. The procedure provided for suits would be mostly inapt and inappropriate to proceedings in revision. Further Art. 176, Lim. Act, cannot be made applicable to a revision. Hence where a party going in revision dies pending the revision petition and an application is made by his legal representatives to be brought on record after the expiry of the period of 90 days, the petition for revision cannot be dismissed on the ground of abatement".

5. Mr. Ray next refers to a Full Bench decision of Rajasthan High Court reported in AIR 1953 Raj 169, (Babulal v. Mannilal). It has been held in this case that O. 22, C. P. C., applies to the case of suits and appeals. It does not govern the cases of revision application.

6. Mr. Ray next refers to another Full Bench decision of Allahabad High Court reported in AIR 1972 All 504, (Chandra-deo Pandey v. Sukhdeo Rai). This case lays down that "An application for substitution of heirs in a revision is an application under S. 151, C. P. C., and hence the period of limitation for bringing the heirs of deceased opposite party in revision is three years under Art. 137 of the Lim. Act, 1963."

7. Mr. Ray also relies on a recent decision of a single Judge of our Court reported in (1976) 1 Cal LJ 492, (Md. Israil v. S. M. Amiral Islam). It has been held by R. Bhattacharya, J., "Reading the provisions of O. 22 of the Code, it appears that there is a provision for substitution in suits and in appeals and some other matters but not in case of revisional application filed under S. 115 of the Code. Revisional applications are not original proceedings. This is clearly a discretionary matter with the court. If for disposal of revisional applications, the High Court thinks that for ends of justice any party is to be added or if at the instance of a party any substitution is necessary though belated, for ends of justice certainly and for proper decision, the High Court should allow substitution or addition of the parties. There can be no question of limitation in this respect". It appears that his Lordship in coming to the above conclusion relied only on AIR 1953 Raj 169 (FB), (Babulal v. Mannilal). This point came up for decision long ago before a Division Bench of our High Court in (1913) 18 Cal LJ 141, (Anandamoyi Dasi v. Rudra Mahanti). Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, J. relying on an earlier decision reported in (1912) 13 Cal LJ 571, (Deo Saran v. Syedunnessa) held that "The principle recognised in R. 3 of O. 22 of the C. P. C. is applicable not only to suits but also to proceedings in revision." In AIR 1949 Lah 186 (FB), (Mohd. Sadaat Ali Khan v. The Administrator, Corporation of City of Lahore). Their Lordships considered this decision, but their Lordships were of the opinion that the observations made by Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, J. presiding over the Division Bench were obiter. We do not agree with their Lordships that the principle of law as laid down by Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, J. was obiter. It may be mentioned that before R. Bhattacharya, J. laid down in (1976) 1 Cal LJ 492 that the provisions of O. 22 of the Code do not apply in revisional application there was a decision by Salil Kumar Dutta, J., in (1975) 2 Cal LJ 191, (Md. Eusuf Mondal v. Md. Omar Ali). His Lordship held that "Rules as to abatement apply as much to proceedings in revision as to appeals. The revisional jurisdiction exercised by the High Court is a part of the general appellate jurisdiction and there is no reason why the provisions of O. 22 will not apply to revision cases in the High Court". It appears that this case was however not placed before R. Bhattacharya, J. In coming to the above conclusion S. K. Dutta, J. considered the case reported in AIR 1949 Lah 186; but his Lordship relied on (1913) 18 Cal LJ 141 and was of the opinion that the matter is no longer in controversy in view of the observation of the Supreme Court in Shankar Ramchandra v. Krishnaji, reported in AIR 1970 SC 1. His Lordship quoted the relevant portion which occurs at page 4.

"When the aid of the High Court is invoked on the revisional side it is done because it is a superior Court and it can interfere for the purpose of rectifying the error of the court below. Section 115 of the C. P. C. circumscribes the limits of that jurisdiction but the jurisdiction which is being exercised is a part of the general appellate jurisdiction of the High Court as a superior Court. It is only one of the modes of exercising power conferred by the statute basically and fundamentally it is the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court which is being invoked and exercised in a wider and larger sense".

Their Lordships of the Supreme Court in making the above observations, relied on 59 Ind App 283 : (AIR 1932 PC 165), (Nagendra Nath Dey v. Suresh Chandra Dey). The Judicial Committee laid down "Any application by a party to an Appellate Court to set aside or revise a decree or order of a Court subordinate thereto is an appeal within the meaning of Art. 182 (2) of Sch. 1 of the Indian Lim. Act, 1908."

Their Lordships also relied on a Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court reported in AIR 1937 Mad 385, (P. P. P. Chidambara Nadar v. C. P. A. Rama Nadar). It was held in this case that "Art. 182 (2), Lim. Act, applies to Civil Revision petitions as well and not only to appeals in the narrower sense of that term as used in the C. P. C." After carefully taking into consideration the decisions referred to above, we are inclined to rely on the Bench decision of this Court reported in (1913) 18 Cal LJ 141, (Anandamoyi Dasi v. Rudra Mahanti) and we are also bound by the principle of law as enunciated in AIR 1970 SC 1. We are therefore of the opinion that the provisions of O. 22 apply in the case of revisional applications as well and that being so, we hold that as the application for substitution of legal heirs was filed beyond 90 days the learned Additional Registrar was right in recording a note of abatement of the Rule as against the opposite party No. 1 and the order therefore should not be recalled. As has already been stated there are two conflicting recent decisions of our High Court by two learned Judges. For the reasons stated earlier we agree with the view expressed by S. K. Dutta, J. in (1975) 2 Cal LJ 191 and we disapprove the view expressed by R. Bhattacharya J. in (1976) 1 Cal LJ 492. This decision, however, will not prevent the petitioner from taking proper step for setting aside abatement if it is advised to do so.

B. C. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 243
SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND
G. N. RAY, JJ.

Aswini Kumar Chatterjee, Petitioner v. Sukhendu Nath Guin, Respondent.

C. R. No. 3763 of 1975, D/- 16-2-1977.

W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Ss. 1 and 13 — Provisions not retrospective in operation — Ejectment suit under T. P. Act — During pendency of suit provisions of W. B. Act made applicable to area where premises were situate — Provisions of Act do not apply. AIR 1976 Cal 322, Overruled — (Interpretation of Statutes — Retrospective Legislation).

The provisions of the W. B. Act have no application to pending proceedings in respect of suits for recovery of possession of the premises situate in an area to which the Act is extended when the suit was pending. AIR 1976 Cal 322, Overruled; (1976) 3 Cal H. C. (N) 301, Approved; ILR (1968) 2 Cal 183, Relied on.

Application of provisions of an Act to a pending proceeding may be made by a competent Legislature. Such application however can be made by express provision or by clear intendment. In the case in question there is no express provision providing that on extension of the operation of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act all pending suits should be governed by the provision of the said Act. The question of intendment will have to be considered with reference to other provisions of the Act so that all the provisions of the Act can be given a harmonious working by such retrospective operation. In other words as all the provisions of the Act are to have and to be deemed to have effective and harmonious operation, if by retrospective operation some sections of the Act are incapable of application and rendered nugatory, such retrospective operation shall not be considered to be the intendment of the legislature. If the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act are made applicable to a pending proceeding, the application of the provisions of S. 17, sub-ss. (1) and (2) and following sections will be rendered completely nugatory. Therefore it is difficult to hold that there was any intendment of the Legislature that the provisions of the said Act would be applicable to a pending action on extension of the operation of the Act to the area in which the suit premises are situate. Rebati Nath Sarkar and Jagadish Ch. Das, for Petitioner; Amulya Chandra Mukherjee, for Respondent.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule has been referred to a Division Bench by Janah, J. in view of the conflict of decisions of the two single Benches of this court on the point as to the applicability of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 to a pending proceeding. Under sub-s. (3) of S. 1 of the said Act, the Act extends to the whole of Calcutta and to all areas which have been or may hereafter be constituted municipalities under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932. It is also further provided that the State Government may extend the operation of the Act to any other area by Notification. By Notification dated July 23, 1975 published in the Calcutta Gazette (Extraordinary) on July 24, 1975 the town of Dubrajpur was declared as municipal area. In consequence, under the provisions of the said Act referred to above, the operation of the Act extended to the said town constituted as municipality as aforesaid.

2. The petitioner instituted a suit on January 16, 1975 for recovery of possession as also arrears of rents and damages in respect of a premises held by the defendant as a monthly tenant at a monthly rent of Rs. 31/- according to Bengali calendar month. The tenancy was determined by notice calling upon the defendant to vacate the suit premises with the expiry of the month of Agrahayan 1381 B. S. When this suit was instituted, the provisions of the said Act had no operation in respect of the town of Dubrajpur in which the suit premises are situate. As the suit was pending, the provisions of the said Act became applicable to the town of Dubrajpur on its declaration as municipality as aforesaid.

3. The defendant in course of proceeding filed an application stating that in view of the area being declared as the municipal area, the suit was to be governed under the provision of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act instead of the T. P. Act. This application was rejected by the learned Munsif on the view that the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act would not apply to pending cases. When the Rule challenging the aforesaid order came up for hearing before Janah, J. it was noted in the order that in case of Niranjan Modak v. Lakshminarayan Guin, reported in AIR 1976 Cal 322 R. Bhattacharya, J. was of opinion that S. 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act would retrospectively apply to such suits. A contrary view was taken by Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. in Gurdial Singh v. Animesh Ch. Roy Gupta, reported in (1976) 3 Cal HC (N) 301. The Rule in the circumstances has come up before us on reference by Janah, J.

4. It is well settled that the court will take into consideration even in appeal a change of law or facts that may have taken place during the pendency of the proceeding. Bhattacharya, J. has referred to several decisions of the Supreme Court in support of the above proposition. As was observed in Lachmeshwar Prasad Shukul v. Keshwar Lal Chowdhury, reported in AIR 1941 FC 5, it was held that the court is bound to consider any change either on fact or in law, which has supervened since the judgment was entered as was the position in that case. Bhattacharya, J. strongly relied on the decision in S. B. K. Oil Mills v. Subhas Chandra, reported in AIR 1961 SC 1596 where the Supreme Court was considering the provisions of S. 12 of the Bombay Rents Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947 which becomes applicable on its extension to particular area by notification. In this case the suit by the landlord for possession was filed on April 25, 1957 and while the suit was pending by notification of August 16, 1958, Part II of the said Act which included S. 12 was extended to the area where the premises are situated. The tenant lost in the trial court as it was held that the Act was prospective which the Supreme Court considered erroneous. It was observed:—

"But a section may be prospective in some parts and retrospective in other parts. While it is the ordinary rule that substantive rights should not be held to be taken away except by express provision or clear implication, many Acts, though prospective in form, have been given retrospective operation, if the intention of the Legislature is apparent. This is more so, when acts are passed to protect the public against some evil or abuse. (See Craies on Statute Law, 5th Edn. p. 365). The sub-section (S. 12 (1)) says that a landlord shall not be entitled to the recovery of possession of any premises so long as the tenant pays or is ready and willing to pay the standard rent etc. and observes and performs the other conditions of the tenancy. In other words, no decree can be passed granting possession to the landlord, if the tenant fulfils the conditions above mentioned."

The Court further observed:—

"The point of time when the sub-section will operate is when the decree for recovery of possession would have to be passed. Thus, the language of the sub-section applies equally to the suits pending when Part II comes into force and those to be filed subsequently. The contention of the respondent that the operation of S. 12 (1) is limited to suits filed after the Act comes into force in a particular area cannot be accepted. The conclusion must follow that the present suit cannot be decreed in favour of the respondent."

4-A. Relying on this decision, Bhattacharya, J. referred to S. 13 (1) of the Act which states as follows:

"Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any other law, no order or decree for the recovery of possession of any premises shall be made by any court in favour of the landlord against a tenant except on one or more of the following grounds... .."

5. There are several grounds for which the landlord may evict the tenant. It was noted that the Act was not in force when the suit was filed and the landlord wanted to evict the tenant under the provisions of the T. P. Act. According to Bhattacharya, J. in view of the clear language of S. 13 (1) of the Act there can be no doubt whatsoever that in spite of any other law being in force no court can pass any order or decree for recovery of possession of the suit premises evicting a tenant except on one or more of the grounds mentioned in sub-s. (1) of S. 13. Accordingly, the court even in pending cases is to see whether any order or decree for recovery of possession can be passed according to the provisions of the Act and it does not matter whether the suit was originally filed under a different statute.

6. Chittatosh Mookerjee, J., on the other hand, referred to a Bench decision of this court in the case of Madho Prasad Sukul v. Gangaram Saraogi reported in ILR (1968) 2 Cal 183 where the provisions of the Act had been extended to Purulia during the pendency of the ejectment suit against the tenant. P. N. Mookherjee, J. speaking for the court observed as follows:

"It is an accepted rule of interpretation of statutes that in the absence of anything in the statute itself, either express or implied, giving it retrospective effect or operation in the case of a statute, which affect substantive or vested right, it should be construed as prospective and should not be applied to pending actions. The rule is different in procedural statutes.

The clear indication in S. 13, of which sub-s. (6) is also a part, is to point out and emphasise that the decree or order for eviction mentioned in sub-s. (1) of Section 13 obviously refers to a decree or order to be passed in a suit which is otherwise governed by the Act. A suit, which is governed by this Act, must be a suit contemplated in S. 13 (6) and must accordingly, comply with the requirements of the said sub-section. To a pending action, however, it will be impossible to apply the said sub-section. Vide in this connection, V. R. Varma v. Mohan Kumar Mukherjee, 66 Cal WN 796: (AIR 1962 Cal 563) (SB) where a similar view of Section 13 (6) was taken. Indeed, if this statute is to be given a retrospective operation in the sense that it would apply to pending actions, it would really impose upon the landlord an impossible and absurd condition of complying with a provision, which was not in existence at the date of the suit, but compliance with which would be necessary to enable him to have a decree. We do not think that the Legislature even intended or contemplated such a consequence."

7. As has been held in the judicial decisions application of provisions of an Act to a pending proceeding may be made by a competent Legislature. Such application however can be made by express provision or by clear intendment. In the case before us, there is no express provision providing that on extension of the operation of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act all pending suits should be governed by the provision of the said Act. The question of intendment will have to be considered with reference to other provisions of the Act so that all the provisions of the Act can be given a harmonious working by such retrospective operation. In other words as all the provisions of the Act are to have and to be deemed to have effective and harmonious operation, if by retrospective operation some sections of the Act are incapable of application and rendered nugatory, such retrospective operation shall not be considered to be the intendment of the legislature. If the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act are made applicable to a pending proceeding, the application of the provisions of S. 17, sub-s. (1) and (2) and following sections will be rendered completely nugatory. As has been held by the Division Bench, it would be impossible for the landlord to comply with the provision of sub-s. (6) of S. 13 of the Act which provides for a notice of one month from the institution of the suit. We therefore find it difficult to hold that there was any intendment of the Legislature that the provision of the said Act would be applicable to a pending action on extension of the operation of the Act to the area in which the suit premises are situate. This position was also noted by Mookherjee, J. when he came to the conclusion for reasons indicated that there was no ground for holding that Legislature intended that the provision of the said Act would be applicable to pending action where it did not originally apply. As noted by the Division Bench, the suit contemplated in S. 13 (1) is a suit in respect of which a notice is given under the provisions of S. 13 (6) and read in that light the suit contemplated under sub-s. (1) of S. 13 must be one which is otherwise governed by the said Act. This position did not arise in the decision of the Supreme Court we have cited above and there was no such conflict in respect of the operation of the different sections of the Act and whatever incongruity might arise had been saved by Explanation to S. 12 of the Bombay Act which was also noticed by the said court. Accordingly, the case is distinguishable with reference to the facts as also of the provisions of the law of the case before us. In this view of the matter, we are in agreement with the decision of Mookerjee, J. that the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act have no application to pending proceedings in respect of suits for recovery of possession of the premises situate in an area to which the Act is extended when the suit was pending.

8. The impugned order accordingly is sustained and the connected Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 246
SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND
H. N. SEN, J.

Nirmal Kumar Banerjee, Petitioner v. Panihati Co-operative Bank Ltd. and others, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 1408 of 1973, D/- 8-12-1976.

W. B. Co-operative Societies Act (1940), S. 133-A (2) — Appeal to Co-operative Tribunal — Provisions of S. 29 (2) applicable — Period for obtaining copy of impugned award and its reasons, to be excluded, even though certified copy is not required to be filed with the appeal. (Lim. Act (1963), Ss. 29 (2), 12 (2)).

Under S. 133-A (2) the Co-operative Tribunal, in exercising the powers of the appellate court, will be governed by the provisions of the Limitation Act which are applicable to courts and accordingly S. 29 (2) of the said Act in respect of the provisions relating to appeals will be applicable when such application has not been expressly excluded by the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act save as regards the period of limitation for filing the appeal. The Tribunal accordingly will have the power to entertain an appeal subject to the provisions of S. 12 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1963, excluding the period for obtaining copy of the award and its reasons sought to be appealed from. Case law discussed. (Para 8)

It may be that the certified copy is not required to be filed along with the appeal. But when reasons for the award have been given, a person aggrieved is entitled to know the findings against him to consider his future course of action whether to file an appeal or other steps should be taken and for such purpose, copy of the reasons was necessary to him which could only be obtained from the certified copy thereof. Whether it is necessary that certified copies of the reasons of the award should be annexed to the memorandum of appeal or not, time requisite for obtaining the certified copies of these documents shall have to be excluded as plainly provided in S. 12 (2), Lim. Act. AIR 1928 PC 103, Foll. (Para 9)

K. P. Sinha and Parimal Das, for Petitioner; Bhabesh Ch. Mitter, J. Islam, for Opposite Party No. 1; G. N. Roy and Biren Chakraborty, for the State.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule is directed against order dated 20-7-1972 passed by the Assistant Registrar of Co-operative Societies, 24-Parganas (North) as the Co-operative Tribunal rejecting the petitioner's appeal on the ground of limitation. It appears that there were certain disputes between the petitioner and others and the co-operative bank and an award was passed by a Board of Arbitrators in dispute case No. 342 of 1969-70 in respect of the said dispute. The award was made on 11-12-1971 and was communicated to the petitioner on 21-12-1971. The appeal petition against the award was filed on 16-2-1972. The appellate authority, the Co-operative Tribunal, was of the opinion that under S. 134 of the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1940 read with the Fourth Schedule thereof an appeal was to be filed within a month from the date of communication of the award to the person aggrieved. As this appeal was filed out of time beyond one month from date of communication, it was barred by limitation and was summarily rejected. This Rule is against this order. After the dismissal of the appeal, the petitioner filed a review petition against the order to the Government of West Bengal and the same was also rejected on March 30/31, 1973 by the Deputy Secretary, Co-operative Department of the Government. Both these orders are the subject-matter of the challenge in this Rule.

2. Mr. Sinha appearing for the petitioner submitted that the appellate authority was in error in dismissing the application on the ground of limitation as the petitioner had applied for certified copy of the reasons of the award on 27-12-1971 and the copies were available to him on 24-1-1972. Accordingly, the petitioner was entitled to an exclusion of the time so taken under provision of S. 12 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1963. There is no dispute that if the time for copy is taken into account, the appeal would be in time.

3. The first consideration is whether the provisions of Lim. Act, 1963 apply to proceedings before tribunals under the Act. Mr. Mitter appearing for the co-operative bank has referred to various decisions in support of his contention that the provisions of Lim. Act have no application to the proceeding under the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act. He has referred to the decision in K. Venkateswara Rao v. Bekkam Narasimha Reddy reported in AIR 1969 SC 872 in which the court held that the Lim. Act cannot apply to proceedings like an election petition in the High Court inasmuch as the Representation of the People Act is a complete and self contained Code which does not admit of the introduction of the principles or the provisions of law contained in the Lim. Act. Lim. Act, 1963 states in its preamble that the Act is for consolidation and amendment of the law of limitation of suits and other proceedings and for other purposes connected therewith. Section 29 (2) of the Act is in the following terms:

"Where any special or local law prescribes for any suit appeal or application a period of limitation different from the period prescribed by the Schedule, the provisions of S. 3 shall apply as if such period were the period prescribed by the Schedule and for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law, the provisions contained in Ss. 4 to 24 (inclusive) shall apply only in so far as, and to the extent to which, they are not expressly excluded by such special or local law."

4. On perusal, the section would indicate that where a provision of the period of limitation prescribed in any special or local law was different from the period under the Lim. Act, such period shall be deemed to be the provision for the purpose of limitation as if such period was the period prescribed by the Schedule to the Act. It further provides that for the purpose of determining any period prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law, Ss. 4 to 24 inclusive shall apply, only in so far as, and to the extent to which, they are not expressly excluded by such special or local law. Accordingly, if there is any specific provision excluding the operation of those sections in any local or special law those sections will cease to apply to matters in connection therewith. It was accordingly held in the decision of K. V. Rao that in view of the provisions of S. 86 (1) of the Representation of the People Act, the provisions of the Lim. Act would not be applicable.

5. Mr. Mitter relied on the case of Nityanand v. Life Insurance Corporation of India, reported in AIR 1970 SC 209 where the Court was considering the scope of Art. 137 of the Lim. Act, 1963. It was laid down there that this Article only contemplated applications before the court as it was included in the Third Division of the Schedule to the Lim. Act of 1963 which related to applications only before the Court. Accordingly, provisions of Ss. 4 and 5 of the Lim. Act were inapplicable to such applications before Labour Courts and the Scheme of the Lim. Act is that it only deals with applications to Courts. Mr. Mitter also referred to the decision in Bando Banaji v. Bhaskar Balaji, AIR 1972 Mys 311 in which it was held that in order to attract S. 29 (2), the proceedings initiated under a special or local law must also be those which are legally capable of being instituted before a court only. In coming to this decision, the court relied on the decision in Joshi's case, we have just referred to. The next case referred to is M/s. Capstan Meter (India) Ltd. v. State of Rajasthan, reported in AIR 1974 Raj 63, in which it was held that, in an application under S. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, provisions of S. 12 (2) have no application because it was neither an appeal nor an application for review. In R. T. Chinnavenkatesh v. Senior Regional Transport Officer and Licensing Officer of Mysore-4, AIR 1976 Kant 69, it was held that S. 29 (2) of the Lim. Act does not say that the provisions of the Lim. Act would be applicable to appeals filed under a taxing statute. Hence it is not possible to apply by analogy the principle underlying S. 5 of the Lim. Act to appeals filed under S. 15 of the Karnataka Motor Vehicles Taxation Act (35 of 1957). In this decision, the court found that the provisions of the Lim. Act would be applicable only if it was stated in the relevant section that it would apply to taxing statute.

In Lakshmi Chand v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 Raj 197, it was held that the provisions of S. 5 of the Lim. Act would be applicable only to appeals and applications filed in a court of law within the strict sense of the term and cannot be invoked in cases of applications and appeals presented before the Tribunals which are not courts of law but are statutory bodies performing quasi-judicial functions.

6. Mr. Sinha referred us to the decision in Maloji Rao v. State of Madhya Pradesh reported in AIR 1969 SC 953 in which the court condoned the delay in filing the appeal on exclusion of the time taken for obtaining the copy of the judgment. It was provided in S. 34 of the Ryotwari Act provisions whereof were applicable to the case that subject to the provisions of Lim. Act in force at the time, no appeal shall be filed before the Board after the expiry of 90 days. It was held that in hearing an appeal under the Act, the court must guide itself by the provisions of the Lim. Act in force for extension and computation of the period of limitation. The Court considered the provisions of S. 29 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1908 and held that this section goes to show that unless excluded by the Jagirs Act or Ryotwari Act, S. 12 of the Lim. Act would be applicable to appeals filed before the Board of Revenue under any of the provisions of these Acts. Mr. Sinha also referred to the case of D. P. Mishra v. Kamal Narayan Sharma, reported in AIR 1970 SC 1477 in which the court was considering a case under the Representation of the People Act. It was held there that the period of limitation provided therein was a special law within the meaning of S. 29 (2) and the period when the court was closed could be excluded in computing the period of limitation prescribed in S. 177-A when the High Court is to hear the appeal as an appeal from original decree. In the case of Magnuram v. Delhi Municipality, reported in AIR 1976 SC 105, it was held that under S. 29 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1963, unless there is express exclusion S. 5 could be availed of for the purpose of extending the period of limitation by special or local law, if there was sufficient cause for not presenting the application in Court within the period of limitation. In Sunit Paramanik v. Santipur Industrial Co-operative Society Ltd., 77 Cal WN 118: (AIR 1973 Cal 364) a bench decision of this Court considered S. 29 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1963. It was held that by reason of the provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 29 of the Lim. Act, 1963, the period of limitation prescribed by the Co-operative Societies Act is to be deemed to be the period of limitation prescribed by the Lim. Act and the provisions of Ss. 4 to 24 would apply to the said period. In Treasury Building Co-operative Society Ltd. v. Sukumar Ganguly, (1975) 79 Cal WN 573, it was held that provisions of S. 29 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1963 would apply to the period of limitation prescribed under the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act and the provisions of Ss. 4 to 34 of the Lim. Act will be applicable for computing the period of limitation in maintaining a suit under the Co-operative Societies Act.

7. A review of the decisions indicate that the provisions of the Lim. Act, 1963 are applicable to suits, appeals and applications before the courts. These provisions in respect of the period of limitation can be modified by any special or local law for such proceedings before any court and unless expressly excluded, the provisions of Ss. 4 to 24 inclusive will be applicable in all these proceedings. In respect of proceedings before the Tribunals and authorities other than courts, the provisions of the Lim. Act would be applicable if they are expressly or impliedly extended to such proceeding by the special or local law. Under S. 29 (2), of the Lim. Act, 1963, the provisions of S. 3 will apply with such modifications as may be provided in such special or local law and unless expressly excluded the provisions of Ss. 4 to 24 inclusive shall also apply to such proceedings.

8. Under the provisions of S. 133-A (2), of the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1940 the Tribunal shall hear the appeals under the Act as specified in its Sch. 4 and shall exercise all the powers conferred under the appellate court by O. 41 in the First Schedule to the C. P. C. In respect of such appeals the Tribunal called the Co-operative Tribunal, in exercising the powers of the appellate court, will be governed by the provisions of the Lim. Act which are applicable to courts and accordingly S. 29 (2) of the said Act in respect of the provisions relating to appeals will be applicable when such application has not been expressly excluded by the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act save as regards the period of limitation for filing the appeal. The Tribunal accordingly will have the power to and will entertain an appeal subject to the provisions of S. 12 (2) of the Lim. Act, 1963 excluding the period for obtaining copy of the award and its reasons sought to be appealed from. The Supreme Court also held that when the Lim. Act has been made applicable, the provisions under S. 29 (2), unless otherwise excluded, shall be applicable to tribunals like the Board of Revenue as was held in the decision in Maloji Rao's case reported in AIR 1969 SC 953. For all these reasons, we accept the contention raised by Mr. Sinha and hold that the provisions of S. 29 (2) would be applicable to appeals under the West Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1940 also as held in Sunit Pramanik's case (AIR 1973 Cal 364).

9. Mr. Mitter has next contended that there was no rule that certified copy of the reasons of the award was to be annexed with the Memorandum of Appeal. Accordingly, the petitioner is not entitled to avail of the time that was required for obtaining the certified copy. It may be that the certified copy is not required to be filed along with the appeal. But when reasons for the award have been given, a person aggrieved is entitled to know the findings against him to consider his future course of action whether to file an appeal or other steps should be taken and, for such purpose, copy of the reasons was necessary to him which could only be obtained from the certified copy thereof. It was held in Jijibhoy N. Surty v. T. S. Chettyar, 32 Cal WN 845: (AIR 1928 PC 103), by the Privy Council that S. 12 of the Lim. Act is unrestricted in its scope and is a positive enactment. It does not make the exclusion of the time requisite for obtaining the certified copies of the judgment and decree dependent upon these documents being required to be annexed to the Memorandum of Appeal by the rules of the C. P. C. or the rules as amended by the High Court. In computing the period of limitation therefore such time shall always be excluded whether these documents are necessary to the presentation of the appeal or not. This ruling conclusively lays down that whether it is necessary that certified copies of the reasons of the award should be annexed to the Memorandum of Appeal or not, time requisite for obtaining the certified copies of these documents shall have to be excluded as plainly provided in S. 12 (2).

10. Mr. Mitter has further contended that reasons of the award do not form any part of the award and, accordingly, the time taken for obtaining the certified copy thereof should not be excluded from computation of the period of limitation. According to Mr. Mitter, it was not necessary for an aggrieved party to look into the reasons that might be the basis of the award. He could simply file an appeal by stating that he was aggrieved by the award. This contention in our opinion, cannot be accepted by us, as it should always be open to the aggrieved party to know the reasons on which some findings are arrived at against him. Accordingly, for all these reasons, we are of the view that the time requisite for obtaining the certified copy of the entire award should be excluded for computing the period of limitation under S. 12 (2) of the Lim. Act in respect of an appeal under the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1940.

11. As we have already indicated, there is no dispute that if such time is taken into consideration, the appeal is well within time, as provided in S. 134 read with 4th Schedule, Item 7 of the Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1940. The appellate authority was, therefore, in error in exercise of its jurisdiction in rejecting the appeal on the ground of limitation.

12. For all these reasons, the impugned order of the Assistant Registrar rejecting the appeal cannot be sustained and is set aside. The other consequential orders are also set aside as they are based on the order rejecting the Memorandum of Appeal.

13. The Rule is, accordingly, made absolute. We direct that the appeal be registered and be disposed of in accordance with law. There will be no order as to costs. Let the records be sent down at once.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Rule made absolute.

the State of West Bengal under the Motor Vehicles Act, in a Motor Accident Claim Case, the Tribunal is entitled to follow its own procedure for ends of justice in the context of circumstances of a case. Consequently the order of Tribunal for re-examining witnesses of both the parties for patching up the lacuna in evidence does not offend any provision of law and it is consistent with natural justice. Somen Bose, Mukul Ghose and S. Pal, for Petitioner; A. N. Roy Choudhury and Sadhan Chandra Pal, for Opposite Parties.

S. K. DATTA, J.:— In this Rule the Calcutta State Transport Corporation has challenged an order dated 5-2-1968 passed in motor accident claim case No. 127 of 1963.

2. It appears that there was admittedly a collision between Car No. WBC 7862 and State Bus No. WBS 1675 at the junction of Raja Dinendra Street and Ultadanga Road at about 12 noon on 13-8-1963. As a result of this collision one of the passengers died and several passengers were injured. The person who died was the husband of the opposite party No. 1 and the father of the other opposite parties. The learned Judge was of the opinion that on the evidence adduced by the parties it was very difficult to decide either way. Accordingly, for ends of justice, by the impugned order he directed that an opportunity should be given to the claimants to examine further the P. Ws. 1, 2 and 3 and also to examine E. C. D'Souza, mechanical expert, who examined the Bus after the accident in connection with the criminal case arising out of the said accident, with like opportunity to the Corporation to examine its witnesses. The learned Judge relied on AIR 1964 Punj 235, New India Assurance v. Punjab Roadways wherein it was held that in the absence of a restraining provision a tribunal is at liberty to follow any procedure which it may choose to evolve for itself so long as such procedure is orderly and consistent with the rules of natural justice and does not contravene any provision of law. This order has been impugned in this Rule.

3. It has been contended that since O. 18, R. 17 has been excluded in such trial, there is no scope for allowing further evidence to be adduced in re-examination in particular to patch up a lacuna in the evidence. He has also relied on the decision in Shyamapada Neogy v. Asoke Kumar Biswas reported in (1967) 71 Cal WN 747 in which it was held that the recall of witness after closure of evidence would cause surprise and gravest of prejudice to the other side and it was further held in that case that it was really to fill up the lacuna in the case, the pretext of re-examination was taken.

4. As was held in the Punjab case, no procedure has been laid down for trial of claims by the Tribunal. It may also be mentioned that the entirety of O. 18 of the C. P. C. has been excluded in such trial by the Rules framed by this State under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939. In absence of restraint, the Tribunal is entitled to follow its own procedure for ends of justice in the context of circumstances of a case. Such procedure however will have to be consistent with the principles of fair play and natural justice and should not cause any prejudice to any party. Further in respect of claims for compensation arising from accident, where the involvement of a particular vehicle is not in dispute, the question of onus becomes immaterial. In such case it is only proper for the person liable to answer the claim for compensation to establish that his vehicle was not responsible for the accident or it was due to any contributory negligence of the injured person or the other vehicle or to any other relevant cause. The Tribunal will take into consideration the entirety of the evidence adduced before it by the parties in arriving to its finding while making his award under S. 110-B of the Act.

5. In this case, in the context of the admitted accident and involvement of the Corporation's vehicle therein leading to the death of the husband and father of the petitioners, the Tribunal deemed it fit in interest of justice to allow the petitioners another opportunity to examine the witnesses already examined as also the mechanical expert who examined the vehicle after the accident. Like opportunity was also given to the Corporation to examine its witness already examined as also the driver who then drove the vehicle and any other witness as the Corporation would think necessary. Needless to mention, witnesses of one party will be subject to cross-examination by the other party. Such procedure, in our opinion, does not offend any provision of law while it is consistent with natural justice and fair-play and will not cause any prejudice to the Corporation.

6. In the circumstances, the Rule fails and is discharged. There will be no order for costs. Let the case be disposed with utmost expedition.

H. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Application dismissed.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.,

The State of West Bengal, Petitioner v. Sailendra Kumar Sen, Respondent.

Civil Revn. Cases Nos. 1817 and 1818 of 1972, D/- 9-11-1976.

W. B. Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 5-B (as inserted by Act 28 of 1954) — Effective date of applicability.

The effective date in S. 5-B in respect of sales of raiyati and under raiyati holdings under the relevant statutes mentioned therein is the first day of June 1954 as therein provided.

Section 5-B does not operate as a bar to the execution of decree for arrears of rent as money decree against raiyati or under-raiyati interest and S. 168-A (1) is impliedly repealed by vesting of the interest of intermediaries (which include raiyats and under-raiyats) in the State.

(Para 37)

It accordingly appears that notwithstanding S. 5-B, till vesting there is no bar to the voluntary sales of tenures or holdings of raiyats or under-raiyats or to sales of such interest in execution of money decrees under the provisions of C. P. C. If any such sale has taken place during the material period till vesting and was or could be treated as a sale under the Code if otherwise valid and not under the provisions of the aforesaid Acts, such sale will not be void or deemed to be void under S. 5-B and has to be sustained as a valid sale in law.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— The Division Bench consisting of A. K. Sen, B. C. Roy, JJ. has referred the above revision cases to the Special Bench in view of the questions of great public importance involved therein. The questions relate to the interpretation of the provisions of S. 5-B of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (West Bengal Act 1 of 1954) hereinafter referred to as the said Act, with reference to the date of their application to raiyati and under-raiyati holdings and consequences arising therefrom.

2. The relevant facts are as follows:—

On December 18, 1970 the Assistant Settlement Officer Settlement 'C' Camp No. IIA, Diamond Harbour, initiated proceedings under S. 44 (2a) of the said Act for revising the finally published record-of-rights in respect of some khatians within his jurisdiction, which, according to him, were incorrectly recorded with auction purchaser the opposite party herein, as raiyat. Proceedings in respect of entries of khatians Nos. 10, 11 (624, 625 Khanda) of Mouza Haradhanpore gave rise to Case No. 156 of 1970 (under S. 44 (2a)) while proceedings in respect of entries of khatians Nos. 6, 7, 13, 15 and 24 (302, 308, 309 and 310 Khanda) of Mouja Kailpara was registered as Case No. 22 of 1970 (under S. 44 (2a)). It appears that the lands were purchased by the opposite party in rent execution sales, on November 6, 1954 in respect of Haradhanpore lands and on Dec. 3, 1954 in respect of Kailpara lands. It was held by the Assistant Settlement Officer in the said S. 44 (2a) proceedings, following some decisions of this Court, that on the issue of the notification under S. 49 bringing the provisions of Chap. VI, relating to acquisition of interests of raiyats and under-raiyats, into force, S. 5-B applied with retrospective effect to raiyati and under-raiyati holdings, as if they were estates as contemplated in the said section. As a result, in accordance with S. 5-B which provides that there could be no sale of estates under the Bengal Tenancy Act after June 1, 1954 and any sale held thereafter is to be deemed as void and of no effect the auction purchases in rent sales made admittedly after that date by the opposite party were thus void and of no effect. Accordingly by orders dated January 8 and 27, 1971 the record-of-rights in respect of above khatians were directed to be revised as recording the names of the former recorded raiyats as raiyats with possession of the lands with the auction purchaser as adverse to the recorded raiyats.

3. Appeals were preferred against the aforesaid orders by the opposite party under S. 44 (3) giving rise to E. A. Appeals Nos. 86 and 87 of 1971 respectively. By an order dated December 9, 1971 the learned Ninth Additional District Judge, Alipore as the Tribunal under S. 44 (3) allowed the appeals on contest and set aside the impugned orders holding that S. 5-B had no application to raiyati interest and the Assistant Settlement Officer was not justified in treating the auction purchases as invalid. The State of West Bengal has obtained the connected rules against the said orders of the learned Tribunal which on reference, are now before us.

4. We shall now consider the relevant sections of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. S. 4 is as follows:

"4. (1) The State Government may from time to time by notification declare that with effect from the date mentioned in the notification, all estates and the rights of every intermediary in each such estate situated in any district or part of a district specified in the notification, shall vest in the State free from all incumbrances.

(2) The date mentioned in every such notification shall be the commencement of an agricultural year and the notifications shall be issued so as to ensure that the whole area to which this Act extends, vests in the State on or before the 1st day of Baisakh of the Bengali year 1362" (April 15, 1955).

5. The intermediary has been defined as in S. 2 (i) as

"2.(i) 'intermediary' means a proprietor, tenure-holder, under tenure-holder or any other intermediary above a raiyat or a non-agricultural tenant and includes a service tenure-holder and, in relation to mines and minerals, includes a lessee and a sub-lessee...."

6. This definition by itself did not include raiyati or under-raiyati interest in any holding.

7. By West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act, West Bengal Act XIII of 1954 which received the President's assent on April 23, 1954, S. 5-A was inserted with retrospective effect from the date of commencement of the parent Act. The relevant excerpt is as follows:—

"5-A. (1) The State Government may after the date of vesting enquire into any case of transfer of any land by an intermediary made between the 5th day of May, 1953 and the date of vesting, if in its opinion there are prima facie reasons for believing that such transfer was not bona fide.

(2) If after such enquiry the State Government finds that such transfer was not bona fide, it shall make an order to that effect and thereupon the transfer shall stand cancelled as from the date on which it was made or purported to have been made."

8. Section 5-B was inserted with retrospective effect from the 1st day of June, 1954 by West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Second Amendment) Act, 1954 West Bengal Act XXVIII of 1954 which received the President's assent on October 2, 1954. The relevant portion is as follows:—

"5-B. On and from the 1st day of June, 1954, no estate, tenure or under-tenure shall be liable to be sold under the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act, 1859 or the Cooch Behar Revenue Sales Act, 1897 or the Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation, 1819 or the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, as the case may be, and any sales which took place on or after that day under any of those acts or that regulation shall be deemed to have been void and of no effect"

9. Chapter VI is concerned with acquisition of interests of raiyats and under-raiyats and comprises of Ss. 49 and 52. Sections 50 and 51 being omitted with retrospective effect. Section 49 and S. 52 were substituted with retrospective effect for the original section by West Bengal Estates Acquisition (Amendment) Act (West Bengal Act XXXV of 1955) and received the President's assent on November 25, 1955. The relevant provisions are as follows:—

"49. The provisions of this Chapter shall come into force on such date and in such district or part of a district as the State Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, appoint and for this purpose different dates may be appointed for different districts or parts of districts."

10. Section 52 substituted with retrospective effect for the original section by the aforesaid Act in relevant extracts is as follows:—

"52. On the issue of a notification under S. 49 the provisions of Chaps. II, III, V, and VI shall, with such modifications as may be necessary, apply mutatis mutandis to raiyats and under-raiyats as if such raiyats and under-raiyats were intermediaries and the land held by them were estates and a person holding under a raiyat or an under-raiyat were a raiyat for the purposes of Cls. (c) and (d) of S. 5"

11. By notification No. 6804 L Ref. dated the 9th April, 1956 (published in Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary of same date, Part I, p. 743), Chap. VI came into force in all districts of West Bengal with effect from the 10th day of April 1956.

12. The points for determination in this reference are— (1) what is the effective date in S. 5-B in respect of sales of raiyati and under-raiyati interest under the statutes mentioned therein.

(2) whether during the period S. 5-B operated as a bar to the execution of rent decree as money decree against raiyati and under-raiyati interest and what is the effect of vesting on S. 168-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.

13. The Judicial decisions on this aspect have not been uniform. In the earliest decision in Prahlad Chandra Dey v. Govinda Chandra Dey, (1963) 67 Cal WN 452, S. K. Sen, J. held as follows:—

"... ..the effective date to be inserted in S. 5-B when we are concerned with the sale of raiyati jotes cannot be any date earlier than 25th November, 1955, when Ss. 49 and 52 of Chap. VI were substituted for old sections; and the date to be substituted in S. 5-B for avoiding the court sales of raiyati jotes would be 10th April, 1956, the date of the issue of notifications under S. 49, and not the date on which the Ss. 49 and 52 in their present forms were substituted by amendment of the Estates Acquisition Act. It is to be observed that in S. 52, it is clearly provided that the provision of Chaps. II etc. shall not apply as they are, but they shall apply with necessary modifications. When the Act became applicable to raiyati jotes from a much later date, it is also necessary modification of S. 5-B of Chap. II that the date mentioned in S. 5-B from which Court sale of raiyati jotes should become void would be a much later date viz. the date on which by notification the Act was made applicable to raiyati interests."

In Aftabuddin Ahmed v. State of West Bengal, (1967) 71 Cal WN 300, R. N. Dutt, J. was considering the effective date in S. 5-A in respect of raiyati and under-raiyati holdings and it was observed, "When the words of S. 5-A specifically mentioned a certain date there is no scope to hold that in respect of raiyats and under-raiyats the effective date would be some other date because otherwise the raiyats and under-raiyats would be adversely affected... ..the effective date in S. 5-A of the Act in respect of raiyats and under-raiyats also is 5th day of May, 1953."

14. In Haripada Pramanik v. Gopal Chandra Maity, (1970) 74 Cal WN 400 the Court was considering sales of raiyati holdings of judgment debtor in 1960 by the auction purchaser. It was observed—

"In the present case, the interest that was sold was that of a raiyat. Chapter VI of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, which deals with raiyats and under-raiyats, came into force on the 10th day of April, 1956, on the issue of a notification under S. 49 of the Act and thereupon S. 5-B became applicable to raiyats and under raiyats with such modifications as might be necessary".

15. The Division Bench held that even so there was no bar on the ex-landlord to execute the decree under the C. P. C. treating them as money decrees, as a rent sale thereafter under the Bengal Tenancy Act was neither permissible nor possible. There was no bar in S. 5-B of the Act to such sale of the lands held by the judgment-debtors then under the State.

16. In earlier Bench decisions in Ahi-dhar Ghosh v. Sm. Nisi Bala, 62 Cal WN 172: (AIR 1958 Cal 253), it was held that when as a result of vesting, the defaulting tenure ceased to exist, the proviso of S. 168-A (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act would apply, that is to say, other properties of the ex-tenant might be proceeded against. In another case in Hiranmoyee v. Apal Choudhury, (1958) 62 Cal WN 373 it was held by another Division Bench that on vesting the decree holder is entitled to proceed against the properties of the ex-tenant other than the defaulting tenure and the bar of S. 168-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act would not apply to such a case. It was further held that there was an implied repeal of S. 168-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act by S. 5-B of the said Act.

17. The Division Bench in Haripada Pramanik's case (1970) 74 Cal WN 400 following the above two Bench decisions held:—

"There is, therefore, no reason why the sales in question would not have the effect of sales under money decrees. The judgment-debtor had lost the original holdings on the vesting of his interest in the State, but he still had some interest in the lands which constituted those holdings in view of the provisions of S. 6 of the Estates Acquisition Act. It is this interest which passed to the auction purchaser upon his purchase of the disputed lands."

18. In Ambujakhya Mukherjee v. State of West Bengal, ILR (1966) 1 Cal 495, P. B. Mukherjee, J. (as his Lordship then was) on p. 525-6, para. 55 was meeting the argument that raiyati lands could not be vested in the State under the said Act in view of the enforcement of Chap. VI after expiry of Baisakh 1, 1362 as provided in S. 4 (2). His Lordship referred to the observations made by him in Haranath Ghosh v. State of West Bengal, (1963) 67 Cal WN 129 as set out below:—

"The words 'mutatis mutandis' following the word 'modification' make it abundantly clear as to the modifications intended under S. 52 of the Act. In other words, the word 'modification' in S. 52 of the Act means contextual adaptation of these chapters of the Act to the case of raiyats and under-raiyats and not amendment of the substantive provisions and effects of those chapters. The contextual adaptation is only intended to make these chapters applicable to the case of raiyats and under-raiyats... .."

19. Janah, J. In Basdeo Singh v. Binode Behari, (1973) 77 Cal WN 969 observed as follows:—

"According to the view taken in Ambujakhya Mukherjee v. State, therefore, it is not permissible to read 10th April, 1956 or any other date in place of 1st June, 1954."

20. In the Bench decision in State of West Bengal v. Bithika Maity, (1975) 79 Cal WN 216 the Court was of opinion that the proposition enunciated in the case of Aftabuddin Ahmed, ((1967) 71 Cal WN 300) in respect of S. 5-A applies with all its force to cases under S. 5-B as well. It was observed:

"When legislature made Ss. 49 and 52 of the Act retrospective with effect from the day when the Act first came into force, it must be said that the date mentioned in S. 5-B must be the effective date not only in respect of intermediaries whose estate vested in the State under S. 5 but also in respect of intermediaries whose estate vested under S. 52 of the Act that is raiyats and under-raiyats. When the words of S. 5-B specifically mentioned a certain date there is no scope for holding that in respect of raiyats and under-raiyats the effective date would be some other date because otherwise the raiyats and under-raiyats would be adversely affected. The legislature must have considered this aspect of the matter when it made Ss. 5-A, 5-B and 52 retrospective from the date when the Estates Acquisition Act first came into force. It being in the domain of legislature court cannot question the same."

21. The Bench making the present reference was also of opinion that the interpretation given by S. K. Sen, J. would be beyond the powers of Court. Such alteration of date in S. 5-B would mean legislation by Court beyond the authority of S. 52 which authorised only contextual adaptation of provisions of S. 52 to raiyati or under-raiyati interest brought under the purview of the Act on the notification of S. 49.

22. Mr. P. K. Sen Gupta learned Government Pleader, relying on the Aftabuddin's case ((1967) 71 Cal WN 300) as also on the Bench decision in Baithika Maity's case ((1975) 79 Cal WN 216) contended that the provisions of S. 5-B became operative on and from June 1, 1954 for all purposes. It is not open to the Court to fix another date for the purpose when the legislature in its wisdom fixed the relevant date for purpose of S. 5-B. Mr. Amarendra Mohan Mitra as also Mr. Swadesh Ranjan Bhunia learned Advocates for the opposite parties, contended on the other hand that S. 5-B could only be operative only on the vesting raiyati and under-raiyati interest in the State by notification made under S. 52. Their rival contentions will now have to be examined.

23. Under Acts and regulation mentioned in S. 5-B the defaulting Estate, tenure or under-tenure only could be put to sale in execution of a decree for rent of such estate, tenure or under-tenure. As a result of vesting of the intermediary interest, the defaulting estate, tenure or under-tenure ceased to exist, so that after vesting it is no longer possible to put such interest to sale. It is thus obvious that normally any rent sale under the aforesaid statutes taking place prior to vesting would be valid in law and would entitle the auction purchaser to the defaulting estate, tenure or under-tenure.

24. Chapter VI which provides for acquisition or interests of raiyats and under-raiyats, was brought into force in all districts of West Bengal with effect from April 10, 1956 by notification No. 6804 L Ref. dated April 9, 1956 as provided in S. 49. On the issue of notification, provisions of Chaps. II, III, V and VII applied with such modifications mutatis mutandis to raiyats and under-raiyats as if such raiyats and under-raiyats were intermediaries and the lands held by them were estates. As a result, provisions of Ss. 4, 5-A and 5-B which were included in Chap. II became applicable to raiyats and under-raiyats in respect of the lands held by them with effect from April 10, 1956 and interest of the raiyats and under-raiyats thereupon vesting in the State. On such vesting, the interests of raiyats and under-raiyats ceased to exist and if thereafter they chose to retain lands in their khas possession under S. 6 of the said Act they were to be deemed to be a direct tenant under the State and such tenancy would be a new and different tenancy altogether.

25. It is therefore obvious that in execution of rent decree for arrear of rent passed prior to vesting under the statutes mentioned in S. 5-B, after vesting of the interests of raiyats and under-raiyats it was no longer possible to put the defaulting holding to sale as such holding then ceased to exist. There was or could be no legal bar in usual circumstances to put such defaulting holding to sale in execution of rent decree prior to vesting when such holding had its existence. The question now is whether it is competent for legislature to prohibit such rent sale with effect from an earlier date before vesting as was sought to be done by provisions of S. 5-B read with S. 49 and notification as also S. 52. It may be noted that the legislature took into consideration that by reason of the belated legislation codified in S. 5-B there might be sales of interest of intermediaries in tenure or holdings during the period prior to vesting S. 5-B accordingly provided that on and from 1st day of June 1954 no such interest would be liable to be sold under the statutes mentioned therein and any sale which took place after that date under the said statutes was to be deemed as void and of no effect.

26. As has been recognised in judicial decisions the legislature is undoubtedly competent to take away vested rights by means of retrospective legislation. Unless however a clear and unambiguous intention is indicated by legislature by adopting suitable and express words in respect thereof, no provision of a statute should be given retrospective operation if thereby vested rights are affected. The Supreme Court in Rafiquennessa v. Lal Bahadur Chetri, AIR 1964 SC 1511 added that a statutory provision is held to be retrospective either when it is so declared by express terms or the intention to make it retrospective clearly followed from the relevant words and the context in which they occur.

27. In the case before us, by reason of of the provisions of S. 52, there was, as held in Ambujakhyas case, ILR (1966) 1 Cal 495 a contextual adoption of the provisions of S. 5-B to raiyati and under-raiyat holdings in express clear and unambiguous language. It is accordingly not possible for the Court to fix another date in S. 5-B which would be in direct contravention of the provisions adopted by the legislature. We have however made attempts to ascertain why the particular date namely June 1, 1954 was selected as the relevant date where from the rent sales of tenures and holdings are to be declared as void. No nexus could apparently be found for enforcement of the provisions from that date unlike S. 5-A where in the date, 5th May 1953 was the date when the bill for acquisition of intermediary interest resulting in the parent Act was published in the Calcutta Gazette, which led to a spate of transfer for defeating the purposes of the Act. In the objects and reasons of the amending Act XXVIII of 1954, it was merely stated to be as follows:—

"to exempt all estates and tenure from sale under the Bengal Revenue Sales Act, 1859 (IX of 1859) or the Cooch Behar Revenue Sales Act, 1897 (Cooch Bihar Act V of 1897) or the Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation, 1819 (Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819), as the case may be, on and from the first day of June 1954". (and even there the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 appears not to be included though it is included along with the aforesaid statutes in S. 5-B).

28. The Objects and Reasons of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, as is well known, is inter alia to eliminate the interests of all zamindars and intermediaries and also to permit the intermediaries to retain possession of their khas land upto certain limits and to treat them as tenants holding directly under the State. It was also the intention of the legislation to make the actual cultivators tenants directly under the Government. If an auction-purchaser is permitted to acquire the interest of the defaulting holding in a rent sale upto vesting he would be entitled under the law to annul the subordinate interest of actual cultivators under the defaulting holding till vesting who would otherwise be entitled to hold the lands in their khas possession under the Government upon vesting. It seems obvious that to safeguard the interest of actual cultivators and to avoid an uncertain state of affairs at the time of vesting which annulment of subordinate interest on rent sale till date of vesting might create, the legislature thought it fit to prohibit rent sale with effect from an earlier date by making suitable legislation which it was competent to promulgate. Such interpretation accordingly appear to be consistent with the aim, scope and object of the Act.

29. On the issue of notification under S. 49 as we have seen the provisions inter alia of Chap II applied mutatis mutandis to raiyats and under-raiyats as if they were intermediaries. Accordingly as soon as S. 5-B within Chap. II applied to raiyati and under-raiyati interest the relevant provisions thereof became applicable, and the sale under any of the statutes mentioned therein after 1st day of June 1954 was to be deemed to have been void and of no effect. According to the decision of S. K. Sen, J. in Prahlad's case ((1963) 67 Cal WN 452) noted above the date mentioned in S. 5-B is to be the date on which by notification the Act was made applicable to raiyati interest. This conclusion overlooks that on vesting of raiyati and under-raiyati interest which obliterated such interests, there could be no sale under those acts of such interests which ceased to exist. The provisions of S. 5-B on such interpretation taking the effective date as the date of vesting would be wholly redundant and unnecessary. It is a rule of interpretation of statutes that each and every provision of a statute must be given full operation and effect. In view of the express provision in S 5-B we are of the opinion that the effective date in respect thereof is the first day of June 1954 in respect of sales of raiyati and under-raiyati holdings under the statutes mentioned therein and such provision is undoubtedly with the competency of the legislature.

30. It is further to be noted that S. 5-B declares void sale of tenure or holding held on and from June 1, 1954 under the statutes mentioned therein. It contains no prohibition in respect of sales in execution of decree under the C. P. C., as this section is concerned only with the sales under the aforesaid statutes. A tenure or holding as is well known till vesting was transferable and heritable under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act and other connected regulations. There could accordingly be no legal bar in the sale of such tenure or holding till vesting so long they were in existence in execution of decrees for money against the holder thereof while under S. 5-B after June 1, 1954 there could be no sale of such tenure or holding under the provisions of the said statutes. It accordingly appears to us that notwithstanding S. 5-B, till vesting there is no bar to the voluntary sales of tenures or holdings of raiyats or under-raiyats or to sales of such interest in execution of money decrees under the provisions of the C. P. C. If any such sale has taken place during the material period till vesting and was or could be treated as a sale under the Code if otherwise valid and not under the provisions of the aforesaid Acts, such sale will not be void or deemed to be void under S. 5-B and has to be sustained as a valid sale in law.

31. Under S. 143 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, subject to rules under the Act and other provisions thereof, the C. P. C. applies to all suits between landlord and tenant. All such suits are to be entered in a special register instead of the register of Civil suits (S. 146). There are certain specific provisions in the Act in respect of suits for recovery of rent and of appeals from decrees therein. As a result a decree for arrears of rent due in respect of a tenure or holding may thus have the effect of a rent decree if the formalities are complied with as required under S. 148 and under S. 65 if it is a rent decree, the tenure of the holding shall be liable to sale in execution.

32. Chapter XIV (Ss. 159-177) provides for sales for arrears under decree obviously for rent being under the said Act. Under S. 159 (1), the purchaser takes subject to protected interests but with power to annul interests defined as incumbrances. "Incumbrance" under S. 161, with reference to tenancy, means any lien, sub-tenancy or other right or interest created by the tenant on his tenure or holding or in limitation of his own interest therein and not being a "protected interest". Sections 164, 165 and 166 provide for procedure for sale with power to annul incumbrance. In order to constitute a sale under the Act, there must be a rent decree contemplated under S. 65 and the sale must also be in conformity with provisions of Chap. XIV.

33. Section 168-A (1) provides that a decree for arrears of rent due in respect of a tenure or holding whether having the effect of rent decree or money decree can only be executed against the defaulting tenure or holding. Under its proviso this provision will not apply if otherwise than by surrender the term of the tenancy expires before an application is made for execution of such decree. By reason of vesting it could be said that there is a statutory surrender or extinction of the tenancy. So that there is an implied repeal of S. 168-A (1) of the Act, leaving the decree-holder free to execute his decree whether having the effect of a rent decree or money decree, against any other property of the ex-tenant. We accordingly approve of the Bench decisions in cases of Adhidhar Ghosh, (AIR 1958 Cal 253) and Hiranmoyee, ((1958) 62 Cal WN 373) referred to the above and hold that vesting of the interest in a tenure or holding by implication repealed the provisions of S. 168-A (1) of the Act and attracted the proviso thereunder leaving the decree-holder free to execute his decree as money decree in view of S. 5-B of West Bengal Estate Acquisition Act against any other property of the judgment-debtor tenure-holder or tenant.

34. The Bengal Tenancy Act, as it appears, contemplates that if the formalities of Chap. XIV are complied with in execution of a rent decree, the tenure or holding will be sold and the auction-purchaser will be entitled to additional rights provided therein, including the right to annul incumbrances like sub-tenancies created by the defaulting tenant. In case such formalities are not complied with in the execution case when a sale is held, such sale will be one under the C. P. C. wherein only the judgment-debtor's interest will pass on to the auction-purchaser who will not be entitled to the benefits like annulment of incumbrances to which an auction-purchaser under the said Act would be entitled. Where by reason of the statutory bar there cannot be in law a sale of the defaulting holding under the Bengal Tenancy Act and other Statutes and sale if held under any of those Acts, are to be deemed as void, there is no impediment by S. 5-B to auction sales under the C. P. C. in execution of a money or rent decree. Such sale if held accordingly is to be treated and have the effect of sale as money decree under the Code as was held in Haripada Pramanik's case (1970) 74 Cal WN 400. Being a sale within June 1, 1954 and prior to vesting of the holding, the auction-purchaser became entitled to the interest of the defaulting raiyat in the holding which was put up to sale now to be deemed as in execution of the money decree in view of the statutory prohibition under S. 5-B. Similar view was taken in Doolar Chand v. Lalla Chabeel Chand, (1878) 6 Ind App 47 at p. 51 wherein the Privy Council observed:

"Now it is clear that in attaching the property of a judgment-debtor, whether in an under-tenure or in an ordinary lease-hold interest, under Act VIII of 1859, you can only attach and sell the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor; but you proceed to sell a tenure under S. 59 of Act VIII of 1859, then you sell the tenure; and by virtue of S. 66 of the same Act, the purchaser, under the provisions of Ss. 59 and 60 of the Act, acquires it free of all incumbrances which may have accrued thereon by any act of any holder of the said under-tenure, his representatives or assigns, unless the right of making such incumbrances shall have been expressly vested in the holder by the written engagement. So that if this tenure had been sold under the provisions of S. 59, the sale would have got rid of all under-tenures, and the purchaser would have been entitled to the whole interest in the tenure, free from all encumbrances in the same way as if the tenure had been sold under the provisions of the law for the sale of an estate for arrears of Government revenue."

35. In view of the perwaunah, the notice of sale, and the certificate of sale it was held that only the rights and interest of the judgment-debtor were sold and not the tenure.

36. In Bithika Maity's case ((1975) 79 Cal WN 216) it was correctly decided that the effective date in S. 5-B in respect of raiyati and under-raiyati holdings is also the first day of June 1954. The decision however failed to take notice that the impugned sale therein held on September 10, 1954 could be treated as sale under the C. P. C. as a sale in execution of a money decree. This aspect of the case was not taken in consideration possibly because the case was heard ex parte. We are accordingly unable to approve the decision that all sales between the first day of June 1954 to the vesting of raiyati interest are to be deemed as being under the Statutes mentioned therein and hence to be declared void as was summarily held by it. On the contrary, such sales though deemed as invalid and of no effect under the aforesaid acts, are to be treated and will have the effect of sales under the C. P. C. in execution of money decrees, if otherwise valid. Accordingly accepting Mr. Mitra's contention, we hold that the name of the opposite party being auction-purchaser of the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor was validly recorded as raiyat in respect of the disputed holdings in the finally published record-of-rights in place and stead of defaulting judgment-debtors who held the said holdings.

37. We accordingly hold that

(i) The effective date in S. 5-B in respect of sales of raiyati and under-raiyati holdings under the relevant statutes mentioned therein is the first day of June 1954 as therein provided.

(ii) Section 5-B does not operate as a bar to the execution of decree for arrears of rent as money decree against raiyati or under-raiyati interest and S. 168-A (1) is impliedly repealed by vesting of the interest of intermediaries (which include raiyats and under-raiyats) in the State.

38. In the circumstances the initiation of the proceeding by the Assistant Settlement Officer under S. 44 (2a) in view of the provisions of S. 5-B in the light of the above discussions must be held to be without jurisdiction. The tribunal's order under S. 44 (3) setting aside the orders of the Assistant Settlement Officer in the connected proceedings, are affirmed though for different reasons as indicated above and the connected Rules are discharged. There will be no order for costs in the circumstances.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:— I agree.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— I agree.

The India Jute Company Ltd. Applicant v. The Regional Director, West Bengal, Region, Employees' State Insurance Corporation and another, Respondents.

Matter No. 157 of 1973, D/- 9-11-1976.

BU/BU/A326/77/SSG

Employees' State Insurance Act (1948), Ss. 2 (9), 38 — Persons employed in registered office or head office of a company, if employees within S. 2 (9) — Applicability of S. 38.

Persons who are employed in registered office or head office at Calcutta, of a Company running a jute and cotton factory at Serampore in Hooghly and who are engaged in types of work referred to in S. 2 (9) are employees within the Act. Case Law discussed. (Para 41)

The definition of "employees" in S. 2 (9) as amended in 1966 is an exhaustive one. It is a beneficial piece of legislation and it had to be given a meaning that would give benefit to those for whom it is intended. After the amendment the administrative staff engaged in purchase of raw materials or the distribution or sale of the products of a factory whether the work is done in the factory or elsewhere would be 'employees' within the Act. Section 38 of the Act, does not appear to be an impediment. This section opens with the words "subject to the provisions of this Act". These words bring within their scope the amended definition of 'employee'. There is, therefore, no difficulty in covering employees who are not actually working in the factory premises provided that they do any type of work specified in S. 2 (9) as it now stands. Decisions of Calcutta High Court after amendment in 1966 approved.

P. P. Ginwala with P. K. Mullick and T. K. Mitra, for Applicant; Arun K. Dutt with D. K. Basu, for Respondents.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:— This matter has been referred to a larger Bench by A. N. Sen, J. on the 13th August, 1975, under Chapter V Rule 2 of the Original Side Rules. The petitioner has its registered office at No. 16, Strand Road in Calcutta within the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court. The petitioner has a jute factory and a cotton factory at Serampore in the district of Hooghly. The business of the petitioner is manufacture and sale of jute and cotton textile goods. The petitioner's Calcutta office is stated to be a commercial establishment where the petitioner employs clerical and other staff.

2. The petitioner has made this application under Article 226 of the Constitution for a Writ in the nature of mandamus commanding the respondents to forbear from giving any effect to certain directions or orders contained in letters mentioned in the petition or otherwise applying or seeking to apply the provisions of The Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948 to the petitioner in respect of persons employed at its registered office or head office at No. 16, Strand Road in Calcutta. The petitioner has also prayed for other reliefs including an interim order of injunction.

3. Before we proceed any further it would be convenient to set out the relevant portions of some of the sections of The Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948, hereinafter called "the Act".

4. Sub-ss. (2), (3), (4) and (5) of S. 1 of the Act read as follows:—

"(2) It extends to the whole of India.

(3) It shall come into force on such date or dates as the Central Government may, by Notification in the Official Gazette, appoint, and different dates may be appointed for different provisions of this Act and for different States or different parts thereof.

(4) It shall apply, in the first instance, to all factories (including factories belonging to the Government) other than seasonal factories.

(5) The appropriate Government may, in consultation with the Corporation and where the appropriate Government is a State Government, with the approval of the Central Government, after giving six months' notice of its intention of so doing by notification in the Official Gazette extend the provisions of this Act or any of them, to any other establishment or class of establishments, industrial, commercial, agricultural or otherwise."

5. The points to be especially noted are (i) by the Central Government's notification in the Official Gazette, date or dates may be appointed for the coming into force, of different provisions of the Act; (ii) the Act shall first apply to all factories including Government factories but not to seasonal factories; and (iii) the State or the Central Government, as the case may be, may by notification in the Official Gazette extend the provisions of the Act or any of them to any other establishment or class of establishments industrial, commercial, agricultural or otherwise except that the State Government's notification has to be made with the Central Government's approval.

6. Section 2 (9) of the Act is vital for our purposes. It says:—

"'Employee' means any person employed for wages in or in connection with the work of a factory or establishment to which this Act applies and—

(i) who is directly employed by the principal employer on any work or incidental or preliminary to or connected with the work of the factory or establishment, whether such work is done by the employee in the factory or establishment or elsewhere; or

[and includes any person employed for wages on any work connected with the administration of the factory or establishment or any part, department or branch thereof or with the purchase of raw materials for, or the distribution or sale of the products of, the factory or establishment; but does not include—]

(b) Any person so employed whose wages (excluding remuneration for over time work) exceed five hundred rupees a month:

Provided that an employee whose wages (excluding remuneration for over time work) exceed five hundred rupees a month at any time after (and not before) the beginning of the contribution period shall continue to be an employee until the end of that period;"

7. The portions of the above sub-section which are in square brackets were introduced by Act 44 of 1966 which came into force with effect from 28 January, 1968.

8. In the statements of objects and reasons for this amendment in 1966 it is stated: "The existing definition of the term 'employee' does not cover administrative staff engaged in sale, distribution and other allied functions. The definition is being amended to cover such employees."

9. The petitioner, in the instant case, has administrative staff whose wages (excluding remuneration for over time work) do not exceed Rs. 500.00 a month engaged in sale and distribution of products of the petitioner's factories and other allied functions. They are not employed in any of the factory premises. They are in the petitioner's head office or registered office at No. 16, Strand Road in Calcutta which the petitioner claims to be a commercial establishment. The Employees' State Insurance authorities wanted to apply the provisions of the Act to the petitioner in respect of the said employees at its registered office or head office. The petitioner's contention is that there has been no notification under Section 1 (5) extending the provisions of the Act to the petitioner's commercial establishment at No. 16, Strand Road. And in the absence of such notification the said employees cannot be brought within the purview of the Act.

10. We now come to S. 38 of the Act which is as follows:—

“Subject to the provisions of this Act, all employees in factories or establishments to which this Act applies shall be insured in the manner provided by this Act.”

11. Strong reliance was placed on behalf of the petitioner on this section. It was urged that since the Act has not been made to apply to the establishment at 16, Strand Road, no employee in that establishment can be covered by the provisions of the Act.

12. Apart from the above section we may make a passing reference to Sections 73A, 87, 88, 89 and 90 of the Act. These sections respectively provide for (a) the employer's special contribution in lieu of contributions payable under Chapter IV, (b) exemption of person or class of persons by the appropriate Government, (c) the Employees State Insurance Corporation's right to make a representation to the appropriate Government against proposals for exemption and (d) exemption of factories or establishments belonging to Government or any local authority.

13. Mr. Ginwalla appearing for the India Jute Co. Ltd., has drawn our attention to the above provisions of the Act and has proceeded to argue that in order that an employee may come within the Act he must be employed in a factory in the sense that he is under the control of authorities attached to the factory. He must be answerable to the factory authorities for works done by him; he must apply to the factory authorities for leave; he must be subject to the standing orders of the factory; his wages must be disbursed by and under the instructions of the factory authorities; his wages must be debited to the factory account; and if any disciplinary action be taken against him, it must be taken by the factory authorities. According to Learned Counsel if these conditions are fulfilled, it does not matter where the employee concerned is working. He has urged that by amending the definition of 'employee' in S. 2 (9) in 1966, the operation of the Act has not been extended to those who are not attached to the factory premises at all. Prior to the amendment the employees actually working in the factory that is, the manufacturing process of the factory as well as employees connected with the manufacturing process were 'employees' within the meaning of the Act. After the amendment employees in the administration engaged in sale, distribution or other allied functions would be "employees" within the Act provided that their work is based on the factory itself and they are controlled by persons in charge of the factory.

14. Mr. Ginwalla has argued that there is a difference between the application of an Act and the interpretation of words used in the Act. These are two different matters which are dealt with in different sections of every Act. The first section of an Act tells us to what things and to what areas it would apply. The second section tells us what meaning is to be given to the words used in the Act in the situations to which the Act is applicable. The functions of these two kinds of the sections are not the same. By altering the definition, says Learned Counsel, the sphere of application of an Act cannot be altered or extended. In the instant case when the Act prescribes that it would apply to factories, it cannot be extended in view of provisions of S. 38 to establishments for which no notification has been issued under S. 1 (5).

15. Reliance has been placed by Counsel on a number of decisions. In Employees' State Insurance Corporation v. Ganpatiya AIR 1961 Mad 176, a Division Bench of the Madras High Court was considering Ss. 2 (9) (i), 38 and 39 of the Act before its amendment. The Madras High Court has said that persons employed in the Managing Agent's office of a mill which is concerned purely with the administrative side of the mill and the sale of finished products, and who are not in any way connected with the manufacturing process or with the work of the factory, are not "employees" within the meaning of S. 2 (9) (i). Hence they are not liable to pay contributions under the Act. The Madras High Court in this case has followed a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in Employees State Insurance Corporation

Bombay v. Raman, (1957) 1 Lab LJ 267. The question raised in that case was whether a person employed in the administrative office of J. K. Chemicals Ltd. was an 'employee' within the meaning of the Act. The Bombay High Court observed: "Nevertheless, before the respondent can be said to be an employee within the meaning of S. 2 (9) (i), it must be shown that he has been employed on any work, of or incidental or preliminary to, or connected with the work of the factory. It is necessary to emphasise that on the facts admitted in this case it is not shown that the work of the factory was to sell the products of the factory. The work of the factory in the present case began with the collection of raw materials and ended with the production of finished articles. If that be so, it would be difficult to accede to the argument that the work of selling the products of the factory was connected with the work of the factory. The work of selling cannot be said to be incidental or preliminary to the work of the factory. It is obviously not preliminary, and it cannot be incidental in that sense. It is true that the expression "connection with" may be larger in its denotation than "incidental" or "preliminary". But this expression also must be construed in the light of the facts as to which there is no dispute in the present case."

16. From these two judgments, Mr. Ginwalla submits, it is clear that persons connected with sale and distribution of products of the factory were not employees within the meaning of the Act before the amendment. The amendment has brought them within the definition; but their work must be under the control and supervision of those who run the factory.

17. In support of his above contention Mr. Ginwalla referred to the Supreme Court's decision in the Nagpur Electric Light and Power Co. Ltd. v. Regional Director Employees' State Insurance Corporation AIR 1967 SC 1364. The Supreme Court has said that if some of the employees work outside the factory, but their duties are connected with the work of the factory they are employees within the meaning of S. 2 (9) (i). In the case before the Supreme Court some employees were employed in sub-stations. The sub-stations were not independent factories. The sub-stations attended to work directly connected with the work of the factory. They were, therefore, employees under S. 2 (9) (i).

18. Learned Counsel has urged that before the amendment of 1966 the law clearly was that a person directly employed on any work of or incidental or preliminary to or connected with the work of the factory was an employee within the Act. But a person employed on any work connected with the administration of the factory or any part, department or branch thereof or the distribution or sale of the products of the factory was not an employee.

19. To appreciate the scope of the 1966 amendment, argues Counsel for the applicant, one has to remember what Lord Coke said in Heydon's case (1584) 3 Co. Rep. 7b. According to Lord Coke one has to examine (a) what was the law before the Act was passed; (b) what was the mischief or defect for which the law had not provided; (c) what remedy Parliament had appointed; and (d) the reason of the remedy.

20. If we apply these principles to the instant case, we find that before the amendment Courts took the view that persons connected with the administration of a factory were not 'employees'. The work of a factory commenced with the collection of raw materials and ended in the manufacture of goods. Persons employed in the sale or distribution of the factory's products were not 'employees' under the Act even though they were employees of the factory itself. The amendment, according to Mr. Ginwalla, was necessary for remedying this situation. The amendment is intended to meet the difficulties of covering the administrative staff of the factory which were pointed out by the Bombay and Madras High Courts.

21. Mr. Ginwalla also submitted that if an extended meaning be given to the word 'employee', it would result in discrimination between one class of employees and another. In the Head Office of a Company situated away from the factory there may be administrative staff engaged in sale or distribution of factory products as well as administrative staff engaged in maintenance of share register, keeping of accounts and similar other types of work. The first category of employees would be covered by the Act and the second category would remain outside the Act.

22. Since rights under Art. 14 are now suspended it is not open to Mr. Ginwalla to take this point until the emergency is lifted. In any event, this is in our opinion a case of reasonable classification having a nexus to the object and purpose of the Act viz. to provide benefits in case of sickness, maternity and employment injury to a class of employees covered by the Act for whom, according to Parliament, special provisions should be made.

23. This application has been heard along with several other applications of other employers who had also challenged orders or directions of the State Insurance Corporation with a view to bringing administrative staff engaged by them who are connected with sale or distribution of factory products within the scope of the Act. We have heard arguments of Learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the other employers as well. And it would be convenient to note briefly the points raised by them in this connection. Mr. Ajit Roy Mukherjee appeared for the petitioner in Matter No. 320 of 1974 (Hindusthan Lever Ltd. v. Employees' State Insurance Corporation). Mr. Mukherjee's grievance is that the State Insurance Corporation authorities are trying to extend the operation of the Act to establishments other than factories where no manufacturing process is going on. They are doing it to circumvent the provisions of S. 1 (5) of the Act. Mr. Mukherjee has referred to Chapter V of the Act on the benefits that the employees would derive if they come within the Act, e. g. sickness, maternity, disablement, medical and funeral benefits. Under S. 59-A there are provisions for medical benefit by the Corporation in lieu of the State Government. The State Government has to share the cost of such benefit in such proportion as may be agreed upon between the State Government and the Corporation. The State Government, therefore, is vitally interested in the extension of the scheme which affects its own budget; but the role of the State Government would be completely ignored if the Corporation is allowed to extend the operation of the Act in the manner it had been seeking to do. Mr. Mukherjee has also adopted the arguments of Mr. Ginwalla.

24. The answer to the point raised by Mr. Mukherjee is that the State Government is a party to some of the applications before us and in spite of notice being served it has not either chosen to appear or make its submissions to this Court e. g. in Matter No. 452 of 1965 (Tarun Kumar Chatterjee v. State of West Bengal) the State Government is the respondent No. 1; in Matter No. 343 of 1970 (Gestetner Duplicators Private Ltd. v. Employees' State Insurance Corporation) the State Government is the respondent No. 3; and in Matter No. 672 of 1976 (Subrata Mukherjee v. State of West Bengal) the State Government is the respondent No. 1. In none of these matters the State of West Bengal has opposed the extension of the Act to administrative staff employed outside the factory premises in the Head Office or any other Branch of Commercial Establishments but engaged in sale or distribution of factory products. In fact, if upon construction of the relevant provisions of the Statute such extension is justified, we do not see how the State Government can oppose it.

25. In Matter No. 343 of 1970 (Cal) (Gestetner Duplicators Private Ltd. v. Employees' State Insurance Corporation) Mr. J. N. Ghose has appeared for the petitioners. His contention is that the Act contemplates two kinds of workers, namely, (1) workers in a factory, and (2) workers in establishments. The workers in a factory may come within the Act; but the workers in an establishment cannot get the benefit of the Act unless a notification is made under S. 1 (5). The definition of 'factory' is any premises or part of a premises where a manufacturing process is carried on with the aid of power or is ordinarily so carried. It is significant that in 1966 the definition of 'employee' in S. 2 (9) was amended in the manner hereinbefore mentioned; but the definition of 'factory' in S. 2 (12) was left untouched. This shows that Parliament did not intend to alter the connotation of the word 'factory'. And by the amendment of 1966 Parliament brought within the purview of the Act only those persons who were connected with the administration of factory (where the manufacturing process was going on) or any part, department or branch thereof or with the purchase of raw materials for or distribution or sale of the products of the factory. In other words, these persons must be engaged in administrative work under the control of the factory authorities.

26. In Matter No. 452 of 1965 (Cal) (Tarun Kumar Chatterjee v. State of West Bengal) Mr. P. Sanyal appeared for the petitioners. He has submitted to us that S. 38 of the Act refers to two types of employees, namely, employees in factories and employees in establishments. If we try to bring employees in establishments within the scope of the amended definition of S. 2 (9), the provisions of Section 1 (5) would have to be wholly ignored. The Court has to construe a statute as a whole and avoid inconsistencies. According to Mr. Sanyal the interpretation of S. 2 (9) which the State Insurance Corporation is pressing for would be inconsistent with the provisions of S. 1 (5).

27. There have been quite a few decisions of different High Courts including our own both before the amendment of 1966 and after the amendment. It is not necessary for us to be exhaustive; but we may usefully refer to some of these decisions.

28. Let us first glance at a few decisions before the amendment of 1966 came into force on the 28th January 1968, apart from the ones we have already noted. In F. M. A. No. 143 to 170 of 1959 (Cal) (Ramapati Chowdhury v. E. S. I. Corporation) a Division Bench of our Court took the view that employees of Structural Engineers at the Head Office in Calcutta, the factory being in Howrah, engaged in departments dealing with accounts, costing, estimating, drawing, record or general departments were engaged in works preliminary or incidental to or connected with the work of the factory and were within the definition of 'employees' as given in Section 2 (9).

29. A Division Bench of the Punjab High Court in Charan Singh and Sons v. E. S. I. Corporation AIR 1963 Punj 422, dissented from the Madras High Court's judgment in E. S. I. Corporation v. Ganpatiya, AIR 1961 Mad 176, which we have noted above. The Punjab High Court held that a person working as Accountant would also be included in the number of persons necessary to make the premises a factory. The definition of 'factory', according to the Punjab High Court, clearly envisages the inclusion of persons other than those engaged on the actual manufacturing process and the work of accounting and work connected with the sale and distribution of the products of the factory are matters incidental or preliminary to or connected with the work of the factory. This was the case of an Electric Supply Company. The Punjab High Court in its judgment has also dealt with the line staff of the Company. Its view is that though the work of the line staff, that is, persons who apparently are kept somewhere in waiting and who go out from time to time when calls are received from consumers for the purposes of putting things right is almost entirely done outside the premises which constitute the factory but they still fall within the definition of 'employee' in S. 2 (9) (i).

30. Such persons being directly employed by the principal employer and their work being incidental to or connected with the work of the factory, are employees whether they work inside or outside the factory premises, in the light of the closing words "whether such work is done by the employee in the factory or establishment or elsewhere" in clause (i) of S. 2 (9).

31. In Birla Cotton Spinning and Weaving Mills Ltd. v. E. S. I. Corporation, AIR 1970 Delhi 167, the workers employed by a textile manufacturing company to work outside the factory but in close connection with the work carried on in the factory were held to be 'employees' within the meaning of Section 2 (9). This was also the decision of a Division Bench. The Delhi High Court's view was that the work of employees in administrative offices of the company together with the manufacturing process constituted the work of production in which the Company was engaged. The Delhi High Court said that when the manufacturing process carried on in the factory would not in itself result in the production of goods without the help of employees in the administrative office, the work done in the office of the factory must be said to be connected with the work of the factory.

32. It is clear, therefore, that before the amendment there were conflicting decisions by different High Courts. The Bombay and Madras High Courts sought to give a restricted meaning to the word 'employee'; but the Calcutta, the Punjab and the Delhi High Courts were seeking to give it an extended meaning. It was doubtful whether administrative staff connected with purchase of raw materials or sale and distribution of factory products whether engaged in the factory premises or elsewhere could be covered by the definition of 'employee'. It is in this context that we have to examine the scope of the 1966 amendment.

33. After the amendment there has been fairly a large number of decisions and we may refer to a few of them. Let us first take the decisions of High Courts other than ours. Our attention has been drawn to the judgments of the Delhi High Court in (a) Grand Iron Works v. E. S. I. Corporation, (1970) 38 FJR 368 and (b) Hindusthan Lever Ltd. v. E. S. I. Corporation, (1973) 1 Lab LJ 259 : (1973 Lab IC 706); the Madras High Court in (a) Hemalata Textile Mills v. E. S. I. Corporation, (1975) 31 Fac LR 237 (Mad) and (b) E. S. I. Corporation v. Prabhulal Brothers, (1973) 1 Lab LJ 304 : (1974 Lab IC 701) (Mad); the Kerala High Court in Regional Director, E. S. I. v. Ruby Rubber Works, ILR (1974) 2 Ker 536; and the Andhra Pradesh High Court in Hyderabad Asbestos Cement Products Ltd. v. E. S. I. Corporation (FB), (1976) 32 Fac LR 255 : (1976 Lab IC 868).

34. In all these judgments more or less the same approaches have been made to the scope and effect of the 1966 amendment. We intend to refer particularly to the judgments of Division Bench of the Kerala High Court and the Full Bench Judgment of the Andhra Pradesh High Court. The Kerala High Court has made the following observations:

1. "In the light of the definition of Section 2 (9) we find no difficulty in holding that employees in the sales depots of the respondents are employees within the meaning of the Act". (page 544).

2. "It is evident that the object of the Amendment Act 44 of 1966 was to bring within the scope of coverage a class of employees who would not otherwise be covered by that Act. That being the case, unless the definition is given its full meaning in the operative provisions such as Ss. 38, 39 and 40, the amendment would make no sense. The purpose of the amendment may otherwise be defeated and the inclusive part of the definition may be rendered otiose." (P. 546).

3. "The term 'in' in S. 38 was evidently not intended to indicate the nexus between the 'employee' and the 'factory' by mere location. It was not the physical presence in the factory premises or working in the factory premises that was postulated, but a rational connection between the factory and the employment. The scope of such rational connection must necessarily depend upon the definition of the term 'employee' and when that is enlarged to cover not only those engaged in or in connection with the work of the factory, but also those who are engaged in the work of the distribution or sale of the products of the factory necessarily the nexus indicated by the amended definition is to be reflected in the term 'in' under S. 38 of the Act. In other words, those working in sales depots are also to be found to be employees in factories in the light of the definition of the term 'employee' in S. 2 (9)." (page 547).

4. "Therefore, if by the definition, certain classes of employees such as those in sales depots of factories are defined as employees of factories, it is S. 1 (4) that is to be applied to them and not S. 1 (5). Hence there is no necessity of a notification under S. 1 (5) to extend the coverage of the Act to such classes of employees. We do not think that there is any difficulty in construing the provisions of the Act in this manner." (page 548).

35. The Division Bench of the Kerala High Court, therefore, is clearly of the view that persons working in the sales depots of a factory who are engaged in distribution or sale of the products of the factory are within the amended definition of S. 2 (9). In reaching this conclusion the Kerala High Court has considered also the provisions of S. 38, S. 1 (4) and S. 1 (5) of the Act.

36. The Andhra Pradesh High Court's Full Bench has made the following observations:—

1. "The question on which we have to express an opinion is whether the employees of the petitioner-Company in its Zonal Sales office at Vijayawada are covered by the

E. S. I. Act of 1948. In other words, the question is whether the employees of the Zonal Sales Office at Vijayawada are liable to be insured as per the provisions of Chapter IV of the E. S. I. Act" (Page 257 of 32 Fac LR): (at p. 870 of 1976 Lab IC).

2. "The main argument of Shri K. Srinivasa Murthy for the petitioner is based upon S. 38 of the Act and the definitions of 'employees' and 'factory' defined in the Act. (page 258) (of 32 Fac LR): (at p. 871 of 1976 Lab IC).

3. "After the amendment, any person employed for wages on any work connected with the distribution or sale of the products of the factory or establishment also becomes an 'employee'.

This takes us to the question whether the employees of the Sales Office at Vijayawada can be said to be employed in a factory or an establishment. As admittedly there is no notification under S. 1 (5) of the Act covering the Sales Office as an establishment coming under the purview of the Act, the only question is whether they are employees in a 'factory'. (Page 260) (of 32 Fac LR): (at p. 872 of 1976 Lab IC).

4. "Section 38 states that 'subject to the provisions of this Act, all employees in factories or establishments to which this Act applies shall be insured in the manner provided by this Act.' No doubt the words used viz. 'employees in factories' render some apparent substance to the argument of the Learned Counsel for the petitioner. But it cannot be ignored that S. 38 is made subject to the provisions of the Act. S. 2 containing the definition is also a provision of the Act. The words 'employees' and 'factory' occurring in S. 38 of the Act must be understood in the light of their definitions in S. 2 (9) and S. 2 (12) of the Act. Considerable stress was laid by the learned Counsel on the ground that the words used in S. 38 are not 'all employees of factories', but 'all employees in factories' and having regard to the definition of a 'factory', the Sales Personnel at Vijayawada Office who are working elsewhere other than in the premises of the factory, are excluded. Granting that the argument is plausible having regard to the language employed in S. 38, still the Court cannot ignore the amended definition of an 'employee' and the purpose behind it. We must construe S. 38 of the Act in a manner to give effect to the legislative intentment in amending S. 2 (9) of the Act. A Court must avoid any interpretation which would defeat the purpose of the amendment. The various provisions have to be construed harmoniously with a view to give effect to the legislative intendment evidenced by the amended definition of S. 2 (9) of the Act." (Pages 262 to 263) (of 32 Fac LR) : (at pp. 874, 75 of 1976 Lab IC).

5. "..... We find no difficulty in holding that S. 38 of the Act should be understood to take in all persons employed in the Sales Office of the petitioner-company at Vijayawada. For, it cannot be disputed that they are persons employed for wages on a work connected with the distribution or sale of the products of the factory. They are employees in factories to which the Act applies and shall be insured in the manner provided by the Act. No doubt the word 'factory' defined in the Act states that 'factory' means any premises including the precincts etc. To construe the expression 'factory' in S. 38 of the Act as only meaning the premises or the precincts thereof would not give effect to the legislative intendment in amending the word 'employee' as defined in the Act. (Page 263) (of 32 Fac LR) : (at p. 875 of 1976 Lab IC).

6. "We, therefore, opine that the employees of the Sales Establishment at Vijayawada are employees in a factory within the meaning of S. 38 and therefore entitled to the benefits of Chapter IV of the Act. This conclusion we have come to on a consideration of the facts and the relevant provisions of the E. S. I. Act, unhampered by a consideration of any of the authorities cited before us." (Page 264) (of 32 Fac LR) : (at p. 875 of 1976 Lab IC).

37. The Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court, therefore, repelled more or less the same arguments which were advanced before us on behalf of the applicant and gave effect to the legislative intendment of the Amendment of 1966. The Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that the employees in the Sales Office situated away from the factory can also be 'employees' within the meaning of the Act.

38. Let us now refer to the decisions of our own Court after the amendment of 1966. Our attention has been drawn to the judgments of T. K. Basu, J. in Matter No. 738 of 1968 (Ramaprasad Chatterjee v. E. S. I. Corporation); S. C. Deb, J. in Matter No. 176 of 1970 (Castrol Ltd. v. E. S. I. Corporation); Sabyasachi Mukharji, J. in Matter No. 38 of 1969 (Saktiranjana Roy v. E. S. I. Corporation) (1974) 29 FLR 275 at 277; and the Division Bench consisting of my learned brother S. K. Datta, J. and myself in Appeal No. 119 of 1974 (Lakshman Das v. Employees State Insurance).

39. In all these decisions the amended definition has been given an extended meaning. In the case before the Division Bench I have, with the concurrence of S. K. Datta, J., said:

"There seems to be no room for doubt that a person employed for wages would be an employee within the meaning of the said Act if he does any work connected with,

(a) the administration of a factory or establishment or any part, department or Branch thereof; or

(b) with the purchase of raw materials for a factory or establishment or any part, department or branch thereof; or

(c) the distribution or sale of products of a factory or establishment or any part, department or branch thereof."

40. From a review of the aforesaid decisions it is clear that the amended definition is an exhaustive one. It is a beneficial piece of legislation and it has to be given a meaning that would give benefit to those for whom it is intended. After the amendment the administrative staff engaged in purchase of raw materials or the distribution or sale of the products of a factory whether the work is done in the factory or elsewhere would be 'employees' within the Act. Section 38 of the Act does not appear to us to be an impediment. This section opens with the words "subject to the provisions of this Act". These words bring within their scope the amended definition of 'employee.' There is, therefore, no difficulty in covering employees who are not actually working in the factory premises provided that they do any type of work specified in S. 2 (9) as it now stands.

41. In this view of the matter the petitioner's employees in the registered office or head office at No. 16, Strand Road in Calcutta who are engaged in types of work referred to in S. 2 (9) of the Act are employees within the Act.

42. In the result, this application is dismissed. The rule is discharged. Interim orders, if any, are vacated.

43. There would be no order as to costs.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— I agree.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— I agree.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 266

S. K. MUKHERJEA AND
SALIL KUMAR DATTA, JJ.

Union of India, Appellant v. M. L. Dalmiya & Co. Ltd., Respondent.

A. F. O. D. No. 249 of 1973, D/- 21-9-1976.

(A) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 13 — Jurisdiction of arbitrator — Award of interest pendente lite — Can be given if claim or dispute regarding interest is before the arbitrator.

Where the dispute referred to the arbitrator was in general terms and the actual items of dispute were crystallised by claims and counter-claims of parties and the issues were framed in consultation and agreement of the parties, the awarding of interest pendente lite by the arbitrator could not be challenged by one party, in view of the special procedure adopted, after consultation and agreement of both the parties, on the ground that it was not a question referred to the arbitration when no objection was taken before the arbitrator. (Para 25)

The letter of reference indicated that the disputes and claims between the Union of India and a contractor generally were referred to the arbitrator subject to the specific claims and disputes as might be made by the contractor as also the counter-claims if any to be made by the Government against the contractor "subsequently" in course of the arbitration proceedings. Statements were filed by both the parties and the issues in dispute for adjudication and award were framed in consultation with and agreed upon by the parties at the hearing and issues on counter-claims were also amended in consultation with and agreed upon by the parties. The claim for interest pendente lite was made before the arbitrator and no objection at any time was taken by the appellant (Union of India) in the course of arbitration proceeding. Issues were framed in the presence of parties.

Held: Interest pendente lite if any payable to the contractor was an item of reference to the arbitrator who accordingly had the jurisdiction to award interest from the date of reference. It was too late to suggest that the question of interest pendente lite was no item of dispute. AIR 1967 SC 1032 and AIR 1972 SC 1507, Rel. on. Case law discussed. (Para 25)

(B) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30 — Award — Vagueness — Executory award— Award not vague for being executory when only such award could be passed from the dispute referred.

Where the arbitrator in a dispute between the Union of India and a contractor was required to fix rates of works without reference to measurements and in this state of affairs it was not possible for the arbitrator to award lump sums in respect of claims and counter-claims which had necessarily to be calculated on the basis of the rates so fixed by the arbitrator.

Held: that the award in the circumstances had to be executory on the choice of the parties and there was no vagueness and indefiniteness in the impugned award. (Para 28)

(C) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 13 — Corrections of clerical mistakes after passing the award — Patent errors — Permissibility.

Where the corrections made by the arbitrator were in respect of patent errors and did not amount to any change of substance in the award:

Held: such corrections were permissible and did not indicate non-application of mind. AIR 1955 Nag 126 and AIR 1962 SC 1123, Foll. (Para 30)

(D) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30 — Award in respect of one item unsustainable — Invalid part of award severable — Award not entirely vitiated. AIR 1965 SC 214, Foll. (Para 31)

D. K. Sen with P. K. Sen, for Appellant; A. C. Bhabra, S. Tibrewal and R. Ghose, for Respondent.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— The respondent, M. L. Dalmiya & Co. Ltd., an existing company under the Companies Act, 1956 hereinafter referred to as the Company, was employed by the Union of India, the appellant before us, to construct the New Terminal Building at Dum Dum Air Port Phase 1 Superstructure in terms of contract No. 13/EE/63-64 entered into on May 14, 1963. The Company completed the work including additional works before August 14, 1970. In course of work various disputes and differences arose between the parties in respect of the said contract. The disputes between the parties were referred by the Chief Engineer (Eastern Zone) to the arbitration of M. S. Iyengar Superintending Engineer (Arbitration). The arbitrator after hearing, examining and considering the statements of the parties and oral and documentary evidence, published his award on September 25, 1972 for which extension of time was duly obtained. The award was purported to be corrected by the Arbitrator in respect of certain alleged clerical mistakes on December, 1972.

2. The award was filed in this Court and the appellant filed an application for setting aside the said award or portion of it and or for the award to be declared null and void or for remitting the said award before the Arbitrator if necessary. This application, on hearing the parties, was rejected by Salil K. Roy Chowdhury, J. by his judgment and order dated March 30, 1973 against which the present appeal has been filed by the Union of India.

3. Clause 25 of the Contract provided as follows:—

"Except where otherwise provided in the contract all questions and disputes relating to the meaning of the specifications, designs, drawings and instructions hereinbefore mentioned and as to the quality of workmanship or materials used on the work in any way arising out or relating to the contract, design, drawings, specifications, estimates, instructions orders or these conditions or otherwise concerning the works, or the execution or failure to execute the same whether arising during the progress of the work or after the completion or abandonment thereof shall be referred to the sole arbitration of the person appointed by the Additional Chief Engineer, Central P.W.D.

in charge of the work at the time of dispute if there be no Addl. Chief Engineer, the administrative head of the said Central P. W. D. at the time of such appointment.

Subject as aforesaid, the provisions of the Arbitration Act, 1940 or any statutory modification or re-enactment thereof and the rules made thereunder and for the time being in force shall apply to the arbitrator proceeding under this Clause".

4. The Arbitrator was appointed by the Chief Engineer (Eastern Zone) by the following letter—

No. 8/CADI/9/7CW(A)

Dated, the May, 1970.

Subject: In the matter of Arbitration between M/s. M. L. Dalmiya & Co. Ltd., Calcutta Contractor and the Union of India regarding the work of Construction of Terminal Building for International Traffic at Dum Dum Phase I (Agreement No. 13/EE/64-64).

Whereas disputes have arisen between the abovenamed parties in respect of the above noted work; whereas disputes arising between the parties are required under Clause 25 of the agreement to be referred to the sole arbitration of the person to be appointed by the Additional Chief Engineer, CPWD and whereas the post of Additional Chief Engineer (Cal) has now been designated as Chief Engineer (E. Zone), therefore, in pursuance of the powers given to me under Cl. 25 of the agreement I. B. Manecksha, Chief Engineer (EZ) CPWD, Calcutta, hereby appoint Shri M. S. Iyengar Superintending Engineer (Arbitration) Ministry of Health & Family Planning and Works, Housing and Urban Development (Deptt. of Works, Housing & Urban Dev.), New Delhi, as an arbitrator to decide and to make his award regarding the claims/disputes given by the contractor on his being asked to do so and also regarding the counterclaims of the Government against the contractor as may follow subsequently, if any, subject always, however, to their admissibility under Cl. 25 of the aforesaid agreement. Disputes under the aforesaid agreement, already referred to the arbitrator previously, and decided by him in his award dated 26-8-1969, may be excluded from the present reference.

B. Manecksha
Chief Engineer (E. Z.)

5. The award of the arbitrator in extracts are as follows:—

In the matter of arbitration between:—
M/s. M. L. Dalmiya & Co. Ltd., Claimants and The Union of India, Respondent.

In respect of the work of Construction of Terminal Building for International traffic at Dum Dum phase I Ag. No. 13/EE/63-64.

Whereas I, M. S. Iyengar, Superintending Engineer (Arbitration) in the Ministry of Works & Housing, Government of India, New Delhi, was appointed by the Chief Engineer (EZ), C. P. W. D., Calcutta under his letter No. 8/CADI/9/70-W(A), dated 26th May, 1970, as Arbitrator to decide and make award regarding those disputes only, between the above named parties which fall within the purview of Cl. 25 of the Agreement.

And whereas I took upon myself the burden of the said reference on 8-1-1971.

And whereas the issues under dispute for adjudication and award were framed in consultation with and agreed upon by the parties at the hearing held on 15-4-1971; and whereas issues Nos. 9 & 10 and Issues Nos. 1 & 7 were amended in consultation with and agreed upon by the parties during the hearings on 21-2-1972 and 17-3-1972 respectively and whereas counter-claims of the respondents were also added during the hearing held on 20-1-1972 and whereas the issues of the counter-claims were also amended in consultation with and agreed upon by the parties during the hearing held on 15-2-1972 and were stated in the summary recorded of the proceedings of the respective hearing are set forth below.

And whereas the time limit for making and publishing award by the Arbitrator has been enlarged upon 15th November, 1972 by the High Court at Calcutta vide its order dated 20-6-1972.

Now therefore after hearing, examining and considering the statements of both the parties and the oral and documentary evidence produced before me by the parties and having heard and duly weighed and considered all facts, documents and other evidence with due care, I, M. S. Iyengar, do hereby make and publish this, my award concerning the matters so referred to me as aforesaid, in the matter following that is to say:

The Arbitrator is to determine whether under the terms and conditions of the contract, the claims of the claimants (M/s. M. L. Dalmiya & Co. Ltd.) and the counter-claims of the respondents (Union of India) enumerated below are justified and if so the extent of relief they are entitled to and the amount, if any, payable/recoverable against these claims/counter-claims:

6. It is clear from the award that after the Arbitrator had entered upon the reference, the parties filed their respective statements and counter statements and issues were framed thereon. Before the learned Judge as also before us, the award was attacked mainly on the following grounds i.e. (a) the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to award interest; (b) the award was vague, indefinite, and merely executory and thus incapable of being given effect to; (c) corrections were made in the award by the arbitrator after its publication; (d) the above are indications of non-application of mind which amounted to legal misconduct on the part of the arbitrator.

7. Elaborating his arguments, Mr. D. K. Sen, counsel for the Union of India, the appellant before us, submitted that the disputes are to be crystallised for reference to arbitration under provisions in the agreement. The claimants detained the disputes for an award and the jurisdiction of the arbitrator was confined to those disputes only and nothing beyond. If a dispute is entertained which is not covered by the reference, the arbitrator has travelled beyond his jurisdiction. Mr. Sen referred to the language of appointment of the arbitrator, which as, appearing from pp. 100 and 103 of the Paper Book was confined to (a) payment for quantities of the items executed beyond the agreement quantities at the prevailing market rate; (b) arbitrary recoveries made by the department; (c) extra expenditure involved for extra work beyond agreement. There were mention of other disputes which should be interpreted ejusdem generis, so that there was no whisper of a claim for interest in the disputes raised. The disputes between parties must be tabulated and specified prior to arbitration and such disputes could not be enlarged subsequently by statement of fact filed by the respondent and denied by the appellant. The arbitrator could only decide about interest if specifically referred to but not otherwise. Moreover the arbitrator unlike the court, had no power to award interest unless the question of interest may specifically be referred to him.

8. Mr. A. C. Bhabra, and later on, Mr. Tibrewal learned counsel for the respondents, submitted on the other hand that parties in the instant case chose a method of formulating the dispute. There was a general reference to arbitration without any specification of disputes which thus could only be ascertained from the pleadings of the parties. There was never any averment in the statement filed by the appellant that there was no dispute for claim of interest. In any event, the claim for interest was there by implication and the arbitrator had always the implied authority to grant interest in favour of the parties whom he found entitled to any principal amount.

Claims.	Award:
2. The claimants claim payment for various extra and substituted items of work executed by them under the contract at the rates as listed in annexure 'C' of their statement of facts or at such other rates as may be found correctly due to them.	This claim is partly justified. It is awarded that extra and substituted items be paid to the claimants at the rates shown in Appendix 'A' enclosed with the award. The said Appendix 'A' is made a part of this award.
14. The claimants claimed interest at 12% P. A. on the total amount of the award pendente lite and future till a decree by the competent court.	Interest pendente lite and future interest @ 6% P. A. on the amount of the award from 26.5.70 to the date of obtaining decree on the Arbitrator's award from the competent court or the date of actual payment is awarded in favour of the claimant, whichever is earlier.

9. Learned counsel have referred to and relied on various authorities which we shall now consider. In Bhowanidas Ramgobind v. Harsukhdas Balkishandas, AIR 1924 Cal 524, a Division Bench of this Court consisting of Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ. held relying on some earlier decisions, that the arbitrators have authority to make a decree for such damages as might have been assessed by the Court.

10. In International Rly. Co. v. Niagara Parks Commission, AIR 1937 PC 214 (222) the Privy Council held that the arbitrators whose only duty was "to ascertain the actual value of certain property at a certain time", had no power to include interest in their assessment of value.

11. The Privy Council in Bengal Nagpur Rly. v. Ruttanji Ramji, AIR 1938 PC 67 held that in law the court could allow interest when there is agreement to pay interest or it is payable by usage or under provision of any law. In equity under proviso to S. 1 of the Interest Act, 1839 the circumstances must exist attracting equitable jurisdiction for award of interest and such power to award interest has been expressly saved by the said proviso.

12. In Re-Arbitration the Bengal Jute Mills v. Jewraj Heeralal, 46 Cal WN 957:

(AIR 1943 Cal 13), Gentle, J. held that when parties set out specifically what disputes have arisen and what relief is sought in consequence of the alleged default by one party, those are the only matters upon which the arbitrator is required to enquire and adjudicate. It was further held that when an arbitrator gives an award which includes matters not submitted to him and reliefs asked for, such award is void in toto.

13. In Mathuradas Goverdhandas v. Khusiram Benarshilal, (1949) 53 Cal WN 873 it was held that existence of a dispute is an essential condition for the jurisdiction of an arbitrator and if there is no dispute there can be no right to demand arbitration at all.

14. In Thawar Das v. Union of India, AIR 1955 SC 468, the Court observed that Interest Act, 1839 would apply where interest is not otherwise payable by law. The following among other conditions must be fulfilled before interest can be awarded under the Act.

(1) there must be a debt for a sum certain;

(2) it must be payable at a certain time or otherwise;

(3) these debts or sums must be payable by virtue of some written contract at a certain time;

(4) there must have been a demand in writing stating that interest will be demanded from the date of the demand.

If none of these elements are present, the arbitrator is not entitled in law to allow interest simply because he thought the demand was reasonable. Moreover the arbitrator not being a court no interest could be awarded by it on analogy of S. 34 of the C. P. C.

15. This decision as laying a broad and unqualified proposition was doubted in Nachiappa v. Subramaniam AIR 1960 SC 307 (para. 44). In Satinder Singh v. Umrao Singh, AIR 1961 SC 908, the Court recognised that the power of Court to award interest on equitable grounds or under any other provisions of law has been expressly saved by proviso to S. 1. The Supreme Court observed in Mahabir Prasad v. Durga Datta, AIR 1961 SC 990 that interest for a period prior to the commencement of suit is payable under an agreement or usage of trade or a statutory provision and also under the Interest Act where notice is given. Further interest is also awarded in some cases by Courts of equity.

16. Again in Union of India v. Rallia Ram, AIR 1963 SC 1685 it was held that under the Interest Act, the court may allow interest to the plaintiff if the amount claimed is a sum certain which is payable at certain time by virtue of a written instrument. The Act however contains a proviso that interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law. The proviso applies to cases in which the court of equity exercises jurisdiction to allow interest.

17. This Court in Union of India v. Bungo Steel Furniture Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1963 Cal 70 held that an umpire acting under the Arbitration agreement has authority to direct payment of interest on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the award up to the date of the decree to be passed by the Court. He had this power before the passing of the Arbitration Act, 1940 and he continues to retain the power after the passing of that Act and there is nothing in S. 29 of the Arbitration Act which takes away this power.

18. In Chandris v. Isbrandtsen Moller Co. Inc. (1951-1 KB 240); (1950-2 All ER 618), on the question of award of interest by the arbitrator, it was held that it was implied term of the submission that the arbitrator should decide the dispute according to the existing law of contract. The provisions of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1934, S. 3 (1) gave Court power to award interest on debt or damages. Though these provisions did not apply to an arbitrator, the power to award interest by the arbitrator was derived from the submission to him which impliedly gave him the power to decide "all matters in difference" according to existing law of contract exercising every right and affording discretionary remedy given to a court of law.

19. In Waverly Jute Mills Co. Ltd. v. Raymon & Co. (India) (P.) Ltd., AIR 1963 SC 90 the court referred to the decisions in National Fire & General Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1956 Cal 11 and Pratabmull Rameshwar v. K. C. Sethia, (1944) Ltd., AIR 1960 Cal 702. It was observed by the Supreme Court:

"In both these cases there was a valid submission on which the arbitrators proceeded to act. Before them the parties filed statements and therein they put forward a claim which was not actually covered by the reference and invited them to give their decision thereon. The party against whom the award had gone contended that the arbitrators had acted without jurisdiction in deciding that claim. In overruling this contention the court held that it was open to the parties to enlarge the scope of a reference by inclusion of a fresh dispute, that they must be held to have done that when they filed their statements putting forward the claims not covered by the original agreement that these statements satisfied the requirements of S. 2 (a) of the Arbitration Act and that it was competent to the arbitrators to decide the dispute. The point to be noticed is that in both these cases there was no want of initial jurisdiction but a feeding of existing jurisdiction by an enlargement of the scope of the reference. That this does not involve any questions of jurisdiction in the arbitrators will be clear from the scheme of the Act. If an award deals with a matter not covered by the agreement it could either be modified under S. 15 (a) or remitted under S. 16 (1) (a). And where the matter is dealt with on the invitation of parties contained in the statement there can be no difficulty in holding that the arbitrators acted within jurisdiction."

20. In Union of India v. Watkins Mayor & Co., AIR 1966 SC 275 the court reaffirmed the position in law to the effect that in regard to interest prior to the date of institution of the suit, interest may be awarded when there is an agreement for payment of interest at fixed rate or when interest is payable by the usage of trade having the force of law or under the provisions of any substantive law. Under Interest Act the Court may allow interest to the plaintiff if the amount claimed is a sum certain which is payable at a certain time by virtue of a written instrument. But where the amount claimed is compensation for unliquidated amount and not a sum certain, the Act has no application and no interest can be granted, the proviso applies to cases in which the court of equity exercises jurisdiction to allow interest in appropriate circumstances.

21. The Supreme Court in Vithal Das v. Rup Chand, AIR 1967 SC 188 reiterated the essentials for award of interest prior to suit. They are: (a) an agreement for payment of interest at fixed rate; (b) usage of trade having force of law contemplating payment of such interest; (c) a provision of substantive law like S. 80 Negotiable Instruments Act or S. 23 of Trusts Act; (d) if the sum claimed is certain and payable at a certain time, Court can also grant interest under the rule of equity.

22. In Firm Madanlal Roshanlal v. Hukumchand Mills Ltd., AIR 1967 SC

1030 the Supreme Court noticed that in cases already referred to the court pointed out that observations in Thawardas' case were not intended to lay down such a broad and unqualified proposition. The said case is also silent on the question whether the arbitrator can award interest during the pendency of arbitration proceedings if the claim regarding interest is referred to arbitration. The Court further observed:

"In the present case, all the disputes in the suit were referred to the arbitrator for his decision. One of the disputes in the suit was whether the respondent was entitled to pendente lite interest. The arbitrator could decide the dispute and he could award pendente lite interest just as a court could do so under S. 34 of the C. P. C. Though, in terms S. 34 of the C. P. C. does not apply to arbitrations, it was an implied term of the reference in the suit that the arbitrator would decide the dispute according to law and would give such relief with regard to pendente lite interest as the Court could give if it decided the dispute. This power of the arbitrator was not fettered either by the arbitration agreement or by the Arbitration Act, 1940. The contention that in an arbitration in a suit the arbitrator had no power to award pendente lite interest must be rejected."

23. Again in Union of India v. Bungo Steel Furniture Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1032, the Court noticed that Thawardas' case did not deal with the question whether the arbitrator can award interest subsequent to the passing of the award if the claim regarding interest was referred to arbitration. The court held that the arbitrator had the jurisdiction to grant interest on the amount of the award from the date of the award till the date of the decree; the reason being "that it is an implied term of reference that the arbitrator will decide the dispute according to existing law and give such relief with regard to interest as a court could give if it decided the dispute. Though in terms, S. 34 of the C. P. C. does not apply to arbitration proceedings the principle of that section will be applied by the arbitrator for awarding interest in cases where a court of law in a suit having jurisdiction of the subject-matter covered by S. 34 could grant a decree for interest."

24. In State of Madhya Pradesh v. Saith and Skelton Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1972 SC 1507 the court observed—

"In the cases referred to above, it is seen that there was neither any agreement pleaded for payment of interest nor was any provision of law entitling the party to recover interest prior to the period of suit or arbitration proceedings referred to or relied upon. Under such circumstances it was held that the arbitrator or a court had no power to award interest prior to the date of the award ... From the decision in AIR 1967 SC 1030 it is clear that if all the disputes are referred for arbitration, the arbitrator has power to award interest pendente lite i.e. during the pendency of the arbitration proceedings".

25. In the case before us, the arbitrator was appointed by the Chief Engineer Eastern Zone by the letter we have quoted above. The letter recited that disputes had arisen between the parties and accordingly the arbitrator was appointed to decide and to make his award regarding the claims/disputes given by the contractor on his being asked to do so and also regarding the counter claims of the Government against the contractor as may follow subsequently. This letter clearly indicates that the disputes and claims generally were referred to the arbitrator subject to the specific claims and disputes as might be made by the contractor as also the counter claims if any to be made by the Government against the contractor "subsequently" in course of the arbitration proceedings. The arbitrator entered into reference on January 8, 1971. It appears from the award that statements were filed by both parties and the issues in dispute for adjudication and award were framed in consultations with and agreed upon by the parties at the hearing and issues on counter-claims were also amended in consultation with and agreed upon by the parties. It is therefore clear and obvious that the claim for interest pendente lite was made before the arbitrator and no objection at any time was taken by the appellant in the course of arbitration proceeding. In view of the special procedure adopted by the parties on the basis of the order of reference dated May 26, 1970 the question of award of pendente lite interest, it is obvious, was referred to the arbitrator and we have not been shown any contemporaneous evidence to indicate that any objection was taken thereto by the appellant. Issues were framed as stated by the arbitrator, in the presence of parties. It is accordingly too late in the day to suggest that the question of interest pendente lite was no item of dispute. We accordingly held relying on the Bungo Steel Furniture's case AIR 1967 SC 1032 as also Saith & Skelton's case (AIR 1972 SC 1507) referred to above that interest pendente lite if any payable to the contractor was an item of reference to the arbitrator who accordingly had the jurisdiction to award interest from the date of reference.

26. The next contention against the award is that the award is non-executory, vague and indefinite and could not be given effect to. Reference was made to particular Items Nos. 73, 75, 80, 81 and 83. In particular payment as provided in Item 2 of the award for extra and substituted works at rates specified in App. 'A' could not be ascertained with reference to Items 73, 75 and 85 inasmuch as the measurements had neither been recorded nor could be assessed as the works had been completed. Further it was said Items 73 and 88 were identical and award had been made twice in respect of the same work.

27. About the last contention namely about Items 73 and 88 it has been contended that the objection in this form was not taken in the trial court nor in the memorandum of appeal. Even so, the error seems to be patent on the face of it and in absence of any explanation, there is no scope for avoiding or overlooking the same. We accordingly think that the award in Item 88 is not allowable and should be struck down.

28. As to Item 75 we do not find any vagueness, and if it was no longer possible to examine the number of slit openings in view of subsequent constructions, the record maintained by the respondent would have to be relied upon. The same consideration would be applicable for Items 80, 81 and 85 and it appears from the affidavit-in-opposition affirmed on February 20, 1973 by Ramantar Jhunjhunwala to the petition filed by the appellant challenging the award that a particular procedure was adopted for the purpose with consent of parties and disputes in respect of the rates of the claim were referred to the arbitrator. The arbitrator had followed the procedure so agreed upon and it was never brought to the notice of the arbitrator that the analysis of rates submitted by the contractor suffered from infirmities resulting in any mistake or error in the award. As to measurements of works it was also the duty of the appellant to keep proper account in respect thereof and if they failed to maintain such record, the contractor could not be deprived of their legal dues. Further the arbitrator was required to fix rates of works without reference to measurements and in this state of affairs, it was not possible for the arbitrator to award lump sums in respect of claims and counter-claims which must necessarily have to be calculated on basis of the rates so fixed by the arbitrator. The award in the circumstances had to be executory on the choice of the parties and accordingly there was no vagueness and indefiniteness in the impugned award.

29. The award was made and published on September 25, 1972 but thereafter on December 1, 1972 it is alleged on the ex parte application of the contractor, the award was corrected as follows:—

- | | |
|---------------------------------|--|
| (i) Appendix 'A' Serial No. 38 | For unit given as % Cft read unit " " % Cft. |
| (ii) Appendix 'A' Serial No. 62 | For unit given as sft read unit as rft. |

30. The appellant submitted that the corrections were impermissible in law and would indicate the non-application of mind on the part of the arbitrator. In Chouthmal v. Ramchandra, AIR 1955 Nag 126, it was held that once an arbitrator has given his decision, he becomes functus officio and he cannot add to or vary it in any way except to correct clerical mistakes or errors arising from any accidental slip or omission. In Juggilal Kamalapat v. General Fibre Dealers Ltd., AIR 1962 SC 1123 it was held that generally speaking an arbitrator is functus officio after he has made the award but this only means that no power is left in the arbitrator to make any change of substance in the award that he has made except in certain circumstances provided in the law. The corrections made by the arbitrator here were in respect of patent errors and did not amount to any change of substance in the award and thus were permissible. We are also not prepared to accept that these corrections indicate non-application of mind on the part of the arbitrator as contended by Mr. Sen on behalf of the appellant.

31. We have seen that the award in respect of Item 88 is unsustainable. That, however, without more will not vitiate the award. In Jivaribhai v. Chintamanrao, AIR 1965 SC 214 the Court held that the award, to the extent it is beyond the arbitrator's jurisdiction, is invalid and if it is not possible to sever such invalid part from the other part of the award, the award must fail in its entirety. In the case before us, the award, in respect of Item 88 is perfectly severable from the other part of the award. Accordingly though we are unable to sustain the award in respect of Item 88, it cannot be said that the entire award is thereby vitiated.

32. For all these reasons we are unable to accept the various contentions raised by the appellant. The award in respect of Item No. 88 is set aside and the order and decree passed by the learned Judge are varied to that extent. In the result, the appeal succeeds in part and only to the extent indicated above. Save as aforesaid, the order and the decree under appeal are affirmed. The appellant will pay half the costs of the appeal. Certified for two Counsel.

33. After hearing the submissions made by Mr. Tibrewal and Mr. P. K. Sen, we release the respondents from the undertaking they have given in respect of payment of Rs. 2,00,000/- made by the appellant Union of India to the respondents. The guarantee will accordingly stand discharged. All parties and the Bank of Madura will act on a signed copy of the minutes of Mr. B. M. Bagaria, Attorney for the respondents, undertaking to complete this order.

S. K. MUKHERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal partly allowed.

ANIL KUMAR SEN AND M. N. ROY, JJ.

State of West Bengal and another, Appellants v. Ajit Kumar Mukherjee, Respondent.

F. A. No. 87 of 1964, D/- 22-6-1976.

(A) Government of India Act (1935), S. 175 (3) — Contract with State Government by correspondence — Tender for supply of ghee accepted by Superintendent of Police who was duly authorised — Delivery of entire quantity contracted for made but payment of price delayed — Suit for compensation against State Government — Contract is valid and enforceable even if no formal document is executed. (B) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 80 — Contents of notice — Suit against State Government for recovery of unpaid price of ghee supplied and for damages by way of interest — Court is not justified in disallowing claim for damages by way of interest merely because notice under S. 80 does not set out quantum of damages or specific rate of interest.

Although the terms of S. 80 of the Civil P. C. are to be strictly complied with, that does not mean that the terms of the notice should be scrutinised in a pedantic manner. The notice must broadly make out the case which is proposed to be brought so that the Government may consider the position for itself. That object is served when the notice specifies the nature of the suit proposed to be filed, the facts on which the claim is founded and the precise reliefs asked for. (Para 18)

Where the notice under S. 80 precisely stated that the plaintiff amongst others would claim the relief of damages on the unpaid price of the goods for the period the price was withheld, the trial Judge would not be justified in rejecting the claim of the plaintiff in this respect on the ground that the rate of interest to be claimed or the actual quantum of damages by way of interest had not been specified in the notice. (Para 18)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 34 and 107 — Pendente lite interest — Award of — Trial Judge in exercise of his judicial discretion under S. 34 awarding pendente lite interest at 3% on principal amount adjudged payable to plaintiff as reasonable — Appellate Court would not interfere so as to enhance it to 6%. (Para 18)

(D) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 34 — Interest prior to suit — Suit for recovery of unpaid price of goods supplied — Court should award such interest as plaintiff has statutory right under S. 61, Sale of Goods Act. (Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 61).

Where the plaintiff brings a suit for recovery of unpaid price of goods supplied and also claims interest on that amount from the date when the price became payable, such interest being payable under S. 61 of the Sale of Goods Act, the plaintiff had statutory right to claim such interest and the Court should award interest when it is so payable under the statute. The ordinary rule that such interest for the period prior to suit is not payable in the absence of a specific stipulation therefor does not apply when the right is conferred by the statute. Chandidas Roychowdhury and S. N. Mukherjee, for Appellants; Shyama Charan Mitra and Anil Kumar Mukherjee, for Respondent.

M. N. ROY, J.:— This appeal is directed against the judgment and decree dated March 6, 1963 by the learned Subordinate Judge, 6th Court, Alipore, made in Money Suit No. 13 of 1958. The plaintiff respondent (hereinafter referred to as the plaintiff) at all material times and still is carrying on business under the name and style of Pearson Trading Company at 1/5, Raja Basanta Roy Road, Calcutta-26, as a contractor in food in the Police departments in West Bengal and several other mercantile concerns. Pursuant to an invitation of a tender for the supply of dietary articles, including cow and Bhaisa ghee by the Superintendent of Police, 24 Parganas, he on November 5, 1948 submitted a tender for such articles of cow and Bhaisa ghee at the following rates:

- (1) Buffalow ghee ... @ Rs. 235/-
- (2) Cows ghee ... @ Rs. 295/- (No. 1)
Guarantee % per cent.
- (3) Cows ghee ... @ Rs. 220/- per maund (No. 2)

Such tender of the plaintiff was accepted by the said Superintendent of Police by his letter of November 18, 1948 for the month of November, 1948 and he was directed to supply 100 maunds of Bhaisa ghee as per his sample. It is also an admitted fact that pursuant to such acceptance and order, the plaintiff at first delivered 26 maunds 6 seers and 14 chataks of Bhaisa ghee in 59 containers on November 19, 1948 and thereafter, on November 24, 1948 he delivered another consignment of 75 maunds 20 seers of Bhaisa ghee in 171 containers. It is also not disputed that the supplies in question were approved and accepted and thereafter, the plaintiff on Dec. 4, 1948 placed his bill for Rs. 23,831.14 as 3 pies, as price of 130 tins containing 101 maunds 26 seers 14 chataks of Bhaisa ghee. Since there were some errors in calculation, the said bill was ultimately returned to the plaintiff for correction, who thereafter on December 8, 1948 presented a corrected bill for Rupees 23,892-14 as 3 pies for the goods supplied. It appears that by Memorandum No. R/543 dated December 21, 1948, the plaintiff was informed by the Superintendent of Police concerned that the supplies so made by him were adulterated and he was asked to take back the tins which were lying in the store of the said defendant and to submit a fresh bill for the quantity of ghee actually consumed. Since there was delay in making the payments for such supply of ghee, the plaintiff on December 23, 1948 requested the Superintendent of Police concerned to send a cheque for the price of the goods so supplied. It also appears from the records that on receipt of the letter of December 21, 1948 from the Superintendent of Police concerned, the plaintiff by his letter of January 6, 1949 denied the charges of adulteration as was alleged. It would also appear that before the said letter of January 6, 1949, the plaintiff with his representatives had been to the Ration Store of the defendants on January 4, 1949 to take back the unconsumed tins lying at the said godown and at that time on proper examination of the tins it was found out to their utter surprise that they did not belong to them. Such detection was made when the plaintiff found that the secret marks "SB" which were given on the tins so supplied by him were conspicuously absent. By the said letter of January 6, 1949 the plaintiff also contended that the tins supplied by him have been replaced and that has placed him in such an awkward position that he could not take back those tins as per the directions as mentioned above. In the said letter the plaintiff also alleged that some underhand means have worked with the mala fide intention to harass him. It was also stated by the plaintiff in the said letter that the samples sent for test by the said defendants were not taken in his presence nor did they bear his official seals and signature and it was quite possible that samples were taken through oversight from the stocks supplied by other contractors. The plaintiff also made it clear in his letter under reference that he would have certainly submitted to the charges as levelled against him, if the procedure which was adopted in the month of December 1948 for taking samples in the case of Messrs. National Dairy, since such procedure was quite in order. From a reference to the said letter it also appears that the plaintiff made it clear that the supply of ghee from several tins which he had supplied, had actually been made and distributed to several Police Stations like Barrackpore and G. R. P. Sealdah and since those supplies have been called back for the purpose of delivering them to him, also caused a suspicion in his mind. The plaintiff, however, made it clear that for the act and action of the said defendants he has suffered much and irreparable damages to his goodwill and in any view of the matter he requested for the payment of his bill at an early date. It has also been made clear that on failure of such payment, he would be compelled to charge the defendants interest @ 12½%.

2. It also appears from the records that thereafter, proceedings were initiated against the plaintiff and another person named Sri S. Banerjee and they were placed on trial under Ss. 420 and 227 of the I. P. C. Such proceedings of course ended in an acquittal of the plaintiff and the said co-accused on April 22, 1950, by the learned trying Magistrate. Thereafter, the Superintendent of Police, 24 Parganas (defendant No. 2) filed a fresh complaint on the self-same allegations before the Additional District Magistrate and the plaintiff was summoned to face the trial. He in his turn moved this Court for quashing the said criminal proceedings and by the judgment of December 14, 1950, this Court was pleased to quash the said proceedings. Then at the instance of the Superintendent of Police, 24 Parganas, notices were issued on the plaintiff through the Court of the Magistrate, First Class, Alipore, directing him to take back the consumed containers of ghee and after considering the show cause by the plaintiff, the said learned Magistrate directed that the unconsumed ghee produced by the Superintendent of Police, 24 Parganas be made over to the plaintiff.

3. Even thereafter, the said defendants, instead of making due payment of the price of ghee as supplied, harassed the plaintiff in different criminal proceedings, which also failed. On the failure of the said defendants to make necessary payment for the supply of ghee as mentioned hereinbefore, the plaintiff on December 17, 1951 filed Money Suit No. 13 of 1958, for recovery of the price of goods sold and supplied and for damages. In the plaint it has been contended that the plaintiff was entitled to get Rupees 23,892-14 as. 3 pies as price of the ghee in question and as the said defendants have delayed the payment, so he was also entitled to damages by way of interest to the extent of Rs. 9,457-10 as. 4 pies. Thus his total claim in the said suit was Rupees 33,350-8 as. 7 pies. The said suit was preceded by a notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C. dated October 6, 1951.

4. The said defendants in their written statement contended the suit to be not maintainable since there was no proper service of notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C. They also denied the legality and validity of the same. The said defendants in their turn admitted that the plaintiff had supplied 100 maunds 26 sheers and 14 cha-taks of Bhaisa ghee as mentioned in the plaint but they contended that such supplies were neither examined nor approved or accepted by them. They have also alleged that some samples were sent to the Director of West Bengal Police Health Laboratory and it was detected that the ghee in question was highly adulterated and not according to the samples sent along with the tender. The said defendants have further contended that the plaintiff was bound to supply ghee according to the approved samples and he was duly asked to take back the unconsumed portion of the ghee. They further stated that they were not liable to pay the amount so claimed by the plaintiff and in any event he was not entitled to any interest as he did not claim any interest or damages in his notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C. It was further and also contended by the said defendants that there was no valid contract under S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 and the plaintiff was not entitled to claim anything as per contract.

5. On the pleadings as aforesaid, the following issues were framed for determination:—

(1) Did the plaintiff supply ghee to the defendants as alleged in the plaint?

(2) Was the ghee supplied adulterated? Did the defendants refuse to accept the ghee for good and sufficient cause?

(3) Are the defendants liable for any amount? If so, for what amount?

(4) Was the notice under S. 80, C. P. C., proper sufficient and legal?

(5) To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

6. On consideration of the evidence as lead and available, the learned trial Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff supplied the two consignments of Bhaisa ghee and there was no satisfactory evidence that the samples for the alleged tests were drawn properly from the supplies effected by him on November 19, 1948. It has also been held that the said defendants not only failed to establish that the ghee supplied by the plaintiff was adulterated but they also failed to establish that the unconsumed ghee was also adulterated and as such they had no right or authority to refuse to accept the ghee as supplied by the plaintiff. Apart from the above, it was also found by the learned trial Court that the notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C. was due, proper and sufficient, although it has been held, in view of the plaintiff's failure to mention in the said notice Ext. B (4), the rate at which he would get damages and more particularly his failure to specify the damages, that he would not be entitled to claim damages by way of interest for the period mentioned in the plaint and as such decreed the suit by holding that the plaintiff's claim for damages by way of interest cannot be granted and he would be entitled to get interest on the principal sum of Rs. 23,892-14-3 pies @ 3 per cent, from the date of the institution of the suit till the date of decree. The suit was of course dismissed against defendant No. 2 viz., the Superintendent of Police, 24 Parganas, since no relief was claimed against him.

7. From such determination the defendants have preferred the present appeal and there has also been a cross-objection filed by the plaintiff on March 24, 1965, claiming interest at 6% per annum as interest on the principal sum for the period from November 24, 1948 to December 16, 1951 viz., for an amount of Rs. 4,728-13-2 p. and thereby giving up his claim for the balance of 6% and further claiming interest on the principal sum for the period from December 17, 1951 to March 6, 1963 i.e. from the date of institution of the suit upto the date of decree at the rate of 6% per annum.

8. Mr. Roychowdhury, appearing for the appellants contended before us that (i) on the basis of the materials on record, it should have been held that the ghee supplied by the plaintiff was adulterated and as such there was enough justification for the defendant appellants to refuse to accept the consignment of ghee and correspondingly not to make any payment for any portion or at least for the unconsumed portion and as such (ii) the defendant appellants were not liable to make any payment either on account of the price of the goods sold and delivered or on account of interest as charged for and claimed.

11. So, on the basis of the available evidence as mentioned hereinbefore, we do not find any justification in holding that the findings arrived at by the learned trial Judge were incorrect or are required to be interfered with or set aside.

In view of the above, the first contention raised by Mr. Roychowdhury fails and as such we hold that the defendant appellants had no justification to refuse to make any payment or any portion of the same or at least for the unconsumed portion and as such it must be held that the defendant appellants are liable to pay for the price of the goods, ghee in the instant case, duly sold and supplied by the plaintiff. We are further of the view that the defendants have failed to establish that the ghee as supplied by the plaintiff was adulterated.

12. On the second point urged on behalf of the appellants, particulars whereof have been mentioned hereinbefore, Mr. Roychowdhury, in half seriousness repeated that in view of the provisions in S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act 1935, there was no valid contract in the instant case. However, in view of the admitted fact that the plaintiff was requested by the Defendant No. 2 to supply ghee, which was duly complied with and there has been no dispute that the supplies were meant for the use of the police personnel and there existed a lawful relationship between the parties to the contract, in terms of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of State of West Bengal v. B. K. Mondal & Sons, reported in AIR 1962 SC 779 and the more so when the defendants have failed to prove that the unconsumed ghee was adulterated, in agreement with the learned Court below, we also hold that the plaintiff cannot be held guilty of any laches as alleged if the defendants have not thought it fit to consume the stock of ghee lying with them and all the more so, when after acceptance of the ghee, they have used a portion of the same and furthermore, when there is evidence showing that after consumption of such ghee any member of the Police force fell ill and when there is also no evidence to establish that the unconsumed portion of the ghee was adulterated. In view of the above, we also uphold the determination of the learned trial Court that the claim for compensation as made by the plaintiff and at the rate as mentioned was justified. It may be mentioned that at no point of time any dispute was raised regarding the rate at which the supply was made.

13. In the notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C., (Ext. B (4)), admittedly the plaintiff has not claimed interest or damages and as such Mr. Roychowdhury repeated the arguments as were made before the learned trial Court that as such, the plaintiff was not entitled to claim interest or damages prior to the institution of the suit i.e. December 17, 1951. Such argument was sought to be made on the ground and the basis that the terms of S. 80 being express and explicit, apart from being mandatory, the plaintiff, because of his failure to plead and claim interest or damages therein, was not entitled to maintain his claim on that account. Two judgments of the Supreme Court reported in AIR 1960 SC 1309, (State of Madras v. C. P. Agencies) and AIR 1958 SC 274, (Dhian Singh Sobha Singh v. Union of India), were relied on respectively by the defendant appellants and the plaintiff. Although in the notice Ext. B (4) neither any rate at which damages would be claimed nor the amount of damages has been mentioned, yet the plaintiff, in his plaint has claimed interest @ Rs. 12½% from November 24, 1948 to December, 1951 i.e. for an amount of Rs. 9,457-10-4 p. In the notice in question Ext. B (4), the plaintiff has on the other hand just mentioned that he would claim damages for improperly and illegally delaying the payment of his claim of Rs. 23,892-14-3 p. and on consideration of the decisions as mentioned hereinbefore, the learned trial Court has come to the conclusion that the plaintiff would not be entitled to claim damages by way of interest for the period as mentioned in the plaint. The validity and sufficiency of the said notice Ext. B (4) has not been denied and disputed at any stage, including the proceedings in this appeal. For the determination of the point as indicated hereinbefore, the cross-objection of the plaintiff would be of relevant consideration.

14. As mentioned hereinbefore, the plaintiff has reduced his claim for interest and damages to 6% from 12½% as originally claimed. Mr. Mitter appearing for the plaintiff has submitted that such reduction has been made because due to the delay in having the payment, his client has been placed in great financial hardship. The plaintiff has of course claimed further interest at that rate on the principal sum for the period from December 17, 1951 to March 6, 1963 i.e. from the date of the institution of the suit till the date of the decree.

15. After referring to the notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C., Ext. B (4), it was submitted by Mr. Mitter that the provisions regarding the pleading and damages in the said notice have been misconstrued by the learned Court below and in any event the findings that the plaintiff was not entitled to claim damages by way of interest for the period mentioned in the plaint and on the reasonings as mentioned in the impugned judgment and decree are unsustainable. He further submitted that the learned Court below having found the said notice Ext. B (4) to be due, proper and sufficient, should not have made the judgment and decree in the manner he has done and furthermore in making the said determination, the learned trial Court failed to appreciate the import and effect of the case of State of Madras v. C. P. Agencies, (AIR 1960 SC 1309) (supra) and that of Dhian Singh Sobha Singh v. Union of India, (AIR 1958 SC 274) (supra) and in any event, having regard to the materials on record and the principles of law involved and more particularly because of the fact that the plaintiff was prevented from having the benefits of his money for a considerable time due to the neglect, laches and improper conduct of the defendants, interest at least @ 6% per annum on the principal sum should have been allowed in terms of the claim from November 24, 1948 to December 13, 1951. Mr. Mitter further submitted that since the contract in the instant case was not severable and admittedly the defendants had duly accepted the supply of ghee, so the property passed to the buyer viz., the defendants and they having accepted and consumed a part or portion of such ghee, cannot now take the defence of adulteration and the more so when such charge has not been proved. In support of his contentions, Mr. Mitter first relied on S. 13 (2) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1930 and then to S. 61 (2) of the same, and submitted further that since there was no contract to the contrary viz., interest @ 6%, the learned trial Court should have awarded interest at the said rate of 6% from November 1948 i.e. when the supply was effected to December 1951 i.e. when the suit was decreed, even though such pleading was not available in the notice in Ext. B (4). Mr. Mitter also relied on the case of Dhian Singh Sobha Singh v. Union of India, (supra) for the proposition that although the terms of S. 80 are to be strictly complied with, it does not mean that the terms of the notice should be scrutinized in a pedantic manner or in a manner completely divorced from commonsense and submitted that such view has in fact and also been maintained in the case of the State of Madras v. C. P. Agencies (supra). In fact, Mr. Mitter submitted that since the intention of the plaintiff could be well gathered from the notice Ext. B (4) viz., about his intention to claim interest and damages on the principal amount, so even in spite of paucity of pleadings for such claim of interest and damages, the learned trial Court should have also granted interest and damages at the rate and for the period as claimed.

16. On a consideration of the determinations as mentioned hereinbefore read with the pleadings of the parties and the evidence as lead, we are of the view that the plaintiff, in fact and in effect, intended to claim interest and damages on the principal amount and the defendants had also no difficulty in understanding the same and as such the plaintiff would be entitled to maintain his claim for interest and damage, particularly when such intention is manifest from the correspondence. The plaintiffs' failure to mention or plead specifically the said fact in the notice Ext. B (4) would not be fatal in the facts and circumstances of the case.

17. It has been held by a Bench decision of this Court in the case of Kanchanganga Co. Ltd. v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1973 Cal 325, while dealing with a contract with the State or the Union under Art. 299 of the Constitution of India, that when contract by correspondence has resulted in offer and acceptance and the parties have acted on it, the contract is enforceable. Furthermore, when a party has taken benefit under the agreement, it cannot be allowed to take up a new position. Such view also finds support from the determination in the case of Union of India v. A. L. Rallia Ram, AIR 1963 SC 1685, where, dealing with S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, it has been observed that:

"S. 175 (3) does not in terms require that a formal document executed on behalf of the Dominion of India, and the other contracting party, alone is effective. In the absence of any direction by the Governor General under S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act prescribing the manner, a valid contract may result from correspondence if the requisite conditions are fulfilled. It is true that S. 175 (3) uses the expression "executed" but that does not by itself contemplate execution of a formal contract by the contracting parties. A tender for purchase of goods in pursuance of an invitation issued by or on behalf of the Governor General of India and acceptance in writing which is expressed to be made in the name of the Governor General and is executed on his behalf by a person authorised in that behalf would conform to the requirements of S. 175 (3)."

The above view also gets support from another determination of the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. N. K. Private Ltd., AIR 1972 SC 915. In that case while dealing with a contract under Art. 299 of the Constitution of India, it has been observed that:

"It is now settled by this Court that though the words 'expressed' and 'executed' in Art. 299 (1) might suggest that it should be by a deed or by a formal written contract, a binding contract by tender and acceptance can also come into existence if the acceptance is by a person duly authorised in this behalf by the President of India. A contract whether by a formal deed or otherwise by persons not authorised by the President cannot be binding and is absolutely void."

Thus from the above it is also clear that Mr. Mitter has ample justification in his contentions that the arguments on S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, as were sought to be urged by Mr. Roychowdhury, although not very seriously, are of little or no substance, since the correspondence disclosed, proved the due execution of the contract and there is no evidence that D. W. 1 was not authorised to accept the tender or to enter into the contract.

18. Coming back now to the cross objection, it appears that the plaintiff claimed interest on the amount claimed by him as the unpaid price of the goods supplied to the defendant-appellant from 24th November 1948 till December 17, 1951 i. e. the date of institution of the suit at 12½% per annum and also interest pendente lite. The learned Subordinate Judge disallowed the former claim merely on the ground that the plaintiff in his S. 80 notice had not specified the rate at which he would claim interest on the price of goods withheld nor did he specify the quantum of damages he would demand on that account. The learned Subordinate Judge allowed interest pendente lite at 3%. In this cross-objection the plaintiff is not reasserting his claim of interest for the period prior to the suit though he has reduced his claim to 6% per annum and he is also claiming the interest pendente lite as decreed by the learned Subordinate Judge to be enhanced to 6% from 3%. So far as the latter claim is concerned it appears to us that the learned Subordinate Judge has in his judicial exercise of discretion under S. 34 of the C. P. C. had held that awarding interest at 3% on the principal amount adjudged payable to the plaintiffs as reasonable and we find no reason either to differ from him in his assessment nor to hold that such assessment is not reasonable or fair. Hence the second part of the plaintiff's claim in the cross-objection must be overruled. So far however the first part of the claim is concerned, we are of the view that the learned Subordinate Judge was clearly in the error in altogether rejecting plaintiff's claim of interest on the unpaid price of the goods supplied to the defendants from the date such price became payable to the date of the suit. Mr. Mitter has rightly pointed out that such interest being payable under S. 61 of the Sale of Goods Act, the plaintiff had statutory right to claim such interest and the Court should award interest when it is so payable under the statute. The ordinary rule that such interest for the period prior to suit is not payable in the absence of a specific stipulation therefor does not apply when the right is conferred by the statute. Learned Subordinate Judge also had not relied on that principle for disallowing the said claim. He seems to think that unless the total quantum of damage by way of interest or the specific rate of interest to be claimed is set out in the notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C. the plaintiff is not entitled to sustain a claim in this respect. There he was wrong as the notice under S. 80 of the C. P. C. clearly asserted that the plaintiff claims damages for improperly and illegally delaying the payment of the price due on the goods supplied. On the decisions of the Supreme Court referred to hereinbefore it is now well settled that although the terms of S. 80 of the C. P. C. are to be strictly complied with, that does not mean that the terms of the notice should be scrutinised in a pedantic manner. The notice must broadly make out the case which is proposed to be brought so that the Government may consider the position for itself. That object is served when the notice specifies the nature of the suit proposed to be filed, the facts on which the claim is founded and the precise reliefs asked for. The learned Subordinate Judge himself has upheld the notice under S. 80 of the Civil P. C. and still he had rejected the claim of the plaintiff in this respect on the ground that rate of interest to be claimed or the actual quantum of damages by way of interest had not been specified in the notice. We do not think that was at all necessary. It had precisely been stated in the notice that the plaintiff amongst others would claim the relief of damages on the unpaid price of the goods from the period the price was withheld. Hence this part of the cross-objection must succeed and the judgment and decree of the learned Judge dismissing the plaintiff's claim of interest prior to the suit must and is hereby set aside. Interest of justice would be best served if interest at 3% as has been allowed pendente lite and found by us to be reasonable be allowed for the period from 8th December 1948 (the date when the corrected bill was submitted by the plaintiff) till the date of the institution of the suit.

19. On the conclusions as above, the appeal fails and is dismissed. The cross-objections succeeds and is allowed in part. The decree as passed by the Court below is modified to this extent viz., that the interest which has been decreed at three per cent per annum would be from 8th December 1948 till the date of decree. The decretal amount shall be payable within three months. The plaintiff respondent (cross-objector) would be entitled to proportionate costs. Hearing fee being assessed at 3 g. ms.

Bankers' Books Evidence Act (1891), S. 6
— Power of Court to Order a Bank to supply certified copy of entries in a bank account — Circumstances under which such power may be used.

In the instant case, the defendant made an application under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891, for an order upon certain bank to supply a certified copy of the entries in respect of the account of one of its customers, for a particular period so that the same might be utilised as a piece of evidence in the trial of the suit which was continuing before the Court.

Held that the application by defendant seeking production of third party's document could not be allowed when all the witnesses had been examined and as such the plaintiff would not get any opportunity to cross-examine any of the defendant's witnesses on the document. In the ends of justice a third party's document ought not to be allowed to be produced unless very special circumstances are shown. AIR 1938 Bom 33 (SB), Ref.

AIR 1938 Bom 33 (SB) 6

ORDER:— This is an application under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891, for an order upon the Punjab National Bank Ltd., Lilloah Branch at Howrah to supply a certified copy of the entries in respect of the account of Messrs. Thakuradas Sureka of 172, J. N. Mukherjee Road, Howrah, for a particular period so that the same might be utilised as a piece of evidence in the trial of this suit which is continuing before this Court now.

2. Messrs. Thakuradas Sureka is a firm but neither this firm nor any of the partners hereof are parties to this proceeding. In course of this proceeding on or about 12th January, 1976 a similar application was moved ex parte for the production of the very same statement of account of this firm of Thakuradas Sureka and for the very same period as is being asked for now from the above bank. The said application was rejected by this Court because it asked for the production of the certified copy of the statement of account of a constituent who was neither a party to this proceeding nor any of its partners having been called as witnesses in this case.

3. Since then further evidence has been taken. The defendants have called a witness by the name of Mahabir Prosad Keshan who happens to be a clerk of the joint receivers appointed over the said firm of Thakuradas Sureka. The said witness produced a copy of the statement of the bank but the same could not be tendered in evidence because the witness had no knowledge in respect thereto nor was the said document a certified copy of the bank. It is now contended that the certified copy should be caused to be produced by making an order in this fresh application so that the said statement of account might be tendered in evidence.

4. The present application has been moved after the examination of the main witnesses both on behalf of the plaintiff and on behalf of the defendants had already been concluded. Even the examinations of the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are also over. Accordingly, I directed the applicant to serve a copy of the petition to all the parties concerned including upon the partners of Thakurdas Sureka. It appears that Ratanlal Sureka a partner of Thakurdas Sureka has refused to accept service because the receiver is already in possession of the firm and on the plea that without the instructions of the learned receivers he could not accept such service. Be that as it may, I heard the petitioner's counsel as also the plaintiff's counsel.

5. Mr. Sen appearing on behalf of the plaintiff strongly objects to any order being passed in this application on several grounds. First, it is contended that on principle a third party's banking account should not be caused to be produced in without calling such a party in the witness box. Secondly, that at this stage if such a document is allowed to be produced and tendered in evidence his client would suffer serious prejudice because he would not be in a position to cross-examine any of the defendants or the witnesses called on behalf of the defendants on this document and thirdly, that the document is quite irrelevant for the purpose of this case.

6. Mr. Sen has referred to me the case of Central Bank of India Ltd. v. P. D. Shamdasan, reported in AIR 1938 Bom 33 (SB) in which Beaumont C. J. observed at page 36 as follows:—

"There is no doubt truth in the contention that it may be difficult, or even impossible for the complainant to prove his case without inspection of the Bank's books, but the Court has to have regard to other aspects of the matter. The Legislature has endowed the Courts with wide powers of ordering production of documents necessary for the determination of matters before the Court, and for directing inspection of those documents but it must always be borne in mind that an order directing a person to produce or give inspection of his books in a dispute to which he is not a party involves a serious inroad upon his normal rights as a citizen and the Courts have always set their faces against giving anything in the nature of a roving or fishing commission to inspect documents. The Court does not allow a man to say. 'I make such and such a charge against my opponent, and now if you will let me look into his books I will see whether I can find some evidence to support it.' If the Courts were to make orders for inspection of books merely on an allegation that certain facts are true, the practice would be open to very serious abuse, and the Court might easily become something of a menace to a mercantile community. It would be open to an unscrupulous person to make a false charge, possibly against a business rival, and then get inspection of that business rival's books."

7. To my mind, at this stage this application ought not to be allowed because the witnesses have all been examined and the plaintiff will not get any opportunity to cross-examine any of the defendant's witnesses on this document. Furthermore, the more fundamental objection is that this is a third party's document and in the ends of justice the same ought not to be allowed to be produced by this process unless very special circumstances would be shown in the petition as grounds thereof. No such special circumstances having been made out in the petition, the petitioner is not entitled to any order.

8. The application is also barred by the principles of res judicata in view of the same being considered at an earlier stage and dismissed by this Court on 12th February, 1976 last.

9. Lastly, to my mind, the said document, if produced, would not in any way help in deciding this case. It is in evidence before me by the witness called from the bank that the cheque for Rupees 1,78,400/- drawn by Thakurdas has been credited to the second payee's account and the said cheque being already in the records of this case, the said statement of account cannot throw any extra light on the topic. How it could be credited by the bank when the balance in credit was not sufficient to cover it cannot be relevant. Under those circumstances, it would matter little for the court to know what was the balance amount lying in the account of Thakurdas Sureka on such date by causing the statement of account to be produced.

10. Under those circumstances, the application is bound to be and is dismissed with costs. Certified for counsel.

Application dismissed.

Jagat Bandhu Shaw and others, Appellants v. Ram Nagina Pandey, Respondent.

L. P. A. No. 228 of 1974, r/- 7-4-1977.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 144 (1) and O. 9, R. 13 — Words “reversed” and “the Court of first instance” in S. 144 (1) — Interpretation of — Setting aside of ex parte decree by trial Court — It is reversal of decree.

For proper application of S. 144 the word “reverse” should be given its meaning in the wider sense and in that view of the matter, it will mean setting aside of the order of the decree by the Court which passed it and also by the Court of higher forum either in appeal or in revision. The meaning of the word is not in any way restricted in the section. (Para 4)

The Court of first instance referred to in S. 144 means the initial court where the suit was originally started, that is to say, the trial court. It should be remembered that the trial court can set aside a decree passed by it under O. 9, R. 13 and there may be occasions for the trial court to reverse or recall an order or decree passed by it for proper decision and for ends of justice. An order or a decree again may be set aside in an appeal or a revision. There are thus cases of reversal of a decree or an order by trial court or by the court of higher forum and as such the legislature thought it fit to avoid doubt to say specifically in S. 144 that in cases of reversal of a decree or an order, the party concerned may file an application for restitution, if occasion arises, in the Court of the first instance, namely, the Court where the proceeding originated. R. K. Banerjee and Bhaskar Ghose, for Appellants; Barun Kumar Roy Chowdhury, for Respondent.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— The plaintiffs who are the appellants before us filed a suit for eviction of the respondent-defendant under the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. At first the suit was decreed ex parte. Subsequently, the defendant Ram Nagina Pandey filed an application under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. C. and the same was ultimately allowed. As a result the ex parte decree was set aside and the ejectment suit was restored to file. That order for restoration of the suit was maintained by this Court on a revisional application filed by the plaintiffs against that decision. Before the ex parte decree was set aside, the plaintiffs had obtained possession of the suit premises by evicting the defendant in execution of the said ex parte decree. After the ex parte decree had been set aside, the defendant respondent filed an application in the trial court under S. 144 of the C. P. C., 1908 for getting back the possession of the suit property. The application was contested by the plaintiffs, but ultimately the trial court gave the relief to the defendant as prayed for. Against that order for restoration of possession to the defendant, an appeal was taken to this Court and the said appeal was disposed of by our learned brother Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. on 23-4-1974. The order for restoration of possession was maintained. Against that decision of Mookerjee, J., the present Letters Patent Appeal has been preferred by the plaintiffs.

2. Mr. Banerjee, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellants has canvassed that the learned trial court could not have passed any order for restoration of possession under S. 144 of the C. P. C. It has been submitted that as the ex parte decree was set aside by the same court which passed it, it is not a case of reversal of the decree as contemplated in Section 144 of the C. P. C. It has been contended that unless an order or a decree is reversed or varied in appeal by the higher forum, no order could be passed under S. 144 of the C. P. C. Mr. Roy Chowdhury, the learned Advocate for the respondent has, however, opposed the contentions.

3. For consideration of the arguments of Mr. Banerjee S. 144 of the C. P. C. is quoted below:—

“(1) Where and in so far as a decree or an order is varied or reversed, the Court of first instance shall, on the application of any party entitled to any benefit by way of restitution or otherwise, cause such restitution to be made as will, so far as may be, place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or order or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed; and, for this purpose, the Court may make any orders, including order for the refund of costs and for the payment of interest, damages, compensation and mesne profits, which are properly consequential on such variation or reversal.

(2) No suit shall be instituted for the purpose of obtaining any restitution or other relief which could be obtained by application under sub-s. (1).

4. According to the provisions of S. 144 of the C. P. C. when a decree or an order is "varied or reversed", the Court of first instance shall, upon an application, cause such restitution to be made as will place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or order or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed. The question, therefore, is, as submitted by Mr. Banerjee, whether the setting aside of the ex parte decree by the trial court is an instance of reversal of the decree. It is nobody's case, however, that the instant case is one where the decree was varied. Our attention has been drawn to a decision of this Court in the case of Gopal Paroi v. Swarna Bewa reported in 34 Cal WN 707: (AIR 1931 Cal 14). There it was stated that if a decree is set aside either by a proceeding in the suit itself or if it is set aside in another suit altogether or if without being set aside by such a decree it is superseded, these are matters which are not within the words of that S. 144 of the C. P. C. It has been stated that "varied or reversed" has a quite definite meaning for lawyers in this country but what that definite meaning for lawyers is has not been stated. In that case the plaintiff purchased certain holding in execution of a rent decree. The tenants whose holding had been purchased brought a suit to set aside the decree and the sale. The trial court dismissed the suit. In the first appeal the suit was decreed and the tenants got recovery of possession on the basis of an application under S. 144, C. P. C. in the original Rent Court. The purchaser of the holding, however, took a second appeal against the decision in the first appeal and ultimately the High Court in the second appeal reversed the decision of the lower appellate court. Then the purchaser applied for getting back possession from the tenants under S. 144 of the Civil P. C. in the original trial court where the tenant filed the suit but he got no relief as the application was time barred. The plaintiff, therefore, filed another suit for declaration of his title and for recovery of khas possession. In connexion with that suit a Second Appeal was preferred by the plaintiff and in that second appeal the judgment was delivered as reported in 34 Cal WN 707: (AIR 1931 Cal 14). We find that the facts in that case are quite different from those appearing before us in the instant appeal. That was not a case where a decree was set aside by the same court which passed it. The facts of that case did not raise any question whether any application under S. 144 of the C. P. C. was applicable in a case where a decree was set aside under O. 9, R. 13. No decision on this point was necessary. In that case ultimately it was held that the plaintiffs' suit under consideration in the judgment referred to by us was not maintainable in view of sub-s. (2) of S. 144. The statements made regarding the implications of the word "reverse" are practically obiter dicta. In the C. P. C. the word "reverse" has not been defined and no special meaning for the purpose of S. 144 has been given. The word is to be taken in its ordinary meaning as would be found compatible with the provision of law. The ordinary meaning of the word "reverse" is "to undo or make void". According to the Oxford Dictionary the word means amongst other things 'revoke' or 'annul' (decree attainder etc.). The word "revoke" according to the same Dictionary means 'rescind', 'withdraw', 'cancel' (decree, promise etc.). The word "reverse" according to Websters Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary means amongst other things "set aside". Giving our best consideration we cannot accept the contention of Mr. Banerjee that the word "reversed" appearing in S. 144 of the Civil P. C. would mean 'set aside' by the appellate court alone. For proper application of S. 144 the word "reverse" should be given its meaning in the wider sense and in that view of the matter, it will mean setting aside of the order of the decree by the Court which passed it and also by the Court of higher forum either in appeal or in revision. The meaning of the word is not in any way restricted in the section.

5. It has been argued by Mr. Banerjee that from the language used in S. 144 of the C. P. C. particularly in view of the words "the Court of first instance", the reversal of the decree or the order referred to in S. 144 must be by the Court of appeal and not by the Court of the first instance. The submission of Mr. Banerjee is that when there is the provision for the Court of first instance meaning the Court of the initial stage of the suit for passing the order for restitution on an application, it implies that the reversal of the decree or the order must be by a Court of appeal at a later stage subsequent to the order or decree in question of the trial court. On the grammatical analysis of the sentence in S. 144 and on the plain meaning of the simple words appearing in that section, it cannot be found that there is any reason for such implication as suggested by Mr. Banerjee without importing something on imagination. The Court of first instance referred to in S. 144 means the initial Court where the suit was originally started, that is to say, the trial court. It should be remembered that the trial court can set aside a decree passed by it under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. C. and there may be occasions for the trial court to reverse or recall an order or decree passed by it for proper decision and for ends of justice. An order or a decree again may be set aside in an appeal or a revision. There are thus cases of reversal of a decree or an order by trial court or by the court of higher forum and as such the legislature thought it fit to avoid doubt to say specifically in S. 144 of the C. P. C. that in cases of reversal of a decree or an order, the party concerned may file an application for restitution, if occasion arises, in the Court of the first instance, namely, the Court where the proceeding originated. We find no restricted meaning of the word "reversed" referred to in S. 144. It is unthinkable that while enacting S. 144, the legislature intended that the defendant would not be given restitution as contemplated therein when a decree or an order is varied or reversed by the trial court though relief could be given if a decree or an order is varied or reversed by the appellate court. The Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court in the case of Maqbool v. Khodaija Begum reported in AIR 1949 Pat 133 (FB) took a similar view. The word "reversed" is used in the section in general and wider connotation. This intention is clear from the Sec. 144 of the Civil Procedure Code (as amended in) 1976 when after 'varied or reversed' has been added "in any appeal, revision or other proceeding" to remove any ambiguity or doubt. The words "or other proceeding" now mentioned in the amended Code include proceedings under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. C. The point now urged by Mr. Banerjee was, however, not taken in the trial court and in the appeal before Mookerjee, J. In view of our discussions above, we do not accept the interpretation advanced by Mr. Banerjee.

6. Lastly an attempt was made by Mr. Banerjee that the recovery of possession may be stayed till the disposal of the suit by the trial court to avoid multiplicity of proceedings because the plaintiffs believe that they have a good case to succeed and to get a decree for eviction. This is no ground for stay. As the decree for which the plaintiffs obtained possession of the suit premises is not in existence, the plaintiffs cannot retain possession and if a fresh decree is obtained the plaintiffs will be entitled to get possession on the basis of the said decree. The illegal possession of the plaintiff after the previous decree has been set aside cannot be made legal if a new and subsequent decree is passed. In this connexion we may refer to the case of Abdul Rahman v. Sarafat Ali, 20 Cal WN 667: (AIR 1916 Cal 710). There on the basis of an ex parte decree certain property was sold in execution thereof. The trial court set aside the ex parte decree on the prayer of the defendant and consequently the sale was set aside. The matter was taken to the High Court and it was submitted that on retrial the plaintiffs obtained a decree and as such the sale could not be held invalid but be deemed to be validated by the passing of a fresh decree. That contention was rejected.

7. In the present case the plaintiffs have obtained possession which they cannot retain after the order passed by the trial court under S. 144 of the C. P. C. The defendant has been kept out of possession for a long period. The right of the defendant must be vindicated. The plaintiffs shall not be allowed to render the order for restitution passed by the trial court ineffective. For ends of justice we feel that the final hearing and the disposing of the suit should be stayed, if the suit has not been already disposed of in the meantime, until the defendant gets back possession on the basis of the order for restitution according to law.

8. The appeal is dismissed without cost as indicated above.

State of West Bengal etc., Petitioners v. Mir Fakir Mohammad etc., Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 1658 of 1965 and 1603 of 1966, D/- 4-4-1977.

Civil P. C. Amendment Act (1976), Sections 38 and 97 (2) (n) — Word "admitted" — Meaning — Appeals accepted by the High Court for hearing will not be affected — Application under Cl. 15 of Letters Patent filed before Amendment Act — No Memorandum of Appeal as required under R. 2 of Chap. VIII of Appellate Side Rules filed — Granting of certificate under Cl. 15 is barred by S. 100-A. (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100-A (as inserted by C. P. The Reference to the "appeal admitted before the commencement of S. 38 of the Civil P. C. Amendment Act" as mentioned in Cl. (n) of sub-s. Where applications under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (Cal.) filed before the Amendment Act came into force, but without a Memorandum of appeal as required by R. 2 of Chap. VIII of Appellate Side Rules although a long time has passed beyond the period of limitation prescribed by the Rules before the commencement of S. 33 of the Amendment Act of 1976, the granting of certificate under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent is useless and it is barred by S. 100-A of the C. JUDGMENT:— These two applications under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, one filed in connexion with the Second Appeal No. 1658 of 1965 and another relating to Second Appeal No. 1603 of 1966 have been heard together as the same question of law about the maintainability of these two applications are involved therein and this order shall govern both the matters.

2. The Appeal No. 1658 was allowed on 21-7-1976* and the Appeal No. 1603 was dismissed on 5th July, 1976. The plaintiff-respondent in Appeal No. 1658 filed the application for leave to appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent on 3-11-1976 and the appellant of the other appeal filed an application under Cl. 15 on 21-9-1976. For the sake of convenience both the matters were heard together. Mr. Panchanan Pal, the learned Advocate for the appellant, who is the opposite party in the application, filed in connexion with the Second Appeal No. 1658 and Mr. S. C. Das Gupta, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent-opposite party in the other application raised a preliminary objection as to the maintainability of the application under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent in view of the introduction of the amendment of the Civil P. C. by the Amending Act of 1976. Their contention is that after the amendment of the Civil P. C. by the Amending Act of 1976, there can be no appeal against the decision of a judgment of the High Court sitting singly disposing of a second appeal and as such the present applications under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent are not maintainable and in any view no certificate or leave can be granted for an appeal against the decision made in the second appeal. Mr. Hemanta Kumar Lala has challenged this contention and his main argument is that before the amendment of the Civil P. C. of 1976 came into being, the two appeals were disposed of and, therefore, the petitioners have a right to prefer an appeal against the decision for which purpose the present applications have been filed. It has been contended further by Mr. Lala that as the applications were filed before the amendment of the Civil P. C. has come into force, the applications are maintainable and should not be rejected.

3. Admittedly, the applications had been filed before the amendment of the Civil P. C. came into force. The opposite parties to these applications rely upon S. 100-A of the Civil P. C. introduced by the Amending Act read with Ss. 38 and 97 (2) (n) of the C. P. C. Amendment Act of 1976. Section 38 of the Amendment Act of 1976 inserts the new S. 100-A of the Principal Act and it runs as follows:—

38. Insertion of new S. 100-A.—After S. 100 of the Principal Act, the following section shall be inserted:—

"100-A. No further appeal in certain cases. Notwithstanding anything contained in any Letters Patent for any High Court or in any other instrument having the force of law or in any other for the time being in force, where any appeal from an appellate decree or order is heard and decided by a single Judge of a High Court, no further appeal shall lie from the judgment, decision or order of such single Judge in such appeal or from any decree passed in such appeal."

Clause (n) of sub-s. (2) of S. 97 speaks about repeal and savings and I quote the relevant portion of sub-s. (2) of S. 97 of the Amendment Act of 1976 with Cl. (n) as under:—

"2. Notwithstanding that the provisions of these Acts have come into force or the repeal under sub-s. (1) has taken effect and without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of the S. 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 (10 of 1897)—

(n) Section 100-A as inserted in the Principal Act by S. 38 of this Act, shall not apply to or affect any appeal against the decision of a single Judge of a High Court under any Letters Patent which had been admitted before the commencement of the said S. 38; and every such admitted appeal shall be disposed of as if the said S. 38 had not come into force."

4. After the introduction of S. 100-A of the Code, no further appeal shall lie from the judgment, decision or order of a single Judge in the second appeal notwithstanding anything contained in any Letters Patent for any High Court or in any other instrument having the force of law or in any other law for the time being in force. Therefore, on account of this new section, there shall be no appeal under the provisions of the Letters Patent as indicated in the section. But in view of S. 97 (2) (n) of the C. P. C. Amendment Act of 1976 if any appeal is admitted under the Letters Patent before the coming into force of S. 100-A inserted by the Amendment Act of 1976, such appeal, however, in spite of S. 100-A coming into force shall be disposed of as if the S. 38 introducing S. 100-A of the Amendment Act has not come into force. Admittedly the present applications were filed under the Letters Patent before the coming into force of S. 100-A of the Code. It cannot be, however, argued that the instant applications under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent should be summarily rejected simply because S. 100-A has already come into force although no orders have been passed upon those applications. An application under Cl. 15 if filed even a day prior to the coming into force of S. 100-A of the Code, cannot be rejected summarily. If the application has already complied with other provisions of law for admission of the appeal certainly the Court will consider whether it is a fit case for granting leave or certificate as prayed for. There may be various reasons for the Court not to pass an order upon the application filed prior to the introduction of S. 100-A but for those reasons the applicant cannot suffer if the applicant has already complied with other provisions of law and procedure for admission of the appeal before the S. 100-A came into force.

5. Mr. Lala has argued that as soon as the application under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent is filed, the date of such filing should be recorded as the date of admission referred to in Cl. (n) of sub-s. (2) of S. 97 of the C. P. C. Amendment Act of 1976. In this connexion my attention has been drawn to Chap. VIII, R. 3 in the Rules of the High Court at Calcutta, Appellate Side framed in connexion with appeals under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. Rule 3 of Chap. VIII of Part II says that the memorandum of appeal shall be drawn up according to the provisions of O. XLI, R. 1 of the C. P. C. and shall be certified by an Advocate of the Court but it need not be accompanied by a copy of judgment appealed from. The authorised officer to whom the memorandum of appeal is presented shall have to endorse thereon the date of presentation and send the same to the Stamp Reporter who shall satisfy himself that there is a declaration by the Judge who passed the judgment that the case is a fit one for appeal and that it is in order and within time. Admittedly again there is no procedure in our High Court for admission of an appeal under the Letters Patent as in a case under O. 41, R. 11 of the C. P. C. According to R. 2 of Chap. VIII of the Rules of our High Court on the Appellate Side every appeal to the High Court under Section or clause (as generally called) 15 of the Letters Patent from a judgment of a Division Bench or a Judge sitting singly of the Appellate Side of High Court shall be presented to the Deputy Registrar or such other officer as the Registrar may appoint within sixty days from the date of the judgment appealed from unless the Court in its discretion on good cause shown shall grant further time.

6. Now the question arises as to what would be the date of admission of an appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent because in Cl. (n) of sub-s. (2) of S. 97 of the Amendment Act, 1976 it is stated that if an appeal is already admitted before the commencement of S. 38, that is to say, before the coming into force of Section 100-A of the Code, it will be disposed of. Otherwise after the commencement of the S. 38 of the Amendment Act no fresh appeal will lie. It has therefore, to be ascertained what the meaning of the word "admitted" appearing in Cl. (n) of sub-s. (2) of S. 97 of the Amendment Act is. It cannot be heard to say that the litigant can file an appeal against the decision of a Judge under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent as a matter of right. The law is clear that unless the Judge considers a case fit for an appeal, the litigant cannot as a matter of right or in due course prefer an appeal. The practice of our Court is that a party aggrieved may pray for a certificate for leave to appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent orally at the time when the judgment is delivered in the open court or if it is not orally prayed at the time of delivery of judgment, an application in writing is filed for the said purpose subsequently. The appellate side Rules already mentioned clearly say that within the stipulated time the aggrieved party has got to file a memorandum of appeal without any copy of the judgment complained against before an authorised officer of the High Court and if a certificate is granted under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent by the Judge concerned then that certificate has got to be endorsed upon memorandum of appeal. If the memorandum of appeal already presented within time complies with the Rules prescribed by the High Court and if there is the certificate of the Judge concerned that it is a fit case for appeal and the same is endorsed and it is otherwise found in order, the appeal is deemed to be accepted by the Court. The condition precedent is, therefore, a certificate to be granted under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and further the filing of the memorandum of appeal as prescribed by the Rules of the High Court. There is no other procedure for admission of the appeal. The word "admit" according to Oxford Dictionary is "let in, allow entrance of, accept as valid etc." According to Chambers's Twentieth Century Dictionary the word "admit" means "to allow to enter, to let in, to acknowledge etc." On reading the relevant provisions already mentioned and considering the popular and dictionary meaning of the word "admit", I have no doubt to hold that the reference to the appeal admitted before the commencement of S. 38 as mentioned in Cl. (n) of sub-s. (2) of S. 97 of the C. P. C. Amendment Act of 1976 means appeals already accepted by the High Court to be heard as already indicated.

7. In the present case before us although applications under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent were filed before the commencement of the S. 38 of the Amendment Act of 1976, no memoranda of appeal have been filed by the petitioners at all not to speak within time prescribed under R. 2 of Chap. VIII of the High Court Appellate Side Rules. It may be that at the time of delivery of judgment, the aggrieved party may pray orally for leave to appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and that may be allowed. But in spite of the leave being granted, there may be cases where the party concerned does not file any memorandum of appeal at all. In that case certainly it cannot be stated that the granting of prayer under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent amounts to an admission of an appeal without the existence or the filing of the memorandum of appeal. There can be no question of any admission of appeal or an appeal being admitted. It may also be that a memorandum of appeal is filed within the time prescribed by the Rules and subsequent to the delivery of judgment an application in writing is filed under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. For various reasons the Court might not have passed orders upon the application at an early date, but when ultimately the certificate is granted the memorandum of appeal already filed and found in order may be taken as admitted. In the case before us when no memorandum of appeal is at all filed although a long time has passed beyond the period of limitation prescribed by the Rules before the commencement of S. 38 of the Amendment Act of 1976, the granting of certificate under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent is useless and it is barred by S. 100-A of the C. P. C.

8. In the result, the applications are rejected but without any cost.

9. On the prayer of the petitioners, let there be stay of operations of the judgments and decrees for a month from today. Return the certified copies of the judgments and decrees of the Second Appeals, if filed, to the learned Advocates of the petitioners.

Applications rejected.

Under Rule 18 (2) of Order 20 the Court though may pass a preliminary decree declaring the rights of the several parties in the suit property in a partition suit but generally the court declares the rights of the plaintiff and of those defendants who contest in the suit and desire their rights to be so declared. G. S. Khettry, for Petitioners; Chiruddin Kha, for Opposite Party.

B. C. RAY, J.:— This revisional application under S. 115, C. P. C. is directed against the order No. 105 passed on December 3, 1970 in Title Suit No. 53 of 1962 and it arises out of an application by the defendants Nos. 4, 5, 7 and 9 praying for directing the Commissioner for partition and separate allotment of their 1/4th share in respect of the suit property.

2. The opposite parties Nos. 1 to 4 as plaintiffs instituted the above suit for partition of their 4/5th share by metes and bounds out of 1/4th share of Rameswar Panda alleging inter alia that the suit property originally belonged to one Tara Prosad Panda, a Hindu governed by Mitakshara School of Hindu Law who died leaving four sons namely Moheswar, Sarbeswar, Rameswar and Satyeswar each having 1/4th share in the suit property. In the said suit all the other co-sharers have been impleaded as defendants Nos. 1 to 14 and the State of West Bengal has been impleaded as defendant No. 15. The defendant No. 15 alone contested the said suit on filing a written statement and the other defendants did not contest the said suit. The suit was dismissed by trial Court. Against the said judgment and decree the plaintiffs opposite parties 1 to 4 preferred Title Appeal No. 335 of 1963 which was allowed on contest with cost against the respondent No. 15, the State of West Bengal and ex parte against the other defendants and a preliminary decree declaring the plaintiff's 4/5th share out of 1/4th share of Rameswar in the suit property was passed.

3. Thereafter, on the application of the plaintiffs a Commissioner has been appointed for effecting partition of the suit property by metes and bounds according to the preliminary decree. The Commissioner, it appears, has submitted his report.

4. In the meantime an application has been filed in the said suit by the defendants 4, 5, 7 and 9 who did not contest the suit till the passing of the preliminary decree for a direction upon the Commissioner for partition and separate allotment of their share in respect of the suit property by metes and bounds.

5. On December 3, 1970, the learned Subordinate Judge, Midnapore, by order No. 105 held that the rights and share of the said defendants had not been declared in the preliminary decree and as such they were prevented from agitating the matter by way of an ordinary petition as the present one was at such subsequent stage of the suit. The application was, therefore, rejected.

6. It is against this order this revisional application has been moved and the instant Rule has been obtained. There has been an order for stay of all further proceedings of the said suit pending the disposal of the Rule.

7. Mr. Bhupendra Kumar Panda, appearing on behalf of the petitioners, submits that the impugned order is wholly illegal and without jurisdiction in as much as in a partition suit every defendant may be treated as a plaintiff and the rejection of the application will unnecessarily drive the petitioners to file another suit for partition and separate allotment of their share. He also contended that the share of the petitioners being admitted as evident from paras. 3 and 5 of the plaint the learned Subordinate Judge ought to have allowed the same even though the share of the petitioners has not been declared in the preliminary decree. To the said submission Mr. Himadri Shankar Majumder, learned Advocate for the opposite parties joined issue.

8. It appears that the petitioners who are defendants 4, 5, 7 and 9 in the suit did not contest the suit till the passing of the preliminary decree and their rights and share in the suit property has not been declared in the preliminary decree. Under the provisions of O. 20, R. 18, sub-r. (2) the Court though may pass a preliminary decree declaring the rights of the several parties in the suit property in a partition suit but generally the court declares the rights of the plaintiff and of those defendants who contest in the suit and desire their rights to be so declared. The rights and share of the defendants petitioners being not declared in the preliminary decree, the Commissioner is not competent to partition and make separate allotment of the share in respect of the property-in-suit in favour of the petitioners unless the said preliminary decree is modified declaring the right and share of the petitioners either on appeal or on review of the said preliminary decree. This question came up for consideration in the case reported in AIR 1966 All 601, Bittan Devi v. Rudra Sen Bajpai and it has been held:

"The courts of law cannot go behind the decree and have to take further steps on the basis of the decree already passed. Consequently, if the preliminary decree passed in the partition suit does not contain any declaration as to the rights of the defendants, their application for partition or separation of their share shall not be maintainable till they have the preliminary decree suitably modified, but once the preliminary decree contains a declaration as to the defendant's share, they can, even after the passing of the preliminary decree, take steps for the separation of their shares."

9. For the reasons aforesaid there is no merit in the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioners. The Rule is, therefore, discharged. The interim order is vacated. In the circumstances there will be no order as to costs.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— I agree.

Rule discharged.

Sm. Sankaribala Dutta, Appellant v. Sm. Asita Barani Dasi and others, Respondents.

A. F. O. D. No. 614 of 1969, D/- 20-8-1976.*

(A) Hindu Succession Act (1956), S. 14 — Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act (1856), S. 2 — Partition of husband's estate — Widow allotted property as her share in absolute right — Subsequent remarriage or unchastity of widow — Effect.

Where in the partition of her husband's estate the widow was allotted property as her share of inheritance in absolute right under the 1956 Act she cannot forfeit her right, title and interest in the said property by subsequent remarriage or unchastity as the 1956 Act does not provide for such forfeiture and even under S. 2 of 1856 Act she cannot be divested of her absolute interest in the said property by subsequent remarriage as S. 2 applies only to limited interests referred to therein which the widow may have in her deceased husband's property and not to interest inherited by the widow absolutely under the 1956 Act. (B) Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act (1856), S. 2 — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (1956), Ss. 22 and 21 (iii) — Hindu Succession Act (1956), S. 14 (2) — Gift of property by deceased husband to widow in life estate in lieu of maintenance — Remarriage or unchastity if can forfeit grant — (Hindu Law — Widow — Maintenance).

Where the deceased husband of the widow by a registered deed executed in his lifetime gifted certain properties to her in life estate to be enjoyed by her after his death in lieu of maintenance without any power of alienation, the question whether the widow would forfeit the grant by remarriage or unchastity would depend on the terms of the grant and since there was nothing in the terms thereof for such forfeiture the widow would not forfeit the properties otherwise in law because though under the gift the widow got only a life estate S. 2 of 1856 Act had no application as the life estate was not acquired by her in any of the three ways set out therein and though under S. 14 (2), Hindu Succession Act the life interest remained as such and did not become an absolute estate it would last the normal life of the widow. AIR 1935 PC 180 and (1910) ILR 34 Bom 278, Rel. on.

Amulya Kumar Mukherjee, for Appellant; Samarendra Kumar Dutta (for Nos. 1-2) and Pramatha Nath Palit, for Respondents.

SEN, J.:— This appeal from original decree arises out of a suit for declaration of title, recovery of possession and mesne profits. The said suit being Title Suit No. 65 of 1966 having been dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge, Birbhum, by the judgment and decree dated August 22, 1968, the plaintiff No. 2, Sankari Bala has preferred the present appeal.

2. The suit was originally instituted by the appellant and her mother Rash Bilasini Chandra and the latter having died pending the suit and her right, title and interest having devolved on plaintiff No. 2, the appellant, she herself proceeded with the suit. Their case shortly was that Rash Bilasini was the first wife of Nafar Chandra Chandra and plaintiff No. 2 Sankari Bala is the daughter of Nafar by Rash Bilasini, the first wife. The only son born of Rash Bilasini having died at the age of 5 or 6 years, Nafar married for the second time the defendant No. 1 Asita Barani Chandra when Nafar could have no more son by the plaintiff No. 1 Rash Bilasini. After his marriage with defendant No. 1, Asita Barani, Nafar executed a registered deed of maintenance granting a life estate to defendant No. 1 in respect of certain properties which are set out in Sch. "A" to the plaint. The defendant No. 1 has no power of alienation in respect of the properties so gifted to her in life estate in lieu of maintenance. Nafar died intestate on 12th Kartick, 1369 B. S. corresponding to October 29, 1962. He had, however, no issue by defendant No. 1 surviving him and on his death the properties left by him were inherited by his daughter plaintiff No. 2 in 8 annas and the surviving widows Rash Bilasini, plaintiff No. 1 and Asita Barani, defendant No. 1 in 4 annas each. A partition was effected between the parties on February 14, 1963, in respect of the properties left behind by Nafar and the properties set out in Sch. B to the plaint were allotted to defendant No. 1 Asita Barani on such partition. According to the plaintiffs, the defendant No. 1 Asita Barani remarried one Dulal Bagdi, defendant No. 2 who happened to be a servant of Nafar, in the latter part of the year 1371 B. S. On such re-marriage defendant No. 1 had a son by the said Dulal Bagdi, defendant No. 2 and since such remarriage they have been living as husband and wife at the house of defendant No. 2 a few furlongs away from the residential house of Nafar. The plaintiffs claimed that by such remarriage the defendant No. 1 Asita Barani forfeited all her right, title and interest in the properties of both the Schedules "A" and "B" and such properties therefore, reverted to the plaintiffs, the surviving heirs and legal representatives of Nafar. It was further pleaded that after her remarriage, defendant No. 1 executed a deed of gift in favour of defendant No. 2 in respect of some of the "B" Schedule properties and between defendants 1 and 2 several transfers were made to defendants 3 to 7 in respect of one or more of the properties of the B Schedule. Such transfers, it was claimed, were neither lawful nor bona fide and the transferees acquired no right to those properties as the transferor was divested of such properties prior to such transfers. Accordingly, the plaintiffs prayed for declaration of their title in respect of the properties of both the Schedules and recovery of possession thereof by evicting the defendants therefrom. They further prayed for a decree for mesne profits as against the defendants.

3. The suit was contested principally by defendants 1 and 2 who filed a joint written statement. They took a bold defence that though they were living together and had a son because of illicit relation between them, they were never married, far less in the manner stated by the plaintiffs in the plaint. Their case on the other hand, was that the plaintiff No. 2 Sankari Bala and her husband Nemai Dutta who are well to do could not accept the position that Asita Barani should inherit any property from her husband. An attempt was made to coerce the defendant No. 1 Asita Barani to concede acceptance of life interest only which she resisted and that led to the partition on February 14, 1963. But even after the partition the plaintiff No. 2 and her sons tortured Asita Barani while she was living in her husband's residential home in the demarcated portion allotted to her by the partition. She was tortured, so much so, that she had to leave her husband's home. At first she took shelter in the house of one Nisith Dutta when she became apprehensive of her life but the said Nisith, who later appeared to be a man of the camp of the plaintiffs, betrayed her and misappropriated her movable properties. At that stage she left the shelter of Nisith and came to live with defendant No. 2 at first at Suri and then at his house. As for the gift in favour of defendant No. 2 is concerned, it was pleaded that it was effected in order to fulfil the pious desire of the deceased Nafar who being satisfied with the service rendered by defendant No. 2 had desired that his heirs and legal representatives would give some properties to him. In the written statement it was claimed that defendant No. 1 could not have forfeited her rights to the properties in either of the two Schedules and the transfers effected to the other different defendants were claimed to be lawful and bona fide.

4. Defendant No. 7 filed a separate written statement supporting the case of the contesting defendants Nos. 1 and 2.

5. On the pleadings as aforesaid, parties went to trial and evidence both oral and documentary was adduced by the parties. So far as the B Schedule properties are concerned, the learned Judge held that plaintiff's claim in respect thereof must necessarily fail inasmuch as Asita Barani having got the said properties by partition of her share in the husband's estate inherited by her in the rights of an absolute owner under the provisions of Hindu Succession Act, 1956, she cannot forfeit her right, title and interest in the said property even if she had subsequently remarried defendant No. 2 as alleged by the plaintiffs. On the authority of the two decisions in the cases of Lakshmi Ammal v. Thangavel Assari, AIR 1953 Mad 977 and Bhuri Bai v. Champi Bai, AIR 1968 Raj 139 he overruled the plaintiffs' claim that defendant No. 1 would forfeit her inheritance on the provisions of S. 2 of Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856; it was held that the said provision could have its application only to an inheritance limited to life interest. So far as 'A' Schedule properties are concerned, the learned Judge took the view that in case of proof of subsequent remarriage as alleged by the plaintiffs, the defendant No. 1 might forfeit her right, title and interest therein. On careful consideration of the evidence on record, the learned Judge, however, rejected the case of the plaintiffs that Asita Barani had remarried Dulal Bagdi as alleged by them. It was, therefore, held that the remarriage as alleged not having been established it cannot be said that Asita Barani forfeited her right, title and interest in the 'A' Schedule properties. The learned Judge further held that subsequent unchastity being no ground for divesting and it being nobody's case that defendant No. 1 became unchaste when the succession opened or before it, subsequent unchastity though admitted would not divest her of the properties of either of the two Schedules. On the findings as aforesaid the learned Judge in the trial court dismissed the suit and hence the appeal.

6. The appeal is being contested by defendants 1 and 2 who are respondents 1 and 2 in this appeal.

7. Mr. Mukherji appearing on behalf of the appellant has challenged the findings of the learned Judge to the effect that defendant No. 1's remarriage with defendant No. 2 had not been established. Relying strongly on the evidence on the point, Mr. Mukherji has contended that this court should set aside the said finding and find for itself that such remarriage has been well established. Mr. Mukherjee has further contended that the defendant No. 1 must be held to have forfeited her right, title and interest in the properties of either of the two Schedules because of such remarriage. Alternatively, Mr. Mukherji has contended before us that on the admitted unchastity, defendant No. 1 must be held to have forfeited her right, title and interest under the maintenance grant in respect of 'A' Schedule properties. According to him, the learned Judge is wrong in holding otherwise overlooking the legal position that under the Hindu Law a widow is entitled to maintenance from the husband's estate only so long she remains chaste.

8. All the points thus raised by Mr. Mukherji have been contested by Mr. Dutta, the learned advocate appearing on behalf of the defendants 1 and 2, respondents 1 and 2 in this appeal. Mr. Dutta on the other hand has strongly contended that all the findings of the learned Judge are not only well supported by the evidence on record but all his conclusions on the point of law are absolutely correct.

9. We have carefully considered the rival contentions before us. In our opinion, the learned Judge in the trial court is perfectly right in his conclusion that the plaintiffs' suit in respect of 'B' Schedule properties must fail in any event. Neither remarriage of defendant No. 1 with defendant No. 2 as claimed by the plaintiffs nor her admitted subsequent living with the said defendant in unchastity would divest her of the said property in law. Admittedly, Nafar died in the year 1962 after the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, had come into effect. Nafar having died intestate defendant No. 1, Asita Barani inherited $\frac{1}{4}$ th share in the estate of her deceased husband in absolute rights under the provisions of that Act. The said Act does not provide for forfeiture or divesting of an estate so inherited by the widow either on remarriage or on account of subsequent unchastity. Reliance is no doubt placed on the provisions of S. 2 of Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, by Mr. Mukherji on behalf of the appellant. Mr. Dutta appearing on behalf of the respondents on the other hand has contended that the said provision must be deemed to have been repealed on the provisions of Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. In our opinion, however, whether repealed or not S. 2 of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, does not help the appellant in any manner. It provides as follows:—

"All rights and interests which any widow may have in her deceased husband's property by way of maintenance or by inheritance to her husband or his lineal successors, or by virtue of any will or testamentary disposition conferring upon her, without express permission to remarry, only a limited interest in such property with no power of alienating the same shall upon her remarriage cease and determine as if she had then died; and the next heirs of her deceased husband or other person entitled to the property on her death shall thereupon succeed to the same."

Section 5 on the other hand provides that except as provided in Ss. 2 to 4 a widow on remarriage shall not forfeit any other property or right to which she is otherwise entitled notwithstanding her remarriage.

10. The above provision came up for interpretation before the Madras High Court in the case of Thangavelu Asari v. Laxmi Amal, AIR 1957 Mad 534 (the decision of the Appeal Court affirming the decision relied on by the learned Judge in the trial court reported in AIR 1953 Mad 977). It was there held—

"There is a clear indication in the provisions of the section that any property to which the widow may become entitled absolutely will not be forfeited on her remarriage. It is only when the widow is in enjoyment of rights and interests of a limited amplitude that this section applies. The words 'shall upon her remarriage cease and determine as if she had then died' can have significance only when the widow's rights are of limited nature and duration. Otherwise merely by the notional death of the widow the next heirs of the husband would not become entitled to succeed, whereas if she was in enjoyment only of a limited interest such persons would succeed under the general law."

11. We are in respectful agreement with the aforesaid interpretation of S. 2 of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856. We fully agree with the learned Judges of the Madras High Court that read in the context the clause "conferring upon her only a limited interest in such property" qualifies the rights and interests which the widow may have in the deceased husband's property in either of the three manners specified in the provision so that an interest which the widow inherits absolutely under the provision of the Hindu Succession Act, does not come within the purview of S. 2 of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856. This view appears to be the consistent view taken by the other High Courts. Reference may be made to the case of Bhuri Bai v. Champi Bai, AIR 1968 Raj 139 (relied on by the learned Judge in the trial court) and also to the decisions in the cases of P. N. Salunke v. Sindhu, AIR 1971 Bom 413 and Ballabha Pani v. Jasodhara Pani, ILR (1965) Cut 398. That being the position we must uphold the view of the learned Judge that even if defendant No. 1 had remarried defendant No. 2 such remarriage would not divest her of the "B" Schedule properties which she inherited from her late husband in the interest of an absolute owner. Nor would she forfeit that property on her admitted subsequent unchastity as it is now well settled that such subsequent unchastity does not lead to divesting of an interest which had earlier validly vested in her (See Moniram v. Keri Kalitani, (1879) 7 Ind App 115 (PC)). The learned Judge was therefore right in his conclusion that the plaintiffs' claim to

'B' Schedule properties must fail in any event and we affirm the said conclusion.

12. So far as the "A" Schedule properties are concerned, admittedly those were the subject-matter of a grant by the husband Nafar during his lifetime. The grant is dated March 26, 1945. It is Exhibit F for the defendants and Ext. 5 for the plaintiffs. It is a gift in life estate. The material extract therefrom may usefully be set out hereunder:

"Whereas you are my second wife as I have married you recently and no children are born of your womb at present, yet as human life is floating and none can say what will happen when and thinking whether you will be able to live in amity with my first wife in future who is at present alive and that after my death if you may find it difficult to get food and raiment I make a gift to you in your life estate the property owned and possessed by me. On payment of rent and cess etc. to the landlord you shall enjoy the same till your lifetime and you shall not do any act harmful to it or to make any encumbrance, gift, sale, mortgage, etc., in respect thereof. If it be done then it will be wholly void and invalid and disallowed in court. If I remain alive after your death then I shall become the absolute owner of the property mentioned in the Schedule or if there be any of my heirs alive then he will in law become the absolute owner thereof. None of the heirs of your father's family shall become the owner or possessor thereof. If no son born of my loins be alive then any heir of myself or my father's line shall be the absolute and full owner of the property mentioned in the Schedule. To this effect in sound health, good faith, without request from others out of my own accord I execute this Deed of Gift for life estate in the property."

13. The Court below took the view that if remarriage as alleged by the plaintiffs be proved, defendant No. 1 may forfeit this grant but not on account of subsequent unchastity as admitted by her. Though the learned Judge thinks that because of remarriage, the grantee under the above gift would forfeit her life estate, he has not given any reasons for such a view. We are, however, unable to accept such a view. It being a gift in favour of defendant No. 1, whether she would forfeit the grant in the event of her remarriage or because of her subsequent unchastity would entirely depend upon the terms thereof. If the grant is not so forfeited on its terms, she does not forfeit the properties otherwise in law. Though under the gift she got only a life estate, S. 2 of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, would have no application, inasmuch as, such a life estate was not acquired by her in any of the three ways set out therein. Under S. 14 (2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, this life interest remains as such and does not become an absolute estate but nonetheless it lasts the normal life of the grantee. Nor Mr. Mukherji could draw our attention to any statutory provision by which the defendant No. 1 can be said to forfeit the properties so gifted to her in life estate in the event of her remarriage or becoming unchaste.

14. Let us now consider the gift itself to see if thereunder defendant No. 1 would forfeit the properties in the event of her remarriage or becoming unchaste. We have set out the relevant terms of the gift hereinbefore. There is no express condition set out in the gift itself that in the event of the grantee remarrying or becoming unchaste, she would forfeit her life estate. Nor such a condition can be read as implied in the gift. On the facts and circumstances of the case, it is well established that the donor at a ripe old age married the donee who was quite young in her life. Having married such an young girl and apprehending his death he was providing for the lady a means for her livelihood obviously for her natural life. It must be presumed that the donor was quite aware that in law the donee on being a widow could remarry but even then he was not making any provision in the grant that in the event of such remarriage or on her becoming unchaste she would forfeit the grant. On the other hand, having married a young girl at an old age and on a reasonable apprehension that she would be left a widow incapable to support herself he gave her a life estate which is to last her natural life. Reversion is provided only on her death. When such was the grant it would be difficult to read in it a limitation as contended for by Mr. Mukherji.

15. Mr. Mukherji next contended that the gift was meant for widow's maintenance and when a widow forfeits her maintenance from the husband's estate under the Hindu Law by remarrying or by becoming unchaste, defendant No. 1 must be deemed to have forfeited 'A' schedule properties on her remarrying defendant No. 2 or even on her own admission when she is living an unchaste life with the said defendant No. 2. We are unable to accept such a contention. The right of a Hindu widow to maintenance out of husband's estate is conditional upon her leading a life of chastity and she may forfeit such maintenance on her remarriage under the provision of S. 2 of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856 or S. 22 read with S. 21 (iii) of Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956. But the interest by way of life estate created by a grant as now under consideration must be distinguished from the widow's right to receive maintenance from the estate of the deceased husband, in as much as, in case of a grant of the present nature a vested estate in the property is created by the deed — the limit whereof is entirely dependent on the grant itself so that if in the grant there is no clause for forfeiture on the grantee's remarriage or on the grantee's ceasing to live a chaste life she cannot be said to forfeit her rights in the event of her remarriage or her living an unchaste life. The right of a Hindu Widow to maintenance out of the husband's estates on the other hand is of an indefinite character which does not create any vested estate and which again is subject to the limitation in law referred to hereinbefore. This position follows from the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Laxmi-chand v. Mt. Anandi, 62 Ind App 250: (AIR 1935 PC 180). A contention similar to the one put forward by Mr. Mukherji before us was overruled by the Bombay High Court in the case of Parami v. Mahadevi. (1910) ILR 34 Bom 278. There, a Hindu widow was entitled to maintenance at the rate of Rs. 24/- a year under her husband's will. The widow led an unchaste life after the death of her husband. When she sued to recover the maintenance under the will the same was resisted on the ground that because of unchastity she must be deemed to have forfeited her right to get the maintenance. Such a contention as a defence to the suit was overruled by the Bombay High Court. In rejecting the defence contention that the testator in making the grant of Rs. 24/- per year must be presumed to have intended that the allowance should be given subject to the condition of chastity on which the right of a Hindu widow to maintenance depends, it was observed:

"Further though the annuity is granted by the will as maintenance that word cannot be understood as imposing any condition or restriction so as to cut down or extinguish the right to Rs. 24/- a year given by the will. Where an implication is to be made, it must be certain and necessary; the rule that a will of a Hindu must be construed with due regard to Hindu habits and notions applies only where there is ambiguity. Caution must be used in applying that rule and it must be adopted only where a suggested construction of doubtful language leads to manifest absurdity or hardship. Here there is neither. The mere fact that the word 'maintenance' is used cannot affect the unconditional terms of the bequest."

16. In the grant now under consideration by us there is no use even of the word maintenance though the life estate was created to provide for food and raiment in favour of the grantee and that for her natural life. Therefore, in our opinion, the learned Judge was not right in his view that in the event of proof of remarriage defendant No. 1 would forfeit her life estate under the grant Ext. 5 or Ext. F. On this finding of ours the suit must fail as a whole, inasmuch as, the defendant No. 1 would not forfeit the properties set out in either of the schedules in the event of her remarriage as alleged by the plaintiffs being proved or on her admitted subsequent unchastity. Since, however, the other issue as to whether the defendant No. 1 had remarried defendant No. 2 or not had been thoroughly argued before us by both the parties with reference to evidence on the issue, we consider it necessary to decide how far the finding of the learned Judge in this respect against the plaintiffs can be upheld.

17. The issue as to whether defendant No. 1 Ashita Barani had married defendant No. 2, Dulal Bagdi or not has been answered against the plaintiffs by the learned Judge in the trial court. On a very careful consideration of the evidence on record he has come to the conclusion that no such marriage between defendant No. 1 and Dulal Bagdi had been proved. On the contrary, he has accepted the defence case that Asita Barani had been leading an immoral life living with Dulal as a concubine. We ourselves have reassessed the entire evidence on the issue and we find no reason to differ from the conclusion arrived at by the learned Judge. (After considering the plaintiffs' evidence on the issue as to whether defendant No. 1 had remarried defendant No. 2 their Lordships proceeded.)

18-21. As against this, the learned Judge in the trial court has accepted the bold testimony of defendants 1 and 2 who admit to be living an immoral life. The learned Judge has seen the demeanour of these two witnesses and had been very much impressed thereby. We have read their evidence carefully and we find that their evidence is corroborated materially by attending facts and circumstances made out from other evidence found by us to be more reliable. In this view, we affirm the findings of the learned Judge to the effect that Asita had not been married to Dulal as alleged by the plaintiffs. Such marriage not having been proved there could be no divesting of the properties set out in Sch. "A" because of such remarriage. We have already found that subsequent unchastity does not divest a widow of properties which once vested in her except when the terms of the grant provide for such divesting and hence defendant No. 1 could not be said to be divested of "A" Schedule properties because of her admitted unchastity. Moreover it is not the case of the plaintiffs that defendant No. 1 was divested of the properties of either of the two Schedules because of unchastity. Hence the plaintiffs are not entitled to recover possession of the suit properties as claimed by them.

22. On the conclusions as above, this appeal fails. Subject to a declaration of the plaintiffs' right, title and interest as reversioners to the Sch. 'A' properties on the death of Asita Barani, their claim as made in the suit must fail and the judgment and decree of the court below is affirmed. In the circumstances, however, we direct that the parties do bear their costs throughout.

Appeal dismissed.

B. C. Mitter, Miss Aruna Mukherjee, for Petitioner; Ramapati Roy, for Respondents.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:— In C. R. 3165-66 of 1975 (Noor Mohammad Sk. v. Sushil Kumar Mistry) a Division Bench of this Court has referred to a Special Division Bench under R. 1 of Chap. II of the Appellate Side Rules the following question:

Whether the provisions of sub-s. (3) of S. 21 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955 as amended apply to pending proceeding before any civil or criminal court?

The Division Bench made this Reference on the 10th December, 1976. The present Reference has been made on the same question on the 22nd February, 1977 by Mr. Justice R. Bhattacharya in view of the Reference already made by the Division Bench as aforesaid.

2. It appears that Hazi Sadek Ali Sk. filed a suit in June 1971 in the court of the Second Munsif at Baruipur in the District of 24-Parganas, inter alia, for a declaration of title and recovery of possession of land in suit. The petitioner before us filed a written statement contending that he was a bargadar under the plaintiff.

3. While the suit was pending before the learned Munsif sub-s. (3) of S. 21 was added by S. 7 of the West Bengal Land Reforms (Amendment) Act, 1974 (West Bengal Act XXXIII of 1974). The sub-section came into force on the 21st June, 1974. It is as follows:—

"If any question as to whether a person is or is not a bargadar arises in course of any proceedings; before any Civil or Criminal Court, the Court shall refer it to the officer or authority mentioned in sub-s. (1) of S. 18 for decision."

4. In view of this amendment the petitioner Raich Ali Khan made an application to the learned Munsif for referring the question as to whether he was a bargadar to the officer or authority mentioned in sub-s. (1) of S. 18 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955.

5. The learned Munsif by his order No. 97 made on the 22nd July, 1975 dismissed the application of Raich Ali Khan holding, inter alia, that sub-s. (3) of S. 21 had no application to the suit.

6. Raich Ali Khan thereupon made a revisional application to this Court under S. 115 of the Civil P. C. on the 25th August, 1975 which came up for hearing before Mr. Justice R. Bhattacharya on 22nd February, 1977. Mr. Justice R. Bhattacharya, as we have already noted, had referred the matter to a larger Bench.

7. We have had the benefit of considering the judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Bhattacharya as well as by my learned brother Mr. Justice S. K. Datta presiding over a Division Bench consisting of himself and Mr. Justice H. N. Sen in Noor Mohammad Sk.'s case.

8. On the point under reference there are two reported judgments of this Court. There is a judgment of Mr. Justice Chittatosh Mookherjee in Chapala Bala Adhikary v. Monoranjan Das reported in 1975 (2) Cal LJ 447. There is also a Division Bench Judgment of Mr. Justice S. K. Bhattacharyya with Mr. Justice Arun Kumar Janah in Birendra Nath Gayen v. Kali Ch. Mandal reported in 1975 (2) Cal LJ 504.

9. Mr. Justice Chittatosh Mookherjee has proceeded on the basis that the amendments made by sub-s. (3) of S. 21 relate to procedure and as such it would affect pending proceeding. The Division Bench, however, has taken a contrary view. According to the Division Bench, a substantive right has been affected and the amended provision cannot impeach a pending proceeding.

10. It seems to us on the facts and in the circumstances of this case that it is unnecessary to decide whether the right affected is a substantive or procedural right. We will assume that a substantive right has been taken away. It has been urged on behalf of the respondent-opposite parties that they had the right to institute a suit under S. 9 of the Civil P. C. and had further right of preferring an appeal against the judgment delivered in the suit in accordance with the provisions of the Code. All these rights, according to the learned Counsel, are substantive rights which have been taken away.

11. As regards substantive rights, the law is well settled. In Maxwell "On The Interpretation of Statutes", 12th Edition at p. 215, it is stated—

"It is a fundamental rule of English law that no statute shall be construed to have a retrospective operation unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary and distinct implication."

12. In Craies on "Statute Law", 3rd Edition at p. 324 reliance is placed on the observations of Lord Justice Lindley in Lauri v. Renad, 1892 (3) Ch 402 at p. 421. Lindley, L. J. observed:

"It is a fundamental rule of English law that no statute shall be construed so as to have a retrospective operation unless its language is such as plainly to require such a construction and the same rule involves another and subordinate rule to the effect that a statute is not to be construed so as to have a greater retrospective operation than its language renders necessary."

13. The Supreme Court in Mahadeolal Kanodia v. Administrator General of West Bengal, AIR 1960 SC 936 at p. 939 had made the position abundantly clear. The Supreme Court has said:

"The principles that have to be applied for interpretation of statutory provisions of this nature are well established. The first of this is that statutory provisions creating substantive rights or taking away substantive rights are ordinarily prospective; they are retrospective only if by express words or necessary implication the Legislature has made them retrospective; and the retrospective operation will be limited only to the extent to which it has been so made by express words or necessary implication... .."

14. The problem before us, therefore, is whether by express words or necessary implication, sub-s. (3) of S. 21 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955 can be said to have affected pending proceedings. The language used appears to us, to be plain and explicit. It does not present any difficulty. The word "arises" and the expression "in course of any proceedings before any Civil or Criminal Court" made the position abundantly clear. Whenever in course of any proceedings in a Civil or Criminal Court the question arises as to whether a person is or is not a bargadar, that question has to be referred to the officer mentioned in sub-s. (1) of S. 18 for decision. By necessary implication, in our opinion, sub-s. (3) of S. 21 has been made to apply to pending proceedings. We have reached this conclusion on the basis of the plain, ordinary and grammatical meaning of the word "arises" and of the expression "in course of any proceedings before any Civil or Criminal Court."

15. We hold, therefore, that the provisions of sub-s. (3) of S. 21 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955 as amended apply to pending proceedings before any Civil or Criminal Court. The Reference is answered accordingly.

16. The order of the learned Munsif being order No. 97 dated the 22nd July, 1975 is set aside and the Rule is made absolute. The learned Munsif will proceed according to law in the light of the observations made by us in this judgment. There will be no order as to costs.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— I agree.

S. K. DATTA, J.:— I agree.
Order accordingly.

SUDHAMOY BASU, JJ.

Pannalal Biswas, Appellant v. Dilip Kumar Mondal and others, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1369 of 1973, D/- 6-6-1977.

(A) Evidence Act (1872), S. 111 — Good faith — Burden of proof — Impugned deed executed by plaintiff soon after he attained majority in favour of his maternal uncle (defendant) who was acting de facto guardian during minority — No specific denial of plaint allegation about fiduciary relationship of parties — Burden of proving good faith lies on defendant.

A minor who is under the influence of his de facto guardian during his minority cannot be expected to come out of that influence merely on attaining majority or within a short time thereafter. Where there is a question of good faith of a transaction between the parties one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence (Para 6)

Held: Having regard to the relationship between the parties and the attending facts and circumstances, it was for the defence to satisfy the Court that the plaintiff executed the document in good faith knowing the contents thereof. The plaintiff was not aware of the contents of the Deed in question, when the same was executed by him although at that time he had attained the age of majority.

(B) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 13 and 19 — Deed — Construction — Whether a deed is a deed inter vivos or a part of it, is a deed inter vivos and another part a will — (i) Succession Act (1925), S. 2 (h) — (ii) Deed — Construction).

By Cl. 4 in a deed, the widow and the sons of the first party have been given absolute interest on the death of the first party. Similarly, by Cl. 5 the sons of the second party have been given absolute interest on the death of the second party. Clause 6 provides that if the first party dies without getting married, those sons of the second party who will be alive then, will get the entire 16 annas of the property mentioned in the schedule in equal shares in absolute right. In the proviso, Cls. 4, 5 and 6 have been specifically mentioned and it provides that the settlement made in favour of the persons in Cls. 4, 5 and 6 will take effect in absolute right only after the death of the first, second and the third party, and until then those persons will have a mere right of residence. The first three clauses confer certain rights upon the second and third in praesenti:

Held: The proviso controls Cls. 4, 5 and 6 and no right under the said clauses accrued to the persons mentioned therein until the death of all the three parties. Moreover, it would appear from the reading of the aforesaid three clauses along with the proviso that the extent of the share or interest which the sons of second party will get cannot be ascertained until the death of the first party-executant. The said provisions therefore can come into effect only after the death of all the three parties including the executant, therefore, this part of the document namely, Cls. 4, 5 and 6 read with the proviso operates as a Will. Samir Kumar Mukherjee and Nirmal Kumar Manna, for Appellant; R. P. Bagchi and Miss Nandita Ghose, for Respondents.

JANAH, J.:— This Second Appeal is by the plaintiff and it arises out of a suit for declaration of the plaintiff's title to the properties described in the schedule to the plaint. The plaintiff's case in short is as follows:—

One Upendra Nath Biswas, the father of the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 3 and 4, was the owner of the disputed premises No. 22, Madan Paul Lane, Bhowanipore. Upendra died in 1340 B.S. leaving his widow Sinddhubala, a son, the plaintiff and two daughters, defendants Nos. 3 and 4. Sinddhubala is now dead. The plaintiff was a minor at the time of his father's death. Sinddhubala brought her brother, Prafulla Kumar Mondal to help her in the management and protection of the property on behalf of the minors after Sinddhubala lost her husband. Prafulla used to manage the property of the plaintiff. After the death of Sinddhubala, Prafulla was in sole charge of the family affairs of the plaintiff. Prafulla died sometime in the month of Bhadra, 1373 B.S. leaving the defendants Nos. 1, 2, 5 and 6 who are his heirs. In August, 1967 the defendant No. 2 gave out that the defendants have become the owners of the disputed property and the plaintiff thus became suspicious of the conduct of the defendant No. 2. Thereafter the plaintiff instructed one of the relatives to make a search in the Registration Office at Alipur and on 6-9-1967 he got a certified copy of the Deed of Settlement purported to have been executed by him in favour of Prafulla and one Khodanmani Dasi on 9-10-1945. The plaintiff was surprised to come to know the contents of the Deed that in order to give effect the last wish of the plaintiff's deceased father he created the Deed of Settlement. It was alleged that sometime in 1945 when the plaintiff was still a minor he sold some paternal property for the purpose of raising money in order to meet the marriage expenses of his sister the defendant No. 4. Taking advantage of the minority of the plaintiff Prafulla the maternal uncle obtained the Deed of Settlement. It was a fraudulent document obtained by mis-representation.

It was further alleged that the said maternal uncle Prafulla was really a trustee for the plaintiff and as a trustee and guardian he used to manage the property and used to live in the plaintiff's family with the leave and licence of the latter. The plaintiff never intended to execute the Deed of Settlement which was never acted upon. On these allegations the plaintiff filed the suit for a declaration that the Deed of Settlement dated 9th October, 1945 is void and the defendants Nos. 1, 2, 5 and 6 had acquired no right, title and interest in the disputed property by virtue of the said Deed. The plaintiff also prayed for declaration of his title to the disputed property.

2. The suit was contested by the defendants Nos. 1, 2, 5 and 6. They filed a joint written statement alleging that the suit is barred by limitation. It was denied that the plaintiff was a minor at the time when the Deed of Settlement was executed. According to the defendants Upendra Nath Biswas brought his brother-in-law Prafulla when he was 6/7 years old. Prafulla was brought by Upendra as his son. Prafulla contributed a considerable sum of money towards the purchase price of the disputed property and for the marriage of his sister. He used to maintain the family of the plaintiff and to look after the litigation of the said property. Having regard to the services rendered by Prafulla the plaintiff's father during his lifetime expressed his intention for making some permanent settlement for Prafulla and his sister Khodanmani in respect of the property. The plaintiff's father died prematurely and he could not give effect to his last will but he left instruction for fulfilling his last desire. It was alleged that in pursuance of the last wish of Upendra the plaintiff executed the Deed of Settlement out of his will at a time when he was a major. It was alleged that the plaintiff was all along aware of the Deed since its registration. It was denied that the plaintiff continued in possession of the disputed property in spite of Deed of Settlement. It was alleged that the plaintiff not having asked for recovery of possession the suit is hit by S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act.

3. The trial court found that the possession of the disputed property is with the plaintiff and, therefore he was not required to pray for recovery of possession. Upon that view the trial court held that the suit was not hit by S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act. After considering the evidence adduced in the case the trial court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not a minor on 9th October, 1945 when he executed the impugned Deed of Settlement. The trial court further found that the plaintiff did not intend to execute the Deed of Settlement and that he was not aware of the contents of the said document. The trial court, therefore, held that the document was not binding upon him. On the question whether Prafulla contributed any money towards the running of the plaintiff's household the trial court found that the money earned by Prafulla from the shop which belonged to Upendra did not represent his income but it was the income from Upendra's shop. The trial court further held upon an interpretation of the disputed Deed of Settlement, Exhibit A that it was a Will and the plaintiff by instituting the suit had revoked the will. The trial court accordingly passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. Against the decree of the trial court an appeal was taken to the lower appellate court by the defendants Nos. 1, 2, 5 and 6. The lower appellate court affirmed the finding of the trial court that the plaintiff was not a minor at the date of execution of the Deed of Settlement but differed with the other findings of the trial court. The lower appellate court found that the execution of the Deed of Settlement was not merely the plaintiff's physical act of execution but it was his mental act. The lower appellate court also took the view that the Deed of Settlement was a document inter vivos and it was not a Will. The lower appellate court accordingly allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit. Against the said decision of the lower appellate court the present second appeal has been filed by the plaintiff.

4. Mr. Mukherjee, learned Advocate, appearing in support of the appeal, tried to assail the finding of the courts below that the plaintiff was not a minor at the time of execution of the Deed of Settlement. He contended that the said finding of the courts below was based, amongst other, on Ext. H which is the Admission Register of Bhowanipur Sishu Vidyalay which showed that the plaintiff was aged 6 years 5 months on 28-7-1930. Mr. Mukherjee contended that this School Register was inadmissible in evidence and the courts below having based their decision of the said evidence the said finding cannot stand. We are unable to accept this contention of Mr. Mukherjee, inasmuch as, apart from Ext. H the courts below took into consideration other evidence in the case. Even if we leave Ext. H out of consideration those evidence on which the trial court and the lower appellate court based their decision the conclusion would follow that the plaintiff was above the age of 18 years at the date of execution of the Deed of Settlement. We must therefore proceed on the basis that the plaintiff executed the document after he had attained majority.

5. The objection which was raised on behalf of the defendants that the suit was barred by S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act inasmuch as the plaintiff did not ask for recovery of possession was not agitated before the lower appellate court. The trial court has recorded the finding on that issue in favour of the plaintiff and it has found that the possession of the disputed premises is with the plaintiff. That finding has not been reversed by the lower appellate court. That point must, therefore, be found in favour of the plaintiff.

6. The next contention which was urged on behalf of the appellant is that the lower appellate court erred in law in proceeding to decide the case upon the footing that it was for the plaintiff to establish that the Deed of Settlement was vitiated on account of fraud and undue influence. It has been contended that having regard to the relationship between the parties and having regard to the attending facts and circumstances the court of appeal below ought to have proceeded on the basis that it was for the defendant to satisfy the court that the impugned Deed was executed by the plaintiff with due understanding of the contents of the documents and it was executed in good faith. On this point the trial court has found that there is no evidence on record that the document was executed by the plaintiff with full knowledge of the contents thereof. It has further found that the plaintiff did not intend to execute the Deed in question. The lower appellate court has, on the other hand, found that the execution of the Deed was not merely the plaintiff's physical act of execution but it was also his mental act. This conclusion has been arrived at from the fact that the lower appellate court found some discrepancy between the pleading and in the plaintiff's evidence as to the time when and how the plaintiff came to know about the impugned Deed of Settlement since the time of execution. In our view, this conclusion of the lower appellate court was not justified. Section 111 of the Evidence Act provides that where there is a question as to the good faith of transaction between parties one of whom stands to other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence. In this case there is ample evidence on record to show that Prafulla was acting as the de facto guardian of the plaintiff. No doubt that at the date of the disputed document the plaintiff was aged about 21 years, but the fact remains that the document was executed soon after the plaintiff attained majority. A minor who is under the influence of his de facto guardian during his minority cannot be expected to come out of that influence merely on attaining majority or within a very short time thereafter. Moreover, there are other attending facts and circumstances which go to indicate that the plaintiff relied upon the advice and guidance of Prafulla in such matters. In his Tagore Law Lecture Sir Frederick Pollock while dealing with fiduciary relation, stated as follows:—

"Different considerations arise when we come to the kind of fraud which is said to be presumed from the circumstances and condition of the parties. It is really a compound, in varying proportions, of fraud and moral coercion. With direct and positive coercion as a cause of avoiding contract we are not concerned. Moreover it is of extremely rare occurrence in modern times. It occurs only too frequently in judicial experience that a person in whom confidence is reposed by another, or who holds a real or apparent authority over that other, makes use of such confidence or authority for the purpose of obtaining advantage over that other which, but for such confidence or authority, he could not have obtained. In such case it is seldom, if ever, possible to prove specific acts of deception, or of exercise of authority amounting to moral coercion. Yet the risk of abuse is obviously great. The law therefore reverses its usual rule of evidence in dealing between man and man. Commonly we do not presume, without specific indications, that there is anything contrary to good faith in transactions which on the face of them are regular When one party habitually looks up to the other and is guided by him, he can no longer be supposed capable without special precautions of exercising that independent judgment which is requisite for his consent to be free Therefore it is not enough for the law to say that gifts and beneficial agreements obtained by the abuse of authority or confidence, by Undue Influence as it is technically termed are avoidable. It also throws the burden of proof on the party taking the benefit. Instead of requiring the party seeking restitution to prove that the transaction was unrighteous, and his consent not free, it requires the parties resisting it to show that the consent was really free, and that all due precautions were used to secure independent judgment."

In Satish Chandra Ghosh v. Kalidasi Dasi, 34 Cal LJ 529: (AIR 1922 Cal 203) it was held by a Division Bench of this court that there is a grave risk of failure of justice, if the general principles regarding independent and competent advice in the matter of execution of a document by a person in favour of another standing in a fiduciary character are moulded into inelastic formulas or crystallised into inflexible rules and treated as of universal application regardless of the special facts and surrounding circumstances of the case which requires adjudication. Where there is a question of good faith of a transaction between the parties one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence. It was further observed that every variance between pleading and proof is not fatal; the court must carefully consider whether the objection is of form or of substance. The rule that the allegations and the proof must correspond is intended to serve a double purpose, namely, first to appraise the defendant distinctly and specifically of the case he is called upon to answer so that he may properly make his defence and may not be taken by surprise; and secondly, to preserve an accurate record of the cause of action as a protection against a second proceeding founded upon the same allegations. The same view was expressed by another Division Bench of this Court in the case of Benoy Krishna Sadhukhan v. Santi Charan Sadhukhan, 62 Cal LJ 99: (AIR 1935 Cal 671). In the plaint as amended there is positive averment about the fiduciary relation between Prafulla and the plaintiff but there is no specific denial by the defendants in their written statement.

7. The defence case, on the other hand, is that the Deed of Settlement was executed by the plaintiff in deference to the last wishes of his father, Upendra. Upendra died on July 8, 1936. The disputed document was executed on October 9, 1945. If the document is executed to give effect to the last wishes of Upendra there is no reason why the execution thereof was delayed for ever 9 years. In such circumstances it is only reasonable to expect that the document would have been executed during the lifetime of the plaintiff's mother, Sinddhubala who died on 5th January, 1941. It was argued on behalf of the respondents that as the plaintiff was a minor when his father died he could not have executed the Deed of Settlement. But the plaintiff's mother was living at that time and she was the de jure guardian of the plaintiff. The plaintiff could have executed the document through his natural guardian mother. The Deed of Settlement was executed at a time when the necessity arose for procuring money for the plaintiff's sister's marriage. That was certainly not the appropriate time when such a document should normally have been executed. The lower appellate court has put a great deal of emphasis on the fact that the plaintiff in his evidence had stated that except the Sale Deed Ext. D-1 he had not executed any other document. This statement of the plaintiff, in our view, has to be read in the context of the plaintiff's case and also the statement he had made earlier in his deposition, namely, that his mama made all arrangements regarding the marriage of his sister and that his mama advised him to sell the Turf Road property for the marriage expenses of his sister. It appears from the Sale Deed, Ext. D-1, and the Deed of transfer, Ext. A that both the documents were written by one Harinayana Bhattacharyya. In the Deed of Settlement, the plaintiff was identified by Ardhendu Bhusan Majumdar who is one of the purchasers under the Deed of Sale. In the Deed of Sale the plaintiff was identified by Prafulla Kumar Mondal the maternal uncle of the plaintiff Ardhendu Bhusan Majumdar is also one of the witnesses in the Deed of Settlement the same set of persons are involved in the two documents. The two documents were presented for registration on the same day and at the same time. Then as regards the motive for the execution of the Deed of Settlement namely, that it was executed to give effect to the last wishes of Upendra, we get a different version from the evidence of Manorama, who has stated in her evidence that Panna executed a Deed so that all of us could live together. To the same effect is the evidence of Sm. Kironbala Mondal, the mother of Prafulla. This witness was asked whether she knew anything about the execution of a document by the plaintiff so that the defendants could have some interest in the disputed property. In answer to Q. 44 she stated that the document was executed not for the purpose of giving some interest to the defendants but so that the house might not be sold. It also appears from the evidence that soon after the execution of the Sale Deed a house was constructed in Tollygunge by Prafulla. P. W. 3 Manorama, wife of Prafulla has given an explanation that the said house was constructed with the loan taken from Binapani, sister of Prafulla. Binapani was alive, but she was not examined. The plaintiff's evidence on the other hand is that the entire amount of Rs. 12,500/- received from the sale of Turf Road property was made over to Prafulla. Having regard to the relationship between the parties and the attending facts and circumstances we are of the opinion that it was for the defence to satisfy the court that the plaintiff executed the document in good faith knowing the contents thereof. This part of the case was lost sight of by the lower appellate court. We, therefore, hold that the plaintiff was not aware of the contents of the Deed of Settlement, Ext. A when the same was executed by him although at that time he had attained the age of majority.

8. Some argument was advanced before us on S. 81 and S. 88 of the Indian Trusts Act. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that even if the plaintiff was aware of the contents of the Deed of Settlement Prafulla or his heirs in whose favour it was executed must hold the property for the benefit of the plaintiff in view of the provisions of Ss. 81 and 88 of the Trusts Act. In view of our findings recorded above that the plaintiff was not aware of the contents of Ext. A, the Deed of Settlement, it is not necessary for us to go into this aspect of the case.

9. The only other point which requires consideration is whether the disputed document, Ext. A, operates as a Deed of Settlement or it is a Will. The trial court has taken the view that the document operates as a Will. But the lower appellate court has taken a different view and has held that it is a Deed of Settlement. Before we proceed to discuss whether the said document operates as a Will or as a Deed of Settlement it would be convenient to refer to the relevant clauses of the said document. In the said document the plaintiff is described as the first party, Prafulla Kumar Mondal is described as the second party and Khodonmoni Dasi is described as the third party. After stating the relationship between the parties the document contains certain recitals giving reasons for the execution of the document. It then proceeds to mention the conditions on which the settlement is executed. Clause (1) gives a right of residence to the second and the third party jointly with the first party in the property described in the schedule without conferring upon them any right to transfer. The second clause requires the first and the second parties to maintain the property and to pay the taxes therefor. The third clause deprives the first party of his right to transfer the property during the lifetime of the second and the third party. Clauses. 4, 5 and 6 of the said documents which are very material for our present purpose are as follows:—

"4. I the first party have not yet married. If in future I marry and I have children then my wife and my sons will get on my death half share of the property described in the schedule in absolute right, with the right to make gift, sale or transfer.

5. On the death of the second party his sons will get half share of the property mentioned in the schedule in absolute right, with the right to make gift, sale or transfer.

6. If I the first party die without getting married then on my death those sons of the second party who will then be alive will get in equal shares the entire 16 annas of the property mentioned in the schedule in absolute right, with the right to make gift, sale or transfer." The document further contains a proviso to the aforesaid Cls. 4, 5 and 6. It reads as follows:—

"Be it mentioned that it is only after the death of the first, second and the third party that the wife and the sons of the first party and the sons of the second party will get the property mentioned in the schedule in absolute right, in terms of the provisions contained in Cls. 4, 5 and 6; but so long as any one of the first, second and the third party will be alive none of the aforesaid persons will get the property mentioned in the schedule in absolute right, they will have only a right to reside jointly."

10. It is to be noticed that by Cl. 4 the widow and the sons of the first party have been given absolute interest on the death of the first party. Similarly, by Cl. 5 the sons of the second party have been given the absolute interest on the death of the second party. Clause 6 provides that if the first party dies without getting married, those sons of the second party who will be alive then will get the entire 16 annas of the property mentioned in the schedule in equal shares in absolute right. From these provisions it was argued by Mr. Bagchi on behalf of the respondents that the interest created in favour of the sons of Prafulla was vested interest under S. 19 of the T. P. Act. It was further contended that it extended to the whole of the remaining interest of the transferor namely, the plaintiff, in favour of the sons who might have been born. It was a valid transfer under S. 13 of the T. P. Act and the Donees or the Settles acquired a vested right and they took it in absolute right. Mr. Mukherjee on the other hand, has argued that although Cls. 4, 5 and 6 speak of absolute interest the proviso makes it clear that unless and until the first, second and the third parties were all dead the persons mentioned in Cls. 4, 5 and 6 will have no absolute interest in the property but they will have a mere right of residence. It will be seen that in the proviso Cls. 4, 5 and 6 have been specifically mentioned and it provides that the settlement made in favour of the persons in Cls. 4, 5 and 6 will take effect in absolute right only after the death of the first, second and the third party, and until then those persons will have a mere right of residence. The proviso therefore controls Cls. 4, 5 and 6 or in other words, the said clauses do not come into operation until the death of all the first, second and the third parties. It was argued on behalf of the respondent that the first, second and third clauses would indicate that the document is a Deed of Settlement and it cannot be a Will because certain rights were conferred upon the second and the third party in praesenti. No doubt the first three clauses confer such right on the persons mentioned therein. The question which then arises is whether the entire document is a Deed inter vivos or a part of it is a Deed inter vivos, and another part a Will. The distinction between a Will and a Deed inter vivos is illustrated by Jarman on Wills where he says "if a man by Deed, limits lands to the use of himself for life with remainder to the use of A in fee, the effect upon the usufructuary enjoyment is precisely the same as if he should, by his will, make an immediate devise of such lands to A in fee; and yet the case fully illustrates the distinction in question; for in former instance, A immediately on the execution of the Deed becomes entitled to a remainder in fee, though it is not to take effect in possession until the decease of the settlor, while in the latter, he would take no interest whatever until the decease of the Testator should have called the instrument into operation." (Vide Jarman on Will 8th Edition, Chap. II, p. 26). To the same effect is the view which has been expressed by K. Shelley Bonnerjee in his Tagore Law Lecture 1901 on the interpretation of Deeds, Wills and States in British India. In Chandmul v. Lachhminarain, (1900) ILR 22 All 162, it was held by a Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court that a part of a document may be a Will notwithstanding that the same document may contain other provisions which was meant to be carried into effect during the lifetime of the executant of that document. Mr. Bagchi on behalf of the respondents contended that no reason was given in the said decision for the conclusion arrived at and from the facts as stated in the report the nature of the document is not clear and so the said decision should have no application in the present case. It is true that the reasons for the decision have not been mentioned. But it seems that no reason was given because the matter arose out of a reference under S. 17 of the Ajmere Courts' Regulations. But their Lordships in support of the decision referred to two English cases and also the passage in Jarman on Wills noted hereinbefore. A similar question arose before the Assam High Court in Tajoram Nath v. Banerwar Nath, AIR 1962 Assam 106. A Division Bench of the Assam High Court held that there can be no objection in law if one part of an instrument is operative as a Will and another part of the same instrument operates as a document inter vivos giving possession and management of certain properties. In the present case as we have already seen Cls. 1, 2 and 3 make certain provisions with regard to Prafulla and Khodonmoni. Cls. 4, 5 and 6 although mention that the persons mentioned therein would get in absolute right yet by virtue of the proviso the said persons are not to get in absolute right until the death of the first, second and the third party. The proviso therefore controls Cls. 4, 5 and 6 and no right under the said clauses accrues to the persons mentioned therein until the death of all the three parties. Moreover it would appear from a reading of the aforesaid three clauses along with the proviso that the extent of the share or interest which the sons of Prafulla will get cannot be ascertained until the death of the plaintiff. The said provisions therefore can come into effect only after the death of all the three parties including the plaintiff. In our view, therefore, this part of the document namely, Cls. 4, 5 and 6 read with the proviso operates as a Will. A Will by its very nature is revocable and the plaintiff by institution of the present suit has revoked the Will.

11. For the reasons mentioned above, this appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree of the lower appellate court are set aside and those of the trial court are restored.

12. In the circumstances of the case, we however make no order as to costs.

SUDHAMOY BASU, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

B. C. Dutt and Ambica Charan Bhat-tacharjee, for Appellant; N. C. Chakraborty, Dhruva Kumar Mukherjee and Sudipto Moitra, for Respondent.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.:— This appeal arises out of the decree passed by the City Civil Court, Calcutta in Ejectment Suit No. 1661 of 1965 in favour of the plaintiff B. M. Singh & Son, a firm registered under the Indian Partnership Act having its office at No. 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta (hereinafter referred to as the firm). The defendant is Rolls Print Co.

(P.) Ltd., a limited company under the Companies Act (hereinafter described as the Company). The plaintiff is the owner of the premises No. 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta of which the suit premises we are concerned with is a part.

2. The plaintiff filed several suits against different tenants occupying the premises No. 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta. With regard to the present suit the plaintiff's allegation is that the defendant was a monthly tenant under the firm in respect of the suit premises at a rental of Rs. 102/- payable according to English Calendar month. The plaintiff, according to the allegation made in the plaint, requires the premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding, for use and occupation and also for accommodation of its business. The plaintiff determined the tenancy by a notice calling upon the defendant to vacate the suit premises on the expiry of the last day of July, 1965. In spite of the notice duly served upon the defendant, it did not comply with the same and hence the present suit was filed.

3. The defendant filed a written statement. It was alleged that the suit was hit by S. 69 of the Indian Partnership Act, that the notice to quit was illegal, insufficient and void, that the plaintiff did not require the suit premises for building or rebuilding purposes or for their own requirement and occupation as alleged, that the plaintiff's accommodation at its disposal was more than sufficient and that the defendant had their machineries installed in the suit premises and had been running manufacturing business there.

4. The learned court below tried several suits against different tenants in respect of the premises No. 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta analogously. Different issues were framed in different suits. Coming to our suit we find that the learned trial court found that the plaintiff required the suit premises reasonably for building and rebuilding purposes as alleged in the plaint and for its own use and occupation. It was also held that the suit was not hit by provision of S. 69 of the Indian Partnership Act. It was further held that the notice to quit duly served upon the defendant was legal and sufficient. On these findings a decree was passed.

5. We have heard Mr. B. C. Dutt, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the defendant-appellant and Mr. Nani Coomarr Chakraborty for the plaintiff-respondent.

6. Mr. Dutt advanced before us several contentions in support of the appeal to attack the findings of the trial court on the question of the plaintiff's reasonable requirement for building and rebuilding of the suit premises and for its own occupation. Mr. Dutt's contention is that the learned court below failed to appreciate the evidence on record and that the further evidence that has been adduced in this appeal in connexion with additional issues framed on the basis of the decision of B. Banerji's case (AIR 1975 SC 1146) by the Supreme Court goes against the plaintiff on the question whether the plaintiff has any other reasonable and suitable accommodation and disproves the case of the plaintiff. It may be stated that in this appeal the respondent-plaintiff filed an application for amendment of the plaint in view of the decision given in B. Banerji's case by the Supreme Court. Additional written statement was put in and additional issues were framed to ascertain in addition whether the plaintiff has any other accommodation besides the suit premises for the requirement of the plaintiff and if there can be building and rebuilding without evicting the defendant. Another issue was framed to see if the suit was hit by sub-s. (3-A) of S. 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. Witnesses were examined of both the parties on this additional issue. Several witnesses were examined in the trial court both by the plaintiff and the defendant. P. W. 1 was a Control Clerk of First National City Bank, Calcutta. He has proved certificates of fund lying to the credit of Bhubaneswar Singh, Jagadishwar Singh, Benay Krishna Singh and Nageswar Singh in the Bank. P. W. 2 is an Assistant in the City Architect's Office of the Corporation of Calcutta. He has proved the sanctioned plan obtained by the plaintiff for the purpose of building in the suit premises. This has been marked Ext. 6. This witness was not cross-examined by the defendant in Suit No. 1661. This witness has also proved Ext. 6 (a) a plan of existing construction and basements and the said plan was also sanctioned. P. W. 3 is a Consulting Engineer and an Architect and Valuer. He is in the A. list of the Panel of Valuers of the Calcutta High Court. He prepared the plan and estimate for the building appearing in Ext. 6. He has also proved the estimate for the building marked Ext. 7. He also subsequently prepared a revised estimate which has been marked Ext. 7 (a). This was on the basis of the sanctioned plan. From this witness we get that the present building would be over 50-60 years old and that he prepared the plan according to the requirement of the plaintiff. P. W. 4 is a clerk of a Barrister who was once appointed Receiver in respect of the suit premises along with other properties. This witness did not give any evidence regarding requirement of the plaintiff. P. W. 5 is the Manager of the plaintiff firm. His evidence is that the firm is a registered partnership firm and he has proved memo of registration of the firm marked Ext. 9. He has also proved that the suit property was purchased by the firm. The sale deed has been marked Ext. 10. In the sale deed we also get the names of the partners of the firm as purchasers. This witness A. P. Bhatia has asserted that the firm requires the suit premises for erecting a new building after demolishing the existing structures. From his evidence we also get that the plaintiff's office is at premises No. 1, Crooked Lane and that after rebuilding the plaintiff will occupy the building for office and godown purposes. The witness has further stated that the plaintiff has means to defray the costs of the new building. The evidence further is that the partners of the firm pay income-tax exceeding 4½ lacs of rupees. Some income-tax papers have been marked Exts. 11 to 11 (C). Some income-tax receipts have been marked Exts. 12 to 12 (j). P. W. 5 has stated in evidence that the defendant has no manufacturing business in the suit premises. He has said that at the inception of the tenancy the defendant used the suit premises as an office room. This witness has been cross-examined at length. He has denied the suggestion that the proposal for the new building has been made in such a way as to evict the tenants. The suggestion was that the plan was prepared fraudulently and without any basis of requirement, but the said suggestion has been denied. Being cross-examined from the side of the defendant, the witness has stated that the company has no manufacturing business in the suit premises. It is to be noted that the witness was not cross-examined by the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the defendant on his statement that at the inception of the tenancy, the company used the premises as an office room. No suggestion was made in respect of this statement. The witness has denied the suggestion that the present accommodation available to the plaintiff is more than sufficient for the purpose of the firm. He has also denied the suggestion that the plaintiff wanted to enhance the rent. We get from P. W. 5 that the firm received notice from the Corporation of Calcutta for demolition of certain portions of the present building and repairing certain portions and that notice was marked Ext. 14. This notice is not relevant for the purpose of determination of the issue raised in this suit. It is not the case of the plaintiff that they have got to demolish any part of the suit premises in this case due to the notice for demolition issued by the Corporation. The case of the plaintiff definitely is that for reasonable requirement and accommodation it has got to construct a new building in place of the old one.

7. D. W. 1 is a defendant in another ejectment suit. He has stated that the building is very strong and that the plaintiff has set up a false plea of requirement after demolition of the building. In cross-examination he has stated that the building is very old. He has said nothing else of any importance. D. W. 2 is a defendant of another suit heard analogously. He has denied that the plaintiff will demolish the building and erect a new building. D. W. 3 is the defendant in Ejectment Suit No. 1093 heard along with the suit. He has simply stated that it is not a fact that the plaintiff will build a new house after demolishing the present structure. His evidence is that the funds shown by the plaintiff in this suit are meant for investment in the business, that is to say, he does not admit that the plaintiff has sufficient means for the purpose of making construction of the new building. He wants to say that the funds shown by the plaintiff would be utilised for the business investment. D. W. 4 is a defendant in one of the suits heard analogously. He denies that the plaintiff will demolish the present structure and will erect a new building. D. W. 5 is Sarju Singh. He speaks about the servants' quarter at premises No. 1, Crooked Lane. He says that the said quarters are in good condition and not liable to collapse and that the roof of the room is not leaky. D. W. 6 is the defendant in Ejectment Suit No. 2069 heard analogously. His evidence is that the plaintiff will not build any new building after demolishing the present structure. Of course he has received a demolition notice from the Corporation and he does not know whether the building is 80 years old. The defendant of Ejectment Suit No. 2070 has been examined as D. W. 7. He occupies one room in the servants' quarter at premises No. 1, Crooked Lane. He says that the room is not liable to fall down although he has received a demolition notice from the Corporation. Let us now come to D. W. 8. He is an office Assistant of the defendant company. He says that the tenancy of Rs. 102/- of the suit premises was taken for manufacturing purpose and that the company carries on business of gumming, slitting and packing cigarette paper. He has stated that the defendant manufactures the cigarette paper and for this purpose the company has machineries driven by electric power. The witness has made an attempt to say that the tenancy of Rs. 102/- consists of 3 rooms and one shed on the ground floor. This story is a new one. It has not been pleaded in the written statement although in the plaint it was clearly stated that the defendant was a tenant in respect of one room described in the schedule. This is unacceptable. He has stated that the plaintiff has got 40/50 bighas of land at Kamarhati B. T. Road where the plaintiff firm has a factory. We also get from him that the factory has been extended. The witness has stated that the plaintiff has got sufficient accommodation for office staff, partners and others. The witness does not believe that the plaintiff would erect a new building after demolition of the existing structures at premises No. 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta. The witness has further stated that the funds shown by the plaintiff will be invested in its business and not in construction of a new building. This witness does not know when this tenancy was created. He is in service of the defendant only for 6 years. He has admitted further that it is his surmise that the plaintiff would invest the funds shown in their business. The witness has further stated that the company does not manufacture cigarette papers which they purchase from elsewhere.

8. It may be mentioned that the defendant had another tenancy at 1, Crooked Lane and the plaintiff filed another suit against the defendant in respect of that tenancy as well. That suit along with several others were heard analogously and all the suits were decreed. The defendant appealed against the decree passed in the other suit but ultimately the defendant delivered possession of the suit property in that suit during the pendency of the appeal and the said Appeal No. F. A. 2 of 1968 was dismissed. As all the tenants except another delivered possession of the suit property to the respondent-plaintiff, the defendant filed a petition for local investigation by a competent person to report if at the present moment when the plaintiff has got possession of the major portion of the house, the plaintiff still requires the suit premises in occupation of the defendant in this case for building and rebuilding and if for such building the defendant is to be evicted. A surveyor and valuer was appointed Commissioner for the purpose and he submitted report in favour of the plaintiff. Then the plaintiff examined him in this Court on the additional issues framed. At first F. A. 2 and this appeal were to be heard analogously but as F. A. 2 of 1968 was dismissed this appeal is heard alone.

9. Besides the evidence recorded in the trial court as already discussed, the plaintiff has adduced further evidence in this case on the additional issues already mentioned. The defendant has also adduced some other evidence. Nageswar Singh, one of the partners of the plaintiff firm has examined himself. The witness has stated that the firm has no other accommodation which may satisfy its requirement for space. The premises No. 30, Basanta Roy Road belongs to the firm where Jagadishwar, Bhubaneswar and Benay Krishna, the partners are residing and in premises No. 204, Sarat Bose Road the witness himself is residing. The witness has further stated that the plot No. 117, B. T. Road does not belong to the firm but its owner is Beni Ltd., a different concern. The witness has also stated that the proposed construction for the requirement of the plaintiff cannot be made without the tenants being evicted. The witness has stated that it would be false to suggest that the firm has any other accommodation in Calcutta or elsewhere by which the firm can satisfy the requirement for space. It has been suggested to this witness during cross-examination that the premises at 30, Raja Basanta Roy Road and 204, Sarat Bose Road constitute sufficient accommodation for the residential quarter of the partners of the firm as well as office accommodation. The witness has stated that these premises are only residential accommodation and that there is no office in those premises. It is also suggested that the new building can be constructed after demolishing the existing building part by part. But the answer is that it cannot be done. It has been suggested further that without disturbing the occupation of the defendant, new construction can be done. Again the suggestion has been denied. The next witness examined on the side of the plaintiff-respondent is Sukumar Dey, a Chartered Surveyor and Valuer. On receipt of an order from this Court the witness inspected and surveyed the premises No. 1, Crooked Lane. He had submitted a report. This witness got a plan prepared under his supervision. That report has been marked H. C. Ext. No. 1. He has stated that the said report is correct. He inspected the suit premises on 9th July, 1976. At that time only two tenants were found. One was Marquas Garage and the other was the defendant company. This witness has seen the proposed plan of the building relied upon by the plaintiff. He got the sanctioned plan given to him. According to him on scrutiny of the plan sanctioned by the Corporation, the building construction work cannot be carried out in the premises without evicting the tenants. This expert witness has been examined practically for the purpose of saying whether the construction of the plaintiff's proposed building can be done without the premises being vacated by the tenants and his definite evidence is that on scrutiny of the sanctioned plan the construction work of the new building cannot be carried out in the premises without evicting the tenants. On this point, however, the witness was not cross-examined at all. The defendant, however, examined in this appeal an employee of the company. He is an Administrative Officer. This witness has been examined-in-Chief on the question whether the plaintiff requires this space for car parking or whether it has got any godown in the suit premises. The witness says that the plaintiff has a factory at B. T. Road. During cross-examination the witness has stated that Beni Limited is the owner of the factory at B. T. Road. The witness was also cross-examined regarding space for car parking.

10. Mr. Dutt has argued that in connexion with the additional issues framed in this Court, the plaintiff's witness stated that some space was necessary for car parking. It has been submitted that this requirement for car parking is something new not spoken about in the trial court. I cannot accept this proposition because the original case of the plaintiff that it requires the suit premises for building and rebuilding and for accommodation for its office and godown remains. In connexion with the business, space for car parking is necessary and in that connexion space about car parking was referred to. I cannot hold that any new case has been brought at the appellate stage or that the story of reasonable requirement set up by the plaintiff in the pleading has been given a go-bye. On consideration of the evidence on record, there can be no doubt that the plaintiff reasonably requires the suit premises for building and rebuilding and also for use and occupation and for accommodation for its business purposes including office accommodation and for the use of godown. The plaintiff is not in possession of any reasonably suitable accommodation and its requirement will not be satisfied by partial eviction of the defendant. This reasonable requirement of the plaintiff is bona fide.

11. In connexion with the reasonable requirement it has been urged from the side of the appellant that the disputed property was not purchased by the firm, but by Jagadishwar Singh, Bhubaneswar Singh, Nageswar Singh and Benay Krishna Singh in their personal capacity and, therefore, when the firm does not own the suit property, there cannot be any valid case for reasonable requirement of the suit premises by the firm. The relevant sale deed is Ext. 10 executed by the vendors in favour of Jagadishwar Singh and three others as already mentioned. In this deed it is stated that the vendees are Hindu Traders carrying on business in partnership under the name and style of B. M. Singh & Son at No. 1, Crooked Lane in the town of Calcutta. This indenture is dated 29th of Mar. 1963. From the recitals of the document and also from the description of the vendees there can be no doubt that the property in question was purchased by the partners on behalf of the firm. It should also be noted that although in the plaint the plaintiff asserted that the firm was the owner of the suit premises, the company in the written statement did not dispute or challenge the said assertion. Besides P. W. 5, the Manager of the firm stated that the plaintiff-firm purchased the suit property by a sale deed marked Ext. 10. The witness has not been cross-examined on that point and moreover no evidence was adduced from the side of the defendant to challenge that statement. The contention raised by Mr. Dutt is, therefore, unacceptable.

12. It has been next contended by Mr. Dutt that in view of the dismissal of Ejectment Suit No. 844 of 1964 previously brought by the plaintiff against the defendant on ground of reasonable requirement of the suit premises for the use and occupation of the plaintiff and default in payment of rent, the present suit on the same ground and on the same cause of action is not maintainable and also barred by the principles of res judicata. Ext. D is the certified copy of the plaint of the Ejectment Suit No. 844 of 1964. It appears that the plaintiff filed an ejectment suit against the defendant in the City Civil Court at Calcutta on the ground that the plaintiff-firm required the premises for their own use and occupation and that the defendant was a defaulter in payment of rent from the month of July, 1963. Exhibit E is the certified copy of the order dated 16-6-1965 showing that the suit was dismissed for non-prosecution as the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the plaintiff had no instruction to proceed with the suit. First of all it is seen that in the previous suit the grounds for eviction were that the plaintiff required the suit premises for their own use and occupation and that the defendant was a defaulter in payment of rent. It also appears that the plaintiff did not proceed with that suit and as such the suit was dismissed. In the present suit, however, the plaintiff-firm has stated that it requires the suit premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding and for their own use and occupation and for accommodation of their business. In the previous suit the tenancy was terminated with the expiry of the last day of December, 1964. It appears, however, that after the dismissal of the previous suit the firm recognising the defendant company, a tenant as before again determined the tenancy by notice with the expiry of the last day of July, 1965. In the present suit the company has asserted in the written statement that its tenancy has not been determined and that its tenancy has been continuing as before as the notice to quit is illegal and insufficient. In a case like this the cause of action is continuing as the plaintiff requires the suit premises for its own use and occupation. Moreover in the present suit there is the further additional ground for building and rebuilding which was not the ground of eviction in the previous suit. It is no wonder that the plaintiff-firm wanted to bring a more comprehensive suit for eviction on several grounds including the one for building and rebuilding and that was the reason why the plaintiff did not proceed with the previous suit. We also get that in the previous suit there was no decision on merits of the plaintiff's case. In the present suit the cause of action is different. On these grounds we cannot hold that the present suit is hit by the principles of res judicata or estoppel. The suit is maintainable.

13. It has been next argued by Mr. Dutt, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant that on account of the promulgation of the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 the plaintiff-firm cannot make use of the entire land covered by premises No. 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta because according to him there is excess of vacant land which the plaintiff cannot retain. It has been argued further that due to the prescribed ceiling of land under the said Act the plan of the building on which the plaintiff must rely cannot be allowed to be made use of. The Urban Land Bill of 1976 was introduced in the Lok Sabha on 28-1-1976. The bill with some amendments was passed on 5-2-1976 and the President gave his assent on 17-2-1976. This objection was not taken in the additional written statement filed before this Court. This point has been taken up just before the hearing of the appeal. It appears from the provisions of the Act that there is prescribed authority to consider about the ceiling and also the claim made by the owners of the lands and that authority will decide what would be the ceilings in particular cases and how far the claims of the proprietors of the land can be allowed. In this appeal, in my view, there is no such scope for ascertaining the ceilings or the claims as prescribed by the said Act. That is a matter to be considered by the authority prescribed by the Act and also the appellate authorities prescribed therein. In this appeal we are to see whether there is a bona fide and reasonable requirement of the suit premises by the plaintiff-firm for building and re-building and for use and occupation as stated in the plaint. If it is proved that the requirement of the suit premises as alleged by the plaintiff is genuine and bona fide and reasonable in view of the facts and circumstances, there can be no valid reason to dismiss the plaintiff's suit. There is no doubt that in the present case the plaintiff requires the suit premises and that the building proposed to be constructed cannot be made unless the defendant is evicted. There is no evidence either before us adduced by the defendant that there is any vacant space to be attracted by the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 prejudicially to the interest of the plaintiff-firm. A petition was filed in this respect on 2-9-1976 before hearing and it has been objected to by the respondent challenging the allegations. We cannot, therefore, accept Mr. Dutt's contention.

14. Mr. Dutt's next point is that the suit is not maintainable as there has been no legal partnership business according to law. He wants to argue that the partnership is bad in law because there was a minor taken as a partner and according to the provisions of Partnership Act a minor cannot be a partner. It has been further argued that the suit is hit by S. 69 of the Partnership Act. Let us now consider the evidence on record. The certified copy of the extract from the Register of Firms has been marked Ext. 9. In the columns for the names and addresses of the partners and the date of joining or changes therein we get that Bhubaneswar Singh representing the joint family consisting of himself and his brother Nageswar Singh and his minor son residing at P-30, Raja Basanta Roy Road, Calcutta was described as a partner and Jagadishwar Singh residing at 42, Sikdarpara Street, Calcutta was mentioned as another partner. The Registrar gave his signature on 16-8-1955 which presumably appears to be the date of registration. We further get from this exhibit that in July, 1961 there was a notice of changes in the constitution and in the column for names of the partners we get Jagadishwar Singh, Bhubaneswar Singh, Nageswar Singh and Benay Krishna Singh. It is quite clear that although Bhubaneswar Singh originally represented the joint family consisting of himself and his brother Nageswar and his minor son, the name of the said minor son of his was not mentioned as partner but after the change in the constitution of the partnership in July, 1961 Benay Krishna Singh has been mentioned as a partner. Admittedly he was the minor son of Bhubaneswar referred to already. That Benay Krishna Singh was the son of Bhubaneswar Singh will appear in Ext. 10. In Ext. 9 we further get that in Sept., 1962 there was a notice of attaining majority and electing to become a partner by Benay Krishna who was originally described as minor son. In the column meant for recording of changes of constitution we find the remark made by the Registrar that Benay Krishna was admitted to the benefits of Partnership from 1-6-1961. On consideration of the evidence on record there can be no doubt that originally Bhubaneswar Singh representing the joint family consisting of himself, his brother Nageswar and his minor son entered into a partnership business with Jagadishwar Singh. Bhubaneswar certainly could as Karta or representing his joint family as in this case enter into a valid partnership with another person Jagadishwar Singh. This is not a case of joint family business or any alleged family partnership business referred to in S. 5 of the Indian Partnership Act. In this connexion the case of Commissioner of Income-tax, West Bengal v. Kalubabu Lalchand reported in AIR 1959 SC 1289 may be referred to. In para. 10 of the said judgment we get:—

"It is now well settled that a Hindu undivided family cannot as such enter into a contract of partnership with another person or persons. The Karta of the Hindu undivided family, however, may and frequently does enter into partnership with outsider on behalf of and for the benefit of his joint family, but when he does so, the other members of the family did not vis a vis the outsiders, become partners in the firm".

In the present case Bhubaneswar representing the joint family entered into partnership with Jagadishwar Singh. The minor son of Bhubaneswar was not a partner. Subsequently in July, 1961 there was change in the constitution of the partnership and Jagadishwar Singh, Bhubaneswar Singh and Nageswar Singh became partners and Benay Krishna Singh, a minor was admitted to the benefit of the partnership. This benefit given to the minor was quite legal. Later on in September, 1962 Benay Krishna Singh gave notice that he had attained majority and that he had elected to become a partner. This was accepted and as such he also became a partner along with Jagadishwar Singh, Bhubaneswar Singh and Nageswar Singh. In the year 1963 the suit property was purchased by all these four partners, namely, Jagadishwar Singh, Bhubaneswar Singh, Nageswar Singh and Benay Krishna Singh as partners of B. M. Singh and Son. There has been erroneous printing of Ext. 9 included in the Paper Book. In the columns for the names and addresses of the partners a full stop was omitted after the words "his minor son" meaning the minor son of Bhubaneswar and in fact and admittedly Jagadishwar was not minor son of Bhubaneswar. In view of what I have already discussed there can be no doubt that there has been legal registration of the partnership and that there was no occasion for any minor being admitted as partner. We find no ground to hold that the present case is hit by S. 69 of the Indian Partnership Act

15. With regard to the question whether the suit is barred by sub-s. (3-A) of S. 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, the fact is that the plaintiff purchased the suit property in Mar., 1963. The suit was filed in Sept., 1965. Sub-s. (3-A) of S. 13 was introduced in 1969 when this appeal was pending. In view of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerji v. Anita reported in (1975) 1 SCC 166 : (AIR 1975 SC 1146), the plaintiff-respondent amended the plaint by a petition filed in August, 1975. A written statement was filed and after the striking of additional issues, the parties led evidence. In these circumstances in view of the decision in B. Banerji's case the technical difficulty is overcome after the amendment petition on the ground that 1975 may be taken as the year of institution of the suit for pleadings mentioning grounds under Cls. (f) and (ff) of S. 13 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. This procedure avoids multiplicity of proceedings and litigative waste without impairing proper justice. We find that the present suit is not hit by sub-s. (3-A) of S. 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act.

16. The last point canvassed by Mr. Dutt is that the notice to quit served upon the defendant in the instant case was invalid in law and insufficient. The contention of Mr. Dutt is that the plaintiff has been doing manufacturing business in the suit premises and that in view of S. 106 of the T. P. Act when the defendant has not been given six months' notice to quit the suit is not maintainable. Admittedly one month's notice to quit was served upon the defendant. The allegation about the determination of tenancy by a notice has been made in para. 3 of the plaint. In para. 2 of the plaint it is stated that the defendant was a monthly tenant under the plaintiffs in respect of the suit premises at the rent of Rs. 102/- per month payable according to English Calendar. Regarding the allegation made in para. 3 about the notice to quit and the determination of tenancy it is stated in para. 4 of the written statement that the notice to quit is invalid, illegal, insufficient and void and as such it cannot determine the tenancy. In para. 5 of the written statement it is stated that the defendant has machineries installed in the suit property and that it runs its manufacturing business there. P. W. 5 on the side of the plaintiff has stated that the defendant has no manufacturing business in the suit premises and that at the inception of the tenancy the defendant used the premises as an office room. During cross-examination by the defendant there was a suggestion that the defendant had manufacturing business, but the said suggestion has been denied. The witness has stated that the defendant carries on business of cutting and gumming cigarette paper. The plaintiff's witness was not cross-examined about his evidence that at the inception of the tenancy the defendant used the premises as an office room. D. W. 8 is the relevant witness from the side of the defendant. He has stated that the tenancy of Rs. 102/- was taken for manufacturing purposes. According to him the defendant carries on business of gumming, slitting and packing cigarette paper and he says that the defendant manufactures cigarette paper. During cross-examination this very witness has stated that the defendant does not manufacture the cigarette paper which the defendant purchases from elsewhere. This witness is a new comer in the defendant's company. He is an office assistant. No responsible officer comes to depose on behalf of the defendant. This witness does not know when the tenancy was created. According to this witness certain machineries are in the suit premises for the purpose of manufacturing of cigarette paper but it does not say what actually is done by the machineries. He does not say when the machineries were installed. He has no personal knowledge as to the terms of tenancy when it was taken because he was not at that time an employee of the defendant. He does not bring any reliable documentary evidence about the terms of tenancy. Neither any officer of the defendant nor the Directors thereof have been examined to show that the tenancy was taken for manufacturing business or purposes, although the Directors were in Calcutta at the time of trial of the suit. No explanation has been given why any responsible officer has not come forward to depose to show that the tenancy was for manufacturing purposes. It is for the defendant to prove that the lease or tenancy of immovable property was for manufacturing purposes. It may be that during the continuance of the tenancy taken for purposes other than manufacturing one the tenant might have started manufacturing business subsequently but that will not entitle him to get six months' notice to quit the suit premises expiring with the end of a year of tenancy. We have got no doubt to hold that there is no reliable evidence on record to prove that the tenancy of the defendant was for manufacturing purposes and we agree with the findings of the court below. It is to be noted in particular that it has not been pleaded in the written statement that the tenancy of the defendant was for manufacturing purposes. On this point the defendant was silent. It was simply stated that the defendant has machineries installed in the suit property and runs manufacturing business. The defendant has failed to discharge the onus lying upon it to prove that the tenancy was for manufacturing purposes.

17. Coming to the question whether the company is doing any manufacturing business, Mr. Chakraborty for the respondent has urged in support of the decree that the court below ought to have held that the defendant has no manufacturing business in the suit premises. First of all in the written statement it has not been indicated the nature of manufacturing business the defendant runs. P. W. 5 has said during examination-in-chief that the defendant has no manufacturing business but in cross-examination no suggestion has been thrown as to the nature of the alleged manufacturing business. D. W. 8, an office assistant has stated "We carry on business of gumming, slitting and packing cigarette paper. We manufacture the cigarette paper". In cross-examination this very witness has admitted, "we do not manufacture the cigarette papers which we purchase from elsewhere". The story of manufacture crumbles down. Moreover, the question is whether gumming, slitting and packing cigarette paper is manufacturing business. In the case of Kartick Chandra Dutta v. Jagesh Chandra Das reported in (1976) 3 Cal HC (N) 112 the meaning of 'manufacture' referred to in S. 106 of the T. P. Act came to be considered by me and I had occasion to discuss that point with reference to several decisions. In particular the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of S. H. Sugar Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1968 SC 922 was relied upon. In that case it was held:

"The word 'manufacture' implies a change but every change in the raw material is not manufacture. There must be such a transformation that a new and different article must emerge having a distinctive name, character and use."

In the case before us simply putting gum on the cigarette paper purchased from market and cutting the said paper into strips and then packing the same again cannot be called manufacture of cigarette paper. This is not a manufacturing process as contemplated in S. 106 of the T. P. Act. The learned trial court, in my view failed to appreciate the true import of manufacturing purposes referred to in S. 106 already mentioned. The learned Judge below went wrong to hold that the defendant carried on manufacturing business without any evidence of manufacture.

18. In view of the decision and the findings above, it must be held that six months' notice to quit as required in S. 106 of the T. P. Act in case of tenancy for manufacturing purposes was not necessary to be served on the defendant and I express no view in this case on the question whether such a notice would be necessary even if the tenancy runs from month to month.

19. There is no merit in the appeal. The petition filed by the appellant on 2-9-1976 for application of the provision of the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 to set aside the decree of the trial court stands rejected in view of our findings in the judgment.

20. The appeal is dismissed with costs. The plaintiff is to complete the construction of the building within 3 (three) years from the date when he gets khas possession of the entire premises No 1, Crooked Lane, Calcutta by evicting the tenants. He may apply for extension of time under S. 18-A of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act to the trial court which is to dispose of the application according to law.

21. Send down the records to the trial court.

A. K. JANAH, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 312

MRS. PADMA KHASTGIR, J.

M/s. Daga Films. Plaintiff v. M/s. Lotus Production and others, Defendants.

Suit No. 288 of 1970, D/- 4-7-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 8, Rr. 6-A and 6-D (as amended by Act 104 of 1976) — Counter-claim by defendant — Plaintiff discontinuing his claim in plaint — Defendant has a right to get a decree of a counter-claim.

Under the Civil P. C. (1908), a counter-claim by itself was incompetent and was enforceable by way of a separate suit. Order 8, Rule 6 read with O. 20, R. 19 empowered the court to make an order enabling the defendant to set off the plaintiff's claim and pronounce judgment for the sum due by way of counter-claim in favour of the defendant. Of course, in appropriate cases, courts could always grant equitable relief to the defendants, if necessary. Under the New Code specific provision has been made for counter-claim. Under O. 8, R. 6-A, sub-rr. (2) and (4) and O. 8, R. 6-D if the suit of the plaintiff is discontinued or dismissed, the counter-claim may nevertheless be proceeded with as in the case of a counter-claim written statement is really in the nature of a plaint. So even if the plaintiff's claim is not pressed or given up or withdrawn or breaks down for any reason whatsoever, the defendant has still the right to get a decree of a counterclaim as claimed in the written statement.

(Para 19)

Under the new amendment, by the Act of 1976 of the Civil P. C., 1908, pending suits would be governed by the provisions of the new Code. As nobody has any vested interest in procedural law, as such the new amendment would be attracted to the pending suits.

(Para 21)

In the instant case, although counter-claim has been pleaded in the written statement of the defendant the plaintiff did not seek for leave to file an additional written statement in answer to the counter-claim of the defendant nor the plaintiff at any time before the issues were settled applied to the Court for an order that such counter-claim may be excluded. Moreover, the plaintiff had discontinued its claim in the plaint in the sense that the plaintiff did not raise any issue, on the contrary, submitted before the Court that the plaintiff had accepted the position and has raised no objection so far as the counter-claim was concerned.

Held that the defendant was entitled to a decree of a counter-claim as claimed in the written statement.

J. N. Roy with Ranjan Dutt, for Plaintiff; B. K. Ghosh with P. K. Roy, for Defendant No. 2.

ORDER :— This suit was filed by Messrs. Daga Films, the plaintiff herein, against Messrs. Lotus Production and Mr. D. N. Mehta for (a) declaration that the document dated 7th April 1970 is void and/or voidable; (b) perpetual injunction restraining the defendants from enforcing the said document dated April 7, 1970 by realising any further sum from the plaintiff in respect of the film 'Juari'; (c) decree for Rs. 1,00,000/- by way of damages and (d) injunction, Receiver cost and other consequential reliefs.

2. The defendant No. 1 did not contest the suit nor filed any written statement. The defendant No. 2 Mr. D. N. Mehta filed a written statement and also contested the suit. The facts of this case are that the plaintiff carried on business in partnership as distributor of cinematographic films and the defendant No. 1 carried on business of motion pictures production at Ranjit Studio, Dadar, Bombay. The defendant No. 1 as such producer was producing a motion picture in Hindi version in black and white title 'Juari'. On 18th March 1964 an agreement was executed by and between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 wherein the defendant No. 1 assigned to the plaintiff the sole and exclusive right of execution, distribution and exploitation of the said picture 'Juari' in the Bengal Circuit territory, on various terms and conditions as contained in the original document dated 18th March 1964. The relevant clauses for the purpose of this suit are (1) in consideration of the assignment the distributors agreed to pay to the producer a sum of Rs. 1,30,000/- by way of minimum guarantee basis. Over and above, the distributors agreed to spend on behalf of the producer a sum of Rupees 40,000/- towards publicity. The producers agreed to supply to the distributor nine brand new positive release prints duly censored. It was further agreed that if the distributors required any extra prints or loan prints the same shall be supplied by the producer provided raw stocks were available and the negatives were in fit condition to take out such prints. Costs for such prints shall be paid by the distributor at the time of placing of such order. Distributors shall not cut, tamper with, edit, dupe or dub in any language the said picture. The producers agreed that they would complete the picture, get it censored and deliver to the distributors the quota release prints on or before 30th June 1964 with a grace period of two months. In case the producers fail to deliver the release prints on or before the expiry of the grace period, distributors shall be entitled to cancel the agreement and demand repayment of the amount with interest at 9%. In case the distributors fail to deliver the quota prints against stipulated payment within two months from date of the written intimation from the producers the producers shall have the option to terminate the agreement. Pursuant to that agreement, the plaintiff duly paid to the defendant No. 1 a sum of Rs. 60,000/-.

3. In October 1969 it was further agreed by and between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 that the defendant No. 1 would deliver or cause to be delivered 12 brand new prints to the plaintiff instead of 9 prints. By a letter dated 17th October 1969 the defendant No. 1 intimated to the plaintiff about further mutual agreement that was arrived at on 15th of October, 1969. Under the said agreement the plaintiff agreed to pay a total sum of Rs. 1,95,000/- on outright sale basis for perpetual period and not on minimum guarantee basis as was agreed upon by the first agreement, against delivery of 12 quota brand new released prints the plaintiff agreed out of the agreed amount of Rs. 1,35,000/- to send a bank draft of Rs. 35,000/- to Messrs. Ramnord Research Laboratories Ltd. for purchasing black and white positive stock for preparing 12 prints and will pay a sum of Rs. 1,00,000/- against delivery of 12 quota prints. The defendant No. 1 agreed to indemnify the plaintiff from any claim or loss for the said picture in the Bengal Circuit excluding Bihar and Nepal. By letter dated 3rd of July, 1968 the defendant No. 1 requested the plaintiff to get the said picture released in the Bengal Circuit and complained that the plaintiff had no inclination of taking delivery of material against payment of Rs. 20,000/-. In that letter the defendant No. 1 also stated that if the agreement was cancelled they would deposit with E. I. M. P. A., Calcutta the sum of Rs. 60,000/- so far paid by the plaintiff to enable them to negotiate and dispose of the distribution rights in respect of the said picture to any other party.

4. The defendant No. 1 assigned its right, title and/or interest in respect of the said film 'Juari' to the defendant No. 2. By letter dated 9th March 1970 the defendant No. 1 requested the plaintiff to ignore the previous arrangement of taking delivery of the prints from Messrs. Ramnord Research Laboratories Ltd. and instead requested the plaintiff to take delivery from the defendant No. 2 or Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Private Limited, Mahalakshmi, Bombay of the prints of the said picture. By letter dated 7th April, 1970 the plaintiff intimated about the release of the picture 'Juari' on and from 17th April 1970 at Roxy and other cinema houses at Calcutta and requested the defendant No. 2 to deliver 12 brand new prints and 8 loan prints for one week's use and in return the plaintiff agreed to supply 4 prints on loan for two weeks for use in Delhi and U. P. By another letter dated 7th April 1970 the plaintiff and the defendant No. 2 recorded an agreement by and between them that the defendant No. 2 would give delivery of 12 brand new prints and 8 loan prints on condition that the plaintiff would pay to Mrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Pvt. Ltd., Bombay on account of Mr. D. N. Mehta under the contract, a sum of Rs. 90,000/- against delivery of 12 brand new prints and the balance Rupees 40,000/- would be paid to Mr. D. N. Mehta on instalments as envisaged in the said letter. The said letter has been signed by Mr. D. N. Mehta, the defendant No. 2 herein and also by Mr. S. N. Daga, a partner of the plaintiff under the endorsement "agreed and confirmed".

5. According to the plaintiff, the plaintiff made all arrangements to release the said prints on and from 17th April 1970 at Roxy and other cinemas at Calcutta and called upon the defendant No. 2 to deliver 12 brand new prints and 8 loan prints. According to the plaintiff, the letter dated 7th April 1970 was obtained by the defendant No. 2 wrongfully and illegally and by exercising undue influence and/or coercion whereunder the plaintiff was to pay a sum of Rs. 90,000/- against delivery of 12 brand new prints and further amount of Rs. 40,000/- on instalments. The plaintiff's further case is that the defendant No. 2 threatened that unless the plaintiff put his signature to the document the defendant No. 2 would refuse to endorse the R/R in favour of the plaintiff in respect of one print of the said film and further stated that only after signing of the letter dated April 7, 1970 the defendant No. 2 endorsed the R/R in favour of the plaintiff.

6. On 14th April 1970 the plaintiff paid a sum of Rs. 60,000/- and took delivery of 8 prints from Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Private Ltd., as instructed by the defendant No. 2. The plaintiff also took delivery of one loan print and 6 extra prints by paying a total sum of Rs. 18,334.40.

7. After release of the said film on April 17, 1970 at Roxy and other cinemas according to the plaintiff, the plaintiff was surprised to find various complaints from various cinema halls in respect of the said prints being defective as because the prints were prepared from dupe negative. The said prints snapped frequently and were blurred and caused disturbances. The plaintiff's further case is that in spite of the repeated demand the defendant No. 2 failed and neglected and refused to supply to the plaintiff brand new prints replacing the use of the said defective prints.

8. In the written statement the defendant No. 2 in para. 10 has pleaded and also gave out the circumstances under which the Ramnord Laboratories did not deliver the release prints of the said picture even against payment of the balance sum of Rs. 1,35,000/-.

9. In view of the said wrongful conduct of the said Ramnord Laboratories, Mr. Barubax Daga on behalf of the plaintiff in order to recover the plaintiff's own investment of Rs. 60,000/- and to obtain the prints of the said picture suggested the defendant No. 2 to prepare dupe negative of the said picture in possession of the said defendant and offered to take delivery of such prints prepared from dupe negative. The defendant No. 2 agreed to the said suggestion and in January 1970 instructed the said Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Ltd. to prepare the dupe negatives from the original prints. Thereafter the agreement was arrived at in March 1970 regarding delivery of the prints to be taken from Famous Cine Laboratories instead of from Ramnord Laboratories on payment by the plaintiff of the total sum of Rs. 1,35,000/-. Because of the plaintiff's inability to pay the entire sum of Rs. 1,35,000/- Mr. Barubax Daga requested the defendant No. 2 to reduce the said amount to some extent and after mutual discussion the defendant No. 2 agreed to reduce the sum of Rupees 5,000/-. According to the defendant No. 2 the said agreement was arrived at the presence of Mr. Nirmal Kumar Bose, Solicitor acting for and on behalf of the plaintiff. In fact, it is the case of the defendant No. 2 that said Mr. Bose dictated the said letters to the plaintiff's Stenographer dated 7th April 1970. According to the defendant No. 2 the print that was handed over to the plaintiff was exhibited by the plaintiff at a private show at Roxy

Cinema in the presence of other exhibitors and also the defendant No. 2 who approved of the same. On 8th April 1970 pursuant to the request made by the defendant No. 2 Messrs. Rashed Mehta and Co. despatched from Secunderabad 3 loan prints and the same were received by the plaintiff on April 13, 1970. The plaintiff expressed its satisfaction regarding the said prints and requested the defendant No. 2 to instruct Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories Ltd. to despatch to the plaintiff 5 prints already prepared towards 3 quota prints together with 3 loan prints against payment of Rs. 60,000/-. Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories Ltd. thereupon on April 9, 1970 issued 5 brand new prints against payment of Rs. 60,240/- inclusive of packing and forwarding charges. As Mr. Daga was not able to arrange for the balance amount of Rs. 30,000/- in full he paid the said Famous Cine Laboratories Ltd. a sum of Rs. 12,000/-, Rs. 6,334.40 on 11th April 1970 and 13th April 1970 respectively and personally took delivery of the remaining 7 brand new quota prints. Out of the 7 loan prints the plaintiff returned only one print but retained with them the remaining 6 loan prints. By letters dated 22nd April 1970, 30th April 1970 and telegram dated 27th April 1970 the defendant No. 2 called upon the plaintiff to remit the balance amount payable by the plaintiff and also to return the said loan prints. The plaintiff did not reply to any of the letters and/or the telegram. On repeated requests being made by the defendant No. 2 for return of loan prints the plaintiff ultimately agreed to return one and retain the said 6 loan prints and adjusted the price of the same with the amount of Rs. 18,334.40 already paid by the plaintiff. The defendant No. 2 by his letter dated May 18, May 29, June 6, June 20 and July 13 repeatedly demanded from the plaintiff for payment of the balance amount. By the letter dated 20th June 1970 the defendant No. 2 informed the plaintiff that unless the payments were made they would be compelled to take legal action against the plaintiff. None of the said letters has been replied to by the plaintiff. The plaintiff filed the present suit on July 7, 1970 and informed this defendant by their Solicitor's letter dated July 9, 1970. The defendant No. 2 denied about various alleged complaints regarding the exhibition of the said prints. The defendant No. 2's further case is that except the plaintiff none of the other distributors of Bombay, Nizam, C. P., Berar, East Punjab, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh, Fiji,

U. S. A., etc. had put forward any complaint in respect of the dupe prints. As one song sequence was very slow, uninteresting, it was cut by the parties to please the audience. It is the case of the defendant No. 2 that prior to the filing of the present suit the plaintiff did not anywhere record in writing or protest orally regarding the alleged defects of the dupe prints. There has been no whisper about the same. According to the defendant the plaintiff has accepted the said quota prints with full knowledge that the same were prepared from dupe negative by the said Famous Cine Laboratories Ltd. and after seeing the trial run by the said print. The defendant No. 2 has made out a counterclaim in the written statement in respect of a sum of Rs. 70,000/- from the plaintiff with interest and costs. Mr. Barubax Daga was examined on commission on behalf of the plaintiff and Mr. N. Sarkar, the proprietor of the defendant No. 1 was examined on behalf of the defendant No. 2 in de bene esse. The suit was opened before me on June 23, 1977 whereupon Mr. B. K. Ghosh, Barrister-at-Law appearing with Mr. P. K. Roy, Barrister-at-Law appeared on behalf of the defendant No. 2 and suggested the following issues to be framed in the trial:

1. Is the plaintiff firm duly registered under the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 as alleged in para. 1 of the plaint?

2. Did the defendant No. 2 get the document dated April 7, 1970 signed by Sri S. N. Daga, partner of the plaintiff firm wrongfully, illegally or by exercising any undue influence or coercion as alleged in para. 14 of the plaint?

3. Were the prints of the film 'Juari' supplied by the defendant No. 2 to the plaintiff thoroughly defective or unworthy of proper public exhibition as alleged in para. 19 of the plaint?

4. Were the prints in question made from dupe negative at the suggestion and instance and/or with the knowledge of the plaintiff as alleged in the Written Statement?

5. To what reliefs, if any, are the parties entitled?

10. Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law appearing with Mr. Ranjan Dutt, Barrister-at-Law at this stage stated that his client would not press the claims made against the defendants but would contest the claim of the defendant No. 2. As such, the only issue was framed in the manner following:

To what relief, if any, is the defendant No. 2 entitled?

11. The defendant No. 2 examined himself and in his examination he supported his case. He was cross-examined at length but no material and/or substantial contradiction could be brought out from his cross-examination nor did he admit coercion and/or undue influence that was alleged to have been exercised by the defendant No. 2. The defendant No. 2 relied on the following questions so far as the examination of the defendant No. 2, defendant No. 1 and Mr. Barubax Daga is concerned are the following:

12. Questions Nos. 69, 70, 71, 73, 116, 117, 151, 338, 339, 340, 343, 346, 347, 348, 462, 521 and 522. He has further referred to the following questions on the point of outright sale by and between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 2 and the said questions are questions Nos. 30, 64, 65, 66, 67, 109, 110, 112, 116, 121, 122, 131, 132, 182, 187, 215, 220, 234, 261, 285, 357, 358, 380, 381, 438, 443, 444, 453, 455, 519, 524, 525, 531. So far as Mr. N. Sarkar's evidence is concerned, the defendant No. 2 has relied on the following questions so far as dupe negative is concerned. The said questions are 7, 8, 9, 10, 30, 31, 32, 36, 39, 68, 69, 70, 87, 94, 98, 99, 100, 101, 103, 106, 107, 110, 111, 117, 118, 134 to 136, 138, 139, 141, 142, 146, 148, 155, 156, 162, 163, 171, 172, 293, 336, 361, 363, 364, 366, 369, 370, 372, 374, 376, 377, 381, 383, 384, 388, 396, 399, 402, 404, 405.

13. On the question of outright sale the questions 19 and 20 have been referred to in the examination of Mr. N. Sarkar. Mr. Barubax Daga, defendant No. 2 has examined himself in Court and his evidence so far as dupe negatives are concerned has been mainly relied on by the defendant No. 2, the following questions: 41, 42, 44 to 52, 56, 64, 65, 71-73, 92, 94-100, 123, 126, 198, 205, 266, 285, 289, 290, 292, 318, 319, 327, 328, 332, 333, 335, 338, 340, 341, 344, 349, 350, 351, 363, 366, 369, 372, 373, 389, 392, 406, 413, 415, 424-433, 435, 438, 439, 444, 485, 489, 490, 493-497.

14. On the question of outright sale the defendant No. 1 has relied on the following questions so far as Mr. Mehta is concerned: 86, 290, 281, 309 and regarding the total length of the running of the picture 'Juari' the defendant No. 2 has deposed to that effect in questions Nos. 90, 91, 57, 70, 67, 69, 70, etc.

15. Mr. Barubax Daga was examined on commission by the plaintiff. In his examination in chief he has supported and/or admitted execution of his first agreement and/or terms therein and also various modifications and subsequent agreements that have been entered into by and between the parties. He although stated in his examination-in-chief that the letter dated 7th April, 1970 was obtained by fear and threat of cancellation of the release. The signatory to the said letter, Mr. S. N. Daga was not examined by the plaintiff to substantiate the charge of coercion and undue influence. In answer to question No. 73 put to him in examination-in-chief he has stated that by "brand new prints" he meant those prints which were never exhibited in any cinema house before. Although subsequently he has tried to change his answer in answer to a leading question put to him by his counsel Mr. Dutt. Although he has stated in his examination-in-chief in answer to question 107 that the plaintiff has made complaints regarding the defective nature of the prints supplied to the plaintiff there does not seem to be any letter written by or on behalf of the plaintiff to the defendant No. 2 otherwise that letter would have disclosed and proved in this suit. Save and except that the plaintiff has tried to make out the case of defective nature of dupe prints and also of the case of undue influence and coercion at the time of execution of documents dated 7th April 1970 not a single letter was ever written by the plaintiff to the defendant regarding the same. It would also appear from the conduct of the plaintiff that after receipts of 12 brand new prints and 7 loan prints of the film 'Juari' the plaintiff did not complain to the defendant No. 2 regarding his objections. It is a positive case of the defendant No. 2 that at the instance of Mr. B. B. Daga dupe prints were prepared from one original negative by the said Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories Ltd. and at his instance dupe prints were prepared. Had not that been the position the plaintiff would not have accepted and/or exhibited the dupe prints but would have straightway returned the same to the defendant No. 1 under protest. In fact the film 'Juari' has run in Bengal area for 3 weeks, which according to the practice is the normal run of a black and white picture. After receiving the prints, making part payment and fully utilising the prints the plaintiff for the first time made his case in the plaint which is contrary to the evidence and to his own conduct.

16. In this case the contractual obligation was subsequently converted into an outright sale which was accepted by the plaintiff expressly and/or by implication. In this respect reference may be made to S. 42 and section 13 of the Sale of Goods Act. S. 42 of the Sale of Goods Act provides— "The buyer is deemed to have accepted the goods when he intimates to the seller that he has accepted them, or when the goods have been delivered to him and he does any act in relation to them which is inconsistent with the ownership of the seller or when after the lapse of a reasonable time he retains the goods without intimating to the seller that he has rejected them."

17. Applying the above principles to the facts of the present case it would appear that the plaintiff not only accepted the goods but in fact used the same and has not decided to return the said prints and in fact the said prints are still with the plaintiff. Moreover, the plaintiff has not exercised its right under the section of the Sale of Goods Act. The property in the goods had passed as soon as the delivery was given in respect of the same and they were appropriated by the plaintiff irrespective of the payment of the price.

18. The next question arose whether the counter-claim is by itself maintainable. The expression "counter-claim" found no mention in the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. Still it cannot be said that the said expression was foreign to law. In a number of cases the expressions like "counter-claim" or "cross-claim" will be found to have been used in connection with the plea of set off.

19. Under the Civil Procedure Code a counter-claim by itself was incompetent and was enforceable by way of a separate suit. Order 8 R. 6 read with O. 20 R. 19 empowered the court to make an order enabling the defendant to set off the plaintiff's claim and pronounce judgment for the sum due by way of counter-claim in favour of the defendant. Of course, in appropriate cases, courts, could always grant equitable relief to the defendants, if necessary. As set out hereinafter, under the New Code specific provision has been made for counter-claim. Under O. 8, R. 6-A sub-rs. (2) and (4) and O. 8 R. 6-D if the suit of the plaintiff is discontinued or dismissed the counter-claim may nevertheless be proceeded with as in the case of a counter-claim written statement is really in the nature of a plaint. So even if the plaintiff's claim is not pressed or given up or withdrawn or breaks down for any reason whatsoever, the defendant has still the right to get a decree of a counter-claim as claimed in the written statement.

20. O. 8 R. 6-A of the amended Civil Procedure Code provides — "A defendant in a suit may in addition to his right of pleading a set-off under R. 6, set up by way of counter-claim against the claim of the plaintiff any right or claim in respect of a cause of action accruing to the defendant against the plaintiff either before or after the filing of the suit but before the defendant has delivered his defence or before the time limited for delivery of his defence has expired, whether such counter-claim is in the nature of a claim for damages or not: provided that such counter-claim shall not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the court."

Clause (2) — "Such counter-claim shall have the same effect as a cross suit so as to enable the court to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original claim and on the counter-claim".

Clause (3) — "The plaintiff shall be at liberty to file written statement in answer to the counter-claim of the defendant within such period as may be fixed by the court".

Clause (4) — "The counter-claim shall be treated as plaint and governed by the rules applicable to plaint".

21. Under the new amendment, by the Act of 1976 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 pending suits would be governed by the provisions of the new Code. As nobody has any vested interest in procedural law, as such the new amendment would be attracted in this case. On this point there is a Division Bench Judgment of this Court reported in AIR 1930 Cal 422. In that case it has been decided that no litigant has any vested interest on procedural law and any amendment to the procedure would govern also pending matters before the court. In this case, although counter-claim has been pleaded in the written statement of the defendant No. 2 the plaintiff did not seek for leave to file an additional written statement in answer to the counter-claim of the defendant nor the plaintiff at any time before the issues were settled applied to this Court for an order that such counter-claim may be excluded. Moreover, the plaintiff has discontinued its claim in the plaint in the sense that the plaintiff did not raise any issue, on the contrary, submitted before the Court that the plaintiff has accepted the position and has raised no objection so far as the counter-claim is concerned.

22. Mr. J. N. Roy on behalf of the plaintiff although did not press his claim but most vehemently opposed the defendant No. 2's claim as made out in the written statement. Amongst other points his main point was that the defendant No. 2 has irrevocably assigned his right to Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Pvt. Ltd. to the extent of Rs. 90,000/-. As such no decree could be passed in favour of the plaintiff for the balance sum of Rs. 30,000/- as the sum of Rs. 60,000/- has already been paid by the plaintiff to the said Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Ltd. In this respect, he referred to S. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act as also Division Bench Judgment of this High Court reported in (1906) ILR 33 Cal 702 and also (1907) ILR 34 Cal 289. There is no doubt that the benefits of a contract can be assigned and there can also be no dispute over the principle as laid down in the above two cases. On principle it is true that the benefits of a contract under a contract can be assigned. An order for payment of money is not an assignment. An assignment of a chose in action must be made in writing under the law signed by the transferor or his duly authorised agent but no particular form of words is necessary provided the words used sufficiently indicate the transferor's intention to assign the chose in action. The language is immaterial if the meaning is clear. An order for payment of money is not the same thing as an assignment of debt but it is only a direction to pay the amount due. The test is whether the right of the seller of the goods to the price of the same has been transferred to a third party by an effectual assignment and the assignee becomes entitled as of right to the payment. In a case reported in AIR 1926 Cal 447 the Division Bench Judgment of this Hon'ble High Court presided over by the then Chief Justice Sanderson and Buckland J. upheld the decision of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice C. C. Ghose and it was held that order for payment of money is not an assignment of debt. In that case the direction "remit to B on behalf of E" was held not to amount to any assignment but only an order for payment. Applying the above principles to the facts of this case I find that it would appear from the letter dated 7th April 1970 that the plaintiff and the defendant No. 2 agreed that the plaintiff would pay to Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Pvt. Ltd., Mahalakshmi, Bombay on account of the defendant No. 2 a sum of Rs. 90,000/- against delivery of 12 brand new prints. It would also appear from the letter dated 18th May 1970 that the plaintiff agreed to make the payment to Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Pvt. Ltd. on account of the defendant No. 2. Neither in the pleadings, correspondence nor in the evidence it has ever transpired that there has been an assignment of the benefits of the contract by the defendant No. 2 in favour of Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Ltd. to the extent of Rs. 90,000/-. It is for the first time at the time of the argument that this point has been taken which is not borne out by the facts of this case. Had there been a true and proper assignment in favour of Messrs. Famous Cine Laboratories and Studios Ltd. by the defendant No. 2 then the plaintiff would have immediately protested to the defendant No. 2 regarding the claim of Rs. 30,000/- in answer to the various demand letters sent by the defendant No. 2 to the plaintiff. Moreover, Mr. Daga in his examination on commission has nowhere stated about the said alleged assignment.

23. Applying the above principles and in view of the facts stated above, I dismiss the plaintiff's claim in the suit and pass a decree for the sum of Rs. 70,000/- in favour of the defendant No. 2 together with interim and further interest @ 6 per cent and cost against the plaintiff.

24. Certified for two counsel.

Counter-claim allowed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 318

M. M. DUTT, J.

Loken Bose, Petitioner v. Sm. Ashima Dey and another, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 2993 of 1976, D/- 16-6-1977.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 34 — Suit for ejectment — Section 34 does not bar grant of relief under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2, Civil P. C. to defendant. (Paras 2, 3)

J. N. Bakshi, for Petitioner; R. N. Mitra, for Opposite Party No. 1.

ORDER :— This Rule is at the instance of the tenant-defendant in a suit for ejectment and it is directed against an order of the learned Munsif dismissing his application under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2 of the Civil P. C. In the said application, the defendant prayed for a temporary mandatory injunction, directing the plaintiff landlord to restore water supply to the first floor of premises No. 4/1, Russa Road, South First Lane, Jadabpur, Calcutta. The learned Munsif dismissed the said application of the defendant on the ground that in view of S. 34 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, the application was not maintainable. In other words, the learned Munsif took the view that in a suit for ejectment the court will have no jurisdiction to entertain an application for the grant of relief in respect of matters as provided for in S. 34 of the Act.

2. Under S. 34, the Controller has been authorised to grant relief to the tenant for the making of repairs and taking of measures for the maintenance of essential services. There is nothing in S. 34 or in any other provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 which bars either expressly or by necessary implications the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to grant the same or similar relief to a tenant who is a defendant in a suit for ejectment. It is true that the remedy under S. 34 is a speedy remedy which a tenant can avail of for the restoration of essential services to and repairs of the premises. But, if the tenant has an additional remedy under any other law, I do not think that he should be deprived of that remedy.

3. It is, however, contended on behalf of the plaintiff opposite party that as a special remedy has been provided for in the statute for the grant of relief to the tenant as mentioned in S. 34, it should be presumed that by necessary implication the legislature has barred the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to grant the same relief to the tenant in a suit for ejectment. I am unable to accept this contention. The bar of jurisdiction of a Civil Court should not be readily inferred. It is not the intention of the legislature to drive a tenant to a separate proceeding under S. 34 to avail of the relief as provided for therein. If, in spite of the fact that a suit for eviction is pending, the tenant has to approach the Controller under S. 34 for the restoration of essential services to the premises, it will mean multiplicity of proceedings. Moreover, a temporary injunction under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2 of the Civil P. C. is granted in aid of the legal right of the party who seeks such an injunction. The duration of such injunction will be for the period during which the suit will continue. It does not at all stand to reason that by enacting S. 34, the legislature has impliedly curtailed the power of the Court under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2 of the Civil P. C. in respect of the matters provided for in S. 34. In a suit for eviction, the power of the court to grant temporary mandatory injunction for the restoration of essential services, in my view, has not been fettered or restricted by the provision of S. 34 of the Act. In these circumstances, I hold that the learned Munsif was not right in dismissing the application of the defendant petitioner on the ground that it was not maintainable. The learned Munsif has, therefore, failed to exercise his jurisdiction vested in him by law by dismissing the application for temporary injunction. The order of the learned Munsif is accordingly set aside and he is directed to dispose of the application on merits in accordance with law. The Rule is made absolute, but there will be no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

Rabindranath Mitter, for Appellant; Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, for Respondent.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an appeal against judgment and decree dated 31st of May 1974 passed by Sri S. K. Chatterjee, Additional District Judge, 10th Court, Alipore, in Title Appeal No. 134 of 1973 affirming those of Sri H. Banerjee, Munsif, 3rd Court, Alipore, passed in Title Suit No. 209 of 1966 on 31st of May 1972.

2. The respondent filed a suit for recovery of possession, mandatory injunction and for damages against the appellant on the ground that licence granted to the defendant in respect of the suit land had been revoked. The defendant contested the suit claiming to be a tenant in respect of the suit land being a part of 44, S. R. Das Road and measuring about 7 cottas. The suit was decreed and the decree was confirmed by the appellate court. A second appeal was filed by the defendant being S. A. 9 of 1970. This Court agreed with the concurrent findings of the courts below that the defendant was a licensee and his licence had been validly terminated. As regards damages for the unauthorised occupation of the suit land this Court found that there was no sufficient material on record to decide whether the sum of Rs. 10/- per diem as decreed by the courts below was a reasonable amount of compensation or not. As such this question was left open. His Lordship agreed with the courts below that the defendant was liable to pay damages but the determination of the rate of damages payable by the defendant was relegated to the proceeding under O. 20, R. 12 of the Civil P. C. This Court directed: "The trial court while deciding the amount of damages which the plaintiff may be entitled to recover will also record finding as regards the rate of damages payable by the defendant on the evidence already on record and on further evidence if adduced by the parties. I accordingly dismiss this appeal and affirm the judgment and decree of the lower appellate court subject to the modification that the plaintiff would get a decree for damages since 15th May 1966 till he recovers possession of the suit land but the rate of damages and the quantum of the same would be decided by the trial court in the subsequent proceeding on payment of proper court-fees". After remand the trial court held that the plaintiff is entitled to recover mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 10/- per diem from 15-5-1966 till recovery of possession. It was also ordered that the plaintiff would get mesne profits at the aforesaid rate from 1-6-1972 till the recovery of possession on payment of additional court-fees. The order was passed by the learned Munsif on 31-5-1972. The learned appellate court affirmed the decision of the trial court and the cross-objection filed by the plaintiff with regard to costs was allowed. Being aggrieved, the defendant has come up to this Court.

3. Mr. Rabindranath Mitter, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant, in the first place, submits that the court below overlooked the provisions of O. 20, R. 12 and were wrong in allowing the plaintiff mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit till the recovery of possession. Order 20, Rule 12 of the Code reads as follows:—

"(1) Where a suit is for the recovery of possession of immovable property and for rent or mesne profits, the Court may pass a decree—

- (a) for the possession of the property;
- (b) for the rent or mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit or directing an inquiry as to such rent or mesne profits;
- (c) directing an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until—
 - (i) the delivery of possession to the decree-holder,
 - (ii) the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through the Court, or
 - (iii) the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever event first occurs.

(2) Where an inquiry is directed under Cl. (b) or Cl. (c), a final decree in respect of the rent or mesne profits shall be passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry".

Mr. Mitter draws our attention to Cl. (c) of O. 20, R. 12 which provides that "the Court may pass a decree directing an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession or the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor or the expiration of three years from the date of the decree whichever event first occurs", and that being so, in a case where the plaintiff has not yet recovered possession he cannot get a decree for mesne profits beyond three years from the passing of the decree. Mr. Mitter, however, concedes that the decree passed by the trial court was merged with the decree of this Court. This Court passed the decree on June 21, 1971. Therefore the plaintiff is entitled to get mesne profits from 15-5-1966 up to 21-6-1974 and not beyond that. The courts below were wrong in passing a decree for mesne profits from 1-6-1972 till the recovery of possession. In support of his contention Mr. Mitter first refers to a decision reported in AIR 1959 Bom 536, (Bhagwant Vinayak v. Radhakisan Gangabisan). In this case his Lordship had to consider the provisions of O. 20, R. 12 and it was held that "when a decree is passed for payment of mesne profits until delivery of possession, there is always an implied term in the decree that mesne profits are not to be awarded for a period of more than three years in any case". In coming to such conclusion his Lordship relied on (1900) ILR 27 Cal 951; 27 Ind

App 110 (PC), (Girish Chunder Lahiri v. Shoshi Shikhareswar Roy). In this case it was held by the Judicial Committee that "the expression 'mesne profits' in a decree include interest thereon but may not be allowed for any time later than three years from date of decree." Mr. Mitter also relies on (1900) 27 Ind App 209 (PC), (Raja Bhup Indar Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bahadur Singh). In this case: a decree in ejectment dated November 12, 1887 declared the plaintiff entitled to future mesne profits, and was eventually affirmed by the Queen in Council on May 11, 1895. It was held "that mesne profits were recoverable upto May 11, 1895 and for a further period not exceeding three years until recovery of possession".

4. Mr. Mitter next refers to a Bench decision of Allahabad High Court reported in AIR 1959 All 242 (Kumar Jagdish Chandra v. Bulaqi Das). It was held by their Lordships that "A decree for mesne profits till delivery of possession cannot be interpreted as a decree for the realisation of the mesne profits till the actual delivery of possession which may never take place. It cannot be contemplated that the decree-holders by failing to take action to obtain possession could create a right in themselves to recover mesne profits upto an imaginary date for the delivery of possession". It was held that "the decree for mesne profits till recovery of possession should be construed as an award of mesne profits upto three years from the date of the decree in view of R. 12 (1) (c) of O. 20". Mr. Mitter raised a point to the effect that an application under O. 20, R. 12 cannot be entertained until the period for which the mesne profits have been awarded has expired. In this case mesne profits have been awarded till recovery of possession and until the decree-holder gets recovery of possession an enquiry cannot be made under O. 20, R. 12. In support of his contention Mr. Mitter refers to a decision reported in ILR 4 Pat 57: (AIR 1924 Pat 781), (Karakhan Missir v. Jagdeo Missir). It has been held that "Where a decree awards future mesne profits the right to apply for ascertainment of the amount of mesne profits does not accrue until the period for which the mesne profits have been awarded has expired." Their Lordships of the Patna High Court in coming to the above conclusion relied on (1910) 11 Cal LJ 541. (Gangadhar Marwari v. Lachman Singh).

5. Mr. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent, contends in the first place, that Chittatosh Mookerjee, J. in S. A. 9 of 1970 has clearly directed that the plaintiff would get a decree for damages since 15th May 1966 till he recovers possession of the suit land. In such circumstances, the appellant cannot now agitate that the plaintiff is not entitled to get mesne profits beyond three years from the date of the decree. Secondly, it is contended that the plaintiff is entitled to file more than one application and get more than one decree for mesne profits on payment of court-fees. In support of his contention he first refers to a decision reported in (1959) 63 Cal WN 334: (AIR 1959 Cal 76), (Kanai Lal Maity v. Shyam Kishore Das). Their Lordships held that "There is nothing in O. 20, R. 12 of the Code or any principle of law to prevent a further application from being made and a fresh decree being passed to such relief in terms of the decree already obtained. Although sub-r. (2) speaks of a final decree to be passed in accordance with the results of such enquiry it does not consequently follow that no other decree can be made previous to that final decree". Mr. Banerjee also relies to a decision reported in AIR 1958 Mad 462 (Nallasivam Chettiar, minor by next friend Subbiah Chettiar v. Avudayammal, minor by father and guardian Ekambaram Chetti). In this case his Lordship lays down: "Between the preliminary decree and the final decree the lower court can pass many interim final decrees. And when the lower court adjudicates upon this matter it can be treated as an interim final decree." None of the decisions referred to above have, however, laid down that the plaintiff can get a decree for mesne profits beyond three years from the decree where he has not recovered possession. Reference may be made to a decision reported in AIR 1963 SC 1405 (Fateh Chand v. Balkishan Dass). At page 1413. in para. 19 their Lordships ordered that the plaintiff would be entitled to mesne profits at a certain rate together with interest at the rate of 6% till the date of delivery of possession subject to the restriction prescribed by O. 20, R. 12 (1) (c) of the Civil P. C. The restriction is that the plaintiff would not get a decree beyond three years from the date of the decree in a case where possession has not yet been delivered.

6. Thus considering the provisions of O. 20, R. 12 of the Code and the decisions referred to above we have no hesitation to hold that the plaintiff is entitled to get decree for mesne profits from 15-5-1966 i.e. the date of the institution of the suit till 21-6-1974 i.e. three years from the date of the decree passed by this Court in S. A. 9 of 1970.

7. Mr. Mitter next contends that this Court found that there was no determination by the courts below as regards the quantum of the compensation payable by the defendant for occupying the suit land after the licence was revoked, and that there was no sufficient material to decide whether the sum of Rs. 10/- per diem was a reasonable amount of compensation or not. The question was left open and the trial court was directed to determine the rate of damages on the evidence already on record and on further evidence. Mr. Mitter submits that in ascertaining the rate of damages the learned courts below ought to have considered the fact that for the back portion of the disputed land, the area of which is almost the same as that of the disputed land, the defendant is a tenant at a rate of Rs. 72/- per month. This ought to have been the basis for determination of the rate of damages as according to Mr. Mitter this is the best evidence available. Both the courts below have taken into consideration the fact that the rent of back portion of the land is Rs. 72/- per month. The courts below have considered all other relevant facts and circumstances and have concurrently come to the conclusion that the rate of damages should be Rs. 10/- per diem. We are not inclined to interfere with the said determination. Mr. Mitter also submits that the learned appellate court below was wrong in allowing the cross-objection and granting the plaintiff the decree for costs. We do not think that the learned appellate court below has done any wrong in allowing the cross-objection.

8. In the result, the appeal is allowed in part on contest. The judgment and decree passed by the courts below allowing the plaintiff to recover mesne profits till recovery of possession are set aside and it is decreed that the plaintiff will get mesne profits from 15-5-1966 till 21-6-1974. The other portion of the decree is hereby affirmed. In the circumstances of the case there will be no order as to costs.

B. C. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Appeal partly allowed.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND GANENDRA NARAYAN RAY, JJ.

Shibapada Tripathy and others, Appellants v. State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

A. F. O. O. No. 111 of 1977, D/- 6-5-1977.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Petition under, for enforcement of commitment or representation made by Government or authority acted upon by petitioner — Order granting relief — Construction of.

Where in a petition under Art. 226 for enforcement of a commitment or representation made by Government or authority acted upon by the petitioner, such commitment or representation in material aspects is the primary and basic material fact in the cause of action for relief claimed and it is the basis and fundamental condition for grant of the relief. Even if it is not expressly provided for in the order granting the relief, whether on consent or otherwise, it remains and continues to remain an implicit but effective condition of the relief as without it the relief granted will be one without jurisdiction in an application under Art. 226. Its absence in the order does not extinguish or affect the basic arrangement founded in Government's commitment, which remained and continues to remain an implicit but effective condition of the order. Kalipada Sinha and Parimal Das, for Appellants; Somendra Ch. Bose and Suprakash Banerjee (for Nos. 1-4) and B. C. Dutt and D. K. Choudhury (for No. 5), for Respondents.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This is an appeal from the orders dated November 12 and 24, 1976 passed by M. M. Dutt J. modifying his earlier order dated August 5, 1976 disposing the Civil Rule No. 18143 (W) of 1975.

2. For the establishment of Haldia Dock, lands of residents in Mouza Debhog whereon, it was alleged, their homes and hearths were situated, were acquired under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 by the State of West Bengal for the Board of Trustees for the Port of Calcutta (hereinafter referred to as the "Calcutta Port Trust"). There were negotiations between the State Government and the representatives of the people of Mouza Debhog for rehabilitation of the inhabitants of Mouza Debhog affected by the said acquisition and the Government of West Bengal by its letter of January 8, 1974 communicated its decision to the Collector of 24-Parganas to allot plots to the affected families of the Mouza Debhog for rehabilitation out of lands adjacent to the town area to be obtained from the Calcutta Port Trust, on payment of costs of acquisition, and 4 cottah plot without development was to be allotted to each affected family.

3. The Collector of Midnapore by its letter dated July 17, 1974 informed the Secretary, Haldia Mulyan Committee, as representing the local people, to arrange for deposit of Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. to the Calcutta Port Trust as costs of acquisition of 28.38 acres of such land for allotment to affected families of Mouza Debhog. The Collector further advised that on such deposit the said under-developed land would be handed over to the Secretary for allotment to the evicted families of Mouza Debhog. The same position was reiterated in the letter of the Special Land Acquisition Officer, Haldia Project, Midnapore dated August 14, 1974 and letter dated October 1, 1974 (Annexs. B, D, G & I respectively of the petition of motion in C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974 referred to hereinafter).

4. Before the arrangements were finalised, it was alleged, on or about November 3, 1974 some residents of Mouza Debhog were served with notice under S. 47 of the Act by the Government without honouring the commitments aforesaid and informing them that as they failed to deliver possession of the lands acquired, possession of such lands would be taken by the Additional District Magistrate, Tamluk on November 8, 1974. Some of residents of the Mouza numbering 160 thereupon moved an application in this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution challenging the acquisition and for appropriate writs commanding the respondents the State of West Bengal and the Calcutta Port Trust to show cause why the notices for possession should not be cancelled and directing them not to take possession of the properties of the petitioners until they were provided with suitable accommodation as disclosed in Government communications referred to above. On this application Civil Rule No. 6665(W) of 1974 was issued on November 5, 1974 with interim injunction restraining them from taking possession of the lands acquired in Debhog Mouza.

5. The Rule was contested by the respondents by filing affidavits-in-opposition and was ultimately disposed of by A. K. Mookherjee, J. by order dated April 8, 1975 in effect on consent. It was provided therein as follows:—

(i) The petitioners in the Rule would deposit the costs of acquisition being Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. of the lands described in the schedule to the order within three months from date. The schedule was subsequently modified in minor aspects.

(ii) Upon such payment the Calcutta Port Trust would make over possession thereof to the Special Land Acquisition Officer, Haldia who would in his turn make over possession of such lands within one week thereafter to the authorised representatives of the petitioners.

(iii) Within November 30, 1975 the petitioners would make over possession of the acquired lands in their possession and in default possession would be taken "without recourse to law".

(iv) The Special Land Acquisition Officer (Haldia) Midnapore on receipt of possession of acquired lands from the petitioners would forthwith deliver possession of the same to the Calcutta Port Trust.

6. It may be noted here that the acquisition of lands described in the schedule to the said order on payment of costs of acquisition thereof by the petitioners therein was intended for the rehabilitation of the families of Debhog Mouza who were affected by the impugned acquisition. Each of such family was to be allotted four cottah plot of undeveloped land out of lands to be acquired aforesaid in accordance with the commitment made by the Government which was also the petitioners' case and the basis of such proposed acquisition under the order though the same was not expressly mentioned therein.

7. In terms of the order of April 8, 1975 in C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974, the petitioners therein (excluding some about 26 who did not make any proportionate contribution and as such not interested) made payment of the entire amount of Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. as the costs of acquisition of land for rehabilitation of the persons of Mouza Debhog affected by the acquisition of the Calcutta Port Trust. These petitioners formed a co-operative housing society named as Debhog Rehabilitation Colony Development Co-operative Society Ltd. which confined its membership to persons evicted by Haldia Dock Project and intended to be rehabilitated in Debhog. Thereafter the petitioners approached the respondents for delivery of lands to them and they were informed that the possession would be given to one of their nominee selected unanimously. The petitioner No. 107 of the 'Basic' petition appeared before the Special Land Acquisition Officer Haldia Project with authorisation letter in his favour by 126 petitioners out of the original petitioners, the other remaining petitioners did not sign as they did not contribute towards compensation money and as such were not interested. The document of authorisation provided that possession was to be made either to Shibapada Tripathy or to him as the Secretary of the Society. The respondent No. 3 however did not accept the authorisation letter and it was thus evident, it was alleged, that there was no intention on the part the said respondent to give possession of the lands in pursuance of the order in C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974 and the respondents were trying to avoid giving possession to the petitioners.

8. On the above allegations the said 126 petitioners moved another application under Art. 226 of the Constitution praying for issuance of appropriate writs directing the Special Land Acquisition Officer Haldia Project to give possession of land of the Schedule to aforesaid order dated April 8, 1975 in Civil Rule No. 6665(W) of 1974 in terms thereof to Shibapada Tripathy as their authorised representative or to him as the Secretary of the Society and in the meantime not to take possession of hearths and homes of the petitioners situated in acquired lands for Haldia Port. In this application other remaining petitioners of the earlier rule were made pro forma respondents. This Court on this application issued a Rule on November 24, 1975 being Civil Rule No. 18143(W) of 1975 in terms of the prayer granting an ad interim injunction restraining the respondents from taking possession of the said acquired lands.

9. The Rule was opposed by the respondents who filed two sets of affidavits-in-opposition one by the Calcutta Port Trust respondent No. 5 and the other by the State of West Bengal and its concerned Officers respondents Nos. 1 to 4. The common objection was that in absence of all the petitioners the order of April 8, 1975 could not be enforced. It was further stated that the acquisition of lands for the Haldia Project was legally and validly made. The Calcutta Port Trust admitted that there were some mistakes in respect of the lands of the schedule to the order, for rectification whereof, steps were being made. It was submitted that the President and the Secretary of the Haldia Mulyan Committee were at the back of the society interested in selling lands at higher prices for their own benefit. The authorisation in favour of Shibapada Tripathy, it was contended, was rightly refused as he was not authorised by all the petitioners of the C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974.

10. The Special Land Acquisition Officer Haldia Project, affirming the affidavit-in-opposition on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1-4 stated that the letter of authorisation produced before him did not appear to be genuine and as such he wanted to verify the same. The petitioner No. 1 wanted 2 days time to resubmit the document and that the same was not filed till then. Accordingly it was recorded by him that the petitioners failed to comply with the directions of this Court. Some other petitioners of C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974 informed by letters that they were not interested in rehabilitation nor had they authorised anyone as their representative. Further there was written report from Sasadhar Samui of Debhog that the Society was demanding from affected persons price at the rate of Rs. 200/- per decimal, otherwise, no land would be allotted and in fact such price had been realised from many residents of Debhog. In view of the non-compliance by the petitioners of the provisions of order of April 8, 1975 by unanimously selecting their representative the respondent No. 3 was unable to deliver possession of lands acquired for purpose of rehabilitation of Debhog residents and it was no longer possible to implement the order. As however the lands acquired by the Calcutta Port Trust on payment of full compensation were urgently required for Haldia Port Project, it was prayed that the respondents should be given leave to take steps for obtaining possession. Except as aforesaid all other allegations were denied.

11. The petitioners filed affidavit-in-reply to the above affidavits denying allegations therein made but there was no effective denial to the allegations that the society had been charging higher rates for allotment of land out of the lands acquired for rehabilitation as aforesaid.

12. The rule came up for hearing before M. M. Dutt, J. on August 5, 1976 and the learned Judge directed the petitioners who signed the letter of authority to appear before the respondent No. 3 for verification of signatures by him. On his satisfaction about the signatures of the petitioners in the letter of authority the said respondent would deliver possession of the lands described in the schedule to the said order to their representative by August 30, 1976. His Lordship further directed the respondent No. 3 to keep back such quantity of land not less than 4 cottahs per head as might be allotted to the remaining petitioners, who till then were not signatories to the said letter of authority, on proof of their signature and payment of proportionate compensation. On his satisfaction on those aspects the said respondent would deliver possession of their share of land to them accordingly.

13. In any event it was further directed the petitioners were to give possession of acquired lands by December 31, 1976 failing which the respondents were given leave to take possession of acquired lands without reference to any legal proceeding.

14. By order dated August 9, 1976 the respondent No. 3 was directed to accept signatures of two petitioners who were in jail if such signatures were authenticated by the Jail Authority.

15. The petitioners thereafter filed an application on August 26, 1976 for certain directions for delivery of possession to Shibapada Tripathy in respect of some other petitioners also whose signatures could not be verified in accordance with the directions under the order dated August 5, 1976 and for allotment of lands to persons other than the petitioners affected by the acquisition from lands kept for the remaining petitioners of the original rule in event of their failure within a specified time to pay proportionate costs at the rate of four cottahs for each person. The application was opposed by the respondents Nos. 1 to 4 as no account books were produced before the Special Land Acquisition Officer to establish the proportionate costs of acquisition paid by the petitioners, in view of the fact that the land was acquired for rehabilitation of 300 to 400 affected families.

16. By order dated November 12, 1976 the learned Judge directed the Collector to consider the account books and documents to establish the contributions made by each of the petitioners and, if he was so satisfied, to distribute land to the petitioners "through their authorised representative proportionate to the contribution made by each of the petitioners, subject to a maximum quantity of 4 cottahs". Further such allotments of land could be made jointly to the extent of each of the petitioners' land proportionate to his contribution subject to the maximum of 4 cottahs through the said representative.

17. The petitioners thereafter filed another application on Nov. 22, 1976 for modification of the order dated Nov. 12, 1976. It was stated therein that the original proposal of January 8, 1974 for allotment of 4 cottahs of land to each affected family of Mouza Debhog was superseded by letter of July 17, 1974 wherein the petitioners were directed to pay a sum of Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. for total area of 28-38 acres or 1700 cottahs, in terms of the order in Civil Rule No. 6665(W) of 1974. Further as the land was low lying area, the same would have to be developed and roads and tanks to be made which would cover 12/14 acres. The direction in subsequent order providing for maximum allotment of 4 cottahs to each petitioner was in conflict with earlier order and was unworkable, as costs of land acquired on that basis would only amount to Rupees 98,859.00 p. while the petitioners had to deposit Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. to avoid forcible dispossession and over Rs. 2 lacs would be lying with Government for no purpose.

18. On this application the learned Judge passed the following order on November 24, 1976.

"After hearing the learned Advocates for both the parties my order dated November 12, 1976 is modified to this extent that the Collector shall allot four cottahs of land to each of the petitioners provided he has paid the price for the same. The date for delivery of possession by the petitioner is extended till January 31, 1977.

It is stated by Mr. Dutta appearing for the Port Commissioners that as soon as the lands are distributed to the petitioners, the surplus money, if any, shall be refunded to the petitioners' Advocate Mr. Parimal Das, who is on record. The petitioners will be at liberty to make representations to the Government for allotment of more lands for the purpose of development.

This application is thus disposed of without any order as to costs."

These orders of November 12 and 24, 1976 are the subject-matter of this appeal.

19. Mr. K. P. Sinha learned Advocate for the petitioners appellants contended that the order in C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974 dated April 8, 1975 was passed on consent and the terms thereof could not be varied, except by consent of all parties, even by the court. He has referred to the decision in Sailendra v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 346 which lays down the proposition that a judgment by consent or default is an effective estoppel between the parties as a judgment whereby the court exercises its mind on a contested case. He further submitted that it is not open to a party to approbate and reprobate and take inconsistent position, when acting on a position taken earlier, the other party has acted upon the same culminating in an order of court. He submitted that the order of April 8, 1974 directed the petitioners to deposit Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. for acquisition of about 28 acres of land and when the amount has been duly deposited, the respondents should not be heard to contend that the petitioners are entitled to much less area at this stage.

20. Reliance was placed on the decision in Union of India v. Anglo Afgan Agencies AIR 1968 SC 718, wherein it was held that when a representation by Government is acted upon by a party, the Government is bound to carry out the promise. In this case also it was submitted, the petitioners have acted upon by the representations made by the Government and as such the Government is bound to give complete effect to the order passed by Court on basis of such representation.

21. Mr. Sinha also referred to the decision in Union of India v. Kishorilal, AIR 1959 SC 1362, and contended that the order of April 8, 1975 passed on consent concluded the arrangement between the parties in clear and unambiguous terms and it is not necessary nor permissible to look into any anterior fact. Accordingly it was not permissible for the learned Judge to fix the limit of allotment of land to 4 cottahs of land to each of the petitioners contrary to the provisions of the order on compromise as also his earlier order.

22. Anticipating a possible objection that a joint contract must be enforceable jointly if at all, Mr. Sinha submitted that the order of April 8, 1975 embodied a joint contract with petitioners on one hand and the respondents on the other. If some petitioners do not join for enforcement of the contract, such contract even in terms of the impugned orders has been made as it could be made, enforceable in part in respect of the petitioners who have moved for the purpose.

23. It is well known that when land is acquired under the provisions of Land Acquisition Act, 1894, there is no obligation in law on the Government or the acquiring authority to provide for rehabilitation of persons as may be affected by such acquisition though as a welfare State provision for rehabilitation is often made on humanitarian grounds without legal obligation. The same was the position here in the case of the acquisition of lands for Haldia project on behalf of the Calcutta Port Trust. As however representations and appeals were made to the persons in authority on behalf of such affected persons the Government in consultation with the Calcutta Port Trust arranged for acquisition of an area of approximately 30 acres for rehabilitation of persons affected by such acquisition. The letter of January 8, 1974 to the Collector, Midnapore which discloses the decision of the Government is to the following effect.

"The undersigned (Special Officer and Dy. Secretary Ex-officio to the Government of West Bengal) is directed to say that some representatives of the people of Mouza Debhog whose lands have been subjected to acquisition for the Haldia Dock Project saw the Minister-in-charge of this Department a few days back and expressed their readiness to co-operate with Government in the matter of delivering peaceful possession of land to Government provided the persons affected were given plots for rehabilitation from the land adjacent to the township area already acquired for the Calcutta Port Commissioners. During the discussion it was made clear to the representatives that subject to the approval of the Calcutta Port Commissioners the land mentioned by them may be available to the affected families on payment of cost of acquisition thereof by them and also on the distinct understanding that the same would not be developed by any agency before allotment.

Since the representatives agreed to receive allotment of plots for rehabilitation on the above condition and also gave their assurance to co-operate with Government in the matter of finalisation of acquisition proceedings including making over possession of the land, it is requested that arrangement may please be made to allot 4 cottahs plot without any development, to each of the affected families of mouza Debhog on prior payment of pro-rata acquisition costs thereof to the Calcutta Port Commissioners out of the 30 acres of land adjacent to the township area which is provisionally earmarked for the purpose by the Calcutta Port Commissioners. The above arrangement may, however, be given effect to after the prior approval of the Calcutta Port Commissioners has been obtained..."

24. Letter of July 17, 1974 by the Collector asked the Mulyan Committee to deposit Rs. 3,01,699.75 p. as cost of acquisition of 28.38 acres of land advising that after such allotment undeveloped lands would be handed over to it for allotment to the evicted families of mouza Debhog. Letter of August 14, 1974 also provided for allotment of land as stipulated in above letter of January 8, 1974. The provision of allotment of lands to evicted families on payment of proportionate acquisition costs by them against allotment of 4 cottahs plot of undeveloped land to each evicted family was never altered or superseded and in fact in the writ petition of C. R. No. 6665(W) of 1974 the prayer was for issuance of writ directing the respondents to provide for respective accommodation of the petitioners on the basis of commitments made by the respondents concerned as disclosed in the aforesaid letters being the annexures in question to the said petition. The order on consent was passed for enforcement of the above commitment as was prayed for in the petition as otherwise there was no scope for a legal challenge on acquisition of land on the ground of absence of provisions for rehabilitation of families affected by acquisition. Such commitment for allotment of 4 cottah plot of undeveloped land to each evicted family should have been expressly provided in the order of April 8, 1975 for the absence whereof the learned Advocates must share the responsibility. Even so the absence of the provision for rehabilitation of affected families of Debhog in the said order does not extinguish or affect the basic arrangement founded on the Government's commitment in respect of such rehabilitation, which remained and continues to remain an implicit but effective condition of the order and the petitioners cannot be permitted to turn round and take advantage of the absence of the provision which would lead to a strange and absurd situation never contemplated by the parties when the petitioners approached the Court on November 5, 1974 and would result in undue and unfair benefit and advantage to them at the cost of other displaced families.

25. In the subsequent petition of motion in the connected rule the petitioners referred to the Government Memo. of October 1, 1974 which required of the petitioners to form a co-operative society competent to act on behalf of the affected families of Mouza Debhog in the matter of allotment of land for rehabilitation. The co-operative society was also formed, it is said, with provision for admission of members thereto who desired to be rehabilitated in Debhog as a result of acquisition so that it could not be said or urged that the land offered for rehabilitation was to be distributed only to the petitioners and not to other families of Mouza Debhog affected by the acquisition.

26. In the order of August 5, 1976 in the connected rule there is no mention for such allotment of land not exceeding 4 cottahs to each petitioner as per Government commitment. The position was soon realised and in subsequent order dated November 12, 1976, the Court made explicit what was all through an implicit and binding provision, well known to parties, of the order of April 8, 1975 directing that each petitioner would be allotted land subject to the maximum quantity of 4 cottahs for each affected family for rehabilitation, which was, as we have seen, was the basis of the commitment made by Government when the land was offered for rehabilitation.

27. It is to be remembered that in the matter for enforcement of a commitment or representation made by Government or other authority acted upon by the claimant by writ proceedings, such commitment or representation is the basis and fundamental condition for grant of the relief without which no relief will be available in writ proceedings. Such commitment or representation in material aspects is the primary and basic material fact in the cause of action for relief claimed and even if it is not expressly provided for in the order granting the relief, whether on consent or otherwise, it remains and continues to remain an implicit but effective condition of the relief as without it the relief granted will be one without jurisdiction in an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

28. In the aforesaid circumstances we do not find that there was any scope for review or modification of the order of November 12, 1976 by substituting "miniimum quantity of four cottahs" for "maximum quantity of four cottahs" as prayed for by the petitioners. We accordingly do not find any infirmity in the impugned orders on any ground warranting our interference. It may also be noted that the petitioners have been given the right in the impugned order to apply for allotment of more lands for purpose of development.

29. In the view we have taken, we do not consider it necessary to deal with the contentions raised by Mr. Sinha as indicated above. While there can be little dispute on the propositions of law laid down in the judgments cited by Mr. Sinha, they have no application to the facts of the case.

30. As we propose to dismiss the appeal, sustaining the orders in the connected rule, we feel that some directions in addition should be made as indicated below in partial modification of the relevant provisions of the orders under challenge in the appeal as indicated below. We direct that the Calcutta Port Trust will on allotment and delivery of possession of lands to the petitioners and others in terms of the said orders refund the surplus money out of the costs of acquisition to the petitioner's Advocate on record Mr. Parimal Das or as they may require in that behalf, but such money as may be refunded will carry interest at the rate of 6% per annum for period from date of receipt by the Calcutta Port Trust to date of payment and will be payable by the Calcutta Port Trust. The Land Acquisition Officer, Haldia Project will in his turn deliver, as early as possible after such allotment and delivery of possession as aforesaid, the surplus lands back to the Calcutta Port Trust. The allotment and delivery of possession of lands will be made by the Special Land Acquisition Officer Haldia Project, without least delay as the petitioners approach him in manner indicated in the orders in the connected rule and date of possession for delivery of possession of the acquired lands for Haldia Project by the petitioners is extended to August 31, 1977.

31. Subject to the above modification the appeal is dismissed, without however any order as to costs in the circumstances. There will be no order on the applications in the rule which will be treated as disposed of.

32. Before we conclude, on behalf of the respondents it was stated that an application for recalling the order of April 8, 1975 passed by A. K. Mookerjee, J. is pending. We find that in fact such an application has been filed on May 7, 1976 but no step for its hearing for all these days has been taken on behalf of the State and others who are the applicants. According to Mr. Sinha this application was also disposed of by the learned Judge and no order was passed thereon which statement is denied by the other side. There is however no order on record in respect of this application and it is not necessary for us to express any opinion in respect thereof.

G. N. RAY, J. : I agree.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 328

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.

Bareilly Electricity Supply Co. Ltd., Petitioner v. State of Uttar Pradesh, Respondent.

Suit No. 149 of 1976 (Re. Arb.), D/-
22-3-1977.

Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30 — Error of law on face of award — Reference of specific question of law to arbitrator — Decision cannot be challenged — (Electricity (Supply) Act (1948), Sch. VI, Paragraph XIII, sub-para. (3) — Words "shall be a percentage" — Meaning).

Where questions of law are specifically referred to the arbitrator for his decision, the award of the arbitrator on those questions is binding upon the parties for by referring the specific questions parties desire to have a decision from the arbitrator on those questions rather than from the court and the court will not, unless it is satisfied that the arbitrator had proceeded illegally, interfere with the decision.

(Para 4)

Whether any specific question of law had been referred to or not must be determined having regard to the reference before the arbitrators. It is essential to keep the case, where the disputes are referred to the arbitrator in the decision of which the question of law becomes material, distinct from the case in which a specific question of law has been referred to him for a decision.

(Para 5)

Where the question referred to arbitration was whether the managing agents were entitled to draw the expenses claimed or to draw only the actual expenditure incurred on office allowance subject to the ceiling laid down in para. XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule of the Electricity Act, and, there was no factual dispute which had been referred to the arbitrator;

EU/FU/B903/77/GDR

Held that the only question in the case necessarily to be decided was the construction of Para. XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule to the Act and that was a question of law. (Para 6)

That specific question of law had been referred to the arbitrators. Therefore, even if the arbitrators had made an erroneous decision that could not be challenged by the petitioner. (Para 6)

Held further that the decision of the arbitrator that the managing Agent's claim for office allowance in terms of the provisions laid down in para. XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule should be limited to the actual expenditure incurred and should not exceed the ceiling specified therein, could not be challenged as erroneous in law. The expressions "based on a percentage" used in sub-para. (1) of paragraph XIII of the Sixth Schedule to the Act and "shall be a percentage" in sub-para. (3) mean the same thing and intend to convey that the expenditure allowable must be based on a percentage, especially in view of the fact that office allowance include certain expenses but not all. Furthermore unless the actual expenditure was contemplated there was no need to put a ceiling. Case law discussed.

ORDER:— This is an application by Bareilly Electricity Supply Co. Ltd., filed on the 18th January, 1977, challenging the award dated the 28th September, 1974.

2. Before I go to the merits of the rival contentions of the parties it has to be mentioned that a preliminary objection was taken as to the maintainability of this application. It was contended that on the 19th January, 1977, the name of the petitioner Company was changed into Bareilly Holdings Limited. Therefore, the petitioner, it was urged, was not entitled to continue the present proceeding in this form and name. As would appear from what is stated above, when the application was made it was a competent application because the change in the name had not taken place at that time. The change took place subsequently.

Therefore, in view of the provisions of S. 23 (3) of the Companies Act, 1956 and the facts and circumstances of this case, in my opinion, it would be proper to allow the prayer, on the oral application of Counsel for the petitioner, to change the name of the petitioner to Bareilly Holdings Limited. I, therefore, direct that the name of the petitioner be changed in the records of this case to Bareilly Holdings Limited.

3. The petitioner Company is registered under the Indian Companies Act and during the period 1965-66 to 1969-70 M/s. Martin Burn Ltd. were the Secretaries and Treasurers of the petitioner company under an agreement dated the 30th August, 1965. As such Secretaries and Treasurers, M/s. Martin Burn Ltd. were paid certain amounts as and by way of office allowances. The payment of such office allowance was duly approved, according to the petitioner company, by the Central Government under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956. The agreement dated the 30th August, 1965, inter alia, provided as follows:

"5. The Secretaries and Treasurers shall be entitled to receive from the Company by way of remuneration for their services in relation to such management, in respect of each financial year (as defined in S. 2 (17) of the Act) of the Company or part thereof;

(a) Ordinary remuneration as and to the maximum extent specified in sub-para. (1) of para. XIII of the Sixth Schedule to the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948 subject to the minimum payment specified in sub-para. (2) of the said para. XIII.

(b) An Office allowance as and to the maximum extent specified in sub-para. (3) of the said para. XIII to cover wages and salaries."

It appears that dispute arose between the petitioner and the State of Uttar Pradesh represented by the Secretary of the Government of Uttar Pradesh, Irrigation and Power Department with regard to the amounts which M/s. Martin Burn Ltd. were entitled to draw as office allowances during the aforesaid period. It is not in dispute that the payment of office allowance in this case is governed by the provisions of para. XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948. It was the case of the petitioner that on an interpretation of the said clause of para. XIII (3), the amounts paid to M/s. Martin Burn Ltd., during the relevant year, which were within the ceiling provided by the Cl. XIII (3), were permitted by the said clause. The petitioner contended that the office allowance had to be calculated as a percentage of the operating expenditure and the expenditure on capital works as laid down in the said Schedule of the Act. On the other hand, the respondent's case was that M/s. Martin Burn Ltd. were entitled to draw only the 'actual expenditure' incurred on office allowance. It is the case of the petitioner that there was no question of 'actual expenditure' involved and therefore, the petitioner contended the concept of 'actual expenditure' was foreign to the said paragraph XIII (3) of the said Schedule. It was further the case of the petitioner that it was not possible or practically feasible to calculate such actual expenditure nor was any guideline laid down for calculation of actual expenditure. The dispute was referred to the arbitration of the Central Electricity Authority under the provisions of para. XVI of the Sixth Schedule to the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948, and on or about the 27th December, 1972 the Central Electricity Authority had decided to admit for arbitration on the following issues in respect of the said dispute:

"Whether the Managing Agents are entitled to draw the following amounts as office allowance during the years 1965-66 to 1969-70:

Year of Account.	Amount Charged (Rs.)
1965-66	Rs. 45,376.00
1966-67	Rs. 51,366.00
1967-68	Rs. 48,990.00
1968-69	Rs. 54,537.00
1969-70	Rs. 53,951.00

or

Whether the Managing Agents are entitled to draw only the actual expenditure incurred on office allowance subject to the ceiling laid down under para. XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule."

Thereafter, after the statements of facts had been filed, the arbitrators made the award on the 28th September, 1974 which is the subject-matter of challenge in this application. The award was to the following effect:

"AND WHEREAS a dispute arose between the Government of Uttar Pradesh (hereinafter referred to as the 'Government') and the Bareilly Electricity Supply Co. Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as 'the company') on the following points:

Whether the Managing Agents are entitled to draw the following amounts as office allowance during the years 1965-66 to 1969-70:

Year of Account	Amount Charged in Rs.
1965-66	Rs. 45,376/-
1966-67	Rs. 51,366/-
1967-68	Rs. 48,990/-
1968-69	Rs. 54,537/-
1969-70	Rs. 53,951/-

"Whether the Managing Agents are entitled to draw only the actual expenditure incurred on office allowance subject to the ceiling laid down under Paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule.

"AND WHEREAS the Government referred the above mentioned dispute between itself and the Company to the Authority for Arbitration under Paragraph XVI of the Sixth Schedule by its letter No. 3590-V/71/XXIII-PB-455/62 dated 31st January, 1972.

"AND WHEREAS the Government filed its statement of case vide its letter No. 155-V/XXIII-P-4/62 dated 20th January, 1973.

"AND WHEREAS the Company filed its statement of the case vide its letter No. BE/30A/73/2490, dated 20th February, 1973.

"AND WHEREAS the Government filed its rejoinder to the statement of case of the Company vide its letter No. 714-V/73/XXIII-P-455/62 dated 17th March, 1973.

"NOW THEREFORE, We N. Venkatesan and N. Tata Rao having considered the written statement filed by the Government and the Company and having heard the aforementioned representatives of the parties in person on the aforesaid date and having considered all the materials placed before us by the parties, make our Award in respect of the dispute referred to above as follows:

"The Managing Agents' claim for office allowance in terms of the provision laid down under paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule to the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948 should be limited to the actual expenditure incurred and shall not exceed the ceiling specified therein." As is apparent from the award the arbitrators have awarded that the Managing Agents' claim for office allowance in terms of the provisions laid down in paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule should be limited to the actual expenditure incurred and should not exceed the ceiling specified therein. It is material at this stage to refer to the provisions of paragraph XIII of the Sixth Schedule of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948. The said paragraph is to the following effect:

"XIII (1) Subject to the provisions of the sub-paragraph (2) the ordinary remuneration of a managing agent excluding the office allowance mentioned in sub-paragraph (3) but including purchasing commission, if any, shall be based on a percentage of net profits (as determined in accordance with the provisions of Section 349 of the Companies Act, 1956) and shall not exceed—

(a) in respect of the first Rs. 5 lakhs of such net profits — 10 per cent.; and

(b) in respect of all net profits in excess of Rs. 5 lakhs — 7 per cent.

(2) The amount paid to a managing agent shall be subject to a minimum payment on account of ordinary remuneration not exceeding two rupees per annum for each complete thousand rupees of paid up share and debenture capital, provided that for purposes of computing the minimum payment should the share and debenture capital be less than rupees five lakhs it shall be taken as rupees five lakhs and should the said capital be greater than rupees one crore it shall be taken as rupees one crore.

(3) An office allowance drawn by a managing agent which shall include the salaries and wages of all persons employed in the office of the managing agent, but not the salaries of the engineering staff employed for purposes of the undertaking, shall be a percentage of the operating expenditure and the expenditure during the year of account on capital works. The office allowance so drawn shall not exceed—

(a) In respect of the first Rs. 1 lakh of operating expenditure — 8 per cent.

In respect of next Rs. 2 lakhs of operating expenditure — 5 per cent.

In respect of the next Rs. 7 lakhs of operating expenditure — $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

In respect of all operating expenditure in excess of Rs. 10 lakhs — $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent; and

(b) In respect of the first Rs. 1 lakh of capital expenditure incurred during the year of account — 4 per cent.

In respect of next Rs. 2 lakhs of capital expenditure incurred during the year of account — 3 per cent.

In respect of the next Rs. 7 lakhs of capital expenditure incurred during the year of account — $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

In respect of all capital expenditure in excess of Rs. 10 lakhs incurred during the year of account — 1 per cent,

Operating expenditure for the purposes of sub-paragraph (3) (a) above shall mean the sum of the items of expenditure as defined in sub-paragraph (2) (b) of paragraph XVII with the omission of those under clauses (i), (iv), (ix) and (x) thereof."

On behalf of the petitioner it was contended that inasmuch as the arbitrators held that the office allowance should be limited only to the actual expenditure, the arbitrators had committed an error of law on the face of the award in view of the provisions of paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule referred to hereinbefore. It was urged that the said sub-paragraph directed that office allowance 'shall be a percentage'. It was emphasised that unlike sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph XIII of the said Schedule, it did not stipulate that it should be based on a percentage but it directed that it should be a percentage. It was, therefore, argued that the office allowance had to be computed on a notional basis of the percentage provided such computation did not exceed the ceiling, and there is no dispute in this case that payments claimed had not exceeded the ceiling — and therefore, the arbitrators had to allow the percentage claimed by the petitioner. It was submitted that inasmuch as the arbitrators had proceeded on the concept of actual expenditure subject to the ceiling, the arbitrators had misconstrued or misread the provisions of sub-paragraph (3) of paragraph XIII of the Sixth Schedule of the said Act.

4. The contention in opposition to this argument on behalf of the respondent was that specific question of law had been referred to the arbitrators. Therefore, the petitioner was not entitled to challenge the finding of the arbitrators. In aid of this submission reliance was placed on the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. Ralli Ram (AIR 1963 SC 1685). There the Supreme Court observed that an award being a decision of an Arbitrator, whether a lawyer or a layman chosen by the parties, and entrusted with power to decide a dispute submitted to him is ordinarily not libale to be challenged on the ground that it was erroneous. The award of the arbitrator was ordinarily final and conclusive unless a contrary intention was disclosed by the agreement. The award was a decision of a domestic tribunal chosen by the parties, and the civil courts which were entrusted with the power to facilitate arbitration and to effectuate the awards, could not exercise appellate powers over the decision. Wrong or right the decision was binding, if it had been reached fairly, after giving adequate opportunity to the parties to place their grievances in the manner provided by the arbitration agreement. But it was firmly established, according to the Supreme Court, that an award was bad on the ground of error of law on the face of it, when in the award itself or in a document actually incorporated in it, there was found some legal proposition which was the basis of the award and which was erroneous. An error in law on the face of the award means, 'you can find in the award or a document' actually incorporated thereto, as for instance, a note appended by the arbitrator stating the reason for his judgment, some legal proposition which was the basis of the award and which could be said to be erroneous. It did not mean that if a narrative reference was made to a contention of one party that would open the door to setting first what that contention was and then going to the contract on which the parties' right depended to see if that contention was sound. The Supreme Court observed, but this rule did not apply where questions of law were specifically referred to the arbitrator for his decision, the award of the arbitrator on those questions was binding upon the parties for by referring the specific questions parties desired to have a decision from the arbitrator on those questions rather than from the Court and the Court would not, unless it was satisfied that the arbitrator had proceeded illegally, interfere with the decision.

5. In this case, therefore, two questions are relevant, viz. whether specific questions of law had been referred to the arbitrators and secondly whether there is any error of law in the award on the face of it. So far as the first question is concerned whether any specific question of law had been referred to or not must be determined having regard to the reference before the arbitrators. It is essential to keep the case, where the disputes are referred to the arbitrator in the decision of which the question of law becomes material distinct from the case in which a specific question of law has been referred to him for a decision. See in this connection the observations of Lord Russell in the case of F. R. Absalom Ltd. v. Great Western (London) Garden Village Society, 1933 AC 592 at p 607 and Lord

"There is here no submission of any specific question of law as such and as a specific question of law, no doubt incidentally, and indeed necessarily, the arbitrator will have to decide some questions on the construction of the building contract, but the two matters submitted are both composite questions of law and fact; there is no express submission of the true effect of the contract on the basis of undisputed facts."

Lord Wright further observed that there was no reason to think that the parties had any specific question of law in mind at all. Therefore, it is necessary to emphasise that there must be submission on a specific question of law as such and it must be distinct from a reference where the question of law must necessarily have to be decided.

6. In this case, as mentioned hereinbefore, the question referred to arbitration was whether the managing agents were entitled to draw the expenses claimed or to draw only the actual expenditure incurred on office allowance subject to the ceiling laid down in paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule. In such form the disputes were referred to arbitration. But in the background of the reference it is abundantly clear that the reference to the arbitrators was whether on a true interpretation of paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule of the Electricity Act the petitioners were entitled to the actual expenses or only on a percentage as contemplated in paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule. In the instant case, there was no dispute as to the facts, there was no dispute as to the quantum of actual expenditure, there was no dispute as to whether the allowable expenditure exceeded the ceiling. The only dispute was whether on the construction of the relevant clause the claim of the petitioner was justified. The construction of that clause is a question of law. That specific question of law had been referred to the arbitrators. Therefore, even if the arbitrators had made an erroneous decision this cannot be challenged by the petitioner in the instant case. Reliance was also placed on this aspect on the decision U. G. V. E. S. Co. v. U. P. Electricity Board, AIR 1973 SC 683. There, the Supreme Court held, relying on the decision in the case of Durga Prosad Chamaria v. Shew Kishendas Bhatta, AIR 1949 PC 334 in which it was held, if a question of law had been specifically referred to an arbitrator for his decision it would be contrary to well established principles for a Court of law to interfere with the award even if the Court itself would have taken a different view of the point of view had it been before it that the said decision could have no application because the parties in the case before the Supreme Court had not referred to any specific question of law for the decision of the arbitrators. In the case of Thawar-das v. Union of India, AIR 1955 SC 468 the Supreme Court referred to the importance of the question where any question of law had been specifically referred to the arbitrator because the Supreme Court observed that it was necessary to stress the word 'specifically' as the parties who made the reference to arbitration have the right to insist that the tribunal of their choice should decide their dispute according to law, so before the right could be denied to them in any particular matter the Court must be very sure that both parties wanted the decision of the arbitrator on a point of law rather than that of the Courts that they wanted his decision on that point to be final. In this case the reference specifically was the quantum of expenditure allowable in terms of paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule to the Act. There was no factual dispute which had been referred to the arbitrator. Therefore, in my opinion, the only question in this case necessarily not merely incidentally to be decided is the construction of paragraph XIII (3) of the Sixth Schedule to the Act and it is indisputable that it is a question of law. That question was the only question. Therefore that question of law had only been specifically referred to the arbitrators in the instant case. Whether any question of law has been referred to the arbitrators must be determined in the background of the facts and circumstances of the case. It is not necessary to use the words "specifically referred" in the reference itself. In that view of the matter it must be held that specific question of law had been referred to the arbitrators and the petitioner is not entitled to challenge the decision.

7. Apart from that there is another aspect of the matter. The question here is whether in accordance to sub-paragraph (3) of paragraph XIII, which I have referred to hereinbefore, the said office allowance drawn by a managing agent shall be only a percentage of the operating expenditure and the expenditure during the year of account on capital work. In my opinion the expression 'based on a percentage' used in sub-para. (1) of paragraph XIII of the Sixth Schedule to the Act and "shall be a percentage" in sub-paragraph (3) mean the same thing and intend to convey that the expenditure allowable must be based on a percentage, especially in view of the fact that office allowance includes certain expenses but not all. Furthermore unless the actual expenditure was contemplated there was no need to put a ceiling. In my opinion, the decision of the arbitrators cannot be challenged as erroneous in law. In the aforesaid view of the matter, I am unable to sustain the challenge to the impugned award.

8. The application therefore fails and I accordingly dismiss the application.

9. In the facts and circumstances of this case, each party will pay and bear their own cost.

10. Judgment upon award is stayed for three weeks.

11. Allegations made in the affidavit-in-opposition are not admitted by Mr. Banerji's client.

Application dismissed.

R. P. Bagchi, Snehansu S. Roy, Miss Nandita Ghose, for Petitioner; Arun Kr. Motilal, Chandra Sekhar Das, for Respondents.

B. C. RAY, J.:— This Rule arises out of an application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is directed against Order No. 35 dated December 17, 1975 passed in Title Suit No. 93 of 1973 by the Subordinate Judge 3rd Court, Alipore, rejecting the defendant/petitioner's application for amendment of the written statement.

2. The plaintiff opposite party which is a statutory body set up under the West Bengal Act 19 of 1959 instituted Title Suit No. 93 of 1973 in the Third Court of Subordinate Judge at Alipore, stating inter alia, that the defendant Bivas Private Limited which had long experience of providing the markets for the filter papers, with a view to promoting the qualities of the goods, was appointed as the selling Agent for the sale of goods to be produced at Kalyani Unit and Dasghara unit. In terms of the said agency the defendant used to take delivery of goods and sell them in the market and used to make payment to the plaintiff from time to time. The price of the goods was at first fixed at Rs. 12-0- per Kg. But subsequently, as the cost of production increased the plaintiff too increased the price from Rs. 12/- to Rs. 20/- per Kg. and the same was duly communicated to the defendant by letter dated 16th of January, 1970. To this letter the defendant did not send any reply. Thereafter the plaintiff sent a statement of account to the defendant and requested to pay a sum of Rs. 47,361.90 which remained due from the defendant. It was alleged that on 15th of November, 1971 the defendant repudiated the agency by their letter. The plaintiff thereafter issued a notice through their lawyer demanding payment of the aforesaid sum due to them, but no reply was received from the defendant and hence the suit was filed for a decree for recovery of the sum of Rs. 47,361.80 and for other ancillary reliefs.

3. The defendant on 25th February, 1974 filed a written statement. In paragraph 10 (c) of the said written statement it has been stated as follows:

"This illegal arbitrary and wrongful increase in price was made by the plaintiffs without prior reference to the defendant and even before..... the sole selling Agent."

In paragraph 10 (d) of the said written statement it has been stated that it was settled that in consideration of the technical know-how, supplied by the defendants and the investments made by them the defendants would be the sole selling Agent for five years. In paragraph 13 of the written statement it has been stated that the defendant did not repudiate the agreement by their letter dated 15-11-71 or on any date. In paragraph 15 of the written statement it has been stated that as the repudiation of the agency by the plaintiffs is unilateral, illegal and mala fide the plaintiffs are not entitled to get any relief.

4. Thereafter issues were framed and the suit was fixed for hearing peremptorily on 19th November, 1975. On that date an application for amendment of the written statement was filed by the defendant seeking to amend the statements made in paragraph 10 (c) by inserting the following words after the words "the sole selling Agent". "as proposed and assured although the plaintiff put off approval and execution of the said agreement of agency." and in para. 10 (d) also the defendant also wanted to insert the following words after the words "interest of the defendants." An objection was filed by the plaintiff submitting that the amendment, if allowed, will have the effect of taking away the legal right already accrued to them and will render the admission made by the defendant nugatory.

5. On December 17, 1975 the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, Alipore, after hearing the parties rejected the said application for amendment holding that in paragraph 10 (c) of the written statement the agreement of agency was admitted and by the proposed amendment the defendant wanted to do away with the admission. It was further held that the defendant could not make out a new case or even a contradictory case by way of amendment. Moreover the proposed amendment aimed at destroying the admission already made by the party. As such the same was rejected. It is against this order this revisional application was moved in this Court and the instant Rule was issued.

6. Mr. R. P. Bagchi, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner has submitted that there was no new case made out by the proposed amendment nor the proposed amendment had the effect of changing the nature and character of the suit and as such the same should have been allowed by the learned Subordinate Judge. Mr. Bagchi further submitted that there was no agreement of sole selling agency to be entered into between the petitioner and the opposite party and in the written statement the admission about the defendant being the sole selling agent was made inadvertently inasmuch as in fact the defendant has not been appointed the sole selling agent of the products of the plaintiff, as the agreement had not been finalised between the parties. It has, therefore, been submitted that the proposed amendment ought to have been allowed by the Court below as the same was necessary for the proper adjudication of the case and the same will not cause any injustice on the other side.

7. Mr. A. K. Motilal, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite party, has on the other hand submitted that the suit was filed on the basis of the agency agreement and the relief sought for was for a decree for the goods supplied to the defendant who was the sole selling agent of the plaintiff's products. Art. 3 of the Lim. Act governs such suit and the period of limitation is three years. As the defendant by their letter issued in 1971 repudiated the selling agency agreement, this action has been brought and as such the suit was within the period of limitation. He further submitted that the defendant in their written statement admitted the contract of selling agency between the defendant and the plaintiff and by the proposed amendment a new case was sought to be made out by pleading that there was no agreement of sole selling agency between the plaintiff and the defendant. Thus the proposed amendment, according to Mr. Motilal will seriously prejudice the plaintiff and will create such injustice on the plaintiff inasmuch as the same if allowed, will render the suit as one barred by limitation, as it will be a suit only for recovery of price of the goods sold and delivery to the defendant. Moreover, the said amendment, if allowed, will destroy the effect of the admission that has been made by the defendant in their written statement and will seriously prejudice the plaintiff. Mr. Motilal has, therefore, submitted that this amendment should not be allowed. In support of his submission Mr. Motilal has cited the decisions reported in Shaikh Masthan Sahib v. Palayani Balarami Reddi, AIR 1953 Mad 958, A. K. Gupta & Sons v. Damodar Valley Corpn., AIR 1967 SC 96

8. It appears on a reading of the written statement that the defendant in paragraph 10 (c) and (d) admitted that the defendant was appointed the sole selling agent of the products of the plaintiff. From paragraphs 13 and 15 of the written statement also it appears that the defendant admitted that the agency agreement existed and it was repudiated unilaterally by the plaintiff. The proposed amendment clearly aims at setting out a case that the plaintiff avoided and failed to approve and execute the said agreement of agency. Thus the proposed amendment completely aims at denying the relationship of plaintiff and the defendant as principal and agent which the defendant admitted in their original written statement.

9. In that view of the matter, it appears to us quite clear that by the proposed amendment the defendant tries to make out a new claim and to set up a new case than what was made in the earlier written statement. Moreover, by this proposed amendment the defendant is attempting to negative the admission that they were the sole selling agents of the products of the plaintiff.

10. In AIR 1953 Madras 958 (Shaikh Masthan Sahib v. Palayani Balarami Reddi), it has been held that where by the proposed amendment the respondent sought to negate his own admission in the written statement, it should not be allowed.

11. In AIR 1967 SC 96 (A. K. Gupta & Sons v. Damodar Valley Corpn.) it has been held that a party is not allowed by amendment to set up a new case or a new cause of action, particularly when a suit on the new case or cause of action is barred.

12. For the reasons aforesaid the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioner fail. The Rule is therefore discharged. There will be no order as to costs. Let the records go down as soon as possible.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— I agree.
Rule discharged.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA AND

Gour Chandra Mukherjee, Petitioner
v. Andrew Yules Co-operative Credit Society Ltd. & others, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 3207 of 1975, D/- 18-2-1977.

Contract Act (1872), S. 73 — Negligence of servant — Loss caused — Liability — Disappearance of cash in custody of custodian following insecure and risky practice — Custodian is liable for loss. (Master and Servant).

Where the custodian of the society kept a certain amount of cash in the appointed drawer duly locked before he left his office for the day and when he re-opened cash box after two or three days found that the cash amount was missing and relied upon the practice followed by his predecessors in office in keeping heavy cash in the cash box inside the drawer which was never objected to by the Managing Committee nor did it provide for better security arrangements,

Held, that the custodian owed an obligation and legal duty to the Managing Committee for safe custody of the cash belonging to the society kept in his charge. In discharge of his duty, he was expected and bound to take all such precautions as a reasonable man would take in similar circumstances. A practice insecure and risky is no answer to the omission to take adequate care and precaution a reasonable man entrusted with cash would and is expected to take in such circumstances. It was also no answer that the Managing Committee acquiesced to the practice imperfect as it was, for the Managing Committee, had put the custodian in charge of the cash who was free to take all precautions in discharge of his legal responsibility. Even though the informal arrangements were acquiesced by the Managing Committee, the custodian had further responsibility in regard to cash entrusted to his charge and he was negligent as a reasonable man should have taken further precaution for safe custody of such fund.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This Rule is directed against order dated 20-2-75 passed by the Assistant Registrar of

DU/EU/B167/77/AYP/WNG

Co-operative Societies in Appeal Case No. 5/Calcutta of 1974-75 affirming the Award of the Arbitrator in Dispute Case No. 40/ Calcutta of 1973-74. The petitioner was an elected director of the Andrew Yule's Co-operative Credit Society Limited which had its office at 8, Clive Row. It had also an Unit office at 38, Chowrangi Road, Calcutta for collection from and payment of sanctioned money to member employees of the Concord of India Insurance Co. Ltd. According to the arrangement, an elected director being an employee of the Concord Insurance was to handle society's fund appertaining to the Concord unit and to render statement of receipts and payments at the close of the day's transaction. A cash box inside a lock drawer was provided for keeping the money pending disbursement or remittance. The petitioner at the material time was an elected director of the society and handled the cash of that unit during the relevant period from 3-11-72 to 25-6-73. On 25-6-73 the petitioner reported to the Vice Chairman of the Society that he had kept a sum of Rs. 5842.38 P. on 22-6-1973 in the cash box, locked it and kept the same in the appointed drawer duly locked before he left his office for the day. On 25-6-73 when he opened the cash box he found that the cash amount stated above was missing. The Vice-Chairman reported the matter to the Chief Executive of the Concord Insurance who ultimately sent a report to the police. The police made investigation but the results were not known. Thereafter the Managing Committee considered the position and directed the petitioner to make good the loss arising out of the alleged disappearance of the cash within a specified time. As the requisition was not complied with the Society raised a dispute being No. 40/Calcutta of 1973-74 claiming Rs. 5842.38p with interest from the petitioner. The dispute was referred to the Arbitrator No. III for adjudication. The Arbitrator after taking evidence and considering the material on record decreed the amount in favour of the society directing the petitioner to pay the aforesaid amount with interest thereon from 26-6-73 till realisation.

2. The petitioner thereafter preferred an appeal referred to above and the Assistant Registrar of Co-operative Societies the appellate authority upheld the Award of the Arbitrator. The appellate authority raised two points for consideration

(1) Whether the defendant appellant was custodian of the cash appertaining to Concord Unit?

(2) Whether he had any civil liability arising out of the disappearance of the cash balance and if so, what is the extent of the liability?

In coming to his decision the appellate authority in agreement with the Arbitrator noted the informal arrangement made by the Managing Committee in maintaining the cash. It was held that even so, such arrangement did not alter the fact of the petitioner's being the custodian of the cash and the petitioner was liable to make good the loss arising out of sheer negligence of his duty.

3. Mr. Banerjee appearing for the petitioner submitted that both the Arbitrator as also the appellate authority acted without jurisdiction in holding that the petitioner was guilty of negligence when there was no issue framed on that basis. He submitted that if an issue was framed the petitioner would have been in a position to establish that he had followed the informal and conventional arrangement for maintaining the cash and was not negligent in any respect and the arrangement being imperfect the Managing Committee should have been held guilty of contributory negligence. On this ground it was submitted the Award was without jurisdiction and was liable to be interfered with under Article 227 of the Constitution.

4. There was no dispute that the petitioner was the custodian of the cash appertaining to Concord unit. The second issue as to whether he had a civil liability arising out of disappearance of the cash balance embrace all aspects of the question involving the liability of the petitioner. This point for decision as already stated involved the question of determination of the conduct of the petitioner in regard to the maintenance of the cash vis-a-vis the arrangement made by the Managing Committee. We accordingly think that no specific issue was called for and/or that there was any prejudice caused to the petitioner on account thereof. As the records indicate the parties adduced their evidence in support of their respective cases touching all these aspects.

5. It has next been said that on the findings arrived at by the appellate authority the petitioner should not have been found liable for the amount under claim. It has been held by the appellate authority that the Managing Committee had evolved arrangement in exercise of their lawful jurisdiction and such arrangement was acted by the successive directors who have been in charge of the cash without any protests on the part of the committee. Even so, the authority held that informal or conventional nature of arrangement did not alter the fact of the petitioner being the custodian of the cash. Mr. Banerjee contended that the petitioner was not negligent in respect of the disappearance of cash and referred in support to Winfield on Tort, 7th Edition, page 190 wherein it has been said that a defendant charged with negligence can clear (himself) if he shows that he has acted in accord with general and approved practice. He relied on the practice followed by his predecessors in office in keeping heavy cash in the cash box inside the drawer which was never objected to by the Managing Committee nor did it provide for better security arrangements.

6. The petitioner, as we have seen, was the legal custodian and in charge of the cash for day-to-day operations. He accordingly owed an obligation and legal duty to the Managing Committee for safe custody of the cash belonging to the Society kept in his charge. In discharge of his duty, he was expected and bound to take all such precautions as a reasonable man would take in similar circumstances. A practice insecure and risky as is obvious, is no answer to the omission to take adequate care and precaution a reasonable man entrusted with cash would and is expected to take in such circumstances. It is also no answer that the Managing Committee acquiesced to the practice imperfect as it was, for the Managing Committee had put a director in charge of the cash who was free to take all precautions in discharge of his legal responsibility.

We accordingly find no lacuna in the finding of the appellate authority that even though the informal arrangements were acquiesced by the Managing Committee, the elected director had further responsibility in regard to the cash entrusted to his charge. There can be no dispute that he was negligent as a reasonable man should have taken further precaution for safe custody of such fund.

7. It has further been pointed that the petitioner on two occasions remitted heavy cash to the office of the Concord Insurance for safe custody and even on 21-6-73 Rs. 15,000/- out of day's cash balance of about Rs. 20,000/- was kept in the employer's office. Even on 22-6-73 he remitted Rs. 11,000/- to the Head Office keeping a balance of Rs. 5842.38 P. It was said that the Vice-Chairman refused to accept any amount beyond Rs. 15,000/- for safe keeping in custody of Concord Insurance Company. The Vice-Chairman was a witness in the proceedings but no such question on his alleged refusal was put to him. Accordingly it was rightly found that his alleged explanation for not keeping the cash with Concord office was incredible. Further there also appears to be a practice about the deposit of cash with the Concord office which was not availed of by the petitioner and no reason therefore has been established.

8. In the circumstances we are of opinion that the petitioner did not take sufficient precaution for the heavy cash which he had in his custody after the day's working and there is no escape from the conclusion that he was negligent in respect thereof as has been found by the impugned judgment. For all these reasons, we do not propose to interfere with the impugned order. The Rule accordingly fails and is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Petition dismissed.

Smt. Bimla Debi Jalan and another, Applicants v. Raja Ram Shaw and others, Respondents.

Appeal from Original Order No. 545 of 1969, D/- 15-2-1977.

Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 110 and 110-F — Jurisdiction of tribunal — Not restricted by S. 110 to accidents happening only in public places — Only manner of adjudicating liability provided. Decision of D. Basu J. (Cal), Reversed.

In case of accidents causing death or bodily injury the liability might arise under the law of Torts or under the provisions of the Fatal Accidents Act. How that liability has to be adjudicated in respect of accident arising out of the use of the Motor Vehicle has been provided by Section 110. Section 110 does not limit that jurisdiction only to accidents occurring in public places. The jurisdiction of the Claims Tribunals is for the purpose of adjudicating upon claims for compensation in respect of accidents (not limited to particular places), involving the death of, or bodily injury to, persons arising out of use of motor vehicles. The scope of this section has to be understood in conjunction with Section 110-F of the Act. Therefore, from the fact that the liabilities of insurer are limited only to accidents occurring in public places, it cannot be inferred that the jurisdiction of the Claims Tribunals is also restricted to accidents taking place in public places. Bhabesh Chandra Mitter and Miss Aruna Mukherjee, for Applicants; P. K. Sengupta and Miss. Jolly Sett (for No. 1) and Miss Manju Roychoudhury (for Nos. 2 (a)-2 (c)), for Respondents.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— Mur-lidhar Jalan met with an accident on the 28th October, 1963 within the compound of the factory of Messrs. Dalmia Iron & Steel Co. Ltd., Khardah. As a result of the injuries suffered by the said accident, he died on the 2nd November, 1963. His mother and his minor widow preferred a claim before the Motor Accident Claims Tribunal, Howrah against the owner of the vehicle as well as against the Insurance Company. Issues were raised and settled. One of the preliminary issues that was raised before the Tribunal was whether the Tribunal had jurisdiction to entertain the claim. The Tribunal tried the said issue as a preliminary issue. The Tribunal came to the conclusion that the factory premises of Messrs. Dalmia Iron & Steel Co. Ltd. was not a "public place" within sub-section (24) of Section 2 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939. But the Tribunal was further of the view that under Section 110 of the said Act, the Tribunal had jurisdiction to adjudicate upon claims for compensation in respect of accidents occurring at places which were not public places. In the premises, the Tribunal came to the conclusion that the Tribunal had jurisdiction to entertain the claim. Being aggrieved by the aforesaid decision of the Tribunal, the respondent No. 1 being the owner of the Motor Vehicle moved an application under Article 226 of the Constitution and obtained a rule nisi. The rule ultimately came up for hearing before D. Basu, J. and was disposed of by an order made and judgment passed on 31st May, 1967. The judgment, however, is not available. We had caused searches to be made for the judgment in the records of this Court as well as before the Motor Accident Claims Tribunal but without any success. The parties were also unable to furnish any copy of the judgment. In the premises, it was not possible to reconstruct the judgment. But we have been able to gather the reasons or the grounds upon which the learned Judge disposed of the application from the arguments advanced by the learned advocates appearing on behalf of the parties. D. Basu, J. held that the Tribunal had no jurisdiction as the accident in question occurred at a place which was not a public place and, therefore, he made the Rule absolute. This appeal arises from the said decision of D. Basu, J.

2. The Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 is an Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Motor Vehicles. Sub-sec. (24) of Section 2 defines public place. The said definition is to the following effect:

"(24) 'public place' means a road, street, way or other place, whether a thoroughfare or not, to which the public have a right of access, and includes any place or stand at which passengers are picked up or set down by a stage carriage;"

The Act also defines "public service vehicles". But we are concerned in this case with Section 110 which deals with the setting up of the Claims Tribunals. Sub-s. (1) of Section 110 provides that the State Government might, by notification, constitute one or more Accident Claims Tribunal for such area as might be specified in the notification "for the purpose of adjudicating upon claims for compensation in respect of accidents involving the death of, or bodily injury to, persons arising out of the use of Motor Vehicles, or damages to any property of a third party so arising or both." The proviso to the said Section provides that if such claim includes a claim for compensation in respect of damage to property exceeding Rs. 2,000, the claimant might, at his discretion, refer the claim to a civil court for adjudication, and where a reference is so made, the Claims Tribunal should have no jurisdiction to entertain any question relating to such claim. Section 110-A deals with application for compensation and provides the manner of the making of the application. Section 110-AA deals with option given regarding claims for compensation in certain cases. It is not necessary for us to refer in detail to the other Sections in Chapter VIII dealing with claims and the awards that would be made by the Tribunal. But Chapter VIII also contains the obligation of insuring the Motor Vehicles against third party risks. Section 94 stipulates that no person shall use except as a passenger or cause or allow any other person to use a Motor Vehicle in a public place, unless there is in force in relation to the use of the vehicle by that person or that other person, as the case may be, a policy of insurance complying with the requirements of the Chapter. Sections 95A, 96, 97, 98, 99, 103 and 106 deal with the effect of such insurance policy and the obligation of the insurer to be liable for such policy. On behalf of the respondents it was contended that an insurer was liable only if the accident occurred in a public place. Secondly, it was emphasised that the obligation to have the vehicles registered arose only if the vehicles plied in public places.

3. The liability for damage is, however not limited to accidents occurring only in public places. That liability might arise under the law of Torts or under the provisions of the Fatal Accidents Act. How that liability has to be adjudicated in respect of accident arising out of the use of the Motor Vehicle has been provided by Section 110. Section 110 does not limit that jurisdiction only to accidents occurring in public places. The jurisdiction of the Claims Tribunals is for the purpose of adjudicating upon claims for compensation in respect of accidents (not limited to particular places) involving the death or bodily injury to or persons arising out of use of Motor Vehicles. The scope of this section has to be understood in conjunction with Section 110-F of the Act. Therefore, from the fact that the liabilities of insurers are limited only to accidents occurring in public places, it cannot be inferred that the jurisdiction of the Claims Tribunals is also restricted to accidents taking place in public places. In the aforesaid view of the matter, we are unable to accept the position that the Claims Tribunal had no jurisdiction to entertain this claim. This view we are taking is in consonance with the views of the Mysore High Court in the case of K. Hanumantha Rao v. National Aeronautical Laboratory, 1973 ACJ 78: (AIR 1974 Mys 16) and of the bench decision of the Madras High Court in the case of K. Gopalakrishnan v. Shankara Narayana, AIR 1968 Mad 436.

4. In the aforesaid view of the matter, this appeal is allowed, the judgment of the learned trial Judge, which is unfortunately not available, is set aside and the rule nisi is discharged. The Claims Tribunal is directed to dispose of the matter as expeditiously as possible.

5. In the facts and circumstances of this case, there will be no order as to costs.

6. Let this order be communicated to the Claims Tribunal as quickly as possible.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— I agree.
Appeal allowed.

ORDER:— This is an application under S. 14 (2) of the Arbitration Act, 1940 for directing the arbitrator to file the interim award made and published by him on the 6th January, 1977, in this Court.

2. In order to appreciate the controversy in this case, it is necessary to briefly refer to certain facts. Pramode Kumar Mittal, the petitioner herein, and the respondents all belong to the same family, hereinafter referred to as Mittal family. They are all descendants of the first respondent Bhuramal Chiranjilal Mittal. It is not necessary to refer to the actual relationship between the parties. There are several companies and firms which belong to the different parties to which also it is not necessary to refer in detail. The family was also interested in several trusts. Diverse disputes and/or differences arose in the Mittal family relating to and concerning the business of the said firms, trusts and companies and regarding the control and management thereof and also regarding the properties belonging to the parties. With a view to settle the said disputes the same were referred to the sole arbitration of Shri B. P. Khaitan, Solicitor and Advocate, by an arbitration agreement dated the 21st June, 1975. Thereafter, there were several meetings but on the 8th January, 1977 the petitioner received by registered post an interim award and/or directions signed by the arbitrator. The petitioner is asking that the said interim award and/or directions be filed in Court.

3. One of the contentions raised in this application was that the directions sent by the arbitrator was not an interim award and as such was not capable of being filed in Court. Having regard to the nature of the directions given and having regard to the definition of 'Award' under S. 2 (b) of the Arbitration Act, 1940 I am unable to uphold this objection. This objection was also not very seriously pressed on behalf of the respondents, who are opposing this application.

4. The next question that requires consideration in this case is whether this Court has jurisdiction to entertain this application for filing of the award, in other words, whether this is the appropriate Court for filing of the award. Under S. 2 (c) of the Act Court means a Civil Court having jurisdiction to decide the questions forming the subject-matter of the reference if the same had been the subject-matter of the suit. In para 21 (1) of the award the Arbitrator has directed as follows:

"21. (1) Andhra Steel Corporation Ltd. has a tenancy right in respect of premises No. 24 Alipore Road, Calcutta which is being used as residential house of members of Mittal family as also in respect of office space at No. 2, Brabourne Road, Calcutta. It has been agreed between the parties that Shri M. L. Mittal and members of his family will be entitled to the tenancy rights in respect of premises No. 24 Alipore Road, Calcutta as also the office space at No. 2, Brabourne Road, Calcutta 1, therefore direct the parties to cause Andhra Steel Corporation Ltd. to surrender its tenancy rights in respect of premises No. 24 Alipore, Calcutta as also office space at No. 2 Brabourne Road, Calcutta in favour of Shri M. L. Mittal or his nominee. Shri M. L. Mittal will be entitled to obtain the tenancy rights in respect of premises No. 24, Alipore Road, Calcutta as also office space at No. 2, Brabourne Road, Calcutta from the respective landlords either in his name or in the name of his nominee on such terms and conditions as he may think fit. I direct that the resolutions be passed in the meeting of the Board of Directors of Andhra Steel Corporation Ltd. surrendering the tenancy rights in consultation with Shri M. L. Mittal. The implementation of these directions will also reduce expenses of Andhra Steel Corporation Ltd."

Admittedly there was direction regarding the immoveable property within the jurisdiction of this Court, namely No. 2, Brabourne Road, Calcutta. Therefore, by virtue of the aforesaid direction this Court would have jurisdiction to entertain this application. On behalf of the opposing respondents it was contended that No. 2, Brabourne Road premises belonged to Andhra Steel Corporation

Ltd. and was not the subject-matter of properties agreed to be referred to the arbitration of Shri Khaitan. It was contended that what were agreed to be referred to arbitration were the disputes regarding the properties of the parties in their own name or in the names of the members of their families but disputes regarding properties standing in the name of separate corporate entities had not been agreed to be referred to arbitration. The arbitrator merely by giving direction in respect of the properties which had not been referred to his arbitration could not enlarge the scope of the arbitration, it was submitted. It, however, appears from the award of the arbitrator that all disputes had been agreed to be referred to his arbitration. The opposing respondents dispute this assumption. The question whether the No. 2 Brabourne Road property or other properties which are not standing in the name of the parties themselves and their families were the subject-matter of arbitration is a disputed question of fact which cannot and, in my opinion, should not be resolved in an application for filing of the award. It is clear, however, that there is a dispute whether the dispute in respect of the property which is within the jurisdiction of this Court and in respect of which directions have been given by the arbitrator had been referred to arbitration. That, in my opinion, would be sufficient part of the cause of action arising within the jurisdiction of this Court which will entitle this Court to entertain this application. In that view of the matter, I am unable to sustain this objection raised on behalf of the opposing respondents. The view which I am taking, in my opinion, is in consonance with the observations of the learned single Judge of this Court in the case of Anandi Lal Poddar v. Keshavdeo Poddar (AIR 1949 Cal 549) wherein the definition under S. 2 of the Arbitration Act 1899 was slightly different. This view is also in consonance with the view of another learned single Judge of this Court in the case of Union of India v. Khem Chand Rajkumar (ILR (1973) 1 Cal 529). I, however, make it clear that the question whether the arbitration agreement had included disputes regarding properties other than those standing in the names of the parties to the dispute or of the members of their family, will have to be decided later on if this contention is raised in appropriate proceeding and directions, if any, given for filing of the award will not preclude raising such contention.

5. The next objection was that the award being an unregistered document could not be directed to be filed. It was contended that the award purported or operated to create or declare or assign or limit or extinguish rights in the immovable property and therefore, it required registration under the Registration Act, 1908 and not having been registered it was not capable of being filed. I am unable to accept this contention. The award itself, in my opinion, does neither create nor assign nor declare nor extinguish any right in any immovable property. The award read properly only recognises certain rights in the immovable properties which would require further instruments to be executed in order to implement the directions contained in the award.

6. I have set out cl. 21 (1) of the award. This is typical of the directions contained in the award regarding immovable property. Read properly, in my opinion, this does not, by itself create or declare or assign or extinguish a title or interest in the property but only gives a narration of transactions which had taken place in the past or, at best, which gives certain directions in respect of the immovable assets; it had to be enforced by execution of other documents. Apart from that, as I have noticed before, the award admittedly contains a direction regarding the movable assets as well as immovable properties, movable properties being shares in several companies. It is possible to contend that the award is severable and, as such, the award in as far as the same deals with the movable assets is enforceable without registration. I need not, at this stage, decide finally whether the award is severable as such in the instant case but I recognise only the possibility of such severance. Where an award contains severable obligations, one requiring registration and the other not, such an award is admissible in evidence. See in this connection the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Mettapalli Chelamayya v. Mettapalli Venkataratnam, AIR 1972 SC 1121 at p. 1125 or the report. It is not necessary for me at this stage to decide whether in the facts and circumstances of this case, the award dealing with movable assets and the award dealing with immovable assets were severable. But I only notice that this award is capable of this consideration and, if this is so, unless the award is filed this question cannot, in my opinion, be adjudicated. In the aforesaid view of the matter, as the Supreme Court observed, even if the award requires registration, it could be filed before its registration. But it might not be enforceable or it might not be relied on in evidence for the assertion of the rights created in the immovable properties by the award. See for this observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Champalal v. Mst. Samrathbai, AIR 1960 SC 629 and specially the observation at p. 631 or the report. In my opinion, the facts and circumstances of the case of Satish Kumar v. Surinder Kumar, AIR 1970 SC 833 were different from the facts of the instant case. In view of the decisions of the Supreme Court referred to hereinbefore, I am of the opinion that the opposing respondents cannot get much assistance from the observations of the Division Bench of this Court in the case of Nanibala v. Ram Gopal, AIR 1945 Cal 19 and the observations of the learned single Judge in the case of Anandi Lal Poddar v. Keshav Lal Poddar, AIR 1949 Cal 549. For the reasons aforesaid, in any event if the award is not registered it does not prevent the Court from directing the filing of the award at this stage.

7. Next objection was that the award had not been properly stamped as required under Art. 12 of the Stamp Act. Undoubtedly that is so. But in view of the provision of S. 35 of the said Act, it would not be proper, in my opinion, to reject this application on this ground. But if the filing of the award is directed the document should be stamped properly by the arbitrator and for this purpose the applicant would, in the first instance, put the arbitrator in necessary funds. It appears that the arbitrator was called upon both by the petitioner as well as by the opposing respondents to file the award, which has not been done.

8. As I have negated the contentions of the opposing respondents, there will therefore be an order in terms of prayer (a) of the petition subject to this direction that the arbitrator will stamp the document and for this purpose the applicant would put in the necessary funds, in the first instance. This order, however, will not prejudice the opposing respondents from raising any of the contentions about the validity and the propriety of the award, inter alia, on the ground of jurisdiction as well as on any other grounds.

9. Costs of this application will be costs in the arbitration proceedings.

10. The arbitrator will act on the signed copy of the minutes.

Order accordingly.

P. N. Mitter, Satya Priya Ghosh and Amal Kumar Mukherji, for Appellant; Saktinath Mukherji and Tapan Kumar Mitra, for Respondent.

B. C. RAY, J.:— This appeal is at the instance of the plaintiff appellant against the judgment and decree dated 28th July, 1967 passed by Shri R. N. Patra, Subordinate Judge, Third Court, Alipore in Title Suit No. 4 of 1961 dismissing in part the plaintiff's suit with respect to the claim for Rs. 14,200 with interest thereon. The plaintiff appellant instituted a suit for recovery of Rs. 20,324 due on a mortgage stating inter alia that the defendants borrowed from him the sum of Rs. 14,200 on 16-11-57 and a further sum of Rs. 2,200 on November 10, 1958. There was a stipulation that the said sums would carry interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. In respect of the advance of Rs. 14,200 the defendant No. 1 drew a Hundi payable to the plaintiff on 30 days' sight without grace and it was accepted by the defendant No. 2 and as evidence of the later loan of Rs. 2,200 the defendant No. 1 gave an

'I owe you' in writing dated February 10, 1958. The Hundi was presented to the defendant No. 2 on maturity for payment but he did not make any payment. The notice of dishonour was given to each of the defendants. On March 28, 1956, the defendant No. 1 deposited with the plaintiff at 3/1, Bankshall Street the deed of lease dated 2-3-46 executed between Sm. Kumidini Ghosh and the defendant No. 1 by which the property in Schedule 'A' to the plaint has been let out at a monthly rent of Rs. 750 and subsequent increments in rent for the term of 15 years with option to renew of the same for a further period of 15 years. The same was deposited with an intent to create an equitable mortgage in favour of the plaintiff by the defendant No. 1 in respect of moneys advanced or to be advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant. It was made to secure the payments of a loan made by the defendant for the sum of Rs. 3,650 from the plaintiff under a promissory note dated March 28, 1956. This amount was included in the Hundi drawn by the defendant No. 1 in favour of the plaintiff for a sum of Rs. 5,000. Again this sum of Rs. 5,000 has been included in the loan for Rs. 14,200 referred to above. The said deposit of title deeds was regarded as security for loan that was made from time to time by the defendants. A sum of Rs. 17,600 and Rs. 2,716 respectively due and payable by the defendants as stated in schedule 'B' to the plaint. The defendants had not made any payment in repayment of the said loans and as such the plaintiff has filed the present suit for recovery of Rs. 20,324 i.e. Rs. 17,608 as principal and Rs. 2,716 as interest.

2. The defendant No. 1, Amiya Kumar Basu, filed a written statement on January 8, 1962 denying the allegations made in the plaint. It has been stated that a Hundi was executed by him as alleged but the same was without consideration. It was further alleged that the said Hundi was not executed in accordance with law and it did not bear the proper stamp fee and as such no loan was created by the said Hundi. It has also been alleged that the statement made in the plaint 'I owe you' has not the effect of creating the loan or it was not intended to be an admission of the loan. It has also been stated that there was no deposition of title deeds in respect of the alleged loans. The true fact is that the document of lease dated 2-6-46 along with some share scripts of A. K.

Collieries Limited was handed over to the plaintiff in order to help him in Rent Execution Case No. 4 of 1955 of the Court of the 5th Subordinate Judge at Alipore. This will be evident from the receipts granted on behalf of the plaintiff and it will falsify the story of the deposit of title deeds. It has also been stated that there was no deposit of the document with intent to create a security or an equitable mortgage in favour of the plaintiff.

3. The plaintiff in support of his case that the title deeds of the land described in schedule 'A' to the plaint has been deposited with an intent to create an equitable mortgage for the loans that have been advanced and will be advanced by the plaintiff examined three witnesses besides examining himself whereas the defendant has examined one witness in order to negative the case of deposit of title deeds with intent to create a mortgage in respect of the loans advanced and to be advanced. On July 28, 1967, the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, Alipore after considering the evidences on record held that the suit was barred by limitation under Art. 57 of the Indian Limitation Act (old). It was also held that the original lease deed dated March 2, 1946 was deposited by the defendant with the plaintiff on March 28, 1956 as security against the pro-note dated March 28, 1956. This would appear from letter Ext. 1 dated March 28, 1956. It was also held that there was no mortgage in favour of the plaintiff in respect of sum of Rs. 14,200 and as such the plaintiff's claim for the same was barred by limitation. The loan of Rs. 2,200 advanced on 10-2-58 was admitted by the defendant himself as would appear from Ext. 4. This claim is not barred by limitation. A decree for Rs. 2,200 with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum from 10-2-58 till the filing of the suit has therefore been passed by the court below against the defendants.

4. It is against this judgment and decree this appeal has been filed.

5. Mr. Pramatha Nath Mitter, learned Advocate for the appellant has submitted that the title deed was deposited with the plaintiff not only to secure the loan advanced on 28-3-56 but also the future loan that will be advanced to the defendant inasmuch as the said loan of Rs. 3,650 was included in the loan of Rs. 14,200 evidenced by the Hundi executed by the defendant on 16-12-57. Mr.

Mitter has secondly submitted that it is not necessary that for each loan fresh security is to be furnished. He also submitted that the keeping of the said title deed with the plaintiff and non-production of any receipt or evidence in support of repayment of the loan taken on 28-3-56 will prove that the said loan was not repaid and the said title deed has been kept as security for the payment of the loans advanced on different dates as evident from the Hundi marked X (3) for identification executed on 16-12-57. The loan of Rs. 14,200 being a mortgage loan the suit is not barred by limitation so far as this claim is concerned.

6. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent submitted that from the pleading of the plaintiff it is evident that the said title deed Ext. 3 was handed over to the plaintiff to secure the loan of Rs. 3,650 advanced on 28-3-56 under a promissory note. Mr. Mukherjee has further submitted that this pleading of the plaintiff in para 3 of the plaint read with the letter Ext. 1 whereby the title deed was deposited with the plaintiff clearly belied the case of the plaintiff that the said document was intended to be a security for all future loans that will be advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant. As such the loan of Rs. 14,200 evidenced by Hundi dated 16-12-57 does not constitute a mortgage and the trial Court has rightly held that the suit which was instituted more than three years after the date fixed for repayment is barred by limitation so far as this loan is concerned.

7. The plaintiff appellant has pleaded in paragraph 3 of the plaint that the registered deed of lease Ext. 3 dated 2nd March, 1946, was deposited with the plaintiff by the defendant No. 1 to secure the repayment of a loan made by the defendant for a sum of Rs. 3,650 from the plaintiff under a promissory note dated 28-3-56. It has further been pleaded that the said deposit was made also with an intent to create an equitable mortgage in favour of the plaintiff by the defendant No. 1 in respect of moneys that were advanced or will be advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant. It appears from Ext. 1, that is, letter written by Amiya Kumar Basu the defendant to the plaintiff on 28-3-56, that he deposited the original lease deed with the plaintiff at 3/1, Bankshall Street as security against the pro-note dated

28-3-56. This along with the pleading in paragraph 3 of the plaint clearly establishes that this title deed had been deposited in order to create a mortgage in respect of the loan of Rs. 3,650. The plaintiff has pleaded that the title deeds have been kept in deposit with him with an intention of securing other loans that were advanced subsequently. The plaintiff has further stated that this loan of Rs. 3,650 has been included in the loan of Rs. 14,200 evidenced by a hundi executed by the defendant. This hundi has not been marked as an exhibit and as such the plaintiff cannot prove that this loan of Rs. 14,200 has been included in the loan of Rs. 3,650. Moreover, the said loan of Rs. 14,200 was advanced on 16-12-57 as stated in the plaint and this suit was filed on 14th January, 1961. Now the question is whether this loan does constitute a mortgage as the title deeds came out of the custody of the plaintiff. I have already mentioned that the lease deed Ext. 3 was deposited by the defendant with the plaintiff on 28-3-56 as security against the pro-note dated 28-3-56. This is evident from the letter Ext. 1 written by the defendant to the plaintiff while depositing the title deed. There is nothing in writing to show that the lease deed was deposited with the plaintiff in order to secure all advances made subsequently. It is well established that mere deposit of title deeds with the creditor by the debtor will not constitute an equitable mortgage unless it is proved that the said title deeds had been deposited with the intention of creating a mortgage. It appears from Ext. 4 (1) a letter, written by Shri Makhan Lal Bondopadhyay, an employee of the plaintiff to the defendant on 9th June, 1956 that the lease deed was taken from the defendant promising to return the same to him within a day or two. This clearly shows that the document which was kept as security in respect of the loan of Rs. 3,650 was returned to the defendant. The court below is therefore perfectly justified in holding that the loan was repaid and the property was released from mortgage before 9-6-56. Moreover, P.W. 1, Makhan Lal Bondopadhyay admitted in cross-examination that the mortgage was created on 28-3-56 and on that day the document was made over. He also stated that the letter Ext. 1 was written by Shri Amiya Kumar Basu and the mortgage was created. He further admitted that there was no paper to show that the mortgage was created as security for future loans. He also admitted that the lease deed was taken by him from the defendant from his house at 34A, Sardar Sankar Road. The plaintiff who was examined on commission stated that on the date on which the letter of deposit was given, the mortgage was created. D.W. 1, Balai Chandra Das stated that on 28-3-56 a mortgage was executed by transfer of title deeds. He also stated that the lease deed was taken back on the date on which the loan was repaid. He further stated that the defendant made over the deeds to the employee of the plaintiff on taking receipt on 9-6-56. Thus considering these evidences we have no hesitation to hold that the lease deed was not deposited with the plaintiff with an intention to create security in respect of all loans that will be advanced subsequent to 28-3-56. We also hold that the plaintiff failed to prove by any cogent evidence that the defendant had kept the said title deeds with the plaintiff with an intention of creating a security in respect of the property on which the lease deed was taken by the plaintiff. It is pertinent to refer in this connection the decision reported in (1896) 23 Ind App 106 (PC), Miller v. Babu Madho Das where it has been observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council that in a suit against an insolvent and the official assignee for sale of mortgaged property, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that the title deeds in his possession after the insolvency was deposited with him as security before the adjudication of insolvency. In AIR 1965 SC 430, K. J. Nathan v. S. V. Maruthi Rao it has been held that in order to constitute a mortgage there are three requisites which are to be satisfied viz. (i) debt, (ii) deposit of title deed, and (iii) an intention that the deeds shall be security for the debt. Whether there is an intention that the deed shall be security for the debt is a question of fact which will have to be decided like any other fact on presumptions and on oral, documentary or circumstantial evidence. In a Bench decision of this Court reported in AIR 1974 Cal 319, Bejoy Ranjan Das v. Ajit Kumar Datta the above decision of the Supreme Court was followed and it was held that the question whether the deed was kept with the intention of creating the security for the debt has got to be decided on the materials on record. We, therefore, hold that the plaintiff failed to prove that the loan of Rs. 14,200 was secured by keeping the title deeds and as such there was no mortgage in favour of the plaintiff. The suit being filed beyond the period prescribed is barred by limitation under Art. 57 of the Indian Limitation Act (old) with respect to the claim for Rs. 14,200.

8. For the reasons aforesaid the appeal is dismissed. The judgment and decree of the court below are hereby affirmed. There will be no order as to costs in the circumstances of the case. Let the records be sent down to the court below immediately.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 346

A. N. SEN AND BIMAL CHANDRA BASAK, JJ.

Bhagirathmall Kanodia and others, Petitioners v. Ramricklal Girdhardas and others, Respondents.

Suit No: 1660 of 1950; Appeal No. 113 of 1975, D/- 23-12-1976.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10 — Necessary and proper parties — Suit for possession — Consent decree — Tenancy created in favour of third parties under terms of settlement — Order making third parties as party defendants to the suit — Validity.

Both the suits viz. the suit by the plaintiffs for possession of the premises and the suit by the defendants for declaration that they continued to be tenants under the plaintiffs were settled and the terms of settlement were filed. The plaintiffs agreed to create a tenancy in respect of the suit premises in favour of third parties and the settlement made necessary provisions for granting a tenancy in their favour on basis of the terms and conditions recorded in the settlement. There was no decree in favour of the third parties, nor did the plaintiffs intend that any decree would be passed in favour of third parties. The consent decree was between the parties to the suit i.e. the plaintiffs and the defendants. Thereafter, on an application made by the third parties the learned trial Judge passed an order directing the third parties to be added as parties defendants to the suit.

Held, the learned trial Judge had no jurisdiction to change the nature and character of the consent decree and to pass a decree in favour of third parties in the absence of consent of all the parties. For proper determination of the disputes in the two suits the presence of the third parties was not necessary nor were they necessary or proper parties. They had no kind of interest in the subject-matter of the two suits. Their interest came into existence only as a result of the settlement between the parties. The compromise of the suit between the parties to the suit on the basis of settlement cannot be said to form any part of the subject-matter of the dispute in the suit. (Para 10)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10 — Appeal — Suit for possession — Consent decree — Tenancy created in favour of third parties under terms of settlement — Order making third parties as party defendants to the suit — Held, order has effect of creating new decree and hence appealable. (Para 10)

Bhabra, for Petitioners; Dutt, for Respondents.

A. N. SEN, J.— This appeal arises out of the judgment and order passed by Ramendra Mohan Dutta, J. on the 20th of March 1975. The facts material for the purpose of this appeal may be briefly indicated.

2. A suit was filed by the appellants as plaintiffs who happened to be the Trustees of a Trust known as Rai Bahadur Bissessurlal Motilal Halwasiya Trust for recovery of possession of premises No. 150B, Lower Chitpur Road, Calcutta. The defendants to the said suit were (1) Ramricklal Girdhardas, (2) Narsinghadas Haldia and (3) Naaz Cinema. The defendants were carrying on business in the said premises under the name and style of Naaz Cinema. The defendants also filed a suit against the Trustees and in the said suit the defendants had asked for a declaration that the defendants continued to be the tenants under the plaintiffs in respect of the said premises. Both the said suits were settled and terms of settlement were filed. It is necessary to set out the terms of settlement which were filed in the suit. The said settlement between the parties to the suit reads as follows:—

"It is declared that the defendant No. 2 was never the tenant on the premises in suit and a decree is made accordingly.

The plaintiffs and the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 have settled the disputes in the suit on the following terms and conditions:

Terms of Settlement

That from 1st July, 1968 the tenancy in respect of the suit premises will be in favour of Mrs. Laxmi V. Mansata, Hirendra V. Mansata, Suryakanta V. Mansata, Jitendra V. Mansata of No. 87-K, Park Street, Calcutta-16. But for the purpose of serving notice of any sort in respect of tenancy the same shall be deemed to have been served on all if served on any one of them.

2. That the tenancy shall be according to English Calendar month starting from the 1st day of the month and ending with the last day of the same month.

3. That on and from 1st July, 1968 the rent of the suit premises will be Rs. 2,000 (Rupees two thousand) only per month which shall be payable to the plaintiffs landlords of their succeeding month for which the rent shall be due.

4. That the rent of Rs. 2,000 per month, as aforesaid, is inclusive of occupiers' share of the Corporation taxes.

5. That the tenant shall pay from 1st July, 1968 a sum of Rs. 600 (Rupees six hundred) per month by way of hire charged for furnitures along with the rent as aforesaid and will continue to pay the same so long they do not surrender the tenancy or give vacant possession of the premises to the landlords.

6. That the tenants will use the Cinema House being the premises in suit for exhibition of Films and theatrical performance with liberty to make provisions for Canteen and Restaurants outside the auditorium for the facility of its audience only.

7. That the tenants paying rent regularly as per Cl. 3 and hire charges as per clause No. 5 and using the premises as per Cl. 6 will not be liable to be evicted by the plaintiff/landlords on any grounds whatsoever including the grounds of own use and occupation and/or buildings or re-buildings except as provided herein-after.

8. That the tenants shall have the option to surrender the tenancy to the plaintiff/landlords or their successors in office by giving six calendar months' notice in writing in advance to them.

9. That the tenants shall carry out all the requisitions and requirements imposed by any competent authority for carrying on the said Cinema business at the suit premises and in no way the plaintiffs/landlords shall be liable for the breach of same by the tenants.

10. The tenants shall be entitled to make at their own costs any additions and alterations to their demised premises or any part thereof including constructional and structural changes and erect any kind of permanent structures and also to install airconditioning plants, machines and apparatus, as would be required from time to time only for the improvement of the Cinema business with prior approval in writing of the landlords and such approval shall not be withheld provided that any such additions and/or alterations will not diminish the total value of the premises in suit. The landlords will sign any plans or drawings which the tenants may submit from time to time for procuring the sanction of the Calcutta Corporation or other local or statutory bodies in connection with such additions, alterations and improvements. But, under no circumstances, the tenants are allowed to make unauthorised constructions, additions or alterations from now onwards which in any way contravenes any law for the time being in force. All repairs, if any, required to the demised premises, the same will be done by the tenants at their own costs. All additions and alterations of a fixed nature will belong to the landlords. The tenants shall have no right to demolish the demised premises in its entirety.

11. The tenants will have the right to sublet the premises partly or wholly to its allied concerns limited to the purpose hereinbefore mentioned but subletting must have the prior approval of the landlords in writing and such permission shall not be unduly withheld. Provided that notwithstanding such subletting the tenants will be responsible for the regular payment of rent and for due performance of the other terms and conditions of the tenancy. Such subtenants shall be bound to observe all the terms and conditions mentioned herein and any breach of any of the terms by the sub-tenants shall be deemed to be the breach by the tenants.

12. That the plaintiffs/landlords shall be entitled to issue 4 (four) passes for free entry in any available class in any or every show at the cinema house except Friday, Saturday and Sunday and public holidays and in the first week of the picture. The entertainment tax, if any, will be payable by the pass-holders.

13. Notwithstanding anything contained hereinabove, if the tenants fail to pay the rent and hire charges in time in respect of the suit premises for any two months or make any breach of any of the terms the landlords shall have the right to take action for ejectment of the tenants.

14. Suit No. 1394 of 1961 filed by the defendant No. 1 in his Court against the plaintiffs in the suit and others in the High Court at Calcutta (Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction) is unconditionally withdrawn against all the parties and there will be no order of costs in that suit.

15. Each party will bear and pay its respective costs in the suit.

Dated this 6th day of August, 1968.

The said settlement was signed on behalf of the plaintiffs, on behalf of the defendants and also on behalf of the Mansatas in whose favour a tenancy on the terms and conditions mentioned in the settlement was agreed to be created.

3. Though the said settlement was put in on the 7th of August 1968, it appears that the decree on the basis of the said settlement was not drawn up for a number of years thereafter. It further appears that the department had pointed out to the Court that the department felt some difficulty in drawing up the said decree on the basis of the said settlement.

4. An application was thereafter made on the 29th of January 1975 on behalf of the Mansatas in whose favour the tenancy in respect of the said premises was to be created under the said settlement for being added as parties to the said suit. The prayers of the Mansatas in the said application were—

(a) That the petitioners be added as parties defendants to the above suit.

(b) That the Cause Title of the suit in the plaint and the suit register be amended as shown in Annexure 'B' to the petition being the grounds herein.

(c) That the minutes of the decree dated 7th August 1968 be rectified as shown in Annexure 'B' to the petition being the grounds herein.

(d) Such other incidental orders be made and directions be given as may be necessary to give effect to the said amendments.

(e) Costs of and incidental to this application be paid by the plaintiffs.

5. The said application moved on behalf of the Mansatas was opposed on behalf of the plaintiffs. The learned trial Judge for reasons recorded in his judgment passed an order directing the Mansatas to be added as party defendants to the suit in terms of prayer (a) of the said application. He also made further order directing that the minutes of the decree dated 7th August 1968 be rectified in the manner following:—

"The suit being suit No. 1650 of 1960. Bhagirathmal Kanodia and others v. Ramricklal Girdhardas is decreed in terms of the settlement put in. The suit do stand dismissed as against the defendant No. 2, Narshingdas Haldia. Leave is given to Mr. B. Mullick, Solicitor, to file the warrant of attorney on behalf of the added defendants on his undertaking to complete the order of amendment. The amendment be effected within a fortnight after the reopening of the Court after Easter Holidays on a signed copy of the minutes. The order and the decree be drawn up and completed expeditiously. Leave is granted to the plaintiffs in the cross suit being No. 1399 of 1961 Ramricklal Girdhardas and others v. Bhagirathmal Kanodia and others to withdraw the same unconditionally against all the parties and no order is made in respect of costs thereof. In the facts and circumstances of this case the applicants must pay the costs of this application to the plaintiffs. Interim order made herein is vacated. Let the order not to be effected till 10th April, 1975. Let this order be incorporated in the minutes of the order dated 7th August 1968. Department to act on a signed copy of the minutes." The learned Judge in his judgment has observed that "If the order as prayed for is made the Mansatas would enjoy their rights under a decree which would be perfected after the same would be drawn up, completed and filed."

6. Against the said order of the learned trial Judge, the plaintiffs in the suit have preferred this appeal.

7. The principal contention of Mr. Bhabra who has appeared on behalf of the appellants in support of this appeal is that the learned trial Judge had no jurisdiction to pass the order making the Mansatas as party defendants to the said suit and passing a decree in their favour in the said suit. Mr. Bhabra has argued that the decree is a consent decree and parties to the decree were the plaintiffs and the defendants to the suit. It is the argument of Mr. Bhabra that though under the terms of settlement the plaintiffs agreed to create a tenancy in favour of the Mansatas and the said agreement, if necessary, may be enforced in an appropriate proceeding by way of a suit, the learned trial Judge had no jurisdiction to pass a decree in favour of the Mansatas on the basis of the said settlement. Mr. Bhabra has submitted that on the basis of the said settlement the tenancy has already been created in favour of the Mansatas who has come into possession of the said premises on the basis of the said settlement. It is his argument that if there be any disputes between the Mansatas and the plaintiffs with regard to the said agreement between the parties, the said disputes can be adjudicated in a suit. He contends that the plaintiffs never agreed to a decree being passed in favour of the Mansatas in the said suit filed by them for possession against the defendants in the said suit. Mr. Bhabra argues that the plaintiffs had undoubtedly intended to create a tenancy in favour of the Mansatas on the basis of the said settlement but the plaintiffs had never agreed to submit to a decree in favour of the Mansatas. It is the argument of Mr. Bhabra that the said decree was a consent decree which was binding on the parties to the said decree and parties to the decree were parties to the suit. Mr. Bhabra argues that as the decree was a consent decree the learned Judge did not have any jurisdiction without the consent of the parties to alter the nature or character of the said decree and convert the said decree into a decree in favour of the Mansatas. It is the argument of Mr. Bhabra that the plaintiffs never agreed to a decree being passed in favour of the Mansatas and the plaintiffs very likely would not have settled the suit on these terms if the plaintiffs would be called upon to submit to a decree in favour of the Mansatas on the basis of the said settlement. Mr. Bhabra has submitted that the appellants do not have any objection to the said settlement and the tenancy which has been created in favour of the Mansatas on the basis of the said settlement. It is his submission that the appellants have acted and want to act on the basis of the said settlement and if the Mansatas have any grievance against the appellants in the matter of implementation of the said agreement between the parties the Mansatas can take necessary action and file a suit against the plaintiffs for enforcement of the said contract between the parties. He contends that the plaintiffs have never agreed that Mansatas would enjoy any rights under a decree or there will be a decree in favour of the Mansatas against the plaintiffs which the Mansatas could execute against the plaintiffs on the basis of the said settlement. Mr. Bhabra has further submitted that the question whether the decree is executable or not is indeed a debatable question. It may be, according to Mr. Bhabra, that the said decree is not executable as the said decree does not relate to the subject-matter of the suit and brings in its scope matters which are entirely extraneous to the subject-matter of the suit. Mr. Bhabra has fairly stated before us that if the Mansatas defendants agree to this clarification that the said decree is not executable and will not be executed by the Mansatas against the plaintiffs/appellants he will not have any grievance merely to the addition of the Mansatas as parties to the suit. As we have already observed his main grievance is against the passing of the decree against the plaintiffs in the suit in favour of the Mansatas.

8. On behalf of the Mansatas Mr. Dutt has argued that the said order of the learned trial Judge is perfectly valid and proper. He has argued that as the decree has not been drawn up and perfected the suit was still continuing and had not terminated and the learned trial Judge had therefore jurisdiction to pass appropriate orders in the suit. He has contended that as the suit was still pending and had not terminated, the learned trial Judge on the application of the Mansatas who are vitally interested in the settlement was perfectly right in adding the Mansatas as party defendants to the suit under the provisions of O. 1, R. 10 of the Civil P. C. Mr. Dutt has raised an objection that as the impugned order is an order passed by the learned trial Judge on an application under O. 1, R. 10 of the Civil P. C. this appeal is incompetent and is not maintainable. In support of his contention that the suit remains pending till the decree had been perfected Mr. Dutt has referred to the following decisions:— 1. Sarojendra Kumar Dutt v. Purnachandra Sinha, reported in AIR 1949 Cal 24 at p. 37. 2. Lakshman Chandra Das v. Nikunja Moni Dassi, reported in 27 Cal WN 755: (AIR 1924 Cal 188). 3. Mohabir Proshad Choudhury v. Chandra Sekhar Sahi, reported in 19 Cal WN 1021: (AIR 1915 Cal 586 (1)).

9. Mr. Dutt has placed particular reliance on the following observations of Das J. in the case of Sarojendra Kumar Dutt v. Purnachandra Sinha, AIR 1949 Cal 24 at p. 37 — "There is, therefore, no escape from the conclusion that the suit is not terminated until the decree is perfected, i.e., completed and filed". Mr. Dutt has argued that as a result of the order adding the Mansatas as parties to the suit, there has been no alteration or change in the consent decree:

10. In the facts and circumstances of this case, we are of the opinion that the order passed by the learned trial Judge clearly changes the nature of the consent decree. Under the terms of settlement there was no decree in favour of the Mansatas. If the parties had intended to create a decree in favour of the Mansatas the parties would, undoubtedly, have impleaded the Mansatas as party to the suit before the terms of settlement were filed. We earlier indicated the nature of the suit which was filed by the plaintiffs and also the nature of the suit which was filed by the defendants against the appellants. It cannot be said by any stretch of imagination that the Mansatas were necessary or proper parties to any of the said two suits. It appears that at the time of settlement of the dispute between the parties, the plaintiffs agreed to create a tenancy in respect of the said premises in favour of the Mansatas and the settlement between the parties made necessary provisions for granting of a tenancy in favour of the Mansatas on the basis of the terms and conditions recorded in the settlement between the parties to the suit. As the tenancy was being created in favour of the Mansatas, the Mansatas also signed the said terms of settlement. There was no decree in favour of the Mansatas and it does not appear that the plaintiffs ever intended that any decree would be passed in favour of the Mansatas. The consent decree was a decree between the parties to the suit and the parties to the suit were the plaintiffs and the defendants. The Mansatas were not parties to the suit. The effect of the order of the learned trial Judge is to change the entire character of the consent decree, and to pass a decree in favour of the Mansatas who have not filed any suit and who were not parties to any of the suits filed. In our opinion, the learned trial Judge had no jurisdiction to change the nature and character of the consent decree by adding the Mansatas as parties to the suit and by directing that there will be a decree in favour of the Mansatas in the absence of consent of all the parties. As, in our view, the nature of the decree has been completely changed by the order passed by the learned trial Judge, it cannot be said that the order passed by the learned trial Judge was merely an order adding the Mansatas as parties to the suit under the provisions of O. 1, R. 10 of the Code and, therefore, the order is not appealable. The order of the learned trial Judge has the effect of bringing about a new decree and the appeal, therefore, in the facts of the instant case, is perfectly competent. We have also our doubts as to whether the provisions of O. 1, R. 10 can be said to be applicable in the facts of the present case. For proper determination of the suit filed by the plaintiffs against the defendants in the suit the presence of the Mansatas was in no way necessary. For determination of the suit filed by the defendants against the appellants the Mansatas were also not necessary or proper parties. The Mansatas had no kind of interest in the subject-matter of the suit which was filed by the appellant as the plaintiffs against the defendants in their action and by the defendants against the appellants. As we have earlier observed, the suit by the appellants was a suit for possession of the premises and for other reliefs and the suit by the defendants was a suit for declaration that they continued to be tenants under the plaintiffs. In these suits the Mansatas had no interests whatsoever. It cannot be said that for a proper adjudication of the disputes in the said two suits the presence of the Mansatas was necessary. It cannot also be said that any of the said suits were not properly instituted. The interest of the Mansatas came into existence only as a result of the settlement between the parties. The compromise of the suit between the parties to the suit on the basis of the settlement cannot be said to form any part of the subject-matter of the dispute in the suit. In the view that we have taken we do not consider it necessary to pursue this matter any further and to decide the further question whether the application of the Mansatas under O. 1. R. 10 would be maintainable or not. The executability of the decree does not form any part of the subject-matter of the present proceeding. Though we are inclined to the view that the settlement, which relates to matters entirely outside the scope of the suit, could not be enforced in execution of the decree, yet in the view that we have taken and as the said question does not fall for determination in the present appeal, we do not propose to discuss this contention of Mr. Bhabra any further and we do not think it necessary to decide this question in the present appeal. As we have already observed the learned trial Judge clearly erred in passing the order as a result of which the character of the entire consent decree was changed. The decree was a consent decree and the learned trial Judge did not indeed have any jurisdiction to change or modify the said decree in the absence of the consent of the parties. In the view that we have taken we do not consider it necessary to deal with the cases which have been cited from the Bar. In our view, the order passed by the learned trial Judge in the instant case is clearly untenable and is without jurisdiction.

11. The appeal is, therefore, allowed. The order of the learned trial Judge is set aside. The application of the Mansatas is dismissed. The learned trial Judge in his order has directed that the Mansatas would pay the costs of the application. That part of the order of the learned trial Judge is sustained. The Mansata-respondents will pay the costs of the appeal to the appellants.

12. If any decree had been drawn up and perfected on the basis of the order passed by the learned trial Judge on the 7th August, 1968 which is under appeal, the said decree is hereby set aside. The Department will proceed to draw up a fresh decree on the basis of the settlement of the suit between the parties to the suit and will include the terms of settlement as an annexure to the said decree between the parties to the suit.

BIMAL CHANDRA BASAK, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

NIRMAL CHANDRA MUKHERJI AND BANKIM CHANDRA RAY, JJ.

Sashi Bhusan Mitra and others. Appellants v. Ramlal Mitra, Respondent.

Appeal From Original Order No. 1062 of 1975, D/- 1-9-1976.*

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 90 — Order of confirmation of sale — May be implied — Application to set aside sale on ground of irregularity — Trial Court dismissing the application in default — No express order for confirmation of sale necessary — Sale becomes absolute.

The judgment-debtor filed an application under O. 34, R. 5 for making payment of the amount due under the decree on the ground that the trial Court while dismissing for default his application under O. 21, R. 90 had not passed any express order for confirmation of sale. Held that the fact that in this case a distinct order has not been recorded confirming the sale is quite immaterial. An express order for confirmation of sale is not absolutely necessary. Case law discussed. (Para 15)

Dr. S. Das and Manula Chowdhri, for Appellants; Saktinath Mukherjee, Rathindra Kumar Dey, Shyamal Sen and Asoke Kr. Sengupta, for Respondent.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— This is an appeal against an order dated 5th May, 1975 passed by Shri M. M. Das, 4th Subordinate Judge, Alipore in Title Execution

* (Against order of M. M. Das, Sub-J., 4th Court of Zillah 24 Parganas Alipore in case No. 1 of 1971. D/- 5-5-1975.)

Case No. 1 of 1971 dismissing the application filed by the appellant under O. 34, R. 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

The property in suit is 75, Chakraberia North, Calcutta, comprising 10 cottahs of land with two storied buildings. The property was sold at Rs. 41,600 to the decree-holder in execution of a mortgage decree. The appellant, who is the judgment-debtor filed an application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code for setting aside the sale. A Miscellaneous Case was started and the same was dismissed for default. Thereafter the appellant filed an application under S. 151 of the Code for setting aside the order of dismissal. That application was also dismissed. The appellant also filed an application under S. 36 of the Bengal Money Lenders Act and obtained order staying execution proceedings till the disposal of the case. The appellant preferred an appeal to this Court against order dated 16th June 1973 by which the application under O. 21, R. 90 was dismissed. The appeal was numbered at F.M.A.T. 2827 of 1974. On 11th January 1975 the appellant made an application under O. 34, R. 5 of the Code and deposited Rs. 19,625 for decretal amount, costs and interest and also 5% of the purchase money on Rs. 41,600. The application under the Bengal Money Lenders Act was not pressed and the same was dismissed for non-prosecution in view of the application under O. 34, R. 5 of the Code. The application under O. 34, R. 5 was dismissed by the Court below on the ground that the sale was deemed to be confirmed on 16th of June 1973 when the application under O. 21, R. 90 was dismissed although the court omitted to pass an order confirming the sale, and also on the ground that there was no appeal from the order of dismissal dated 16th of June 1973 and there was no order of stay. Being aggrieved by the aforesaid order, the judgment-debtor has preferred the present appeal.

3. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent, raises a preliminary objection about the maintainability of the appeal. Mr. Mukherjee submits that the suit for the enforcement of the mortgage decree and recovery of dues was valued at Rs. 13,000, and that being so, any proceeding in connection with that suit should be similarly valued and as such the learned District Judge was the proper court where the appeal ought to have been filed. As the valuation of the subject-matter falls within the jurisdiction of that court the appeal has been wrongly filed in this Court. Mr. Mukherjee submits that the valuation of the suit determines the forum of the appeal. In support of his contention he refers to several decisions. He first cites a case reported in AIR 1954 SC 340 (Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan). In this case it was held that the decree passed without jurisdiction is a nullity. It was further held "The words 'unless the over-valuation or under-valuation thereof has prejudicially affected the disposal of the suit or appeal on its merits' in S. 11 clearly show that the decrees passed in such cases are liable to be interfered with in an appellate court, not in all cases and as a matter of course, but only if prejudice such as is mentioned in the section results and that the prejudice contemplated by the section is something different from the fact of the appeal having been heard in a forum which would not have been competent to hear it on a correct valuation of the suit as ultimately determined". We do not see how the principle laid down in this case applies to the fact of the present case.

4. Mr. Mukherjee next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1923 Cal 405 (Harihar Das Chowdhury v. Raj Kumar Mukherjee). In this case it has been held that "When S. 21 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act refers to the value of the original suit, the reference is to the valuation as made by the plaintiff, subject to such amendment as may have been made under the orders of the trial court. The Legislature did not intend that the expression 'the value of the original suit' in S. 21 means the real value of the subject-matter of the original suit, regardless of what may have happened in the trial court." In this case the plaintiff filed a suit for redemption and valued the same at Rs. 3,600. The plaintiff got a decree. The defendant at the trial did not challenge the valuation. After the defendants have been defeated they sought to change the forum of appeal by the assertion that the value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds Rs. 10,000. It was held that the defendants should not be permitted to take recourse to such a procedure. In the present case the suit was valued at Rs. 13,000. But the total decretal dues and costs were much higher and the appellant deposited a sum of Rs. 19,625 for decretal amount, costs and interest and also 5% of the purchase money on Rs. 41,600. The judgment-debtor previously filed F.M.A.T. No. 2827 of 1974 in this Court against the order dismissing his application under S. 151 of the Code. The present appeal has been valued by the appellant at Rs. 16,000. Dr. Das contends that though the original suit was for Rs. 13,000 as the decretal amount was much higher he has rightly filed the appeal in this Court. It is submitted by Dr. Das that in a mortgage suit the valuation for the purpose of the suit and the valuation for the purpose of an appeal may vary.

5. Mr. Mukherjee also refers to a decision reported in AIR 1942 Cal 60 (Priya Nath Roy v. Sridhar Chandra Ray). In this case it was held "In a suit for partition the decision of the trial court as to valuation of the subject-matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction must be taken as final and conclusive during all the stages of the suit irrespective of what the parties might agree later on to be the actual market value of the suit properties and must determine the right of appeal under S. 21". The principle laid down in this case does not apply to the facts of the present case.

6. The last case referred to by Mr. Mukherjee on this point has been reported in AIR 1958 Pat 430 (FB) (Deonath Missir v. Chandraman Missir). In this case a suit for partition was valued at Rs. 5,000. It was held that "For the purpose of determining the forum of the appeal under S. 21 of the Civil Courts Act, the value of the suit as given in the plaint, not challenged by the defendants and accepted by the trial court, must be deemed to be the only value of the suit, and the appeal against the final decree in the suit would lie to the District Judge". This principle also does not apply to the facts of the present case. Considering the facts and circumstances of the case, we are of the opinion that though the mortgage suit was valued at Rs. 13,000 the present appeal has been rightly valued and that being so, this appeal is maintainable. The objection raised by Mr. Mukherjee is negatived.

7. Now with regards to the merits of the appeal. Dr. Das submits that after the judgment-debtor's application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code was dismissed for default no order was passed by the court confirming the sale, and as such the judgment-debtor's application under

O. 34, R. 5 was maintainable. The learned Judge wrongly dismissed the application holding that the sale was confirmed on 16th June 1973 when the application under O. 21, R. 90 was dismissed for default although it is the admitted position that no order was passed by the learned Judge confirming the sale. In support of his contention Dr. Das has placed before us several decisions. The first case referred to by Dr. Das has been reported in AIR 1933 Cal 311 (Chhogan Lal Bagri v. Behari Lal Saha Ray). This case dealt with the period of limitation for filing an application for setting aside a sale after the same was confirmed. It was further held in that case that the order was passed by the court under S. 47 rejecting the application for delivery of possession by the decree-holder auction-purchaser and as such the appeal was competent. This is not an authority on the point whether when an application under O. 21, R. 90 is dismissed the sale automatically becomes absolute or the sale cannot be considered to be absolute when a formal order was not passed by the court.

8. The next case relied on by Dr. Das has been reported in (1896) 23 Ind App 45 (PC) (Bajinath Sahai v. Ramgut Singh). In this case their Lordships were of the opinion that there was no final, conclusive and definitive order confirming the sale while the question whether the sale should be confirmed was in litigation or until the order of the Commissioner became definitive and operative by the final judgment of the Board of Revenue. The facts of this case are completely different from the facts of the present case.

9. The next case referred to by Dr. Das has been reported in (1934) 38 Cal WN 901: (AIR 1934 PC 134) (Chandra Mani Saha v. Sreemati Anarjan Bibi). In this case it was held "When an appeal has been taken from an order made under O. 21, R. 92 disallowing an application for setting aside a sale, the sale does not become absolute within the meaning of Art. 180 of the Limitation Act until the disposal of the appeal, even though the first court may have confirmed the sale". In this case their Lordships were deciding the question of limitation and it was held "The period provided for in Art. 180 for an application for delivery of possession should be computed, when there has been an appeal from an order refusing to set aside the sale, from the date of the final disposal of the appeal".

10. Dr. Das next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1941 Cal 411 (Mandi Mia v. Sekander Mea). In this case it has been held that "In the absence of an order setting aside a sale, it is the duty of the Court to confirm the sale and there is no provision in the Civil Procedure Code for an application to be made by the auction purchaser for confirmation of the sale". At page 412 it has been observed "Under O. 21, R. 92 Civil Procedure Code, the sale has got to be confirmed when there is no application under O. 21, Rr. 89, 90 or 91 Civil Procedure Code or when such application is made and disallowed: in the absence of an order setting aside a sale, it is the duty of the court to confirm the sale and there is no provision in the Code of Civil Procedure for an application to be made by the auction purchaser for confirmation of the sale. We do not see how this decision helps the appellant. It has been clearly laid down that when an application is made and disallowed it is the duty of the court to confirm the sale. Their Lordships have not laid down that it is necessary for the court to pass a formal order confirming the sale. Dr. Das also relies on a decision reported in AIR 1967 SC 608 (Janak Raj v. Gurdial Singh). In this case in execution of an ex parte money decree a house property was sold. The judgment-debtor did not apply for setting aside the sale but applied for setting aside the decree, but the decree was reversed. After reversal, the auction-purchaser filed an application under O. 21, R. 92 for confirmation of sale. It was held that the sale must be confirmed notwithstanding reversal of decree after sale. Title of purchaser related back to date of sale and not to that of its confirmation. This case also, in our opinion, does not help the appellant. Dr. Das next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1956 Cal 510 (Sm. Priti Rekha Mitra v. Narayan Chandra Dutta). In this case it has been laid down that "In a mortgage suit for sale the equity of redemption can be claimed by the mortgagor when an application by the purchaser himself is pending for confirmation of the sale. The equity of redemption in such cases is not extinguished by the final decree for sale nor by the actual sale itself but survives until the sale is confirmed and made absolute under O. 21, R. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code". This proposition of law is not disputed by Mr. Mukherjee appearing on behalf of the respondent.

11. The next case cited by Dr. Das has been reported in (1934) 38 Cal WN 924: (AIR 1934 Cal 822) (Baruram Kalwar. Auction-purchaser v. Upendra Nath Das). In this case it was held "Under O. 34, R. 5, C.P.C. if the judgment-debtor pays into Court the amount due from him after the disallowance of an application under O. 21, R. 90 and before it has been possible to confirm the sale (as when the record has not arrived to the Court which held the sale from the Appellate Court which dealt with the application for setting the sale aside), the sale must be set aside, although such payment may be long after the sale and although the delay may have been caused by action of the judgment-debtor". The facts of the present case are not such that it can be said that it became impossible to confirm the sale. The contention of Dr. Das is that in the absence of an order passed by the Court for confirmation of the sale, the sale was not made absolute while Mr. Mukherjee contends that rejection of the application under O. 21, R. 90 is confirmation of the sale. In such cases the confirmation is automatic and no formal order need be passed. Dr. Das also refers to a decision reported in AIR 1963 Mad 423 (Chellappa Chettiar v. T. P. Kalyanasundaram). In this case it was held "The right conferred by O. 34, R. 5 is a substantive right and it should not be whittled down by any considerations of the judgment-debtor being responsible for the delay in passing the order of confirmation of the sale". We are not required in the present case to come to a decision about the question of delay caused by the judgment-debtor.

12. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent, very strongly contends that when an application for setting aside a sale under O. 21, R. 90 is dismissed, the automatic consequence is that the sale becomes confirmed and that being so, it is not at all necessary that a formal order need be passed by the court confirming the sale. In support of his contention Mr. Mukherjee cites before us several authorities. The first case cited has been reported in (1897) ILR 24 Cal 682 (Khetter Nath Biswas v. Faizuddin Ali). In this case the court below set aside the sale upon payment by the applicant of the mortgage due with interest and costs. It was held by this court that "Inasmuch as under S. 312 of the Code of Civil Procedure the auction-purchaser was entitled to have an order confirming the sale unless the sale were set aside under Section 310A or S. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure and as the sale was not set aside under either of these sections, the court below had no jurisdiction to set aside the sale upon payment by the applicant of the mortgage money with interest and costs".

13. Mr. Mukherjee next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1925 Cal 510 (Narendra Nath Chatterjee v. Rakhal Das Tarafdar). In this case though the point before their Lordships was whether the High Court has jurisdiction to interfere in revision with an order dismissing an application under O. 21, R. 90 for default, their Lordships held that "The effect of the dismissal of an application under O. 21, R. 90 even for default is to confirm the sale under R. 92 and hence an appeal lies against the order and the High Court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the order in revision".

14. Mr. Mukherjee next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1927 Cal 881 (Mt. Rehela Khatun v. Amburennessa Choudhurani). In this case it has been held by a Division Bench that "The sale certificate is no more than evidence of title. Absence in the record of a sale certificate or of a formal order confirming the sale, does not affect the purchaser's title when in substance and in fact the Court did confirm the sale". In this case there was no formal order by the court confirming the sale and that being so, the facts are similar to the facts of the present case. Reference has also been made by Mr. Mukherjee to a decision reported in AIR 1929 Cal 407 (2) (Ansarali v. Bhim Sankar Dutta Tewari). In this case their Lordships have laid down "When no formal order has been recorded confirming the sale and the application under O. 21, R. 90 has been dismissed for default for non-appearance of both parties to the proceeding, the order of dismissal passed under those circumstances is open to appeal". It has been further held that "It is the disallowing of the application made under O. 21, R. 90 which corresponds to the order refusing to set aside a sale. The fact that a distinct order has not been recorded confirming the sale does not alter the character of the order disallowing an application under O. 21, R. 90."

15. Mr. Mukherjee next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1958 Mad 317 (Veda Goundar v. Arunachalam Chettiar).

It has been held in this case that "Confirmation of sale under O. 21, R. 92 does not require an application by the auction-purchaser. Confirmation is a statutory obligation imposed on the court, if the requirements of O. 21, R. 92 are satisfied". Mr. Mukherjee also draws our attention to the findings of their Lordships in the case reported in AIR 1968 SC 86 (Hukumchand v. Bansilal). Their Lordships found that "Under O. 21, R. 92 the Court was bound to confirm the sale at once when it dismissed the application under O. 21, R. 90". We find that a Privy Council decision reported in (1931) 35 Cal WN 381: (AIR 1931 PC 33) very much helps the respondent. At page 383 it has been observed by Lord Macmillan that "It would be idle to contend that because in this case there was, technically, no confirmation of the sale, it could be set aside. It could not be set aside except on payment of 5% under R. 89. The purchaser has an absolutely vested interest in the property, although there is a divesting power in the Court under Rr. 89 and 90. But if a party fails to avail himself of the appropriate provision the sale shall be confirmed; see R. 92. The fact that in this case a distinct order has not been recorded confirming the sale, is quite immaterial". In order to come to this decision their Lordships relied on the case reported in (1929) ILR 56 Cal 969 at p. 974: (AIR 1929 Cal 407 (2)) (Ansarali v. Bhim Sankar Dutta Tewari). Relying on the decision referred to above and considering the facts and circumstances of the case we negative the contention raised by Dr. Das that an express order for confirmation of sale is absolutely necessary. We also negative the argument advanced by Dr. Das that an application by the auction-purchaser for an order for confirmation of sale is necessary.

16. Dr. Das next contends that even if the order is passed confirming the sale, the sale will not be absolute until the disposal of the appeal. The right to redeem mortgage under O. 34, R. 5 will remain open till the sale becomes absolute. As we have held that the sale has already become absolute after the application under O. 21, R. 90 was dismissed we negative this contention of Dr. Das. We also negative the contention that the sale does not become absolute till the disposal of the appeal.

17. For all the reasons stated above this appeal is dismissed. The order passed by the court below is confirmed. Considering the facts and circumstances of the case we, however, do not pass any order for costs.

B. C. RAY, J.— I agree,

ORDER

On the prayer of the learned Advocate for the appellant let the operation of the order remain stayed for a period of two weeks from date.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 356

MRS. PADMA KHASTGIR, J.

C. M. Agarwalla, Plaintiff v. Halar Salt and Chemical Works and others, Defendants.

Suit No. 511 of 1959, D/- 18-7-1977.

(A) Torts — Malicious prosecution — Action for — Essential elements.

The generally accepted essential elements in a cause of action for malicious prosecution, in conformity with the malicious decisions are: (1) that the plaintiff was prosecuted by the defendant (2) that the prosecution terminated in his favour, if from their nature they were capable of such termination (3) that there was no reasonable and probable cause for launching such prosecution (4) that the prosecution was malicious, i.e., it was done with ulterior motive and not with the intent of carrying the law into effect.

(B) Torts — Malicious prosecution — Damages — Suit for — Onus — Malice — Proof of.

In a claim for malicious prosecution the plaintiff can claim damages on three counts:— (a) For damages to person (b) For damages to property (c) For damages to reputation. The burden of proving the case is on the plaintiff and he must go the whole way as there is no half way point of rest and such proof is extremely heavy. The whole principle lying behind for malicious prosecution is that the society as a whole is interested in protecting the individual against unjustifiable and oppressive imputation of criminal charges. If a person has been prosecuted it is to be presumed that some damage to that party has resulted. He may or may not have suffered pecuniary loss but loss to his reputation and mental anxiety in every case is bound to result. A plaintiff may recover damage for the distress which normally results from being prosecuted for a time without proving that he has suffered any emotional disturbance. Damages of that kind are called general damages. However, the amount of harm to the reputation of the plaintiff and the extent of the emotional disturbance are determined by the gravity of the offence charged against him in criminal proceedings. (Paras 4, 5)

In the instant case the criminal proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff, in the sense that the plaintiff was acquitted of the charges brought against him by the defendants. Although the decision of the criminal court is not binding on a Civil Court for the purpose of coming to the conclusion whether the prosecution was malicious or not and the Civil Court will have to go itself in to the question of reasonable and probable cause and also of malice but the acquittal of the plaintiff in the criminal case is a sure proof of the termination of the criminal proceedings in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff will have to make out his case independently and the Civil Court has to conduct an independent enquiry as to the presence or absence of reasonable and probable cause. 'Malice' in an action for malicious prosecution does not mean wrongful intention or recklessness but it is construed more narrowly to show that the prosecution was inspired by some motive other than a desire to bring to justice a person whom he honestly believes to be guilty. In case where charges are found to be false and false to the knowledge of the defendants not only lack of reasonable and probable cause is there but also malice may be inferred. As malice is a question of fact on the evidence laid before a court it will have to decide whether there was malice or not. In the instant case it was held that there was no reasonable and probable cause for the defendants to launch the prosecution against the plaintiff and they have been actuated by malice in doing so.

(C) Torts — Malicious prosecution — Damages — Assessment of.

In assessing damages the Court to some extent will have to rely on the rules of commonsense over and above that the court will have to consider (1) the nature of the offence which the plaintiff was charged of (2) the inconvenience of the plaintiff in which he was subjected to (3) monetary loss and (4) the status and position of the person prosecuted. Damages awarded for loss of reputation are in the nature of solatium and not given for punishing the defendant or enriching the plaintiffs. (Para 8)

ORDER:— This suit has been filed by Chouthmal Agarwalla against (1) Halar Salt and Chemical Works, (2) Harjivandas Vithaldas, (3) Jamnadass Madhawji (4) Gordhandass Madhawji Thakkar, (5) Patalia Saratchandra Jethalal and (6) Haridas Dwarkadas for a decree for Rs. 1,00,000, in the alternative an enquiry in respect thereof, costs, injunction and other reliefs on 27th April 1959.

2. The case of the plaintiff is that he carried on business as an importer and exporter in salt, iron and general merchandise, order suppliers in Calcutta for a long time and has good reputation. The plaintiff carried on the said business as a partner of Sri Bajrang Trading and Supply Company at No. 22, Bartala Street, Calcutta.

3. The defendant No. 1 is a firm, inter alia, carrying on business in salt at No. 1, Amratala Lane, Calcutta and the defendants Nos. 2 to 4 are partners. The defendant No. 6 is the Branch Manager of the defendant No. 1. On 26th November 1957 the defendant No. 6 under the instruction and/or advice, directions and/or orders of his masters being defendants Nos. 2 to 5 maliciously without reasonable and probable cause preferred in the Court of the Additional Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta a complaint against the plaintiff under Ss. 406 and 420 of the Indian Penal Code and thereby caused the said Court to issue process against the plaintiff. The defendants Nos. 2 to 5 caused the proceedings to be initiated through the defendant No. 1 and unequivocally ratified and/or admitted the said acts of the defendant No. 6. The plaintiff had to appear before the said court on various days between 27th November 1957 till 25th September 1958 and had to stand in the prisoners' dock as an accused during the trial in the said court along with other criminals. On 25th September 1958 the plaintiff was acquitted under S. 258 of the Code of Criminal Procedure on the ground that there was no mens rea on the part of the accused. It is further the case of the plaintiff that by reason of the aforesaid malicious prosecution and malicious abuse of the process of the Court the plaintiff has been injured in his credit and business reputation and suffered from mental agony and pain. The plaintiff was compelled to appear in the court from time to time and was thereby prevented from transacting his business for a long time. The plaintiff has examined himself and also examined two other witnesses being plaintiff's witnesses Nos. 2 and 3 to prove that as a result of the said malicious prosecution the plaintiff lost credit and/or confidence of other customers and suppliers and considering him to be a bad man and/or criminal they ceased to do any business with the plaintiff on credit. The plaintiff in paragraph 11 has claimed a total sum of Rs. 1,00,000 towards the damages that he is alleged to have suffered. A written statement was filed on behalf of the defendants denying the claim of the plaintiff and trying to justify their own conduct. The plaintiff in his examination-in-chief stated there were various dealings and transactions between the plaintiff and the defendant for a long time. In the course of such transaction on 9th October 1957 the plaintiff gave 4 cheques in favour of the defendant No. 1. Out of 4 cheques 2 were passed by the bankers for payment and subsequently as the plaintiff found that salt supplied by the defendant No. 1 was short, as such he wrote to the banker stopping the payment in respect of other 2 cheques. Those 2 cheques were for the sums of Rs. 4,537.50 and also for Rs. 3,000. At that time the plaintiff had with the defendant a total sum of Rs. 3,000 in deposit. The defendant No. 1 was holding that sum of Rs. 3,000 to the credit of the plaintiff as a deposit. At the time when the plaintiff issued the said 2 cheques, the plaintiff had an overdraft facility with the bank for a sum of Rs. 70,000. On the day when the plaintiff issued notice stopping payment of the said two cheques the plaintiff had also overdraft facilities with the bank to the tune of Rs. 70,000. That instruction for stoppage of payment was given by the plaintiff on a bona fide ground as the goods supplied by the defendant No. 1 to the plaintiff was short in supply. As such, according to the plaintiff, the plaintiff was entitled to stop payment for the said cheques. The defendant No. 6 under the instruction of defendants Nos. 1 to 5 wrongfully filed the criminal complaint in respect of the said 2 cheques, which were not paid by the bankers. The plaintiff has proved the complaint filed before the Criminal Court which was signed by the defendant No. 6. The said criminal trial lasted for 6 months and the plaintiff had to attend court for more than 20 times. During his visit to the court the plaintiff had to remain there from 11 o'clock in the morning upto 4 o'clock. The plaintiff stated that he had to engage lawyer for 22 days and in fact had to pay Rs. 1,500 to the said lawyer. Although he says that he had receipt for payment to the lawyer he had not been able to find them. Ultimately the plaintiff was acquitted of both the charges on 25th September 1958. He submits that the defendants had no reason whatsoever to start the said criminal proceeding against the plaintiff. The plaintiff deposed that the defendants have started criminal case with the oblique motive and not for any reasonable and probable cause as he has stopped payment of the cheques. The defendant wanted to injure the prestige of the plaintiff in the business community and in the trade. The plaintiff states that he was a regular assessee under the Income-tax Act and he has proved a number of orders paid into the Income-tax Department for the assessment years 1957-60. He has also proved the balance sheet of the fund Bajrang Trading and Supply Company to show that the plaintiff's name appeared under the column of the capital account and also proved the figures lying to its credit as mentioned in the different balance sheets proved by the plaintiff. The plaintiff has given the name of different parties with whom he had business in salt and also proved various bills for large sums of money which had been paid to different parties during the relevant period. Apart from the credit facilities given by Hindusthan Commercial Bank Ltd. to the extent of Rs. 70,000 the plaintiff enjoyed other credit facilities in the market. The plaintiff's case is that because of the institution of the criminal case, his prestige was lowered and as a result the business community refused to give him goods on credit. Amongst the parties who refused credit, the plaintiff mentioned the names of Sri Lakshmi Salt Works Ltd., Imperial Iron and Steel Works, etc. He also proved the different letters written by the parties refusing to give the plaintiff any credit facility because of the said criminal proceedings. The plaintiff examined on his behalf Sri Hrishikesh Chakraborty of Lakshmi Salt Works to prove the letter written by them also to prove that people knew about the said prosecution of the plaintiff as a result whereof the Director of the said company decided not to give any salt to the plaintiff, save and except strictly on cash terms. The plaintiff also examined one Satyanarayan Saraf of S. L. Gupta Pvt. Ltd. to prove that because of the criminal proceedings taken against the plaintiff they stopped supplying goods to the plaintiff save and except on cash terms and also proved the letter dated 4th May 1958 written by them to the plaintiff.

4. The Law of Tort in India has not yet been codified and therefore the basis of this branch of law in India continues to remain the rules of English Law which had been imported to India and became part of the Indian Law. In India the litigations in respect of Tort are not very many. One of the branches of the Law of Tort is actions for malicious prosecution and the law for malicious prosecution in India is exactly the same as the Law in England. Foundation of law for action for malicious prosecution lies in the abuse of the process of Court by wrongfully setting the law in motion. The generally accepted essential elements in a cause of action for malicious prosecution, in conformity with the malicious decisions are: (1) that the plaintiff was prosecuted by the defendant (2) that the prosecution terminated in his favour, if from their nature they were capable of such termination (3) that there was no reasonable and probable cause for launching such prosecution (4) that the prosecution was malicious, i.e., it was done with ulterior motive and not with the intent of carrying the law into effect. In a claim for malicious prosecution the plaintiff can claim damages on three counts:— (a) For damages to person (b) For damages to property (c) For damages to reputation.

5. The burden of proving the case is on the plaintiff and he must go the whole way as there is no half way point of rest and such proof is extremely heavy. The whole principle lying behind for malicious prosecution is that the society as a whole is interested in protecting the individual against unjustifiable and oppressive imputation of criminal charges. If a person has been prosecuted it is to be presumed that some damage to that party has resulted. He may or may not have suffered pecuniary loss but loss to his reputation and mental anxiety in every case is bound to result. A plaintiff may recover damage for the distress which normally results from being prosecuted for a time without proving that he has suffered any emotional disturbance. Damages of that kind are called general damages. However, the amount of harm to the reputation of the plaintiff and the extent of the emotional disturbance are determined by the gravity of the offence charged against him in criminal proceedings. In this particular case the question would have to be considered in view of the facts and principles of law as stated above. In fact was the prosecution in the criminal proceedings, that has been brought, by the defendants against the plaintiff? A prosecutor has been described as a person who is actively instrumental in prosecuting the plaintiff (Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 25 p. 339 para. 684). A person may be liable as a prosecutor though the complaint has been filed either by his agent or his employee. Usually a person is liable as a prosecutor if he filed a complaint to a Magistrate. He is also liable as a prosecutor if caused a complaint to be filed either through his agent or employee. Thus, one who personally or by a third person for whose conduct he is responsible under the Law of Agency presents to a Magistrate a petition upon which a warrant of arrest is issued or necessary action is taken by the Magistrate is also held to be the prosecutor. In this particular case, therefore, there is no doubt that the partners, defendants Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 of defendant No. 1 through the defendant No. 6 launched the prosecution against the plaintiff. As such they all would be deemed to be the prosecutor in the said criminal proceedings.

6. In this particular case the criminal proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff, in the sense that the plaintiff was acquitted of the charges brought against him by the defendants. Although the decision of the criminal court is not binding on a Civil Court for the purpose of coming to the conclusion whether the prosecution was malicious or not and the Civil Court will have to go itself into the question of reasonable and probable cause and also of malice but the acquittal of the plaintiff in the criminal case is a sure proof of the termination of the criminal proceedings in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff will have to make out his case independently and the Civil Court has to conduct an independent enquiry as to the presence or absence of reasonable and probable cause. 'Malice' in an action for malicious prosecution does not mean wrongful intention or recklessness but it is construed more narrowly to show that the prosecution was inspired by some motive other than a desire to bring to justice a person whom he honestly believes to be guilty. In case where charges are found to be false and false to the knowledge of the defendants not only lack of reasonable and probable cause is there but also malice may be inferred. As malice is a question of fact on the evidence laid before a court it will have to decide whether there was malice or not.

7. Now lastly in an action for malicious prosecution a reference has already been made earlier that three types of damages one may suffer because of malicious prosecution. "Damages are defined as the pecuniary compensation which the law awards to a person for the injury he has sustained by reason of the act or default of another whether the act is a breach of contract or a tort or put more shortly damages are the recompense given by process of law to a person for the wrong that another has done to him". (Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 2 p. 216 para 383, 3rd Edn.). Punitive damages are intended to be in solatium to the plaintiff and in terrorem to the public. While awarding damages "the wounded feeling and injured pride of a plaintiff" are taken into consideration. A false charge that a person has committed cheating or is guilty of criminal breach of trust is bound to injure his reputation, more so, in a case of a person who is known to the business world. The second type of damages arises due to the injury to the person of the plaintiff. Injury to the person may result because of arrest, i.e., he is deprived of his liberty and also because of what he has to suffer from mental stress. It is however not necessary that a person may have been actually arrested but it is sufficient even if imprisonment is the immediate and necessary consequence of the prosecution.

8. Regarding the third type of damages, i.e., injury to property, a person who is maliciously prosecuted has necessarily to spend some money to defend himself. Where the infringement of right is not followed by any real damage or where a person has to face prosecution the court may award nominal damages. 'Nominal damages' are defined as a sum of money that may be spoken of but that has no existence in point of quantity or a mere peg to hang costs. In assessing damages the Court to some extent will have to rely on the rules of commonsense over and above that the court will have to consider (1) the nature of the offence which the plaintiff was charged of (2) the inconvenience of the plaintiff in which he was subjected to (3) monetary loss and (4) the status and position of the person prosecuted. "Damages awarded for loss of reputation are in the nature of solatium and not given for punishing the defendant or enriching the plaintiffs."

9. The plaintiff in this case has proved that he has suffered damages not only by defending himself in a criminal court by engaging lawyers and presenting himself for more than 20 times before the court of Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta but also he had undergone a great mental stress for being placed along with other criminals in the dock. The plaintiff although has given evidence that he had to engage lawyer and he spent a sum of Rs. 1,500 in defraying his expenses at the Metropolitan Magistrate's Court but also said that he had the receipt for the same although through inadvertence that is mislaid. In this case the plaintiff may not have supported his claim for payment to the lawyer concerned by producing the receipt but in the absence of the same it may be presumed that he must have spent money in engaging lawyers for getting himself defended. He has also claimed damages on account of loss of reputation and loss of profit as he was all the time engaged in court during the period when the said criminal case was going on. As such his commercial interests have been affected. The plaintiff is a partner of a firm of Messrs. Bajrang Trading and Supply Company. So even if the plaintiff had been detained while the criminal case was going on it cannot be said that the normal running of the said partnership firm was hampered or could not be carried on in the absence of the plaintiff during those days.

10. From the trend of decisions it appears in awarding damages the learned Judges in India take conservative attitude and are not inclined to award exemplary damages, save and except in exceptional cases. Where the plaintiff proves want of reasonable and probable cause malice may be inferred although want of probable and reasonable cause is not conclusive evidence of malice. The master is liable in tort where the servant is working within the scope of his authority, that is, within the scope of his employment, commits a wrong. In this case the prosecution was initiated by the defendant No. 6 with the authority of defendants 1 to 5.

11. So far as special damages as claimed by the plaintiff are concerned I am of the opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to a sum of Rs. 1,500 as per the particulars given under paragraph 11 of the plaint. So far as claim of the plaintiff regarding loss of business is concerned, I am of the opinion that as he is a partner of a partnership firm and he had other partners to look after the business during the days when the criminal trial was going on his absence could not make much difference. Regarding the claim of loss suffered due to mental agony and pain, I think a sum of Rs. 5,000 considering the position of the plaintiff as a reputable businessman of Calcutta would be enough. From the evidence given before me it appears that the dispute between the plaintiff and the defendants was strictly of civil nature arising out of short delivery of the goods by the defendants to the plaintiff and in view of the fact that the defendants had a sum of Rs. 3,000 with them as security deposit made by the plaintiff in respect of the said supplies, the defendants, when the cheques were stopped for payment by the plaintiff, could have adjusted the said claim against the said security money, could have raised a dispute by demand in writing letters and requested the plaintiff to settle up balance amount. Moreover, it was always open for the defendants, if they were really aggrieved to file a civil suit to recover their dues. Instead of doing so or taking up the course as stated above the defendants promptly with an ulterior motive brought charges against the plaintiff under S. 420 and S. 406 which ultimately terminated in favour of the plaintiff.

12. From the facts and circumstances of this case I am of the opinion that there was no reasonable and probable cause for the defendants to launch the prosecution against the plaintiff and they have been actuated by malice in doing so. As a result I hold that the present suit of the plaintiff succeeds. I pass a decree for the sum of Rs. 5,000 as general damage and Rs. 1,500 as special damages and costs, as against the defendants.

Suit decreed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 361DIPAK KUMAR SEN, J.

Taherbhoy Feeda Ally and others, Petitioners v. State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 365 of 1977, D/- 8-7-1977.

Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act (1976), S. 27 — Transfer — Agreement to sell certain premises providing that the sale would be subject to permission under the Act — In terms of agreement certain amount was paid as earnest and possession of a part of the premises was given to transferee for specific purpose of repairs — Held, there was no transfer. (T. P. Act (1882), S. 54).

In absence of any permission granted by the competent authority there can be no question of any transfer. It is clear from the language of S. 27 itself that without permission of the competent authority no property can be transferred. Section 54 of the T. P. Act also makes it clear that a contract for sale of itself does not create any interest or charge.

ORDER:— The six petitioners in these proceedings viz., Taherbhoy Feeda Ally, Yayahbhoy Feeda Ally, Abdullahbhoy Feeda Ally, Salehbhoy Feeda Ally, Dawoodbhoy Feeda Ally and Tayebbhoy Feeda Ally seek to impugn an order No. 27/S/223 of 1977 dated the 6th April 1977 passed by the competent Authority under the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 (hereinafter referred to as 'the said Act'). The undisputed facts relevant to these proceedings are, inter alia, that the petitioners are owners in possession of premises Nos. 83A and 83B, Park Street (hereinafter referred to as 'the said premises'). Under an agreement in writing dated the 2nd September 1976 the petitioner agreed to sell to Favourite Small Investment Limited, the respondent No. 4 in these proceedings, the said premises for a price of Rs. 8 lakhs on, inter alia, the following terms and conditions:

(a) The sale would be subject to the petitioners obtaining the necessary certificate and/or permission under the said Act;

(b) The petitioners would simultaneously with the execution of the agreement give vacant possession of the entire ground floor of premises No. 83A, Park Street to the respondent No. 4 who would be authorised to make repairs, alterations and additions therein on the understanding that if the transaction fell through then the said respondent would give back vacant possession of the said portion to the petitioners. In default, the respondent No. 4 would have to pay mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 125 per day.

2. Pursuant to and in terms of the said agreement, a sum of Rs. 1 lakh was paid by the respondent No. 4 to the petitioners as earnest. The ground floor of the said premises No. 83A, Park Street was made over to the respondent No. 4. On the 8th February 1977 an application was made by the petitioners to the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, the Competent Authority and the respondent No. 3 herein in the prescribed form, for his approval and/or permission as required under S. 27 of the said Act.

3. On the 9th April 1977 the petitioners received the said notice dated the 6th April 1977 from the Competent Authority informing the petitioners, inter alia, as follows:—

"On enquiry it reveals that the applicants already transferred premises Nos. 83A and 83B, Park Street, Calcutta to Favourite Small Investment Ltd. (transferee) by making over possession of the said premises to the transferee on receipt of a sum of Rs. 1,00,000 (Rupees one lac) only on the basis of an agreement executed between them and the transferee, without obtaining prior permission of the Competent Authority, under S. 27 (3) of the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976. The applicants are, therefore, no longer owners of the property and they are not entitled to make the application under S. 27 (2) of the said Act as owners of the property.

"Permission sought in the application is, therefore, refused. Inform the applicants furnishing a copy of this order to them."

4. The petitioners contend that the said order dated the 6th April 1977 is erroneous, without jurisdiction, null and void and not binding on the petitioners on grounds, inter alia, as follows:

(i) The respondent No. 3 exceeded his jurisdiction in passing the said order as there had been no transfer at all of the said premises or any portion thereof to the respondent No. 4 or to anybody else as contemplated under S. 27 (1) of the said Act.

(ii) The said order having been passed by the respondent No. 3 on the basis of consideration which he is not entitled to take into account under the provisions of the said Act, and without considering the application on its merit under S. 27 (2) of the said Act was mala fide.

(iii) The respondent No. 3 having granted the petitioners no opportunity whatsoever to represent their case before passing the said impugned order acted in violation of the principles of natural justice.

5. A Rule nisi was issued in this application on the 4th May, 1977 calling upon the respondents, namely, the State of West Bengal; the Secretary, Ministry of Land and Land Revenue; the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta and the Competent Authority under the said Act and the said Favourite Small Investment Ltd., to show cause why a writ in the nature of mandamus should not be issued directing the said respondents, their servants, agents and officers to set aside and cancel the said order dated the 6th April 1977 and also to refrain from acting on the basis thereof and/or giving effect to and/or taking any proceedings under and from making any demand on the basis thereof in any manner whatsoever. The said respondents were further directed to show cause why a writ in the nature of certiorari should not be issued setting aside, cancelling or quashing the said impugned order and they were directed to produce or cause to be forwarded to the Registrar of this Court all documents, orders and proceedings relating thereto for the aforesaid purpose. The said respondents were further directed to show cause why a writ in the nature of prohibition should not be issued commanding them not to enforce or give effect to or act in terms of or on the basis of the impugned order or to exercise jurisdiction in any manner in respect thereof.

6. An affidavit affirmed by one Nirmal Chandra Roy on the 9th June 1977 has been filed in these proceedings. The contentions in the petition have been denied in this affidavit.

7. Mr. Jayanta Mitra, learned counsel for the petitioners contended at the hearing that the order was wholly misconceived inasmuch as there had been no transfer of the said premises as has been wrongly held in the said impugned order.

All that happened was that earnest had been paid and a part of the said premises was made over to the respondent No. 4 for the specific purpose of repairs. This was utmost a case of leave and license and not transfer. It was specified that the agreement would be subject to the permission of the Competent Authority under the Act and no title could pass at this stage.

8. Mr. S. Sen, learned counsel for the respondents, contended on the other hand that all the ingredients of a valid transfer were present in the transaction. There was payment of earnest and also a transfer of possession of a part of the property. On these facts read with the agreement it would be deemed that ownership of the property had passed. In support of his contentions Mr. Sen relied upon a decision of this Court in the case of Rabintra Nath Banerjee v. Harendra Kumar Chakravarty, reported in AIR 1956 Cal 462. In this case it was observed in connection with certain proceedings under O. 81, R. 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure by a Single Bench of this Court as follows:

"The language of S. 54 emphasises that 'of itself' a contract for sale does not create any interest of charge on the property. But very often a contract for sale does not stand by itself where there is a part payment of the purchase price or payment of what is called the earnest money. In that event S. 55 (b), Transfer of Property Act would be attracted and it will be treated as though the ownership of the property had passed and there is a charge for part of the purchase money paid."

9. In my opinion, this decision does not advance the case of the respondents to any appreciable extent. All that was held in this case was that after part payment of the purchase price or payment of earnest money the purchaser would acquire a charge on the property which was in the nature of an interest in the property.

10. Section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act makes it quite clear that a contract for sale of itself does not create any interest or charge. In the case of Gobinda Chandra Pal v. Dwarka Nath Pal, reported in (1908) ILR 35 Cal 837 a Division Bench of this Court held that unlike a mortgage, a charge only secured payment of money out of a property and did not operate as a transfer. This case was cited by Mr. Mitra in reply on behalf of the petitioners.

11. Apart from that, it is clear from the language of S. 27 of the Act itself that without permission of the competent authority no property can be transferred. Section 27 of the Act reads as follows:

"27. Prohibition on Transfer of Urban Property.— (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, but subject to the provisions of sub-s. (3) of S. 5 and sub-s. (4) of S. 10, no person shall transfer by way of sale, mortgage, gift, lease for a period exceeding ten years, or otherwise, any urban or urbanisable land with a building (whether constructed before or after the commencement of this Act) or a portion only of such building for a period of ten years of such commencement or from the date on which the building is constructed, whichever is later, except with the previous permission in writing of the competent authority."

12. It is nobody's case that such permission has been granted and therefore there can be no question of any transfer. There is also the specific clause in the agreement which makes the agreement itself subject to such permission.

13. It appears to me that the impugned order so far as it purports to hold that there has been a transfer of property is misconceived and ex facie erroneous.

14. For the reasons stated above the order is set aside and the Rule is made absolute to that extent. In the facts and circumstances of this case there will be no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

S. A. MASUD AND S. K. MUKHERJEA, JJ.

Bhutoria Trading Co. Ltd., Petitioner v. Allahabad Bank Ltd. and others, Respondents.

A. F. O. D. No. 251 of 1964, D/- 12-11-1976.*

(A) Evidence Act (1872), S. 115 — Estoppel by conduct — Conduct of Plaintiff-company showing authorisation of a person to encash cheque — Whether plaintiff can challenge his authority.

The plaintiff-company allowed its manager to use its seal for the purpose of endorsement of various cheques drawn in favour of the plaintiff company. The said Manager encashed certain cheques but did not credit the amount in company's account. Plaintiff sued the Bank for damages on the ground that the Bank was guilty of negligence in giving away money to an unauthorised person.

Held, the plaintiff-company by its conduct represented the Bank that the person encashing the check had authority to act on behalf of the plaintiff as its manager and therefore, plaintiff company was estopped from challenging authority of that person who used company's seal as its manager. (Paras 29, 30)

(B) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 10 — Payment of bearer cheque to manager of plaintiff company — Held, was in due course.

One J. brought a cheque drawn in favour of the plaintiff company for encashment. The cheque being bearer one and payable to plaintiff on order the Bank encashed the same in good faith and handed over the sum to J who purported to be manager of the plaintiff company. In encashing the said cheque it was proved that Bank was not negligent and that it did it in good faith.

Held, the Bank made the payment of cheque in due course within the meaning of S. 10 of the Act. (Para 31)

S. K. MUKHERJEA, J.:— This appeal is directed against a judgment and decree of Bijayesh Mukherjee, J. dated September 18, 1963 insofar as by the said judgment and decree the learned Judge dismissed the suit as against Allahabad Bank Ltd., the first defendant, who is a respondent before us. The facts of the case may be briefly stated.

2. In March and April the plaintiff, that is to say, the appellant before us sold and delivered to one W. F. Ducat & Co. Ltd. of 5 Clive Row, Calcutta, diverse quantities of jute for the price of Rupees 57,889-7-0 which became payable by the said buyers.

3. Messrs. W. F. Ducat & Co., Ltd. drew an uncrossed cheque on their bankers, the respondent Allahabad Bank Ltd. for the said sum payable to the plaintiff or order in payment of the said price and made over the same to the defendant No. 2 Jethmall Chandalia, an employee of the plaintiff. In the plaint, the plaintiff claimed that the defendant No. 2 had no authority to operate on the plaintiff's banking account or to endorse any cheque payable to the plaintiff's order. In paragraph 5 of the plaint the plaintiff further averred that there is a well-known usage and/or practice in the banking business and/or trade and commerce in Calcutta, well known to the defendant at all material times, that a cheque payable to a limited Company cannot be encashed at the counter of the drawee bank and that the same can only be encashed if presented for payment through the bank of the payee.

4. The defendant No. 2 wrongfully, dishonestly, fraudulently and without authority endorsed the said cheque on the back thereof purporting to be for and on behalf of the plaintiff and thereafter presented the same at the counter of the defendant bank.

5. It is contended by the plaintiff that the defendant bank, contrary to the aforesaid custom or usage of the trade, wrongfully and negligently paid the cheque at its counter although the said cheque had not been presented through any bank on behalf of the plaintiff. The cheque was paid under circumstances which afforded reasonable grounds for suspicion and put the defendant No. 1 on enquiry as to the authority of the defendant No. 2 to receive payment of the cheque or use the proceeds thereof in fraud of the plaintiff and deprive the plaintiff of the same.

6. The defendant bank should have known on reasonable enquiry that the defendant No. 2 had no authority to endorse the cheque payable to the plaintiff's order or to encash the same.

7. The bank acted negligently in not making due enquiry as to the authority of the defendant No. 2 to realise the proceeds of the said cheque and had any such enquiry been made, the bank would have ascertained that the defendant No. 2 had no authority to endorse or realise the proceeds of the said cheque.

8. The plaintiff contended that the payment of the said cheque was not made in due course or in the ordinary course of business. The endorsement of the cheque made by the defendant No. 2 was unauthorised, fraudulent and forged.

9. The plaintiff pleaded that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had converted the said cheque and the proceeds thereof to their own use as a result whereof the plaintiff has suffered damages.

10. In the alternative, the plaintiff claimed the said sum against the said defendants as moneys had and received by the said defendants to the use of the plaintiff. An allegation of conspiracy was made by the plaintiff against the defendant No. 2 and the defendant No. 3 K. L. Maheswari, a constituent of the bank who identified the defendant No. 2 before payment was made by the bank. It is important to note that the defendant No. 3 was dismissed from the suit by the plaintiff of his own accord with the result that the allegation of conspiracy or of any act of omission or commission on the part of the defendant No. 3 cannot be sustained.

11. On the basis of the aforesaid allegations, the plaintiff claimed a decree for the sum of Rs. 57,889-7-0 interest up to the date of the institution of the suit, interest on judgment and costs.

12. Written statements were filed by the defendant bank and the defendant No. 3. The defendant No. 2 chose not to defend the suit. As the defendant No. 3 has been dismissed from the suit, we are concerned only with the defence of the defendant bank.

13. In their written statement, the defendant bank denied that the defendant No. 2 had no authority to endorse any cheque payable to the plaintiff's order or to operate on the plaintiff's banking account. The existence of the alleged usage and practice of bankers in Calcutta was disputed. It was also denied that the bank was aware of any such usage or practice. The bank stated, as the fact appears to be, that the defendant No. 2 endorsed the cheque on behalf of the plaintiff by signing on the back thereof as the Manager of the plaintiff, presented the cheque at the counter and received payment. In paragraph 6 of the written statement, the bank denied the allegation of negligence and disputed that it was necessary that the said cheque should have been presented through a bank on behalf of the plaintiff. The bank further denied that there was any circumstance affording any grounds for suspicion to put the plaintiff on any enquiry.

14. In paragraph 7, the defendant stated that it is the usual custom and practice in Calcutta that before making payment across the counter on an order cheque the bank insists on the person receiving payment being identified by a constituent of the bank or some other person known to the bank. In the facts of this case, the defendant No. 2 was identified by the defendant No. 3, a constituent of the bank.

15. In paragraph 9, the bank denied that there was any occasion for any reasonable enquiry that the defendant No. 2 was duly authorised to endorse any cheque payable to the plaintiff's order, on behalf of the plaintiff or to encash the same or that the bank should have known that the defendant No. 2 was not authorised to endorse the cheque on behalf of the plaintiff or to encash the same.

16. In paragraph 10, the defendant bank denied the allegation of negligence or carelessness. They claimed that the said cheque purported to be endorsed by order on behalf of the plaintiff and the bank paid the cheque in good faith and in due course and/or in the ordinary course of business and as such, the bank was duly discharged by such payment.

17. The bank further contended that the cheque was and/or was purported to be endorsed by or on behalf of the plaintiff in blank or as such was paid to the bearer thereof and by making payment to such bearer, the defendant was duly discharged.

18. In paragraph 12, the bank pleaded estoppel by negligence. It was stated that the plaintiff by his conduct in allowing the defendant No. 2 to have possession and control of the said cheque and in allowing him to sign the same by or on behalf of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is estopped from alleging that the defendant bank had not the authority of the plaintiff to endorse or encash the said cheque. The particulars of the estoppel pleaded by the bank may be set out:

"The said defendant No. 2 was the manager of the plaintiff. The plaintiff allowed and authorised the said defendant to collect, possess and deal with the said cheque. After the defendant No. 2 had taken possession of the said cheque, the plaintiff wilfully did not inform the bank that the defendant No. 2 had no authority to endorse or encash the said cheque which allegation of lack of authority is denied by the bank and thereby impliedly represented to the bank that the defendant No. 2 had the plaintiff's authority to endorse, deal with, or encash the cheque. Relying upon the said representation, the defendant dealt with the defendant No. 2 and paid the said cheque."

19. A further point of estoppel is taken in paragraph 14 of the Written Statement. It reads:

"The defendant bank states that if the defendant No. 2 had no authority to endorse or encash the cheque, which allegations are denied, the said cheque was allowed or caused by the plaintiff to be possessed and dealt with by the defendant No. 2 without reasonable care and caution on the part of the plaintiff and in a negligent manner so as to enable the defendant No. 2 to endorse and/or encash the said cheque and by reason thereof the plaintiff ought not to be permitted to allege that the said defendant No. 2 had no authority to endorse or encash the said cheque."

20. The allegation of conversion was denied by the bank. It was also denied that the bank was liable to the plaintiff for monies had and received by the bank to the use of the plaintiff.

21. In conclusion, the defendant bank alleged that the plaintiff had no cause of action against them and the suit as against them should be dismissed with costs.

22. The parties went to trial on the following issues:—

1. Was the purported indorsement of the cheque in controversy here by the second defendant unauthorised?

2. Is there any usage or practice as alleged in paragraph 5 of the plaint?

3. Is the plaintiff estopped from alleging want of authority for reasons set out in paragraphs 12 to 14 of the written statement?

4. Was the payment of the cheque in controversy here by the first defendant in the ordinary or due course of business?

5. Was the plaintiff the true owner of the cheque in controversy?

6. Have the first and the second defendants converted the cheque as alleged?

7. What relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled to?

23. One of the main issues which has to be answered is on the question of existence of the trade usage pleaded in paragraph 5 of the plaint. The case is that the usage demands that a cheque payable to a limited Company cannot be cashed at the counter of the drawee Bank and that the same can only be passed for payment through the Bank of the payee. It is clear that the usage on which the plaintiff relies is an unqualified one. The contention is that no cheque payable to a limited Company made payable to order crossed or uncrossed or payable to bearer cannot be paid on presentation but must be encashed through the payee's bank. The date of the cheque in the suit is 1st April 1955. The question is, did such a practice exist at the material time? Oral as well as documentary evidence has been adduced on this question on either side. The documentary evidence consists of Ext. 'C' read with CI, Ext. 'D' read with 'D' I, Exts. 'H' and 'I' and Exhibit '9'. Exhibit 'C' is an uncrossed order cheque dated May 20, 1955 payable to Bhutoria Estate Ltd. for Rs. 10,000/- drawn on the defendant Bank. It appears that the cheque was endorsed and presented by B. Bhutoria Manager of the payee Company. The cheque was returned by the defendant Bank for reason No. 19, the reason given being that the cheque drawn in favour of a Limited Company should be presented through a Bank or payee's identification required. In Exhibit CI, the reason for return given on the return slip are all printed upto item No. 18. But reason No. 19 appears in manuscript. On a scrutiny of the hand-writing it appears that there is a conjunction between the words 'presented through a Bank' and 'payee's identification required' the conjunction is not very legible. It may be either the conjunctive 'and' or the disjunctive 'or'. We prefer to read the conjunction as 'or' not merely because in our opinion, it reads as such, but also because that reading is reasonable. It is universally accepted that if a cheque drawn in favour of a limited Company is presented through a bank, no further identification of the payee is required. It will be therefore absurd to suggest that even if a cheque is presented through a bank the payee's identification will have to be established. It is interesting to note that Item No. 19 on the cheque return slip is in handwriting and not in print. It only shows that it is likely to be a later addition made at the discretion of the Bank. Even on the basis of that practice, it cannot be said that in the present case there has been any departure from such practice. The cheque in question, that is to say, Ext. 'B' was not presented through a Bank but the payee, that is to say, the defendant No. 2 was identified by the defendant No. 3. Moreover Ext. 'C' is of 28th May 1955. A custom might have sprung up into existence subsequently. In any event Ext. 'C' by itself does not prove any trade custom. At the best, it indicates that Allahabad Bank had adopted on a subsequent date, the practice of returning a cheque for the reason given in item No. 19 of the cheque return slip. Ext. 'D' again is an uncrossed order cheque dated May 23, 1955 payable to Bhutoria Estate Ltd. The cheque is for Rs. 7,000/-. The cheque was endorsed and presented by the self same Bhutoria, the Manager of the payee Company. The cheque was returned by the Central Bank for the reason given in item No. 21 of the cheque return slip, the reason being that the cheque payable to a Limited Company needs to be presented through a Bank. It is interesting to note that here also the reason given in item No. 21 is in handwriting although all the other items being items Nos. 1 to 20 are in print. This might be treated as evidence of the fact that the Central Bank at its discretion added reason No. 21 for returning a cheque unpaid. It may be accepted that on 23rd May 1955 Central Bank adopted the practice of not paying a cheque payable to a limited Company unless it was presented through a Bank. It does not follow that the practice prevailed on 1st April, 1955 even in the Central Bank. Ext. 'D' and 'D' I do not establish the existence of the practice pleaded by the plaintiff on 1st April 1955. Coming to Exts. 'H' and 'I' it will be seen that the cheque in question is of 13th February 1963 drawn on National Grindlays Bank Ltd. payable to a limited Company or bearer for Rs. 500/- only. The cheque was returned by the Bank with the note "please present this cheque through your Banker." This ext. is totally irrelevant for our present purpose because it came into existence years after Ext. 'B', and also because it merely establishes that in February 1963 National Grindlays Bank Ltd. adhered to a particular practice. It is no evidence of any general trade usage pleaded in the plaint. Ext. '9' is a cheque for Rs. 3,000/- dated October 4, 1962 drawn on the Eastern Bank Ltd. payable to a Limited Company or bearer. It appears that the cheque was paid at the counter in cash. This Ext. again is of little value for the purpose of the present enquiry. As it is of 1962 and is made payable to bearer it only proves that in 1962 cheques payable to a limited Company or bearer used to be paid on presentation by the Eastern Bank Ltd.

24. As regards oral evidence on this issue the plaintiff produced a number of witnesses. Allen Alexander, an Assistant Accountant of the National and Grindlays Bank deposed that he came to India on October 2, 1960. It is clear that he could not have given any evidence from his personal knowledge on the existence of the trade usage claimed by the plaintiff in 1955. The plaintiff's sixth witness Desikan, Head Assistant in the Accounts Department of the Bank of India, Calcutta appears to have come to Calcutta in 1962 and was therefore hardly competent to speak from his personal knowledge on the question of existence of the said trade usage in 1955. Likewise Harding, a witness of the defendant Bank joined the Calcutta office of the Eastern Bank in August 1962 when he came to India. He, again, was not competent to speak on the state of affairs in 1955 so far as trade usage is concerned. Pathak, plaintiff's second witness who had been working in the United Commercial Bank simply said that he would not have paid any uncrossed order cheque in favour of a limited Company on the counter because there is a convention amongst the banks, though the convention is not accepted by all the banks that such cheques are not to be paid at the counter. Chakraborty, the plaintiff's third witness who had been working in the Central Bank since 1935 spoke of many exceptions to the general rule that cheques in favour of a limited Company are not paid across the counter. The substance of his evidence is that an uncrossed order cheque payable to a limited Company may be paid at the counter after the Bank is satisfied that the endorsement on the back of the cheque is verified by the payee's Bankers or if the person endorsing his signature on behalf of the limited company who is solvent and respectable, assures the bank in writing that the endorser is known to the bank and the cheque has been signed in the bank's presence or if the cheque is endorsed by an agent and the Company's banker endorsed the signature of the agent. He then added that if the limited company insists on payment in cash, the drawer of the cheque is contacted and after the drawer signs on the back of the cheque authorising the Bank to pay the bank will pay at the counter. The learned judge has pointed out in his judgment that in course of his evidence-in-chief Chakravarty examined the cheque in controversy and expressed the opinion that the payment made by the defendant in the present case was a payment made in due course.

25. Jati Ranjan Roy, the plaintiff's fourth witness who was an Assistant Accountant of the Mercantile Bank Ltd. in its Calcutta office deposed that he should have paid a cheque payable to a limited Company at the counter after the drawer on being contacted gave him fresh instructions to that effect in writing and as a matter of fact, he did make such payments on two or three occasions. All that he wanted to be sure of was confirmation in writing by the drawer of the cheque having been drawn in favour of a limited company or bearer and the endorsement being in fact the endorsement of the payee. In course of his evidence, he deposed that in encashing or not encashing the cheque in favour of a limited company at the counter, the officer dealing with the cheque will go by his subjective satisfaction and also by relevant rules or instructions by which he is governed. In answer to questions 274 to 276 he admitted that it is impossible to postulate a single uniform practice throughout Calcutta. On his attention being drawn to the trade practice pleaded by the plaintiff he accepted the plaintiff's contention in substance, but made a reservation that in special circumstances the practice could be departed from. Nanda Kishore Ghose, the fifth witness of the plaintiff was the Chief Accountant of the Bank of India. He deposed that an uncrossed cheque in favour of a limited company cannot be paid across the counter. The Bank has nevertheless a discretion to depart from the practice in appropriate circumstances. He admitted that on rare occasions payment has been made at the counter in cash. Moreover on the strength of a letter from the payee that the Bank can pay to the bearer, such a cheque may be paid across the counter. Thirdly, if the Bank is satisfied that the person presenting the cheque and signing on the back of the cheque is authorised to sign on behalf of the limited company, payment will be made at the counter. Moreover, if the cheque is for a small sum, payment may be made across the counter in exercise of the Bank's discretion. In answer to question 128 Ghose said that there is no general custom in the matter and it is for every bank to decide whether or not it will exercise its discretion in a particular case.

26. The learned judge on an analysis of the evidence has rightly concluded that no general trade practice as alleged by the plaintiff in paragraph 5 of the plaint has been established by the evidence oral or documentary, adduced in this case. In our opinion, the evidence is pitifully inadequate, amorphous, occasionally contradictory and falls far short of the standard required to establish a general trade practice common to all the banks in Calcutta. Oral as well as documentary evidence clearly indicates that individual banks exercise their discretion in regulating their own business practice. There exercise their discretion in the manner they think best. In the light of the evidence, we have no hesitation in holding that the trade practice alleged in paragraph 5 of the plaint has not been proved and issue No. 2 must therefore be answered in the negative.

27. The first issue raised the question whether Jethmall the defendant No. 2 had the authority to endorse the cheque in controversy on behalf of the plaintiff. In this connection it is relevant to refer to S. 89 of the Indian Companies Act 1913 which was in force at the material time. The Section provides that

“a bill of exchange.....shall be deemed to have been endorsed on behalf of the Company if.....endorsed in the name of by or on behalf or on account of the Company by any person acting under its authority, express or implied”.

The learned Judge found on scrutiny that the minutes of proceedings of certain meetings and for that matter, the minute book produced by the company, were mutilated and contained interpolations. In fact, he disbelieved the minutes and the minute book. The reasons given by the learned Judge for holding that the minutes are not authentic are unexceptionable. In fact the learned Judge has gone to the length of observing that it is possible that if the genuine minute book were produced it might have been found that authority was expressly conferred on Jethmall to endorse cheques and bills of exchange on behalf of the plaintiff. The learned Judge also criticised the plaintiff's failure to produce the statutory register, returns and notifications contemplated in S. 87 of the Companies Act of 1913. These books and documents ought to have settled the point whether Jethmall was the Manager at the material time. The learned Judge has also commented on the failure of the plaintiff to produce the relevant Articles of Association. He has rightly remarked that the position of Jethmall in the plaintiff Company and the scope of his authority were peculiarly within the knowledge of the plaintiff and therefore the onus was on the plaintiff to satisfy the Court that Jethmall was not the Manager as he claimed to be, on the basis of the endorsements on the cheque and that he was not competent to endorse the cheque. The learned Judge has alluded to and analysed the evidence in great detail and with meticulous care. To avoid prolixity and repetition, we do not propose to analyse the evidence on this question over again. It is abundantly clear in the light of the entire evidence that whatever might have been the designation of Jethmall, he was the life and soul of the jute business of the plaintiff company and he represented the plaintiff for the purpose of that business in every aspect. It is true that Malchand's evidence is that Jethmall in conducting the business of the plaintiff company did merely as he was told by Malchand. But as the learned Judge has pointed out, Malchand betrays a lamentable lack of knowledge of the business of the plaintiff company and it is therefore safe to assume that Jethmall, in doing whatever he did, acted on his own initiative on behalf of the Company. Malchand's evidence is that in 1955 the duties of Jethmall were to purchase and sell jute as well as to make out bills and deliver the bills to the parties. When the bills were issued, he contacted the parties, collected cheques from them and deposited the cheques so collected in the account of the plaintiff. He further added that he did all these important things not on his own but in accordance with Malchand's instructions. The learned Judge has given reasons for disbelieving the evidence that Jethmall did not act on his own but under instructions of Malchand. In fact Malchand admitted that if Jethmall had deposited the cheque in question in the banking account of the plaintiff company it would have been perfectly in order. The evidence of Ghose of W. F. Ducat and Company Ltd. may be treated as evidence of an independent character because Ducat is not a party to the suit and the bona fides of Ducat in paying the price of jute by the cheque has not been called in question. Ghose deposed that he knew only Jethmall of the plaintiff company at the relevant time and no other person. In answer to Question 15 he said that Jethmall “used to come to our office occasionally—often to give offers and also to close business, receive payments, settling claims all concerning the transactions.”

He also deposed that the claims in respect of four bills (Ext. 5) on the basis of which the cheque in the suit was paid, were settled by Jethmall. It has also been established that Jethmall signed all the four bills in Ext. 5. Dudhoria an Assistant of an underbroker of W. F. Ducat and Company is another independent witness. The trend of his evidence is also that Jethmall was all in all in the plaintiff's Jute business. The learned Judge has relied on answers to Questions 18 and 19 put to Dudhoria. The substance of his evidence is that Jethmall represented the plaintiff Company in all transactions in a complete measure. The learned Judge, in our opinion, was justified in finding as a fact upon the whole of the evidence that appearances are very much in favour of Jethmall having been the Manager of plaintiff Company at the relevant time. We are also in agreement with the learned Judge when he says that "even if it be assumed that that is not a safe conclusion to come to, there can be no running away from the fact so patent upon evidence that he was at or about the relevant time a big person in B.T.C.'s organization drawing the pay and occupying the position, of the manager.

28. Apart from the question whether Jethmall was in fact the Manager of the plaintiff Company as he represented to be, by the endorsement on the back of the cheque, there are good reasons why the plaintiff Company should not be permitted to allege that he was not. It is not in dispute that the rubber stamp inscriptions on the back of Ext. 'B' viz., 'Bhutoria Trading Co. Ltd., and 'Manager' were produced by use of the genuine seal, that is to say, of the rubber stamp in the custody, control and possession of the plaintiff Company. The plaintiff Company, obviously, by permitting Jethmall to use those rubber stamps for the purpose of endorsement on the back, represented to the defendant bank that Jethmall was, in fact, the Manager and had the authority to make the endorsement on the cheque on behalf of the plaintiff Company. There is no evidence that the relevant rubber stamps were procured by Jethmall dishonestly for use or that Jethmall fraudulently obtained possession of the rubber stamps in spite of exercise of due care and caution on the part of the plaintiff Company. In our opinion, acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff Company in the use of the relevant rubber stamps by Jethmall without any objection on the part of the plaintiff Company makes it clear that Jethmall was the Manager and had the implied authority to endorse the cheque for and on behalf of the plaintiff Company. It was faintly argued that as the word 'for' or 'on behalf of' does not appear on the body of the endorsement, the plaintiff company is not bound to its banker by the endorsement made on the back of the cheque. The objection is of no substance. The endorsement was made, so to say, by the plaintiff company itself by the pen of its manager, Jethmall and the absence of the words 'for' and 'on behalf of' is a matter of no consequence. In this connection reference may be made to a decision of the Supreme Court in Oriol Industries v. Bombay Mercantile Bank AIR 1961 SC 993 where it was held that the "law in regard to the company's power to issue negotiable instrument has to be found in the relevant provision of the Companies Act itself and the principle enunciated in S. 89 of the Companies Act 1913 cannot be extended to the claim made by the Company against its bank on the ground that the cheque which the bank accepted and honoured was defective in that it did not comply with the requirements of S. 89 and could not have been enforced against it."

29. An issue of estoppel was raised on behalf of the defendant bank on the grounds set out in paragraphs 12 to 14 of the written statement. In paragraph 12 it is pleaded that the plaintiff is estopped from relying on Jethmall's lack of authority because of its conduct in allowing Jethmall to possess, control, and endorse the cheque, in wilfully not informing the defendant bank of Jethmall's lack of authority thereby impliedly representing to the defendant bank the existence of its authority and in not taking reasonable care or precaution to obviate the exercise of authority by Jethmall to endorse the cheque thereby enabling Jethmall to encash the cheque and realise the proceeds thereof.

The learned Judge has disposed of this issue by saying that as he found as a matter of fact that Jethmall had the authority to endorse the cheque and realise the proceeds thereof, the issue did not arise. Even then, he answered the issue in the negative. The learned Judge said in his judgment "again, BTC never holds out Jethmall before the defendant bank as its Manager, so the plea of estoppel appears to be misconceived one". With utmost respect, the learned Judge ought to have pointed out that by permitting Jethmall to use the seal of the plaintiff's Manager, or in other words, by making the seal available to Jethmall thereby enabling him to use it for the purpose of endorsement of the cheque, the plaintiff impliedly made representations to the bank on the basis of which the bank paid the cheque. The plaintiff represented to the Bank that Jethmall was the plaintiff's Manager. The rubber stamp of the Company, that is to say, the seal of the Company was also made available to Jethmall which he used in endorsing the cheque. Therefore the plaintiff, by its conduct, represented to the Bank that Jethmall had authority to act on behalf of the plaintiff Company as its Manager.

30. In these circumstances, we hold that in any event, the plaintiff is estopped by its conduct from challenging the authority of Jethmall to endorse the cheque and realise the proceeds. We, therefore, answer the third issue in the affirmative.

31. The fourth issue was framed in the following terms:

"Was the payment of the cheque in controversy by the first defendant made in the ordinary or due course of business?"

The expression "payment in due course" has been defined in S. 10 of the Negotiable Instruments Act to mean payment in accordance with the apparent tenor of the instrument in good faith and without negligence to any person in possession thereof, under circumstances which do not afford reasonable ground for believing that he is not entitled to receive payment of the amount therein mentioned. It can hardly be questioned that the payment by the defendant bank of the cheque in question has been made by the defendant bank in accordance with its apparent tenor. The cheque is an uncrossed cheque payable to the plaintiff or order. The cheque was endorsed by the plaintiff through its Manager. The fact that Jethmall is the Manager is borne out by the seal of the Company which is unquestionably an authentic seal. The seal of the Manager is also equally authentic. That the payment was made in good faith has not been disputed for all practical purposes. There is not a grain of evidence before the Court from which it remotely appears that the payment was not made in good faith. Now that the entire evidence is before the Court, the question of onus to prove good faith loses much of its importance. No negligence has been proved against the bank. The defendant bank insisted on identification of Jethmall and Jethmall was in fact identified by Kishanlal Maheswari a constituent of the Bank the defendant No. 3. The defendant bank therefore took all reasonable precautions even though the circumstances in which the cheque was presented for payment did not afford any reasonable ground for believing that Jethmall was not entitled to receive payment of the amount mentioned therein. The plaintiff having failed to prove the trade practice which he alleged and the bank having paid the cheque, in accordance with the apparent tenor of the instrument, in good faith, and without negligence, to Jethmall who was in possession thereof the defendant is entitled to succeed. There were no circumstances which afforded any reasonable ground for believing that he was not entitled to receive payment of the cheque. It must be held that the bank made the payment in due course. The learned Judge, in our opinion, has rightly pointed out that payment in due course is necessarily payment in the ordinary course.

32. Sub-section (1) of S. 85 of the Negotiable Instruments Act provides:—

"Where a cheque payable to order purports to be endorsed on behalf of the payee the drawee is discharged by payment in due course."

33. In view of the aforesaid provision, it must be held that the defendant bank has been discharged by payment of the cheque in due course.

34. With regard to the fifth issue there is no controversy before us that the plaintiff was the true owner of the cheque in question nor is there any controversy that Jethmall had the authority to receive the cheque from W.F. Ducat and Co. Ltd. on behalf of the plaintiff Company and that he received the cheque. As regards the sixth issue, we hold that the defendant bank had not converted the said cheque. The learned judge has held and rightly held, in our opinion, that Jethmall the defendant No. 2 converted the said cheque. No appeal or cross-objection has been preferred by Jethmall and the finding of the learned Judge against Jethmall stands. Be that as it may, in agreement with the learned Judge we hold that Jethmall converted the said cheque and is liable in respect of the said act of conversion. In view of the manner in which we have answered all other issues, we must hold in agreement with the learned Judge, that the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief as against defendant bank. In the view we have taken the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. The case is certified as fit for employment of two counsel.

MASUD, J.:— I agree.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:

This Bench has been constituted pursuant to a reference under Chap. VII of the Appellate Side Rules by a Division Bench consisting of Mr. Justice P. K. Chanda and Mr. Justice Sudhamay Basu.

2. The question referred to us is as follows:—

"For the purpose of determining whether a person is a child or not within the meaning of S. 28 of the West Bengal Children Act, 1959, is the age to be determined with reference to the date of the commission of the offence or when the person is brought before the Court or with reference to some other date?"

3. In Criminal Appeal No. 470 of 1974, (Madan Pradhan v. The State) reported in 1976 (1) Cal LJ 224 Mr. Justice P. C. Barooah sitting with Mr. Justice H. N. Sen has held that if a person be a child "on the date of the commission of the offence for which he was convicted" his trial along with an adult is "clearly without jurisdiction being in contravention of the specific provision of S. 28 (1) of the Act".

4. The other Division Bench of Mr. Justice P. K. Chanda and Mr. Justice Sudhamay Basu was unable to agree with this view. According to their Lordships it is the date of trial and not the date of commission of offence that is relevant.

5. Our difficulty is that in view of the facts of the instant case the answer that we may give to the question referred to us would be academic.

6-8. The case of the petitioner is that on the date when the alleged offence took place the petitioner was below 18 years of age. The petitioner was born on the 13th of April, 1954 as appears from an affidavit sworn by the petitioner's father before the learned Additional Sessions Judge. The alleged incident took place on 8th of September, 1971. It was contended before the learned Additional Sessions Judge that as the petitioner was below 18 years of age at the time when the offence was alleged to have been committed by the petitioner along with others, the petitioner could (not) be tried along with other adult offenders. 'Child' has been defined in S. 2 (d) which reads as follows:—

"Child" means a person who has not attained the age of 18 years. Section 2 (h) defines 'juvenile delinquent' which is as follows:—

"Juvenile delinquent" means a child who has been found to have committed an offence.

9. The facts of the present case are completely different from the facts in Madan Pradhan v. State of West Bengal, 1976 (1) Cal LJ 224. In that case it appeared from the order-sheet of the learned Magistrate that the learned Magistrate had seen the medical report to the effect that the appellant was a minor. The learned Magistrate passed an order directing the Investigating Officer to split up the case for submission to the Central Children's Court, Calcutta. It further appeared that this order of the learned Magistrate was overlooked or disregarded and no step for splitting up of the trial was taken by the prosecution. This point was again agitated at the time when the question of committal arose. The learned Magistrate however committed the appellant and the other accused to the Court of Session and overruled the contention holding that the West Bengal Children Act being a State Act would not apply to the present case in view of S. 27 of the Cr. P. C., 1973. In the present case we find from the order-sheet that the accused was produced before the learned Magistrate on 25th of July 1972. At that time it was not contended before the learned Magistrate that as the petitioner was a juvenile delinquent he should be dealt with according to the provisions of the West Bengal Children Act, 1959. The learned Magistrate proceeded with the case and framed charge against the petitioner under S. 304, I. P. C. and S. 27 of the Arms Act on October 19, 1973 and by his order of the same date committed the petitioner along with another accused to the Sessions Court. The learned Sessions Judge received commitment on November 5, 1973. He took cognizance and fixed the 30th November, 1973 for trial. It was only on the 30th November, 1973 that an objection was taken on behalf of the petitioner that he was a child as defined in S. 2 (d) of the West Bengal Children Act, 1959 and a juvenile delinquent as defined in S. 2 (h) and as such the learned Magistrate who committed the petitioner to the Court of Session had no jurisdiction to commit. The learned Additional Sessions Judge was of opinion that he assumed jurisdiction on commitment and if the petitioner so desired the petitioner might move the Hon'ble High Court to quash the commitment. Against the above order of the learned Additional Sessions Judge the petitioner has come to this Court.

10. Section 6 provides that "When a child is brought before a Magistrate or Court not empowered to pass an order under this Act, such Magistrate or Court shall forward the child to the nearest juvenile court or other court or Magistrate having jurisdiction". We are of opinion that as the point that the petitioner is a juvenile delinquent was not raised before the learned Magistrate, the learned Magistrate was right in taking cognizance and proceeding with the case and as such his order of commitment cannot be challenged. We are also of the opinion that the Sessions Judge assumed jurisdiction on commitment and that being so, it cannot be said that there was any illegality in assuming jurisdiction. Section 3 of the West Bengal Children Act, 1959 provides:

"Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in this Act, if during the course of any proceeding under this Act a child attains the age of 18 years, the proceeding may be continued and orders may be made under this Act in respect of him as if he was child".

In our opinion S. 3 has no application to the facts of the present case as no proceeding was started under the West Bengal Children Act. In the application under Ss. 435, 439 and 561-A of the Criminal P. C. on which the present Rule was issued the petitioner did not pray that the order of commitment should be quashed. The only prayer made before this Court is that the petitioner should be segregated from the trial of the other two accused persons and that the petitioner should be tried according to the provisions of the West Bengal Children Act, 1959.

11. In view of the observations made above and considering the facts of the instant case the answer that we may give to the question referred to us would be academic and as such we refrain from doing so. The matter is referred back to the Division Bench for disposal.

Saktinath Mukherjee and Tarun Chatterjee, for Petitioner; Hari Narayan Mukherjee (for Nos. 1-5), Mrinal Kanti Ray (for No. 6) and S. P. Roy Choudhury (for No. 9), for Respondents.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.— This appeal is directed against an order passed on 30th July, 1974 by Sri S. B. Putatunda, Subordinate Judge, 4th Court, Alipore, in Miscellaneous Case No. 42 of 1973 arising out of Title Suit No. 35 of 1968 dismissing the appellant's application under O. 9, R. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

The appellant filed an application under O. 9, R. 13 of the Code alleging that the summons of Title Suit No. 35 of 1968 was never served upon her and prior to 9-11-73 she had no knowledge of the suit and of the decree passed therein. It was only when on the evening of 9-11-73 one Sri Subodh Chandra Mukherjee along with others came to her house and told her that he had been appointed Receiver in the suit. The petitioner thereafter engaged one learned Advocate on 10-11-1973 to make enquiries in respect of the suit. After filing an information slip and on personal inspection of the record the learned Advocate came to know that the plaintiff in collusion with the pro forma opposite parties brought the suit and by practising fraud managed to obtain a fraudulent and collusive decree. The further case of the petitioner is that the plaintiff in collusion and conspiracy with the pro forma opposite parties and the process server procured a fraudulent return of service of summons upon the petitioner. That the summons was never served. That the process server never came to the residence of the petitioner on 29-5-68 or on any other date. That since 1967 the petitioner is not on good terms with her husband, who was defendant No. 1 in the suit and opposite party No. 6 in the present proceeding. It is also alleged that the defendant No. 1 in collusion and conspiracy with the plaintiffs made a sham show of contest to facilitate the passing of the decree in the suit. That had the petitioner been served with the summons, she would have contested the suit and that the petitioner had suffered irreparable loss because of the collusive decree passed ex parte against her.

3. Opposite parties Nos. 1 to 5 and 7 oppose the application. It is stated that the summons was duly served upon her and she had full knowledge of the suit and the decree. On the date of the service of summons the petitioner was residing with her husband at the premises where summons was served. All other allegations in the application have been denied. It is asserted that the suit was very much contested by the petitioner's husband up to the Hon'ble High Court and after repeated failures the petitioner has been set up by her husband with a view to harass the opposite parties. The Hon'ble High Court found that the petitioner's husband Sitanath Dey mismanaged the estate and mis-appropriated a large amount belonging to the estate. The learned Subordinate Judge considered the facts and circumstances of the case and the evidence on record and held that the summons was duly served upon the petitioner. He further found that she had knowledge of the suit and of the decree long before 9-11-73 and as such the application under O. 9, R. 13 is hopelessly barred by limitation. In that view of his finding the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the application. Being aggrieved Mira Rani Dey has come up to this Court in appeal.

4. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant, contends that in the present case it must be held that the summons was not at all served on the appellant. Even assuming though not admitting that the summons addressed to the appellant was tendered to the husband and the husband refused to accept the same and on his refusal the summons was served by affixation even then it cannot be said that it was good service. Mr. Mukherjee submits that in the absence of an instrument in writing the husband cannot be considered to be an agent of the wife and as such the husband cannot be said to have been authorised to receive the summons on behalf of his wife. Mr. Mukherjee submits that the report of the process server and his evidence very clearly show that no attempt was made by the process server to see whether the petitioner was at the relevant time at her house. Without making such enquiry, it was illegal on the part of the process server to tender the summons to the petitioner's husband. If it is proved in this case that the process server never tendered summons to the petitioner and even assuming that the same was tendered to her husband even then for the fact that the husband cannot be considered to be an agent of the wife it must be said that the summons was not served on the petitioner. Mr. Mukherjee submits that before service can be made by affixation certain conditions must be fulfilled. In this connection Mr. Mukherjee referred to a decision reported in AIR 1952 Cal 781 (Tripura Modern Bank Ltd. v. Bansen and Co.). It has been held that "Service by affixation can only be made under the following circumstances: (a) Where the defendant is personally found but refuses to sign the acknowledgment. (b) Where the defendant cannot be found personally but where persons who can be served on his behalf are found, but they refuse to sign the acknowledgment. (c) In the case, however, of an adult male member of the defendant's family residing with him, no attempt to serve upon him can be made at all, unless the defendant was not likely to be found at his residence within a reasonable time". Mr. Mukherjee contends that the report of the process server and his evidence in Court clearly show that the process server does not say that the petitioner was not at her residence. He also does not say that he made any attempt to tender the summons on her. He only says that as she was not present he offered the summons to her husband who refused to sign and then he served summons by hanging the same in the premises. Mr. Mukherjee submits that the service effected in the manner as stated above cannot be treated as valid and legal service. In support of his contention that in the absence of an instrument in writing the husband cannot be held to be the agent of his wife, Mr. Mukherjee refers to a decision reported in AIR 1962 Ker 266 (Kunhibi v. The Land Acquisition Officer, Kozhikode). In support of his contention that the provisions of the Code have not been complied with in the matter of service Mr. Mukherjee refers to decisions reported in 20 Cal WN 163: (AIR 1916 Cal 161 (2)) (Kali Kumar v. Aslam) and 26 Cal WN 359: (AIR 1921 Cal 638), (Dharam Chand v. Kanak Sarkar). In the former case it has been held that if the defendant is not found, proper enquiries should be made to find out when and where the defendant is likely to be found and proper effort should be made to find the defendant in the place where he ordinarily resides or carries on business. In the latter case notice was served on the defendant's son. The courts below thought that the service was sufficient compliance with the requirements of O. 5, R. 15 of the Code as the son was presumed to have duly brought it to the notice of the defendant. It was held by this Court that "This consideration should not have been weighed with the Court. It has to be definitely found that the defendant could not be found after reasonable and diligent enquiries and the person on whom the notice was served was an adult male member residing with him". Mr. Mukherjee further submits that O. 5, R. 14 of the Code has no application unless it is shown that O. 5, R. 12 of that Code cannot be complied with. In support of his contention he refers to a decision reported in ILR (1955) 1 Cal 119 (Bengal Chand Co. v. Durga Sankar Gouri Sankar). Mr. Mukherjee submits that the report of the process server will show that though the petitioner was at the time of service of the summons at the house but as she did not come out in presence of the process server, the summons was served by affixation. Mr. Mukherjee states that the petitioner being admittedly in her house it was incumbent on the part of the process server to make attempts for tendering the summons to her. Nothing having been done in that regard the service by affixation in the circumstances stated above must be held to be not a valid service. Mr. Mukherjee then draws our attention to Order No. 12 dated 21st of June, 1968 in Title Suit No. 35 of 1968. The order runs as follows:—

"..... Summons duly served upon the defendants 2 and 5. Summons of defendants Nos. 1 and 3 served by hanging. Summons of defendant No. 4 not yet received after service. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 appear separately and pray for time to file written statement. Prayers are allowed. To 18-7-68 for filing written statement. To 4-7-68 for order awaiting service return of summons of defendant No. 4....."

The above order shows that the learned court did not comply with the provisions of O. 5, R. 19. Order 5, R. 19 lays down that "Where a summons is returned under R. 17, the Court shall, if the return under that rule has not been verified by the affidavit of the serving officer, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving officer on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching his proceedings, and may make such further inquiry in the matter as it thinks fit; and shall either declare that the summons has been duly served or order such service as it thinks fit." In this case the learned court after taking into consideration the manner in which the summons was served by affixation ought to have held that it was not a good service and ought to have issued an order for fresh service. At least Mr. Mukherjee submits that there is nothing to show that the learned court was satisfied that the summons was duly served upon the defendant No. 3. In this connection Mr. Mukherjee refers to a decision reported in AIR 1967 Delhi 28 (Punjab Oil Expellers Co., Ghaziabad v. M/s. Madan Lal Nanda and Sons. It has been held that the provisions of the Code impose an obligation on the Court to satisfy itself after taking the process server's affidavit or statement and after further enquiry as may be necessary, that reasonable efforts were made without success to serve the defendant personally and then declare whether summons was duly served.

5. On the point whether in the present case there has been a valid service or not Mr. Roy Choudhury refers to a decision reported in 21 Cal LJ 653: (AIR 1916 Cal 600) (Khiroda Sundari v. Nabin Chandra). In this case it was held that "Where it is impossible for the serving officer to obtain access to the person to be served, either by reason of the custom of the country or for any other reason, the case is covered by the description in R. 17 'where the defendant cannot be found by the serving officer'." In the present case it came to the knowledge of the process server that the defendant No. 3 was at the relevant time in her house. But as it was not possible for the process server to tender the summons to defendant No. 3 it was offered to her husband who was none else than the main defendant in the suit being defendant No. 1 and whose summons was also tendered to him and on refusal to accept even his own summons the process server served the summons of the defendant No. 1 and the defendant No. 3 by hanging. In such circumstances, Mr. Roy Choudhury submits that it must be held that it was good service. In support of his contention Mr. Roy Choudhury relies on a decision reported in 35 Cal WN 332: (AIR 1931 Cal 546) (Sarat Chandra v. Joy Sankar). In this case "The service was effected by tendering a copy of the notice to brother of the defendant concerned, who was also another defendant in the suit and an adult and was living in the joint family dwelling-house and when he refused to accept the copy of the notice so tendered it was served by affixing it on the outer door of the cutchery ghar in the outer apartment. In those circumstances, the service of notice at the joint family dwelling-house by putting it up on the outer door of the house was held to be sufficient." With regard to the point raised by Mr. Mukherjee that the court on 21st of June 1968 did not record any order to the effect that the summons was duly served, Mr. Roy Choudhury submits that though it is desirable that all courts should observe the mandatory provision in O. 5, R. 19 and either declare that the summons has been duly served or order such further service as it thinks fit, yet the absence of such an express declaration will not involve as a necessary consequence a finding that a summons has not been duly served. This view has been expressed in a case reported in AIR 1940 Mad 213 (Venkata Rayanim v. China Bapanna). The appellant wanted to make out a case in the court below that she had strained relationship with her husband and that it was her husband who in collusion with the plaintiff made a sham show of contest in the suit and caused an ex parte decree to be passed against her. On going through the evidence we find that it has not at all been established that the appellant had strained relationship with her husband, rather it is the admission of the wife that her husband used to look after her other case. It is the admitted position that both the husband and the wife are living together in the same house. The husband very much contested the suit not only in the court below but also up to this Court. It may be mentioned in this connection that it is only after the Receiver was appointed and after the Receiver went to the house of the appellant and her husband on 9-11-73 the appellant filed the present application on 26-11-73 stating that she had no knowledge prior to 9-11-73. It may be mentioned that the suit was filed on 21-5-68 and it was decreed on contest against the defendant No. 1 on 29-9-70. The defendant No. 1 filed an appeal to this Court being F. A. No. 223 of 1971 which was dismissed for non-prosecution on 17-5-73. We have taken into consideration the fact that there was no written authority by the wife to the husband authorising to accept the summons on her behalf. But considering the fact that the process server could not serve the summons to the appellant as she was inside the house and the summons of the appellant and that of her husband (who is defendant No. 1) were tendered to the husband and on husband's refusal the same was served by affixation and that on the date fixed the husband appeared in the court and prayed for time to file written statement, we are of the opinion that the summons was duly served upon the appellant.

6. Mr. Roy Choudhury raises a point to the effect that there was an appeal in this Court against the decree and as the said appeal was dismissed the appellant cannot after the disposal of the appeal by this Court proceed with the application under O. 9, R. 13. Mr. Roy Choudhury contends that the decree of the trial court merged with the decree of the appellate court and as such the said decree cannot be challenged by an application under O. 9, R. 13 of the Code. Mr. Roy Choudhury in support of his contention refers to a decision reported in 28 Cal WN 795: (AIR 1924 Cal 830) (Kalimuddin Ahmed v. Esabakuddin). At page 801 (of Cal WN): (at pp. 834-835 of AIR) of the said report it has been held that "When the ex parte decree has been confirmed or otherwise disposed of on appeal the Court which passed the ex parte decree has no longer any power to entertain an application to set it aside, even though the application has been made before the appeal was filed". Mr. Roy Choudhury also relies on a decision reported in AIR 1967 Bom 310 (Kantilal v. Chiba Bava Bhandari) where it has been held that even when an appeal is dismissed summarily under O. 41, R. 11 of the Code an application under O. 9, R. 13 is not competent since the decree of the trial court merged with that of the appellate court. Mr. Mukherjee submits that in this case it may be mentioned that the appellant Mira Rani Dey did not prefer any appeal against the ex parte decree. It was only Sitanath Dey against whom the decree was passed on contest preferred an appeal and that being so, it cannot be said that Mira Rani cannot proceed with her application under O. 9, R. 13. On this point Mr. Mukherjee first relies on a case reported in (1911) 15 Cal WN 798 (Intu Meah v. Dar Baksh Bhuiyan). In this case it has been held that "Where a decree was passed against several defendants against some of whom it was ex parte, and a defendant who appeared unsuccessfully appealed against that decree, the Court passing the decree has jurisdiction to set aside the ex parte decree as against a defendant who had not appealed." Mr. Mukherjee also relies on a Supreme Court decision reported in AIR 1974 SC 1380 (M/s. Gojer Brothers (Pvt.) Ltd. v. Ratan Lal Singh). In paragraph 12 of the said report while discussing on the question of merger their Lordships observed: "The principle, therefore, that there is no decree as such of the appellate court if it dismisses the appeal for default of appearance or for want of prosecution or on the ground that the appeal has abated or is withdrawn or that the appellant has failed to furnish security for costs as provided in O. 41, R. 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, can have no application to the instant case". On a careful consideration we accept the contention of Mr. Mukherjee and hold that simply because the defendant No. 1 preferred an appeal to this Court and that appeal was dismissed for non-prosecution it cannot be held that the defendant No. 3 cannot proceed with her application under O. 9, R. 13.

7. On the point of limitation the court below has found that the defendant No. 3 had knowledge about the suit and the decree much before 9-11-73 and that the application is barred by limitation. Mr. Mukherjee submits that even assuming that the defendant had knowledge of the suit, for the application of Art. 164 of the Limitation Act it is necessary to ascertain when the defendant applying for setting aside the ex parte decree had knowledge of the decree. Mere knowledge of the date of the suit would not be enough for that purpose. Mr. Mukherjee further contends that the expression "knowledge of the decree" in Art. 164 means knowledge of the particular decree which is sought to be set aside. No doubt the onus is on the defendant to show that the application is within time and that he had knowledge of the decree within 30 days of the application. If the defendant produces some evidence to show that the application is within time, it is for the plaintiff to rebut this evidence and to establish satisfactorily that the defendant had knowledge of the decree more than 30 days before the date of the application. In support of his contention Mr. Mukherjee relies on AIR 1963 Mad 198 (Richai Ammal v. Vellaya Thevar) and AIR 1967 SC 1384 (Panna Lal v. Murari Lal).

8. Mr. Harinarayan Mukherjee, learned Advocate for the respondents, submits that the interests of the defendant No. 1 and the defendant No. 3 are not adverse in any way that the two defendants are sailing in the same boat. It is in evidence that Sitanath Dey, husband of Mira Rani Dey, used to look after her property and litigation. It has also been established by evidence that they have been residing in the same house. Mr. Mukherjee relies very much on Ext. B, a notice, in Civil Rule No. 572 (F) of 1971 in connection with the First Appeal filed by Sitanath Dey. Mr. Mukherjee places before us the record of the said Rule and we find that the said Rule was served upon Mira Rani Dey by registered post. On the acknowledgment form there is signature of one Mira Rani Dey. It appears that Mira Rani received the registered notice on 18-6-71. It has been contended by Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee that this acknowledgment is not part of the present record and as such this ought not to have been placed before us and secondly in the acknowledgment form there is no address of Mira Rani Dey and that being so, it cannot be said definitely that the appellant received the registered letter containing the notice of the Rule on 18-6-71. It is true that there is no address in the acknowledgment form. Generally, addresses are given on the envelopes and the post cards which are registered. It is not unusual that in the acknowledgment forms address of the addressee remains blank. But it is seen that the address of the sender has been correctly given. For all the reasons stated above we find that Mira Rani Dey had knowledge of the decree much before 9-11-73 and the application having been filed on 23-11-73 it is barred by limitation.

9. This appeal thus fails and is dismissed on contest. We, however, do not pass any order for costs. Let the records go down immediately.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 377

T. K. BASU, J.

Arvind Kumar Dhanuka, Petitioner v. Board of Trustees and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 1103 of 1976, D/- 18-7-1977.

Major Port Trusts Act (1963), Ss. 49, 52 — Board of Trustees fixing rate for lease of its land under S. 49 — Rate approved by Central Govt. and published in Gazette under S. 52 — Board of Trustees cannot plead that rate fixed was reserved or minimum and that it could lease land to higher bidder.

Having prescribed a particular scale of rent for a particular plot in the exercise of its statutory powers, the Board of Trustees have no right, authority or jurisdiction by virtue of notifications or circulars to treat that scale of rent as the reserved rent or minimum rent and invite tenders for higher rents and offer it to the highest bidder. To allow the Board of Trustees to do so, would clearly enable them to deviate from the exercise of statutory powers which have already been exercised. (Para 10)

P. K. Das, for Petitioner; R. C. Deb, for Respondents.

ORDER:— The petitioner is an unemployed Commerce Graduate who intends to start a new business on a plot of land which is the subject-matter of this application. The matter arises in the following manner.

2. At all material times prior to February, 1975, the port of Calcutta was governed by the Calcutta Port Act, 1890. However with effect from the 1st February, 1975, the port of Calcutta came to be governed by the Major Port Trusts

HU/HU/C539/77/BDB

Act, 1963 (hereinafter referred to as the Act). By virtue of S. 133 (2B) of the Act all the provisions with which we are concerned in this application came to be applicable to the port of Calcutta and the old Act of 1890 ceased to be applicable. Sections 49 and 52 of the Act with which we are concerned and in so far as is material for our purpose may be set out herein below:

"49. (1) Every Board shall, from time to time, also frame a scale of rates on payment of which and a statement of conditions under which any property belonging to, or in the possession or occupation of the Board, or any place within the limits of the Port or the Port approaches may be used for the purposes specified hereunder:

(c) leasing of land or sheds by owners of goods imported or intended for export or by steamer agents;

(d) any other use of land, building, works, vessels or appliances belonging to or provided by the Board.

(2) Different scales and conditions may be framed for different classes of goods and vessels.

52. Every scale or rates and every statement of conditions framed by a Board under the foregoing provisions of this Chapter shall be submitted to the Central Government for sanction and shall have effect when so sanctioned and published by the Board in the Official Gazette."

By a notice dated the 8th November, 1976, the Board through its Land Manager issued an advertisement which appeared for the first time in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of 11th November, 1976. The respondent No. 1 notified that sealed offers quoting the rate of rent in the prescribed form were invited for the lease of certain plots. The notice prescribed the procedure for making the application and also reserved the right to reject any or all offers without assigning any reason whatsoever.

3. Pursuant to the said notice dated 8th November, 1976 the respondent No. 1 through its Land Manager issued a circular in cyclostyled form inviting sealed offers for lease of various plots including the plot No. 17 in Sonapur Road measuring an approximate area of 788.747 sq. metres. In the circular, a sum of Rs. 50 was mentioned as the reserved rent per 100 sq. metres for the same offer.

4. The petitioner, pursuant to the said notice and the circular, obtained the requisite application form and in answer to the item regarding the rate of rent the petitioner in the form stated that Rs. 50 was the maximum rate which the Port Trust was entitled to realise in respect of the plot.

5. The controversy in the present Rule arises because according to the petitioner, in terms of the provisions contained in S. 49 of the Act the respondent No. 1 has framed a scale of rates in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Such scale of rates was published in the Calcutta Gazette in terms of S. 52 of the Act. This position is not disputed by the respondents. It is not disputed either that in so far as the plot No. 17 Sonapur Road with which we are concerned the scale of rent has been fixed at Rs. 50 per 100 sq. metres.

6. The sole question to be decided is that having prescribed the scale of rent at Rs. 50 for this plot in question in terms of the statutory powers contained in the Act, is it open to the respondents now to treat Rs. 50 as reserved rent as they have purported to have done in terms of the impugned notice and the impugned circular? In other words, is it now open to the respondents to invite offers for bid above Rs. 50 per 100 sq. metres in respect of the offer in question and offer it to the highest bidder? It has been alleged in the petition that the respondents have received several offers of higher rates of rent and are threatening to allot the plot to the highest bidders.

7. I may mention that originally a blanket injunction was issued by Masud, J. (as he then was) at the time of the issue of the Rule restraining the operation of the entire notice and circular. This order was however modified on the 22nd December, 1976 by S. K. Mukherjee, J. (as his Lordship then was) only to plot No. 17, Sonapur Road which is item No. 14 in the relevant circular and for which the petitioner made the offer as aforesaid.

8. Mr. R. C. Deb appearing on behalf of the respondents contends that the Board has issued certain directive principles one of which is that the scale of rents which have been already fixed are to be treated as reserved rents.

9. Mr. P. K. Das, learned counsel for the petitioner contends that having prescribed the scale of rents in exercise of statutory powers, it is not open to the respondents whose powers are circumscribed by the statute to treat them as reserved or minimum rents and accept leases at a higher scale by virtue of certain directive principles. To do so would be to override the exercise of statutory powers which have already been done.

10. After giving my anxious consideration to the entire matter, I am of the opinion that the contention of the petitioner should succeed. In other words, it must be held that having prescribed a particular scale of rent for a particular plot in the exercise of its statutory powers, the respondents now have no right, authority or jurisdiction by virtue of notifications or circulars to treat that scale of rent as the reserved rent or minimum rent and invite tenders for higher rents and offer it to the highest bidder. To allow the respondent to do so, in my view would clearly enable them to deviate from the exercise of statutory powers which have already been exercised in the present case. This contention of the petitioner therefore succeeds.

11. In the result, this application succeeds and the Rule is made absolute. There will be a Writ in the nature of mandamus directing the respondents to forthwith, recall, cancel and/or withdraw the impugned notice dated 8th November, 1976 and the circular bearing the same date and issued thereunder, only in so far as the plot No. 17, Sonapur Road which appears as item No. 14 in the said circular is concerned. I make it clear however that this order does not affect any other plot notified in the said notice or in the said circular.

12. The respondents would however be at liberty to proceed according to law.

13. There will be no order as to costs.
Petition allowed.

DIPAK KUMAR SEN, J.

B. K. Dhar Pvt. Limited, Petitioner v. Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority, Respondent.

Matter No. 132 of 1976, D/- 24-6-1977.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Mandamus writ of — Conditions and terms of tender ignored by authority which was bound to scrutinise them before accepting one — Tender of person who did not fulfil all terms and conditions accepted — Person whose tender is ignored will have justifiable grievance to request for mandamus although he cannot as of right claim that contract should be awarded to him.

For performance of certain work tenders were invited. Both 'A' and 'B' submitted their tenders in requisite form — A's tender which was complete in all respects and complied with the terms and conditions laid down, was ignored by the authority concerned and tender of 'B' whose tender did not fulfil all the conditions was accepted. On a writ petition by 'A', it was held, that grievance of 'A' was not entirely unjustified. A public authority should not put itself in a position where allegations against him can be made and allow them to go uncontroverted. Although 'A' has no right to get the contract awarded to him, yet as the contract given to 'B' was almost completely executed, to avoid unnecessary complications 'A' was awarded costs only. D. K. De, for Petitioner.

ORDER:— The facts which are not in dispute in these proceedings may shortly be stated as follows:—

On or about the 18th Oct. 1974, the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority incorporated under the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority Act, 1972, the respondent No. 1 herein, invited public tenders for construction of all civil works and supply and erection of mechanical and electrical equipments for a water treatment plant of 273 MLD capacity at Garden Reach. It was intimated that tenders should be submitted between the 11th November and the 6th Dec., 1974 and the "tender papers" containing, inter alia, the notice of invitation, specifications and other terms and conditions in detail would be available for inspection after the 11th Nov., 1974 and also for purchase at a price of Rs. 700 per set. It was declared that no one would be permitted to submit a tender who had not successfully completed and commissioned an integrated water treatment plant of the minimum capacity of 45 MLD; or who could not furnish a solvency certificate from a nationalised bank in his favour for at least Rs. 10 lacs.

2-3. It was indicated further that each tender should consist of three parts consisting of respectively, qualification of the tenderers both financial and technical, technical particulars of the proposed plant subject to negotiation for variation in design and otherwise and Schedule of prices. The tender of tenderer who would not strictly adhere to the outlined procedure it was declared would be summarily rejected.

4. B. K. Dhar Private Limited, the petitioner herein, submitted a tender for the said works and furnished the required earnest money.

5. After Parts I and II of the tender were opened only two tenders it is alleged were found to be acceptable in terms of the invitation. The said tenders were those of the petitioner and one Central Engineering Syndicate, the respondent No. 2 herein.

6. Though on the 19th Sept., 1975 Part III of the tender was opened the matter was not finalised by the respondent No. 1 for a long time. At the request of the respondent No. 1 the petitioner kept its offer open until the 31st Jan., 1976. On or about 14th Jan., 1976, the respondent No. 1, issued a letter of intent or acceptance of tender in favour of the respondent No. 2.

7. The petitioner being aggrieved thereby has sought to impugn the acceptance of the tender of the respondent No. 2 by the respondent No. 1 in the present application.

8. It is alleged in the petition inter alia that the petitioner has extensive experience in the construction and commissioning of water treatment plants all over India. It is alleged further that at the time of submitting its tender the petitioner believed that the invitation had been made bona fide and that the respondent No. 1 a statutory authority would conform to its own directives, representations or assurances. The respondent No. 1 however, contrary to its instructions and directives and in violation of the terms and conditions of the said invitation and of the other documents of tender extended certain special dispensations to the respondent No. 2 in respect of its defective tender in preference to the petitioner as follows:—

(a) On the 19th Sept., 1975 the respondent No. 1 permitted the respondent No. 2 to withdraw certain alternative tenders which were offered with their main tender though this was not permissible under the terms and conditions.

(b) The respondent No. 2, it is alleged never completed or commissioned any integrated water treatment plant of the minimum stipulated capacity.

(c) The respondent No. 2 failed to submit with part 1 of its tender any Bank certificate of its solvency as required.

(d) The design submitted by the respondent No. 2 for certain parts of the plant, viz., circular clarifiers, fell below the minimum requirements as laid down in the technical specifications of the tender.

(e) Part III of the tender of the respondent No. 2 contained conditional or variable rates of prices contrary to the terms and conditions.

9. By its letters, including those dated the 30th October, 1975 and the 17th Feb., 1976, addressed to the respondent No. 1 the petitioner complained of the aforesaid violations of the instructions, and directives and terms and conditions of the invitation.

10. It is alleged that the respondent No. 1 was discriminating in favour of the respondent No. 2. For the setting up of a water treatment plant at Howrah, with lesser financial commitment it is alleged that respondent No. 1 made it obligatory that earnest money of Rs. 50,000 should be furnished and allowed no deduction as in the instant case. Applications from other intending tenderers were rejected and tender papers were withheld from them on the ground that their qualifications were inadequate whereas the respondent No. 2 was issued with tender papers in spite of the fact that it was similarly disqualified.

11. The petitioner contends that the respondent No. 1 was bound to adhere to the mandatory terms and conditions laid down in the tender documents and could not legally award a contract contrary thereto.

12. The act of the respondent No. 1 in issuing a letter of intent or acceptance of tender and/or in awarding the contract to the respondent No. 2 is alleged to be illegal, unauthorised and liable to be set aside on the following amongst other grounds:

(a) The respondent No. 1 as a statutory authority could not legally travel beyond its own directives, notifications or conditions.

(b) The respondent No. 1 having made representations or given assurances that certain conditions or terms of its 'tender documents' were mandatory and/or would be carried out and your petitioner having acted on the basis thereof the respondent No. 1 could not operate in breach of any of the said conditions or terms.

(c) The discrimination shown by the respondent No. 1 in favour of the respondent No. 2 was unauthorised and illegal.

(d) The attempts to award the contract to the respondent No. 2 were mala fide and in abuse of statutory powers.

13. On the 26th Feb., 1976, a Rule Nisi was issued calling upon the respondents to show cause why a writ in the nature of mandamus should not be issued directing the respondent No. 1 to cancel or withdraw any letter of intent or letter of acceptance of tender or any document awarding a contract pursuant to the invitation to tender issued on the 10th Oct., 1974 in favour of the respondent No. 2 and also why appropriate directions should not be given to the respondent No. 1 to act according to law.

14. No affidavits have been filed by the respondents in opposition to the petition. At the hearing Mr. D. K. De, learned counsel for the petitioner, cited several decisions in support of the contentions made in the petition. The first decision cited was in the case of S. Raman Goud v. Government of Andhra Pradesh reported in (1970) 1 Andh WR 342. The facts in this case were that the appellant was the highest bidder in respect of a certain portion of a bamboo forest in a public auction held by the Forest Department. Pursuant to the conditions of sale as laid down the appellant deposited one-third of the amount of his bid. The bid was not confirmed as was required under the terms and conditions, but a Committee consisting of a Collector, the Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies and the District Forest Officer by their decision allotted the said portion of the bamboo forest to a Co-operative Society instead of the appellant. On these facts a Division Bench of the Andhra High Court followed the decision of the Supreme Court in the cases of Guru-swamy v. State of Mysore, reported in AIR 1954 SC 592 and Union of India v. Anglo-Afghan Agency, reported in AIR 1968 SC 718 and held that the respondents viz., the Forest Officers had ignored the provisions of the conditions of sale and that the appellant had a right under such terms and conditions to have his highest bid considered by the District Forest Officer for confirmation. A writ was issued accordingly in favour of the appellant.

15. The next decision cited by Mr. De was in the case of District Forest Officer, South Kheri v. Ram Sanahi Singh reported in AIR 1973 SC 205. This was also a case of public auction where the right to cut timber for a fixed period for certain forest lots was purchased on a bid. Thereafter a portion of such lots was cancelled by the Divisional Forest Officer. The successful bidder moved an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

16. On these facts the Supreme Court held that the Divisional Forest Officer who cancelled a particular lot allotted to the successful bidder was a public authority and by his acts the Divisional Forest Officer by-passed an order of a subordinate authority. It was held that the successful bidder had been deprived of a valuable right. The Supreme Court followed its earlier decision in Guruswamy's case (AIR 1954 SC 592) (supra) and held that though the order was administrative and not quasi-judicial yet the same had to be made in consonance with the rules of natural justice inasmuch as it affected the right of the successful bidder which was a right to property. The order of the Divisional Forest Officer was set aside by the Supreme Court.

17. The last case cited by Mr. De was Union of India v. K. P. Joseph, reported in AIR 1973 SC 303 where the Supreme Court laid down as follows:

"To say that an administrative order can never confer any right would be too wide a proposition. There are administrative orders which confer rights and impose duties. It is because that an administrative order can abridge or take away rights that we have imported the principle of natural justice."

18. On the strength of these decisions Mr. De contended that the contract awarded in favour of the respondent No. 2 should be cancelled.

19. Learned counsel for the respondents, on the other hand, has contended that the only right which the petitioner could claim was that his tender should be considered by the appropriate authority. In the instant case it was so done. It was further contended that no person had a right to insist that a Government or a statutory authority must enter into a contract with it. All that a person could claim was equal terms to bid for a contract. In support a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of M/s. Erusian Equipment and Chemicals Ltd. v. State of West Bengal, reported in AIR 1975 SC 266 was cited.

20. It was also stated from the bar that the contract which had been awarded in favour of the respondent No. 2 had been almost fully performed and that the Rule has become infructuous.

21. On the facts and circumstances alleged in this petition it appears to me that the grievance of the petitioner is not entirely unjustified. The allegations in the petition have not been controverted by the respondents. The respondent No. 1, a public authority, should not put itself in a position where such allegation can be made against it and go uncontroverted.

22. But, on the other hand, the contentions of the respondents that the petitioner has no right to be awarded a contract is also of equal force. The contract was awarded on the 14th Jan., 1976 and an interim order which was passed in favour of the petitioner was vacated. As a result of this the respondent No. 2 has proceeded with the contract and must be held to have altered its position to its detriment and cancellation of the contract awarded in its favour at this stage would lead to unnecessary complications.

23. In this view of the matter I discharge the Rule which has been issued in the instant case. The costs of this application, however, will be paid by the respondent No. 1 to the petitioner. Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that a sum of Rs. 20,000 had been deposited with the respondent No. 1 by way of security. The petitioner will be at liberty to withdraw the said sum from the respondent No. 1.

Rule discharged.

Pannalal Gupta, Petitioner v. The Commissioner of Police and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 735 of 1976, D/- 21-6-1977.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Writ petition challenging order of Police Commissioner refusing licence under S. 39 of Calcutta Police Act — Allegation that Commissioner acted unreasonably and arbitrarily — Allegation not properly answered with relevant reasons by Commissioner either on affidavit or otherwise — Impugned order must be quashed — Matter sent back to Commissioner for reconsideration in accordance with law.

AIR 1961 SC 705 4

ORDER:— In this application the petitioner Pannalal Gupta challenges an order whereby the Deputy Commissioner of Police acting on behalf of the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, has refused to grant police licence under S. 39 of the Police Act, 1866, in respect of a boarding house belonging to the petitioner and situated at 4, Sudder Street, Calcutta.

2. In the petition the petitioner has specifically challenged the order as being arbitrary and has also stated that the respondent has failed to apply his mind on the question of grant of licence of the petitioner in the application.

3. In spite of such specific challenges being thrown, the affidavit-in-opposition filed by the Deputy Commissioner of Police, who had passed the impugned order, does not disclose any reason which impelled him to refuse the licence in the instant case. There is in the affidavit a statement in which he craves reference to certain records. No records have been however produced before me at the time of hearing of this application. Therefore, in my view, the challenge thrown by the petitioner has not been answered by the respondent either on affidavit or otherwise.

4. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner draws my attention to a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Kishan Chand Arora v. Commissioner of Police, Calcutta reported in AIR 1961 SC 705. My attention has been drawn to a portion of paragraph 5 of the judgment which runs as follows:—

"Therefore, the fact that no hearing is required to be given by the Commissioner before he decides to grant or refuse a licence would not make the provision as to licensing in the circumstances of this case unreasonable restrictions on the fundamental right of carrying on a trade. For the same reasons it cannot be said that because the reasons for refusal are not communicated to the person applying that would make the licensing provision unconstitutional. The person applying knows that under the law there are three conditions (already set out above) which the Commissioner has to consider in granting or refusing the licence. If he thinks that he fulfils the three conditions and the Commissioner has acted unreasonably in rejecting his application he is not without a remedy; he can apply to the High Court under Art. 226 and compel the Commissioner to disclose the reasons for refusal before the Court and if those reasons are extraneous or are not germane to the three matters arising under S. 39, the High Court will compel the Commissioner to act within the scope of S. 39."

5. In my view, in the facts of the instant case it is exactly what the petitioner has done. He has thrown a challenge that the Commissioner has acted unreasonably and arbitrarily and the challenge has not been properly answered with relevant reasons by the Commissioner either on affidavit or otherwise.

6. In that view of the matter, I am of the opinion that the impugned order should be quashed and the matter be sent back to the Commissioner for reconsideration in accordance with the law. I, therefore, quash the impugned order dated the 16th July, 1975, and send the matter back to the appropriate respondents for reconsideration. In reconsidering the petitioner's application the appropriate respondents are directed to give him a hearing before passing the order. I am giving this direction in the interest of justice although strictly speaking, a hearing may not be required under the law, I make it clear, however, that after the hearing of the petitioner if the appropriate respondent is satisfied that there are cogent reasons for refusing the licence as prayed for, he will be at liberty to do so.

7. The Rule is disposed of on the above terms. There will be no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 383

T. K. BASU, J.

Smt. Gulab Kanwar, Petitioner v. The Director, Enforcement and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 780 of 1976, D/- 4-7-1977.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 (3) — Expression 'any other remedy' — Notice issued by Enforcement Director for alleged violation of Foreign Exchange Regulation Act — Right to show cause against notice is not "any other remedy" — Petition is maintainable.

The provisions of Art. 226 (3) seem to prescribe that no petition for redress of any injury should be entertained in a case where the petitioner has what has been known as "alternative remedy" for the redress of his grievance. The alternative remedy as the expression itself suggests must be some other remedy other than that of contesting the proceeding itself. Such other remedy as is well known is usually in the form of rights of appeal or revision as provided for in various statutes. Such remedy in appropriate cases may also be the right of filing a suit but the expression "any other remedy" cannot possibly mean the right of the petitioner to show cause against the impugned notices. (Para 11)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 226 (1) (b) and (1) (c) — Substantial injury and substantial failure of justice — Compelling petitioner to appear before the authorities in response to notices held to be initially void would cause substantial injury to petitioner and substantial failure of justice — Petition for withdrawing impugned notices held maintainable.

Matter No. 486 of 1975, D/- 18-1-1977 (Cal), Applied. (Para 9)
Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1977) Matter No. 486 of 1975, D/- 18-1-1977 (Cal) 1, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13

ORDER:— In this application the petitioner challenges two notices dated the 13th February, 1975 and the 4th August, 1976 respectively issued by the Enforcement Directorate on the basis of violation of certain provisions of the Foreign Exchange Regulations Act, 1947/73. Two similar notices in identical terms one bearing the same date and other a different one were challenged before me in the case of Saroj Kumar Bhotika v. The Director, Enforcement Directorate, Cabinet Secretariat, Deptt. of Personnel & A. R. Govt. of India being Matter No. 486 of 1975.

2. By my judgment dated 18th January, 1977, I struck down the said two notices on the grounds fully set out in my judgment.

3. Mr. Noni Coomar Chakraborty, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents does not dispute that so far as the merits of the present petition are concerned they are fully covered by my judgment in Matter No. 486 of 1975 and the Rule should be made absolute on that ground. He however submitted that in view of the provisions of the amended Art. 226 of the Constitution of India as introduced by the Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976 the present petition is not maintainable and I should hold it to be so.

4. In order to appreciate the contentions of Mr. Chakraborty it would be useful to set out the relevant provisions of the amended Art. 226 which are as follows:—

"226 (1) Notwithstanding anything in Art. 32 but subject to the provisions of Art. 131-A and Art. 226-A, every High Court shall have power throughout the territories in relation to which it exercises jurisdiction to issue to any person or authority, including in appropriate cases, any Government, within those territories directions, orders or writs, including writs in the nature of habeas corpus, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto and certiorari, or any of them,—

(a) for the enforcement of any of the rights conferred by the provisions of Part III; or

(b) for the redress of any injury of a substantial nature by reason of the contravention of any other provision of this Constitution or any provision of any enactment or Ordinance or any order, rule, regulation, by-law or other instrument made thereunder; or

(c) for the redress of any injury of any illegality in any proceedings by or before any authority under any provision referred to in sub-cl. (b) where such illegality has resulted in substantial failure of justice.

(3) No petition for the redress of any injury referred to in sub-cl. (b) or sub-cl. (c) of Cl. (1) shall be entertained if any other remedy for such redress is provided for by or under any other law for the time being in force."

Relying on the above provisions of amended Art. 226 of the Constitution of India, Mr. Chakraborty submitted that in the present Rule there is no allegation that any of the fundamental rights guaranteed by Part III of the Constitution of India has been violated. As such the case does not come under the provisions of Art. 226 (1) (a). It must therefore come either under Art. 226 (1) (b) or Article 226 (1) (c).

5. It was submitted by Mr. Chakraborty that in order that the case may come under Art. 226 (1) (b) there must be an injury of a substantial nature before the petitioner can maintain the present application. It was submitted that in the instant case there was no injury of any substantial nature. All that had happened is that the Foreign Exchange Authorities had decided that a prima facie case existed for an adjudication and had issued a show cause notice. It was entirely open for the petitioner to appear before the Authorities and show cause that they had not committed any offence as alleged in the show cause notice. Therefore I should hold that there has been no substantial injury caused to the petitioner at the present stage.

6. Similarly, it was submitted that in order to bring the petitioner's case under the provisions of Art. 226 (1) (c) there must be a substantial failure of justice. As merely a notice to show cause has been issued and nothing more has happened I should hold that there has been no substantial failure of justice.

7. I am unable to accept these contentions of Mr. Chakraborty. These contentions of Mr. Chakraborty would be of considerable substance but for my decision in the case of Saroj Kumar Bhotika v. The Director, Enforcement Directorate (Matter No. 486 of 1975) in which the judgment was delivered by me on the 18th January, 1977. As I have already indicated, I held in that judgment that even taking the allegations in the notice to be correct they do not disclose violation of any of the provisions of the Foreign Exchange Regulations Act of 1947 or 1973. I have further held that the charge contained in the notice has no nexus whatsoever with any of the provisions of the Foreign Exchange Regulations Act the object of which is the preservation and conservation of foreign exchange for the benefit of the country. In that view of the matter, I have held that the impugned notices are entirely without jurisdiction and void.

8. As I have already indicated, Mr. Chakraborty did not dispute that my findings with regard to the notices which are impugned in the Saroj Kumar Bhotika's case (Matter No. 486 of 1975) (Cal) must apply with equal force to the notices impugned in the present case. This is because the notices challenged in the present rule are identical and word for word the same. In fact these notices are part of a bunch of notices which were sent to various persons who had purchased shares in a Company known as Oriental Carpet Manufacturing Ltd.

9. That being the position, the question arises as to whether the petitioner in the present case should be compelled to go before the authorities and show cause as called upon by those notices. In view that I have taken in Saroj Kumar Bhotika's case (Matter No. 486 of 1975) (Cal) the notices by which the proceedings are sought to be initiated are void as being without jurisdiction. That being the position, there is no valid initiation of any proceeding under the Foreign Exchange Regulations Act in the eye of law in view of my findings mentioned above. In that state of affairs, in my view, it will be unjust to compel the petitioner to appear before the authorities in respect of the proceedings which I have held to be initially void. To compel the petitioner to do so would in my view cause substantial injury to the petitioner within the meaning of Art. 226 (1) (b) of the Constitution of India. Similarly to compel the petitioner to appear before the authorities in pursuance of a void notice would in my view result in substantial failure of justice. In that view of the matter, it must be held that the present petition is maintainable both under the provisions of Art. 226 (1) (b) and also Art. 226 (1) (c) of the Constitution of India.

10. The last objection of Mr. Chakraborty was based on the provisions of Art. 226 (3) of the Constitution of India. That provision which I have quoted above prescribes that if the petitioner has any other remedy for the redress of his grievance then no petition shall be entertained under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India. It was not seriously disputed by Mr. Chakraborty that against the impugned notices there is no right of appeal under the relevant statute. He however submitted that the petitioner had a legal right to show cause against the impugned notices and get redress by showing that she had not committed any offence as alleged in the notices. This opportunity to show cause according to Mr. Chakraborty was "any other remedy" for redress as contemplated by Art. 226 (3) of the Constitution of India.

11. I am entirely unable to accept the contentions of Mr. Chakraborty. The provisions of Art. 226 (3) of the Constitution of India seem to prescribe that no petition for redress of any injury should be entertained in a case where the petitioner has what has been known as "alternative remedy" for the redress of his grievance. The alternative remedy as the expression itself suggests must be some other remedy other than that of contesting the proceeding itself. Such other remedy as is well-known is usually in the form of rights of appeal or revision as provided for in various Statutes. Such remedy in appropriate cases may also be the right of filing a suit but the expression "any other remedy" in my opinion cannot possibly mean the right of the petitioner to show cause against the impugned notices. This contention of Mr. Chakraborty therefore fails.

12. This disposes of all the contentions raised by Mr. Chakraborty with regard to the maintainability of the present application.

13. In the result, it must be held that in view of my judgment in the case of Saroj Kumar Bhotika v. The Director, Enforcement Directorate (Matter No. 486 of 1975) (Cal) wherein the judgment was delivered on the 18th January, 1977, this Rule must be made absolute. There will be a Writ in the nature of Mandamus directing the respondents to forthwith recall, cancel and withdraw the impugned notices dated 13th February, 1975 and the 4th August, 1976 and to forbear from giving effect thereto in any manner whatsoever.

14. There will be no order as to costs.
Rule made absolute.

Noni Coomar Chakraborty and Surathi Mohan Sanyal, for Appellants; Nalin Chandra Banerjee and Binode Behari Giri, for Respondent.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA C. J.:— This matter has been referred to the Special Division Bench under R. 1 (ii) of Chapter II of the Appellate Side Rules of this Court by Sabyasachi Mukharji and M. M. Dutt, JJ. The principal contention before the Division Bench centred round the applicability of S. 58 read with S. 38 of the Constitution 42nd Amendment Act, 1976 to pending appeals. The Act received the assent of the President on December 18, 1976.

2. By reason of the provisions of Section 1 (2) of the Act, Ss. 38 and 58 came into force on February 1, 1977. Section 58 contains special provisions as to pending petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution. It provides as follows:

"58 (i) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Constitution, every petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution before the appointed day and pending before any High Court immediately before that day (such petition being referred to in this section as a pending petition) and any interim order (whether by way of any injunction or stay or any other manner) made on, or in any proceedings relating to, such petition before that day shall be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of Art. 226 of the Constitution as substituted by S. 38.

Sub-section (2): In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-s. (1), every pending petition before a High Court which would not have been admitted by the High Court under the provisions of Article 226 as substituted by S. 38, if such petition had been made after the appointed day, shall abate and any interim order (whether by way of injunction or stay or in any other manner) made on, or in any proceedings relating to such petition shall stand vacated....."

2-A. The dispute before the Division Bench was whether the above provisions applied to appeals pending in this Court on the appointed day in respect of Article 226 of the Constitution.

3. Mr. Noni Coomar Chakraborty, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the Union of India states that his instructions are to submit to this Court that S. 58 has no application to appeals pending in the Court on the appointed day. We need not therefore decide the dispute that arose before the Division Bench. And we proceed on the basis of the above concession that appeals pending in this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution are not affected by the provisions of Section 58 read with S. 38 of the Constitution 42nd Amendment Act, 1976.

4. As the entire appeal has been referred to us we have to express our opinion on other issues in this appeal. The Union of India is entitled to succeed in view of the judgment of this Court in Collector of Central Excise and Customs, West Bengal v. Sumanlal Parekh, reported in 1974 Tax LR 2380 (Cal). This was also a case under the Gold Control Act, 1968. This Court has held that in cases where alternative remedies have been provided for, in the absence of sufficient grounds to show why those remedies should not or could not be availed of, a petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution ought not to be encouraged.

5. In the instant case there are admittedly alternative remedies. There is no indication in the petition under Article 226 as to why those alternative remedies could not be pursued to seek appropriate reliefs. In the circumstances, the application under Art. 226 of the Constitution was not maintainable and should have been dismissed.

* (Against judgment of Amiya Kumar Mookerji, J. reported in 1977 Cri LJ (NOC) 149 (Cal).)

6. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The cross-objection is dismissed. The Rule granted under Art. 226 of the Constitution is discharged. The interim orders, if any, are vacated.

7. There will be no order as to costs.

8. We make it clear that we express no opinion on the merits of the case of the petitioner under Art. 226 which the petitioner would be entitled to urge, if so advised, before the appropriate authorities. We also express no opinion on the scope, effect or validity of S. 58 read with S. 38 of the Constitution 42nd Amendment Act, 1976.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI J.:— I agree.

S. K. DATTA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed;
Cross-objections dismissed.

A. N. SEN, J.:— This is an application for the grant of a certificate under Article 133 (1) of the Constitution of India for preferring an appeal to the Supreme Court against the judgment delivered by this Court on the 5th May, 1977.

2. An application was filed on the 30th January, 1970 for adjudication of the appellant as an insolvent. After the said application had been filed, an application was made in the said proceeding for certain interim orders. On the said application on the 30th April, 1970 an order was passed by consent of the parties and by the said consent order two receivers were appointed for the purpose of selling some of the properties of the appellant mentioned in the said order. By consent of the parties another order was passed on the 26th Aug., 1970 and by the consent order of 26th Aug., 1970 there was a change in the personnel of the receivers. It however appears that the receivers were not in a position to sell the said properties in terms of the orders passed. The said application for adjudication remained pending and the said application came up for hearing on the 22nd Dec., 1970 and on that day an order was made directing the said application for adjudication to be tried on evidence. On the 6th April, 1971 the said application came up for hearing and on that day by consent of the parties another order was passed on the said application. By this consent order there was a change in the personnel of the receivers and Shri Ajit Kumar Roy Mukherjee was appointed a special officer for the purpose of effecting the sale of the properties in terms of the earlier orders passed on the terms and conditions mentioned in this order which was passed by consent. An application was subsequently made for setting aside the order passed by consent of the parties on the 6th April, 1971. The said application for setting aside the consent order was heard and was dismissed by an order passed on the 6th Sept., 1971. Against the said order dated 6th Sept., 1971 dismissing the application of the appellant for setting aside the consent order passed on the 6th April, 1971 the appellant preferred this appeal. The appeal came up for hearing before this Bench. This Bench for reasons recorded in the judgment dismissed the said appeal. Against the said judgment of this Bench dismissing the said appeal, the appellant intends to prefer an appeal to the Supreme Court and the appellant has made this application for the grant of the necessary certificate. The facts of this case and the contentions which were raised by the appellant have been fully set out in the judgment of this Bench. Various contentions had been raised in the said appeal. Certain grounds were sought to be urged which were also not taken in the grounds of appeal. An application had also been made for allowing the appellant to urge further grounds and also for bringing the attention of the Court to various subsequent events. For reasons stated in the judgment the said appeal was dismissed and the said application was also not entertained. The grounds which the appellant urged before this Court have been summarised in paragraph 16 of the present petition. The grounds which the appellant wants to urge before the Supreme Court have been set out in paragraph 19 of the petition.

3. Mr. Dutta appearing in support of this application has contended that the grounds which the appellant wants to urge before the Supreme Court raise substantial questions of law of general importance and they are required to be decided by the Supreme Court. It is the contention of Mr. Dutta that the present case meets the requirements of Art. 133 of the Constitution. Mr. Dutta has referred to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. Jyoti Chit Fund and Finance reported in (1976) 3 SCR 763: (AIR 1976 SC 1163) and also to the decision in the case of State Bank of India v. N. Sundara Money reported in 1976 (3) SCR 160: (AIR 1976 SC 1111).

4. In the facts and circumstances of this case we cannot persuade ourselves to hold that this case raises any substantial questions of law of general importance which needs to be determined by the Supreme Court. The main question involved in the present proceeding was whether proper grounds had been made out for the setting aside of the consent order. The principles under which a consent order can be set aside are well established. It is no doubt true that various other contentions were raised and the said contentions have also been dealt with. One of such contentions raised was that this Court had no jurisdiction to pass the said order even by consent of the parties. It may however be noted, as has been pointed out in the judgment, that no appeal has been preferred against the consent order which was passed on the 30th April, 1970 directing sale of the properties by the receivers. No appeal was also preferred against the subsequent order bringing about a change in the personnel of the receivers for giving effect to the order of sale of the properties in terms of the earlier order. As we have noted in the judgment the argument was that these orders had merged in the order which was made directing that the application for adjudication should be tried on evidence. As we have noted the main question with which this Court was concerned in this appeal was whether proper grounds had been made out for the setting aside of the consent order. We are unable to certify that this is a question which involves a substantial question of law of general importance and this needs to be determined by the Supreme Court.

5. This application is, therefore, dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.
BIMAL CHANDRA BASAK, J.:— I agree.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 388

N. C. MUKHERJI AND B. C. RAY, JJ.

J. K. Seth, Appellant v. Narendra Nath Banerjee. Respondent.

S. M. A. No. 50 of 1975, D/- 31-5-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47 and O. 23, R. 3
— Ejectment suit — Compromise decree — Construction — Plaintiff under compromise decree entitled to get decree for possession and realise arrears of rent by execution proceedings — Violation of compromise decree — Execution — Plaintiff held entitled to recover possession by execution proceedings — Separate suit not required.

A clause in a compromise decree, passed in an ejectment suit on the ground of default, provided that in default of payment as provided in the petition the plaintiff would be entitled to get a decree for khas possession on eviction and realise the balance of arrears of rents and mesne profits by execution proceedings. On violation of the terms of the compromise decree, the plaintiff decree-holder sought to recover in execution possession and arrears of rents and mesne profits. It was contended by the defendant that, with regard to the arrears of rents and mesne profits, those could be realised by execution proceedings. But nothing had been provided in the clause which entitled the plaintiff to execute the decree for khas possession. The clause simply declared that in case of default the plaintiff was entitled to get a decree and for that the plaintiff would have to file a suit and get a decree and that decree could be executed.

Held, (i) negating the contention, that it had been clearly provided that in case of non-compliance with terms of the compromise, the plaintiff would be entitled to get recovery of possession and realise the balance of arrears of rents and mesne profits by execution proceedings. It was not a case of a simple declaration. AIR 1958 Pat 546 and AIR 1923 Cal 252, Disting. (Para 3)

(ii) The principle that if two interpretations are possible in respect of a compromise decree that interpretation which is favourable to the judgment-debtor should be accepted, did not apply to the facts of the case, as the terms of the clause were clear and unambiguous and as such there was no scope for alternative interpretations. S. K. Lahiri and Nani Chatterjee, for Appellant; Mano Mohan Mukherji and Amar Roy Chowdhury, for Respondent.

N. C. MUKHERJI J.— This is an appeal against the order passed on May 23, 1974 by Sri S. N. Ghosh. Additional District Judge, 9th Court at Alipore in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 79 of 1974 affirming an order passed by Sri S. P. Sen Gupta, Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court at Alipore in Miscellaneous Case No. 21 of 1972 rejecting an application under S. 47 of the Civil P. C. in connection with Title Execution Case No. 1 of 1971.

2. The facts of the case may briefly be stated as follows:—

The respondent brought a suit being Title Suit No. 69 of 1969 against the appellant for ejectment on the ground of default. The said suit was decreed on compromise in terms of joint petition of compromise on April 24, 1970. As the appellant violated the terms of the compromise decree an execution case was started being Title Execution Case No. 1 of 1971. An objection was filed under S. 47 of the Code which was allowed in part but objection of the judgment-debtor regarding delivery of possession was rejected. An appeal was filed before the learned District Judge. The appeal was also dismissed and hence the second appeal. This appeal was again dismissed for default on 28th April 1976. After that the appellant filed Title Suit No. 318 of 1976 on 25th of June 1976 claiming that the decree passed in Title Suit No. 69 of 1969 was not executable and also prayed for ad interim injunction. Prayer for ad interim injunction was refused. An appeal was filed. The appeal was dismissed. The appellant came up to this Court but Second Miscellaneous Appeal was dismissed under O. 41, R. 11 by us as the same was not maintainable. Then a civil Rule was issued on an application under S. 115 of the Code. Ad interim injunction was prayed for but the same was refused. Again the appellant filed an application under S. 47 read with O. 21, R. 2, in Title Execution Case No. 1 of 1971. On 9-3-77 the learned Subordinate Judge has passed an order staying Title Execution Case No. 1 of 1971.

3. Mr. Siti Kantha Lahiri, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant contends that the compromise decree passed on 24th April 1970 is not executable so far as the recovery of possession is concerned inasmuch as Cl. 7 of the petition of compromise provides:

"That if the defendant fails to pay any three monthly instalments as provided in Cl. 4 or any of the current amounts as provided in Cl. 5, the plaintiff shall be entitled to get a decree for khas possession on eviction of the defendant from the suit premises and realise the balance of arrears, rents and mesne profits as claimed by execution proceedings and the defendant will not be entitled to resist the same."

Mr. Lahiri submits that with regard to the arrears rents and mesne profits those can be realised by execution proceedings, but with regard to the khas possession in case of non-compliance of the terms of Cl. 4 and/or 5 the plaintiffs shall be entitled to get a decree for khas possession. Nothing has been provided in Cl. 7 according to Mr. Lahiri, which entitles the plaintiff to execute the decree for khas possession. This clause simply declares that in case of default the plaintiff is entitled to get a decree and for that the plaintiff will have to file a suit and get a decree and that decree can be executed. Both the courts below have negated the contention raised by Mr. Lahiri. In support of his contention Mr. Lahiri refers to a decision reported in AIR 1923 Cal 252 (Syama Charan v. Satya Prasad). In this case it has been laid that "A decree which merely declares the rights of parties and does not direct any act to be done, is incapable to execution. In such an event a separate suit will lie to enforce the rights declared by the decree."

The facts of the case are completely different. In this case the compromise settled the extent of the right of each of the rival claimants, which was by no means identical in respect of the different properties; but there was no provision that the rights so fixed were to be enforced by execution of the decree. In such circumstances it was held that "The decree was in essence declaratory in character, and the plaintiff could not have recovered possession in execution thereof". In the present case in Cl. 7 as has already been stated it has been provided that in default of payment as provided in Cl. 4 or 5 the plaintiff shall be entitled to get decree for khas possession on eviction and realise the balance of arrears rents and mesne profits by execution proceedings and the defendant will not be entitled to resist the same. Mr. Lahiri wants to submit that execution proceedings relate only with regard to the realisation of the balance of arrears rents and mesne profits. It has not been contemplated in para. 7 of the compromise petition that the plaintiff can execute the decree for khas possession. We are unable to accept the contention raised by Mr. Lahiri and on reading the terms of para. 7 of the compromise petition carefully we are of the opinion that it has been clearly provided that in case of non-compliance of terms of Cls. 4 and/or 5 of the petition, the plaintiff would be entitled to get recovery of possession and realise the balance of arrears rents and mesne profits by execution proceedings. Mr. Lahiri also relies on a decision reported in AIR 1958 Pat 546 (Meghraj Sah v. Rajbansi Lal). In this case one of the terms of the compromise decree ran that "this defendants neither have nor shall have any connection or concern with 4 1/2 cottahs of the disputed land... ..". It was held that "the parties merely agreed to a declaration of the plaintiff's right, title and interest in the disputed land. They did not say that the defendants would deliver possession of the land to the plaintiff, nor did they say that failing delivery of possession by the defendants out of court, the plaintiff would be entitled to take delivery of possession through Court. That being so the compromise decree was not executable at all". But in the present case it was not a simple declaration but the plaintiff got a right for recovery of possession by execution in case the defendant does not comply with the terms of Cls. 4 and 5.

4. Mr. Lahiri next submits that if two interpretations are possible in respect of a compromise decree that interpretation which is favourable to the judgment-debtor should be accepted. In support of his contention he refers to a decision reported in AIR 1972 Punj 144 (Punjab and Sindh Bank Ltd. v. Jagdish Lal). The principle laid down in this case does not apply to the facts of the present case as the terms of the Cl. 7 are clear and unambiguous and as such there is no scope for alternative interpretations. Mr. Lahiri very much relies on a Bench decision of our Court reported in ILR (1968) 1 Cal 47 (Commrs. for the Port of Calcutta v. Basumati Bagh). In support of his contention that the time is not an essence of the contract and even assuming that there has been some default in making payment there can be relief against forfeiture. In this case there was provision of payment by two equal instalments. There was a short payment of Rs. 38 in making the first instalment, but that amount was paid with the second instalment. In such circumstances it was held that the short payment of Rs. 38 in the first instalment cannot be taken as a default because the provision of payment by two equal instalments was principally made for the benefit of the defendant. Again the first payment within the period of three months was only a mode of payment. All the arrears, however, were paid within the period of six months. In this case it was held that wasilat in respect of a particular month may have been deposited after the 7th of the next succeeding month. But there was nothing on record to show that how many months there was such delay and what was the extent of delay. Considering the facts of the case their Lordships found that the parties did not intend to make time of the essence of the contract and as such the judgment-debtor could ask for specific performance notwithstanding her failure to pay the arrears and wasilat within the dates fixed by Cl. 4 of the petition of compromise. As the facts of this case are different from the facts of the present case the principle enunciated does not apply here. Mr. Lahiri submits that even if a decree is passed on compromise in terms of the petition of compromise the court is required to see that there was existence of grounds for which a decree could be passed. In the present case we find that in para. 1 of the petition of compromise it is stated that the defendant admits that he is in arrears of rent for the suit premises since Sept. 1968 at Rs. 325 till April 1969, and the claim in the suit. In para. 2 of the petition of compromise it has been stated that the defendant has also not paid or deposited to the court any amount at the rate of rent since May 1969. In such circumstances it must be said that the grounds for eviction existed very much and the court after being satisfied about such existence recorded the compromise. All the contentions raised by Mr. Lahiri fail.

5. In the result, the appeal is dismissed on contest. The orders passed by the courts below are upheld. Title Execution Case No. 1 of 1971 pending in the Court of the 2nd Subordinate Judge, Alipore, do proceed. There will be no order as to costs in this appeal.

6. The amounts deposited by the appellant in the court below will be permitted to be withdrawn by the respondents without furnishing security.

7. The prayer for stay of operation of the order is refused.

BIMAL CHANDRA BASAK, J.:— This appeal is directed against a judgment and order of Ghose, J. passed on the 26th July, 1971 in respect of a suit instituted by the respondent No. 1 herein the Bank of Tokyo Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as the Bank). On or about 13th March, 1971 the Bank filed this suit for leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent; Leave under O. 2, R. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908; Decree for Rs. 38,78,552.58 P.; Declaration that the stocks and shares mentioned in Annexure 'D' to the plaint stand charged and pledged for repayment of the sum of Rs. 38,78,552.58 P.; with costs and interest; Decree in a form similar to Form 5 or 5A of Appendix D to the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 in respect of the stocks, shares mentioned in Annexure 'D' with modifications. Sale of the stocks and shares mentioned in Annexure 'D' and payment of the sale proceeds thereof to the plaintiff with liberty to appropriate the same in pro tanto satisfaction of its dues; Decree for enforcement of the aforesaid Charge or pledge and realisation of the dues of the plaintiff in such form as this Hon'ble Court thinks fit and proper; Interest; Costs; Receivers; Injunction; further and other reliefs.

2. The claim of the Bank arises out of transactions on an overdraft account opened in the Bank in the name of the defendant No. 1, a partnership concern. In this suit an application was made under S. 68 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act (hereinafter referred to as the said Act) by the appellant herein, who was the defendant No. 1 in the suit, praying for an order that the suit and all proceedings therein be stayed until the plaintiff has exhausted all its available remedies against the mortgaged property or what remains of it and alternatively for a direction to the plaintiff to surrender and/or release and/or abandon its security and, if necessary, to retransfer the mortgaged property. This application was heard by Ghose, J. and by his judgment and order his Lordship dismissed the application. This appeal has been preferred against the same.

3. Mr. Deb, learned counsel appearing for the appellant, has raised two points. Firstly, he has submitted that this is a suit for mortgage money within the meaning of S. 68 (1) (a) of the said Act and that the finding of the learned Judge to the contrary was erroneous. With regard to the decision in the case of Nityananda Ghosh v. Rajpur Chhaya Bani Cinema Ltd. reported in AIR 1953 Cal 208 relied upon by the learned trial Judge,

Mr. Deb relied on a decision of the Division Bench of this Court in the case of Sukhada Kanta v. Joginee Kanta reported in AIR 1934 Cal 73. He has further submitted that in the case of Nityananda Ghosh v. Rajpur Chhaya Bani Cinema Ltd. (supra) it was a suit on the promissory note which, according to him is not the same in the present case. He has further submitted that S. 68 (1) (a) of the Act does not refer to cause of action. He has submitted that in the case of a suit for mortgage money there is no question of any other independent cause of action because all these so-called causes of action merge in the mortgage. It was also contended by him that in any event the lower security merges in the higher security viz., the mortgage of immovable property in this case.

4. The second submission of Mr. Deb is that having regard to the fact that this is a suit for mortgage money within the meaning of S. 68 (1) (a) of the said Act, this is an appropriate case where the learned Judge should have exercised his discretion under sub-s. (2) of S. 63 of the said Act in favour of his client and should have stayed the suit and all proceedings therein. He has submitted that the reliance placed by the learned Judge on the case of Nityananda Ghosh v. Rajpur Chhaya Bani Cinema Ltd. (AIR 1953 Cal 208) (supra) in this context was not appropriate because that case proceeded on the basis that it was not a suit for mortgage money within the meaning of S. 68 (1) (a) of the Act and accordingly, the discretion of the learned Judge was exercised on that basis. He has further submitted that the learned trial Judge in this case went wrong in observing that Nityananda Ghosh's case applies on all fours to the facts and circumstances of the instant case. It was contended by Mr. Deb that Nityananda Ghosh's case proceeded on the basis that a party cannot blow hot and cold at the same time. In that case the defendant who had made the application under S. 68 (2) had himself raised the question of validity of the mortgage. Mr. Deb contended that the appellant-petitioner Soorajmull Nagarmull had never raised the question of the validity of such mortgage.

5. On behalf of the Bank of Tokyo, Mr. T. K. Basu has supported the findings of the learned trial Judge. He has submitted that this suit was not a suit for mortgage money within the meaning of S. 68 (1) (a) of the Act and for this purpose he has placed before us the plaint in the suit, particularly paragraphs 32 and 33 thereof, wherein the plaintiff has referred to the security furnished by way of deposit of title deeds and whereby the plaintiff has reserved its rights to pursue its remedy in respect of such security in some other action. He has also drawn our attention to the prayer regarding O. 2, R. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In respect of the exercise of the discretion by the learned trial Judge, it was submitted that the discretion was properly exercised.

6. On behalf of respondent No. 3 Mr. P. K. Das appeared but he did not make any submission. He, however, made it clear that he was not supporting this appeal and his client was denying and disputing the validity of the mortgage. It may be pointed out that the respondent No. 3 is Mohanlal Jalan who was admittedly one of the partners of Soorajmull Nagarmull. Mr. Majumdar, appearing for the respondent No. 4, pointed out that there was a suit for dissolution of the appellant firm.

7. In view of our findings in respect of second contention of Mr. Deb, we do not think it necessary to go into the merits of the first submission of Mr. Deb. Proceeding on the basis that this is a suit for mortgage money within the meaning of S. 68 (1) (a) of the said Act, the question is whether we should interfere with the exercise of discretion by the learned trial Judge. It is well settled that the Court of Appeal should not ordinarily interfere with the discretion exercised by the learned trial Judge and substitute its own exercise of discretion. Had the matter been before the Appeal Court at the first instance, it might or might not have held the same view or might or might not have exercised its discretion in the same manner as the learned trial Judge had done; but that by itself is not sufficient to enable the Appeal Court to interfere with the exercise of discretion by the learned trial Judge. It must be shown that in exercising its discretion the trial Judge has acted unreasonably or capriciously or has ignored relevant facts and has adopted an unjudicial approach. In this particular case we are not satisfied that any case has been made out to compel us to interfere with the discretion exercised by the learned trial Judge. The learned trial Judge has referred to the fact that one of the partners, Mohanlal Jalan, has in his affidavit denied the factum as well as the validity of the said mortgage stated to have been created by the deposit of title deeds as referred to in the plaint. The learned Judge has also pointed out that Deokinandan Jalan, another partner, has also in his affidavit denied the factum as well as the validity not only of the mortgage but also of the validity of the loans so far as the firm is concerned. The power and authority of Kishorilal Jalan to file or maintain the instant application on behalf of the defendant No. 1, Soorajmull Nagarmull, which was a partnership concern has also been challenged. In these circumstances we are of the opinion that it cannot be said that the exercise of discretion by the learned trial Judge was improper. On the other hand, we are of the opinion that the learned trial Judge correctly exercised his discretion in refusing to stay the suit in terms of sub-s. (2) of S. 68 of the said Act. The fact remains that Soorajmull Nagarmull is a partnership firm. Two of its partners have raised the question of validity of this mortgage. It has also to be pointed out that there are certain suits instituted in this Court for dissolution of this firm which, inter alia, include suit for declaration that the said firm stood dissolved on and from a particular date. According to Deokinandan the appellant firm stands dissolved. The admitted position further is that meanwhile the hearing of this suit has started and one of the witnesses had been examined de-benue-esse. The authority of any person to make any application on behalf of Soorajmull Nagarmull at the relevant time is also disputed. In that view of the matter, we are of the opinion that no case has been made out to enable us to interfere with the exercise of discretion by the learned trial Judge.

8. Accordingly, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

A. N. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Civil Rule Nos. 1305-9, 693-694, 1363-64, 1053-56, 1059-60 and 421 of 1976, D/-25-2-1977.

DU/DU/B174/77/VSS

(A) Railway Accidents (Compensation) Rules (1950), R. 6 (2) (as substituted by Amendment Rules, 1974) — Applicability — Not applicable in case of permanent partial disablement caused by injury.

Rule 6 (2) applies when the amount of injury is not specified in part II of the Schedule but at the same time deprives a person of all capacity to do any vocational or occupational work. This sub-rule has no application where there is permanent partial disablement caused by the injury of the accident, as such injury does not deprive a person of all capacity to do any work. (Para 10)

(B) Railway Accidents (Compensation) Rules (1950), R. 6 (as substituted by Amendment Rules, 1974) — Scope and effect of amendment.

What the amended rules have introduced is a scale of compensation for the loss of a limb or member, assuming the total deprivation of all capacity for work at Rs. 50,000 for a victim instead of linking it with the income which the victim might be earning at the material time. The scale again provided for fixed amount for loss of limb, member or organ according to the importance of such limb, member or organ with reference to human activity in connection with man's vocational work. There is really no departure from the basis of calculation as in the Workmen's Compensation Act except that instead of the total permanent disability being linked with the victim's income, it is now assumed at Rs. 50,000 and specified amounts have been prescribed, calculated on the same percentage though in greater details in respect of the loss of such limb or member. (Para 13)

The discretion under R. 6 (3) undoubtedly will be judicial one but has to be exercised with reference to all circumstances including temporary or permanent disability with reference to the vocational work of the victim resulting in loss of income or earning capacity either temporarily or permanently as also the pain and suffering thereby caused to such victim. It cannot therefore be said that the principles of payment as provided in the Workmen's Compensation Act have been given up, as otherwise, there will be no guideline for determining reasonable compensation for injury not included in the Schedule which results in pain and suffering. In the original schedule, the complete and permanent loss of use of a limb or member was equated with the loss of that limb or member, as in the Workmen's Compensation Act in force which is omitted in the amended rules (by omission of R. 2 (e) of the original Rules). This is an unfortunate omission which undoubtedly will cause serious hardship in many cases. This inequitable omission should be remedied and loss of a limb or member should be equated to loss of use of that limb or member. (Para 14)

(C) Railway Accidents (Compensation) Rules (1950), R. 6 (3) (as substituted by Amendment Rules, 1974) — Interpretation — Non-schedule injury which results in pain and suffering — Compensation — Determination — Word 'any' does not mean 'all'. (i) Railways Act (1890), S. 82-A — (ii) Interpretation of Statutes — Language plain and unambiguous).

Compensation is not payable for merely for pain or suffering but for personal injury only which results in pain and suffering. It may be that in determining compensation, the Claims Commissioner will have to take into consideration all circumstances including pain and suffering from respective injury, but unless there is a personal injury no compensation is payable under S. 82-A of the Railways Act and the Railway Accidents (Compensation) Rules, 1950 as amended. Further, different injuries may cause different type of pain and suffering and such pain and suffering may be separately and individually felt and suffered even apart from the cumulative effect of pain and suffering from all injuries together. (Para 15)

In appropriate cases, the Courts have interpreted the word 'any' as 'all' but where the provisions are clear and free from ambiguity it is not permissible to read in statute what is not there. In this Cl. (3) 'any injury' is being referred in the same clause as "other than an injury specified in the schedule or referred to in sub-r. (2)". This clear provision militates against the contention that 'any' should be read as 'all'. Further if there is a loss of use of limb or member or more by the injuries of the accident, an interpretation of maximum compensation of Rs. 10,000 will lead to further inequity and hardship. (Para 16)

The contention that all sub-rules of R. 6 are independent and sub-r. (4) has no application to sub-r. (3) cannot be accepted. This sub-r. (4) is placed immediately after sub-r. (3) and there is no prohibition providing for its non-application to sub-r. (3) nor does the working of the sub-rule indicate its non-application to sub-r. (3). It also cannot be urged that in sub-r. (4) the injuries therein mentioned are confined to schedule injuries in absence of any such provision.

(Para 16)

On an interpretation of the compensation rules it is clear that the compensation not exceeding Rs. 10,000 under sub-rule (3) of R. 6 relates to each injury resulting in pain and suffering which a victim of the accident sustains on account thereof, subject to the maximum overall statutory limit of Rs. 50,000 for all injuries so suffered. Further, in determining the compensation, the Claims Commissioner will have to take into account all circumstances including the loss of income or earning capacity of the victim as also the pain and suffering endured by him on account thereof as may be deemed reasonable. (Para 17)

(D) Railways Act (1890), S. 86— Merely directory — Examination of victim of accident by qualified medical practitioner not essential condition for determining compensation — Non-examination will not render decision nugatory. (Para 18)

(E) Constitution of India, Art. 227 — Railways Act (1890), S. 82-F (2) — Alternate remedy — Appeal under S. 82-F (2) not availed of — Order of Claims Commissioner impugned under Art. 227 on ground that compensation was determined in manner not warranted by law and accordingly such determination was without jurisdiction — Application under Art. 227 maintainable. SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— A major train accident occurred on January 29, 1975 at Ultadanga Road Station by collision between two passenger trains. The accident was attended with loss of human life and grievous injury to passengers as also loss of property. The Railway Administration appointed an Ad-hoc Claims Commissioner (hereinafter referred as Claims Commissioner) for determination of claims for compensation made by the passengers for personal injury as also for loss of property on account of the accident. The Claims Commissioner held sittings when evidence was adduced by the victims in support of their respective cases in respect of the compensation payable by the Railway for injury to person and loss of property caused by the accident. The Claims Commissioner determined the compensation payable by the Railway Administration to the passengers before him on account of personal injury suffered by them as also for loss of goods. The Railway Administration was dissatisfied with the determination of such compensation which according to the Railway was not authorised by the provisions of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 and the Rules made thereunder. Accordingly the Union of India moved this Court by applications under Art. 227 of the Constitution against the several orders for compensation and the Rules before us were issued on those applications for appropriate orders and directions. The Rules involving common questions of law and similar questions of facts have been heard before us together and will be governed by this judgment.

2. The liability of railway administration in respect of accidents to trains carrying passengers is provided in Ss. 82A to 82J of the Indian Railways Act, 1890. Section 82-A provides in sub-s. (1) that the Railway Administration shall be liable to pay compensation for death and for personal injury and loss of accompanying goods owned by the passenger sustained as a result of such accident. Sub-s. (2) provides that the liability of the Railway administration shall in no case exceed rupees fifty thousand in respect of any one person. Section 82-B provides for appointment of a Claims Commissioner for local area. The applications for compensation have been provided in S. 82-C including claims for interim relief. Section 82-D provided for procedure and powers of the Claims Commissioner who shall have the powers of the Civil Court for enforcing attendance of witnesses and production of documents and material objects and also power to appoint persons possessing special knowledge to assist him in holding the inquiry. Section 82-E provides for interim compensation as may be deemed reasonable by the Claims Commissioner. The Claims Commissioner under sub-s. (1) to S. 82-F is to determine the liability of the railways to pay compensation under S. 82-A and the amount and person to whom such compensation would be payable. Sub-section (2) provides for appeal to the High Court by the persons aggrieved against the decision of the Claims Commissioner but High Court shall not be authorised to grant compensation in excess of limit specified in S. 82-A.

3. Section 82-G lays down the procedure for recovering and payment of compensation. Section 82-H provides that the right of any person to claim compensation under S. 82-A shall not affect his right to compensation under any other law for the time being in force but no person shall be entitled to claim compensation more than once in respect of the same accident. Section 82-H provides for interim relief by railway administration while S. 82-I is a bar to legal proceedings against any person for anything done in good faith under the foregoing sections. Section 82-J provides for power to make rules by the Central Government to carry out the objects of Ss. 82-A to 82-H inclusive.

4. The Central Government in pursuance thereof framed Rules called Railway Accidents (Compensation) Rules, 1950. We are concerned in these causes with Part III thereof which provides for rates for compensation in Rules 6 and 7 and the Schedule thereof. The said Rules prior to subsequent amendment mentioned hereinafter were as follows:—

"Rule 6. (1) The amount of compensation payable in respect of death or for injuries causing partial disablement or total disablement shall be at the rates set out in the schedule:

Provided that where more than one injury is caused by the same accident compensation shall be payable in respect of each injury but so that the aggregate amount of compensation does not exceed the amount which would have been payable if a total disablement had resulted from such injuries:

Provided further that where compensation has been paid for any injury which is less than the amount which would have been payable as compensation if the injured person had died and that person subsequently dies as a result of injury, a further compensation equal to the difference between the amount payable and that already paid shall become payable.

(2) In case of partial disablement arising out of an injury not specified in Part II of the Schedule such percentage of compensation payable in the case of a total disablement as is proportionate to the loss of earning capacity permanently caused by the injury shall be payable.

(3) The amount of compensation payable in respect of injuries causing temporary disablement total or partial or of injuries resulting in pain and suffering without causing any disablement, shall be such as the Claims Commissioner may, in all the circumstances of the case, determine to be reasonable:

Provided that such compensation shall in no case exceed 3/5 of the amount prescribed for total disablement in Part I of the Schedule.

Rule 7. Compensation for loss of goods and animals: Compensation for loss, destruction or deterioration of goods or animals shall be paid to such extent as the Commissioner in the circumstances deems reasonable, provided that such compensation together with any compensation payable for personal injury shall not, in respect of any one person, exceed the limit specified in sub-s. (2) of Section 82-A."

5. In the schedule there are two parts. Part I provided for compensation for death or total disablement and such compensation was linked with monthly income of the injured person. Part II provided for partial disablement and loss of limb or member or complete loss of use thereof at specified percentage of the amount of compensation payable for total disablement ranging from 70% for loss of right arm above at the elbow to 5% for loss of a finger other than index finger.

6. By the Railway Accidents (Compensation) Amendment Rules, 1974 which is to be deemed to have come into force on the 14th day of December, 1973, amongst others old Rules 6 and 7 and the Schedule thereunder were substituted by new Rules 6 and 7 and new Schedule. They are:—

"6. Amount of compensation:— (1) The amount of compensation payable in respect of death or injuries shall be as specified in the Schedule.

(2) The amount of compensation payable for an injury not specified in Part II of the Schedule but which in the opinion of the Claims Commissioner, is such as to deprive a person of all capacity to do any work, shall be rupees fifty thousand.

(3) The amount of compensation payable in respect of any injury other than an injury specified in the schedule or referred to in sub-r. (2) resulting in pain and suffering shall be such as the Claims Commissioner may, in all the circumstances of the case, determine to be reasonable. Provided that such compensation shall in no case exceed rupees ten thousand.

(4) Where more than one injury is caused by the same accident, compensation shall be payable in respect of each injury;

Provided that where compensation has been paid for injury which is less than the amount which would have been payable as compensation if the injured person had died and the person subsequently dies as a result of the injury, a further compensation equal to the difference between the amount payable for death and that already paid shall become payable.

(5) Compensation for loss, destruction or deterioration of goods or animals shall be paid to such extent as the Commissioner may, in all the circumstances of the case, determine to be reasonable." The new Schedule consists of three parts. Part I is for death, the amount of compensation being Rs. 50,000. Part II is practically for loss of vital limbs, members or organ or severe facial disfigurement the amount of compensation being Rs. 50,000. Part III is for loss of limbs or members, or organs as specified in seriatim thereof with compensation for specific amount against loss of such limb or member, instead of a specific percentage of the amount of compensation payable for total disablement as in the schedule of the previous rules.

7. It may further be mentioned that sub-cl. (e) of Cl. (2) was omitted under the new rules. The sub-cl. (e) was as follows:—

"2.....(e) 'Partial disablement' and 'total disablement' have the meaning respectively assigned to them in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (VII of 1923)."

8. The explanatory memorandum to the Amendment Rules, 1974 states that the amendments are intended to bring the original Rules in line with the provisions of new S. 82-A of the principal Act. This new section increases the liability of the railway administration in respect of accidents to trains carrying passengers for the benefit of victims.

9. The Claims Commissioner in determining the compensation in the cases before us has proceeded on his finding that the claimants were bona fide passengers in one of the passenger trains involved in the accident. In considering the cases of the victims the Claims Commissioner found in individual cases that permanent partial disability in respect of the injuries sustained by the victim was a percentage of his capacity to do his work which is interpreted vocational or occupational work. Accordingly under R. 6 (2) such percentage of Rs. 50,000 is the amount which is the compensation thus determined the said opposite party is entitled to get from the Railways.

10. We may at once say that the learned Claims Commissioner was entirely wrong in determining compensation as being payable under and on basis of R. 6 (2) in case other than death and complete incapacity to do any work. This sub-rule applies when the amount of injury is not specified in Part II of the Schedule but at the same time deprives a person of all capacity to do any work and 'work' obviously means vocational or occupational work. This sub-clause applies when the injury is not specified in Part II of the Schedule but at the same time the injury deprives a person of all capacity to do any work. This sub-rule has in our opinion, no application where there is permanent partial disablement caused by the injury of the accident, as such injury does not deprive a person of all capacity to do any work.

11. The Claims Commissioner however has determined the compensation on an alternative basis under sub-rr. (3) and (4) of R. 6. The contention of the Railways that Rs. 10,000 is payable for the sum total of the pain and suffering of all injuries under that sub-rule was not accepted by the Claims Commissioner. He referred to sub-r. (4), which according to him would be not there nor necessary if the sum total of injuries was to be Rs. 10,000 and there was no reason to confine the said sub-cl. (4) to injuries mentioned in the schedule. The Claims Commissioner accordingly determined the compensation taking into consideration the pain and suffering caused by each injury ensuring at the same time that compensation of each injury does not exceed Rs. 10,000 as provided in R. 6 (3) subject to the maximum of Rs. 50,000.

12. The conclusion on the interpretation of sub-r. (3) of R. 6 has been really the only substantial challenge before us. It has been contended by Mr. Das appearing for the Union of India that sub-rule (3) contemplates pain and suffering for all injuries together not mentioned in Part III of the schedule the maximum compensation being Rs. 10,000 as provided therein. The basis of calculation of compensation on basis of partial or total disablement as contained in Part II of the original schedule had been removed from the schedule of the amended rules and the words are no longer there by omission of original sub-rule (e) of R. 2 of the original Rules. Instead by the amendment rules in Part III of the schedule specific amount of compensation has been provided for loss of a limb or member. When injury does not relate to loss of limb or member as mentioned in the schedule, the only basis of calculation is in sub-rule (3) of R. 6. This rule states, it is submitted that for the pain and suffering resulting from all injuries of the accident the compensation is Rs. 10,000. This compensation is for the sum total for the pain and suffering and the cumulative effect thereof undergone by the victim for all injuries to which he may be subject on account of the accident, and it is not possible to divide or demarcate the pain and suffering for separate injuries so sustained as pain and suffering is one integrated feeling. Further the sub-rule expressly mentions that compensation shall be such as the Claims Commissioner may, in all circumstances of the case, determine to be reasonable provided that such compensation shall never exceed Rs. 10,000. These provisions, it is further submitted, clearly indicate that the compensation will never be in excess of Rs. 10,000 in respect of the pain and suffering from all injuries not included in Parts II and III of the schedule. It was further submitted that sub-r. (4) has no application to injuries under sub-rule (3) and in fact all the sub-rules of R. 6 are independent. The words 'any injury' in sub-rule (3) should be construed to mean all injuries not included in the schedule suffered by the victim for which a total sum of Rs. 10,000 will be available for compensation. Accordingly Mr. Das submitted that the determination of compensation separately for each non-schedule injury as also the pain and suffering therefrom is an erroneous decision not warranted by law and as such beyond the jurisdiction of the Claims Commissioner to order. Accordingly such orders should be set aside.

13. The contention that the deletion of the basis of determination of compensation in lines similar to that of the Workmen's Compensation Act as in the original rules does not stand scrutiny. What the amended rules have introduced is a scale of compensation for the loss of a limb or member, assuming the total deprivation of all capacity for work at Rs. 50,000 for a victim instead of linking it with the income which the victim might be earning at the material time. The scale again provides for fixed amount for loss of limb, member or organ according to the importance of such limb, member or organ with reference to human activity in connection with man's vocational work. There is really no departure from the basis of calculation as in the Workmen's Compensation Act except that instead of the total permanent disability being linked with the victim's income, it is now assumed at Rs. 50,000 and specified amounts have been prescribed practically calculated on the same percentage basis though in greater details in respect of the loss of such limb or member.

14. For a non-schedule injury, which results in pain and suffering, under the said sub-rule (3) of R. 6 the compensation will be such as the Claims Commissioner may, in all circumstances of the case determine reasonable subject to the condition that such compensation in no case shall exceed Rs. 10,000. The discretion undoubtedly will be judicial one but has to be exercised with reference to all circumstances including temporary or permanent disability with reference to the vocational work of the victim resulting in loss of income or earning capacity either temporarily or permanently as also the pain and suffering thereby caused to such victim. While the temporary disablement caused by an injury may have reference to loss of actual income, the permanent disablement of any limb or member or loss of its use from injury will be the percentage of loss of earning capacity calculated on the basis of Rupees 50,000 being the amount of loss for 100% disability. It cannot therefore be said that the principles of payment as provided in the Workmen's Compensation Act have been given up, as otherwise, there will be no guideline for determining reasonable compensation for injury not included in the schedule which results in pain and suffering. We may at this stage point out a lacuna in the amendment rules. In the original schedule, the complete and permanent loss of use of a limb or member was equated with the loss of that limb or member, as in the Workmen's Compensation Act in force which is omitted in the amended rules. This is an unfortunate omission which undoubtedly will cause serious hardship in many cases. For instance the compensation provided say for complete and permanent use of by both hands according to sub-rule (3) of R. 6 will be a maximum of Rs. 10,000 for each hand in all Rs. 20,000 assuming till now that in the said sub-clause the maximum provided is Rupees 10,000 for each injury, while according to Part III of the schedule of the original rules it would be Rs. 30,000 for loss of each hand subject however to the maximum of Rs. 50,000. This inequitable omission should be remedied and loss of a limb or member should be equated to loss of use of that limb or member.

15. According to Mr. Das the maximum compensation of Rs. 10,000 for pain and suffering resulting from all non-schedule injuries is based on sound reason as the pain and suffering for each injury are not divisible and must obviously be one integrated whole, whether the injuries are more than one or not as their cumulative effect. This contention overlooks that the compensation is not payable for merely for pain or suffering but for personal injury only which results in pain and suffering. It may be that in determining compensation, the Claims Commissioner will have to take into consideration all circumstances including pain and suffering from respective injury, but unless there is a personal injury no compensation is payable under S. 32-A of the Railways Act and the Railway Accidents (Compensation) Rules, 1950 as amended. We are not concerned for mere pain and suffering undergone by the victim on account of the accident without any personal injury though such compensation for such pain and suffering may be available under the general law. Further, different injuries may cause different type of pain and suffering and such pain and suffering may separately and individually be felt and suffered even apart from the cumulative effect of pain and suffering from all injuries together. We are accordingly unable to accept the contention so strongly urged by Mr. Das as practically the foundation of his contention.

16. Mr. Das's next contention is that the word 'any' before injury in sub-rule (3) of R. 6 should be read as 'all' so that for all injuries suffered by the victim the compensation will be as may be determined by the Claims Commissioner as reasonable not exceeding Rs. 10,000. This contention is supported according to him, by the further provision that the Commissioner may determine the amount of compensation in all the circumstances of the case as reasonable. There is no dispute that in appropriate case, the courts have interpreted the word 'any' as 'all' but where the provisions are clear and free from ambiguity it is not permissible to read in statute what is not there. In this clause 'any injury' is being referred in the same clause as "other than an injury specified in the schedule or referred to in sub-rule (2)". This clear provision militates against the contention that 'any' should be read as 'all'. Further, the condition is that in determining the reasonable compensation the Claims Commissioner is to have regard to all circumstances of the case. This means that all circumstances in respect of each injury are to be taken into account and not that all circumstances on all injuries together are to be taken into account. Such interpretation as suggested will be in violation of the plain reading of the section. Further if there is a loss of use of a limb or member or more by the injuries of the accident, this interpretation of maximum compensation of Rs. 10,000 will lead to further inequity and hardship. That the interpretation suggested by Mr. Das is also not borne out by sub-rule (4) which provides that compensation shall be payable for each injury. Mr. Das's contention that all sub-rules are independent and this sub-rule has no application to sub-rule (3) is not acceptable. This sub-rule (4) is placed immediately after sub-rule (3) and there is no prohibition providing for its non-application to sub-rule (3) nor does the working of the sub-rule indicate its non-application to sub-rule (3). It also cannot be urged that in sub-rule (4) the injuries therein mentioned are confined to schedule injuries in absence of any such provision.

17. For all these reasons we are unable to accept the contentions made on behalf of the Union of India limiting compensation under sub-rule (3) of R. 6 to all injuries together as may be suffered by the victims of the accident. We hold on an interpretation of the compensation rules that the compensation not exceeding Rs. 10,000 under sub-rule (3) of R. 6 relates to each injury resulting in pain and suffering which a victim of the accident sustains on account thereof, subject to the maximum overall statutory limit of Rs. 50,000 for all injuries so suffered. Further in determining the compensation, the Claims Commissioner will take into account all circumstances including the loss of income or earning capacity of the victim as also the pain and suffering endured by him on account thereof as may be deemed reasonable.

18. Mr. Das has also contended that in all cases there was no direction by the Claims Commissioner for compulsory medical examination of the persons injured by an accident as provided in Section 86. Thereby the several determinations of compensation which were based only on medical reports were contrary to law. On a perusal of S. 86 it appears to us that the Section is not mandatory and is merely directory. The provision that the authority may order that a victim may be examined by qualified medical practitioner is not essential condition for determining compensation and absence of such examination will not render the decision nugatory. We also do not find from the records of the cases that any application was made for any appointment in due time and at least no such appointment was prayed for till after the trial commenced. The prayer for such appointment was accordingly rightly rejected.

19. A preliminary objection has also to be considered. It is said that an appeal has been provided against the determination of the Claims Commissioner under S. 82-F (2) of the Act and accordingly the application under S. 227 is not maintainable. Without entering into the controversy that the right of appeal conferred on a 'person' is available to the Union of India, the orders of the Claims Commissioner were impugned on the ground that the compensation was determined in manner not authorised or warranted by the relevant law and accordingly such determination was without jurisdiction. In view of the challenge to determination of compensation as being without jurisdiction we think that the applications under Art. 227 are maintainable in law. We have further held in C. R. No. 954 of 1972, State of West Bengal v. Jyotsna Bhowmik dated February 8, 1977: (reported in AIR 1977 Cal 158) that the amendment made by the Constitution (42nd Amendment) Act, 1976 to Art. 227 does not affect pending proceedings.

20. On the basis of the conclusion we have arrived at in regard to the interpretation of the relevant sections and the rules, we shall consider the individual cases.

21. In Civil Revision No. 1305 of 1976 the Claims Commissioner has determined Rs. 10,000 each for the pain and suffering caused by two major injuries — fracture in right wrist and injury on the left knee joint under sub-rules (3) and (4) of R. 6 and Rs. 200 for loss of goods in all Rs. 20,200. The Claims Commissioner found the said compensation reasonable and acting under Art. 227 we do not find any scope or reason for interference as the decision suffers from no legal infirmity in exercise of jurisdiction. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs. We however set aside the compensation determined under R. 6 (2) as the said sub-rule is not applicable to the case.

22. In Civil Revision No. 1306 of 1976, the Claims Commissioner has determined for pain and suffering for each injury suffered for the total sum of Rs. 20,000, Rs. 8,000 on account of two fractures of the bridge of the nose and left ankle and Rs. 4,000 in respect of multiple injuries on the face and Rs. 200 was awarded for loss of goods in all Rs. 20,200. For the reasons already indicated we decline to interfere with the impugned order. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs. We however set aside the determination made by the Claims Commissioner under R. 6 (2) as the said Rule is not applicable.

23. In Civil Revision No. 1307 of 1976 the Claims Commissioner has found that the petitioner has been deprived of all capacity for work (word 'work' being rightly interpreted as occupational work) and the compensation was determined as Rs. 50,000 under R. 6 (2). In view of the above finding we decline to interfere with the above impugned order. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order for costs. We may add here that the determination of the compensation was also made on the alternative basis under sub-rules (3) and (4) and we also do not feel necessary to interfere with such determination as well.

24. In C. R. 1308 of 1976 the Claims Commissioner has determined compensation for pain and suffering caused by the fractures of six ribs and the rate of Rs. 4,166 for each fracture, in all for Rupees 25,000 under sub-rules (3) and (4) of R. 6 and Rs. 200 for goods lost. For the reasons stated earlier we decline to interfere with the determination of the Claims Commissioner and the Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs. We however set aside the determination made by the Commissioner under R. 6 (2) on the alternative basis which we have already indicated has no application.

25. In C. R. 1309 of 1976 the Claims Commissioner has determined as reasonable compensation for the pain and suffering endured by the petitioner on account of three major injuries at the rate of Rs. 10,000 for each injury. Two major injuries are one fracture of right forearm and another of both bones of the left leg and also severe injury on chest causing severe pain which was continuing even on the date of trial. For reasons already indicated, we decline to interfere with the order and discharge the Rule. There will be no order as to costs. We however set aside determination made by the Commissioner on the alternative basis under R. 6 (2) which has no application.

26. In C. R. 693 of 1976 the Claims Commissioner found that the petitioner was incapable to do any work by reason of the compound fracture of the left leg on the knee joint and also ankle and the union has resulted in a mal-union with consequent loss of normal capacity to stand up or walk whereby the petitioner has become completely crippled. It was further found that due to his physical and mental condition the petitioner was incapable to do any work and accordingly compensation was determined at Rs. 50,000. We find no jurisdictional error or infirmity in the decision in determining the compensation under R. 6 (2) of the Rules. The Rule is accordingly discharged. We also sustained the determination made on the alternative basis under R. 6 (3) and (4) in respect of several injuries as indicated therein in the circumstances of the case. There will be no order as to costs.

27. In C. R. 694 of 1976 there was amputation of the left leg below knee with stump exceeding $3\frac{1}{2}$ " but below 5" and by reason of the internal injury of spine, chest and right leg as also the leg injury, the petitioner, according to the Commissioner has been deprived of all her capacity to do any work. The com-compensation was accordingly determined at Rs. 50,000 under R. 6 (2). We do not find any jurisdictional error or infirmity in the aforesaid order. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

28. In C. R. 1363 of 1976 the Commissioner found that under Rule 6 (2), the petitioner was entitled to 40% of his earning capacity on Rs. 50,000 and on that basis he has awarded Rs. 20,000. We do not find that this Rule is applicable and we do not sustain the compensation founded on the above Rule. The Commissioner however has found alternatively that the petitioner is entitled to compensation under R. 6 (3) and (4) for three major injuries, viz., (1) fracture of right pelvis, (2) Osteo arthritis of the lumbar spine and (3) Osteo arthritis of left knee with pain and suffering caused on account of the above injuries. The Commissioner has awarded Rs. 10,000 for injury No. 1 and Rs. 5,000 each for injuries Nos. 2 and 3; in all Rs. 20,000. Further, a sum of Rs. 31 has been awarded for loss of articles. We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in the above order of determination under R. 6 (3) and (4). The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

29. In C. R. 1364 of 1976 the Commissioner has determined compensation under R. 6 (2) which we have already indicated has no application. The Commissioner has determined compensation on the alternative basis under R. 6 (3) and (4) for fracture of (1) right clavicle and (2) of right ankle besides hurt and multiple injuries. He has awarded Rs. 10,000 each for the pain and suffering caused thereby. We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in respect of the said determination. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

30. In respect of C. R. 1053 of 1976 the Commissioner has awarded Rs. 25,000 less paid Rs. 1000 under S. 82-HH. The Commissioner found that there were two double fractures in the left leg for which he awarded Rs. 10,000 each and for the lumbo-sacral spinal injury he awarded Rs. 5,000, in all taking into account Rupees 1,000 paid already Rs. 24,000. We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in respect of this determination made under R. 6 (3) and (4). We however set aside the determination made under R. 6 (2) as the said Rule has no application. The Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

31. In C. R. 1054 of 1976 the Commissioner has awarded Rs. 10,000 for the pain and sufferings caused by the major injuries for (1) contusion of lower 1/3rd of right thigh and knee joint he has determined compensation at Rs. 10,000 and together for (2) abrasion over right elbow and (3) tenderness of left upper part of tibia with abrasion he has awarded Rs. 10,000. We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in the determination made under R. 6 (3) and (4). We however set aside the determination made under R. 6 (2) in the alternative which has no application. The Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

32. In C. R. 1055 of 1976 the Commissioner has found that the petitioner on account of injuries has been completely disabled from doing any work and he has awarded Rs. 50,000 under R. 6 (2). He has also awarded on the alternative basis under R. 6 (3) and (4) in all a sum of Rs. 50,000 for each of several injuries. The petitioner was paid Rs. 1000. Accordingly the amount payable has been determined at Rs. 49,000. We find no jurisdictional infirmity in the order and accordingly discharge the Rule. There will be no order as to costs.

33. In C. R. 1056 of 1976 the Commissioner has found six injuries which are fracture of six ribs and he has determined the compensation for the injuries at the rate of Rs. 2,850 and the pain and suffering therefrom also Rs. 2,850 in all Rs. 20,000 under R. 6 (3) and (4). We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in such determination. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs. We however set aside the determination made under R. 6 (2) which according to us has no application.

34. In C. R. 1059 of 1976 there were fracture of cervical 4th vertebra in respect of which under R. 6 (3) compensation of Rs. 10,000 was determined. There are other multiple injuries, abrasion on upper surface of right foot, tenderness of both sides of neck and contusion of neck, multiple pain and suffering and for all these multiple injuries and the pain and suffering therefrom the Commissioner has awarded Rs. 10,000. A sum of Rupees 20,000 has been determined in respect thereof with Rs. 200 for loss of goods, in all Rs. 20,200. We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in the above determination. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

35. In C. R. 1060 of 1976 the Commissioner has determined the pain and suffering caused by the injury on right finger (which has been deformed) at Rupees 10,000 and he has also determined the compensation for the injury to chest and ribs at Rs. 8,000 in all Rs. 18,000 under R. 6 (3) and (4). We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in the above order and accordingly discharge the Rule. There will be no order as to costs.

36. In C. R. 421 of 1976 the Commissioner has determined the compensation at the rate of Rs. 10,000 each for (1) multiple abrasions over the left thigh, (2) abrasions on the shinbone and (3) for abrasion on the forehead and eyebrow leading to deterioration of eye sight, in all Rs. 30,000 together with Rs. 100 for loss of goods. The compensation in respect of injuries has been determined under Rule 6 (3) and (4). We do not find any jurisdictional infirmity in respect of the said order. The Rule is accordingly discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

37. Mr. Das has prayed for stay of operation of the order. We are not inclined to grant any stay in respect of persons involving total disablement. There will be no stay in respect of the Civil Rules Nos. 1307 of 1976, 693 of 1976, 694 of 1976, 1055 of 1976. We however grant stay of operation of the order in respect of the other cases for a period of four weeks.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.
Ordered accordingly.

MRS. MONJULA BOSE, J.

The Indian Cable Co. Ltd., Plaintiff v. Lodna Colliery Co. (1920) Ltd., Defendant.

Suit No. 583 of 1973, D/- 25-7-1977.

Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act (1973), S. 20 — Interpretation — Suit against ex-owner of Nationalised Colliery in respect of claim arising before appointed day — Suit, if maintainable in Civil Court.

In certain cases a negative implication can be drawn from a positive enactment. But to oust the jurisdiction of a civil court, mere negative implication is not enough. The implication must be necessary and inevitable. The Act does not positively or by necessary implication take away the jurisdiction of Civil Courts. On the contrary it appears that so far as claims against owners of coal mines are concerned, the jurisdiction of the courts is by necessary implication retained (vide S. 7).

The Act neither directly nor by implication takes away the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain suits against the ex-owners of the collieries nationalized, and particularly so in respect of claims arising before the appointed day, i.e. May 1, 1973. The said Act does not prescribe any forum against the ex-owners of the colliery for such claims and only lays down a procedure for having certain claims admitted and adjudicated upon by the Commissioner at the instance of creditors, to be realised out of compensation monies in the hands of the Government payable to such owners. Jayanta Mitra, for Plaintiff; Hirak Mitra, for Defendant.

ORDER:— This suit has been filed by the plaintiff, inter alia, for a decree for Rs. 1,93,274.10 p. for price of goods sold and delivered to the defendant.

2. The plaintiff's case, in short, is that on October 3, 1972 it had sold and delivered to the defendant various electrical goods of the total value of Rupees 1,83,082.50 p. On October 9, 1972, the plaintiff to secure payment of its dues drew a Hundi and/or sola of exchange upon the defendant directing the latter to pay within 45 days from date the said sum to the plaintiff's bankers and the defendant duly accepted the same. On due date, the instrument was dishonoured by non-payment and in spite of demands the defendant has failed and neglected to pay the plaintiff's dues.

3. The defendant has filed its written statement denying the allegations in the plaint. It is contended further that the suit is not maintainable by virtue of the provisions of the Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1973 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act).

4. The only issue raised and settled at the trial was — Is the suit maintainable by reason of the provisions of the Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1973?

5. No witness was called to depose at the trial. The parties by consent tendered the Hundi and/or sola of exchange dated October 9, 1972 and two invoices both dated October 5, 1972 collectively marked Exhibit 'A' and an order dated January 13, 1977 of the Assistant Commissioner of Payments under the said Act (hereinafter referred to as the Commissioner) in Claim Case No. 325 of 1975, marked Exhibit 'B'.

6. Mr. Jayanta Mitra, learned counsel appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. Hirak Mitra appearing for the defendant have both contended that this Court was competent to consider subsequent events and made submissions keeping in view the said order.

7. It transpires that subsequent to the filing of this suit, in or about 1975, a claim for Rs. 1,93,274.10 p. was preferred by the plaintiff before the Commissioner for the price of the said goods, and also for Rs. 12,442.50 p. on account of sales tax thereof. This claim was adjudicated upon, and by the said order dated January 13, 1977 the Commissioner admitted the plaintiff's entire claim of Rupees 2,05,716.50 p. Under the said Act, the sum has now become payable by way of compensation out of funds in the hands of the Commissioner.

8. The defendant's main contention in this suit has been that in view of the provisions of the said Act, a Code in itself, all claims against the colliery owners could be made only before the Commissioner and this Court was not competent and had no jurisdiction to try and determine this suit.

9. Mr. H. Mitra, learned counsel for the defendant, relied on Ss. 20, 23 and 24 of the said Act which may be noted as hereunder. Section 20 of the said Act inter alia provides that:—

"Every person having a claim against the owner of a Coal Mine shall prefer such claim before the Commissioner within thirty days from the specified date."

Section 23 of the said Act reads inter alia:—

3. Every claimant who fails to file the proof of his claim within the time specified by the Commissioner shall be excluded from the disbursements made by the Commissioner.

4. The Commissioner shall after such investigation as may, in his opinion, be necessary and after giving the owner of the coal mine an opportunity of refuting the claim and after giving claimant a reasonable opportunity of being heard, in writing, admit or reject the claim in whole or in part.

5. The Commissioner shall have the power to regulate his procedure in all matters arising out of the discharge of his functions including the place or places at which he will hold his sittings and shall, for the purpose of making any investigation under this Act, have the same powers as are vested in a Civil Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, while trying a suit, in respect of the following matters, namely:—

(a) the summoning and enforcing the attendance of any witness and examining him on oath;

(b) the discovery and production of any document or other material object producible as evidence;

(c) the reception of evidence on affidavits;

(d) the issuing of any commission for the examination of witness.

7. A claimant who is dissatisfied with the decision of the Commissioner may prefer an appeal against the decision to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the coal mine is situated. Mr. H. Mitra cited the case of Cricket Club of India Ltd. v. Madhav L. Apte, reported in (1975) 45 Com Cas 574 (Bom) for the following observations:—

"Statutory enactments, although expressed in affirmative language, are sometimes treated as having a negative implied and their provisions, though affirmative in words are not necessarily so, if they are absolute, explicit and peremptory. Every statute limiting anything to be in one form, although it bespoken in the affirmative, yet includes in itself a negative. When there is a special affirmative power given which would not be required because there is a general power, it is always read to import the negative. Necessary implication means, not natural necessity, but so strong a probability of intention that an intention to the contrary to that which is imputed to the legislature cannot be supposed."

Mr. H. Mitra also relied on a passage from Craies on Statute Law 5th Edition at page 244 which reads as follows:—

"Statutory enactments, although expressed in affirmative language, are sometimes treated as having a negative implied" ... In Viner's Abr. (i) the following rule is laid down: "Every statute limiting anything to be in one form, although it bespoke in the affirmative, yet includes in itself a negative" and in Bacon's Abr. (k) the rule given is, that "if an affirmative statute which is introductive of a new law direct a thing to be done in a certain way, that thing shall not, even if there be no negative words, be done in any other way."

10. On the strength of the above authorities Mr. H. Mitra submitted that in the instant case reading the statute in question, by necessary negative implication the jurisdiction of the Court has been taken away.

11. Mr. H. Mitra next argued that by reason of a prior adjudication by a competent authority the plaintiff's original claim had merged in the said order and the plaintiff did not have a cause of action in this suit.

12. In support of this contention Mr. H. Mitra cited the decision In re: European Central Rly. Co. Ex parte Oriental Financial Corporation reported in (1876) 4 Ch D 33. In that case a debenture holder brought an action against the company and recovered judgment for the principal debt with interest at 4% and costs. The company was ordered to be wound up and the debenture holder was admitted to prove for the judgment debt and interest at 4%. The debenture holder subsequently sought to prove an additional 2% on the original amount of the debenture. The Court held that the original debt having merged in the judgment, the claimant was only entitled to interest at 4%.

13. Mr. H. Mitra also relied upon Satish Kumar v. Surinder Kumar reported in AIR 1970 SC 833 for the proposition that "it is well settled that as a general rule all claims which are the subject-matter of a reference to arbitration merge in the award..... and after an award is pronounced no action can be started on the original claim which has been the subject-matter of the reference."

14. Mr. H. Mitra next contended that S. 11 of the amended Civil Procedure Code was an embargo to the plaintiffs proceeding with this suit as the matter in issue having been finally decided by a competent court, although of limited jurisdiction has become res judicata.

15. Mr. H. Mitra finally argued that having elected to pursue its claim before the Commissioner the plaintiff could not again proceed with the same claim before this Court. He cited the case of Pitaram v. Jujhar Singh reported in AIR 1918 All 346 and Jauhari Singh v. Ganga Sahai reported in AIR 1919 All 275. In those two cases the litigant chose to avail himself of the remedy provided by S. 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and his application was dismissed on merits. It was held that he cannot agitate the same issue thereafter in a Civil suit as the decision upon the merits had become final. It was contended that in the instant case, the claim of the plaintiff after adjudication by the Commissioner cannot be pursued once again.

16. Mr. J. Mitra, learned counsel for the plaintiff submitted on the other hand that, only two questions arose for determination in this case. Firstly, whether after the promulgation of the Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1973, a suit would lie in a Civil Court for a claim which could be realised under the Act, and secondly, if a claim had once been proceeded with before the Commissioner whether the same could be again agitated before a Civil Court, assuming it had jurisdiction.

17. Mr. J. Mitra did not dispute that the principles of res judicata or principles analogous thereto would apply in the instant case.

18. He conceded that if payments were received pursuant to any adjudication of the Commissioner, the same amount could not be again realisable under a decree of the Civil Court.

19. Mr. J. Mitra cited a decision of this Court in Barakar Coal Co. Ltd. v. N. C. Mehta reported in (1977) 81 Cal WN 380: (AIR 1977 NOC 198) (Cal). Here, a Division Bench held that the Coking Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1972 which was in pari materia with the statute in the instant case, did not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts. The said Act, merely laid down the procedure for realisation of claims out of the compensation payable by the Government to the erstwhile owners. If a creditor chose not to avail of the procedure laid down in the Act, he merely ran the risk of not being entitled to enforce his claim against money in the hands of the Commissioner. There was nothing to prevent execution of a decree against other assets if any, of the erstwhile owners.

20. Mr. J. Mitra contended next, that the exclusion of the jurisdiction of Civil Courts will not be assumed unless the relevant statute expressly provided for the same or that it was a necessary or inevitable implication of the statute that such jurisdiction would be excluded. The provision of a certain remedy by a particular statute may not by itself necessarily exclude the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts. He cited a decision of the Supreme Court in Firm Illuri Subbayya & Sons v. State of Andhra Pradesh reported in AIR 1964 SC 322 in support of his contention. He also cited the decision in the case Kamala Mills Ltd. v. State of Bombay reported in AIR 1965 SC 1942 and contended that where a statute created a special right or a liability and provided for a determination of the same by a Tribunal specially constituted in that behalf with exclusive jurisdiction, the question of ouster of the jurisdiction of Civil Courts could arise by necessary implication. In the instant case, however, the statute in question did not create any special right or a liability. All that it provided was a method of realisation of existing claims. There could not be any exclusion of jurisdiction of Civil Courts by necessary implication.

21. Mr. J. Mitra drew the attention of the Court to Ss. 7 (1) and 7 (2) (b) of the said Act, which read as follows:—

"7 (1) Every liability of the owner, agent, manager or managing contractor of a coal mine, in respect of any period prior to the appointed day shall be the liability of such owner, agent, manager or managing contractor, as the case may be, and shall be enforceable against him and not against the Central Government or the Government company."

"7 (2) (b) No award, decree or order of any Court, Tribunal or other authority in relation to any coal mine passed after the appointed day, but in relation to any matter, claim or dispute which arose before that day, shall be enforceable against the Central Government or the Government company."

22. He submitted that the liability of the owner before May 1, 1973 was expressly left enforceable against the owner and such liabilities were not meant to be agitated before the Commissioner and these sections by implication left the jurisdiction of Civil Court unaffected.

23. The case of the Cricket Club of India (supra) and the passage at p. 244 in Craies Statute Law (supra) lay down the general proposition that in certain cases a negative implication can be drawn from a positive enactment. But to oust the jurisdiction of a Civil Court, mere negative implication is not enough. The implication must be necessary and inevitable. The Statute in the instant case does not positively or by necessary implication take away the jurisdiction of Civil Courts. On the contrary reading the entire scheme it appears that so far as claims against owners are concerned the jurisdiction of the Courts is by necessary implication retained (vide S. 7).

24. The two Allahabad decisions cited have no application in the facts of this case. There, a Civil Court had come to a decision in one jurisdiction i.e. insolvency, thereafter the same court could not be called upon to adjudicate the same matter in another jurisdiction i.e. a Civil suit.

25. It is also necessary to consider the common contention that the decision of the Commissioner has become final and attracts the principles of res judicata and/or principles analogous thereto. It is to be noted that there is neither any pleading of res judicata nor any issue has been raised thereon. This however makes little difference to this case. If the finding of the Commissioner is res judicata then the matter is not to be agitated any further and a decree will follow. It is not the contention that the entire suit has become res judicata. If the matter is not res judicata even then, the same result follows as the defendant has not joined issue with the plaintiff as to the latter's claim. A decree can be passed on the basis of the decision of the Commissioner and/or on admitted facts, no issues having been raised on the merits of the case.

26. For the reasons above and following the principles laid down in the decision in Barakar Coal Company's case (supra) I hold that this Act, viz., Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1973 neither directly nor by implication takes away the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain suits against the ex-owners of the collieries nationalised, and particularly so in respect of claims arising before the appointed day, i.e. May 1, 1973. The said Act does not prescribe any forum against the ex-owners of the colliery for such claims and only lays down a procedure for having certain claims admitted and adjudicated upon by the Commissioner at the instance of creditors, to be realised out of compensation monies in the hands of the Government payable to such owners.

27. In view of the above I answer the only issue raised in the affirmative and in favour of the plaintiff. There will be a decree for Rs. 1,33,082.52 p. against the defendant, interim interest at the rate of 6% per annum, interest on judgment at the rate of 6% and costs. In case any amount has been realised by the plaintiff from the Commissioner, the defendant will be entitled to pro tanto adjustment in the decree.

Suit decreed.

T. P. Das and B. K. Chatterjee, for Petitioners; Jayanta Mitra and S. Sinha (for No. 4) and Mrs. Pushpa Chowcharia (for No. 3), for Respondents.

ORDER:— This is an application for amendment of the plaint which has been instituted on May 28, 1971 inter alia for a declaration that the purported lease dated June 23, 1964 referred to in paragraph 20 (a) of the plaint, the purported agreement of tenancy dated May 1, 1964, referred to in paragraph 20 (b) of the plaint, and the purported tenancy referred to in paragraph 20 (c) of the plaint are null and void, inoperative and not binding on the plaintiffs. Alternatively, a declaration that the sale of the premises No. 2, Chingrihatta Lane, Calcutta by the defendant 1 to the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and one Golam Rasul since deceased is null and void and for other reliefs. The petitioner's case in the plaint in short is that they are absolute owners of premises No. 2, Chingrihatta Lane, Calcutta, which premises was the subject-matter of various proceedings and purchased by the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and one Golam Rasul (since deceased) in execution proceedings at an auction sale held by the defendant No. 1.

2. The petitioners' further case is that after purchase of the said property the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and the said Golam Rasul came to know of certain proceedings filed by the defendant No. 2 Jamela Begum, against her husband Shamsuddin the previous owner of the said premises claiming Rs. 50,000 as dower, and that Shamsuddin had allowed an ex parte decree to be suffered against him. It is alleged that in execution of the decree passed in that suit No. 1172 of 1958, premises No. 2, Chingrihatta Lane, Calcutta was attached and sold in execution proceedings and purchased by the decree-holder wife. On 10th May, 1963, the plaintiffs Nos. 1 & 2 and the said Golam Rasul (since deceased) filed a suit being Suit No. 833 of 1963 in this Court against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 inter alia for a declaration that the decree passed in the said suit No. 1172 of 1958 was null and void and for a declaration that the sale of the said premises in purported execution of the decree was also null and void, and for other reliefs. On September 1, 1967 the defendant No. 2 consented to a decree being passed setting aside the sale in her favour. Subsequently, the plaintiffs came to know that although the defendant No. 2 had no right, title and interest in the said premises, she had purported to create a lease in favour of the defendant No. 3 J. B. Norton & Sons Ltd., a purported tenancy in favour of the defendant No. 4 A. K. Products, and had also a purported tenancy in favour of the defendant No. 5 Bengal Rubber Manufacturing Co. and it is these agreements and/or leases executed by the de-defendant No. 2 which are sought to be challenged in this suit. The defendants Nos. 3 and 4 have alone entered appearance and filed their written statements in this suit and the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 5 have not entered appearance nor filed any written statement herein. The matter came up for hearing before me on June 24, 1977 and was part heard. On June 27, 1977 the next date of hearing the plaintiff's counsel prayed for an adjournment of the suit, and he submitted that it was necessary to amend the plaint for the purpose of determining the real controversy between the parties. Thereafter, this application for amendment was moved and Mr. T. P. Das, appearing with Mr. B. K. Chatterjee counsel for the petitioners conceded fairly and squarely that there had been blundering mistakes in the plaint which had to be deleted and also certain facts were necessary to be incorporated. In para 10 of the petition it was stated that the said amendments by deleting certain paragraphs and also the alternative relief prayed for, and the incorporation of certain facts were necessary for the ends of justice and for proper determination of the issues between the parties, and that no injustice will be caused thereby.

3. Counsel appearing on behalf of petitioners contended that the alternative relief for declaration that the sale of the said premises to the plaintiffs and the said Golam Rasul be declared null and void was an obvious mistake, as the plaintiffs had instituted this suit as owners of the said premises and there could be no question of challenging their own title. Counsel for the petitioners on the same grounds submitted that paragraphs 25 and 26 of the plaint wherein it is inter alia stated that the defendant Official Assignee should have known about the serious defects of title to the said property and that the Indenture of Conveyance dated March 29, 1963 executed by the Official Assignee in their favour was a sale of a mere right to litigate should be deleted from the plaint as the same had been stated by negligence and/or inadvertence and/or mistake on the part of the learned draftsman.

4. Counsel for the petitioners further contended that for determination of the real issues in the suit it is necessary to plead that the claim of the defendants 3, 4 and 5 as tenants under the defendant No. 2 amounts to an infringement of the plaintiff's rights and the same is a continuous cause of action arising from day-to-day and inasmuch as the last of such attacks was in January 1971, no part of the plaintiff's claim is barred by limitation.

5. Counsel for the petitioners submitted that the deletion and incorporation sought were curable by amendments and relied upon the decision in Jai Jai Ram Monohar Lal v. National Building Material Supply, Gurgaon, reported in AIR 1969 SC 1267, in support of the proposition that a party cannot be refused just relief merely because of some mistake, negligence, inadvertence, or even infraction of the rules of procedure. In that case the plaintiff who was the Manager of a joint family and was carrying on business under a business name, brought a suit in that business name and when objection was taken by the defendant that the firm being an unregistered firm was incompetent to sue, applied for an amendment stating that he himself had intended to file and had in fact filed the action on behalf of the family in the business name.

6. Counsel for the petitioners contended that however defective the pleadings, the object of the plaintiffs in filing this suit was to assert their title as owners of the premises 2 Chingrihatta Lane, Calcutta and a perusal of the plaint would make it quite clear that the plaintiffs had alleged that the defendant No. 2 had no right, title and interest in the property, and they challenged the deeds executed by the defendant No. 2 in favour of the defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5 on the ground that the said deeds were null and void and not binding on the plaintiffs. The amendments sought therefore did not change the cause of action and in fact no legal right had accrued to the defendants which would entitle them to resist the amendments. Counsel for the petitioners relied upon the Privy Council decision in Charan Das v. Amir Khan, reported in 47 Ind App 255: (AIR 1921 PC 50) in support of the authority that although the power of the Court should not as a rule be exercised to take away a legal right which had accrued to the defendant by lapse of time, yet there are cases in which that consideration is overweighed by special circumstances. In that case the respondents sued for a declaration of their right of pre-emption over certain land, a form of suit which would not lie having regard to the proviso to S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877). The trial Judge and the first appellate Court refused to allow the plaintiff to be amended by claiming possession on pre-emption, since the time had expired for bringing a suit to enforce the right. Upon a second appeal the Court allowed the amendment to be made, there being no ground for suspecting that the plaintiffs had not acted in good faith, and the proposed amendment not altering the nature of the reliefs sought. Counsel for the petitioners also relied upon the decision in L. J. Leach and Co. Ltd. v. M/s. Jardine Skinner & Co. reported in AIR 1957 SC 357 and submitted that the power of the court to order amendment if required in the interest of justice is not affected even if the claim is time barred on the date of the application for amendment.

7. Mr. Jayanta Mitra appearing with Mr. S. Sinha counsel for the defendant No. 4 and Mrs. Pushpa Chowcharia, Advocate for the defendant No. 3 opposed the application mainly on the grounds that the proposed amendments would have the effect of converting the suit into an entirely different suit which had no foundation in the pleadings. They further contended that by reason of the averments challenging their own title, the plaintiffs had non-suited themselves. In support of their contentions, the respondents relied on the decision in Firm Srinivas Ram Kumar v. Mahabir Prasad reported in AIR 1951 SC 177 and submitted that the Court cannot grant relief to the plaintiffs on a case for which there was no foundation in the pleadings. This case is not of much help to the respondents as the petitioners herein had pleaded in the original plaint that they are the absolute owners of the property having purchased the same at a Court sale and they had further alleged that the defendant No. 2 had no authority to execute leases and/or to enter into tenancy agreements with the defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5, and the said tenancies and/or leases were challenged as being null and void and not binding on the plaintiffs.

8. The respondents secondly contended that the amendments should not be allowed at this late stage of the proceedings and relied upon the decision in Gauri Shankar v. M/s. Hindusthan Trust Pvt. Ltd. reported in AIR 1972 SC 2091 where the plea of absence of a valid notice terminating the contractual tenancy was not taken in the original written statement and an amendment to include a new plea after 8 years was not allowed on account of gross delay and laches. The Court in that case considered that the technical plea of the nature sought to be raised had it been raised at an earlier stage, the petition for eviction could have been withdrawn with liberty to file another petition after serving the requisite notice and in that view of the matter, the amendment was disallowed. The respondents also relied upon the decision in A. K. Gupta & Sons Ltd. v. Damodar Valley Corporation reported in AIR 1967 SC 96 in support of the proposition that amendment of pleadings, introducing a new case cannot be allowed if a suit on such a case is barred. In that case the Court following the Privy Council and the Supreme Court decisions cited by the petitioners held that "the general rule, no doubt is that a party is not allowed by amendment to set up a new case or a new cause of action particularly when a suit on new case or cause of action is barred: Weldon v. Neale, (1887) 19 QBD 394. But it is also well recognised that where the amendment does not constitute the addition of a new cause of action or raise a different case, but amounts to no more than a different or additional approach to the same facts, the amendment will be allowed even after the expiry of the statutory period of limitation". The three cases cited in my opinion are of no assistance to the respondents inasmuch as no new case or cause of action is being introduced by the proposed amendment and the incorporations sought amount merely to an additional approach to the same facts and no prejudice and/or injury will be caused to the respondents, if allowed.

9. The respondents in support of their contentions that the plaintiffs have non-suited themselves by challenging their own title and in any event are bound by the admissions in the plaint rely upon the decision in Karanpura Development Co. Ltd. v. The State of Behar reported in (1964) 68 Cal WN 965. In that case, the Court whilst considering whether the allegation in the written statement verified as submissions amounts to an admission, held that the pleadings regulate the cause and conduct of a suit and any attempt to rob the pleadings of this effect and character of admission at the stage of argument by suggesting the introduction of a new case would amount to placing the additional written statement on an entirely different footing. The question which arose for consideration in that suit was whether touzi No. 28 vested in the State of Bihar, and if so, on what date, and in view of the admission made by the contesting defendants in their additional written statements that the said touzi No. 28 vested in the State of Bihar by notifications dated 7th June, 1952 and September 11, 1952 the Court held the defendants could not retract therefrom. In that case, counsel for the defendants had contended that their written statements containing the said paragraphs were verified as submission and did not amount to admission and what the defendants meant was "purported" notification and the written statement should accordingly be amended by introducing the word "purported" before the word notification. I do not think that the ruling cited supports the proposition in the broad form as contended by the respondents. In that case, the cause of action pleaded in the plaint was examined and dealt with in the written statement and certain admissions were made regarding material facts constituting the cause of action namely that Touzi 28, had vested in the State of Bihar by several notifications. The Court held that the defendant having admitted the said facts should not be allowed by amendment to repudiate those admissions in relation to a material fact, which constitute the cause of action. The decision in my view cannot be held to apply to a case of a mistake and/or negligence where plaintiffs have filed a suit on the basis of their own title and have throughout challenged the authority of the defendant No. 2 to deal with the said property and are not seeking to introduce any new case by way of amendment. In my view the entire plaint has to be looked into to ascertain the cause of action in the suit and admissions have to be taken as a whole. In my opinion before the right of a party can be considered to have been defeated on the basis of an alleged admission by him, the implication of the statement made by him must be clear and conclusive. A perusal of the entire plaint would disclose that the plaintiffs throughout assert their rights as owner and seek reliefs on the basis of that right. Moreover, the pleadings sought to be deleted in paragraphs 25 and 26 of the original plaint herein, on a plain reading thereof cannot be said to be statements of fact but are submissions. There is nothing in law to prevent the plaintiff from withdrawing and/or deleting the same and/or giving up an alternative relief, which was not intended to be claimed. Moreover whether the plaintiffs purchased a mere right to litigate or not is to be determined by construing the deed of conveyance and there can be no admissions with regard thereto.

10. In my view the ultimate test is, can the amendment be allowed without injustice and whether the delay and/or negligence evidenced in this case is not sufficient to justify refusal in so far as it may be compensated in costs? To my mind the deletions and incorporations sought, will not in any manner alter the character and/or change the foundation in the original pleadings and the same continues to be a suit by the owners for a declaration that deeds executed or tenancies created by the defendant No. 2 are null and void and not binding upon them and the defendants can be compensated by costs and will not suffer any injury if amendment is allowed. In this view of the matter, I accept the submission and contentions of the petitioners and I allow the amendments as prayed for. The said amendments are to be effected within 7 days on a signed copy of the minutes. Additional written statement if any, to be filed within a week thereafter. Cross order for discovery within 3 days thereafter, inspection forthwith, and the suit to appear in the peremptory list 3 weeks hence. Petitioners to pay the costs of this application assessed at 40 G. Ms. for each of the other appearing parties including the costs of the filing of additional written statement if any. The said costs to be paid as a condition precedent within 5 days. In default, this application shall stand dismissed with costs.

Order accordingly.

Pronati Mitra, Appellant v. Sachindra Nath Chatterjee, Opposite Party.

Second Appeal No. 1954 of 1968, D/-7-9-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 and S. 100 — Amendment necessitated by subsequent events — Suit for eviction — Application for amendment of plaint seeking to add a ground of sub-letting — If can be allowed in second appeal.

A tenancy is determined by serving a notice under S. 13 (6), W. B. Premises

IU/IU/D394/77/GDR

Tenancy Act read with S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and as soon as a tenancy is determined, the cause of action for the suit arises. It is not necessary to state the grounds of ejectment in the notice. In such circumstances, if any ground is added subsequently that cannot change the cause of action or the nature of the suit. The suit remains one for eviction as it was at the date of commencement of the suit. The Court thus is not prevented even in a second appeal to take into consideration the subsequent events of sub-letting which according to the plaintiff, has taken place during the pendency of the appeal. Promotha Nath Mitter, for Appellant;
Ranajit Kumar Banerjee, for Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT:— This appeal is directed against the judgment and decree dated 30th January 1968 passed by Sri P. K. Banerjee, Additional District Judge, 7th Court at Alipore in Title Appeal No. 1000 of 1967 affirming those dated 4th May, 1967 passed by Sri R. K. Ghatak, Munsif, 2nd Court at Sealdah in Title Suit No. 483 of 1963.

2. The plaintiff filed the suit on the ground that she requires the suit premises for her own personal use and occupation. The defendant contested the suit.

3. The learned Munsif found that the plaintiff failed to prove that she requires the said premises for her own use and occupation. In that view of his finding the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff preferred an appeal before the learned Additional District Judge and the learned Additional District Judge dismissed the appeal. Being aggrieved, the present appeal has been filed.

4. During the pendency of this appeal on September 20, 1976 an application was filed for amendment of the plaint which became necessary in view of the decision of B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan, reported in AIR 1975 SC 1146. The application was allowed and paragraph 6-A was incorporated in the plaint. Additional issues were also framed. Another application was filed on 9th of August 1977 for further amendment of the plaint for the purpose of taking into consideration some subsequent events which happened during the pendency of the second appeal. This application is very much opposed by the respondent. In this application it is stated that in the month of June 1976 the petitioner has come to know that in the year 1974 during the pendency of the second appeal the opposite party has sublet a portion of the suit premises to one Satyendra Kumar Roy, who is running a business there named and styled as "M/s. Innervias View X-Ray & Electro Therapy" and has taken out a trade licence from the Calcutta Corporation for running the said business in the suit premises. The petitioner states that the said subletting was done without the knowledge and prior consent of the petitioner and as such the opposite party has disentitled himself to the protection of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and rendered himself liable to ejectment. It has further been stated that in the interest of justice and in order to shorten the litigation and avoid multiplicity of proceedings it is necessary for the petitioner that the plaint should be amended by inserting two new paragraphs therein after paragraph No. 6-A. Those new paragraphs have been numbered as 7-A and 7-B in the petition. Previously a similar application was filed and while disposing of the application on July 7, 1977 it was stated that the other application will be considered at the time of hearing of the appeal. The said application was opposed by the respondent and an affidavit of the respondent dated 2nd February 1977 and an affidavit of S. K. Roy dated 1st of March 1977 were filed: In those affidavits the story of subletting has been completely denied. It is not now necessary for me to decide whether in fact the respondent sublet the premises as alleged by the appellant. I am only required to consider whether such an application for taking into consideration the subsequent events of subletting can be allowed at this stage.

5. Mr. Promotha Nath Mitter, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant, in support of his contention first refers to a decision reported in AIR 1973 Cal 448 (Tinkari Das v. Jamuna Bala Dasi). In this case it was a suit for recovery of possession of leased property on eviction of tenant on the ground of forfeiture of property. It was held that the Court could allow the amendment to add the additional ground of determination of lease by efflux of time. It was further held that for shortening the litigation and for ends of justice the Court is entitled to take into consideration the subsequent events even if there was a change in the ground of eviction where the nature and character of suit, which was for recovery of possession of the suit property on eviction of the defendant was not in any way affected.

6. Mr. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent, submits that the facts of this case are completely different. Here forfeiture of property by efflux of time could not be disputed by the defendant and as such the Court could take notice of such an event. But the case will be different where the alleged subsequent event is very much challenged by the other side.

7. The next case relied on by Mr. Mitter has been reported in (1976) 3 Cal HC (N) 674: (AIR 1977 Cal 108) (Ayesha Khatoon v. Durga Sahaya). It is a Bench decision and their Lordships laid down the same principle as in the case referred to above. Mr. Mitter very much relies on a decision reported in (1977) 4 Cal HC (N) 394 (Dr. R. D. Anklesaria v. Mrs. Kamala Roy). This was a suit for ejectment under West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act on the ground of building and rebuilding. During the pendency of the suit the plaintiff made an application for amendment of the plaint by inserting other grounds, e.g. sub-letting, using the premises for a purpose other than residential for which it was let out. The application for amendment was allowed. The defendant came up to this Court challenging the order on the ground that the proposed amendments would change the cause of action and nature of the suit and the subsequent events could not be permitted to be introduced, if such introduction results in changing the nature and character of the suit or the cause of action on which the suit is based. Their Lordships after considering several decisions held that "under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act a tenant whose contractual tenancy had been determined by a valid notice to quit but against whom no decree for eviction has been passed remains a tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act. Consequently a statutory tenant who continues to be the tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act because of special definition of the tenant is liable to be evicted under the said Act if he commits any illegal act of sub-letting and/or wrongful user of the suit premises within the meaning of S. 13 of the Premises Tenancy Act. In this context, a tenant governed by the Transfer of Property Act simpliciter and a tenant governed by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act stand on altogether different footing. In the former case, after the determination of the contractual tenancy the tenant ceases to be a tenant any further; as such raising of unauthorised structure by such person cannot attract the provisions of S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act and no suit for eviction of a tenant for such wrongful act can be filed. But in the case of a statutory tenant under the West Bengal Premises Act, an act of sub-letting attracts the provisions of S. 13 of the Premises Tenancy Act and such tenant is liable to be evicted on the ground of sub-letting even if such sub-letting is made after the determination of contractual tenancy. Accordingly, the nature and character of the suit namely the suit for eviction of a tenant is not changed in the case of a tenant governed by the Premises Tenancy Act". It was further held that "In the circumstances of the case, the Court cannot ignore the subsequent events on the statutory principle of avoiding multiplicity of legal proceedings, shortening the course of litigation and achieving the ends of justice."

8. Mr. Mitter next refers to a decision reported in AIR 1974 SC 1178 (Sikharchand Jain v. Digamber Jain Praband Karini Sabha). It was held that "Ordinarily, a suit is tried in all its stages on the cause of action as it existed on the date of its institution. But it is open to a Court (including a court of appeal) to take notice of events which have happened after the institution of the suit and afford relief to the parties in the changed circumstances to do complete justice between the parties and to shorten litigation."

9. Mr. Mitter also refers to a decision reported in AIR 1975 SC 1409 (Pasupuleti Venkateswarlu v. The Motor & General Traders). It was held that "Where during the pendency of a proceeding under Rent Control Legislation by the landlord for permission to evict the tenants, a subsequent event in the facts of the case takes place which has a material bearing on the landlord's right to evict, the approach of the High Court in revision, in taking cognizance of the new development cannot be said to be wrong or illegal". Mr. Mitter submits that if this amendment be allowed then it will not in any way change the cause of action. The suit was brought for eviction by determining the tenancy after serving notice according to law. It was not necessary for the landlord to state the grounds of eviction in the notice for ejectment. The cause of action for the suit will remain unchanged and that being so, in order to shorten litigation and for doing justice the amendment must be allowed.

10. Mr. Banerjee contends that a subsequent event which is admitted can be taken into consideration by the court, but a fact which is very much challenged should not be allowed to be added by the plaintiff. The proposed amendment will change the nature of the suit completely. The suit is one for reasonable requirement, that having failed the plaintiff now cannot add a ground in the plaint which is said to have taken long after the institution of the suit and long after the decrees of the courts below were passed. Mr. Banerjee in support of his contention refers to several decisions. He first cites to a decision reported in 20 Cal WN 1099: (AIR 1917 Cal 716) (Nuri Mian v. Ambica Singh). It was held: "The decree in a suit should ordinarily conform to the rights of the parties as they stood at the date of its institution. But there are cases when it is incumbent upon a Court of Justice to take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and to mould its decree according to the circumstances as they stand at the time the decree is made. This principle will be applied where it is shown that the original relief claimed has, by reason of subsequent change of circumstances, become inappropriate or that it is necessary to base the decision of the Court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or to do complete justice between the parties". The same principle has been laid down in (1907) 6 Cal LJ 74 (Ram Ratan Sahu v. Mohant Sahu), 29 Cal LJ 107: (AIR 1915 Cal 103) (Rai Charan Mandal v. Biswa Nath Mandal) and 34 Cal WN 634: (AIR 1931 Cal 45)

(Sm. Balak Bala Dassi v. Jadu Nath Das) cited by Mr. Banerjee. I do not see how the principles of law enunciated in the above cases support Mr. Banerjee's contention.

11. Mr. Banerjee next relies on a decision reported in AIR 1969 SC 101 (S. Rajagopal v. C. M. Armugam). In this case before the Supreme Court request was put forward during the hearing of the appeal to direct the production of a baptismal register. Their Lordships were of opinion that there was no justification under O. 41, R. 27 of the Code for summoning it at this stage, particularly because even if that register is brought, a lot of oral evidence would have to be recorded in order to have the register properly proved and to give an opportunity to the party, against whom inferences follow from it, to meet those inferences. In the circumstances, the prayer was refused. Mr. Banerjee submits that in this case also if the amendment be allowed then the case will have to be heard afresh and new evidence will have to be adduced. If the plaintiff's allegation is correct that the defendant has sublet without the consent of the plaintiff then the plaintiff can very well bring a fresh suit for ejectment. Mr. Mitter joins issue and contends that there is absolutely no reason why the plaintiff will be compelled to bring another suit if the matter can be decided in this suit and that would avoid multiplicity of proceedings, shorten litigation and would meet ends of justice.

12. Mr. Banerjee next relies on a decision reported in ILR (1969) 1 Cal 582 (S. B. Sen v. Tejendra Chandra Bhowmik). In this case it was held: "Sub-letting need not subsist till the date of institution of the suit, it is sufficient if the fact of sub-letting without the written consent of the landlord is proved". It was further held: "Sub-letting was found concurrently by the Courts below which cannot be interfered with in a second appeal". Mr. Banerjee submits that the question whether the plaintiff reasonably requires the premises or not has been concurrently found by the courts below against the plaintiff and that being so, that question cannot be made in this appeal. As has already been stated at the present moment I am not hearing the appeal on merits. I am now dealing with the application filed by the plaintiff for further amendment of the plaint seeking to add a ground of subletting.

Mr. Banerjee also relies on a Special Bench decision reported in AIR 1964 Cal 1 (Surya Properties Private Ltd. v. Bimalendu Nath Sarkar). It has been held in this case that "It is not necessary to mention in a notice under S. 13 (6) the ground or grounds of ejectment for which a suit is to be instituted for recovery of possession. There is, however, nothing to prevent the landlord from setting out such grounds in the notice. The notice, however, will not be a notice of such grounds". This case without helping Mr. Banerjee rather helps Mr. Mitter. A tenancy is determined by serving a notice under S. 13 (6) read with S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and as soon as a tenancy is determined, the cause of action for the suit arises. It has been clearly laid down that it is not necessary to state the grounds of ejectment in the notice. In such circumstances, if any ground is added subsequently that cannot change the cause of action or the nature of the suit. The suit remains one for eviction as it was at the date of commencement of the suit. Taking into consideration the principles of law enunciated in the decisions referred to above I am of opinion that in the facts and circumstances of the present case the Court is not prevented even in a second appeal to take into consideration the fact of sub-letting which, according to the plaintiff, has taken place during the pendency of the appeal. I, therefore, allow the application filed by the appellant on 9-8-77.

13. The paragraphs marked as 7-A and 7-B in paragraph 7 of the petition be added in the plaint as paragraphs 6-B and 6-C. The plaintiff will have to prove the fact of sub-letting by adducing evidence. The defendant may also adduce evidence to disprove the fact. The plaintiff is also required to adduce evidence for the amendment which has already been allowed on her application dated 20th September 1976. For the purpose of adducing fresh evidence I think that the case should be sent back to the learned Munsif. The appeal is kept pending. Let the records go down to the learned Munsif who will give the plaintiff an opportunity to adduce fresh evidence on the question whether the plaintiff has any other reasonably suitable accommodation in Calcutta besides the suit premises and whether the defendant in 1974 has sub-let a portion of the suit premises to one Satyendra Kumar Roy. The defendant will also be permitted to challenge these facts by adducing evidence. After recording such evidence as may be adduced by the parties the learned Munsif will send the same to this Court. As the matter is pending for a long time, the learned Munsif is requested to send the report as early as possible.

Application allowed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 413

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J. AND
SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.

The Imperial Tobacco Co. of India Ltd., Appellant v. The Registrar of Trade Marks and another, Respondents.

A. F. O. O. No. 190 of 1969, D/- 14-6-1977.*

(A) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 (4) and (5) — Registration in Part B of the Register — Requirements for — Geographical name as trade mark.

In regard to registration in Part B of the register, provisions have been made in sub-s. (4) of S. 9. The essential conditions are that the mark in relation to goods proposed to be registered is (1) distinctive or (2) if not distinctive, capable of distinguishing the goods of the applicant from those of others. To be distinctive (which means adapted to distinguish) or capable of distinguishing the goods as aforesaid, there may be some inherent qualities or distinguishing characteristics in the mark itself which may make it so distinctive or capable of such distinguishing the goods of the applicant from others. The degree or extent of such inherent quality that may satisfy the requisite qualification for registration is left to the discretion of the Tribunal to determine, with his expert knowledge as the extent of quality is always variable from mark to mark. (Para 22)

If however the mark has no inherent distinguishing qualities or features, the distinctiveness may be acquired by appropriate user or other circumstances thereby overcoming the negative quality in the mark. Here again the Tribunal has been given the discretion to register a mark in the B part of the register taking into account the extent of the distinctiveness or capability of distinguishing the applicant's goods from others in fact acquired by reason of the use of the trade mark or other circumstances. There is thus actually no question of exclusion of one clause by another in sub-s. (5) of S. 9 but all relevant factors are to be taken into consideration by the Tribunal who as an expert will exercise his discretion in the light of the provisions of law and judicial interpretation thereof. A decision upon registrability involves balancing an inherent tendency to unregistrability on the one hand against evidence showing distinctiveness in fact on the other. (Para 23)

All these are subject to the condition that where inherent unsuitability is so strong no degree of distinctiveness in fact can counterbalance it, so that some marks are totally unregistrable. This is for the reason that if any mark for example violates the requirements of the sub-cl. (d) of sub-s. (1) of S. 9 such mark because of inherent infirmity can never be distinctive or capable of distinguishing the goods of the applicants sought to be registered from others' goods either inherently or by reason of user of the mark or other circumstances. (Para 24)

A geographical name according to its ordinary signification is such mark inherently or otherwise incapable of registration subject to minor exceptions. A geographical name not used in geographical sense to denote place of origin, but used in an arbitrary or fanciful way to indicate origin or ownership regardless of location, may be sustained as a valid trade mark. (Para 25)

The test of cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) is if by reason of use the mark in fact has become distinctive as adapted to distinguish or is in fact capable of distinguishing the goods of the appellant from others. Case law ref. (Para 26)

(B) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 (5), Cl. (b) — Acquisition of distinctiveness — Evidence of subsequent events not admissible.

The acquisition of distinctiveness should be on the date when the application is filed for registration, and the law does not require or provide for acceptance of evidence of subsequent events. (Para 26)

(C) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 — Right to withdraw application for registration and file fresh one — Failure to withdraw earlier application till filing of second one — Effect. AIR 1968 Cal 582, Dissented from.

An applicant is entitled to withdraw an application and to make a second application so as to obtain the advantage of a longer period of use. Held that it was open to the applicant not to withdraw its earlier application till the date of filing its second application; the earlier application was obviously kept pending to meet a possible challenge in the meantime. AIR 1968 Cal 582, Dissented from.

(Para 27)

(D) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 — Distinctiveness — Evidence — Application for registration of mark on cigarettes — Affidavits of dealers, employees and smokers stating position in the market in respect of the goods — Acceptable. AIR 1968 Cal 582, Dissented from. (Para 28)

(E) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 — Distinctiveness on the date of application — Evidence — No time limit fixed — Distinctiveness — Meaning.

There can be little dispute that the acquisition of distinctiveness of a trade mark is a long, laborious and time consuming process. Even so, no time limit is fixed by statute. There may be a case where for sundry reasons, a trade mark may attain the requisite distinctiveness within a "magically short period" and it is not possible to predicate or lay down any hard and fast rule about the period of time on the expiry whereof only a trade mark by user can attain distinctiveness required under the statute. Every case will depend on the attending circumstances and evidence adduced in support of the acquisition of distinctiveness. (Para 29)

Distinctiveness has been understood to mean "some quality in the trade mark which earmarks the goods so marked as distinct from those of other producers of such goods." (Para 30)

(F) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 (5), Cl. (b) — Requirements — Registration of geographical name 'Simla' on wrapper of cigarettes — Held could not be registered in Part B of the Register.

Where the trade mark for registration was a label, used as wrapper of packets of cigarettes bearing the device of snow clad hills in outline with the word "Simla" written prominently in various panels of the label with small inscription that the content was a "a product" of the applicant company.

Held that though mark is composite in character, including word "Simla" in bold character with snow clad hills in outline and an inscription that the product is of the appellant in ordinary character or manner, the word "Simla" is the prominent feature of the mark and distinctiveness is claimed in respect of the word "Simla". Even so the trade mark is not confined to the word 'Simla'. The 'Simla' label bears the inscription in ordinary character of being the product of the appellant whose products are of good and standard tobacco. It is accordingly not possible to say that the word 'Simla' by itself has acquired a secondary meaning to its customers, so as to conjure in their mind the cigarettes belonging to the appellant only and to none else even if the mark did not contain the inscription that it was a product of the appellant. A trade mark like 'Simla' on goods to distinguish them from other's goods as claimed must be the trade mark on its own without any assistance from indications like such goods being a product of the appellant. That is not the case possible here, as the mark 'Simla' does not stand on its own, so that it is not possible to say that by reason of the use, 'Simla' is adapted to distinguish or capable of distinguishing as the goods of appellants to the exclusion of goods of others.

(Para 31)

"Simla" is not an invented word; and though it has no reference to the character or a place of origin of the goods sought to be registered it is not inherently distinctive or adapted to distinguish as there is no sufficient distinguishing characteristic in the mark itself so that distinctiveness might be expected to result whatever the type and scale of user and thus secure an estimation of the positive quality in the mark. This infirmity brings the trade mark out of the operation of Cl. (a) of S. 9 (5). There is no other circumstance pleaded and the user of the trade mark 'Simla' by itself on the evidence adduced cannot be said in fact as distinctive or capable of distinguishing the goods of the appellants from others by use in consequence whereof Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) has also no operation.

(Para 32)

Even assuming that the trade mark 'Simla' has become capable of distinguishing by use thus fulfilling the condition of Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) entitling registration in Part B of the register, the mark 'Simla' is a geographical name and the snow-clad hills in outline in the mark indicate its use in ordinary or geographical signification, so that the mark is neither a fancy nor invented word nor one with a secondary meaning.

(Paras 33, 34)

Though Cl. (d) of S. 9 (1) which refers to geographical name in the ordinary signification relates to registration in Part A of the register, the distinctiveness of the trade mark which makes it capable of distinguishing the applicant's goods, as required in Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) in respect of registration in Part B of the register, is a vital essential element for the purpose. Such distinctiveness is not possible for any geographical name in its ordinary or geographical signification.

(Para 34)

A trade mark in Part B of the Register will be registered if the mark is distinctive or capable of distinguishing the applicant's goods from others. In determining whether the mark is distinctive or capable of distinguishing, the Tribunal shall have regard if the mark is inherently distinctive or is inherently capable of distinguishing as aforesaid. If, not, the Tribunal will further examine if by reason of use or other circumstances, the trade mark has in fact become distinctive (as adapted to distinguish) or capable of distinguishing as aforesaid. All the same the Tribunal will refuse registration in respect of either part of the register if the trade mark is inherently incapable of being distinctive or inherently incapable of distinguishing the goods of the applicants from others. Such reasons obviously are the disabilities violating the provision of Cls. (c), (d) and (e) of sub-s. (1) of S. 9 of the Act which again may not be exhaustive. The courts of law have further imposed the condition that no trade mark should be allowed to be registered which may hamper or embarrass the traders or trade now or in future in respect of the place or country which is proposed to be registered.

(Para 37)

In view of the imprint of snow clad hills in outline in the trade mark 'Simla' the ordinary or geographical signification is obvious and patent even though it has no reference to the quality or place of origin of the goods. Further, registration of such trade mark may hamper or embarrass the trade or traders in or around the locality in future. Also 'Simla' is too prominent a city, the capital of Himachal Pradesh, well known in the country and abroad and in its ordinary or geographical signification it is inherently neither distinctive nor adapted to distinguish also nor capable of distinguishing the goods of the appellant as a particular trader from those of others, and is also hit by the provisions of S. 9 (1) (d). Case law discussed; AIR 1968 Cal 582, Affirmed. (Para 39)

Noni Coomar Chakravarti, Rathindra Nath Das and B. C. Bachawat, for Appellant; B. Das, N. C. Roy Chowdhury and Dipak Shome, for Respondents.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This is an appeal from the judgment and order of P. B. Mukharji, J. (as his Lordship then was) dated May 24, 27 and 28, 1968* in an appeal under S. 109 of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act 1958 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act). By that judgment the order of the Registrar of Trade Marks dated March 26, 1968 rejecting the application for registration of a trade mark filed by the Imperial Tobacco Company of India Ltd. in Part A of the Register or alternatively in Part B of the Register, was affirmed. The trade mark for registration is a label, used as wrapper of packets of cigarettes bearing the device of snow clad hills in outline with the word 'Simla' written prominently in various panels of the label with small inscription that the content is 'a product' of the applicant company. The application had been made for registration of the trade mark in class 34 in respect of manufactured tobacco. In course of hearing of this appeal, an application has been filed stating that the name of the appellant has since been changed to I. T. C. Ltd. under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 and accordingly name of the applicant has been amended to read as "I. T. C. Ltd." by order of this court and the cause title has been directed to be amended in consequence.

2. The appellant filed an application on April 20, 1960 for registration of the said trade mark in Part A of the register stating that the said trade mark was 'proposed to be used' in respect of manufactured tobacco in class 34. The Registrar of Trade Marks sent a reply on December 9, 1960 to the following effect:

"..... Word 'Simla' which forms the essential and distinguishing feature of the mark is a famous geographical name and is not registrable except on very strong evidence of distinctiveness. No such evidence is possible as the mark is proposed to be used. You should therefore show cause why the application should not be refused....."

3. By its letter dated July 17, 1963 the appellant withdrew the application and on the same date filed a fresh application for registration of the same trade mark in class 34 in respect of manufactured tobacco. It was stated therein that during the period from April 1960 to June 30, 1963, about 42 crores of such cigarettes under the said trade mark had been sold throughout India while Rupees 15.50 lakhs had been spent as advertisement costs, the value of cigarettes sold being Rs. 1.14 crores. In support of the application the appellant also filed 22 affidavits from consumers, dealers and shopkeepers throughout the country to establish that the trade mark had in the meantime acquired distinctiveness and further, it appears the cigarettes have been in continuous use since then.

4. Thereafter there was a hearing of the application before the Deputy Registrar of Trade Marks, Calcutta and by letter dated December 29, 1965 issued by the Asstt. Examiner of Trade Marks the appellant was informed that the materials on record and arguments advanced on its behalf were duly considered by the Deputy Registrar and the said application for registration of the trade mark either in Part A or Part B of the Register had been refused by him.

5. The Deputy Registrar forwarded grounds of his decision under S. 18 (6) of the Act dated March 28, 1966 to the appellant on its requisition. Against this decision, the appellant preferred an appeal to this Court under S. 109 (2) of the Act which was heard by P. B. Mukharji J. and was dismissed as already stated. Thereafter the appellant preferred a further appeal to the Bench of this Court under S. 109 (5) which has been heard by us.

6. The Deputy Registrar who heard and considered the application held that though the trade mark is composite in character, its essential feature was 'Simla'. 'Simla' in its only and obvious signification is a well known geographical name and the chief town of a State and further the word 'Simla' was inherently not adapted to distinguish the goods of any particular trader. In regard to the contention that the mark had become distinctive on the material date by reason of extensive sales and advertisement, it was held that it would be unwise to accept the trade evidence as conclusive on question of acquired distinctiveness. The Deputy Registrar was unable to hold that the mark had become distinctive even on the material date while a word purely geographical in its signification, it was held, should not be registered whatever be the evidence as to its distinctiveness. As to deceptiveness of mark as to the place of origin of the goods, though no tobacco had been grown in or around Simla and there was no market as such for tobacco, an ordinary smoker without having any special knowledge, might associate the origin of cigarettes with Simla. The Deputy Registrar was also of opinion that it could not be predicated that the name would not be required, then or later, by other traders for bona fide use in respect of similar goods and thus it would be wrong, in exercise of his discretion, to accord registration of the name to the appellant.

7. As to registration in Part B of the register, the Deputy Registrar observed as follows:—

"..... I would refuse registration of the mark even in Part B of the Register because of its inherent incapacity to distinguish the goods of a particular trader and in the exercise of my discretion. Registration in any form, whether in Part A or Part B will confer a kind of monopoly right on the registrants and will naturally interfere with the bona fide rights of such traders in the locality, dealing with the same goods. Such monopoly rights must not be granted, otherwise wealthy applicants will divide amongst themselves all the names of important cities and towns of India to the embarrassment and prejudice of small traders....."

The application for registration, as already stated, was accordingly refused.

8. The learned Judge was also of opinion that 'Simla' was neither an invented word nor a word having a dictionary meaning. Its geographical signification was thus plain and unequivocal and the snow-clad hills in outline in the label made the geographical significance inescapable. Even so, it was held, a geographical word is not an absolute disqualification for the purpose of registration in Part A of the Register, as S. 9 (2) of the Act provides that a geographical name "shall not be registrable in Part A of the register except upon evidence of its distinctiveness". A geographical name in its ordinary signification can thus be registered upon evidence of distinctiveness and such evidence will establish if the mark has acquired distinctiveness. This is the position in law in England and is also the statutory position in law under the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act of 1958. The affidavit evidence by dealers adduced by the appellant in support of the proof of acquisition of distinctiveness was considered insufficient to establish distinctiveness in "a magically short time of barely three years", as "distinctiveness of goods in a trade by association with a particular name requires normally a hard laborious time consuming process in business". The court agreed with the finding of the Registrar that the appellant's mark had not become distinctive and evidence is not such as to prove such distinctiveness.

9. As to registration in B Part of the Register, the Court referred to the guidelines laid down in sub-s. (5) of S. 9 which were considered to be illustrative and not exhaustive. The first consideration in Cl. (a) is that the mark must be inherently distinctive or is inherently capable of distinguishing. The second feature in Cl. (b) is where by reason of the use of trade mark or any other circumstances the trade mark is in fact so adapted to distinguish or is in fact capable of distinguishing. The Court was of opinion that even applying either of the tests, 'Simla' trade mark is neither inherently distinctive nor is inherently capable of distinguishing the appellant's goods. The court further found that the use of the trade mark 'Simla' or any other circumstances in fact does not make the appellant's trade mark adapted to distinguish or capable of distinguishing the appellant's goods. The court felt that the term 'capable of distinguishing' connotes both present capability with reference to goods, market, geography, consumer as also future potentiality, while adapted to distinguish implies the nature of adaptation in the mark and also what is in the mark which is adapted to distinguish. The court agreed with the discretion of the Registrar in refusing registration of the trade mark either in Part A or Part B of the Register and the appeal was accordingly dismissed. This judgment is reported in AIR 1968 Cal 582.

10. Mr. Noni Coomar Chakrabarti learned counsel for the appellant has challenged the judgment of Mukharji, J. as unsustainable in law on various points.

On the finding that a geographical word is not an absolute disqualification for registration, it was contended, the learned Judge should have accepted, upon the affidavit evidence, that the trade mark had acquired distinctiveness during the period of three years it had been offered to public who had spent over Rs. 1.14 crores for 'Simla' cigarettes, there being no rule of law laying down the minimal period for acquisition of distinctiveness by use. Though contending that upon the evidence adduced and unchallenged, the appellant is entitled to have its trade mark registered in Part A of the register, Mr. Chakravarti submitted that the appellant will be content, for the time being, if its trade mark is registered in Part B of the Register. Accordingly without giving up his objections in regard to the refusal of registration in Part 'A' of the Register, he concentrated his attack against the refusal of registration of the trade mark in Part B of the Register.

11. The relevant provisions of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958 (Act 43 of 1958) are as follows:—

6. The Register of Trade Marks.— (1) For the purposes of this Act, a record called the Register of Trade Marks shall be kept at the Head Office of the Trade Marks Registry, wherein shall be entered all registered trade marks with the names, addresses and descriptions of the proprietors, notifications of assignments and transmissions, the names, addresses and descriptions of registered users, disclaimers, conditions, limitations and such other matters relating to registered trade marks as may be prescribed * * *

7. Part A and Part B of the register.— (1) The register referred to in S. 6 shall be divided into two parts called respectively Part A and Part B.

(2) The Register of Trade Marks existing at the commencement of this Act shall be incorporated with and form part of Part A of the register, and this part shall comprise all trade marks entered in the Register of Trade Marks existing at the commencement of this Act and all trade marks which after such commencement may be entered in Part A of the register.

(3) Part B of the register shall comprise all trade marks which after the commencement of this Act may be entered in Part B of the register * * *

9. Requisites for registration in Parts A and B of the register.— (1) A trade mark shall not be registered in Part A of the register unless it contains or consists of at least one of the following essential particulars, namely:—

(a) the name of a company, individual or firm represented in a special or particular manner;

(b) the signature of the applicant for registration or some predecessor in his business;

(c) one or more invented words;

(d) one or more words having no direct reference to the character or quality of the goods and not being according to its ordinary signification, a geographical name or a surname or a personal name or any common abbreviation thereof or the name of a sect, caste or tribe in India;

(e) any other distinctive mark.

(2) A name, signature or word, other than such as fall within the descriptions in Cls. (a), (b), (c) and (d) of sub-s. (1) shall not be registrable in Part A of the register except upon evidence of its distinctiveness.

(3) For the purposes of this Act, the expression 'distinctive' in relation to the goods in respect of which a trade mark is proposed to be registered, means adapted to distinguish goods with which the proprietor of the trade mark is or may be connected in the course of trade from goods in the case of which no such connection subsists either generally or, where the trade mark is proposed to be registered subject to limitations in relation to use within the extent of the registration.

(4) A trade mark shall not be registered in Part B of the register unless the trade mark in relation to the goods in respect of which it is proposed to be registered is distinctive or is not distinctive but is capable of distinguishing goods with which the proprietor of a trade mark is or may be connected in the course of trade from goods in the case of which no such connection subsists, either generally or, where the trade mark is proposed to be registered subject to limitations in relation to use within the extent of the registration.

(5) In determining whether a trade mark is distinctive or is capable of distinguishing as aforesaid the Tribunal may have regard to the extent to which—

(a) a trade mark is inherently distinctive or is inherently capable of distinguishing as aforesaid; and

(b) by reason of the use of the trade mark or of any other circumstances, the trade mark is in fact so adapted to distinguish or is in fact capable of distinguishing as aforesaid.

(6) Subject to the other provisions of this section, a trade mark in respect of any goods—

(a) registered in Part A of the register may be registered in Part B of the register; and

(b) registered in Part B of the register may be registered in Part A of the register; in the name of the same proprietor of the same trade mark or any part or parts thereof.

28. Rights conferred by registration.—

(1) subject to the other provisions of this Act, the registration of a trade mark in Part A or Part B of the register shall, if valid, give to the registered proprietor of the trade mark the exclusive right to the use of the trade mark in relation to the goods in respect of which the trade mark is registered and to obtain relief in respect of infringement of the trade mark in the manner provided by this Act.

(2) The exclusive right to the use of a trade mark given under sub-s. (1) shall be subject to any conditions and limitations to which the registration is subject.....

29. Infringement of trade mark.— (1) A registered trade mark is infringed by a person who, not being the registered proprietor of the trade mark or a registered user thereof using by way of permitted use, uses in the course of trade a mark which is identical with, or deceptively similar to, the trade mark, in relation to any goods in respect of which the trade mark is registered and in such manner as to render the use of the mark likely to be taken as being used as a trade mark.

(2) In an action for infringement of a trade mark registered in Part B of the register an injunction or other relief shall not be granted to the plaintiff if the defendant establishes to the satisfaction of the court that the use of the mark of which the plaintiff complains is not likely to deceive or cause confusion or to be taken as indicating a connection in the course of trade between the goods in respect of which the trade mark is registered and some person having the right, either as registered proprietor or as registered user, to use the trade mark.

12. As is well known, the laws relating to trade marks are based on and similar to those in United Kingdom. The latest Act in that country is the Trade Marks Act 1938 consolidating as its preamble indicates, the Trade Marks Act, 1905, the Trade Marks Act, 1919 and the Trade Marks (Amendment) Act, 1937. The 1905 Act contemplated only one Register of Trade Marks and Parts A and B in the register were introduced for the first time by the Act of 1919, provisions whereof had been since also incorporated in 1938 Act. Section 2 of 1919 Act provided that where any mark has for not less than two years been in bona fide use in the United Kingdom upon or in connection with goods for sale in United Kingdom or exportation abroad, as indicating the goods of the proprietor, he may apply for registration in Part B of the Register and the Registrar may refuse registration if it is not inconsistent with the provisions of S. 11 (deception) or S. 19 (identical mark) or if he is not satisfied that mark has been so used as aforesaid or that it is capable of distinguishing the goods of the applicant. It may be noted that the conditions for registration in Part B Register according to the above section appears to be disjunctive, the intervening preposition being 'or'.

13. 'The Indian Act of 1958 repealed the earlier Trade Marks Act, 1940 and this earlier Act had no Part A or B in Register of Trade Marks maintained for the purpose. Part B of the Register was introduced for the first time in our 1958 Act and the Objects and Reasons for such introduction have been set out in respect of S. 9 (5) as follows:—

"The requisites for registration in Parts A and B of the register are laid down in this clause. A mark which is distinctive (a term the definition of which occurs in sub-s. (3), is to be understood to apply wherever it occurs in the Act—J.C.R.) that is to say, adapted to distinguish, is registrable in Part A of the register. A less stringent test is proposed for registration in Part B register. A trade mark which is not distinctive but which is capable of distinguishing may be registered in Part B of the register. The establishment of the Part B register will bring on the register many valuable trade marks which are in use but not registrable and facilitate the registration of these Indian owned marks in foreign countries where a certificate of home registration is a condition precedent to registration. Such a provision is essential in view of the expanding export trade of this country....." S.O.R."

14. Sub-section (1) of S. 9 of the British Act of 1938 lays down the essential particulars for registration in Part A of the register and Cls. (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) are similar to provisions of S. 9, sub-sec. (1), Cls. (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of our Act. Sub-sections (2) and (3) of S. 9 of our Act is similar to Cl. (e) of sub-sec. (1) and sub-s. (2) of S. 9 of the British Act and they are in similar terms. Sub-section (3) of S. 9 of the British Act provides the guidelines for determining whether a trade mark is adapted to distinguish in regard to registration in Part A which is as follows:—

"Sec. 9. (3) In determining whether a trade mark is adapted to distinguish as aforesaid, the tribunal may have regard to the extent to which—

(a) the trade mark is inherently adapted to distinguish as aforesaid; and

(b) by reason of the use of the trade mark or any other circumstances, the trade mark is in fact adapted to distinguish as aforesaid."

15. Sub-section (1) of S. 10 of the British Act of 1938 provides that a trade mark will be registrable in Part B of the register, if it shall be capable of distinguishing goods with which the proprietor is connected in course of trade from goods in case of which no such connection exists. Sub-section (2) of this Act of 1938 is as follows:—

"(2) In determining whether a trade mark is capable of distinguishing as aforesaid the tribunal may have regard to the extent to which—

(a) the trade mark is inherently capable of distinguishing as aforesaid and

(b) by reason of the use of the trade mark or of any other circumstances, the trade mark is in fact capable of distinguishing as aforesaid."

The guidelines for registration in Part A of the register as provided in S. 9 (3) of the British Act and those for registration in Part B of the register as provided in S. 10 (2) of the British Act have been combined in sub-ss. (4) and (5) of S. 9 of our Act of 1958 which we have quoted above. We have referred to the provisions of the British Act in some detail, as the decisions cited are under the said Act and naturally have reference to its provisions.

16. Mr. Chakravarti has referred to the above provisions and submitted that the conditions for registration in Part B of the register have been fulfilled by the trade mark sought to be registered. He submitted that the trade mark is inherently distinctive or is inherently capable of distinguishing the appellant's goods from others or in the alternative, the trade mark by reason of its use has become adapted to distinguish or is capable of distinguishing as aforesaid, as required in Cls. (a) or (b) of sub-s. (5) of S. 9 of our Act. He submitted that these clauses are disjunctive and if any of the tests are satisfied, the appellant is entitled to registration at least in Part B register. These contentions have been strongly disputed by Mr. Roy Choudhury learned counsel for the respondents, who has referred to the conjunctive pronoun 'and' used in connecting Cls. (a) and (b) of S. 9 (5). The tests required for registration in Part B of the register are both as provided in Cls. (a) and (b), so that, it is submitted, even, if it can be said that the trade mark is capable of distinguishing by use it is neither inherently distinctive or inherently capable of distinguishing the appellant's goods to the extent necessary.

17. In Halsbury's Laws of England Third Edition, Volume 38, Art. 880 it is laid down as follows:—

"880. Requirements for registration in Part B.— To be registrable in Part B of the register, a mark must be capable of distinguishing goods for which it is registered and in judging of such capacity the tribunal may take into account both the inherent qualities of the mark and the extent to which user or other circumstance has rendered it so capable."

18. In Kerly's Law of Trade Mark and Trade Names (10th Edition) it has been observed:—

"3.72...It will be apparent on comparing S. 10 with S. 9 that so far as registrability is concerned, the differences between Part A and Part B are (1) that in the former the mark must be "adapted to distinguish" and in the latter "capable of distinguishing" (the context being virtually identical); and (2) that in the case of names, signatures or words which do not fall within paragraphs (a) to (d) of S. 9 (1), so that registration in Part A can only be granted upon evidence of distinctiveness such evidence is not required for Part B if it is possible without evidence to satisfy the tribunal that the mark is capable of distinguishing the goods."

19. Even so, the provisions both of Ss. 9 (2) (b) & 10 (2) (b) of the British Act and our S. 9 (5), Cl. (b) also require evidence of use to establish that the trade mark is in fact adapted to distinguish or capable of distinguishing the goods in respect whereof registration is sought for.

20. In considering the implication of the words "adapted to distinguish" for registration in Part A of the register, and words "capable of distinguishing" for registration in Part B of the register, in the case of 'Weldmesh' trade mark reported in 1965 RPC 590 (595), Lloyd-Jacob J. observed as follows:—

"..... Section 9 and Part A of the register are concerned with the registration of marks the primary significance of which is that they are adapted to distinguish the goods of the proprietor and the qualification for registration is the possession of such significance and this may be immediately evident or require use or special circumstances to demonstrate it.

Section 10 and Part B of the register are concerned with an alternative method of registration for marks which can be shown to be capable of distinguishing goods of the proprietor and this is secured by proof of the development of a secondary meaning which outweighs the apparently non-distinctive character of the mark when viewed in isolation. It is, therefore, not unreasonable to regard the two expressions 'adapted to distinguish' and 'capable of distinguishing' as being deliberately chosen so as to direct the particular enquiry aright, the former emphasising that it is because of the presence of a sufficient distinguishing characteristic in the mark itself that distinctiveness is to be expected to result whatever the type and scale of the user and thus secure an estimation of a positive quality in the mark; and the second that, in spite of the absence of a sufficient distinguishing characteristic in the mark itself, distinctiveness can be acquired by appropriate user, thereby overcoming a negative quality in the mark."

21. This interpretation was approved by Willmer L. J. in Court of appeal where the 'Weldmesh' case 1965 RPC 590 went up in appeal and the other lawlords did not expressly or by implication disapprove the proposition (vide 1966 RPC 220), as also noted in the judgment under appeal before us.

22. In regard to registration in Part B of the register, provisions have been made in sub-s. (4) of S. 9. The essential conditions are that the mark in relation to goods proposed to be registered is (1) distinctive or (2) if not distinctive, capable of distinguishing the goods of the applicant from those of others. To be distinctive (which means adapted to distinguish) or capable of distinguishing the goods as aforesaid, there may be some inherent qualities or distinguishing characteristics in the mark itself which may make it so distinctive or capable of such distinguishing the goods of the applicant from others. The degree or extent of such inherent quality that may satisfy the requisite qualification for registration is left to the discretion of the Tribunal to determine, with his expert knowledge as the extent of quality is always variable from mark to mark.

23. If however the mark has no inherent distinguishing qualities or features, the distinctiveness may be acquired by appropriate user or other circumstances thereby overcoming the negative quality in the mark. Here again the Tribunal has been given the discretion to register a mark in the B part of the register taking into account the extent of the distinctiveness or capability of distinguishing the applicant's goods from others in fact acquired by reason of the use of the trade marks or other circumstances. There is thus actually no question of exclusion of one clause by another in sub-s. (5) of S. 9 but all relevant factors are to be taken into consideration by the Tribunal who as an expert will exercise his discretion in the light of the provisions of law and judicial interpretation thereof. As has been pointed out by Kerly, a decision upon registrability involves balancing an inherent tendency to unregistrability on the one hand against evidence showing distinctiveness in fact on the other.

24. All these are subject to the condition that where inherent unsuitability is so strong no degree of distinctiveness in fact can counter-balance it, so that some marks are totally unregistrable. This is for the reason that if any mark for example violates the requirements of sub-clause (d) of sub-s. (1) of S. 9 such mark because of inherent infirmity can never be distinctive or capable of distinguishing the goods of the applicants sought to be registered from others goods either inherently or by reason of user of the mark or other circumstances.

25. A geographical name according to its ordinary signification is such mark inherently or otherwise incapable of registration subject to such minor exceptions in regard to other aspects as noticed in judicial decisions referred hereinafter. In Corpus Juris Vol. 63 (1933 Edn.), in Chapter of Trade Marks etc. Art. 53 (pp. 356-7) it is stated:

"Geographical terms and words in common use to designate a locality, a country, or a section of country cannot be monopolised as trade marks; but a geographical name not used in geographical sense to denote place of origin, but used in an arbitrary or fanciful way to indicate origin or ownership regardless of location, may be sustained as a valid trade mark."

According to S. 9, sub-s. (1), Cl. (d) of our Act, a trade mark for registration in 'A' part of the Register must contain one or more words having no direct reference to the character or quality of the goods and not being according to its ordinary signification, a geographical name.

26. The first point for consideration is whether the test of Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) has been satisfied in this case, that is, if by reason of use the mark in fact has become distinctive as adapted to distinguish or is in fact capable of distinguishing the goods of the appellant from others. The appellant has submitted affidavit evidence to prove that on the date of application on July 20, 1963 the goods (cigarettes) introduced in 1960, have in course of three years user reached fantastic figure of sale at over Rs. 1.14 crores with advertisement costs of over Rs. 15.50 lakhs. Mr. Chakraborty also filed an application before us in support of his case that the sale figure has been constantly increasing since along with costs of advertisement. We have however thought it fit to confine ourselves to facts as existing on the date of application which is the usual practice followed in such cases. Though evidence as to subsequent events may be admissible as throwing light on the question, we shall proceed on the basis that the 'Simla' cigarettes have not been withdrawn from the market and the sale of 'Simla' cigarettes has been continuing. Even so, the acquisition of distinctiveness should be on the date when the application is filed for registration, and the law does not require or provide for acceptance of evidence of subsequent events.

27. Before we proceed further, we shall consider two aspects of the controversy in respect whereof grievance has been made before us. The learned Judge did not approve of the conduct of the appellant in not withdrawing its earlier application of April 20, 1960 till the date of filing the present application on July 20, 1963 while in the meantime the appellant went on building its trade. As laid down in Kerly's book referred to above, "an applicant is entitled to withdraw an application and to make a second application so as to obtain the advantage of a longer period of use and earlier application was obviously kept pending to meet a possible challenge in the meantime. That context, we say with respect, has no bearing on the merits of the application."

28. As to evidence also, the learned Judge found affidavits of dealers and employees unacceptable as they were not disinterested witnesses while the affidavits of smokers were held not dependable. We are unable to subscribe to this view, as who else other than dealers and their employees would be the fit persons to state of the position in the market, the consumers' demand and of the sale figures in respect of the goods. There is also no reason to disbelieve the smokers in the context of the huge sale figures even on the date of the application.

29. Let us now examine if the trade mark could have attained the distinctiveness on the date of application. There can be little dispute that the acquisition of distinctiveness of a trade mark is a long laborious and time consuming process. Even so, no time limit is fixed by statute and in the British Act of 1919 two years bona fide user was considered sufficient. There may be a case where for sundry reasons, a trade mark may attain the requisite distinctiveness within a "magically short period and it is not possible to predicate or lay down any hard and fast rule about the period of time on the expiry whereof only a trade mark by user can attain distinctiveness required under the statute. Every case will depend on the attending circumstances and evidence adduced in support of the acquisition of distinctiveness.

30. We shall now consider if the trade mark has attained 'distinctiveness' on the date of the application. 'Distinctiveness' has been understood to mean 'some quality in the trade mark which earmarks the goods so marked as distinct from those of other producers of such goods'. In Liverpool Cables Case ((1929)

46 RPC 99) the trade mark applied for registration was 'Liverpool Cables' in respect of electric cables. In Glastonburys case ((1938) 55 RPC 253), the trade mark was 'Glastonburys' in respect of slippers etc. In Yorkshire case ((1954) 71 RPC 150) the trade mark sought to be registered was 'Yorkshire' for solid-drawn tubes and capillary fittings of copper or copper-alloys. In Tijuana Smalls case 1973 RPC 453 the trade mark under consideration was 'Tijuana Smalls' the first word in block capitals. In all these cases the trade mark was a word or combination of words and it was claimed that by reason of user, the trade mark has acquired a secondary meaning distinguishing goods under the mark sought to be registered as of the applicants from similar goods of others.

31. In the trade mark we are concerned with there is no dispute that though the mark is composite in character, including word 'Simla' in bold character with snow clad hills in outline and an inscription that the product is of the appellant in ordinary character or manner, the word 'Simla' is the prominent feature of the mark and distinctiveness is claimed in respect of the word 'Simla'. Even so the trade mark is not confined to the word 'Simla' and in the affidavits filed by the smokers on behalf of the appellant, the deponents say that the 'Simla' label bears the inscription in ordinary character of being the product of the appellant whose products are of good and standard tobacco. It is accordingly not possible to say that the word 'Simla' by itself has acquired a secondary meaning to its customers, so as to conjure in their mind the cigarettes belonging to the appellant only and to none else even if the mark did not contain the inscription that it was a product of the appellant. A trade mark like 'Simla' on goods to distinguish them from others goods as claimed must be the trade mark on its own without any assistance from indications like such goods being a product of the appellant. That is not the case possible here, as the mark 'Simla' does not stand on its own, so that it is not possible to say that by reason of the use 'Simla' is adapted to distinguish or capable of distinguishing as the goods of appellants to the exclusion of goods of others.

32. As we have seen 'Simla' is not an invented word; and though it has no reference to the character or a place of origin of the goods sought to be registered it is not inherently distinctive or adapted to distinguish "as there is no sufficient distinguishing characteristic in the mark itself so that distinctiveness might be expected to result whatever the type and scale of user and thus secure an estimation of the positive quality in the mark." This infirmity brings the trade mark out of the operation of cl. (a) of S. 9 (5). There is no other circumstances pleaded and the user of the trade mark 'Simla' by itself as we have seen, on the evidence adduced cannot be said in fact as distinctive or capable of distinguishing the goods of the appellants from others by use in consequence whereof Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) has also no operation. In arriving at this conclusion, we are not influenced by the finding that three years' time is too short for acquisition of distinctiveness, as there may be cases where a product may attain such distinctiveness within a short spell of time for its inherent qualities of the product.

33. Even assuming that the trade mark 'Simla' has become capable of distinguishing by use thus fulfilling the condition of Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) entitling registration in Part B of the register, there are other formidable hurdles in the way for registration as already noted.

34. As we have seen, the mark 'Simla' is a geographical name and the snow-clad hills in outline in the mark indicates its use in ordinary or geographical signification, so that the mark is neither a fancy or invented word nor one with a secondary meaning. As has been observed in Karly's Treatise (10th Edition).

"8.51. A word is not debarred from registration under S. 9 (1) (e) as a distinctive word merely because it is geographical and so cannot be registered under S. 9 (1) (d). Some geographical names can be inherently adapted to distinguish the goods of particular traders, but only if it can be predicated that they are such names as it would never occur to any other trader in such goods to use. At the other extreme, the name of a major industrial area or city will be totally unregistrable in respect of almost any goods. In between come the marks calling for more or less evidence that they are distinctive in fact..... It may tip the balance that the applicant can show that he has a natural or legal monopoly of the production of goods concerned in the place concerned; but that alone will not make a geographical name registrable without substantial evidence of distinctiveness."

Though Cl. (d) of S. 9 (1) which refers to geographical name in ordinary signification relates to registration in Part A of the register, the distinctiveness of the trade mark which makes it capable of distinguishing the applicant's goods, as required in Cl. (b) of S. 9 (5) in respect of registration in Part B of the register, it is a vital and essential element for the purpose. Such distinctiveness is not possible for any geographical name in its ordinary or geographical signification. Though the rule has been relaxed in respect of small and insignificant place or where there is no geographical significance of the mark, if the geographical name propounded for registration is the name of an important country or a large district, county or city of commercial importance or has a geographical signification, the mark will be refused registration notwithstanding evidence of long and extensive use. In Liverpool Electric Cable Co. Ltd.'s case ((1929) 46 RPC 99) where registration was sought for trade mark 'Liverpool' in both Parts A and B of the register it was held that the name of an important commercial centre as Liverpool, even though it may in fact be distinctive of the goods in respect of which it is sought to register it is not registrable. In respect of Monte Rosa Cigarettes or Tenerife Boiler Plates it was noted that there was no geographical significance in the mark which were mere pet names. It was further held that Liverpool being a well known city is geographical and not capable of distinguishing the goods of any particular trader and such registration will tend to embarrass traders who are in the trade or who may hereafter so trade as they would have difficulty in describing their goods if prevented from using the word 'Liverpool' Cables.

35. In A. Bailey & Ltd. v. Clark, Son & Morland Ltd. (1938) 55 RPC 253 known as Glastonburys' case, the respondents obtained registration as a trade mark of the word 'Glastonburys' used in connection with goatskin slippers and the appellants brought an action to rectify the register by expunging trade mark 'Glastonburys'. The prayer was allowed on the ground that (in spite of 'S') Glastonbury was a geographical name prima facie unregistrable under S. 9 and evidence was unsuitable to prove the word to be generally distinctive of the respondents' goods and the word was not adapted to distinguish. The court of appeal held that 'Glastonburys' had become distinctive and had acquired as secondary meaning indicating exclusively the goods of the respondents. The House of Lords on further appeal held that the mark was not adapted to distinguish the goods of the respondents from those of other persons and its presence in the register would hamper rights of other traders. It was held that the word 'Glastonburys' is obviously a geographical name indicating the town of Glastonbury which had a reputation of manufacturers of Sheepskin slippers and parties were such manufacturers. It was observed that the respondents and future manufacturers of slippers in Glastonbury or their retail customers should not be hampered or restricted by the presence of the mark on the register while evidence was also insufficient to prove distinctiveness or that the mark was a fancy name.

36. In respect of Yorkshire Copper Works Ltd.'s application for registration of the trade mark 'Yorkshire' ((1954) 71 RPC 150) on its goods of copper tubes and capillary fittings, the House of Lords proceeded on the basis that the trade mark had acquired 100 per cent distinctiveness. It was held that as the mark is beyond question a geographical name, even though it has no direct reference to the character or quality of goods, it cannot be registered if it is according to its ordinary signification a geographical name. Lord Simonds L. C. observed that the Registrar could not have come to any other conclusion than refusal of the application.

"Unless having found distinctiveness in fact, he (the tribunal) needed to pay no regard to the other factor of inherent adaptability, he was faced with by the fact that there could not well be a geographical name less inherently adapted than Yorkshire to distinguish the goods of the appellants (applicants)" For just as a manufacturer is not entitled to a monopoly of a laudatory or descriptive epithet, so he is not to claim for his own a territory whether country, county or town, which may be in the future if it is not now, the seat of manufacture of goods similar to his own."

37. The position emerging from the statutory provisions and the judicial interpretations thereon appears to be that a trade mark in Part B of the Register will be registered if the mark is distinctive or capable of distinguishing the applicant's goods from others. In determining whether the mark is distinctive or capable of distinguishing, the Tribunal shall have regard if the mark is inherently distinctive or is inherently capable of distinguishing as aforesaid. If not, the Tribunal will further examine if by reason of use or other circumstances, the trade mark has in fact become distinctive (as adapted to distinguish) or capable of distinguishing as aforesaid. All the same the Tribunal will refuse registration in respect of either parts of the register if the trade mark is inherently incapable of being distinctive or inherently incapable of distinguishing the goods of the applicants from others. Such reasons obviously are the disabilities violating the provision of Cls. (c), (d) and (e) of sub-s. (1) of S. 9 of our Act which again may not be exhaustive. The courts of law have further imposed the condition that no trade mark should be allowed to be registered which may hamper or embarrass the traders or trade now or in future in respect of the place or country which is proposed to be registered.

38. Mr. Chakrabarty has referred us to the decision in Tijuana Smalls' case where registration in respect of cigars was allowed in Part B (1973 RPC 453). Tijuana is a town in Mexico with inhabitants over 2 lakhs. Graham J. in allowing registration in Part B held that the question whether a geographical word could be registered was one of degree. These words whose primary signification is geographical and where the geographical significance is so general and so likely to be adapted or desired for use by more than one trader, it would be wrong, however distinctive they might in fact have become ever to allow one trader by registration to seek to monopolise them (e.g. Yorkshire or Liverpool). There are other 'geographical' words (e.g. North Pole) where, for one reason or other, when considered as applied to the goods in respect of which it is sought to register them, it is clear that the use is in fact clearly not geographical but fanciful, and was therefore, at least, capable, particularly by use, of being distinctive in practice of one of manufacturers' goods. Registration could, therefore, in such cases be allowed without causing inconvenience to or encroaching upon the reasonable trading rights of other manufacturers. The learned Judge found that the conclusion that Tijuana, an arid area, could well become tobacco producing centre being so improbable should be rejected.

39. Strong reliance was placed on this decision by Mr. Chakravarti who contended that Simla was never a tobacco producing centre or likely to be so and there is no chance or occasion for any prejudice being caused to other traders or manufacturers. He also referred to the Trade Marks Journal published by the Government containing advertisements of various geographical names for acceptance: 'Sheemla' for agarbati, 'Gulmarg' for wire, 'Shalimar' for engineering goods 'Kalighat' for biddies were cited and referred. In all such cases it appears that the names prima facie are fanciful without geographical or ordinary signification and at this stage it will not be proper to depend on those marks without further material or evidence. The propositions of law in respect of geographical names have been referred to above and in view of the imprint of snow clad hills in outline in the trade mark 'Simla' the ordinary or geographical signification is obvious and patent even though it has no reference to the quality or place of origin of the goods as at present advised. Further, registration of such trade mark may hamper or embarrass the trade or traders in or around the locality in future as held by judicial authorities cited earlier in similar cases. Also 'Simla' is too prominent a city, the capital of Himachal Pradesh, well known in the country and abroad and in its ordinary or geographical significance it is inherently neither distinctive nor adapted to distinguish also nor capable of distinguishing the goods of the appellant as a particular trader from those of others, and is also hit by the provisions of S. 9. sub-s. (1), Cl. (d) of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958. In view of the above position, the Deputy Registrar in rejecting the application for registration is Part A or Part B of the Register rightly exercised his discretion conferred on him by law.

40. For the aforesaid reasons the appeal fails and is dismissed without any order for costs in the circumstances.

ORDER:— The petitioner is a company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913. During the year 1968-69 ending on 31st March, 1969 the liability on account of interest on bank overdraft to the extent of Rs. 60,580.39 was deducted out of the income for that year on the ground that it was an item of expenditure under sub-paragraph (xi) of paragraph XVII (2) (b) of the Sixth Schedule to the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948 and was deductible for working out the clear profit. Such deduction was disputed on behalf of the State of Uttar Pradesh. According to the State of Uttar Pradesh such amount was not deductible. The said dispute was referred to arbitration under the provisions of S. 76 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948. One of the questions referred, inter alia, was as follows:

"Whether the amount of Rs. 60,580.39 being the interest on overdraft is admissible as an item of expenditure during 1968-69 under sub-paragraph XVII (2) (b) (xi) of the Sixth Schedule."

2. The arbitrators have made the award by holding, inter alia, as follows:

"The amount of Rs. 60,580.39 being the interest on overdraft for the year 1968-69 is not admissible as an item of expenditure under paragraph XVII (2) (b) (xi) of the Sixth Schedule to the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948."

3. The said award has been challenged in this application under the Arbitration Act, 1940 on the ground that there is an error of law apparent on the face of the award. Paragraph XVII of the Sixth Schedule to the said Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948 provides for certain definitions. Under sub-clause (2) of paragraph XVII clear profit has been indicated to mean the difference between the amount of income and the sum of expenditure plus appropriations, made up in each case as indicated in the different sub-clauses. Several expenditures property incurred under different heads have been allowed to be deducted. But sub-clause (xi) provides as follows:

"(xi) other expenses (excluding interest on debentures and loans), admissible under the law for the time being in force in the assessment of Indian Income-tax and arising from and ancillary or incidental to the business of electricity supply."

Sub-clause (iv-a) provides as follows:

"(iv-a) interest on loans borrowed from organisations or institutions approved by the State Government."

4. It was, therefore, contended that inasmuch as the arbitrators had excluded Rs. 60,580.39 which was interest on overdraft, the arbitrators had committed an error of law because what was excluded was not interest on overdraft but interest on debentures and loans. It was submitted that overdraft was not loan and in proceeding on the said basis the arbitrators had committed an error of law apparent on the face of the award. In considering whether overdraft was loan it may be mentioned that in Halsbury's Laws of England 4th Edn., Vol. 3 at paragraph 155 it has been stated that a customer might borrow from a banker by way of loan or by way of overdraft. A loan was a matter of special agreement. In the absence of agreement, express or implied from a course of business, a banker was not bound to allow his customer to overdraw.

5. In Banking Law and Practice in India by M. L. Tannan, 14th Edn. at page 324, it has been stated that when a customer requires temporary accommodation, he may be allowed to overdraw his current account, usually against collateral securities. From the customer's point of view this arrangement like the cash credit is advantageous as he is required to pay interest on the amount actually used by him. But when a Banker makes an advance on lump sum the whole of which is withdrawn and is supposed to be repaid generally, wholly and at one time is called a loan.

6. These propositions, in my opinion, do not establish that an overdraft is not a loan. On the other hand, an overdraft can also be treated as a loan. See the observations in the case of Cuthbert v. Roberts, Lubbock & Co., (1909) 2 Ch 226. Therefore, I am unable to accept the position that there is any error of law apparent on the face of the award because the Arbitrators have held that an overdraft was a loan. From one point of view an overdraft can certainly be treated as a loan. There is no error in holding that an overdraft is a loan.

7. There is a second aspect of the matter. It was contended on behalf of the respondent and, in my opinion, rightly, that the specific question of law as such had been referred to the Arbitrators and, therefore, any error committed by the Arbitrators could not be interfered with by this Court. Reliance in this connection was placed on certain observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Thawardas Pherumal v. Union of India reported in AIR 1955 SC 468 at p. 472 and in the case of U.G.V.E.S. & Co. Ltd. v. U. P. Electricity Board, AIR 1973 SC 683.

8. On the other hand, on behalf of the petitioner it was contended that in the facts of this case no specific question of law as such had been referred to and reliance was placed on the observations of Lord Wright in the case of F. R. Ab-salom Ltd. v. Great Western (London) Garden Village Society Ltd., 1933 AC 592 at p. 616 of the report. It was submitted in this case that there was no submission on any specific question of law as such.

9. In this case, it is indisputable that Rs. 60,580.39 was interest on overdraft and there was no dispute between the parties on this aspect. No question was referred on this point. The reference was on the question whether such interest on the overdraft is admissible as an item of expenditure in paragraph XVII (2) (b) (xi) of the Sixth Schedule. Therefore, the question whether the interest on overdraft can be said to be interest on loan had been referred to and referred to specifically and that is a question of law. Indeed, the decision on this aspect is being challenged by the petitioner as an error of law. Therefore, the question that the Arbitrators had to adjudicate was a question of law. The question is whether such a question of law had been specifcally referred to the Arbitrators. The question had been specifically referred to and if it is a question of law, then it need not be recited in the reference, that what has been referred to the Arbitrators is a specific question of law. On behalf of the petitioner it was urged that the question referred to was not whether an overdraft is a loan. Such a decision was only incidental to the reference that had been made. I am, however, unable to accept this contention. Whether overdraft is a loan, is only putting differently the same question. The question, essentially and only is whether interest on overdraft is the same thing, as interest on loan and as such inadmissible under the relevant paragraph referred to hereinafter. That, in my opinion, is a question which had been referred to. Right or wrong decision on this aspect of the question, in my opinion, is immune from attack in an application for setting aside the award.

10. On behalf of the petitioner it was further urged that in view of Cl. IV, sub-cl. (b) of Cl. 2 of paragraph XVII of the Sixth Schedule, the Arbitrators were in error in making the award in the manner they did. The question had not been referred to the Arbitrators. Therefore, the Arbitrators were not concerned with this aspect of the matter. The award does not in any way conclude this contention or this controversy on this aspect of the matter.

11. It was also submitted that in the certified copy of the award forwarded to the petitioner one of the Arbitrators had signed the award. It appears however from the original award which has been filed in this Court that both the Arbitrators have signed the award. In the certified copy supplied to the petitioner there must have been a mistake.

12. During the pendency of this application the petitioner's name was changed to Bareilly Holdings Ltd. I direct that the cause-title and the body of the petition be amended in terms of prayer (a) of the petition for amendment filed in this Court today. Let that amendment be effected within a fortnight on a signed copy of the minutes.

13. In the view, however, I have taken on the main point urged, this application fails and is dismissed. In the facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

14. There will be a judgment in terms of the award and costs of obtaining and filing the award. The judgment upon award is stayed for six weeks.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 428

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA AND
S. K. HAZRA, JJ.

Foundation Overseas Ltd., Appellant
v. Punjab National Bank Ltd. and another, Respondents.

A. F. O. O. No. 250 of 1976, (Suit No. 1733 of 1965), D/- 22-4-1977.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9, R. 9 — Conditional order of restoration — Order to furnish security as condition precedent to restoration of suit — Not valid.

In order to construe the expression 'or otherwise' in O. 9, R. 9 for a limited purpose viz. whether an order for deposit of money is contemplated within the meaning of the said expression it would be necessary to construe and compare the said provision with that of O. 9, R. 13 where in using similar expression some significant difference has been maintained. (Para 18)

Order 9, R. 13 provides for the Court's power to set aside the decree as against the defendant. The Court has discretion in imposing the terms upon the defendant for setting aside the ex parte decree. Here, not only the terms as to costs are for the Court's consideration but the question of 'payment into Court' has also to be taken into consideration. The difference in the language, is quite significant in respect of the two Rules being R. 9 and R. 13. A different consideration would arise when the defendant is in default. (Para 18)

Even though the expression 'or otherwise' has also been used in R. 13 yet the legislature thought it necessary to expressly add the words 'payment into Court' along with the expression 'or otherwise' in order to signify that this is a special consideration which attaches in the case of R. 13 and, accordingly the expression 'or otherwise' in R. 9 cannot include any term as to 'payment into Court'. In view of the absence of the expression 'payment into Court' in R. 9, it would surely be legitimate to hold that the legislature intended that the use of such a term viz., 'payment into Court' is not called for in respect of the provision which empowers the plaintiff to apply for restoration of the suit when it is dismissed for default of appearance. (Para 20)

Further, although O. 9, R. 9 gives discretion to the Court in imposing terms for setting aside the order of dismissal, such discretion is only as to costs in one way or the other. In view of this, the Court has no power to order the plaintiff to furnish security as a condition precedent to restoration of suit. (Para 51)

Goutam Chakraborty, for Appellant;
R. L. Sinha, for Respondents.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA, J.:—
This appeal is from an order dated 25th June, 1976 passed by the Court below recalling the order of dismissal of the suit upon condition that the plaintiff would deposit a sum of Rs. 7,50,000 in cash with the Registrar of this Court and in default thereof, directing the plaintiff's application for restoration of the suit to stand dismissed for non-prosecution with no order as to costs.

2. The operative part of the order reads as follows:—

"It is ordered that upon the plaintiff depositing on or before the second day of July next the sum of Rupees Seven Lacs and fifty thousand in cash only with the Registrar of this Court the order of dismissal of suit dated the Eighth day of June instant be recalled and that this suit shall appear in the list on the fifth day of July next. And it is further ordered that the interim order of the appeal court shall continue till one week from the date hereof and that the parties herein be at liberty to mention before this Court for having an early date fixed for hearing of this suit. And it is further ordered that in default of furnishing such security within the time as aforesaid this application shall stand dismissed. And it is further ordered that in any event the plaintiff do pay to the parties appearing as aforesaid their respective costs of and incidental to this application to be taxed by the Taxing Officer of this Court. And it is further ordered that all parties concerned do act on a copy of the minutes of this order signed by an officer of this Court being served upon them."

3. The suit herein has been filed on 23rd Sept., 1965, inter alia, for a decree declaring the bond dated 31st October, 1963 and its purported extensions void and for an order directing the said bond to be delivered up and cancelled. There are also prayers for ancillary relief by way of perpetual injunction in respect of the said bond. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that the said bond was executed in terms of a clause in the global tender which required the execution of such a bond. Accordingly, the said bond was furnished in favour of the State of Uttar Pradesh through the Punjab National Bank for the sum of Rs. 27,60,000. Thereafter, disputes arose by and between the plaintiff and the State of Uttar Pradesh in which the plaintiff contended that the bond should be delivered up and cancelled but the said defendant contended that the same should be enforced. Ultimately, the plaintiff filed this suit and prayed for its cancellation. The State of Uttar Pradesh was thereafter added as a party to this suit.

4. The plaintiff is a foreign company incorporated in Canada having its registered office at No. 2200 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario in Canada.

5. The admitted position is that the suit, for the first time, appeared in the peremptory list on 6th Jan., 1976 and, thereafter, from day-to-day till 15th Jan., 1976 when by and with the consent of the parties the plaintiff got it adjourned till 22nd Jan., 1976. Thereafter the suit appeared in the list on the 21st Jan., 1976 but it did not appear in the list thereafter till 26th May, 1976. It was again adjourned till 7th June, 1976 but this time upon mentioning by and on behalf of the plaintiff without notice to the defendants. Thereupon, at the instance of the defendant No. 2 the suit was directed to appear on 1st June, 1976 in the list marked as 'to be mentioned'. On 1st June, 1976 all the parties appeared and in their presence it was directed that the suit was to appear on 7th June, 1976. On 7th

June, 1976 the suit was called on when prayer for adjournment was made on behalf of the plaintiff but the same was refused. Thereupon pleadings were placed but ultimately it was passed over for the day with direction that it was to appear in the list on the next day at the top of the list. On the next day i.e. on 8th June, 1976 the suit was called on and the counsel for the plaintiff again prayed for adjournment which was refused and, thereafter, at the prayer of the plaintiff's counsel for leave to retire such leave was granted and counsel retired. Thereafter, the suit was dismissed for non-prosecution with no order as to costs.

6. Immediately thereafter on the next day i.e. on 9th June, 1976 an application was made on behalf of the plaintiff for recalling and for setting aside the order of dismissal of the suit. An ad interim order for stay of the order dated 8th June, 1976 was prayed for but the same was refused. The notice of motion was made returnable on 14th June, 1976. On the returnable date, viz., on 14th June, 1976 on behalf of the plaintiff the prayer for injunction and for ad interim stay of the order was renewed but the same was again refused. Directions were given for filing of affidavits.

7. Thereafter, on 16th June, 1976 the plaintiff preferred an appeal against the order for dismissal dated 8th June, 1976. The appeal was admitted and on 18th June, 1976 an ad interim order staying the operation of the order dated 8th June, 1976 was granted by the appeal Court till the disposal of the application for restoration pending before the trial Court.

8. The plaintiff's case in the petition for restoration is that Messrs. Orr, Dignam & Co., the solicitors for the plaintiff wrote to the plaintiff at its address as given in the plaint at Toronto, in Canada but the said intimation did not reach the plaintiff and it came back unserved. The envelope containing the intimation was produced in Court which showed the postal registration date as on 4th February, 1976. It is contended that there was a change in the address of the plaintiff and as such the solicitors could not get in touch with the client in spite of efforts. Having failed to come in touch with the client on 5th June, 1976 the solicitors sent a cable to Mr. Silverston at London so that Mr. Silverston could contact the plaintiff in Canada and intimate them about the hearing of the suit. In the petition it is alleged that in the forenoon of 8th June, 1976 Messrs. Orr, Dignam & Co. received a telex message from the plaintiff in reply to the request made to the plaintiff by Mr. Silverston from London. In the said telex message the plaintiff reiterated the stand taken by Mr. Silverston and requested Messrs. Orr, Dignam & Co. to obtain a short adjournment, if possible. The said telex message was handed over to Court and it was also intimated to Court that there was a telephonic conversation between Mr. Silverston and Mr. P.N. Basu of the solicitors' firm. In spite of the aforesaid the learned trial Judge refused the adjournment and dismissed the suit.

9. As stated above, when the application for restoration of the suit was moved the learned Judge made the aforesaid conditional order.

10. On behalf of the plaintiff it is contended that in an application under O. 9, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. there is no scope for putting the plaintiff on terms to the effect that the plaintiff would be directed to deposit any money in court or to furnish security to the satisfaction of the Registrar as a condition precedent to the restoration of the suit. It is contended that if the learned Judge should so think fit the learned Judge could have asked the plaintiff to deposit the amount by way of costs or in the nature of costs. That would have been in compliance with the provision of O. 9, R. 9 of the Code.

11. Order 9, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. provides as follows:—

"(1) Where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under R. 8, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

(2) No order shall be made under this rule unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party."

12. It would appear from the above that broadly speaking the provision of O. 9, R. 9 has two limbs; the first limb gives a right to the plaintiff, whose suit has been dismissed, to make the application for restoration of the suit. In doing so it is an obligation on his part to satisfy the court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance in Court when the suit was called on for hearing. Once he can satisfy the Court, he is entitled to an order setting aside the dismissal but upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court might think fit to impose upon him depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The second limb provides for the power given to Court to make the conditional order setting aside the dismissal when the Court is satisfied that sufficient cause has been made out for the non-appearance of the plaintiff. In making such an order the Court has been vested with the discretion to decide what costs, if any, which would be imposed as a term to set aside such dismissal. Only this part of the order is discretionary. Otherwise when the Court is satisfied about the sufficient cause being made out for his non-appearance the Court is bound to make the order for setting aside the dismissal.

13. Another question arises as to whether in making an order under O. 9, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. it is competent for the Court to make an order directing the plaintiff to deposit any amount as a condition precedent for setting aside the order of dismissal. The point is worth considering because when such an order for deposit of any amount would be made as a condition precedent to the setting aside of the dismissal of the suit then the question may yet arise as to for whose benefit such deposit would be made, or, in other words, on what principle such a deposit would be ordered. It is to be appreciated that if the plaintiff would so deposit the amount the same would remain in the custody of the Court to the credit of the plaintiff's account until the Court would direct the return thereof to the plaintiff. Nobody else can be interested in such an amount excepting the plaintiff. If the plaintiff would win in the suit then it goes to him. If the plaintiff would lose in the suit then also the same would have to be returned to the plaintiff.

14. It is contended that the plaintiff being a foreign company the said security money should be held as a security for costs. To that the answer is that for that purpose the provision of O. XXV of the Code would be attracted and an order would have to be made under the said provision after the requirements contained therein would be satisfied; and the Court in making such an order would also be required to record its reasons as provided thereunder. In short there are formalities attached to the making of such an order for security for costs. Such formalities had neither been complied with nor any such requirements were present before this Court. Accordingly, such a consideration could not have arisen in making the order herein. Moreover, even though such a huge amount has been directed to be deposited in Court yet no judgment has been delivered to indicate for what purpose the said amount was so directed to be deposited. It has yet to be considered as to what would happen to the said amount when the same would be deposited? What purpose would be served by making such an order for security?

15. It is contended that the expression "upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit" as appearing under O. 9, R. 9 would contemplate that the Court's powers in making the order are not limited to costs only, in imposing the terms. The Court has power to order deposit of any amount if the Court so thinks fit by virtue of the expression 'or otherwise' appearing in the said rule.

16. In my opinion, it is not necessary for us to decide as to what the expression 'or otherwise' would mean or include under this rule. It would be sufficient for us to restrict our consideration to the question whether the order for security, as has been ordered herein, by the learned Judge could be made within the scope of the expression 'or otherwise' in the said rule.

17. The expression 'or otherwise' has on various occasions since long time past been used by the legislature from time to time in connection with various statutes. In considering the very same expression 'or otherwise' in several decided cases the ejusdem generis rule has been applied and in several others the same principle has not been applied. Undoubtedly, the application or non-application of the ejusdem generis principle must depend on the construction of the language used in each of the particular statutes where the said expression has been used.

18. In my opinion, it cannot be said that any such decision would be an authority for the proposition with which we are concerned here. Nor is it necessary, as observed above, for us to go into that question. It is sufficient for us to construe the said expression for a very limited purpose viz., whether such an order for the deposit of money is contemplated within the meaning of the said expression or otherwise, as provided in O. 9, R. 9 of the Code. In order to decide this question it would be necessary to construe and compare the provision of O. 9, R. 9 with that of O. 9, R. 13 where in using similar expression some significant difference has been maintained. The said O. 9, R. 13 reads as follows:—

"13. Application to be made to the Court which passed the decree. — The rule requires an application by the defendant for an order to set aside the decree. The application under the rule ought to be made to the Court which passed the decree though the presiding Judge may be different. Where, however, by reason of territorial re-adjustment, the Court itself becomes different the defendant is not debarred from applying to the Court which is seized of the matter." In respect of this Rule also there are two limbs. The first limb gives a right to the defendant to apply for an order to set aside the ex parte decree. Under this Rule he has to satisfy the Court either that the summons was not duly served or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. If he can so satisfy the Court then he is entitled to an order for setting aside the said ex parte decree but upon condition as to be imposed by the Court. The second limb provides for the Court's power to set aside the decree as against the defendant "upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise as it thinks fit". As regards the imposition of the terms, this part of the order is discretionary. The Court has to decide by using its discretion as to what would be the terms which should be imposed upon the defendant in setting aside the said ex parte decree. It is interesting to note that a significant difference in the language and expression has been used in respect of the imposition of the terms under this Rule. Here not only the terms as to costs are for the Court's consideration but the question of 'payment into Court' has also to be taken into consideration. The difference in the language, in our opinion, is quite significant in respect of the two Rules being R. 9 and R. 13. A different consideration would arise when the defendant is in default. Even though he satisfies the Court either that the summons was not duly served or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court, under suitable circumstances, is still empowered to consider the question of payment into Court and direct him to do so as has been specifically provided for under R. 13 because that amount when so deposited might go to help the plaintiff in realising his dues as and when he would obtain the decree against the defendant.

19. As stated above, different considerations arise when it involves the defendant in the suit. If the Court would find that the defence as made out is illusory and the plaintiff is most likely to succeed in the suit but the defendant is trying to delay the matter by applying for restoration of the suit after setting aside the ex parte decree, say for some technical defect in effecting the service, the Court can very well direct the defendant to deposit some amount by way of security in order that the plaintiff might not suffer prejudice. Ultimately when the plaintiff succeeds in the suit and gets a decree at a later point of time he can look to the said security in realising his decretal dues.

20. In my opinion, even though the expression 'or otherwise' has also been used in R. 13 yet the legislature thought it necessary to expressly add the words 'payment into Court' along with the expression 'or otherwise' in order to signify that this is a special consideration which attaches in the case of R. 13 and, accordingly, in view of the absence of the expression 'payment into Court' in R. 9 it would surely be legitimate to hold that the legislature intended that the use of such a term viz., "payment into Court" is not called for in respect of the provision which empowers the plaintiff to apply for restoration of the suit when it is dismissed for default of appearance. In Maxwell on The Interpretation of Statutes, Twelfth Edition, at page 282 it is stated 'From the general presumption that the same expression is presumed to be used in the same sense throughout an Act or a series of cognate Acts, there follows the further presumption that a change of wording denotes a change in meaning.' That being the position, we must hold that the expression 'or otherwise' in R. 9 cannot include any term as to payment into Court as has been directed by the learned trial Judge in this case.

21. I set out herein below the following cases which were placed before us for the consideration of the expression 'or otherwise' in different statutes. In some of these cases, the principle of ejusdem generis rule has been applied and in some others it has not been applied.

22. Among statutes where the said expression 'or otherwise' has been used and where the Courts have applied the principles of ejusdem generis rule, some relate to fiscal statutes and some others relate to penal statutes as well. See Kochuni v. States of Madras & Kerala, AIR 1960 SC 1080 at p. 1097; M. Narayanan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1963 SC 1116; George v. Controller of Estate Duty, Mysore, AIR 1967 SC 849 at p. 851; Maxwell on The Interpretation of Statutes, Twelfth Edition at p. 298; Attorney General v. Seacombe, (1911) 2 KB 688 which was relied on by the Supreme Court in AIR 1967 SC 849 at p. 851.

23. Mr. Sinha, on the other hand, has relied on the following decisions where the ejusdem generis rule has not been applied in construing the expression 'or otherwise' in some of the statutes. See Baij Nath Prasad v. State of U. P., AIR 1968 All 288 at p. 289; National Association of Local Government Officers v. Bolton Corporation L. R. 1943 AC 166 at p. 174; Morant v. Taylor, (1876) 1 Ex. D 188. As observed above, it is not necessary for us to go into details and decide that question in this application except only for the very limited purpose, as aforesaid.

24. Mr. Sinha has next argued that the appeal is premature because until the default clause became operative it could not be said that the conditional order was an order rejecting the application. The learned counsel contends that until the period for payment expires, the order would remain as an order allowing the application for restoration in which case no appeal would lie. In my opinion, such a contention cannot be accepted. The effect of a conditional order, such as is set out above, is that the order amounts to rejection of the application and not in an order allowing the application and if that be the position it would become a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent of 1865 and on that basis it would become appealable.

25. A Bench of this Court in the case of Chattu Lal Misser v. Marwari Commercial Bank Ltd., 30 Cal WN 298 considered the effect of an order of a similar nature and observed at p. 303: (AIR 1926 Cal 668 at p. 670) as follows:—

"The effect of that order was that if the security was not given as directed a decree would be drawn up as a matter of course without any further application to the learned Judge.

In my opinion, it was a judgment finally deciding that the defendant was not to be allowed to defend the suit unless he complied with the conditions contained in the order."

26. In another Bench decision of this Court in the case of Mitra Mukherjee and Co. v. Ajit Kumar Sarkar, AIR 1963 Cal 9 the effect of such a conditional order had been considered. It was observed at page 11 as follows:—

"The result of the order is that if security is not furnished a decree against the defendants would be drawn up and as a matter of fact a decree has been drawn up and the suit finally disposed of. It is absurd to suggest that such an order is not appealable or that there is any reason to hold that the appeal from the order directing security to be furnished is not maintainable. The effect of non-compliance with the order, as I have already pointed out, is to deprive the defendants of a valuable right, namely, to defend the suit and clearly in such a case it cannot be said that the order directing security, in default whereof a decree was to be drawn up against the defendants is not appealable."

27. With respect I entirely agree with the above views as expressed in the above decisions and, accordingly, hold that the appeal is not premature and the order appealed from is a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. That being the position, it is not necessary for me to consider whether the order appealed from is without jurisdiction on the ground that such an order directing security to be furnished by the plaintiff could not be made under O. 9, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. and that, under such circumstances, it is always appealable whenever the order is passed without jurisdiction.

28. It must be held that the learned trial Judge was satisfied that sufficient grounds had been made out for recalling the order for dismissal and for restoring the suit; and that being the position the learned Judge could not have asked the plaintiff to furnish security for the restoration of its suit. The position might have been different if security would have been ordered by way of costs but the learned Judge has not given any such indication in making the said order for security.

29. Lastly, Mr. Sinha contends that since the order of the learned Judge has gone in his client's favour he should be allowed to uphold the same on the ground that in the facts and circumstances of this case no sufficient grounds were made out whereby the learned Judge could be satisfied that there was sufficient cause for the plaintiff's non-appearance when the suit was called on for hearing. According to Mr. Sinha the order can be supported without filing a cross-objection by his client. In my opinion, such a contention of Mr. Sinha is fallacious and cannot be accepted. Mr. Sinha contends that he is relying on the conclusion arrived at by the learned Judge. In my opinion, the learned Judge could have come to his conclusion and made the conditional order only after he had satisfied himself about the sufficient cause being made out by the plaintiff for his non-appearance. It was only under such circumstances that the learned Judge could have made such a conditional order. If Mr. Sinha would be allowed to challenge the finding of the learned Judge regarding his satisfaction about the plaintiff's making out the sufficient cause for non-appearance then Mr. Sinha would in effect be permitted to challenge the conclusion and not to support it; because, in the event of Mr. Sinha's contention being upheld then the conclusion arrived at by the learned Judge could not remain effective. If Mr. Sinha's contention is right that the learned Judge was wrong in arriving at his satisfaction that there was sufficient cause for the plaintiff's non-appearance then in that event the whole order will necessarily be different because Mr. Sinha's attack would go to demolish the entire order. That being so, in my opinion, Mr. Sinha cannot be permitted to reopen the question of the Court's satisfaction as to the existence of sufficient cause. I, accordingly, reject the contention of Mr. Sinha on this point.

30. That being the position, the appeal must be and is hereby allowed. The order of dismissal of the suit is set aside and the suit is restored to the list. Let the suit be mentioned before the trial Court for fixing an early date and the matter be proceeded with thereafter.

31. In any event, the plaintiff-appellant must bear and pay the costs to the defendant-respondent in respect of the application for restoration and for costs thrown away, if any, by reason of the dismissal for default of appearance being set aside. There will be no order as to costs of this appeal.

HAZRA, J.:— 32. I agree with my Lord that his appeal should be allowed. As some interesting points have been urged in this appeal I wish to express my views also.

33. It is not necessary to state the facts as my learned brother has dealt with the same in his judgment. I will only say that the appellant is a foreign company incorporated in Canada. The appellant company as plaintiff instituted a suit in this Court on Sept. 23, 1973 claiming, inter alia, for a decree adjudging a bond dated Oct. 31, 1963 and the extensions of the bond as void and an order directing the bond to be delivered up and cancelled. There was also a prayer for perpetual injunction restraining the defendant No. 1, Punjab National Bank Limited and its agents and servants from giving effect to the bond or from making any payment thereunder to the State of Uttar Pradesh.

34. After filing the suit the plaintiff obtained an interim order restraining the State of Uttar Pradesh from giving effect to the bond or from making any payment under it till the disposal of the suit. After the interim order the State of Uttar Pradesh was added as a party to the suit. The plaint was amended to include relief against the second defendant.

35. The suit appeared in the peremptory list for hearing on several days. Several adjournments were taken. Ultimately, the suit appeared in the peremptory list on June 7, 1976. On June 8, 1976 the suit was called on for hearing. As the witnesses from Canada were not available the learned counsel for the plaintiff wanted leave of the Court to retire. Such leave was granted and the suit was dismissed on June 8, 1976 by the learned Judge. On June 9, 1976, a petition was filed by the constituted attorney of the plaintiff at Calcutta for setting aside or recalling the order of dismissal of the suit on June 8, 1976. In the petition prayer was also made for adjournment of the suit for a period of two months or for such other time as this Court may deem fit and proper in order to enable the petitioner to get its witnesses from Canada or to take out an application for issue of commission. Prayer was also made for injunction restraining the defendant, its agents and servants from giving effect to the bond dated October 31, 1963 or acting in terms thereof or in accordance therewith. Prayer for stay of operation of the order dated June 8, 1976 was also made.

36. In the petition it is stated, inter alia, that on June 8, 1976 M/s. Orr, Dignam & Co. received a Telex message from the petitioner in reply to the request made to the petitioner by Mr. Silverston, a senior partner of M/s. Orr, Dignam & Co. who was then in U. K. A copy of the Telex message is annexed to the petition and the same is set out hereunder.

"We have been informed this morning by Mr. Silverston from London England about court action scheduled tomorrow Re: Yamuna Hydel Projects since we have received no prior notification we ask that the action be deferred until we receive legal advice to prepare Mr. (50) Silverston is contacting you directly with the same instructions we will wait for further advice from you O. G. Opier, Vice-President, Foundation Overseas Ltd. L Yonge Street Toronto Canada Tel. 416 361 4836."

The case of the petitioner is that there was and is sufficient cause for the petitioner for not being able to appear at the time of hearing and the said order dated June 8, 1976 should be set aside or recalled. In that application the learned Judge, on June 25, 1976, made the following order:

"It is ordered that upon the plaintiff depositing on or before the second day of July next the sum of Rupees Seven Lacs and fifty thousand in cash only with the Registrar of this Court the order of dismissal of suit dated the Eighth day of June instant be recalled and that this suit shall appear in the list on the fifth day of July next and it is further ordered that the interim order of the appeal court shall continue till one week from the date hereof and that the parties herein be at liberty to mention before this Court for having an early date fixed for hearing of this Court and it is further ordered that in default of furnishing such security within the time as aforesaid this application shall stand dismissed. And it is further ordered that in any event the plaintiff do pay to the parties appearing as aforesaid their respective costs of and incidental to this application to be taxed by the Taxing Officer of this Court. And it is further ordered that all parties concerned do act on a copy of the minutes of this order signed by an officer of this Court being served upon them."

37. Against this order dated June 25, 1976 this appeal has been preferred.

38. The first question for consideration in this appeal is whether the order dated June 25, 1976 is an appealable order.

39. Mr. Goutam Chakraborty for the appellant has submitted that this is a conditional order and as such it is appealable. He has referred to decisions in Mitra, Mukherjee and Co. v. Ajit Kumar Sarkar, AIR 1963 Cal 9 and Narayan Putapa v. Vaikunt Subaya, AIR 1927 Bom 1. He has also submitted that the order of the learned Judge is a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, because, the effect of the order is that it is a final order and as such it is appealable. He has referred to the Full Bench decision of this Court in Nurmul Hoda v. Amir Hasan, AIR 1972 Cal 449. He further contends that the order of the learned Judge was without jurisdiction and as such void, because in an application to set aside the order of dismissal of the suit under O. IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. the learned Judge passed an order to deposit in cash the sum of Rs. 7,50,000 with the Registrar of this Court on or before July 2, 1976. The order so far as it provided that in default of depositing of such security the application shall stand dismissed is also without jurisdiction, because, the learned Judge was not competent to make an order for furnishing of security in an application for restoration of the suit under O. IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C.

40. Mr. R. L. Sinha for the respondent, the State of Uttar Pradesh, on the other hand, has contended that under O. IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C., the Court can make an order setting aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit. The words 'or otherwise', according to Mr. Sinha, imply that the Court has power to pass any order other than an order for costs and so the learned Judge was competent to make the order granting security. He has also contended that there was no 'sufficient cause' for non-appearance of the plaintiff when the suit was called on for hearing.

41. An order under O. IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. rejecting an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit is appealable under O. XLIII-C of the Civil P. C. An order made by a Judge of the Original Side of the Court rejecting an application for restoration is also a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and as such it is appealable. The order of the learned Judge in the instant case is a conditional order. The effect of the conditional order is that if the sum of Rs. 7,50,000 is not deposited in cash in Court within seven days the application shall stand dismissed. The said sum of Rs. 7,50,000 is stated in the order as 'such security'. Thus the effect of non-compliance of the condition mentioned in the order is that the application for restoration of the suit is rejected unless the security to the extent of Rs. 7,50,000 is deposited in Court within the time mentioned in the order. The further effect of non-compliance of the condition is to deprive the plaintiff of a valuable right, viz., right to proceed with the suit. Therefore, in my view, the order is a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. The order finally determines the rights of the parties by dismissing the suit, unless the condition is complied with. So, appeal lies against the order on the same principle as laid down in the case of Mitra, Mukherjee and Co. v. Ajit Kumar Sarkar, AIR 1963 Cal 9 and the case of Chattu Lal Misser v. Marwari Commercial Bank Ltd., 30 Cal WN 298 : (AIR 1926 Cal 668).

42. The other question raised before us is whether the learned Judge was competent to pass an order under O. IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. imposing a condition that a sum of Rs. 7,50,000 must be deposited in Court by the plaintiff within seven days as security.

43. Order IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. does not provide for payment of security. It does not even say that the Court can order payment or deposit of money in Court by the plaintiff. It only says that the Court can set aside the dismissal 'upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.'

44. The power of the Court to make payment into Court which appears in O. IX, R. 13 of the Civil P. C. is significantly absent in O. IX, R. 9. Order IX, R. 13 provides that the Court may set aside ex parte decree 'upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise as it thinks fit'. Therefore, prima facie, the learned Judge was not competent to make an order for payment into Court or deposit the sum of Rs. 7,50,000 under O. IX, R. 9 of the Code as terms for restoration of the suit of the plaintiff which was dismissed.

45. Reference may be made in this connection to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Official Trustee of West Bengal v. Sachindra Nath Chatterjee, AIR 1969 SC 823. In that case Supreme Court laid down the law thus:

"Before a Court can be held to have jurisdiction to decide a particular matter it must not only have jurisdiction to try the suit brought but must also have the authority to pass the orders sought for." Here, question arises wherefrom the Court derived the authority or power to pass the order for furnishing security or payment into Court to the extent of Rs. 7,50,000?

46. On this point Mr. Sinha has argued that under O. XXV of the Civil P. C., the Court may, at any stage of the suit, of its own motion, order the plaintiff to give security for payment of costs likely to be incurred by the defendant. Did the Court make the order for security having regard to O. XXV of the Code? Obviously, this is not so. Because under O. XXV of the Code if the Court makes an order suo motu for security to be furnished by the plaintiff for payment of the cost of the suit of the defendant the Court must record the reasons for such an order. In the instant case no judgment has been delivered. The order is not a speaking order. The learned Judge was dealing with an application under O. IX, R. 9 of the Civil P. C. So, I am unable to accept the contention of Mr. Sinha on this point.

47. Mr. Sinha has also argued that the words 'or otherwise' in O. IX, R. 13 of the Code give the Court power or authority to make the order for giving security to the extent the Court has done. According to him, the Court has power to make any order other than to order for payment of cost by reason of the words 'or otherwise' in O. IX, R. 9.

48. Mr. Chakraborty on the other hand has argued that the words 'or otherwise' must be construed by applying 'ejusdem generis rule'. He has referred to several cases, viz., (1) Narayanan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1963 SC 1116 at p. 1118; (2) Kochuni v. State of Madras, AIR 1960 SC 1080; (3) George Da Costa v. Controller of Estate Duty, AIR 1967 SC 849 at p. 851 and (4) Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edition pages 298 and 300.

49. Mr. R. L. Sinha, on the other hand, has submitted that 'Ejusdem Generis Rule' is not applicable. Mr. Sinha has also cited several cases; viz., (1) Bai Nath Prosad v. State of U. P., AIR 1968 All 288; (2) National Association of Local Government Officers v. Bolton Corporation, 1943 AC 166 and (3) Morant v. Taylor, (1876) 1 Ex D 188 at p. 193.

50. Now, the question is what do the words 'or otherwise' mean in O. IX, R. 13 of the Civil P. C. There is no case directly on the point. The cases cited by the learned counsel are all cases on different statutes and constructions of the words 'or otherwise' were made under entirely different context. So it is not necessary to discuss the cases.

51. I shall now turn to O. IX, R. 9 of the Code and consider its applicability on the facts of the case before us. The words "shall make an order setting aside the dismissal" in O. IX, R. 9 indicate that the Court is bound to set aside the order of dismissal if the Court is satisfied that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance of the plaintiff when the suit was called on for hearing. The subsequent words "upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit" give power to the Court to pass the order setting aside the order of dismissal on terms. The legislature has given a discretion to the Court as to the terms on which the order for setting aside shall be passed in the case before it. The Court may pass order on terms as to payment of cost or 'otherwise'. The meaning of the word 'otherwise', according to Oxford Advanced Learners' Dictionary of Current English is "in another or different way". The word 'otherwise' means according to Bleak's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition page 1253 "in a different manner, in another way, or in other ways". So, although there is a discretion to impose terms, such discretion is as to costs in one or other way. In the instant case, as the petitioner satisfied the Court that there was sufficient cause for setting aside the order of dismissal, the Court could impose terms as to costs or any amount as to costs in another or different way. On the facts of this case the defendant could not claim any amount other than costs from the plaintiff. The Court has not said in the order that the Court is ordering such payment as costs. The Court could not impose a term for payment in Court of Rs. 7,50,000 in cash as costs or as security. Cost means either taxed cost or assessed cost. Such large amount cannot be either taxed or assessed cost. So, although there is great force in the contention of Mr. Chakra-borty it seems to me that it is not necessary to decide the question as to whether "Ejusdem Generis Rule" will apply in construing the words 'or otherwise', because whether the rule applies or not, under the facts and circumstances of the case, there is no doubt in my mind that the learned Judge could not pass such order for deposit of the sum of Rupees 7,50,000 or for furnishing the said amount as security under O. IX, R. 9. I am unable to accept the submission of Mr. Sinha on this point.

52. Mr. Sinha then argued that there was no sufficient cause. I do not agree. It is also difficult to follow how this argument can be made. If there was no sufficient cause then the learned Judge should have dismissed the petition for setting aside the order of dismissal. In that case question imposing any terms would not arise. But the learned Judge imposed terms as he was satisfied that there was sufficient cause for restoration of the suit. There is no reason for me to differ from the view of the learned Judge on the point that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance. In any event, I am of the same opinion. The telex dated June 8, 1976 and the cause title of the plaint indicate that the address of the plaintiff was changed. From the above fact one can reasonably infer that the letters of Orr, Dignam & Co. did not reach the plaintiff in time. But with regard to the exercise of discretion by the learned Judge with regard to the terms for setting aside the order of dismissal, it seems to me that the learned Judge failed to exercise his discretion judicially in accordance with the provisions of O. IX, R. 9.

53. In the premises, I also agree with the order passed by my Lord in this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 437

M. M. DUTT AND SHARMA, JJ.

12, I. C. Bose Road Tenants' Association, Appellant v. Collector of Howrah and others, Respondents.

F. M. A. T. No. 1760 of 1977, D/- 7-9-1977.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Who can apply — Whether an association of tenants of premises sought to be acquired has locus standi to challenge declaration under S. 6 of Land Acquisition Act. (Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 6).

IU/IU/D533/77/VSS

The condition precedent to the granting of any relief under Art. 226 is the existence of a fundamental or legal right of a person and the infringement of such right. The right which is the foundation of an application under Art. 226 is a personal and individual right. The legal right may be a statutory right or a right recognised by the law. (Para 4)

After the notification under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act, stating that lands comprised in certain premises were likely to be acquired was published, the tenants of the said premises formed themselves into an Association and got it registered. Thereafter, the association (appellant herein) in its own name filed a writ petition challenging the declaration under S. 6 of the Land Acquisition Act.

Held: the persons who will be affected by the acquisition of the lands comprised in the said premises are the tenants occupying the same besides the owner thereof, but surely not the appellant. The appellant has no legal right and therefore there is no question of the infringement of a legal right. The appellant has no interest in the land and premises sought to be acquired and is not, therefore, a person aggrieved, and has no locus standi to maintain the writ petition. AIR 1976 SC 1163, Distinguished. (Para 4)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — W. B. Societies Registration Act (26 of 1961), S. 19 (1) — Writ petition by Society in its own name — Not maintainable — Society can only sue in the name of its President, Secretary, or authorised Office-bearer. (Para 5)

(C) Land Acquisition Act (1898), S. 6 (1) Second Proviso — General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (31) — Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority is local authority — Fund in its hands is local fund.

Fund in the hands of the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority (C. M. D. A.) is a local fund within the meaning of S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act and the C. M. D. A. is a local authority. (Para 8)

There can be no doubt that the C. M. D. A. is an authority and comes within the expression "other authority" under S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act. The C. M. D. A. is a statutory authority and has been created by the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority Act, 1972.

It has power to act within a specified area for the development of that area. Under the statute by which it has been created it is legally entitled to the control or management of its fund. If a statutory authority which has power to act within a specific or local area for the development of that area, which is one of the governmental functions ordinarily entrusted to a municipality or a corporation by a statute, is entrusted with power to control and manage its own fund, such fund must be held to be a local fund within the meaning of S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act. AIR 1963 SC 1890, Distinguished. (Paras 7, 8)

K. K. Moitra and Adyanath Ghosh, for Appellant; Susul Kr. Biswas and Supro-kash Banerjee, for Respondent.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— This appeal is directed against the judgment of M. N. Roy J. whereby the Rule Nisi obtained by the appellant on its application under Art. 226 of the Constitution was discharged.

2. The appellant who is described as "12, I. C. Bose Road, Tenants' Association" challenged a declaration under S. 6 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 which was preceded by a notification under S. 4 of the said Act. The notification under S. 4 was published on Dec. 2, 1974. It was inter alia stated therein that the lands comprised in the premises Nos. 12 and 16, I. C. Bose Road were likely to be needed for public purpose, namely, for the construction of the northern approach road in connection with the re-construction of the Buckland Bridge at Howrah at the expenses of the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority (hereinafter referred to as the C. M. D. A.). After hearing the objections filed by the interested persons including the tenants of the said premises under S. 5-A of the said Act, the declaration under S. 6 was published on December 29, 1975. In the declaration also it was stated that the acquisition would be made at the expenses of the C. M. D. A.

3. It was contended by the appellant in the writ petition that the C. M. D. A.

was neither a local authority nor a company, nor the money that would be spent by it for the acquisition of the lands comprised in the said premises formed part of the public revenues of the State Government as contemplated by the second proviso to S. 6 (2) of the said Act and accordingly, the acquisition sought to be made by the declaration under S. 6 was illegal, inoperative and void. At the hearing of the Rule Nisi, two preliminary objections were taken on behalf of the respondents, namely, that the appellant had no locus standi to maintain a writ petition challenging the declaration under S. 6 and that a majority of the members of the appellant having filed claims under S. 9 of the said Act, they had waived their right to call in question the legality of the acquisition. The learned Judge upheld the preliminary objections of the respondents and held that the appellant had no locus standi to maintain a writ petition and that as most of its members filed claims for compensation under S. 9, they had forfeited their right to challenge the acquisition. He also held that the C. M. D. A. was a local authority within the meaning of the second proviso to S. 6 (2) of the said Act read with S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act. Upon the said findings, he discharged the Rule and hence this appeal.

4. We may first of all consider the locus standi of the appellant to maintain a writ petition. After the notification under Section 4 was published on December 2, 1974, the tenants of the said premises formed themselves into an Association which is the appellant before us. The appellant has been registered under the West Bengal Societies Registration Act, 1961 and its registered office is at 12, I. C. Bose Road Howrah. Art. 226 provides for remedy for the infringement of a fundamental or legal right of a person. The condition precedent to the granting of any relief under Art. 226 is the existence of a fundamental or legal right of a person and the infringement of such right. The right which is the foundation of an application under Art. 226 is a personal and individual right. The legal right may be a statutory right or a right recognised by the law. The principles of law in this regard have been recently restated by the Supreme Court in Mani Subrat Jain v. State of Haryana, AIR 1977 SC 276. In that case, the Supreme Court has observed that it is elementary that no one can ask for a mandamus without a legal right. There must be a judicially enforceable right as a legally protected right before one suffering a legal grievance can ask for a mandamus. A person can be said to be aggrieved only when a person is denied a legal right by some one who has a legal duty to do something or to abstain from doing something. In the instant case, the persons who will be affected by the acquisition of the lands comprised in the said premises are the tenants occupying the same besides the owner thereof, but surely not the appellant. The appellant has no legal right and therefore there is no question of the infringement of a legal right. The appellant has no interest in the land and premises sought to be acquired and is not, therefore, a person aggrieved. The learned Judge has rightly held that the appellant has no locus standi. The decision of the Supreme Court in Union of India v. Jyoti Chit Fund and Finance, AIR 1976 SC 1163 has been relied on by the appellant. In that case, it was held that Government was a trustee in regard to the provident fund dues, pensions and other compulsory deposits till they were paid to the Government servant and the Government was entitled to maintain an objection to the attachment made of such dues, pensions, deposits, etc., under S. 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In our view, that case has no bearing on the question of locus standi of the appellant to maintain a writ petition.

5. Apart from what has been stated above, the appellant has another difficulty in regard to its locus standi. It has been already noticed that the appellant is a registered Society under the West Bengal Societies Registration Act, 1961. Under sub-s. (1) of S. 19 of the said Act every Society may sue or may be sued in the name of the President, the Secretary, or any office-bearer authorised by the Governing Body in this behalf. In view of S. 19 (1), the Society itself has no locus standi to maintain an action and consequently a writ petition. The writ petition was filed by the appellant as the petitioner and not by the President, Secretary or any office-bearer authorised by the Governing Body of the appellant. The appeal also has been filed by the appellant in its own name. On this ground also the writ petition is not maintainable, though this point has not been taken by the respondents either before the learned trial Judge or before us.

6. So far as the other preliminary objection against the maintainability of the writ petition founded on the forfeiture or waiver of the rights of the members of the appellant by asking for payment of compensation is concerned, it may be pointed out that there are some conflicting decisions of this Court on the point. We do not think that it is necessary for us to decide the same, for it has been already held by us on other grounds that the appellant had no locus standi to ask for any relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

7. In spite of the above finding as to absence of locus standi of the appellant we propose to consider the contention of the appellant that the C. M. D. A. is not a local authority and accordingly, the declaration under S. 6 (1) is illegal and inoperative. The second proviso to S. 6 (1) provides as follows:

"Provided further that no such declaration shall be made unless the compensation to be awarded for such property is to be paid by a company, or wholly or partly out of public revenues or some funds controlled or managed by a local authority."

Under the proviso, therefore, a declaration can only be made if the compensation is paid by a company, or wholly or partly out of public revenues or some fund controlled or managed by a local authority. It is not disputed that the C. M. D. A. is not a company and the money that may be paid by it on account of compensation does not form part of the public revenues. Unless, therefore, the C. M. D. A. is a local authority the declaration under S. 6 (1) will not be a valid one. The term "local authority" has not been defined in the Land Acquisition Act, but it has been defined in S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act which is as follows:

"(31). The "local authority" shall mean a municipal committee, district board, body of port commissioners or other authority legally entitled to, or entrusted by the Government with, the control or management of a municipal or local fund." There can be no doubt that the C. M. D. A. is an authority and comes within the expression "other authority" under S. 3 (31). In interpreting Art. 12 of the Constitution, the Supreme Court in Sukhdev Singh v. Bhagatram, AIR 1975 SC 1331 observed that the expression "other authorities" in Art. 12 was wide enough to include within it every authority created by a statute and functioning within the territory of India, or under the control of the Government of India.

Further it was observed that the expression 'other authorities' would include all constitutional or statutory authorities on whom powers were conferred by law. It is also not disputed by the appellant that the C. M. D. A. is an authority or "other authority" within the meaning of S. 3 (31). It has, however, been strenuously urged on behalf of the appellant that the C. M. D. A. is not legally entitled to, or entrusted by the Government with the control or management of a municipal or local fund. It is also argued that the fund in the hands of the C. M. D. A. is not a local fund. In support of its contention that the C. M. D. A. is not a local authority, strong reliance has been placed on behalf of the appellant on a decision of the Supreme Court in Valjibhai Muljibhai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1963 SC 1890. In that case, the question that came up for consideration was whether the Bombay State Transport Corporation was a local authority within the meaning of the second proviso to S. 6 (1) of the Land Acquisition Act read with S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act. S. 29 of the Bombay State Road Transport Act, 1950 provides that the corporation shall for all purposes be deemed to be a local authority. It was held by the Supreme Court that the Bombay State Transport Corporation was a company and not a local authority in spite of the provision of S. 29. As the Bombay Act did not receive the President's assent it could not override the definition of 'local authority' as contained in S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act. It was observed by the Supreme Court as follows (at p. 1894):

"It will be clear from the definition that unless it is shown that the State Transport Corporation is an 'authority' and is legally entitled to or entrusted by the Government with control or management of a local fund it cannot be regarded as a local authority. No material has been placed before us from which it could be deduced that the funds of the Corporation can be regarded as local funds. It was no doubt submitted by the learned Attorney General that the Corporation was furnished with funds by the Government for commencing for its business; but even if that were so, it is difficult to appreciate how that would make the funds of the Corporation local funds." Relying on the said observation of the Supreme Court, it has been urged on behalf of the appellant that the fund of the

C. M. D. A. does not constitute a local fund.

8. The C. M. D. A. is a statutory authority and has been created by the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority Act, 1972 which is an Act to provide for the establishment of an Authority for the formulation and execution of plans for the development of the Calcutta Metropolitan Area, for the co-ordination and supervision of the execution of such plans and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. Under the Act of 1972, the C. M. D. A. is to act within an area as described in the schedule of the Calcutta Metropolitan Planning Area (Use and Development of Land) Control Act, 1965. Under S. 3 (2) of the 1972 Act, the C. M. D. A. is a body corporate with perpetual succession and a common seal with power to acquire, hold and dispose of property, and to contract, and may sue and be sued in its name. Under S. 6 it may with the previous approval of the State Government borrow any money for carrying out the purposes of the Act or for servicing any loan obtained by it. Section 7 provides that there shall be a fund for the C. M. D. A. to which shall be credited such monies as may be paid to it by the State Government under the Taxes of Entry of Goods into Calcutta Metropolitan Area Act, 1972, and all monies borrowed by the C. M. D. A. and such other monies as may be paid to it by the State Government or any other authority or agency. Section 8 provides for sinking fund of the C. M. D. A. Under Cl. (c) of S. 15, it will be responsible for the supervision of the execution of any project for the development of any area within the Calcutta Metropolitan area, the expenses of the whole or any part of which are met from its fund. The C. M. D. A. is, therefore, a statutory authority which has power to act within a specified area for the development of that area. Under the statute by which it has been created it is legally entitled to the control or management of its fund. In our view, if a statutory authority which has power to act within a specific or local area for the development of that area, which is one of the governmental functions ordinarily entrusted to a municipality or a corporation by a statute, with power to control and manage its own fund, such fund must be held to be a local fund within the meaning of S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act. In Valjibhai's case referred to above, the Supreme Court found that the said transport corporation was not an authority within the meaning of S. 3(31) and there was no material before the Supreme Court to show that the fund of the corporation was a local fund. In our view, the said decision of the Supreme Court does not help the contention of the appellant. In the view which we take, there can be no doubt that the fund in the hands of the C. M. D. A. is a local fund within the meaning of S. 3(31) of the General Clauses Act and the C. M. D. A. is a local authority. The learned Judge, in our opinion, has rightly overruled the contention of the appellant that the C. M. D. A. was not a local authority.

9. Lastly, it is contended on behalf of the appellant that the respondents are to provide the members of the appellant with alternative accommodation. We are afraid, there is no provision in the Land Acquisition Act in regard to alternative accommodation. Reliance has been placed on behalf of the appellant on S. 31(3) of the Land Acquisition Act and R. 18 of the Rules framed thereunder in support of its contention for alternative accommodation. In our opinion, neither S. 31(3) nor R. 18 can, by any stretch of imagination, be said to provide for alternative accommodation in cases of acquisitions under the Land Acquisition Act as contended on behalf of the appellant. No other point has been urged on behalf of the appellant.

10. For the reasons aforesaid, the judgment of the learned Judge is affirmed and this appeal is dismissed, but in view of the facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no order for costs.

SHARMA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(A) Bengal Money-lenders Act (10 of 1940), S. 38 — Application under — Maintainability.

Where the applicant prayed for taking of account, for declaration that there was nothing due on loan and for declaration of amount due under loan if it was found that loan was not satisfied.

Held, that the application for such alternative declaration was maintainable under S. 38. (Para 7)

(B) Bengal Money-lenders Act (10 of 1940), Ss. 38 and 2(9) — Application under S. 38, against legal representatives of deceased lender — Maintainability.

The word "lender" in S. 2(9) includes legal representatives of deceased lender on whom the estate of the deceased lender including debt and its security devolves by operation of law. An application under S. 38 against L. Rs. of deceased lender is therefore maintainable. (Para 9)

(C) Bengal Money-lenders Act (10 of 1940), S. 38(2) — Appeal — Decision on maintainability of an application under S. 38 is not a declaration about amounts paid and payable to lender — No appeal lies against such decision — Revision lies. (Para 10)

Amiya Kumar Chatterjee and Abhijit Kumar Banerjee, for Petitioner; Tarak Nath Roy, for Opposite Parties.

ORDER:— This Rule is directed against the order dated August 30, 1976 passed by the learned Munsif at Purulia rejecting the petitioner's application under S. 38 of the Bengal Money-lenders Act, 1940. The facts in short are as follows:—

The petitioner borrowed a sum of Rs. 1,200/- by executing an usufructuary mortgage deed dated March 3, 1967 in favour of the lender late Balaram Mahoto in respect of 1 acre of kamali land. The said lender and on his death his heirs, the opposite parties had been in possession thereof by cultivation. According to the petitioner, the lender and his successors had realised Rs. 2,100 for paddy and Rs. 700 for straw in all Rs. 2,800/- during 1967 to 1973 i.e. more than double the principal. As such the petitioner was entitled to a declaration that nothing is due on the kotkobala (usufructuary mortgage deed). The application was accordingly filed on April 16, 1974 for a taking account of the said loan and for declaration that nothing was due to the lender or his heirs. In case the Court found that the loan was not fully satisfied, there was the alternative prayer for determination of the amount still payable by the borrower petitioner. The application was registered as Misc. Case No. 53 of 1974.

2. The opposite parties contested the application contending that the transaction was not a loan and consequently the application under S. 38 of the Act was not maintainable. It was also contended that the opposite parties were not the lenders under the Act and as such no relief was available against them on the said application. Further the annual income from the land less costs for production was Rs. 100/- for paddy and Rs. 5/- for straw, which for six years amounted to Rs. 630/- only. The application accordingly was liable to be dismissed.

3. The learned Munsif by the impugned order held that though the application was otherwise maintainable, the definition "lender" defined in S. 2 (9) does not include the heirs and successors-in-interest. The application under S. 38 of the Act was accordingly not maintainable and as a result the Misc. Case was dismissed. The present rule is against this order.

4. Mr. Amiya Kumar Chatterjee appearing with Mr. Abhijit Kumar Banerjee, learned Advocates for the petitioner contended that the learned Munsif committed an error in the exercise of his jurisdiction in holding that no relief under the Act was available against the legal heirs and successors-in-interest of the lender. He submitted that on correct interpretation, the word 'lender' should have been held as including his legal heirs and successor-in-interest who accordingly would be amenable to appropriate orders on the application under S. 38 of the Act.

5. Mr. Tarak Nath Roy learned Advocate for the opposite parties contended that the application for declaration that the lender and/or his legal heirs are indebted to the borrower on accounting is not maintainable in law. Further, the definition of "lender" in the Act does not include his heirs or successors-in-interest, so that the application under S. 38 is not maintainable and the borrower may have his remedy under the ordinary law of the land.

6. Mr. Roy referred to the decision in Srikanta Kumar v. Atul Krishna, 49 Cal WN 143: (AIR 1945 Cal 214) in which it was held that an application for settlement of debts under the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, 1936 made by an applicant while denying the debt itself was not maintainable in law. Mr. Roy referred to an earlier decision in Smt. Meherunnisa Bibi v. Satis Chandra, (1943) 47 Cal WN 894 wherein the Court held that in a proceeding under S. 38 of the Act, there can at most be a declaration that nothing is due under the loan but no declaration of any amount due from the lender to the borrower is permissible under the Act.

7. In the case before us the borrower in his application has prayed for taking account of the loan, for declaration that there is nothing due on the loan and also for declaration of the amount due under the loan if it is found that the loan has not been satisfied. There is no illegality in such prayer, as the Court is competent under the Act on an application under S. 38, which provides "for taking accounts and for declaring the amount due to the lender", also to declare on accounting that no amount is due to the lender. The application for such alternative declaration is thus maintainable in law.

8. The formidable contention urged on behalf of the opposite parties, which found favour with the learned Munsif, is that the word "lender" in sub-s. (9) of S. 2 of the Act "means a person who advances a loan and includes a money lender". It is said that while the word "borrower" in sub-s. (2) of S. 2 "means a person to whom a loan is advanced and includes a successor-in-interest of surety", these words are excluded from the meaning of the word "lender" not without significance. We shall now examine the contention with reference to other relevant provisions of the Act.

9. Section 28 of the Act in sub-s. (1) provides that when a loan is "assigned" to any person by the lender or his assignee, before such assignment, notice is to be given that the debt, agreement or security is affected by the operation of the Act. In sub-s. (3) it is expressly stated that the expression "assigned" in this section means an assignment inter vivos other than assignment by operation of law. In S. 29 it is also provided that the provisions of the Act shall continue to apply as respects any debt due to a lender or money-lender in respect of loans advanced by him, as also the benefit of agreement made or security taken in respect of such debt or interest, notwithstanding that the debt or the benefit of the agreement or security may have been assigned to any assignee, and references in this Act to a lender or money-lender shall accordingly be construed as including such assignee, subject to certain limitations and except where the context otherwise requires. It is thus obvious that while S. 28 applies to assignment inter vivos and not to assignment by operation of law, there is no such prohibition in respect of the provisions of S. 29, so that its provisions will apply to assignments by operation of law. Assignment by operation of law includes inter alia involuntary sales in execution, assignments upon bankruptcy as also cases of succession which is assignment by devolution of interest. Accordingly relief in respect of a debt by a lender in accordance with the provisions of the Bengal Money Lenders Act, 1940 will be available to a borrower against the legal representatives of a deceased lender on whom the estate of the deceased lender including the debt and its security devolves by operation of law. This interpretation is consistent with the beneficent objects the Act is intended to achieve.

10. Mr. Roy took a further objection contending that under sub-s. (3) of S. 38 an appeal is provided against a declaration under sub-s. (2), so that no application in revision lies against the impugned order. The contention, it appears, is unsustainable as an appeal lies against a determination contemplated in sub-s. (2) which has the force and effect of a decree as provided in the section itself. A decision on the maintainability of the application under S. 38 is not a declaration in respect of amounts paid and payable to the lender. As such a revision lies against such order as contended by Mr. Chatterjee.

11. The application of the petitioner under S. 38 of the Act against the legal representatives of the deceased lender is thus maintainable in law. The Rule accordingly is made absolute and the impugned order of the learned Munsif is set aside. The application will now be disposed of by the learned Munsif in accordance with law. Let the records be sent down at once.

12. There will be no order for costs in the Rule.

Rule made absolute.

Corporation of Calcutta, Plaintiff v. Pulin Chandra Daw and others, Defendants.

Suit No. 389 of 1960, D/- 19-8-1977.

Limitation Act (1908), S. 14 — Benefit of exclusion of period — When can be claimed.

In S. 14 the words "or other cause of a like nature" however liberally construed, must be read so as to convey something ejusdem generis or analogous to the preceding words "from defect of jurisdiction". Read along with the expression "is unable to entertain", such words would denote, that the defect must be of such a character as to make it impossible for the Court to entertain the earlier suit or application either in its inception or at all events as to prevent it from deciding it on the merits. AIR 1944 Lah 130, Rel. on. (Para 13)

Held, on facts, that the claim of the plaintiff in the prior suit having been adjudicated upon and disposed of on merits, it could not be said that the previous suit was misconceived or that the Courts were under any infirmity or there was any defect of jurisdiction or any defect of like nature which prevented the Courts from entertaining the earlier suit. The cause of action in the earlier suit was also not identical. The plaintiff therefore could not claim the benefit of excluding the period spent in prosecuting the earlier proceedings under S. 14. Case law referred. (Paras 14, 15, 17)

AIR 1929 PC 103	8
(1876) ILR 1 Cal 202	16

P. K. Roy with P. K. Ghosh, for Plaintiff; J. Mitra, for Defendants.

ORDER:— The point of law which arises for determination in this suit, is whether the plaintiff can take advantage of S. 14 of the Lim. Act, 1908 by reason of earlier proceedings and thereby save limitation?

2. The plaintiff instituted this suit on March 21, 1960. The case in the plaint is inter alia that in May 19, 1919, the then Corporation of Calcutta acquired premises No. 12, Naya Ratna Lane, Calcutta (hereinafter referred to as the said premises) for development purposes. The predecessor in interest of the defendants the then owners of the said premises, made an application for retention of a portion of the said premises as not being required for the said development purposes under S. 375 (2) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, then in force. After several proceedings it appears the owners as directed, elected to pay an annual fee of Rupees 1,641/- and the then Corporation of Calcutta refrained from acquiring the surplus land. It is alleged that the owners failed to pay the said exemption fee from March 24, 1951 till March 23, 1959 and the plaintiff as the successor in interest of the Corporation constituted under the 1899 Act become entitled to a sum of Rupees 13,128.00 p. for the said period with interest thereon at 6% p. a. aggregating to a sum of Rs. 15,884.88 p., which amount the plaintiff seeks to recover in this suit.

3. It is contended that no part of the plaintiffs claim is barred by limitation as the plaintiff had been prosecuting an earlier proceeding founded on the same cause of action with due diligence and good faith. A suit, being Suit No. 815 of 1952 was instituted by the Corporation in Feb., 1952 against the defendants for recovery of arrears of exemption fee for a period from March 1939 till March 1957, claiming the same to be a charge on the said premises. A mortgage decree was passed on January 12, 1956 by the trial Court in favour of the plaintiff on the basis that the said fee formed a charge on the said premises. On appeal, the decree was partly set aside on May 13, 1959 by the Appeal Court, which held that the said fee did not form a charge on the said premises.

4. The defendants filed a joint written statement in this suit. The defendant No. 2 died during the pendency of this suit and his heirs and legal representatives have been substituted in his place and stead as the defendants Nos. 2 (a), 2 (b), 2 (c), 2 (d) and 2 (e). The substituted defendants have also filed an additional written statement.

5. The defendants contend that the major part of the plaintiff's claim is barred by limitation. They deny that the plaintiff's cause of action in this suit is the same as in the earlier proceedings.

6. Mr. J. Mitra, learned counsel for the defendants conceded that the defendants were liable to pay the stipulated exemption fee from March 24, 1957 till March, 1959 aggregating Rs. 4,923/- and the said claim was not barred by limitation.

7. The only issue raised and settled at the trial was:— "Is the claim of the plaintiff for the period between March 24, 1951 and March 23, 1957 barred by limitation?" No oral or documentary evidence was adduced by the parties who contended that the answer to the issue would depend upon the construction of S. 14 (1) of the Lim. Act, 1908. The material part of the said section reads as follows:—

14. Exclusion of time of proceeding bona fide in Court without jurisdiction— (1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action and is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it,

Explanation I

Explanation II

Explanation III — For the purposes of this section misjoinder of parties or of causes of action shall be deemed to be a cause of a like nature with defect of jurisdiction.

8. Mr. P. K. Roy learned counsel appearing with Mr. P. K. Ghosh, for the plaintiff cited several decisions in support of his contention that the said section applied in the facts and circumstances of the present case and cited the decision Ramdutt v. E. D. Sasoon & Co. reported in AIR 1929 PC 103. It was held in this case that time taken for prosecuting a claim in good faith before an Arbitrator having no jurisdiction should be excluded when computing the period of limitation. To show that the same principle would be applicable even where proceedings are taken before a competent court of jurisdiction which for some reason or other is unable to pass a decree, Mr. Roy cited S. K. Dutt v. Purnachandra Sinha reported in AIR 1949 Cal 24 at p. 44 and India Electric Works Ltd. v. James Mantosh reported in AIR 1971 SC 2313 and contended that the phrase "other cause of a like nature" in the section must be construed liberally. Explanation III to the section contemplated cases of mis-joinder and non-joinder though strictly speaking, such cases could hardly be regarded as a defect of jurisdiction. Mr. Roy submitted that in the instant case, although there was no prima facie defect of jurisdiction, the fact that in the earlier proceedings a mortgage decree was wrongly passed on the basis of an erroneous finding of a charge, which was ultimately reversed by the Appeal Court which passed only a money decree, made the earlier proceedings defective in a manner as to bring it within the purview of the said section and he contended that the said period between the date of institution of the said suit in February 1952 and the final disposal thereof in Appeal in May, 1959, should be excluded when computing the period of limitation.

9. Mr. Roy lastly cited the case of Corporation of Calcutta v. Hindusthan Construction Co. Ltd. reported in AIR 1972 Cal 420 for the proposition, limitation in such a case would run from the date of the judgment of the Appeal Court.

10. He contended further, that in the absence of any issue, the prior proceedings must be held to have been prosecuted in good faith and the plaintiff should get the benefit of the said section.

11. Mr. J. Mitra, learned counsel for the defendants has contended on the other hand that to get the benefit of the said section the plaintiff had to establish that the subsequent proceedings were founded on a cause of action, same as in the earlier proceedings, and further that the prior suit could not be entertained by the Court by reason of a defect of jurisdiction or any other cause of a like nature. Mr. J. Mitra laid emphasis on the part of the section viz. that the Court must be unable to entertain the earlier proceedings.

12. Mr. Mitra next relied upon the decision in Siddalingana Gowd v. Bhimana Gowd reported in 68 Mad LJ 487 at pp. 489 and 490: (AIR 1935 Mad 731 at pp. 732-733) for the proposition that for the application of S. 14 of the Lim. Act, the proceeding must have failed on the ground of want of jurisdiction or other defect of like nature. In the decision cited the plaintiff's claim was prima facie barred by limitation, but the plaintiff claimed the benefit of S. 14 in respect of the period during which the matter was pending in second appeal and in respect of the period during which they were prosecuting diligently earlier proceedings by way of a claim for restitution, and the Court held "the mere fact that the plaintiffs might have honestly believed that they could get all that they are entitled to by way of proceeding in restitution will not suffice to give them the benefit of S. 14."

13. Moreover in the instant case, both the Trial Court and the Appeal Court decided the earlier suit on merits, the only finding of the Appeal Court was that S. 357 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899 did not create any charge in favour of the plaintiff and the plaintiff was not entitled to claim a charge. As such, neither Court was prevented from entertaining the proceedings. Mr. Mitra places reliance on that part of the Judgment of the Appeal Court where it was stated as follows:—

"As I have held that the plaintiff respondent is not entitled to get a mortgage decree, it becomes necessary for the purpose of determining the amount for which a decree may be passed in favour of the plaintiff respondent, to consider the question as to which Article of the Lim. Act govern this claim. The learned counsel for the parties have agreed that Art. 120 is applicable to the facts of this case and they are also agreed that the sum of Rs. 9,846/- is the sum to which the plaintiff respondent is entitled in the event of this court holding that the plaintiff is not entitled to a mortgage decree but only to a money decree. The appeal is therefore, allowed, in part".

In support of his contentions Mr. Mitra further cited the case of Madan Mohan Jew v. Bejoyabati Dassi reported in AIR 1954 Cal 202. Here the Court held that if an application under O. 21, R. 89 of the Civil P. C., was dismissed on the ground that the required deposits have not been made in time, such dismissal would be on merits and not due to "defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature" within the meaning of S. 14 of the Lim. Act. In such a case the applicant could not exclude time spent in prosecuting the earlier application for computing the period of limitation for a subsequent application under O. 21, R. 90. Mr. Mitra also cited Rajabapayya v. Basvayya reported in AIR 1942 Mad 713 where the plaintiff having failed in his petition for insolvency, filed a suit on the same cause of action. The Court held that S. 14 of the Lim. Act, 1908 was not attracted as the Insolvency Court had in fact entertained the earlier application on merits. Mr. Mitra contended that the case of India

Electric Works Ltd. (Supra) cited on behalf of the plaintiff was in the defendant's favour. Mr. Mitra lastly cited Jai Kishen Singh v. Peoples Bank of Northern India reported in AIR 1944 Lah 136 (FB) which was noted in the case of India Electric Works Ltd. It was held in that case that in S. 14 of the Lim. Act, the words "or other cause of a like nature" however liberally construed, must be read so as to convey something ejusdem generis or analogous to the preceding words "from defect of jurisdiction". Read along with the expression "is unable to entertain", such words would denote, that the defect must be of such a character so as to make it impossible for the Court to entertain the earlier suit or application either in its inception or at all events as to prevent it from deciding it on the merits.

14. On a careful consideration of the respective contention of the parties I find the defendant's case to be of more substance. In my view the claim of the plaintiff in the prior suit having been adjudicated upon and disposed of on merits, it can hardly be said that the previous suit filed in 1952 was altogether misconceived, or that the Courts were under any infirmity or there was any defect of jurisdiction or any defect of like nature which prevented the Courts from entertaining the earlier suit.

15. It also appears to me that the cause of action in this suit being a claim for arrears of exemption fees from March, 1951 till March, 1959 is not identical with the cause of action in the earlier proceeding which comprised a claim for arrear fees from March, 1939 till March, 1957.

16. For the proposition that a claim for each year's rent constituted by itself a separate and entire cause of action Mr. Mitra cited Nobo Doorga Dossee v. Foyzbux Chowdhury a case reported in (1876) ILR 1 Cal 202 and also relied on a passage in Mulla's Code of Civil Procedure (13th Edition) at p. 58.

17. For the reason above, I hold that the plaintiff's claim for arrears of fees from March, 1951 till March, 1957 is barred by limitation and the plaintiff is not entitled to exclude the period spent in the earlier proceedings in Suit No. 815 of 1952 and the appeal from the decree therefrom for computing the period of limitation under S. 14 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. I answer the only issue accordingly, in the negative and in favour of the defendant.

18. There will however be a decree in favour of the plaintiff for the undisputed sum of Rs. 4,923/- being arrear fees from March 1957 to March, 1959, interim interest and interest on Judgment thereon at the rate of 6% per annum and costs. The only issue raised having been answered in favour of the defendant, I was at first not minded to allow costs to the plaintiff, but the said sum of Rs. 4,923/- admittedly due has not been deposited in Court, and the plaintiff being a public body whose statutory dues have remained unpaid without any justification I allow such costs.

Order accordingly.

Bhabatosh Battacharyya and another, Petitioners v. First Industrial Tribunal and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 228 of 1976, D/- 1-8-1977.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Scope — Interference with award of Industrial Tribunal — Non-exercise of jurisdiction — What amounts to.

Unless it is found that the Industrial Tribunal has committed an error of law or acted without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction or contrary to the principles of natural justice the High Court cannot interfere with the Award. In other words, even if it is found that the Tribunal had gone wrong in appreciating the evidence that is not a ground of interference under Art. 226.

The Tribunal took up the dispute referred to it for adjudication. The Tribunal went into the evidence tendered by both the parties both oral and documentary. Having considered all the evidence, the Tribunal came to the finding that, on the materials on record, it was not possible for it to come to any positive conclusion and answer the question referred to it for adjudication.

Held that, that was not a failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. (Paras 10, 9)

Nigam Chakraborty, for Petitioners; Biswarup Gupta, for Respondent No. 4.

ORDER:— In this Rule the petitioner challenges an Award dated the 29th September, 1975 passed by the First Industrial Tribunal, Calcutta. The facts relating to the making of the Award may be briefly noted.

IU/IU/D407/77/ABU

2. In the year 1965, the petitioner joined the respondent No. 4 Alkali and Chemical Corporation of India Limited in its Engineering Purchase Supply and Distribution Department as a Grade 'D' Clerk. Thereafter the petitioner was upgraded to Grade 'C' in the year 1967. Between 1967 and 1968 one S. K. Mondal a Supernumerary Staff of Grade 'A' who had been working in the Raw Materials Procurement Unit during this period was sent on deputation to the Central Engineering Department of the respondent No. 4 at its Head Office at Calcutta. During this period of deputation of Shri Mondal, the petitioner admittedly performed the duties and functions which were previously being done by Shri Mondal in the Raw Materials Procurement Unit. Thereafter sometime in 1970 the petitioner No. 1 was promoted from Grade C to Grade B.

3. Thereafter both the petitioner No. 1 and the petitioner No. 2 which is the Workers' Union made representations to the Company for promotion or upgrading of the petitioner No. 1 to Grade 'A'. This was not done. Thereafter a dispute was sought to be raised with the Labour Commissioner, West Bengal regarding this question.

4. By an order dated the 22nd June, 1973 passed by the State Government the following dispute was referred to the First Industrial Tribunal for adjudication.

"To what grade Sri B. Bhattacharjee is entitled to be placed in conformity with the nature of job entrusted to him and from what date? What relief, if any, is he entitled to?"

On this reference the First Industrial Tribunal came to the following conclusion in its Award. "As a result of my finding as above, I hold that it is not possible to find out in which grade Shri B. Bhattacharjee is entitled to be placed. As a result he is not entitled to any relief. But this will not preclude Shri Bhattacharjee from receiving officiating pay, etc., if the job is considered by the company to be an A grade job in future".

It is this Award of the First Industrial Tribunal which is challenged before me in the present application.

5. Mr. Nigam Chakraborty, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners challenged the Award on several grounds. In the first place, he sought to contend that the Tribunal had failed to exercise a jurisdiction which is vested in it by law. In other words, it was the contention that a dispute having been referred to the Tribunal it was its duty to adjudicate thereon. Mr. Chakraborty submitted that the Tribunal had failed to exercise his jurisdiction. He also placed strong reliance on the fact that Shri S. K. Mondal who was admittedly a member of the 'A' grade Staff of the respondent No. 4 having been sent on deputation the petitioner performed his duties and functions. In such circumstances, the Tribunal should have held that the petitioner No. 1 was entitled to be placed in 'A' grade post. He further submitted that a Works Study Report which is referred to in the Award of adjudication was not filed. It was further submitted that one Shri Rajaraman whose name is mentioned in the Award was not examined. Lastly he submitted that there was no evidence that the job that the petitioner No. 1 was doing was not an 'A' grade job.

6. Mr. Biswarup Gupta, learned Counsel appearing for the respondent No. 4 drew my attention to certain parts of the Award which are worth setting out:

"Shri Bhattacharjee examined himself as P. W. 1 in his examination-in-chief he did not specify what are his jobs and what are their nature. He was also silent as to the jobs of other A grade Assistants in other Import Sections of the company. Annexure C/2 to the written statement has been marked Ext. 6. It has not been claimed by Shri Bhattacharjee in his deposition that the jobs detailed in Ext. 6 are jobs done by him. Assuming that these are the jobs entrusted to Shri Bhattacharjee I have to ascertain from other materials on record that these jobs are comparable to the jobs of other A grade Assistants in Import Licence Section of the company. Unfortunately there is absolutely no material on record that what are the jobs of the A grade Import Licence Assistants of the Company. The Tribunal is not in a position to evaluate and assess the jobs done by a particular Assistant unless there are other comparable materials before the Tribunal. Being faced with this problem this Tribunal is not in a position to arrive at the finding what should be gradation of Shri Bhattacharjee in accordance with the jobs entrusted to him."

The Tribunal goes on to observe as follows:

"In this context the conduct of Shri Bhattacharjee is also very material. It is admitted that Shri Bhattacharjee was transferred to Plastics (S & D) Department in 1968. He raised the claim that he should be upgraded for the first time on 23rd July, 1971. From 1968 to 1971 Shri Bhattacharjee made no grievance relating to his grade. Of course, he told in his deposition that he claimed to be posted in A grade orally. But that claim is not substantiated by subsequent correspondence between him and the management. It is also interesting to note that on 16th October, 1969 Shri B. Bhattacharjee applied against a vacancy in B grade. It will appear from Ext. 7, the Memorandum of Settlement between the company and the union, that there is a provision for deputation allowance. During these long years Shri Bhattacharjee never claimed any deputation allowance. These facts are loud enough to say that Shri Bhattacharjee's claim to A Grade post is an afterthought."

7. Relying on these observations in the Award, Mr. Biswarup Gupta submitted that on this state of evidence before the Tribunal it was not possible for it to come to the conclusion as to whether the petitioner No. 1 was entitled to be put in 'A' grade as claimed by him. It was further pointed out by Mr. Gupta that the Works Study Report on which the petitioner No. 1 himself relies says that the petitioner No. 1 is fit for 'B' grade job.

8. In my view, the contention of Mr. Gupta for the respondent No. 4 should succeed. As the Tribunal has itself recorded the petitioner No. 1 who examined himself was entirely unable to furnish any evidence before the Tribunal as to the precise nature of the jobs which he was performing. He was further unable to provide any material to the Tribunal as to what types of jobs which were being performed by the 'A' grade Assistants of the Company. In that state of evidence I am unable to see how the Tribunal could have come to a finding that the petitioner was fit to be placed in an 'A' grade job.

9. I reject the contention of Mr. Chakraborty that the Tribunal had failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. As would appear from the facts narrated above the Tribunal took up the dispute referred to it for adjudication. The Tribunal went into the evidence tendered by both the parties both oral and documentary. Having considered all the evidence, the Tribunal came to the finding that, on the materials on record, it was not possible for it to come to any positive conclusion and answer the question referred to it for adjudication. That, in my view, is not a failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law.

10. I also accept the contention of Mr. Biswarup Gupta that conclusion of the learned Tribunal is based on an application of the evidence before it. It is well settled, as pointed out by Mr. Gupta, that the Tribunal has jurisdiction to decide rightly or wrongly. Reference was made in this connection to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of M/s. Parry and Co. Ltd. v. P. C. Pal reported in AIR 1970 SC 1334 as an authority for this proposition. In my view no detailed discussion of the law in this subject is called for. Unless I find that the Tribunal has committed an error of law or acted without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction or contrary to the principles of natural justice I cannot interfere with the Award. In other words even if I find that the Tribunal had gone wrong in appreciating the evidence that is not a ground of interference in this jurisdiction under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India.

11. In my view, the finding of the Tribunal pertains entirely to the domain of appreciation of evidence and does not disclose any error of law or perversity. I may further add that on the state of the evidence I find difficult to see as to what other conclusion the Tribunal could have come to.

12. In that view of the matter the contention raised on behalf of the petitioner fails.

13. In the result, this application fails and is dismissed. The Rule is discharged. All interim orders are vacated.

There will be no order as to costs.

Petition dismissed.

M/s. Shah Prabhudas Gulabchand and another, Appellants v. Eurasian Equipments & Chemicals Ltd. and another, Respondents.

Appeal No. 425 of 1976, Suit No. 139 of 1976, D/- 2-6-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 20 — Choice of forum by agreement for one place — Cause of action against one of defendants (non-party to agreement) arising in another place — Place of suing.

The specific provision in the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant made the contract subject to Bombay jurisdiction. The bank who was not a party to the contract was also made party (defendant No. 3) to the suit. The branch office of the bank was at Calcutta but the head office was at Bombay and part of cause of action against the bank also arose in Bombay. The balance of convenience for trial of the cause of action at least against defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was entirely in favour of Bombay Court.

Held, the place of suing in respect of enforcement of any claim under the contract was restricted to Bombay Court. The mere fact that the bank was impleaded as a party to the suit and the plaintiff had transaction with its branch at Calcutta would not entitle the plaintiff to file the suit at Calcutta. The question of balance of convenience of the defendant-bank in the facts and circumstances of the case lost a great deal of its importance. H. K. Mitter with P. Chatterjee, for Appellants; P. K. Roy, for Respondents; B. K. Chatterjee, for Dena Bank.

A. N. SEN, J.: This appeal arises out an order passed by Ajay K. Basu, J. on the 22nd November, 1976 dismissing the application of the appellants who happened to be defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in the suit for stay of the suit filed by the plaintiff in this Court, for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from proceeding with the suit, for revoking leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent and for other reliefs.

2. The plaintiff instituted this suit in this Court on the 26th April, 1976. In the suit, the prayer of the plaintiff is for a decree for Rs. 7,58,322.48 p. and in the alternative (i) a decree against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 or alternatively against the defendant No. 3 for Rupees 1,77,106.44 p. with interest thereon @ 12% per annum or at such other rate as may be prescribed from June 28, 1973 till the institution of the suit, (ii) an enquiry into the damages as pleaded in para. 11 of the plaint and decree for such sum as may be found due to the plaintiff, interest and other reliefs.

3. The plaintiff also prayed for leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent and under O. II, R. 2 of the Civil P. C. The plaintiff entered into a contract with the defendant No. 2 who is the sole proprietor of the defendant No. 1. The said contract was in writing and under the said contract the plaintiff agreed to buy and the defendants were to sell 10,000 Kgs. of Chloramphenicol Powder I. P. to be supplied during the months of April, May, June, July and August, 1973 @ 2,000 Kgs. each month at the agreed price of Rs. 340/- per Kg. F.O.B. Bombay. Under the terms of the said agreement between the parties the plaintiff was to open in favour of the defendant No. 1 a confirmed irrevocable revolving Letter of Credit for Rs. 34,00,000/- equivalent to the value of 10,000 Kgs. of the said merchandise. The said contract contains a clause to the following effect:

"This contract is subject to Bombay jurisdiction."

4. In this suit the plaintiff's cause of action against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 is that the defendants instead of supplying Chloramphenicol Powder have supplied Talcum Powder in breach of the said contract between the parties and on the basis of such cause of action the plaintiff has asked for refund of the money paid in respect of the said supply and also for damages. The plaintiff in this suit has impleaded Dena Bank as a party defendant being defendant No. 3. The cause of action of the plaintiff against Dena Bank is that in the event it be held that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had supplied proper materials then the said materials which went into the custody of Dena Bank must have been changed in the custody of the Dena Bank.

5. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 thereafter made this application for stay of this suit and also for revocation of leave under CL 12 of the Letters Patent. The said application of the defendant No. 2 was opposed by the plaintiff and also by the defendant No. 3. The learned trial Judge was pleased to dismiss the said application of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 by his order under appeal. It appears that the learned trial Judge did not deliver any judgment.

6. The principal contention of the appellants before us has been that in view of the specific provision in the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 2 that the contract is subject to Bombay jurisdiction, this Court should not entertain this suit. Reliance has been placed on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Hakam Singh v. M/s. Gammon (I) Ltd., AIR 1971 SC 740 and also decision of the Division Bench of this Court in the case of Sri Rajendra Mills Ltd. v. H. V. M. Haji Hasan Dada reported in AIR 1970 Cal 342. Reliance has also been made in this connection on two other decisions, one of which is reported in AIR 1977 Cal 20 and the other is a decision of the Andhra Pradesh High Court, reported in AIR 1962 Andh Pra 452.

7. Mr. Mitter, appearing on behalf of the appellants, has contended that in view of the specific covenant in the contract and in the light of the decisions in the above cases, the learned Trial Judge should have made an order staying the suit in this Court. He has further argued that the fact that Dena Bank has been impleaded as a party to this suit does not make any material difference and in support of this contention he has placed particular reliance on the decision of the Division Bench of this Court in AIR 1970 Cal 342 and he has drawn our attention to the following observation at page 342:

"It appears, however, as we have already stated, that the instant suit could have been instituted either at Howrah or at Salem and the plaintiff, by reason of the above contract, had validly waived its right to institute the suit except at Salem. In such circumstances, it is not open to the plaintiff to object to the order for return of the plaint for presentation to the Court at Salem. It is not also open to defendant No. 2 to object to the same course as the choice of forum in case of alternative forums, lies with the plaintiff and the plaintiff having debarred or precluded itself from going to any other Court except the Court at Salem which would be a proper Court as against defendant No. 2 also, it would not be just to allow the plaintiff, at the instance of any other party or under cover of its objection, to institute the suit except in the Court at Salem."

8. Mr. Mitter has also submitted that the balance of convenience in the facts and circumstances of this case is overwhelmingly in favour of the cause being tried in Bombay.

9. Mr. Roy, appearing on behalf of the plaintiff, does not dispute the proposition that if the contract contains a specific provision or covenant as to any particular forum where suits or proceedings are to be instituted in respect of or arising out of the said contract, the said covenant should normally be enforced unless there is good ground for not enforcing the same. Mr. Roy has contended that in the instant case as Dena Bank is a party to the suit the plaintiff could not possibly file the suit at Bombay. It is his contention that the suit as framed cannot be instituted in Bombay, as Bombay Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit against Dena Bank. He has also argued that the balance of convenience is overwhelmingly in favour of this Court for the trial of the case in so far as the plaintiff and the defendant No. 3, Dena Bank are concerned. Mr. Roy has submitted that the plaintiff had transaction with the particular branch of Denk in Calcutta and the said branch constitutes a separate entity and the suit in relation to any transaction with the said branch should be filed in a Court within whose jurisdiction the said branch is situated. In support of this contention that each branch of a bank constitutes a separate entity, Mr. Roy has relied on the decision of Privy Council in the case of The King v. Irvine Lovitt, reported in 1912 AC 212 and also on the decision of P. B. Mukharji, J in the case of Hansraj Bajaj v. The Indian Overseas Bank Ltd., AIR 1956 Cal 33.

10. Mr. Chatterjee, appearing on behalf of the Dena Bank has submitted before us that so far as the bank is concerned the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of this Court and the balance of convenience for trial of the cause of action in this case against the bank is overwhelmingly in favour of this Court.

11. In our opinion, in view of the specific provision in the contract making the contract subject to Bombay Jurisdiction the application of the defendants should succeed. The decisions relied on by Mr. Mitter clearly lends support to this view. The mere fact that the Dena Bank has been impleaded as a Party to this suit does not entitle the plaintiff to file this suit in this Court in breach of the specific provision contained in the contract. It cannot be said in the instant case that the Bombay Court will have no jurisdiction to try this suit against Dena Bank. The head office of Dena Bank is at Bombay and it also appears on the basis of averments made in the plaint that Part of the cause of action against Dena Bank also arises in Bombay. The plaintiff and the said defendants entered into the said contract containing the said specific provision regarding their choice of forum. Apart from the said specific provision in the contract, it also appears from the facts and circumstances of this case that the balance of convenience for trial of the cause of action at least against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 is entirely in favour of the Bombay Court. As the plaintiff who has the choice of forum is obliged to institute this suit in the Bombay Court in view of the specific covenant in the contract, the fact that Dena Bank who is not a Party to the contract is also made party to the suit does not authorise or entitle the plaintiff to file the suit in this Court on the basis of the said contract in breach of the specific provision contained therein. In view of the provision contained in the said contract, the choice of forum of the plaintiff is restricted only to Bombay Court in respect of enforcement of any claim under the contract or on the basis of the contract containing this special provision regarding forum. The question of balance of convenience of the defendant No. 3 in the facts and circumstances of this case, loses a great deal of its importance and the question of balance of convenience of the defendant No. 3 has also to be considered in the background of the entire facts and circumstances of this case. It cannot be disputed in our opinion that the Bombay Court has jurisdiction to try and entertain the suit. Even, the decision of P. B. Mukharji, J in AIR 1956 Cal 33 makes this position abundantly clear. We are further of the opinion that on a consideration of the entire facts and circumstances of this case, the balance of convenience for trial of the cause as a whole is overwhelmingly in favour of the Bombay Court.

12. In that view of the matter, the appeal succeeds. The order passed by the learned Trial Judge is set aside. There will be an order in terms of prayer (a) of the Notice of Motion and there will be an order staying the suit and all further proceedings thereon in this Court in terms of prayer (b).

13. In the facts and circumstances of this case we direct that each party will pay and bear its own costs.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.

Bhagatram Goyal, Plaintiff v. Gupta Cables Pvt. Ltd., Defendant.

Suit No. 45 of 1977, D/- 7-7-1977.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151 — Inherent jurisdiction — Disputed question of facts — Cannot be decided summarily under this jurisdiction. (Paras 3 & 4)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151 — Inherent jurisdiction — Stay of suit — Principles stated.

The court will prevent vexatious proceedings which would have the effect of preventing the due administration of justice and the general principle is that Court can and will interfere, when there is vexation and oppression to prevent the administration of justice being perverted for an unjust end. (Para 5)

The principles to be followed in such a matter are, firstly, mere balance of convenience is not sufficient ground for depriving the plaintiff of his choice of forum. Secondly, the court will have to be satisfied that by such stay the plaintiff will not suffer any injustice whereas action if continued the defendant in defending the action will be victim of such injustice as would amount to vexation and oppression which vexation or oppression will not arise if the suit is stayed. (1906) 1 KB 141, AIR 1956 Cal. 33, AIR 1976 Cal. 18, Followed.

(Paras 5 and 8)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 20 — Jurisdiction of suits — "Subject to jurisdiction of Court at particular place" — Effect of clause in contract on jurisdiction of competent Court.

It is well settled that the clause excluding the jurisdiction or vesting the jurisdiction of a particular forum does not oust the jurisdiction of the appropriate court. The jurisdiction of the Court to try a suit is vested in it by the letters patent or by the Constitution. The parties could not by any private agreement confer or take away the jurisdiction, but the Courts could compel the parties to abide by their contract if there is such a contract and if there is no circumstance indicating otherwise, the Courts would compel the parties to abide by their contracts. AIR 1962 An Pra 452, AIR 1977 Cal 449, Relied on. (Para 6)

Where therefore the plaintiff's suit in Calcutta High Court was sought to be stayed on the ground that the parties had contracted to raise disputes in Bhubaneswar Court itself and that the cause of action arose at Bhubaneswar itself.

Held, the defendant had registered office at Calcutta or Howrah and that he had some business connection with Calcutta or Howrah. Some witnesses of the defendants were available at Calcutta at some point of time and that though the defendant might face some inconvenience to defend the suit in Calcutta still such inconvenience would not amount to such vexation as would be described to oppression on it. So the suit could not be stayed under S. 151 of C. P. C. (Para 8)

P. K. Das with P. Chatterjee, for Plaintiff; P. K. Sen with G. S. Gupta, for Defendant.

ORDER:— On the 27th of January, 1977 the plaintiff filed this suit in this Court against the defendant claiming a decree for Rs. 1,17,100/-, for interim and further interests and for other incidental and consequential reliefs.

2. The suit is by the plaintiff who alleges that he is the sole proprietor of a business and he states that he resides at Bhubaneswar in the State of Orissa and carries on business in the State of Rajasthan. The suit is against the defendant, which is a private limited company. It is alleged in the plaint that the company carries on business, inter alia, at Bhubaneswar in the State of Orissa but has its registered office at No. 3 Jadulal Mullick Road, Calcutta within the jurisdiction of this Court. The plaint is based on certain monetary transactions and accounts stated. The accounts were contained in two documents in which there were the following endorsements: "Subject to Bhubaneswar Jurisdiction." It is apparent from the plaint that the cause of action as pleaded in the plaint, arose at Bhubaneswar and/or at places outside the jurisdiction of this Court. After the institution of this suit on the 27th January, 1977, writ of summons was served before the 13th May, 1977. On the 25th May, 1977, application was made under Chapter 13-A of the Original Side Rules of this Court for a summary judgment and thereafter on the 1st June, 1977 this application was made by the petitioner, the defendant herein. It is stated that after the institution of the suit another suit has been instituted on the basis of a counter claim by the defendant in the appropriate Bhubaneswar Court. In this application the defendant claims that the plaint be rejected or taken off the file and/or for stay of the suit. The prayers of the defendant are made on the following three reasons:

(a) It was stated that the registered office of the defendant was not within the jurisdiction of this Court, but at the material time the same had been transferred to Howrah and as such this Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

(b) It was urged that the plaintiff was not the sole proprietor of the business firm but was a partner thereof and the firm in question was an unregistered one, and as such incompetent to institute proceedings. Therefore, it was urged that the suit was liable to be dismissed.

(c) It was lastly but mainly contended that the entire cause of action had arisen outside the jurisdiction of this Court at Bhubaneswar and it would be vexatious to try the suit here and the suit should be stayed in exercise of the inherent power of the Court or under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

3. So far as the question whether the registered office is within the jurisdiction of this Court or not, there is serious dispute as to facts. The defendant denies that fact and states that the registered office had been duly transferred to Howrah. It refers to the appropriate resolutions and also to the copy of the letter which it wrote to the appropriate authorities for recording the transfer of the registered office. The entries in the Register of Companies however have not been produced. The plaintiff, who is still a share-holder and at one point of time was a Director of the defendant company, disputes this contention and this allegation. My attention was drawn to certain correspondence in which the plaintiff wanted to assert that the registered office had not been transferred from the place within the jurisdiction of this Court. In my opinion, a dispute of this nature should not be resolved in this application. If necessary such a dispute can be resolved as a preliminary issue at the trial of the suit. Therefore, I would not dismiss or stay the suit on this ground, but I would reserve the trial of this issue as a preliminary issue at the time of the hearing of the suit.

4. It was, then contended, as mentioned hereinbefore, that the suit was bad because the firm to which the plaintiff belongs, was an unregistered partnership firm and the plaintiff was merely a partner thereof. My attention was drawn to certain bills and vouchers and correspondence with Bank wherein the plaintiff and his son have signed describing themselves as partners of the firm. This again is disputed by the plaintiff. This is a question of fact. In my opinion, this question cannot also at this stage be summarily determined but should be tried as an issue at the time of hearing of the suit.

5. The main question in this case, however, is whether the suit should be stayed in the interest of justice. The principles upon which this power of the Court to stay suits is exercised are well settled. The decisions dealing with this point were again referred to me. The Court will prevent vexatious proceedings which would have the effect of preventing the due administration of justice and the general principle is that the Court can and will interfere when there is vexation and oppression to prevent the administration of justice being perverted for an unjust end, it was so observed in the case of Logan v. Bank of Scotland, (1906) 1 KB 141 at pages 149-150. The Court will stay a suit where to continue a suit will cause such injustice to the defendant applicant as would amount to vexation and oppression to him. This was the view expressed by P. B. Mukharji, J., as His Lordship then was, in the case of Hansraj Bajaj v. The Indian Overseas Bank Ltd., AIR 1956 Cal 33 at p. 35. Some of these authorities were reviewed by me in the case of Jokai Assam Tea Co. Ltd. v. V. S. Barg, 1976-1 Cal LJ 275: (AIR 1976 Cal 18), wherein it was stated that the Court had power under S. 151 of the Code to stay an otherwise competent suit. This power, however, had to be exercised sparingly and only for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court, and strictly within principles which the Courts have evolved. The first principle is mere balance of convenience is not sufficient ground for depriving the plaintiff of his choice of forum. The Second principle is the Court will have to be satisfied that by such stay the plaintiff will not suffer any injustice whereas the action if continued the defendant in defending the action will be the victim of such injustice as would amount to vexation and oppression which vexation and oppression will not arise if the suit is stayed. The facts of this case will have to be judged in the light of the aforesaid principles, referred to hereinbefore.

6. There is a further aspect of the matter, namely, that in this case the plaintiff has referred to though not relying thereon that there had been adjustment of account and in the document of such adjustment of account there is the expression "subject to Bhubaneswar jurisdiction." In the case of Libra Mining Works v. Baldota Brothers, AIR 1962 Andh Pra 452 the Division Bench of Andhra Pradesh High Court was considering the claim on a contract where a clause contained the expression "this contract is subject to Bombay jurisdiction". The Court held that the clause denoted that the parties had agreed to have the disputes arising out of the contract settled by the Courts in Bombay. The contract constituted contracting out of the right to bring actions in other competent courts. The aforesaid observations of the Andhra Pradesh High Court were relied on and approved of by the Division Bench of this High Court in an unreported decision in the case of Shah Prabhudas Gulabchand v. Eurasian Equipments and Chemicals Ltd. (Appeal from Suit, No. 189 of 1976: (reported in AIR 1977 Cal 449). It is well settled that clause excluding the jurisdiction or vesting the jurisdiction of a particular forum does not oust the jurisdiction of the appropriate court. The jurisdiction of the Court to try a suit is vested in it by the Letters Patent or by the Constitution. The parties could not by any private agreement confer or take away the jurisdiction but the Courts could compel the parties to abide by their contract if there is such a contract and if there is no circumstance indicating otherwise the Courts would compel the parties to abide by their contracts. In the instant case, however, this expression in the document is not, in my opinion, conclusive or decisive because this cause of action, as such, in its entirety is not based on the accounts stated or on any contract of this nature. But, this factor, in my opinion, may be taken into consideration along with other factors whether the suit should be stayed or not.

7. It has been alleged in the petition on behalf of the plaintiff that the suit should be stayed for the reasons which are enumerated in paragraph 10. It has been stated that the plaintiff is a permanent resident of Bhubaneswar and this fact is not denied. It is further stated that he had never resided in Calcutta. This, however, has been controverted. It is further alleged that the defendant does the whole of its actual business of production and manufacturing of cables and all contracts at Bhubaneswar. It is also alleged that the office of the defendant was in West Bengal. There is however some controversy whether it is at Watkins Lane, Howrah or at 3, Jadulal Mullick Road, Calcutta. But, undoubtedly, it is in the State of West Bengal. According to the defendant, the said office was only for the purpose of making formal correspondence and licence. The cause of action wholly arose at Bhubaneswar and all the dealings and transactions referred to in the plaint took place at Bhubaneswar. The settlement of account was also alleged to have been at Bhubaneswar. Therefore, the entire facts leading to the present cause of action took place at Bhubaneswar. The defendant petitioner has also given a list of several witnesses who may be relevant and material for the purpose of proving the facts in dispute in the instant case. It has been alleged that these witnesses are residents of Bhubaneswar and would be available at Bhubaneswar. The books, papers and documents including the letters which are relevant are also stated to be in Bhubaneswar. It has therefore been submitted that it will be oppressive and vexatious for the defendant to defend the action at Calcutta. It is further alleged that this would be inconvenient to the plaintiff. On behalf of the plaintiff it has been submitted that the books of accounts, papers and documents should be available at the registered office and therefore it has been urged that those documents cannot be available at Bhubaneswar. On the other hand, on behalf of the defendant it was submitted that such papers, books of accounts and documents could be kept at the relevant Branch Office and in fact, were kept there.

My attention was drawn to the relevant provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 which, according to the defendant, permitted such books of accounts, documents and papers being kept at places outside the registered office in the facts and circumstances of the case. My attention was also drawn to the Articles of the Association which permitted the Managing Director to keep such books of accounts, papers and documents at places outside and it was submitted that the Board of Directors had also decided to keep those documents and papers outside. The defendant also stated that the plaintiff had alleged in certain other proceedings beforehand that the books, papers and document were at the factory office at Bhubaneswar.

8. On these facts, the question, whether the suit should be stayed in this Court, will have to be determined. As mentioned hereinbefore, the true test is not the comparative convenience or inconvenience for the trial at a particular place. The balance of convenience is not sufficient ground for depriving the plaintiff of his choice of forum. Bearing that principle in mind it can safely be said from the facts as they appear, that the balance of convenience is in favour of trial of the suit at Bhubaneswar. It can also fairly be said, on the averments made, that the plaintiff will not be inconvenienced or the plaintiff will not suffer any injustice if the suit is tried at Bhubaneswar. But the only question that has to be decided is whether the defendant in defending the action will be victim of such injustice as would amount to vexation and oppression. It is not merely a question whether it will be inconvenient for the defendant to defend but whether the prosecution of the suit will amount to vexation and oppression of the defendant. Admittedly, the defendant has some business connection with Calcutta or Howrah. Its registered office is at Calcutta or at Howrah. Some of the witnesses defendant has mentioned, were available at some point of time at Calcutta in connection with attending the Board Meeting. On the allegations made in this case, though I am inclined to think that it would be inconvenient for the defendant to defend the suit in Calcutta, such inconvenience would not amount to such vexation as could be described as oppression on it. If that is not the position, then, in my opinion, by exercise of inherent power of S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure the suit should not be stayed at this stage. I would, therefore, direct as follows:

9. The defendant will be at liberty to file the written statement within a fortnight from this date but whether the defendant has registered office at Calcutta and whether the plaintiff is entitled to maintain this action being an unregistered firm or not, the defendant will be entitled to raise these issues along with other issues in the written statement and will be entitled to claim that these be tried as preliminary issues of the suit.

10. Costs of this application will be cost in the suit.

Application dismissed.

of Court directing registration of award
— If appealable.

Application for setting aside the award made by the Umpire was dismissed by the Court. The Court, thereafter, directed the award to be registered.

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to pass such order and that was not appealable under Section 39 read with S. 41 of the Arbitration Act. Even if the order was passed in the suit, it did not determine any of the rights of the parties finally. Hence such order is not appealable also under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent.

B. K. Bachawat, for Petitioner; Saraf, for Respondents.

HAZRA, J.:— This is a petition for an order that (a) leave be given to the petitioner to file the Memorandum of Appeal on his undertaking (i) to have the order dated Apr. 22, 1977 drawn up and completed within the period of limitation and to include the same in the Paper Book to be filed herein; (ii) to have a list of dates relevant for the purpose of limitation prepared and to have the same included in the paper Book to be filed herein; and (iii) to have the order to be made herein included in the Paper Book, (b) stay of operation of the order dated Apr. 22, 1977, (c) The respondent No.1 and/or his group, their servants, agents and/or assigns be restrained by an order of injunction from giving effect to or from acting under the order dated Apr. 22, 1977 in any way or manner whatsoever and (d) ad interim order in terms of prayer (b) and (c).

2. We will record that on Friday last, i.e., Apr. 22, 1977 after the order was passed by the learned Judge, Mr. B. K. Bachawat appeared before us for Bejoy Kumar Swaika and made an oral application that his client would be seriously prejudiced by the order of the learned Judge unless stay of operation of the order was passed immediately by us on the undertaking of his client to the effect that he would make necessary application to file a Memorandum of Appeal without certified copy of the order on Monday, Apr. 25, 1977 for stay of operation of the order. On the submission of Mr. Bachawat and in the presence of the learned counsel for Shyam Sunder Swaika and his group we stayed the operation of the order of the learned Judge till today without prejudice to the rights and contentions of the parties.

3. Mr. Bachawat is now moving this application and is praying for further stay of operation of the order. Mr. Saraf for Shyam Sunder Swaika and others submits that the order dated Apr. 22, 1977 is not an appealable order. In any event, the petitioner will not be prejudiced by the order and so the order should not be stayed. The minutes of the order dated Apr. 22, 1977 of S. Mukharji, J. is as follows:

"P. & A. Suit No. 191 of 1972
Shyam Sunder Swaika v.
Bejoy Kumar Swaika
Cor: S. Mukharji, J.
22-4-1977

THE COURT: The Registrar O. S. is directed to send the interim order Award dated 29-12-1976 for registration thereof to the Registrar of Assurance, Calcutta in course of tomorrow the 23rd Apr. 1977 at the costs of the plaintiff.

Registrar O. S. and parties to act on a signed copy of the minutes on the undertaking of the plaintiff's Advocate on Record to draw up and complete the order."

4. Mr. Bachawat submits that the Court had no jurisdiction to pass the order dated Apr. 22, 1977 as the order was passed in the Partition and Administration

Suit No. 191 of 1972 Shyam Sunder Swaika v. Bejoy Kumar Swaika in which reference had been made for arbitration under S. 21 of Arbitration Act. We are unable to accept the submission of Mr. Bachawat, because under S. 23 (2) of the Arbitration Act "where a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court shall not, save in the manner and to the extent provided in this Act, deal with such matter in suit." Under S. 25, the provisions of other chapters of the Arbitration Act shall so far as they can be made applicable apply to the arbitration under this Chapter. Chapter IV relates to arbitration in suits. Admittedly, in the instant case an interim award has been made by the Umpire Mr. D. K. De, Barrister-at-Law. Bejoy Kumar Swaika has made an application for setting aside the interim award. Order has been passed by S. Mukharji, J. dismissing the said application. Against that order an appeal has been preferred. In that appeal we passed an ad interim order on Mar. 23, 1977 to the following, effect:

"The Court: After hearing the parties and taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of the case we think that the proper order at this stage would be to restrain the respondents herein from obtaining the Judgment upon Award in respect of the Award filed by the Umpire, Mr. D. K. De, till the disposal of the appeal and we feel that the appeal should be expedited as follows:

Index will be settled within a week from date. Type-written or cyclostyled paper book to be filed within three weeks from date and the appeal to appear in the peremptory list on 19-4-1977. Costs costs in the appeal.

The above order will not in any way prejudice the parties to perform their rights and obligations under the award."

5. Thus, there was no order by us prejudicing the parties to perform their rights and obligations under the award. We only restrained Shyam Sunder Swaika from obtaining judgment upon award.

6. Mr. Saraf contends that under S. 23 of the Registration Act, the award shall not be accepted for registration unless presented for that purpose to the Registrar within four months from the date of making of the award. He invited our attention to a Bench decision of this Court in Aditya Kumar v. Narayandas AIR 1971 Cal 65 at p. 70 where this Court said:

"The document, that is the Award cannot now be registered under the Registration Act in view of the provisions in S. 25 of that Act. Much longer than 4 months have elapsed from the date on which the Award was signed by the Arbitrator. Provisions in S. 25 of the Registration Act are imperative and that time cannot be extended by Court."

He also invited our attention to the decision of the Supreme Court in Ratan Lal Sharma v. Purshottam Harit, AIR 1974 SC 1066 : (1974) 1 SCC 671 and contended that the award requires registration and if it is not registered it would be inadmissible in evidence for the purpose of pronouncing judgment in accordance with the award.

7. It is not disputed before us that the award has to be registered. So on the oral application of Shyam Sunder, the learned Judge made the above order for registration.

8. We accept the submission of Mr. Saraf that the learned Judge had jurisdiction to pass the order and that the order of the learned Judge is not appealable under S. 39 read with S. 41 of the Arbitration Act. Even if the order was passed in the suit as contended by Mr. Bachawat, then in view of the fact that the order complained of has not determined any of the rights of the parties finally, we hold that the order is not appealable under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. From whichever point of view, the matter is looked into, we are satisfied that the order is not appealable and as such we cannot grant leave to file Memorandum of Appeal in terms of prayer (a) of the petition.

9. We will record that we have heard the learned counsel for both the parties and we are further satisfied that in any event the petitioner will not be prejudiced by the order of the learned Judge, because the award has to be presented for registration within the time as provided under S. 23 of the Registration Act, read with Ss. 24, 25 and 26.

10. In the premises, the prayers made in the petition are rejected. This petition is dismissed with costs. It is recorded that Mr. Saraf's clients are not admitting the allegations in the petition.

11. Although we are dismissing this petition we are making it clear that since we passed an order on Apr. 22, 1977 staying the operation of the order of S. Mukharji, J. dated Apr. 22, 1977 till today and as the time for sending the award for registration under that order expired on Apr. 23, 1977, we are extending the time for registration till tomorrow. Let the Registrar O. S. act on a signed copy of the minutes, on the undertaking of Advocate on Record of Shyam Sunder Swalka to draw up and complete the order.

The State of West Bengal, Appellant v. Dhanesh Bijoy Sahana and others, Respondents.

A. F. O. D. Nos. 921-922 of 1964, D/- 18-3-1977.*

Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 23 (2) — Award of additional compensation — Duty of collector and court — Additional Compensation must be awarded even in absence of claim made therefor.

The Land Acquisition Collector and the Land Acquisition Judge, while fixing the compensation for certain land, omitted to award the sum of fifteen per cent on the market value of the land. In appeal by the State it was contended that as no cross-objection to the appeal was filed the plea in respect of the additional compensation could not be raised.

Held that the award of the additional compensation is a must for the court in view of the compulsory nature of the acquisition. Hence it was not necessary that any cross-objection be filed to agitate the claim. (Para 5)

N. C. Chakravarty and N. G. Das, for Appellant; P. N. Mitter; and S. K. Dutta, for Respondents.

BANERJEE, J:— These two appeals at the instance of the State of West Bengal arise out of a land acquisition reference. By notification dated 20th February, 1958, part of C. S. plot No. 244 of Khatian No. 212, Mouza Kenduadihi, was sought to be acquired. F. A. 921 of 1964 is in respect of garden, area being 2-70 acres and F. A. No. 922 of 1964 is in respect of Bastu and Tara land being 1.41 and 0.42 acres respectively. In making the reference to the Court under S. 18 of the Act, the Land Acquisition Collector stated that the valuation has been assessed on the basis of the sale figures of land sold in the Mouza and those have been obtained from the Registration Department and as per provision of the Land Acquisition Act. It is stated that the land was valued at Rs. 8,500/- per acre. The referring claimant not being satisfied filed an application under S. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act for reference. It must be stated that the lands were acquired under the relevant provision of the Act II of 1948. The Land Acquisition Collector assessed the valuation of the land in question at the rate of Rs. 142/- per cottah. The Land Acquisition Judge raised it to Rs. 300/- per cottah and thereupon this application was made. It must be pointed out that after the valuation has been fixed neither the Land Acquisition Collector nor the District Judge gave 15% compensation under S. 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act. It appears that the referring claimant did not claim the 15% compensation in his application for reference. The learned Judge, while he disposed of the reference, stated that the Land Acquisition Collector awarded at the rate of Rs. 142/- per cottah and that there was no material before the Court on what basis the Collector arrived at the valuation fixed by him.

*(Against decree of D. P. De, Dist. J., Zillah Bankura, D/- 23-3-1963).

IU/IU/D319/77/AYP/WNG

2. Mr. Chakravarti on behalf of the appellant contended that the learned Judge was wholly wrong in stating that there was no material before the Court to indicate the Collector's basis for arriving at the valuation fixed by him. He argued that in his reference to the Court under S. 18 of the Act it has been specifically stated that the valuation has been assessed on the basis of the sale figure in the Mouza and as such there was indication how the valuation was arrived at.

3. Mr. Mitter on behalf of the respondent however contended that under S. 19 (1) (d) of the Land Acquisition Act the ground on which compensation has been determined must be stated. In the order of reference one basis has been given under S. 19 (1) (d) of the Land Acquisition Act. S. 19 (1) (d) is in the following terms:—

"19 (1) (d), if the objection be to the amount of the compensation the grounds on which the amount of compensation was determined."

It has been held in the cases reported in (1902) 6 Cal WN 406, 34 Cal WN 599 : (AIR 1930 PC 201), (Benjamin Knowles v. The King) and 76 Cal WN 296 : (AIR 1972 Cal 225), that the Land Acquisition Collector must give the basis on which the valuation has been assessed. In the present case, it is stated that the valuation was assessed on the basis of sale figures in the Mouza and those have been obtained from the Registration Department but unfortunately when the respondent's witness came to the box neither did he say what was the value of the land nor did he file any document upon which the valuation was fixed by him. On the other hand he said that he has fixed the valuation. Ext. A which is a statement of structure and valuation does not show any detail as to the valuation of the land. No document was filed by the respondent to justify the valuation at the rate of Rs. 142/- per cottah. On the other hand the respondent has filed two documents in support of his contention that the valuation of the land should be assessed at Rs. 300/- per cottah. One of the documents which is Ext. 2 shows a sale of 5 cottas of land in the vicinity at the rate of Rs. 300/- per cottah. In our opinion, Ext. 1 does not give any clue and that being a document of 1948 cannot be any basis for coming into the valuation of the land in question. But Ext. 2 is a very relevant document. In our opinion, Ext. 2 gives a guidance to the Court for fixing the valuation of the land in question. It is true that the valuation of a small plot may not be a criterion for coming to the decision in respect of a larger area and it has been held by the Supreme Court in the case reported in AIR 1971 SC 2015 (Collector of Lakhimpur v. B. C. Dutta) that the large area of land cannot possibly fetch a price at the same rate at which small plots are sold. The witness No. 1 for the petitioner stated that there are two roads by two sides of the acquired plot. There are residential houses near the acquired plot. There is a school and Bankura Sammilani College. He also stated that the acquired land is worth Rs. 300/- per cottah. These facts have not been challenged at all in cross-examination by the respondent. In fact, reading the evidence of P. W. 1 and the Kobala together we are not inclined to vary the order of the learned Judge for the fixation of price of the land in question on this score. We, therefore, affirm the fixation of valuation by the learned District Judge in respect of the land in question at the rate of Rs. 300/- per cottah.

4. Mr. Mitter then contended that the learned District Judge should have allowed 15% compensation under S. 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act which the referring claimant is entitled to.

5. Mr. Chakraborty however contended that as the respondent has not filed any cross-objection to the appeal, the respondent is not entitled to raise this plea at all. Mr. Mitter contended that it is a duty of the Court or the Collector to give 15% compensation to the awardee and it is not for the referring claimant to apply for it. More so the provision of S. 8 (2) (a) of the Act II of 1948 was held to be ultra vires by this Court. In that view of the matter it is argued by Mr. Mitter that this question does not arise. In S. 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act it is stated that the Court shall award 15% compensation over the awarded money for the compulsory acquisition of the land in question. Section 23 (2) is in the following terms:—

"23 (2). In addition to the market value of the land as above provided, the Court shall in every case award a sum of fifteen per centum on such market value, in consideration of the compulsory nature of the acquisition".

Therefore, in our opinion, the award of 15% compensation is a must for the Court in every cases in consideration of the compulsory nature of the acquisition. In our opinion, the learned District Judge and the Land Acquisition Collector were wrong in not awarding 15% compensation and in that way failed in their duty to make the award in accordance with Section 23 (1) and (2) of the Land Acquisition Act and as the Appellate Court against the said award, it is our duty also to give effect to the statutory provision. It is not necessary, therefore, in our opinion, that any cross-objection should be filed for the purpose of agitating the claim for 15% compensation above market value of the land in question.

6. Before we allowed Mr. Mitter to argue this point about 15% solatium, Mr. Chakraborty wanted notice and the matter was adjourned, and thereafter we heard Mr. Mitter and Mr. Chakraborty on this point. After hearing Mr. Chakraborty and Mr. Mitter on this point we are of the opinion that the respondents must get 15% solatium under S. 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act.

7. We, therefore, dismiss the appeals filed by the State Government but vary the awards to the extent that over and above the awarded money, the respondents will get 15% solatium. The appellant must pay the 15% compensation of the market value and the said sum will carry an interest at the rate of 6% from the date of the award till the date of payment.

8. It is stated before us that the compensation money awarded in F. A. No. 922 of 1964 has already been withdrawn by the respondents on furnishing Bank guarantee. The Bank guarantee will stand dissolved after two months.

9. There will be no order as to costs.

R. K. SHARMA, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Kesoram Industries & Cotton Mills Ltd., Petitioner v. Union of India and others, Opposite Parties.

A. F. O. O. No. 234 of 1975, D/- 21-2-1977.

(A) Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 31 (1) — Writ of Mandamus — Maintainability of petition — No specific pleading that applicant's legal right was affected but right under Art. 31 (1) was in fact violated — Petition held maintainable.

Where a Company was given certain Cash assistance for exports in pursuance of Government circulars and the Government adjusted it against other liability alleging that the payment was wrongly made, it was held that such adjustment would offend the provisions of Art. 31 (1) and affect company's legal right to property and the application for issuance of appropriate writs was maintainable though it was not specifically pleaded that the Company's legal right had been affected. (Para 10)

(B) Evidence Act (1872), S. 115 — Estoppel — Undertaking to export certain percentage of total production — Subsequent assistance promised by Government — Withdrawal of such promise — Does not give rise to estoppel.

A Company was granted a licence by Government to import capital goods, one of the condition of licence being to export 15 per cent of its production and for due performance thereof the company had executed a written undertaking. Subsequent to the execution of the undertaking by the Company Government promised cash assistance to the Company. Withdrawal of such promise for cash assistance would not give rise to question of estoppel against Government on the ground that the Company exported its products on the basis of the subsequent promise and but for such promise it would not have exported the goods. AIR 1971 SC 1021, Ref. (Para 11)

(C) Contract Act (1872), S. 72 — Adjustment of mutual claims — Unilateral adjustment not permissible — Government paying certain amount as cash assistance to company but adjusting the amount against other liabilities on ground that the amount was wrongly paid — Adjustment held not permissible. (Original Order D/- 27-6-1974 (Cal), Reversed).

In the instant case the Government paid certain amount as cash assistance to a company in respect of exports during certain period. The Government was liable to pay to the company further sum in respect of subsequent exports. The Government adjusted the amount paid against its subsequent liability alleging that the amount was wrongly paid.

Held that when there is a dispute about mutual claims and no consent agreement between parties there cannot be an adjustment by unilateral action of one party. To allow one party unilaterally to adjust his alleged claims, which are disputed, against his debts to such other party will be to reverse the process of law and to put the aggrieved party to approach a court of law to remedy the illegal and wrongful act of the offending party. (Para 14)

In the absence of relevant documents which the Government having custody of the documents was required to produce before the Court and on the face of the circular about the cash assistance, it was not possible on the materials on record to hold that the adjustments depriving the company of their property in the form of money were patently with the authority of law. (Para 15)

When a dispute has been raised in respect of the cash allowance till such dispute is resolved by adjudication under the process of law, the Government on its own cannot make adjustments of such payments against other funds of the company lying with it. (Para 16)

In the view taken about the right of the Government to recover the cash assistance, the adjustment in the way done was set aside. (Original Order D/- 27-6-1974 (Cal), Reversed). (Para 16)

R. C. Deb, Prasanta Kumar Ghosh and Goutam Chakravarti, for Petitioner; Noni Coomar Chakravarti, Surathi Mohan Sanyal, for Opposite Parties.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This is an appeal from the judgment and order of Murari Mohun Dutt, J. dated June 27, 1974 whereby the connected Rule was discharged. On June 11, 1962 the Government of India granted an import licence to the appellant company for the import of capital goods (Plants and Machinery) valued at Rs. 35 lakhs for the manufacture of cast iron spun pipes. The licence was subject inter alia to the condition that the company would have to export 15% of its total production for six years starting from the date of regular production. The export obligation, as required, was secured by an undertaking of the company dated Aug. 4, 1965. It will appear from its statement of export performance, the production commenced from Jan. 1966 when the requisite export commenced and continued thereafter.

2. By a circular dated Aug. 17, 1966 the Government of India informed the Secretary, Export Promotion Council that it was decided to grant cash assistance against exports effected from June 6, 1966 the date of devaluation of the Indian rupee, on specified engineering products. Under that circular, there is no dispute (vide para. 12 of the petition, the company's claim in respect thereof is admitted in the affidavit-in-opposition para. 10 as substantially correct) that cast iron spun pipes, classified under ferrous castings would be entitled to cash assistance at the rate of 20%. The Joint Chief Controller of Imports and Exports of the Government (hereinafter referred as JCCI & E) issued cheques from time to time of sundry amounts as such cash assistance in favour of the company and during the period from July 1966 to June 1967 in all a sum of Rs. 2,81,267.00 as cash assistance was paid to the company by Sept. 18, 1967.

3. On June 4, 1969, JCCI & E informed the company that according to the then policy, no cash assistance was admissible against exports in discharge of export obligation in C. G. cases i.e. capital goods licences issued with prospective export obligation. By letter dated Dec. 28, 1970 the company was informed by JCCI & E that for export of Rubber Rings the company was considered entitled to cash assistance of Rs. 2,59,935/- for April-June, 1969, Rs. 1,76,256/- for July-September, 1969, for Rs. 1,00,497/- for October-December, 1969 and Rs. 59,579/- for January-March, 1970 all at 10%. Thereafter the company was informed by the said letter as follows:—

"You were paid an amount of Rupees 2,81,267/- against export of July, '66-June, '67 though you were under C. G. Licence obligation. So the entire amount of Rs. 2,81,267/- has been adjusted from the above cases viz. full amount of your A-J '69 exports i.e. Rs. 2,59,935/- and the balance amount of Rs. 21,332/- from your export of July-September, 1969. (Annexure 'K' to the petition).

4. It may be noted here that from a letter of June 12, 1970 issued by the Engineering Export Promotion Council to the Company, it appears that—

"... .. in supersession of the above instructions, on the above subject (i.e. Grant of Cash assistance against exports made in fulfilment of export obligations imposed on C. G. Licences), it has been decided to allow cash assistance under the scheme of cash assistance to registered exporters, in terms of instructions issued from time to time, against exports, effected on or after 1st April, 1966, onwards in cases when C. G. licences have been issued subject to export obligations and also subject to such conditions, as may be imposed in this regard"

The company's case is that on basis of the Government circular dated Aug. 17, 1966 the company had since exported engineering goods namely cast iron spun pipes and fittings on the faith and belief that it would "get the cash assistance mentioned in the circular." The company relied on the basis of the aforesaid circular declaring the Government policy and effected exports and thereby suffered detriment. Further the cash assistance were treated by the company as trade receipts and shown as such in its books of account whereon income-tax was paid. The decision to withhold and adjust cash assistance was wrongful, illegal, unwarranted, arbitrary and discriminatory.

5. On the above allegations and contentions, the petitioner moved this court in constitutional writ jurisdiction praying for writs quashing the impugned decision of the Government withholding the cash assistance on exports during the relevant period as also the adjustment of its rightful dues against such cash assistance already paid. A writ in the nature of mandamus was also prayed for restraining the Union of India and its concerned authorities from giving effect to impugned circulars or decisions. On this application this Court issued a Rule on the said respondents to show cause why appropriate writ prayed for should not issue and such orders should not be passed as would be deemed fit and proper.

6. The respondents showed cause to the Rule by filing an affidavit-in-opposition affirmed by Bimal Kanti Biswas, Deputy Chief Controller of Imports and Exports. It was stated therein that the company accepted the terms of licence for import of plant and machinery providing for export of 15% of its annual production and executed an undertaking for securing such export. Further when the licence was granted there was no scheme for cash assistance. Accordingly as there was no alteration of position to its detriment by the company, there was no question of any estoppel or equity on the Government for grant of the said cash licence. The respondents had no concern with the alleged payment of income-tax on such cash assistance shown incorrectly as Trade receipts. The Export Promotion Scheme was applicable to normal exports without any tied condition under "export obligation scheme", as it was not the policy of the Government to give cash assistance when there was an obligation for export. The Government subsequently decided on representation that exports made on or after April 1, 1969 in fulfilment of export obligation would qualify for cash assistance. The company was given credit of the same subject to adjustment of payments made by inadvertence without knowledge of export obligation which fact was suppressed by the company. In respect of all grants of cash assistance prior to April 1, 1969 for exports in discharge of obligation, adjustment were made against future entitlements of cash assistance after April 1, 1969. The allegations that orders, circulars, decision directing that the company was not entitled to such cash assistance against tied exports prior to April 1, 1969 were arbitrary, illegal or discriminatory were denied. It was further stated that these were administrative or executive acts for which no writ of certiorari was available. It was submitted that the petition was wholly misconceived and should be dismissed.

7. In its affidavit-in-reply the allegations and contentions in the affidavit-in-opposition were denied while those in the petition were reiterated. It was disputed that the Export Promotion Scheme was applicable only to normal exports without any tied condition of export. There was nothing in the licence imposing restriction on cash assistance and it was denied that the company was not entitled to any cash assistance since withdrawn and adjusted. It was further denied that there was any suppression of export obligation or that payment was made by inadvertence under the Export Promotion Scheme of 1962-63 and subsequent years, such cash assistance by way of incentive was granted to all exporters. The company reiterated that the decision was arbitrary, illegal and discriminatory.

8. Before the learned Judge, as also before us, the Export Promotion Scheme current for the relevant period was not produced. It was held that even though the scheme was not there on the assumption that there was no restriction or limitation in respect of cash assistance to which the company was entitled for obligated export, it could not be said that there was any alteration of position to its detriment by the company in exporting goods on the representation of cash assistance. The learned Judge was further of the opinion that the cash assistance subsequently withdrawn could not be treated as trade receipts. The Rule accordingly was discharged. The appeal before us is against this decision.

9. Mr. Noni Coomar Chakravarti learned Advocate for the respondents raised a demurrer contending that the company had neither pleaded nor established any legal right, which could be remedied by issuance of any writ in a proceedings under Art. 226 (1) of the Constitution. And it was not established that the company had a statutory right to cash assistance nor that there was any violation of any statutory provisions by the respondents. The application it was submitted accordingly was patently not maintainable in law.

10. It is true there is no specific pleading that the company's legal right had been affected by the impugned adjustment. Even so, the company, it is the admitted position, became entitled to considerable amount by way of cash assistance for exports after April 1, 1969 and such amounts were its property over which it had the full right of disposal or appropriation. By adjustment of the said property against the amount of cash assistance on its exports prior to the said date, the company was deprived of its property, according to the company, without any authority of law. Such action thus offended the provisions of Art. 31 (1) of the Constitution and the Company's right to the said amounts if wrongfully adjusted could thus be enforced in proceedings for issuance of appropriate writs. The application accordingly, in our opinion is maintainable in law.

11. The next point urged by Mr. R. C. Deb is that the Company acted upon the promise of cash assistance held out by the respondents and showed the amount so paid by Government in discharge of its promise as trade receipts whereon income-tax was paid. In the petition it was also stated that the company exported goods on the basis of assurance of cash assistance. The company thus altered its position it was submitted, to its detriment. Accordingly the Government was bound by its promise and could not after the promise was acted upon be allowed to resile from its promise and saddle the company with the liability as if such promise was never made. Reference was made to the decisions in Union of India v. Anglo Afghan Agencies, AIR 1968 SC 718 and Century Spinning & Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. Ulhasnagar Municipal Council, AIR 1971 SC 1021. In the latter case following the earlier case it was observed:—

"Public bodies are as much bound as private individuals to carry out representations of facts and promises made by them relying on which other persons have altered their position to their prejudice"

In the case before us, the company was granted a licence to import capital goods namely plant and machinery for manufacturing spun pipes. One of the conditions of licence was to export spun pipes as would be manufactured by that plant and machinery imported to the extent of 15% of its production and for due performance of the obligation, the company executed a written undertaking. It could not accordingly be said that the company exported its products on the basis of the promise for cash assistance and but for such promise it would not have exported the goods, thereby altering its position to its detriment. In fact when the licence for import of plant and machinery with export obligation was given no question of grant of cash assistance against export arose as the grant was directed to be given by the circular of Aug. 17, 1966 with effect from June 6, 1966. It could not therefore be said that there was such representation of an existing fact which raised an estoppel or a representation of a future act which could be enforced at law or in equity. As to the Company's case that it entered the cash assistance as trade receipt, in its books of account and paid income-tax thereon, it is obvious that such entry as alleged to have been made was not based on any representation that it was to be treated as such. It was treated as such by the company on its own, prima facie on its mistaken conception and also it has not been shown to our satisfaction that such cash assistance is to be deemed as income assessable under the Income-tax Act, 1961. Accordingly in agreement with the learned Judge we hold that there was no question of any estoppel or any right in the company enforceable against the Government at law or in equity.

12. Mr. Deb lastly contended that the respondents had no right to recover or adjust the cash assistance alleged to have been paid by them by inadvertence against the admittedly legal dues of the company lying with them. Such adjustment according to him, was not permissible in law when the right to recover the cash assistance was disputed nor was any authority of law shown to establish the right to withdraw the cash assistance paid during the relevant period. Mr. Chakravarti contended on the other hand that when there are mutual demands between the parties, there was nothing wrong or illegal in straightway making adjustment of mutual claims between the parties.

13. Section 72 of the Contract Act, 1872 provides that "a person to whom money has been paid or anything delivered, by mistake or under coercion, must repay or return it." There can thus be no dispute about the legal liability of person to repay money paid or any thing delivered to him by mistake or under coercion. But before the liability is fastened, there must be no dispute that the person receiving the money had no right to such money paid or the thing delivered.

14. As to adjustment also, there can be little dispute that when there are mutual claims between the same parties in respect of same accounts, if not of other, accounts, an adjustment is permissible in law which is also permissible on consent or by agreement express or implied. When however there is a dispute about mutual claims and no consent or agreement between parties can there be an adjustment by unilateral action of one party? We are inclined to think that it is not; to allow one party unilaterally to adjust his alleged claims, which are disputed on (by?) the other against his debts to such other party will be to reverse the process of law and to put the aggrieved party to approach a court of law to remedy the illegal and wrongful act of the offending party.

15. In the case before us, by the circular issued by the Government of India in the Ministry of Commerce dated 17th Aug., 1966 the Government decided to grant cash assistance against exports effected from June 6, 1966 of specified engineering products in the context of devaluation of Indian rupee. This circular is Annexure 'D' to the petition and appears to be complete in all respect with list of products and percentage of assistance annexed. Item (29) of Group III is in respect of iron and steel casting which include spun pipes, cash assistance being at the rate of 20% of f.o.b. value on export. In this circular there is no provision that the cash assistance would not be available even when the exporter was under obligation to export a specified percentage of its production. The Export Promotion Scheme valid and current for the relevant period was not produced before the Court to establish that the scheme was applicable to normal exports without any tied condition under "Export obligation scheme." In the affidavit in opposition, it was stated that it was not the policy of the Government to give cash assistance where exports had been made in fulfilment of export obligation. Unfortunately no document was produced before the court to establish the Govt.'s intention based on authority as alleged that no assistance including cash assistance against exports prior to April 1, 1969 made in fulfilment of export obligation was to be granted. In the relevant circular of Aug 17, 1966 (Annexure 'D' to the petition) which set out the decision of the Government extending cash assistance to various products as listed therein with specific percentage of assistance no condition had been attached confining cash assistance only to normal exports free from any obligation as claimed. Admittedly such cash assistance was given to exports from April 1, 1969 even when there was the export obligation for the aforesaid period. In absence of relevant documents which the respondents having custody of the documents was required to produce before the Court and on the face of the aforesaid circular it is not possible for us on the materials on record to hold that the impugned adjustments depriving the appellant of their property in the form of money were with the authority of law in so far as the case before us is concerned.

16. Further as we have already seen, when a dispute has been raised in respect of the cash allowance in respect of export prior to April 1, 1969, till such dispute is resolved by adjudication under the process of law, the Government on its own cannot make adjustments of such payments against other funds of the company lying with it. Such action appears to be arbitrary and without the sanction of law.

17. We concur with the findings of the learned Judge that there was no question of estoppel and that the company could claim no legal right at law or in equity against adjustment on basis of promise or representation. We however feel that in the view we have taken about the right of the Government to recover the cash assistance, the adjustment in the way done should be set aside. We accordingly allow the appeal and set aside the order discharging the Rule and make the Rule absolute. The order of the Government dated Dec. 28, 1970 Annex. 'K' to the petition adjusting the cash assistance on exports prior to April 1, 1969 against subsequent cash assistance is set aside and the respondents are restrained from giving effect or further effect to the same. Let appropriate writs issue accordingly. The respondents however will be at liberty to recover from the company, the impugned cash assistance if recoverable, in accordance with law. There will be no order for costs in the appeal.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

Dr. R. D. Anklesaria, Petitioner v.
Mrs. Kamala Roy, Opposite Party.

Civil Rule No. 3725 of 1976, D/- 1-4-1977.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 — Amendment on basis of subsequent events— Suit for eviction on ground of rebuilding after demolition — Application for amendment of plaint for adding grounds of subletting and wrongful user (known subsequent to filing of original plaint) was allowed.

The suit for eviction of tenant (governed by the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act) on determination of tenancy was initially filed on the ground of rebuilding after demolition. During the pendency of the suit an amendment of plaint was sought for on the additional ground of illegal subletting of a portion of the premises and wrongful user. The plaintiff had no knowledge about subletting and wrongful user before presentation of the original plaint. In the circumstances, the application for amendment was allowed as the proposed amendment would not change the nature and character of the suit viz. suit for eviction of a tenant. (Para 8)

A tenant governed by the Transfer of Property Act simpliciter and a tenant governed by the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act stand on altogether different footing. In the case of a statutory tenant under the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, an act of subletting and/or wrongful user attract the provisions of S. 13 of that Act and such tenant is liable to be evicted on the ground of subletting/wrongful user even if such subletting/wrongful user is made after the determination of contractual tenancy. Accordingly, the nature and character of the suit is not changed. (Para 8)

Further, there was no disentitling factor for deciding the suit on the basis of subsequent events, diligently brought to the notice of the trial Court, undoubtedly having fundamental impact on the right of relief or the manner of moulding it. In such circumstances, the court cannot ignore the subsequent events on the salutary principle of avoiding multiplicity of proceedings, shortening the course of litigation and achieving the ends of justice. Case law discussed.

Chandi Das Roy Chowdhury, Rabindra Nath Datta and D. Lahiri, for Petitioner; A. Chaudhuri and Amal Mitra, for Opposite Party.

G. N. RAY, J.:— This Rule is directed against Order No. 69 dated August 16, 1976 passed by the learned Subordinate Judge, 4th Court, Alipore in Title Suit No. 97 of 1975 allowing the application of the plaintiff for amendment of the plaint.

2. The facts concerning the Civil Rule are inter alia that the plaintiff opposite party instituted a suit for ejectment against the defendant petitioner in respect of a portion of premises No. 1, Woodburn Road also known as 4A, Woodburn Park, Calcutta on the ground of building and rebuilding after demolishing the suit premises on the allegation that such building or rebuilding could not be carried out unless the defendant-petitioner was evicted from the suit premises.

3. The defendant opposite party entered appearance in the said suit and contested the said suit by filing a written statement inter alia contending that the alleged purpose of building and rebuilding was mala fide, motivated and not tenable in law.

4. During the pendency of the said suit the plaintiff opposite party made an application for amendment of plaint under O. 6, R. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure for inserting paragraphs 8A to 8C inter alia to the effect that the defendant had without previous consent in writing of the plaintiff sublet a portion of the suit premises as also had transferred or assigned a portion of suit premises and the defendant or persons residing in the premises had done acts contrary to the provisions of clause (b) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 and that the suit premises though let out for residential purpose to the defendant was being used for purposes of trade and business, that is, for a purpose other than the purpose for which it was let out for more than four months without the consent in writing of the plaintiff.

5. The said application for amendment was opposed by the defendant and a petition of objection was filed by him to the aforesaid application for amendment of the plaint. In the said petition of objection, the allegations of the plaintiff were denied and it was contended by the defendant that the proposed amendment had been prayed to achieve the ulterior purpose of the plaintiff and the proposed amendment would also change the nature and character of the suit and as such the same should be rejected.

6. The learned Subordinate Judge by his aforesaid Order No. 69 dated August 16, 1976 allowed the said application for amendment of plaint inter alia on the finding that the proposed amendment will not change the nature and character of the suit. As aforesaid, the defendant petitioner challenged the said order of the learned Subordinate Judge in the instant Rule.

7. Mr. C. D. Roy Chowdhury the learned Advocate appearing for the defendant petitioner contended that the cause of action on which the suit for eviction was instituted by the plaintiff opposite party was requirement of the suit premises for building and rebuilding by the plaintiff, but by the proposed amendment an altogether different cause of action was sought to be introduced, namely eviction was sought for on the ground of subletting of the suit premises without the consent of landlord and for user of the suit premises for purposes different from the purpose for which the premises was let. Referring to a decision made in the case of M/s. M. Laxmi & Co. v. Dr. A. R. Deshpande, reported in AIR 1973 SC 171, Mr. Roy Chowdhury submitted that the court can take notice of subsequent events where in view of subsequent events and/or altered circumstances, original relief had become inappropriate or the judgment of the court cannot be carried into effect because of the altered circumstances. But Mr. Roy Chowdhury contended that introduction of subsequent events and/or altered circumstances cannot be permitted if such introduction results in changing the nature and character of the suit and/or changing the cause of action on which the suit was based. In this connection,

Mr. Roy Chowdhury referred to a decision made in the case of Kesho Ram Passey v. Dr. P. C. Tandon reported in AIR 1952 Punj 221. In the aforesaid case, a suit for ejectment was instituted on the ground of subletting by the defendant but in appeal the suit was remanded and the plaintiff sought to amend the plaint by adding two more causes of action namely the premises was sublet in 1947 and that the defendant had made structural alterations to the premises presumably after the suit was filed. It was held in that decision that the plaintiff could not be allowed to amend the plaint by adding new causes of action which had arisen after the filing of the suit. It was further held in the said decision that if the plaintiff had a grievance against the defendant for giving him other causes, he must pursue his remedy by another suit. Relying on this decision Mr. Roy Chowdhury submitted that in the amended petition it has not been specifically stated that the alleged illegal acts of subletting and user of the premises for a different purpose had been committed before the institution of the suit and in the absence of specific statement as to the time of commission of the alleged illegal acts, it should be presumed that the said illegal acts had been committed after the institution of the suit. Accordingly, the plaintiff cannot be permitted to introduce new causes of action occurring after the institution of the suit. Mr. Roy Chowdhury, however, conceded that the proposed amendment could have been made if the alleged causes of action namely subletting and wrongful user had occurred before the institution of the suit. It may be pointed out that on the principle of bar in changing 'cause of action' as alleged by Mr. Roy Chowdhury, the fact of subletting, whether made before or after the institution of the suit, hardly makes any difference.

8. Mr. Arijit Chaudhuri the learned Advocate appearing for the landlord opposite party, on the other hand, contended that the impugned order allowing the proposed amendment is quite legal and justified. The first decision referred to by Mr. Chowdhury in support of his case is by S. K. Datta J. in the case of Tinkari Das v. Jamuna Bala Dasi reported in AIR 1973 Cal 448. In the said case a suit for eviction of tenant on the ground of forfeiture of lease was initially made and during the pendency of the suit an amendment of plaint was sought for on the ground that in the meantime the lease had expired by efflux of time and eviction was also prayed on the said ground of expiry of lease. In the said decision S. K. Datta J. referred to a number of decisions including the decisions made in the cases of Lachmeswar Prasad v. Keswarlal reported in AIR 1941 FC 5 and M/s. Laxmi & Co. v. Anantaram Deshpande reported in AIR 1973 SC 171 and Nair Service Society Ltd. v. K. C. Alexander reported in AIR 1968 SC 1165. After discussing the principles laid down in various decisions referred to by his Lordship it was held by S. K. Datta J. that for shortening the litigation and for ends of justice the Court was entitled to take into consideration the subsequent events even if there was change in the ground of eviction and the nature and character of the suit being suit for recovery of possession of the suit property on eviction of the defendant was not in any way affected. Mr. Chaudhary then referred to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Pasupuleti Venkateswarlu v. The Motor & General Traders reported in AIR 1975 SC 1409. In the said decision the Federal Court decision reported in AIR 1941 FC 5 and referred to by S. K. Datta J. in the AIR 1973 Cal 448 was relied on. Krishna Iyer J. giving judgment for the Court was pleased to observe to the following effect:

"..... It is basic to our processual jurisprudence that the right to relief must be judged to exist as on the date a suitor institutes the legal proceeding. Equally clear is the principle that procedure is the handmaid and not the mistress of the judicial process. If a fact, arising after the lis has come to court and has a fundamental impact on the right to relief or the manner of moulding it, is brought diligently to the notice of the tribunal, it cannot blink at it or be blind to events which stultify or render inept the decretal remedy. Equity justifies pending the rules of procedure where no specific provision or fairplay is violated, with a view to promote substantial justice—subject, of course, to the absence of other disentitling factors or just circumstances. Nor can we contemplate any limitation on this power to take note of updated facts to confine it to the trial Court. If the litigation pends, the power exists, absent other special circumstances repelling resort to that course in law or justice. Rulings on this point are legion, even as situations for applications of this equitable rule are myriad. We affirm the proposition that for making the right or remedy claimed by the party just and meaningful as also legally and factually in accord with the current realities, the Court can, and in many cases must, take cautious cognisance of events and developments subsequent to the institution of the proceeding provided the rules of fairness to both sides are scrupulously obeyed."

Relying on the aforesaid decision, Mr. Chaudhary contended that the fact of subletting even if arising after he had come to court, has a fundamental impact on the right of relief or the manner of moulding it and the said fact has been diligently brought to the notice of the trial court and the court cannot ignore this fact of subletting. Mr. Chaudhary further contended that there was no disentitling factor for deciding the suit on the basis of subsequent events inasmuch as the suit was suit for eviction on the determination of tenancy of the tenant defendant and by the proposed amendment, nature and character of the suit was not changed. In this connection, Mr. Chaudhary referred to the decision of a Full Bench of the Delhi High Court in the case of Smt. Abnash Kaur v. Dr. Avinash Nayyar reported in AIR 1975 Delhi 46. It was held in the said decision that there was no inflexible rule that a cause of action arising subsequent to the filing of the petition for eviction cannot be added to the petition by way of amendment. Mr. Chaudhary also referred to the decisions made in the cases of Dwarka Prasad Mahawar v. Gopaldas Mahawar reported in (1976) 80 Cal WN 269 and Jitendra Nath Das v. Dr. Kalyan Kr. Banerjee reported in AIR 1977 Cal 49. In Dwarka Prasad's case, R. Bhattacharya J. allowed amendment of plaint for adding ground of unauthorised construction made during the pendency of the suit in an eviction proceeding against the tenant on the ground of default in payment of rent. In Jitendra Nath Das's case, the view of S. K. Datta J. who referred the case to Division Bench, was approved and it was held that in the suit for eviction of a tenant, the cause of action was the determination of the tenancy and addition of the ground of reasonable requirement of the suit premises to the original ground of default in payment of rent by way of amendment was quite justified. The decision of Delhi Full Bench and of R. Bhattacharya

J. as referred to above were also considered and relied on by the Division Bench of this Court in the aforesaid case of Jitendra Nath Das (AIR 1977 Cal 49). In this connection definition of 'tenant' under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act may also be referred to. A tenant whose contractual tenancy had been determined by a valid notice to quit but against whom no decree for eviction has been passed remains a 'tenant' under the Premises Tenancy Act. Consequently a statutory tenant who continues to be the tenant under the Premises Tenancy Act because of special definition of the 'tenant' is liable to be evicted under the said Act if he commits any illegal act of subletting and/or wrongful user of the suit premises within the meaning of S. 13 of the Premises Tenancy Act. In this context, a tenant governed by the Transfer of Property Act simpliciter and a tenant governed by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act stand on altogether different footing. In the former case, after the determination of the contractual tenancy the tenant ceases to be a tenant any further and as such raising of unauthorised structure by such person cannot attract the provisions of S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act and no suit for eviction of a tenant for such wrongful act can be filed. But in the case of a statutory tenant under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, an act of subletting attracts the provisions of S. 13 of the Premises Tenancy Act and such tenant is liable to be evicted on the ground of subletting even if such subletting is made after the determination of contractual tenancy. Accordingly, the nature and character of the suit namely the suit for eviction of a tenant is not changed in the case of a tenant governed by the Premises Tenancy Act. Lastly, it will be relevant to consider another salutary principle noted by the Privy Council on the question of amendment of plaint. Reference may be made to the decision in the case of Ma Shwe Mya v. Maung Mo reported in AIR 1922 PC 249. Privy Council laid down that in the absence of other disentitling factors if by reason of subsequent events certain rights accrue to the plaintiff, the plaintiff will be entitled to claim reliefs under those rights by amendment but it will not be open to permit a new case to be made on facts which were available to the plaintiff before the presentation of the original plaint but were not pleaded. This decision of the Privy Council has been referred to from time to time in various decisions of different High Courts including this Court and also of the Supreme Court. Now turning to the facts of the case, it will be found that the plaintiff in her petition of amendment had stated inter alia that after receipt of a registered letter from the Commercial Tax Officer of the State Government on or about June 23, 1976 the plaintiff was surprised to note that the defendant had sublet the suit premises and the defendant had allowed others to carry out business in suit premises. Paragraph 7 of the said application for amendment of plaint runs as follows:—

"That your petitioner therefore prays that since additional new grounds for the eviction of the defendant has arisen after the filing of the suit and to avoid multiplicity of suits, it is in the interest of justice that your petitioner may be allowed to amend the plaint by adding the following paragraphs after paragraph 8 of the plaint."

In the petition of objection the defendant, although denied the allegation of subletting and/or carrying on business in the suit premises, did not allege that the plaintiff had knowledge of all the said facts before the presentation of the original plaint. It is thus evident that there is no disentitling factor for deciding the suit on the basis of subsequent events, diligently brought to the notice of trial Court, undoubtedly having fundamental impact on the right of relief or the manner of moulding it. As aforesaid, it has been persistently laid down by this court and also by the Supreme Court in the aforesaid decisions that in such circumstances, the Court cannot ignore the subsequent events on the salutary principle of avoiding multiplicity of legal proceedings, shortening the course of litigation and achieving the ends of justice. Needless to point out that the principle laid down in Kesho Ram Passey's case (AIR 1952 Punj 221) has not been approved by this court in a number of decisions referred to hereinbefore, and also in the Full Bench decision of the Delhi High Court (AIR 1975 Delhi 46).

T. K. BASU, J.

Jay Krishna Saha and another, Petitioners v. D. N. Lal and others, Respondents.

Civil Rule No. 6015 (W) of 1974, D/- 20-1-1977.

(A) Gold (Control) Act (1968), S. 8 (5) — Act is prospective in operation.

Where gold sovereigns more than five in number and of total weight exceeding 50 grammes, are acquired by a family by gift before the Act came into force, there is no contravention of S. 8 (5).

(Para 15)

(B) Gold (Control) Act (1968), S. 16 (5) and (6) — Family consisting of husband and wife — Family owning gold sovereigns weighing more than 50 grammes and ornaments — Limit of holding without obligation to declare is 4000 grammes — Total holding of articles in such a case is not limited to 50 grammes — Scope of S. 16 (5) and (6).

Reading the provisions of S. 16 (5) of the Act, with S. 16 (6) thereof, they contemplate two classes of families. One class of family are those who own only "articles". The ceiling in such a case would be 50 grammes. Any holding in excess of 50 grammes will have to be declared before the authorities. The second class of family contemplated by those provisions are families which possess or own both articles and ornaments. In the case of such families, the ceiling is four thousand grammes without any obligation to furnish a declaration under the Act. There is no warrant for breaking up of this total holding of 4000 grammes of both articles and ornaments into any particular ratio or proportion. (1973) 1 Mad LJ 311, Foll. (Paras 22 & 23)

In the light of this interpretation, where the petitioners, husband and wife which constitute a family, are found on a search to possess gold sovereigns weighing more than 50 grammes along with ornaments, and there was no declaration of those sovereigns to the Gold Control Authority, the petitioners cannot be said to have contravened any of the provisions of S. 16 (1) read with S. 16 (5) and the show cause notice for confiscation under S. 7 (1) and penal action under S. 74, issued to the petitioners must be held to be without jurisdiction as not disclosing any offence under the Act. (Paras 25 & 26)

R. N. Bajoria and A. N. Mukherjee, for Petitioners; Malay Kumar Basu, for Respondents.

ORDER:— In this application, the petitioner challenges certain proceedings sought to be initiated by a notice under the Gold (Control) Act, 1968 (hereinafter referred to as the Act). The facts leading to the present application may be briefly noted.

2. On the 11th July, 1973, a search was made at the premises of Joy Krishna Saha and Charu Bala Saha who are related to each other as man and wife. In course of the search 226 pieces of gold sovereigns and a sum of Rs. 90,000 were seized. Statements were also recorded from both the petitioners. The statements of both the petitioners were almost identical. The gold sovereigns, according to them, were given to Charu Bala Saha by the father of her husband Joy Krishna Saha. The father of the husband died in the year 1956. They could not definitely say when this gift was made by the late father of the petitioner No. 1. Certain statements were made with regard to the cash but we are not concerned with that in the present application.

3. The only other fact that need be noticed in this connection is an allegation in paragraph 4 of the petition which is as follows:

"The ornaments belonging to your petitioner No. 2 were, however, not seized by the said Customs Officers and were left with your petitioner No. 2." It is to be noted that this allegation in the petition that certain ornaments belonging to the petitioner No. 2 were found in the course of the search but they were not seized has not been denied in the affidavit-in-opposition filed on behalf of the respondents.

4. Thereafter the petitioners were served with a notice to show cause why the 226 pieces of gold sovereigns which were seized as aforesaid should not be confiscated.

5. It is this notice dated the 29th December, 1973 issued under the provisions of the Act which is challenged before me in this application.

6. Before I deal with the respective contentions of the parties, it will be useful to set out the notice which is in the following terms:

"Shri Jay Krishna Saha,
Bama Bhavan,
16/B, B. K. Pal Avenue,
Calcutta-7.
2. Smt. Charubala Saha, wife of Jaykrishna Saha,
Bama Bhavan,
16/B, B. K. Pal Avenue,
Calcutta-7.

Subject:— Seizure of 226 pcs. of gold sovereigns bearing inscriptions indicating their foreign origin valued at Rupees 45,000 (approx. m. v.) wg. 180 3.40 gms. and Indian currencies from the premises No. 16/B, B. K. Pal Avenue occupied by Shri Jay Krishna Saha and his wife on 11-7-73 in contravention of the Gold (Control) Act, 1968. Notice to show cause.

1. In pursuance of an information received in this Customs House to the effect that contraband gold and sale proceeds thereof have been secreted in the premises at 16/B, B. K. Pal Avenue occupied by Shri Jay Krishna Saha, the officers of this department searched the said residential premises on the strength of search authorisation No. Gold Control Act 52/P and S/A No. 203 of 1973 on 11-7-73. As a result of the search 226 pcs. of gold sovereigns bearing inscription indicative of foreign origin were recovered from one small aluminium box kept inside a Godrej safe stored in the bedroom of Shri Jay Krishna Saha and his wife on the 3rd floor of the building. Further, Indian currency notes amounting to Rs. 90,000 were recovered from inside a secret chamber at the bottom of a steel almirah made by M/s. Bombay Steel Works placed in another bedroom on the same floor. As Shri Jay Krishna Saha was unable to produce any document in support of the legal importation/possession of the sovereigns and the Indian currencies in question the sovereigns were seized in the reasonable belief that those were smuggled and unauthorisedly acquired by Shri Jay Krishna Saha in contravention of the Customs Act, 1962 and also possessed in contravention of the provisions of the Gold Control Act, 1968. The Indian currencies were seized in the reasonable belief that those were the sale proceeds of the smuggled gold.

2. Shri Jay Krishna Saha made a voluntary statement to the Customs Officers on 11-7-73 in response to summons issued under S. 108 of the Customs Act 1962 stating that the Customs Officers seized 226 pcs. of gold sovereigns and Indian currency of Rs. 90,000 from the apartment on the 3rd floor of his residence at 16/B, B. K. Pal Avenue. The sovereigns under seizure were given to his wife by his father before his death in 1956. But he could not say wherefrom his father acquired the sovereigns. Neither he nor his wife had made any declaration before any authority with regard to the gold sovereigns under seizure. Regarding the Indian currencies under seizure he stated that out of the amount only Rs. 40,000 belonged to him and the remaining Rs. 50,000 belonged to his wife. Of the amount of Indian currencies belonging to him, Rs. 20,000 were savings made during the last few years whereas the balance amount belonged to his two brothers-in-law @ Rs. 10,000 each. The amount of Rs. 50,000 was given by his father, when he was alive, to his wife Smt. Charubala Saha as gift.

3. Smt. Charubala Saha, wife of Shri Jay Krishna Saha also stated voluntarily before the customs officer on the seizure in response to summons issued to her under S. 108, Customs Act, 1962 that her father-in-law, when he was alive, gave her a good number of sovereigns. The sovereigns were kept with her. At present the sovereigns were kept in Godrej safe on the 3rd floor of the residence. She never counted the number of the sovereign given by her father-in-law and she never used any one of them. Her husband knew about her receipt of the sovereigns. Her father-in-law also gave her Rs. 50,000 out of affection, a few months before his death. The amount was kept in a safe deposit vault hired jointly by herself and her husband. About 10/15 days ago the amount was brought from the vault and was kept inside the chamber at bottom of the steel almirah. She could not say why the Indian currencies were brought from the locker and were kept in the residence. There was no written document for the gift of Rs. 50,000 with her or with her husband. The sovereigns and money were given before the partition of India by her father-in-law. The keys for the Godrej safe and the steel almirah wherefrom the sovereigns and the Indian currency had been recovered were always held by her husband.

4. The copy of the statements given by Shri Jay Krishna Saha and Smt. Charubala Saha as referred to above is enclosed.

5. The sovereigns were weighed in the Indian Government Mint, Alipore and a sample was drawn in presence of Shri Jay Krishna Saha for assay on 24-8-73 to ascertain the purity of the gold sovereigns. The assay certificate (copy enclosed) indicates that the fineness of the gold is 916.2 per mille.

6. Under S. 8 (5) of the Gold (Control) Act, 1968 a person may accept by way of gift gold coins not exceeding five in number subject to the condition that the total holding of gold coins of the donee does not exceed fifty grammes.

7. Section 16 (1) provides that any person who owns, possesses or is in the custody or control of gold articles shall make a declaration to Gold Control Authority in the prescribed form as to the quantity, description and prescribed particulars of such articles owned, possessed, held and controlled by him subject to the relaxation and limitations of fifty grammes of gold coins (articles) provided in S. 16 (5) of the said Act.

8. Section 71 (1) of the Gold (Control) Act, 1968 (as amended) provides that any gold in respect of which any provision of this Act or any rule has been contravened shall be liable to confiscation.

9. Section 74 of the Gold (Control) Act, 1968 provides that any person who in relation to any gold does any act which act would render such gold liable to confiscation under this Act or abets the doing of such an act shall be liable to penalty.

10. Shri Jay Krishna Saha/Smt. Charubala Saha has failed to produce any document in respect of the declaration of the 226 pcs. of gold sovereigns wg. 1803.40 grammes to the Gold Control Authority. The gold sovereigns, therefore, appear to be liable to confiscation under S. 71 (1) of the Gold Control Act and Shri Jay Krishna Saha/Smt. Charubala Saha appears to be liable to penalty under S. 74 ibid.

11. Shri Jay Krishna Saha/Smt. Charubala Saha is, therefore called upon to explain and to show cause,

(i) Why the gold sovereigns under seizure should not be confiscated under S. 71 (1) of the Gold Control Act, 1968 and,

(ii) Why penal action should not be taken against him/her under S. 74 ibid.

12. The written explanation should be submitted to the undersigned within 10 days on receipt of this notice along with all the original or certified copies of evidence he/she relies on in support thereof.

13. He/she should clearly state in the written explanation whether he/she will desire to be heard in person before the case is decided.

14. He/she should note that in the event of failure to submit the explanation within stipulated time and/or to appear in the personal hearing when it is so fixed, the case will be liable to be adjudicated on the basis of evidence on record without any further reference to him/her.

15. The documents may be inspected on any working day on prior arrangements with the R. I. (T.) (adjudication).

16. The above notice is without prejudice to any other action that may be taken in this regard under Gold (Control) Act, 1968 or under any other law in force in the Union of India.

7. Mr. R. N. Bajoria, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners, contended before me that, even if the allegations in the notice are taken to be true, they do not amount to any contravention of the provisions of the Act. He relied on the well-known proposition of law laid down by the Supreme Court in more than one case that if proceedings are initiated by a notice under an Act, and, assuming that the allegations in the notice are all true, they do not disclose any offence under the Act, such a notice must be held to be without jurisdiction and quashed.

8. Mr. Bajoria next submitted that the only factual basis of the notice which is set out hereinabove is the two statements made by the petitioners. In other words, apart from these two statements there is no other material indicated in the notice on the basis of which these proceedings are sought to be initiated. Further, there is no indication in the said notice that apart from what is contained in the said two statements the authorities were in possession of any other factual material.

9. Similarly there is no allegation in the impugned notice that any of the facts mentioned in the said two statements by the two petitioners are factually incorrect or untrue. In the circumstances, Mr. Bajoria submitted that the Court must proceed on the basis that the statements of the petitioners regarding the possession of the gold sovereigns are true and correct.

10. On the above factual basis, Mr. Bajoria submits that taking all the allegations in the notice to be correct, it does not disclose any offence or contravention of the provisions of the Act. The impugned notice mentioned two substantive provisions of the Act viz. Section 8 (5) and S. 16 (1) thereof. Although the notice does not mention what exactly is the contravention of above provisions of the Act, Mr. Bajoria invited me to assume that these provisions have been allegedly contravened. On that basis Mr. Bajoria submitted that, on a proper construction of the above two provisions, it will be evident that the petitioners have not been guilty of any violation thereof.

11. Section 8 of the Act imposes certain restrictions on the acquisition, possession and disposal of gold. In S. 2 of the Act a distinction is made between the primary gold and 'articles' which means anything other than ornaments in a finished form and includes a gold coin. Section 8 (3) and (4) contain certain restrictions regarding the acquisition, ownership, possession etc. of 'articles' the meaning of which I have already indicated.

12. In this light the provisions of S. 8 (5) are significant and may be set out herein below:—

"8 (5) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-secs. (3) and (4), a person may accept or transfer, by way of gift or exchange, gold coins, not exceeding five in number, if, together with the gold coins received by way of gift or exchange, the total holding of gold coins of the donee or transferee, as the case may be, does not exceed fifty grammes."

13. This sub-section clearly imposes a ceiling on the number of gold coins which may be accepted by gift which is five and on the total weight of gold coins in the possession of the donee which is 50 grammes.

14. Admittedly, the gold coins received by the petitioner No. 2 were far in excess of five and total weight was much in excess of 50 grammes as mentioned in S. 8 (5) of the Act. Mr. Bajoria however points out the very significant fact that these gold coins were, according to the petitioners, received by the petitioner No. 2 as a gift from a person who died in the year 1956. Obviously the gift must have taken place sometime before the year 1956 although the petitioners could not mention the exact year as they did not remember it. Mr. Bajoria again points out that in the impugned notice there is no allegation that these statements as to the receipt of these gold coins by way of gift from a person who died in 1956 is incorrect or untrue. He next points out the fact that the Act came into force on 1st September, 1968, consequently, when the gift in the instant case took place, the present Act was not in force. Since the Act is prospective in operation, there can be no contravention of S. 8 (5) of the Act by the petitioners in the facts of the instant case.

15. In my view, this contention of Mr. Bajoria is sound and should be accepted. If there was any allegation in the impugned notice that the statement of the petitioners regarding the acquisition of the gold coins was incorrect or untrue or any indication that the authorities were in possession of any material to show that these gold coins were acquired by way of gift after the Act came into force, the position might have been otherwise. In view of the statements contained in the impugned notice however, it must be held that the petitioners have not contravened the provisions of S. 8 (5) of the Act.

16. The next branch of the argument centred round the provisions of S. 16 of the Act. Section 16 (1) provides that a person who owns, possesses or is in custody or control of any article or ornament at the commencement of the Act shall furnish a declaration in the prescribed form subject to certain conditions.

17. Section 16 (5) of the Act however prescribed certain circumstances in which no declaration under S. 16 (1) of the Act is necessary. Section 16 (5) of the Act is in the following terms:—

"(5) No declaration referred to in sub-sec. (1) or sub-sec. (3) shall be required to be made,—

(a) in relation to articles, unless the total weight of articles owned, possessed, held or controlled by,—

(i) a minor, who is not a member of a family, exceeds twenty grammes,

(ii) an individual (other than a minor), who is not a member of a family, exceeds fifty grammes,

(iii) a family, exceeds fifty grammes,

(iv) any person referred to in cls. (b) to (f) and (h) to (m) of sub-sec. (2), exceeds fifty grammes;

(b) in relation to any ornaments, or both articles and ornaments, where both articles and ornaments are owned, possessed, held or controlled, unless the total weight of such ornaments or both articles and ornaments, as the case may be, owned, possessed, held or controlled by,

(i) an individual who is not a member of a family exceeds two thousand grammes,

(ii) a family, exceeds four thousand grammes:

.....
Section 16 (6), which is also material for our purpose, provides as follows:—

“(6) For the purpose of this section, ‘family’ shall be deemed to consist of—

(i) the husband, wife and one or more minor children, or

(ii) any two or more of them, but shall not be deemed to include any other person.”

18. Relying on the above provisions contained in Ss. 16 (5) and 16 (6) of the Act, Mr. Bajoria contends that the limit of holding of the petitioners in the instant case without the requirement of a declaration under the Act must be held to be four thousand grammes. This is because the petitioners satisfy the definition of ‘family’ as mentioned in S. 16 (6) of the Act. This is because they are husband and wife which constitute a family.

19. It is next contended that since the petitioners own both articles and ornaments the ceiling of their holding of these things without any obligation to declare is four thousand grammes.

20. It was sought to be argued by Mr. Arun Kumar Dutt, learned Advocate on behalf of the respondents that there is nothing in the notice to show that the petitioners possessed any ornaments. This argument might have had some force if this case had to be decided on the basis of the statements contained in the impugned notice alone. But, as I have already mentioned above, the allegations in paragraph 4 of the petition that certain ornaments belonging to the petitioner No. 2 were found in course of the search but were not seized remains uncontradicted. In that state of affairs, the conclusion is inescapable that the petitioner No. 2 was the owner of a certain quantity of ornaments.

21. It is next sought to be argued by Mr. Arun Kumar Dutt, on behalf of the respondents that even if I come to the conclusion that the petitioners between themselves were the owners of both ornaments and articles which I have already said include gold coins then I should hold that within a total holding of four thousand grammes which is permissible under the Act without declaration, the total holding of articles by family must be limited to 50 grammes and the permissible holding of ornaments without a declaration can be up to 3950 grammes. Otherwise it was submitted that if a family could keep 3999 grammes of articles and one gramme of ornaments it could evade the duty of declaration under the provisions of S. 16 of the Act. This, it was submitted, would make the working of S. 16 (5) (a) of the Act nugatory.

22. I am unable to accept this contention of Mr. Dutt. As I read the provisions of S. 16 (5) of the Act, with S. 16 (6) thereof, they seem to contemplate two classes of families. One class of family are those who own only ‘articles’. The ceiling in such a case would be 50 grammes. Any holding in excess of 50 grammes will have to be declared before the authorities. The second class of family contemplated by those provisions are families which possess or own both articles and ornaments. In the case of such families, the ceiling, in my view, is four thousand grammes without any obligation to furnish a declaration under the Act. In my view, there is no warrant for breaking up of this total holding of 4000 grammes of both articles and ornaments into any particular ratio or proportion. It seems to me that the Legislature intended that in case of families which merely keep articles like gold sovereigns they would have to be declared as soon as the total weight exceeds 50 grammes. The Legislature further intended that if a family owned both articles and ornaments, and it is a well-known fact which the Court can take judicial notice of, viz., that most Indian families own ornaments, that the obligation to furnish a declaration would be subject to a much higher limit viz., 4,000 grammes. I enquired of learned Advocates for both the parties as to whether it was possible to find out either from the Notes on Clauses which are furnished to the Members of Parliament along with the Bill before it becomes an Act or any Parliamentary debates if they threw any light on this aspect of the matter. Nothing however could be produced before me although I adjourned this case from time to time on this ground. In the circumstances, I have given my own interpretation of the above provisions of this Act as indicated above.

23. Before I leave this discussion, reference may be made to a decision of a Division Bench of Madras High Court in the case of J. A- Abdul Hamid v. Collector of Central Excise, Madras, reported in 1973 (1) Mad LJ 311. Veeraswamy C. J. at paragraph 4 of the Report observes as follows:—

"But learned counsel for the respondent contends that cls. (a) and (b) of S. 16 (5) will have to be read and construed in conjunction with each other and harmoniously, and that, so read, cl. (b) only means that articles not exceeding 50 grams in weight taken with ornaments in total not exceeding 4,000 grams would be the limit. It is said that any other construction would defeat the intention of S. 16 (5) (a). We are unable to construe the provisions in the manner suggested. To do so, would be to insert words in cl. (b) of S. 16 (5) which are not there. What it speaks of are articles and ornaments, and, if both of them are owned, possessed, held or controlled by an individual or family, then the proper provision which will be attracted is cl. (b). There is no justification for the construction that the limit placed by S. 16 (5) (a) should be imported into cl. (b). There is no warrant for it in the language used."

24. The above interpretation given by the Madras High Court fully accords with my interpretation of the two sub-clauses of S. 16 (5) of the Act and I respectfully agree with the same.

25. In the light of the above interpretation of the law, it must be held that the petitioners cannot be said to have contravened any of the provisions of Section 16 (1) read with S. 16 (5) of the Act.

26. The contention of Mr. Bajoria that the impugned notice must be held to be without jurisdiction as not disclosing any offence under the Act should be upheld.

27. In the result, this application succeeds and the Rule is made absolute. There will be writ in the nature of mandamus directing the respondents to forthwith recall, cancel and withdraw the notice dated the 29th December, 1973 and to forbear from giving effect thereto in any manner whatsoever.

28. There will be no order as to costs of this application.

29. The petitioner is restrained by an order of injunction from taking any steps to obtain return of the gold sovereigns in question for a period of four weeks from today.

Rule made absolute.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 473

MRS. PADMA KHASTGIR, J.

Sri Iswar Dashabhujia Thakurani and others, Plaintiffs v. Sm. Kanchanbala Dutta and others, Defendants.

Suit No. 1347 of 1965, D/- 12-9-1977.

(A) Hindu Law — Religious Endowment — Dedication — A shebait can maintain suit on his own right or on behalf of deity in respect of debutter property, making other shebait as parties to suit. (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 31, R. 1).

A shebait has a right on his own to institute and proceed with the suit on behalf of the deity making other shebait as parties to the suit. In the case of a family endowment a member of the settlor's family as a prospective shebait even though he was not appointed by Court as guardian of deity, can maintain a suit on behalf of the deity making all other shebait as parties to the suit. A deity can also sue through a next friend who has no interest adverse to it and it is immaterial that such next friend happens to be one of the shebait. AIR 1966 Pat 235, AIR 1931 Cal 776 and AIR 1941 Cal 562, Rel. on. (Paras 17, 18)

(B) Hindu Law — Religious Endowment — Dedication — Complete or partial dedication — Ascertainment — True intention of parties to be gathered on a fair and reasonable construction of deed as a whole. (Deed — Construction).

In a case of absolute dedication, the property is given out and out to an idol or to a religious or charitable institution and the donor completely divests himself of all the beneficial interest of the property but where the dedication is partial, only a charge is created on the property or there is a trust to receive and apply a portion of the income for the religious or charitable purposes. If there is an express endowment there is no difficulty in coming to the conclusion whether the endowment is absolute or partial. It is only where there is an implied endowment, the question of construing the same in the light of the intention of the settlor by construing various terms and conditions of the deed of dedication as a whole would arise and one will have to come to the conclusion after considering the same. Where the terms of dedication have been clearly and in an unambiguous language expressed, one does not have to search or go into all the facts and surrounding circumstances including the subsequent dealing of the property by the parties as also their conduct and mode of dealing with the said properties. AIR 1957 SC 797 and AIR 1963 SC 890, Rel. on.

(Para 20)

Held: In the instant case the intrinsic evidence of the document was reinforced by the subsequent conduct of the parties. The terms and conditions of the deed of dedication were not at all ambiguous but the intention of the testator had been clearly laid down in various terms and expressions used in the said document in unequivocal language. It would appear from the expressions used in the deed of dedication such as "I give absolutely all immovable properties to my deities" and "I stand completely divested myself of the rights in the property and my rights devolve in the said deities in my place and stead" that there was an absolute dedication and not a partial one. (Paras 21, 22)

(C) Hindu Law — Religious Endowment — Dedication — Total or partial dedication — Non-mutation of property — Effect.

Where there has been total dedication of property, non-mutation of the property, would not be a ground for holding that there has been no divestation of the property after the dedication, considering the dealing of the said property by the parties and their conduct. (Para 24)

(D) Evidence Act (1872), S. 108 — Presumption of death under — Arises at the end of 7 years and not at the time when suit is instituted.

Presumption of death arises at the end of 7 years and not at the time when the suit is instituted. The presumption is not rigid and may be proved before lapse of 7 years from the "proof of special circumstances". Such presumption may arise before end of 7 years if the deceased person has been exposed to specific peril of death". AIR 1926 Cal 1056, Rel. on. (Paras 27, 28)

(E) Hindu Law — Religious Endowment — Deed of dedication — Framing of Scheme to carry out its terms and conditions — Though shebait should act jointly, division of functions and duties among themselves may be made for convenience. (Para 32)

ORDER:— This suit has been filed by the plaintiffs (1) Sri Sri Iswar Dashabhuja Thakurani (2) Sri Sri Iswar Govinda Jew Thakur and (3) Rash Behari Roy against the defendants (1) Sm. Kanchanbala Dutta (2) Gosta Behari Roy and (3) Brojo Behari Roy inter alia for appointment of the plaintiff No. 3 Rash Behari Roy as the next friend of the plaintiff deities, declaration that the properties mentioned in Annexure 'A' to the plaint are debutter properties belonging absolutely to the plaintiff deities, framing of a scheme, injunction, Receiver, accounts, etc.

2. The case of the plaintiffs is that the defendant No. 1 is a daughter and the plaintiff No. 3 and the defendant Nos. 2 and 3 are the sons of one Hari Mohan Roy. This Hari Mohan Roy owned and possessed two immovable properties at Calcutta, being premises No. 16A, Nandan Road and 20, Ahiritola Street and various properties at Mogra in the district of Hooghly. Full particulars of which will appear from Annexure 'A' to the plaint.

3. The said Hari Mohan Roy during his lifetime by a registered deed dated 9th June, 1935 dedicated all his properties to his family deities i.e. the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 of this suit.

4. The salient terms and conditions as contained in the said deed of dedication (Arpananama) are the following:—

"(a) The first shebait would be the settlor Sri Hari Mohan Roy. After his death his three sons, namely, the plaintiff No. 3 and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and his daughter the defendant No. 1, would be the next shebait.

(b) Out of the income of the debutter properties in the first instance the revenues and taxes would be paid as also the amount necessary for the sheba of the said deities.

(c) Thereafter out of the surplus, the necessary amounts would be spent for the performance of 'Doi Jatra' and

'Durgatsav' every year and for daily puja of the said family deities.

(d) Out of the surplus funds remaining, moneys would be spent for the improvement and preservation of the debutter estate and for acquiring other properties for the debutter estate. None of the shebait would be entitled to sell or make a gift of any of the debutter properties and such properties would not be liable for any debts incurred by them.

(e) If any debutter properties were acquired by the Government then the shebait would purchase other properties of equivalent value for the debutter estate.

(f) The shebait would do all the acts necessary for the due performance of deba sheva and for the preservation and betterment of debutter estate."

5. Between 1935 and 1958 the said Hari Mohan Roy out of the funds of the said debutter estate erected buildings on some of the lands forming part of the debutter estate and also made various additions to the said estate. Full particulars of such additions would appear from the Annexure 'C' to the plaint. During the lifetime of the said Hari Mohan Roy some of the properties were compulsorily acquired by the Government and various proceedings are pending for realisation of the said compensation moneys.

6. A suit was filed by Gostha Behari Roy, the defendant No. 2 herein, being Suit No. T. S. 464 of 1957 in the 4th Court of Munsif at Alipur in 1957 against Hari Mohan Roy as shebait to the deities being plaintiff Nos. 1 and 2 herein. That suit was filed in respect of premises No. 16A, Nandan Road. By consent of the parties therein it was declared that Gostha Behari Roy was the tenant in respect of the said property at a monthly rent of Rs. 225 p.m. on and from 1st March 1955. The said terms of settlement were signed by Hari Mohan Roy as shebait of the plaintiff deities.

7. It is the common case of the parties to this suit that the said Hari Mohan Roy suddenly left his Mogra house on 24th June, 1959 and since then his whereabouts are unknown. At the time he left the house for good, his age was of about 80 years. So long as Hari Mohan Roy was at his Mogra house he acted as a shebait and performed the daily puja and other seasonal festivals as shebait of the plaintiff deities. After his departure from the house, the defendants in the suit have taken possession of the properties and according to the plaintiffs they are also treating the said properties as their personal properties. The plaintiff No. 3 Rash Behari Roy has further alleged that the defendants are wrongfully misappropriating the income from the lands and properties of the debutter properties to their own use and to the detriment of the debutter estate.

8. It is also the case of the plaintiff No. 3 that the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 have wrongfully alienated some of the debutter properties. Full particulars of the instances of the above allegations have been given in paragraph 9 of the plaint. According to the plaintiff No. 3 there is no shebait and no person is there to look after and protect the interests of the deities. Defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and the plaintiff No. 3 are the prospective shebait under the deed dated 9th June, 1935. The plaintiff No. 3 has specifically pleaded in paragraph 15 that the defendants are denying and/or interested in denying the title of the plaintiff deities to the said debutter properties. According to the plaintiff No. 3, he is the second son of Hari Mohan Roy and he has no interest adverse to that of the plaintiff deities and he is a fit and proper person to act as the next friend of the plaintiff deities. As such he should be appointed the same and he has filed an affidavit of fitness to that effect.

9. The defendant No. 1 Kanchanbala Dutta filed a written statement stating that as the said Hari Mohan Roy is sole shebait of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and he is still alive on the date the suit was filed, as such the suit as framed without making him as party thereto is not maintainable at all. She has denied the right of the plaintiff No. 3 to act as the next friend of the plaintiff deities and also his right to file the present suit. She has disputed the particulars given in Annexures 'A' and 'C' to the plaint. It is her case that before the said Hari Mohan Roy left the house, he executed a general power of attorney in her favour. According to her, since the execution of the said power of attorney, she has been looking after and managing the properties at Mogra and the defendant No. 3 is looking after and managing the properties situated at Ahiritola Street and defendant No. 2 is looking after the property situated at 16A Nandan Road. She has denied that there has been any misappropriation of rents and issues or profits of the debutter properties for her own use. She, in terms of the power of attorney, has let out a part of the debutter properties at Kola and realising the rents for the purpose of meeting the daily deb seva puja. She collects a sum of Rs. 500 per year from the paddy field. She has most emphatically denied that she has alienated any part of the debutter properties. According to her, Hari Mohan Roy is still the sole shebait and as the constituted attorney of the said Hari Mohan Roy she has the right to manage and look after the properties of the plaintiff deities.

10. The defendant No. 2 Gostha Behari Roy has filed a written statement mainly taking the point that the said debutter was a partial debutter, and not an absolute one. According to him, by a registered deed dated 9th June, 1935 the said Hari Mohan Roy created a trust in respect of all his ancestral and self-acquired properties providing for the preservation, maintenance and seva puja of the deities. He further disputed the particulars given in Annexure 'A' to the plaint. His positive case is that the dedication of the properties as mentioned in the Schedule to the said deed in favour of the said deities was partial and not an absolute dedication. It was merely a trust or a charge and was created only for the purpose of preservation and maintenance of properties, as Hari Mohan Roy was afraid that his sons and daughter would waste his properties. As such to achieve the said object, he created a trust or charge in favour of the deities by the deed dated 9th June, 1935. According to him, it was not the intention of the said testator that his properties be absolutely dedicated in favour of the plaintiff deities but his only intention was to create a charge in respect of the properties for seva puja of the deities. It was not the intention of Hari Mohan Roy to deprive his sons and daughter of the properties. According to the defendant No. 2, Hari Mohan Roy was not divested of the said properties and he continued to remain as the sole and absolute owner of all the properties, subject only to a charge and he treated the said properties as his personal properties even after the execution of the said deed dated 9th June, 1935. According to the said defendant, the properties do not belong to the plaintiff deities absolutely. Although this defendant has given various particulars of the various financial help that he has given to his brothers and sister he has not substantiated the same by giving evidence. According to him, since 1954 he was occupying premises No. 16A Nandan Road as a tenant under the said Hari Mohan Roy. As the rent was doubled all on a sudden and a suit was filed against the tenants of that defendant, the defendant No. 2 thereupon filed a suit as stated above. According to him, the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 herein have approved in writing of the terms of settlement filed in the said suit at Alipur. The said document has been tendered and marked as an Exhibit in this suit. According to this defendant when at the end of the year 1959 all the hopes of return of the said Hari Mohan Roy were given up, his sons and daughters entered into an agreement or arrangement between themselves for partition and separate enjoyment of the said properties mutually amongst themselves, subject to a charge created in favour of the deities and according to him under the said agreement and arrangement, 16A Nandan Road was allotted to him. The plaintiff No. 3 also agreed to the said agreement of the sale of his share in No. 16A Nandan Road to the defendant No. 3 for a sum of Rs. 15,000 and the plaintiff No. 3 was given possession of the premises at 4D Palm Avenue Calcutta. Properties at Kola Mogra were allotted to the defendant No. 1 and since then she is in possession and actually residing there. Premises No. 20, Ahiritola Street was allotted to defendant No. 3 and he also paid a sum of Rs. 3,000 being the value of his 1/4th share to defendant No. 2 for the premises No. 16A, Nandan Road.

11. After hearing the parties through their respective lawyers, the following issues were framed:—

1. What is the effect of the Registered Deed dated June 9, 1935 executed by Hari Mohan Roy?

2. Did the said Hari Mohan Roy in fact divest himself of the premises No. 16A, Nandan Road, Calcutta after execution of the said Deed dated June 9, 1935?

3. Did the plaintiff No. 3 and the defendants enter into an agreement for partition or separate enjoyment of all the properties of Hari Mohan Roy mutually amongst themselves subject to a charge in favour of the plaintiff deities as alleged in sub-paragraph (d) of para.

10 of the written statement filed by the defendant No. 2?

4 (a). Did the plaintiff No. 3 and the defendant No. 3 enter into agreement for sale with the defendant No. 2 on May 10, 1962 and December 16, 1961 respectively in respect of their respective undivided 1/4th share in the premises No. 16A, Nandan Road, Calcutta as alleged in sub-para. (f) and (e) of para. 10 of the written statement filed by the defendant No. 2?

(b) Did the defendant No. 2 spend a sum of Rs. 25,000 for improvement, addition and alteration, repairs and payment of taxes of premises No. 16A, Nandan Road, Calcutta as alleged in paragraphs 11 and 12 of the written statement filed by the defendant No. 2?

(c) If so, to what effect?

5. Did Hari Mohan Roy executed a general power of Attorney dated 21st July, 1958 in favour of the defendant No. 1?

6(a). Did the defendant No. 1 realise rent from the tenants at the rate as mentioned in sub-para. (a), (b) and (c) of the para. 9 of the plaint? If so, at what rate?

(b) Did the defendant No. 1 settle the properties in her own name or in the name of her relation as alleged in sub-para. (d) of para. 9 of the plaint?

(c) Did the defendant No. 1 sell or transfer the properties as alleged in sub-para. (e), (f) and (i) of para. 9 of the plaint?

(d) If so, to what effect?

7. Is the suit bad for non-joinder of Hari Mohan Roy (Sole Shebait) as alleged in para. 1 of the written statement filed by the defendant No. 1?

8. To what relief, if any, are the plaintiffs entitled?

12. The defendant No. 2 Gostho Behari Roy has first of all taken the point through his counsel at the time of the argument that the deed of dedication D/- 9th June, 1935 is not a complete dedication but only a partial one. In the alternative he has submitted through his counsel, that even assuming there was a total dedication as his father Hari Mohan Roy did not divest himself of premises No. 16A, Nandan Road as such the said property should be kept outside the scope and purview of the deed of dedication. It is his case that although there was a direction under the deed of dedication for mutation of properties after the deed of dedication was made, such mutation has not been done in respect of premises No. 16A, Nandan Road and that is the pointer to show that it was the intention of the settlor to keep the said property outside the scope of the deed of dedication. He has also taken the point that Rash Behari Roy has no right to be appointed as the next of kin of the plaintiffs nor has he any right to institute or continue the suit on behalf of the plaintiff deities. Lastly, he has taken the point that as Hari Mohan has not been made a party to the suit as such this suit is bad for non-joinder of parties.

13. The case of Kanchanbala Dutta is that the deed of dedication is not only valid but is a complete dedication. She has emphatically denied of mismanaging the debutter properties or having alienated any part thereof either in the name of her son-in-law or in the name of any other relative. Her positive case is that the presumption of death cannot be drawn in this case as the suit was filed on 2-8-65 and Hari Mohan Roy left his house on 24th June, 1959. As the complete period of 7 years time had not lapsed on the date when the suit was filed, so no presumption can be drawn under S. 108 of the Evidence Act. Hari Mohan Roy should be deemed to be alive. In the absence of making him a party this suit is not maintainable. She has justified her conduct of collecting rent as it is her case that there is a valid power of attorney granted by Hari Mohan Roy in her favour and she has been exercising her right under the said power of attorney. Moreover she was appointed a joint Receiver by this Hon'ble Court along with plaintiff No. 2. As such any collection made by her during that period was as an officer of Court so the collections made by her were perfectly legal and valid. Lastly she has submitted that if this Court decides to frame a scheme it should be framed in such a way so that all the brothers and sisters get a chance to have a turn or 'pala' periodically.

14. The defendant No. 3 Brojo Behari Roy neither filed written statement nor appeared at the time of hearing of the suit. The plaintiff's counsel submitted that although he has not been able to substantiate and give evidence on all the charges made in the plaint against the defendants but sufficient materials are before the Court to come to the conclusion that there is mismanagement in carrying out the duties of the debutter estate. Moreover, in view of the stand taken by Gostha Behari Roy, the plaintiff deities' interest is in jeopardy and as such a scheme should be framed by the Court. The plaintiff has given evidence that Hari Mohan Roy completely divested himself of all the properties mentioned in Schedule 'A' to the plaint. Hari Mohan Roy himself collected rents and issues by granting receipts on behalf of the deities and describing himself as a shebait, so long as he was present. After Hari Mohan Roy left the house, rents were being collected by the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 themselves as shebait and on behalf of the plaintiff deities. The case of the plaintiff is that Gostha Behari Roy has never made any cash payment under the consent decree but always adjusted the rent with the purported payments made by Gostha Behari Roy for and on behalf of the plaintiff deities, including payment of rates and taxes and alleged repair works. The plaintiff has stated that Gostha Behari Roy being a lawyer persuaded all the other parties to enter into an amicable settlement and partition of the debutter properties among themselves treating the same as secular properties and a document to that effect was executed on 10th May, 1962.

15. In this case the following main points have arisen for my decision:—

First of all whether the present suit filed by Rash Behari Roy for and on behalf of the plaintiff deities is maintainable.

16. Although there has been no issue to that effect but Mr. Gopal Law appearing on behalf of Gostha Behari Roy has submitted that the suit is not maintainable by his brother Rash Behari Roy. No evidence has been laid by any of the parties to the effect that Rash Behari Roy is not a fit and proper person to be appointed as the next of kin or that his affidavit of fitness should be ignored and no reliance be placed on such affidavit.

17. A Hindu deity is a juristic person and has the right to sue or be sued. There are preponderance of decisions to the effect that a shebait has a right on his own to institute and proceed with the suit on behalf of the deities making other shebait as parties to the suit. On the death of Hari Mohan Roy, Rash Behari Roy became one of the shebait jointly with other defendants. So on his own right Rash Behari Roy can, not only bring a suit but also proceed with the suit on behalf of the plaintiff deities as a prospective shebait in case of family endowment even though not appointed by Court as guardian, can maintain a suit on behalf of the deity. This is more so when a prospective shebait brings a suit on behalf of the idol making all other shebait as parties to the suit. (AIR 1966 Pat 235, Ram Ratanlal v. Kashinath Tewari). In a case reported in AIR 1931 Cal 776 (Girih Chandra v. Upendra Nath) it has been held that a person interested in a private trust as a member of the family and who has further the prospect of holding the office of shebait, can maintain a suit challenging the alienation of debutter properties by a shebait. A future shebait can maintain a suit to have it declared that alienation made by a shebait is unauthorised and does not affect the deity.

18. Rash Behari Roy is not only a shebait but also a member of the setlor's family. In Nirmal Chandra v. Jyoti Prasad reported in 45 Cal WN 709: (AIR 1941 Cal 562) it has been held that a shebait as a party interested in the endowment can bring an action. In the first place a co-shebait can bring a suit on the principle that a suit on behalf of the deity can be brought by some of the co-shebait when the rest are unwilling to join the plaintiff or have done acts precluding them from doing so. In the second place it can be justified on the ground that the deity can sue through a next friend who has no interest adverse to it and it is immaterial that such next friend happens to be one of the shebait.

"In respect of a debutter in this country a founder or his heirs may invoke the assistance of a judicial Tribunal for the proper administration thereof on the allegation that the Trusts are not properly performed."

19. The second point for consideration arises, whether the dedication made by the deed of dedication dated 9th June, 1935 is an absolute or a partial one.

"Dedication of a property to a religious or charitable purpose may be either complete or partial. If the dedication is complete a Trust in favour of the public religious charity is created. If the dedication is partial a Trust in favour of the charity is not created but a charge in favour of the charity is attached and follows the property which retains its original, private and secular character. Whether or not a dedication is complete would naturally be a question of fact to be determined in each case in the light of the material terms used in the document. In such a case it is always a matter of ascertaining the true intention of the parties. It is obvious that such intention must be gathered on a fair and reasonable construction of the document considered as a whole." (AIR 1957 SC 797, Dasaratharami Reddi v. Subba Rao).

"The golden rule of construction, it has been said, is to ascertain the true intention of the parties to the instrument after considering all the terms in the ordinary natural sense. To ascertain this intention the Court has to consider the relevant portions of the document as a whole and also to take into account the circumstances under which the particular words were used." (AIR 1963 SC 890, Ram Kishorelal v. Kamal Narayan).

20. In a case of absolute dedication, the property is given out and out to an idol or to a religious or charitable institution and the donor completely divests himself of all the beneficial interest of the property but where the dedication is partial only a charge is created on the property or there is a trust to receive and apply a portion of the income for the religious or charitable purposes. If there is an express endowment there is no difficulty in coming to the conclusion whether the endowment is absolute or partial. It is only where there is an implied endowment, the question of construing the same in the light of the intention of the settlor by construing various terms and conditions of the deed of dedication as a whole would arise and one will have to come to the conclusion after considering the same. Where the terms of dedication have been clearly and in an unambiguous language expressed the interpretation becomes easy, and one does not have to search or go into all the facts and surrounding circumstances including the subsequent dealing of the property by the parties as also their conduct and mode of dealing with the said properties.

21. In this case the intrinsic evidence of the document is reinforced by the subsequent conduct of the parties. It would appear from the expressions used in the deed of dedication such as— "I give absolutely all immovable properties to my deities" and "I stand completely divested myself of the rights in the property and my rights devolve in the said deities in my place and stead" that there was an absolute dedication and not a partial one. The settlor Hari Mohan Roy not only dedicated the entire properties to the plaintiff deities but he has also made specific provisions in the deed itself that the entire income from the said property would be utilised solely for the deva seva and any surplus thereto would be spent for addition and/or improvement of the debutter properties.

22. In the present case I am of the opinion that the terms and conditions of the deed of dedication are not at all ambiguous but the intention of the testator has been clearly laid down in various terms and expressions used in the said document in unequivocal language. Moreover, apart from the deed itself the very conduct of the settlor from 9th June, 1935 till 24th June, 1959 when he left his residential house for good would show that he himself treated the entire properties as debutter, made additions and improvements to the debutter properties and also completely divested himself of all the said properties. He described himself and acted as the shebait of the plaintiff deities.

Pursuant to the power of attorneys granted by the settlor, two sons and daughter of the settlor acted as shebait of the said deities and have accepted the said dedication as a total debutter. Even Gostho Behari Roy in the suit filed by him before Alipore Court described his father Hari Mohan Roy as shebait and treated himself as a tenant in respect of the premises No. 16A, Nandan Road and agreed to pay a sum of Rs. 225 per month to the shebait of the deities. In fact the rent receipts, the deed of settlements the consent decree and all other exhibits in the suit go to show that not only the settlor himself but also all of his sons and daughter treated the said properties as debutter till the day when the sons and daughter of the settlor divided the said properties among themselves by treating the same as secular properties.

23. A specific provision has been made in the deed that after the death of Hari Mohan Roy his sons and daughter would be the shebait and as such shebait they shall never be competent to make any gift or sale or encumber in any manner the properties. I have the least doubt that it was the intention of the testator that the dedication would be absolute and his sons and daughter would have no interests to the properties, save and except to act as shebait and carry out the terms and conditions contained therein.

24. The next point taken by Mr. Gopal Law appearing on behalf of Gostho Behari Roy is that premises No. 16A, Nandan Road does not belong to the plaintiff deities and does not form a part of the debutter estate as the testator did not divest himself of the said property. In support of his contention he has relied on the fact that the said property has not been mutated in the names of the plaintiff deities with the records of Corporation of Calcutta. According to him it was the intention of the settlor as also the parties to keep the said property outside the purview of the debutter estate. It is surprising that Gostho Behari Roy should take such a stand in this suit in view of his own conduct in the past. He himself has filed a suit in the Alipore Court treating himself as a tenant and making Hari Mohan Roy a party defendant and describing him as shebait of the debutter estate. The consent decree was also entered into by Hari Mohan Roy as a shebait of the plaintiff deities. Subsequently, the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 also consented to the arrangement arrived at under the said consent decree. In that document the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 have been described as shebaits of the plaintiff deities. Moreover, all the rent receipts in respect of No. 16A, Nandan Road have been granted in the capacity as shebaits of the plaintiff deities. Although Gostho Behari Roy has been in possession of the said property since 1954 and also considering the fact that he is a lawyer himself, he neither himself took any steps nor advised his father Hari Mohan Roy or other brothers to have the said property mutated in the name of the plaintiff deities in the records of the Corporation of Calcutta. There is a specific provision in the deed itself directing the shebaits to have the same done. On this lone ground of non-mutation I cannot hold that Hari Mohan Roy did not divest himself of the said property. Where there has been total dedication of property, non-mutation of the property, would not be a ground for holding that there has been no divestment of the property after the dedication, considering the dealing of the said property by the parties and their conduct.

25. The third point taken in this suit is that no presumption of death can be drawn till after the expiry of 7 years' time on the date of filing of the suit. It has been contended that Hari Mohan Roy left the house on 24th June, 1959 and the present suit has been filed on 2nd August, 1965. As such the total period of 7 years' time had not lapsed and accordingly S. 108 of the Evidence Act would not be attracted.

26. Section 108 of the Evidence Act provides — "When the question is whether a man is alive or dead and it is proved that he has not been heard of for 7 years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive the burden of proving that he is alive is on the persons who affirm it."

27. It is the common case of the parties that Hari Mohan Roy has not been heard of by anybody since 24th June, 1959 till the day when the suit was heard. According to me, presumption of death arises at the end of 7 years and not at the time when the suit is instituted.

28. Under S. 108 of the Evidence Act presumption of death is not rigid and may be proved before lapse of 7 years from the "proof of special circumstances". Such presumption may arise before the end of 7 years "if the deceased person has been exposed to specific peril of death."

29. In a case reported in AIR 1926 Cal 1056 (In the goods of Ganesh Das Aurora) it has been held by C. C. Ghosh J. that the question for which presumption is made under S. 108 of the Evidence Act is whether a man is alive or dead when the question is raised. In other words, presumption of continuation of being alive ceases at the expiration of 7 years from the period when the person in question was last heard of.

30. Applying the above principles to the present facts of the case the presumption of death can be drawn in this suit. When Hari Mohan Roy left his residential house on 25th June, 1959 he was over 80 years of age and nobody in his family or others who are expected to hear of him have heard of him since then. This suit was heard in the year 1977 and it is in evidence that till then neither Hari Mohan Roy did come back nor was he heard of by any of the parties. As such, I have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that such a presumption of death can safely be drawn. Moreover, it is for the defendants to displace such presumption by giving evidence that he is still alive. In the present case none of the defendants gave any evidence to that effect.

31. Considering the facts that the plaintiff deities are not being properly looked after, specially the income of the debutter properties is not being collected properly and also considering the fact that the present shebait has chosen to divide the debutter properties among themselves and are fully enjoying the same without performing any duties as conferred upon them by the deed of dedication dated 9th June, 1935, I am inclined to frame a scheme in the manner following for the purpose of carrying out the various terms and conditions of the deed of dedication dated 9th June, 1935.

32. It is true that the shebait should act jointly but division of functions and duties among themselves may be made for convenience.

"Without detriment to the trust in order to avoid confusion or any unnecessary scramble, parties interested may arrange themselves for the discharge of the functions belonging to the office in turn. There is no breach of trust in such an arrangement nor any improper delegation of duties of the trustees." Dr. B. K. Mukherjee in Tagore Law Lectures on Hindu Law on Religious and Charitable Trust, page 242.

33. All the appearing parties at the end of arguments jointly submitted that if I am inclined to hold the dedication as a total dedication, in that event I should frame a scheme giving opportunity to each party in turn to carry out the deva seva and other works as provided in the said deed.

34. I answer the issues in the manner following:—

The deed dated 9th June, 1935 executed by Hari Mohan Roy created a complete debutter in favour of the plaintiff deities Nos. 1 and 2 and I answer Issue No. 1 accordingly.

Issue No. 2 is answered in the affirmative.

I answer Issues Nos. 3 and 4 (i) in the affirmative but in view of my finding on issues Nos. 1 and 2 in favour of the plaintiff deities Nos. 1 and 2, the same agreement is not binding on the plaintiff deities and is of no effect. As there has been no evidence adduced by the defendant No. 2, I answer Issue No. 4 (b) in the negative. As such answering Issue No. 4 (c) does not arise.

Issue No. 5 is answered in the affirmative but in view of the facts and circumstances of the case that has no effect now.

The plaintiff has failed to give any evidence in respect of issue No. 6 (a). As such, I answer the said issue in the negative. In the absence of any evidence being laid in respect of issues Nos. 6 (b) and (c), I answer the same in the negative. As such answering issue No. 6 (d) does not arise.

I answer Issue No. 7 in the negative, in view of my finding that the presumption of death of Hari Mohan Roy is drawn under S. 108 of the Evidence Act in the facts and circumstances of the case as stated above.

In respect of Issue No. 8 I frame a scheme strictly in accordance with the intention of the settlor as set out hereunder:

1. There would be a committee consisting of 4 shebait, namely, plaintiff No. 3 and defendant Nos. 1 to 3. The eldest of shebait at present being Sm. Kanchanbala Dutta, defendant No. 1, will have the final say in all matters regarding the management of the debutter estate created in favour of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2. On the death of Sm. Kanchanbala Dutta, the next eldest shebait will have the same power and thereafter also in accordance with seniority in case of other shebait.

2. On the death of any of the existing shebait his or her eldest heir would become the shebait and also become automatically a member of the committee. The daily deva seva and also the periodical and annual festivals like 'Doljatra', 'Durga Puja' would be performed in turn by one of the shebait every year (from 1st January to 31st December). The first of such turn would come to the eldest descendant of Sri Hari Mohan Roy being Kanchanbala Dutta, defendant No. 1 at present from this day till 31st Dec., 1978 and thereafter to others in accordance with seniority and it will go on by rotation as indicated above.

3. The shebait whose turn would fall in a year would be entitled to collect all rents, issues and profits of all properties situated at Kola Mogra, 16A, Nandan Road and 20 Ahiritola Street and out of the said income pay the rates, taxes, statutory demands apply therefrom towards expenses of the deb sebas and the balance amount would be deposited in an account to be opened in a scheduled bank by all members of the committee in the name of the plaintiff deities which would be operated by the shebait whose turn of worship would fall in a particular year but would not withdraw more than a fixed sum which would be decided by the other shebait at a meeting to be held by all of them.

4. The shebait would, at the end of the year when his turn of worship is over, prepare and file accounts in the department after serving notice on all other shebait.

5. In case of any dispute or difference of opinion the shebait would be entitled to take opinion of the Court either by making a formal application or by writing a letter to the Registrar and act accordingly.

6. The shebait would be entitled to engage a purohit (priest) for the purpose of making arrangement of daily and periodical deb sevas. Expenses for such would be provided by the shebait whose turn of worship falls in a year.

7. The members of the committee, jointly should immediately apply and make every endeavour to collect the compensation money from the Government in respect of the debutter properties acquired by the Government and/or taken possession by anybody else.

8. Members of the committee would take immediate steps for mutation in the name of the plaintiff deities in respect of the properties at Mogra, 16 Nandan Road and 20 Ahiritola Street Calcutta.

9. Save as aforesaid, all the provisions and conditions of the deed of dedication dated 10th June, 1935 will remain in force and be binding on all the parties to the suit.

10. None of the shebait would be entitled to adjust the rent payable, with any expenses made by him unless approved of by all the members of the committee.

11. The shebait will maintain books of account, open to inspection, by any of the shebait after making appointment and by giving prior notice. The shebait will be at liberty to pay income-tax, wealth tax and other statutory liabilities if and when required to do so. The shebait will make every endeavour to increase the income of the debutter properties by fully utilising the same and the plans for such improvement and increase would be made by the members of the committee jointly at a meeting. In case of any dispute regarding the same, the opinion of the eldest surviving trustee should prevail although the Court will have the ultimate say in the matter.

12. The shebait shall never be competent to make gift or sale or encumber in any manner the debutter properties.

13. The Receiver is discharged, although in future in case of any dispute the Court will re-appoint a Receiver over all the debutter properties.

14. The shebait will carry out necessary repairs of the properties.

35. The remuneration of the outgoing Receiver would be borne and paid by plaintiff No. 3 and defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 equally. According to the Receiver Mr. P. N. Dutt he has incurred a total expense of a sum of Rs. 3,700. Whatever money has been advanced by Shri Gostho Behari Roy would be deducted from his share of contribution already made to the Receiver.

36. The remuneration and the expenses of the Receiver to be paid within a month from date.

37. Each party to pay and bear its own costs.

Suit decreed accordingly.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 482

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J. AND SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.

The Abu Road Electricity & Industries Co. Ltd., Appellant v. Industrial Gases Ltd., Respondent.

Appeal No. 215 of 1972, D/- 22-8-1977.

Arbitration Act (1940), S. 20 — Arbitration agreement — Agreement by correspondence — General condition of contract — Incorporation — Incorporation of provision of one agreement into another agreement — Principles stated.

The appellant is engaged in supply of electricity. For increasing its capacity for supply of electricity it approached the respondent who carries on business inter alia of import of machinery for supply of generating sets. The respondent offered to supply 200 KW Diesel generating set in terms of its letters. As the appellant was interested in diesel generating set of 400 KW capacity, following further correspondence, the respondent made a revised offer for such set by its letter. While the letter contained inter alia terms of payment of delivery as also charges for erection, there was an endorsement on the front page in the letter at the bottom in red print; "All quotations and contracts are subject to Calcutta High Court jurisdiction and to our standard terms, an extract of which is reproduced on the back". The reverse pages of the said letter contained "Extract from general sale conditions applying against orders and quotations". There was no endorsement at the bottom of the said letter though on the reverse the extract of sale terms and conditions was there almost in similar terms as the other with further reference to the general terms of contract to which the contract was subject, such general terms being available on request. The generating set was delivered to the appellant and it was installed by others though such job was to be done by respondent's engineer according to agreement. A dispute arose and the appellant filed a suit in Sirohi Court for recovering certain amount. The respondent filed an application in that Court under S. 34 of the Act and a stay was granted. Thereafter, the respondent filed an application under S. 20 (4) of the Act in the Calcutta High Court for filing arbitration agreement and a single Judge allowed the application holding that there was an arbitration agreement between the parties incorporated in the contract by specific reference as evident from the correspondence as a whole.

Held that the order of the single Judge allowing application under S. 20 (4) of the Act was valid. (Para 37)

The following principles can be laid down regarding incorporation of the provision of one agreement into another agreement:

(a) a clause in an earlier contract can be imported into a subsequent contract if the language is appropriate, unambiguous and clear.

(b) such clause in the earlier contract can be written in bodily into the later contract if there is no inconsistency or vagueness or uncertainty.

(c) A clause in the earlier contract which is germane to the subject-matter of the later contract may be incorporated therein by general words though some degree of manipulation may be involved.

(d) In respect of a clause in the earlier agreement which is not directly germane to the subject-matter of the later agreement, it is not permissible to construe general words as incorporating such clause therein when the clause in terms does not relate to transactions of such later contract. Such clause can only be incorporated in the later contract by clear words either in the earlier or subsequent contract. Applying these tests, assuming the question is one of incorporation of the provision of arbitration into the contract for supply of 400 K.W. generating set, there can be little dispute that the arbitration clause in such transaction is not necessarily or directly germane. Apart from the question of uncertainty or vagueness or inconsistency, there is however no bar to incorporation by express and clear language the provisions of an arbitration clause in an earlier contract into the subsequent contract. In the case in question the relevant clauses which are clear enough show that the contract was entered into with the express understanding that the general sale condition of the respondent would apply, the contract whereof was given overleaf in the written, revised offer made by the respondent and accepted by the appellant. There was a further endorsement to the effect that complete sale conditions would be available on request. In view of this, on the face of this written provision, it is not possible for the appellant to contend that there was no provision for arbitration in respect of the said contract in express language even if such arbitration was not germane to the transaction between the parties. (Paras 27, 28)

In the case in question the contract is one and the same between the same parties in respect of one and single transaction and the question is really as to whether the general sales conditions which are not otherwise incorporated but were only referred to by express language in the offer made by the respondent to the appellant formed part of the contract between the parties in the circumstances. In this view it could be said that strictly the question of incorporation is not a relevant matter for consideration in respect of the controversy in issue between the parties in this proceeding. (Para 29)

Thus there is no escape from the conclusion that it was possible for the appellant to obtain the copies of the general sale conditions of which the appellant was made aware and even if he did not do so he must be deemed to have constructive and reasonable notice of the general sale conditions including the arbitration clause as forming the terms of the contract in view of the express provision made in the extract which was set out on the reverse of the offer with the endorsement at the bottom. Further, it does not appear that there is any insurmountable difficulty for the appellant to take necessary steps for its participation in the arbitration proceeding in Calcutta. In the context of the attending circumstances, there is no question of balance of convenience when both parties are in identical position and there is no reason to interfere in this state of affairs with the forum provided in the arbitration clause in the contract for settlement of the disputes arising therefrom. Anindya Mitra and Pratap Chatterjee, for Appellant; Milan Kumar Banerjee and Sudipta Sarkar, for Respondent.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— This is an appeal against an order dated May 22, 1972 passed by Salil Kumar Roy Choudhury, J. directing that the arbitration agreement contained in the contract for supply of 400 K.W. Diesel Generating set by the respondent to the appellant be filed in this Court. There was a further direction that disputes mentioned in the petition be referred to the arbitrators to be appointed in terms of the arbitration agreement contained in Cl. 29 of the general terms and conditions of the respondent and in default the parties would be entitled to apply to this Court for appointment of an arbitrator.

2. The appellant, the Abu Road Electricity and Industries Co. Ltd. is engaged in supply of electricity in Abu Road and neighbouring areas. For increasing its capacity for supply of electricity, it approached the respondent, who carries on business inter alia of import of machinery, for supply of generating sets.

3. The respondent, it appears, during 1962-63 offered to supply to the appellant 200 K.W. Diesel generating set in terms of its letters dated March 29, 1962, August 29, 1962 and November 2, 1963 as also other letters. As the appellant was interested in diesel generating set of 400 K.W. capacity, following further correspondence, the respondent made a revised offer for such set, to be imported from U.S.S.R., by its letter of April 16, 1964. While the letter contained inter alia terms of payment of delivery as also charges for erection or alternatively for providing one supervising engineer for supervising, installation, there was the following endorsement on the front page in the said letter at the bottom in red print:

"All quotations and contracts are subject to Calcutta High Court jurisdiction and to our standard terms, an extract of which is reproduced on the back".

4. The reverse pages of the said letter of April 16, 1964 contained "Extract from General Sale conditions applying against orders and quotations." Clause one of the said extract is as follows:—

"1. Purchaser's orders are accepted strictly on the understanding that purchaser accepts our general sale condition....."

5. The extract has 13 clauses and at the bottom there is the following endorsement.

"Complete sale condition can be supplied on request."

6. These clauses have been printed at pages 63-70 of the Paper Book.

7. The offer was accepted by a telegram and confirmed by letter dated May 30, 1964 with slight variation and it was stated therein inter alia as follows:—

"..... we have now pleasure to place an order for 400 K.W. set as offered by you with all terms negotiated and confirmed between us by correspondence till date which includes terms of payment to be the same for the order on c.i.f. basis or f.o.r. basis."

8. In reply the respondent intimated by its letter of June 6, 1964 its acceptance of the order in following terms:—

"..... we have pleasure in accepting your order in terms of our offer, subsequent correspondence and as per our standard sales terms and conditions printed on the back of our letter head".

9. There was no endorsement at the bottom of the said letter though on the reverse the extract of sale terms and conditions was there almost in similar terms as the other with further reference to the general terms of contract to which the contract was subject, such general terms being available on request.

10. The generating set was delivered to the appellant and it was installed by others though such job was to be done by the respondent's engineer according to agreement. According to the appellant it was entitled to various amounts from the respondent, including increase of customs duty paid by it, refund of price which was reduced by the respondent at the time of release of foreign exchange interests on amounts blocked towards L/C, loss for not starting the machine for lapses of the respondent, demurrage etc. in all for about Rs. 2 lakhs. The appellant through its lawyer demanded payment of the said amount by his letter dated August 20, 1968. As the amount or any portion thereof was not paid, the appellant on or about Dec. 9, 1968 filed a suit being Suit No. 17 of 1969 before the District Judge, Sirohi praying for decree for Rs. 1,82,226 on the basis aforesaid against the respondent on the above allegations. The respondent filed an application on March 21, 1969 in the said court under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 for a stay of proceedings alleging that in respect of the disputes in suit arising out of the contract between them there was a provision for arbitration which was binding on the parties. On this application the Court granted a stay as prayed for on consent and we are told, the stay is still continuing till the proceeding before us is concluded.

11. On March 3, 1970 the respondent filed an application in this Court stating that, in view of the provisions for arbitration as contained in the general sale conditions in respect of the contract between the parties, the disputes were to be settled by arbitration, and so the arbitration agreement should be filed in the Court and reference be made to the arbitrators in accordance therewith.

12. The application was opposed by the appellant and affidavit-in-opposition affirmed on its behalf by R. C. Bramhabatt, one of its Managing Directors, on May 14, 1971 was filed stating inter alia that the appellant never had any knowledge of the general sale conditions prescribed by the respondent as alleged and no brochure containing the said general sales conditions was ever brought to the notice of the appellant. Further, the only general terms of which notice was given were those printed overleaf in the letter of March 29, 1962 (being pages 68-70 of the Paper Book) which, as we have seen, are similar to those printed overleaf of the respondent's letter of April 16, 1964 containing the revised offer. It was further stated that the arbitration clause had no application to the disputes raised and there was in existence no valid or binding arbitration agreement which also was vague, uncertain and unworkable. For the aforesaid reasons the application should be dismissed.

13. In the affidavit-in-reply, affirmed by Surendra Kumar Sangal on June 17, 1971 the respondent alleged that when Mr. Bramhabatt visited its office at Calcutta on November 20, 1962 he went through the general sale conditions, the printed copy whereof was taken away by him. It was reiterated that there was a valid and binding agreement for arbitration and the claims were covered by the said agreement. The application accordingly should be allowed.

14. S. K. Roy Choudhury, J. on hearing the respective contentions of the parties held that there was clearly an arbitration agreement between the parties which was incorporated in the contract by clear and specific reference as appearing in the correspondence reading as a whole. The entire correspondence had to be looked into as a whole which would indicate the intention of parties and the contract was to be construed in the background and circumstances of the case, and in law, the arbitration agreement was not to be signed by the parties but it was to be in writing. It was further held that there was sufficient notice of the arbitration clause which was clear and unambiguous and in wide terms to cover the disputes. In the premises the application under S. 20 (4) of the Arbitration Act was allowed by the learned Judge by order dated May 22, 1972 and the arbitration agreement contained in the contract for supply of 400 K.W. Diesel Generating set of U.S.S.R. origin and letters of May 30, 1964 and June 6, 1964 were directed to be filed in this Court with further consequential directions in terms of Cl. 29 of the general terms and conditions of sale of the respondent. The present appeal is against this order.

15. The general sale conditions relied on by the respondent, and annexed as Annexure 'A' of its petition under S. 20 are in relevant excerpts as follows:—

"The Industrial Gases Ltd.,
Post Box 853, Calcutta-1.

And

Its subsidiaries and associates."
General terms and conditions applying to agreements, Orders/Indents/Quotations/Offers for sale of Plants, Machines and equipments. (Special terms and conditions applying to agreements, Orders, Indents, Quotations/Offers for sale of Gases and to contracts for erection or for supervision of erection can be had on request).

16. Purchaser's orders are accepted strictly on the understanding that purchaser accepts company's general conditions.

1. * * * *

29. Disputes of whatever nature arising under, out of, or in respect of the Order including any dispute arising under or out of re-sale under Clauses Nos. 6 and 24 hereof shall unless amicably settled be referred to the survey or arbitration of two merchants resident of Calcutta, one to be named by purchasers and one by the Company. The surveyors or arbitrators shall appoint an Umpire before entering upon the reference and in the event of their being unable to agree to any Umpire the Umpire shall be nominated by the Chairman for the time being of the Bharat Chamber of Commerce. In the event of either of the parties failing to nominate a Surveyor or an Arbitrator within fifteen days after being requested in writing to do so by the other party, the said other party shall have the power to nominate a Surveyor or Arbitrator on behalf of the defaulting party as well and the two surveyors or arbitrators so nominated shall proceed to act. The decision of the Surveyors or Arbitrators or the Umpire shall be final and binding on both parties.

It is hereby agreed that a Surveyor or an Arbitrator or an Umpire under this clause shall be a merchant resident of Calcutta who is either himself personally a member of the Bharat Chamber of Commerce or is a Partner Director or a Manager or Assistant Manager or a responsible officer of a firm or a Company, which firm or company is a member of the Bharat Chamber of Commerce.

It is further expressly agreed that any Survey or Arbitration under this clause shall take place at Calcutta and any Arbitration shall except as modified by this clause be under the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act that may be in force at the time. All disputes under the contract are subject to jurisdiction of Calcutta High Court alone."

19. The main point for consideration is whether there was any agreement for arbitration in the contract for supply of the 400 K.W. generating set. As we have seen, the contract was by correspondence and the revised offer by the respondent for the generating set was by its letter of April 16, 1964. The endorsement at the bottom of the first page of the letter was that contract was subject to the standard terms, an extract whereof was 're-produced on the back'. On the reverse was 'the extract from general sale conditions applying against orders and quotations'. Clause one provided that the purchaser's offer was accepted strictly on the understanding that he accepted the respondent's general sale condition. There can be little dispute that if the extract contained a provision for arbitration the disputes arising from the contract entered into would be subject to arbitration. The extract did not contain any such provision, but at the end of the extract there was a further endorsement providing that complete sale condition could be supplied on request. The general sale conditions applying to quotations, a copy whereof had been annexed to the application of the respondent under S. 20, contained in its last clause being Cl. No. 29 the provision for arbitration, which has been quoted above. The parties are at variance on the question of incorporation of the said provision in the contract for the supply of the generating set, in respect whereof, as we have seen, the appellant had raised various claims in the suit instituted at Sirohi.

18. In Halsbury's Laws of England Fourth Edition, Vol. 2, Art. 522 it is laid down:

"It is inherent in cases of incorporation by reference that the parties are concerned not with one document alone but with at least two, one of which contains an arbitration clause and the other of which does not. In some cases the one document may constitute a contract between other parties. A common case is where the two documents concerned are a charter party and a bill of lading. If the relevant contract between relevant parties is contained in the document which does contain the arbitration clause, no question of incorporation arises. Where this is not the case, the question whether the document containing the arbitration clause is incorporated in the relevant contract between the relevant parties is, as always, a question of construction."

19. We shall now refer to the decisions cited at the bar. In T. W. Thomas & Co. Ltd. v. Portsea Steamship Co. Ltd., 1912 AC 1 a bill of lading provided that goods shipped thereunder should be delivered to the shipper, "..... with other conditions as per charter party", with further endorsement therein in the margin as "Dock load at shipper's risk, and all other terms and conditions and exceptions of charter to be as per charter party, including negligence clause". The charter party provided that "Any dispute or claim arising out of any of the conditions of this charter shall be adjusted at port where it occurs, and the same will be settled by arbitration". It was held that the arbitration clause was not incorporated in the bill of lading.

20. Lord Loreburn L. C. observed that under the words "with other conditions as per charter party", it was well settled that it could not be said that the arbitration clause in the charter party was incorporated or made applicable. It was further observed:

"The arbitration clause is not one that governs shipment, carriage or delivery or the terms upon which delivery is to be made or taken; it only governs the way of settling disputes between the parties to the charter party and disputes arising out of the conditions of the charter party and not disputes out of the bill of lading."

21. It was also observed by Lord Atkinson in his concurring judgment as follows:—

"..... It would be a sound rule of construction to adopt that when it is sought to introduce into a document like a bill of lading—a negotiable instrument—a clause such as this arbitration clause, not germane to the receipt, carriage, or delivery of the cargo or the payment of freight, the proper subject-matters with which the bill of lading is conversant—this should be done by distinct and specific words, and not by such general words as those written in the margin of the bill of lading in this case."

22. In Dwarkadas & Co. v. Daluram Gojanmull, AIR 1951 Cal 10 (FB) it was observed by Harris, C. J. referring to earlier decisions as follows (at p. 16, Para 45):—

"It is clear that in this case (Thomas & Co.'s case (1912 AC 1)) the House of Lords did not hold that the terms of an earlier contract could not be imported into a subsequent contract by appropriate language or that an arbitration clause found in an earlier contract could not be imported into a subsequent contract if the language was both appropriate and clear. Further they admit that if an arbitration clause found in an earlier contract can be written in bodily into the later without any inconsistency or without causing any vagueness or uncertainty then such an arbitration clause could be imported. What their Lordships held however was that on the facts of the case, the nature of the arbitration clause in the charter party was such that it could not be imported into a contract relating to different subject-matter. If the arbitration clause was imported bodily into the bill of lading, it would on its face deal with no disputes, arising under the bill of lading and at best it would be vague and uncertain and quite insufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the courts."

23. In this case the relevant agreement provided as follows:—

"Subject to all terms and conditions of the contract..... issued to us by M/s. Bubna More & Co.....". The contract with M/s. Bubna More & Co. provided an arbitration clause and it was held that the arbitration clause in the first contract between Bubna More & Co. and the respondent was in the widest terms and was thereby imported into the subsequent contracts between the appellant and the respondent. If the arbitration clause in the original contract was written in subsequent contracts, it would be wholly intelligible and not inconsistent with any of the terms of the subsequent contract and would on its face apply to all disputes arising under the subsequent contracts.

24. In T. B. & S. Batchelor & Co. Ltd. v. Owners of S. S. Merak, (1965) 1 All ER 230 it was observed by Russell L. J.:—

".....a true view of that case (Thomas & Co. Ltd.) is that it shows that clauses which are directly germane to shipment, carriage and delivery may be incorporated by general words though the fact that they are found in the charter party may involve a degree of verbal manipulation to fit exactly a bill of lading but that where there is a clause whose subject-matter is not thus directly germane, such as an arbitration clause, it is not permissible to construe general words of incorporation as extending to a clause which does not in terms relate to a bill of lading."

25. In Owners of the Ship Annefield v. Owners of the Cargo, (1971) 1 All ER 394 (known as Annefield case) it was held that there was no scope for arbitration as the arbitration clause in charter party was not germane to the subject-matter of the bill of lading nor the expression was explicit enough to incorporate the arbitration clause of the charter party in the bill of lading. It was observed by Lord Denning M. R. as follows:—

"I would follow the test laid down by Russel L. J. in the Merak, but I would adapt it slightly. I would say that a clause which is directly germane to the subject-matter of the bill of lading (that is to the shipment, carriage and delivery of goods) can and should be incorporated into the bill of lading contract, even though it may involve a degree of manipulation of the words in order to fit exactly the bill of lading. But, if the clause is one which is not thus directly germane, it should not be incorporated into the bill of lading unless it is done explicitly in clear words either in the bill of lading or in the charter party."

26. Following the above proposition it was held by Denning, M. R. in Thai-Europe Tapioca Service Ltd. v. Government of Pakistan, 1976 (1) Lloyds LR 1 that the clause "all terms, conditions, liberties and exceptions of the charter are herewith incorporated" did not incorporate the arbitration clause into the bill of lading.

27. On a review of the above cases the following principles regarding the incorporation of the provisions of one agreement into another agreement appear to have been laid down.

(a) a clause in an earlier contract can be imported into a subsequent contract if the language is appropriate, unambiguous and clear.

(b) such clause in the earlier contract can be written in bodily into the later contract if there is no inconsistency or vagueness or uncertainty.

(c) A clause in the earlier contract which is germane to the subject-matter of the later contract may be incorporated therein by general words though some degree of manipulation may be involved.

(d) In respect of a clause in the earlier agreement which is not directly germane to the subject-matter of the later agreement, it is not permissible to construe general words as incorporating such clause therein when the clause in terms does not relate to transactions of such later contract. Such clause can only be incorporated in the later contract by clear words either in the earlier or subsequent contract.

28. Applying these tests, assuming the question is one of incorporation of the provision of arbitration into the contract for supply of 400 K.W. generating set, there can be little dispute that the arbitration clause in such transaction is not necessarily or directly germane. Apart from the question of uncertainty or vagueness or inconsistency, there is however no bar to incorporation by express and clear language the provisions of an arbitration clause in an earlier contract into the subsequent contract. In the case before us we have referred to the relevant clauses which are clear enough to show that the instant contract was entered into with the express understanding that the general sale condition of the respondent would apply, the extract whereof was given overleaf in the written, revised offer made by the respondent and accepted by the appellant. There was a further endorsement to the effect that complete sale conditions would be available on request. In view of this, on the face of this written provision, it is not possible for the appellant to contend on the above authorities that there was no provision for arbitration in respect of the said contract in express language even if such arbitration was not germane to the transaction between the parties.

29. But is the case before us really one of incorporation of the provisions of one contract into another contract? As we have seen in the above cases there were two distinct agreements between different parties with one party in common wherein the principle of incorporation of the arbitration clause in the later contract was sought to be invoked. This is not the position in this case before us. We are faced here with a case where the contract is one and the same between the same parties in respect of one and single transaction and the question is really as to whether the general sales conditions which are not otherwise incorporated but were only referred to by express language in the offer made by the respondent to the appellant, formed part of the contract between the parties in the circumstances. In this view it could be said that strictly the question of incorporation is not a relevant matter for consideration in respect of the controversy in issue between the parties in this proceeding.

30. The next contention raised by Mr. Mitter, learned counsel on behalf of the appellant, is that the arbitration clause in the contract, assuming it to be an enforceable one, is vague and uncertain and thus unenforceable in law. It is stated that the arbitration clause provides for appointment of two Arbitrators or Surveyors, each at the option of either party to decide the disputes arising out of the contract. It may be, it is said, that the respondent may elect to appoint an arbitrator while the appellant may elect to appoint a Surveyor. There is this inherent conflict in the provisions of the agreement in absence of clear or unambiguous language in the arbitration clause. Further the arbitration clause provides that the arbitrator or the Surveyor shall be, in the contingency referred to therein, a 'responsible officer' of a firm or company which is a member of Bharat Chamber of Commerce. These words have no meaning or the connotation attached to them which renders the clause vague, uncertain and unworkable. Reference was made to the decision in G. Scammell & Nephew Ltd. v. H. C. & J. G. Ouston, 1941 AC 251 (HL) in which Viscount Maugham observed:—

"In order to constitute a valid contract the parties must so express themselves that their meaning can be determined with reasonable degree of certainty. It is plain that unless this could be done it would be impossible to hold that the contracting parties had the same intention; in other words consensus ad idem would be the matter of mere conjecture. This general rule, however, applies somewhat differently in different cases. In commercial documents connected with dealings in a trade with which the parties are perfectly familiar the Court is very willing, if satisfied that the parties thought that they made the binding contract to imply terms and in particular terms as to the method of the carrying out the contract which it would be impossible to supply in other kinds of contract."

31. It appears that the contract between the parties was for supply of the generating set as also its erection by the respondent or under its supervision. According to the plaint in the suit before the Sirohi Court the disputes raised are in respect of claims which have no connection with the process of erection or installation as according to the appellant no steps were taken by the respondent for such erection or installation. It appears that the provision for Surveyor was made in the arbitration clause in the general form of the trade (vide the arbitration clause in Dularam's case) and in the event of the dispute in connection with erection or installation, the appointment of Surveyors would be appropriate. Further under the contract it appears that either arbitrators or surveyors could be appointed and the Surveyors are squarely in the same position as Arbitrators as to the effect of an award as may be passed by them or by an umpire in event of difference between them. As to words 'responsible officers' the connotation does not appear to be vague in the commercial circle as it imports an officer who is holding a responsible position in a company or a firm carrying on business.

32. The next contention on behalf of the appellant is that the provisions of the extract given overleaf the offer vary in material aspects and/or are inconsistent with the provisions of the general sale conditions. We have carefully examined the relevant provisions and on comparison, it does not appear to be so as contended. As has been pointed out by Mr. Banerjee, learned counsel appearing for the respondent, Clauses 1 to 8 of the extract are similar to those of the general sale conditions in the following manner. Clause 1 of the extract = Clauses 1 + 21 of the general sale conditions, other Cls. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6+7 and 8 of the extract are respectively similar to Cls. 2, 12, 23, 4+5, 22 and 21 of the general sale conditions. The material difference to which our attention has been drawn relates to words 'prices ex-godown Calcutta' and 'present rate' of foreign exchange etc. in the extract while in the general sale conditions it is 'prices ex-godown factory' and 'current rate of foreign exchange etc.' These really do not make any substantial difference and at least in the present contract amounting to inconsistency.

33. The next contention made on behalf of the appellant is that the 'extract' implies and means extract of the general sale conditions which it is purported to be and such 'extract' cannot be beyond the general sale conditions. It is stated that there are many provisions in the 'extract' which do not find place in the general sale conditions which is Annexure 'A' to the petition page 9 of the Paper Book. Clauses 9 to 13 of the 'extract' do not find place in the general sale condition, Annexure 'A'. Accordingly, it is submitted, it could not be said that the extract is an extract of the general sale conditions as contended. This argument is based on the misconception of the provisions of Annexure 'A' which applies to agreements, orders, indents, quotation and offers for sale of Plants, Machines and Equipments. It provides further in its heading following that "the special terms and conditions applying to Agreements, Orders, Indents, Quotations and Offers for sale of gases and to contracts for erection or for supervision of erection can be had on request." It is obvious therefore, that the extract which purports to be extract of the general sale conditions includes provisions regarding gases and cylinders in addition but in so far as the contract for supply of the plant is concerned the general sales conditions applying to such supply are those as set out in Annexure 'A' and naturally the provisions thereof do not extend to gas cylinders. There is, therefore, nothing basically wrong in the extract in so far as it relates to the supply of machinery is concerned.

34. The next question relates to the notice of the general sale conditions on the appellant as forming the terms of the contract. Chitty on Contract 23rd Edition in Arts. 590 and 591 laid down the following propositions which have also been considered by the learned trial Judge. They are as follows:—

"590, Meaning of notice. It is not necessary that the conditions contained in the standard form document should have been read by the person receiving it, or that he should have been made subjectively aware of their import or effect. The rules which have been laid down by the court regarding notice in such circumstances are three in number.

(1) If the person receiving the document did not know that there was writing or printing on it, he is not bound.

(2) If he knew that the writing or printing contained contractual conditions, he is bound.

(3) If the party tendering the document did what was reasonably sufficient to give the other party notice of conditions, and if the other party knew that there was writing or printing on the document, but did not know that it contained conditions then the document will be given contractual effect. Its conditions will become the terms of the contract between them.

591. Reasonable sufficiency of notice. It is the third of these rules which has most often to be considered by the courts. The question whether the party tendering the document has done all that was reasonably sufficient to give the other notice of the conditions is a question of fact in each case, in answering which the tribunal must look at all the circumstances and the situation of the parties. But it is for the court, as a matter of law, to decide whether there is evidence for holding that the notice is reasonably sufficient. Cases in which the notice has been held to be insufficient have been those where the conditions were printed on the back of the document, without any reference, or any adequate reference, on its face, such as, 'for conditions, see back', or where the conditions were obliterated by a printed stamp. In most cases however the tender of printed conditions is in itself considered sufficient."

35. In the case of Tatavarti N. R. (Firm) v. Balabhadra, AIR 1954 Mad 71 it was observed as follows (at p. 72, Para 4):—

"When a contract in writing is signed by parties, they are bound by the terms contained therein whether they take the trouble of reading them or not. This principle has been extended to cases where the contract does not actually contain the terms but a reference is made to another document or contract where those terms are to be found. The reason for holding that those terms must be taken to have been incorporated by reference in their signed agreement is that it was possible for any of them to look into the document and ascertain the terms."

36. The appellant contended that it was never made aware of the provision for arbitration and if it was made aware about it the appellant would never have agreed to such provision as it had no office in Calcutta nor it had any connection with the Bharat Chamber of Commerce or its members to carry on the proceedings on its behalf before the Arbitrator. The respondent alleged in the affidavit-in-reply in para. 4 with reference to Nov. 20, 1960 that Mr. Bramha Bhatt who is one of the Managing Directors of the appellant had knowledge of the general sales condition and printed copies thereof were taken by him at the meeting he had on that date at Calcutta with the responsible officers of the respondent. We do not think it appropriate to refer to the statements of a new fact made in the affidavit-in-reply which the appellant had no opportunity to traverse except challenging the same in course of argument. The offer for supply of 400 K.W. generating set was made by letter of April 16, 1964 as we have seen and it seems that when parties entered into the contract by further correspondence following, the offer is accepted subject to the conditions as referred to in the offer though not forwarded to or obtained by the acceptor. In such contract if the acceptance is on the face of the extract, of which the appellant admittedly had knowledge, and the extract refers to general sale conditions and the offer is made expressly subject to those conditions, the acceptor must be deemed to enter into the contract on basis not only of the conditions of extract but also of the general sale conditions. If the acceptor ignores these conditions or fails to take note of the same before entering into the contract he does so at his peril and risk.

37. In view of the propositions of law noted above there is no escape from the conclusion that it was possible for the appellant to obtain the copies of the general sale conditions of which the appellant was made aware and even if he did not do so he must be deemed to have constructive and reasonable notice of the general sale conditions including the arbitration clause as forming the terms of the contract in view of the express provision made in the extract which was set out on the reverse of the offer with the endorsement at the bottom.

38. Mr. Mitra has further submitted that the trial court should not have exercised its discretion in favour of arbitration when there are substantial and compelling grounds against reference to arbitration. Reference was made to the decision in Serajuddin & Co. v. Michael Golodetz, AIR 1960 Cal 47 in which the appeal court in an appeal from an order under S. 34 refused stay of suit in the exercise of its discretion in reversal of the order of the trial court (reported in (1956) 60 Cal WN 128 (sic)). It was observed by P. N. Mookerjee, J. speaking for the Court, following earlier English decisions as follows:—

"It is undeniable that the parties are prima facie bound by the arbitration clause and, normally, they should be asked to keep their bargain and the suit should be stayed but that places no insurmountable bar in the way of the party, seeking to avoid arbitration and maintain the suit. It only casts upon him the onus,—undoubtedly, a heavy one—of satisfying the court that there is sufficient reason why the matter in dispute should not be referred to arbitration, but that onus can certainly be discharged in a proper case. The agreement or contract to refer to arbitration is not necessarily decisive on the point and it creates no estoppel, so far, at least as the court is concerned; it only raises a prima facie case or presumption in favour of a decision by arbitration but that presumption is certainly rebuttable and is liable to be rebutted by appropriate grounds and circumstances in a particular case."

39. The Supreme Court in the appeal from the said decision in Michael Golodetz v. Serajuddin & Co., AIR 1963 SC 1044 while dismissing the appeal observed (at p. 1046):—

"The court ordinarily requires the parties to resort for resolving disputes arising under a contract to the tribunal contemplated by them at the time of the contract. That is not because that court regards itself bound to abdicate its jurisdiction in respect of disputes within its cognizance; it merely seeks to promote the sanctity of contracts and for that purpose stays the suit. The jurisdiction of the court to try the suit remains undisputed; but the discretion of the court is on grounds of equity interposed. The court is therefore not obliged to grant stay merely because the parties even under a commercial contract agreed to submit their dispute in a matter to an arbitration tribunal in a foreign country. It is for the court having regard to all the circumstances, to arrive at a conclusion whether sufficient reasons are made out for refusing to grant stay. Whether the circumstances in a given case make out sufficient reasons for refusing to stay a suit is essentially a question of fact."

40. The Supreme Court affirmed the High Court's finding that the facts established made out 'sufficient reason' for not granting stay of the suit.

41. Relying on these authorities Mr. Mitra submitted that the Court in the present case will not allow the arbitration agreement to be filed in the court as there are substantial grounds against such filing and serious prejudice leading almost to denial of justice will otherwise be caused to the other party. He submitted that the appellant had no business contact in Calcutta or with the Bharat Chamber of Commerce and arbitration in this city will cause irreparable prejudice and inconvenience to the appellant. Mr. Banerjee contended on the other hand that the respondent has also no business connection or office at Sirohi where the suit had already been instituted, assuming that the said court had the jurisdiction otherwise to decide the dispute, as in the offer it was expressly stipulated that the court in Calcutta will have the jurisdiction.

42. Assuming that the proposition of law laid down in Serajuddin's case is also applicable to proceeding under Section 20 of the Act, it does not appear to us that there is any insurmountable difficulty for the appellant to take necessary steps for its participation in the arbitration proceeding in Calcutta. In the context of the attending circumstances, there is no question of balance of convenience when both parties are in identical position and there is no reason to interfere in this state of affairs with the forum provided in the arbitration clause in the contract for settlement of the disputes arising therefrom.

43. Mr. Mitter has also submitted that if the appellant is relegated to arbitration, its claims may be barred by limitation in view of the provisions of S. 37 of the Arbitration Act which provides that all provisions of the Limitation Act will be applicable to arbitration as they apply to proceedings in Court. This aspect of the question should not detain us long as in the event of the claim before the Arbitration being held as barred by limitation, the suit in the court at Sirohi, which may only be stayed during the proceedings in arbitration, will proceed in accordance with law. Mr. Banerjee appearing for the respondent has also submitted to us that the respondent would concede before the arbitrators or the umpire that the time taken by the parties in the Sirohi Court should be excluded for purposes of limitation so far as the arbitration proceedings are concerned.

44. Mr. Mitter has further submitted that the court at Sirohi may proceed notwithstanding the decision of this Court on the application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act and all proceeding before the Arbitrators will be invalid in view of the provision under S. 35 of the Act. It appears that all further proceeding in the suit has been stayed during the pendency of the proceeding in this Court and we do not think it will be proper for us to express any opinion in the matter.

45. The appeal in the premises fails and is dismissed. The costs of the appeal will abide with the result of the arbitration, certified for two counsel.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, C. J.:—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 492

A. K. JANAH AND A. N. BANERJEE, JJ.

National Insurance Co. Ltd., Appellant
v. Calcutta Dock Labour Board, Respondent.

A. F. O. D. No. 369 of 1972, D/- 7-6-1977.

(A) Contract Act (9 of 1872), S. 28 — Agreement affecting jurisdiction of Court — Insurance contract — Clause in insurance policy making award on arbitration condition precedent, before right of action against insurer — Clause not hit by S. 28.

It is well settled that if the making of an award is a condition precedent for the accrual of a cause of action, then the condition has to be satisfied before the plaintiff can institute a suit. (Para 6)

A clause, contained in the condition of the contract of insurance, provided that all differences between the parties arising out of the policy were to be referred to arbitration in the manner laid down in the said condition. The obtaining of an award was a condition precedent to any right of action against the insurer. Such a condition was not hit by S. 28, Contract Act. On a proper construction of the clause it was clear that the condition had to be satisfied before the plaintiff-insured could institute a suit for recovery of damages against the Insurance Company, for damage to car by fire. It cannot be argued that the liability of the defendant-insurer had to be determined by the court at first, and then with regard to the quantum of loss or damages the matter had to be referred to arbitration. AIR 1923 Bom 249, Distinguished; (1856) 25 LJ Ex 308, Relied on. (Para 6)

(B) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 8, R. 8 — New ground of defence — Point affecting jurisdiction of Court based on arbitration clause not taken in written statement — Defendant submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court — Held that the defendant waived his right to insist upon the arbitration clause. Sitti Kantha Lahiri and Parimal Das, for Appellant; P. N. De and Samir Kumar Bose, for Respondent.

JANAH, J:— This appeal is on behalf of the defendant and it arises out of a suit for recovery of damages to the extent of Rs. 11,155.24 p. The respondent instituted the suit for damages against the appellant on account of loss suffered to a Jeep belonging to the respondent bearing registration No. WBD 231 which was insured with the appellant for a sum of Rs. 24,029.80 p. The loss was suffered as a result of the vehicle being set on fire by some of the workers belonging or who belonged to the respondent, Calcutta Dock Labour Board. It was alleged by the plaintiff that as a result of the fire the vehicle was heavily damaged and the cost of repair was assessed at Rs. 11,170.24 p. by Khettry Motors. The defendant was informed of the damage and of the cost of repair but the defendant illegally disclaimed its liability. Subsequently, the Jeep was repaired by Khettry Motors at a cost of Rupees 11,155.24 p. which was paid by the plaintiff to Khettry Motors. The plaintiff respondent brought the suit for recovery of the said sum on the basis of the comprehensive policy.

2. The defendant contested the suit by filing a written statement. The written statement was filed on February 23, 1970. In that written statement, the defendant denied its liability for the amount claimed, on two grounds. The two grounds were that the plaintiff not having referred the claim to arbitration within 12 calendar months from the defendant's disclaimer of the liability, the claim must be deemed to have been abandoned by the plaintiff in terms of condition No. 7 of the Policy. The second ground was that the damage to the vehicle was caused by riot and the plaintiff was, therefore, not entitled to any compensation in terms of the general exception No. 4 of the Policy. Subsequently, on the date of hearing on 18th May, 1971, the defendant filed an additional written statement which was accepted by the Court. By the said additional written statement the defendant introduced a further defence to the effect that condition No. 7 of the Policy lays down that any dispute between the parties arising out of the Policy shall be referred to arbitration and the making of an award shall be a condition precedent to any right of action against the Corporation. As the dispute in question was not referred to arbitration and no award was made, the suit is not maintainable in accordance with the terms of the said condition No. 7.

3. Originally six issues were framed but subsequently by an order dated 4th August, 1971 the issues were recast and the issues originally framed were substantially altered. The parties went to trial on the issues thus recast. The trial Court, upon a consideration of the materials on record came to the conclusion that the damage was caused by fire but there was no rioting as alleged by the defendant and therefore, it did not fall within the general exceptions contained in Cl. 4 of the Policy. The trial court found that although there was repudiation of the claim by the defendant, it was still open to the plaintiff to insist on the performance of the arbitration clause, inasmuch as, the entire arbitration agreement was not repudiated by the defendant. The trial court further found that the contract contained in Cl. 7 of the Policy to the effect that claim shall have to be made within 12 months from the date of disclaimer by the insurer was not hit by S. 28 of the Indian Contract Act and that Condition No. 7 of the Policy was valid in law. The trial court, however, found that in the circumstances of the case, the defendant waived its right with regard to the arbitration clause and the suit was, therefore, maintainable. The trial court accordingly passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff.

4. Against the said decision of the trial court, the defendant has preferred the present appeal. Mr. Lahiri, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant, has supported the finding of the trial court that Condition No. 7 of the Policy is not hit by S. 28 of the Indian Contract Act. He has contended that S. 28 of the Indian Contract Act applies only where the period of limitation to institute a suit is curtailed but it does not apply when such a term in the contract has the effect of extinguishing the right of the plaintiff to sue or it has the effect of discharging the defendant from all liabilities in respect of the claim. He has relied upon the decisions in the Baroda Spinning and Weaving Co. Ltd. v. The Satyanarayan Marine and Fire Insurance Co. Ltd., ILR 38 Bom 344: (AIR 1914 Bom 225 (2)); New Great Insurance Co. of India Ltd. v. United Equipments and Stores (Pvt.) Ltd., AIR 1970 Cal 221; Giridharilal Hanumanbux v. Eagle Star & British Dominions Insurance Co. Ltd., 27 Cal WN 955: (AIR 1924 Cal 186) and Dawood Tar Mahomad Bros. v. Queensland Insurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1949 Cal 390. Term 7 of the Contract of Insurance may be referred to in this connection. The said term reads as follows:—

"All differences arising out of this Policy shall be referred to the decision of an Arbitrator to be appointed in writing by each of the parties within one calendar month after having been required in writing so to do by either of the parties or in case the Arbitrators do not agree or in case the Arbitrators be appointed by the Arbitrators before entering the reference. The Umpire shall sit with the Arbitrators and preside at their meetings and the making of an award shall be a condition precedent to any right of action against the Corporation. If the Corporation shall disclaim liability to the Insured for any claim herein and such claim shall not within 12 calendar months from the date of such disclaimer will be referred to arbitration under the provisions herein contained, then the claim shall for all purposes be deemed to have been abandoned and shall not, thereafter be recoverable hereunder."

5. It is clear from the aforesaid condition that all differences between the parties arising out of the Policy must be referred to arbitration in the manner laid down in the said condition, and the obtaining of an award is a condition precedent to any right of action against the Insurer. In the present case, a dispute arose between the Insured and the Insurer over a claim for compensation made by the plaintiff against the defendant. There is no dispute between the parties that such difference was not referred to arbitration by any of the parties. The contention on behalf of the defendants appellant is that in the absence of any award as contemplated under the said clause the present suit is liable to be dismissed.

6. It is well settled that if the making of an award is a condition precedent for the accrual of a cause of action then the condition has to be satisfied before the plaintiff can institute a suit. Mr. De, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent contended that the repudiation was under the contract and it was not covered by the arbitration clause. He contended that the word 'disclaimer' must be a total disclaimer and it cannot be a partial disclaimer. According to him, there is no time limit fixed by the aforesaid Condition No. 7 regarding 'differences' arising out of the Policy. But for 'disclaimer' the time limit is 12 months from the date of disclaimer. He contended that the word 'claim' in the said clause is limited only to a claim for money. According to Mr. De, if the arbitration clause applied then the plaintiff not having referred to arbitration within 12 months, his claim will be deemed to have been abandoned but the right of suit would be there. He contended that otherwise if the right of suit is taken away then the said Condition No. 7 would be hit by Sec. 28 of the Indian Contract Act. In support of this proposition Mr. De relied on the decision in Vulcan Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Maharaj Singh. AIR 1976 SC 287. He relied on the observations made by the Supreme Court in that case in support of his contention that as soon as there is a rejection of the claim the only remedy open to the claimant is to commence a legal proceeding, namely, a suit for the establishment of the company's liability. After such liability has been determined by the Court, the question of quantum of the loss or damage may have to be referred to arbitration. In so far as this aspect of the matter is concerned it appears that the case which the Supreme Court was considering contained an arbitration clause as well as other clauses relating to the dispute which were quite different from the present case. In the case before the Supreme Court Clause 18 which is relevant for the present purpose specifically mentioned that "if any difference arises as to the amount of loss or damage such difference..... shall be referred to arbitration". Similarly, Cl. 19 provided that "in no case whatever shall the company be liable for any loss or damage after the expiration of 12 months from the happening of loss or damages unless the claim is a subject-matter of pending action or arbitration". It is in this context the Supreme Court made the observations on which reliance has been placed by Mr. De. On the facts of the two cases, we are unable to agree with Mr. De that in the present case the liability of the defendant has to be determined by the Court at first, and then with regard to the quantum of loss or damage the matter is to be referred to arbitration. A clause as is contained in Condition No. 7 of the Contract of Insurance in the present case, namely, that the obtaining of an award shall be a condition precedent to the right of action or suit upon the policy came up for consideration in the case of Scott v. Avery, (1856) 25 LJ Ex 308 and since then such clauses have commonly come to be known as Scott v. Avery clause. It has been held in a large number of cases that if the arbitration clause is contained in a comprehensive language to include any kind of dispute arising out of the Policy, then, the obtaining of an award by arbitration is a condition precedent to the starting of any legal proceeding. Such a clause has also been held to be a valid one. Mr. De also relied on the decision in the Eagle Star and British Dominions Insurance Company v. Dina Nath, ILR 47 Bom 509; (AIR 1923 Bom 249) in support of his contention that in a contract for insurance containing such a clause the liability of the company has to be determined first in a suit and thereafter the question of determination of the quantum of loss or damage may be fixed by arbitration. The observations of the Bombay High Court relied on by Mr. De in support of his contention were made with reference to Cl. 13 of the agreement in that case which contained conditions which were different from the present case. On a proper construction of Cl. 7 we are unable to agree with Mr. De that if the Corporation disclaims the liability the Insured will have to have the liability determined by the Court and thereafter the matter should be referred to arbitration for fixing the quantum of loss or damages.

7. The next question to be considered is whether the defendant waived the arbitration clause by repudiating the claim of the plaintiff and also by its own failure to refer to the dispute to arbitration and also by submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court. Before the trial court, it was argued that the defendant repudiated the claim of the plaintiff on a ground which went to the root of the contract contained in the Insurance Policy and therefore the defendant was precluded from pleading that the arbitration clause was a bar to the institution of the present suit. Several authorities were cited before the trial Court by the respective parties on this point. In this appeal, however, the said question has not been argued in that way. What was contended before us on behalf of the respondent is that the defendant submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court. It filed a written statement where-in this point was not taken. The parties went to trial upon the pleading as originally filed. Subsequently after more than a year the defendant took this defence in an additional written statement filed by it. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that the additional written statement having been accepted by the Court it related back to the date of filing of the original written statement. The additional written statement became a part of the written statement and, as such, it cannot be said that the defendant had waived its right to insist upon the arbitration clause. It would appear from the issues which were originally framed that the defence of the defendant was that there was non-disclosure and mis-statements by the plaintiff in relation to the Insurance Policy. The defendant challenged the plaintiff's claim on these grounds. The defendant went to trial with this case which was made out by it. Subsequently, when the trial commenced the defendant took up the other defence regarding the arbitration clause. Although the additional written statement was accepted by the Court, it cannot be said that the defence taken in the additional written statement was taken by the defendant when it appeared in the suit to contest the plaintiff's claim. That being the position, it must be held that the defendant waived its right to insist upon the arbitration clause. Therefore, the trial Court was right in coming to the finding that there was waiver on the part of the defendant.

8. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that the Insurance Policy contains certain general exceptions. Under Cl. 4 of the general exceptions any accident, loss or damage resulting from strike, riot or civil commotion will not make the Corporation liable for compensation. It was contended that the said clause further provides that it was for the Insured to prove that the accident, loss or damage arose independently of the exceptions mentioned in Cl. 4. It was argued that the plaintiff had not been able to prove in the present case that the damage was caused independently of riot. Reference was made to paragraph 4 of the plaint wherein it has been stated that "some recalcitrant workers maliciously and/or out of grudge and/or with a view to cause damage set fire to the said vehicle". This statement in the plaint taken along with the evidence, it was contended, showed that the damage was caused by riot. The Labour Officer of the plaintiff who was examined as P.W. 1 has denied that there was any rioting or strike on the relevant date. In cross-examination, it was suggested to him that some workers were armed with deadly weapons and they engaged themselves in rioting. This suggestion was denied by the said witness. On the other hand, the witness examined on behalf of the defendant has admitted in evidence that although several persons were arrested no charge-sheet was submitted. The trial court has considered the evidence of these two witnesses and has come to the conclusion that it cannot be said that there was rioting on the day on which the vehicle was set on fire. He has discussed the legal position in this connection and has referred to the relevant sections of the Indian Penal Code in coming to his conclusion. In our view, we find nothing on record to take a view different from that which has been taken by the trial Court on this aspect of the case.

9. This appeal, therefore, fails and it is accordingly dismissed with costs.

A. N. BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

PRADYOT KUMAR BANERJEE AND GANENDRA NARAYAN RAY, JJ.

Kartick Chandra Shaw, Petitioner v. Sm. Ranjita Pal and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 4513 of 1975, D/- 19-5-1977.

Succession Act (39 of 1925), S. 283 — Application for grant of probate — Who can oppose — Agreement for purchase — Whether creates an interest. AIR 1956 Cal 462 held not good law in view of AIR 1967 SC 744 and AIR 1977 SC 774. (T. P. Act (1882), S. 54).

A party to the agreement for purchase has no right or interest in the immovable property left by the testator and as such, has no locus standi to oppose the application for grant of probate under S. 283 of the Succession Act. His claim at best is a claim for filing a suit.

(Paras 8, 10)

A contract of sale in view of S. 54 of T. P. Act does not of itself create any interest in, or charge on, the property. The personal obligation created by a contract of sale (as recognised in S. 3 of the Specific Relief Act and S. 91 of the Trusts Act) is described in S. 40 of the T. P. Act as an obligation arising out of contract and annexed to the ownership of property, but not amounting to an interest or easement therein. AIR 1956 Cal 462 held not good law in view of AIR 1967 SC 744 and AIR 1977 SC 774; AIR 1958 Cal 377 and AIR 1932 Cal 734, Rel. on.

S. P. Roy Chowdhury, Phani Bhusan Das and Ashok Maity, for Petitioner; B. K. Pande and M. K. Roy, for Opposite Parties.

BANERJEE, J.:— This rule is directed against an order passed by the District Judge, Midnapore, adding the opposite party No. 8 to contest the Will on the ground that he has acquired by virtue of a deed of agreement executed by two heirs of the testator in respect of the property which the testator left behind (sic). The case of the petitioner in this application is that on 6th Feb., 1973 the petitioner as executor of the Will of late Upendranath Shaw filed an application for grant of the probate of the Will dated 29th Oct., 1969 left by late Upendra Nath Shaw before the District Delegate, namely, the Second Court of the learned Munsif, Contai giving rise to J. Misc. Case No. 13 of '73 but the case having been contested by the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2, the said application for grant of probate was returned to the petitioner for presentation before the learned District Judge, Midnapore. In the said application for grant of probate, it was stated that Upendra Nath died at his residence on 6th Dec., 1971 leaving a Will duly executed by him on 29th Oct., 1969. It is stated that the Will was an outcome of free Will of the testator and was executed and attested in accordance with law. It is further stated that the petitioner herein was appointed executor. In the said application the opposite parties Nos. 1 to 7 were named as near relatives of the testator, opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 being the two daughters, the opposite party No. 3 being the widow and the opposite parties Nos. 4 to 7 being the other four sons. Initially the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2, the daughters of the testator contested the application for grant of probate on the ground that the testator has no capacity and alleging exercise of fraud, undue influence and coercion on the testator by the legatees. The other heirs of the testator however did not challenge the Will. It is further stated that the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 filed application for injunction restraining the petitioner and opposite parties Nos. 3 to 7 from alienating the properties mentioned in the schedule of the application for grant of probate. The said application was contested by the petitioner and other sons of the testator and the learned District Judge rejected the application for temporary injunction. Subsequent to that, the opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 also filed an application before the Subordinate Judge who was hearing the matter on transfer that they are not going to oppose this application for grant of probate and on such application being filed the learned Subordinate Judge fixed 23rd Sept., 1975 for hearing ex parte the application for grant of probate. On 22nd Sept., 1975 however the opposite party No. 8 filed an application for permission to contest the probate proceeding on the ground that he has acquired an interest by virtue of two deeds of agreements for sale executed in his favour by opposite parties Nos. 1 and 2 on 28th March, 1973 on receipt of Rs. 6,000 agreeing to sell three plots of land with structures standing thereon. It is stated that the premises was occupied by the opposite party No. 2 as a tenant at a monthly rental of Rs. 35. It is further stated that in view of the agreement for sale the opposite party No. 8 has acquired an interest in the estate of the deceased and is entitled to contest the Will for grant of a probate under S. 283 of the Indian Succession Act. It must be stated that the agreement for sale, which is annexed to the affidavit-in-opposition is admittedly an unregistered document. The Court below having allowed the application of the opposite party No. 8 to contest the probate proceeding, the petitioner herein moved this application and obtained the present rule.

2. Mr. Roy Chowdhury on behalf of the petitioner contended that the agreement for sale cannot and does not create any interest in the immoveable property and the relief by way of specific performance is discretionary to the Court and as such the right does not create any right whatsoever in the estate of the deceased and therefore the application filed by the opposite party for addition of party in the probate proceeding for the purpose of challenging the Will is not maintainable. Secondly Mr. Roy Chowdhury contended that the opposite party No. 8 may have some interest under the agreement for sale but he has no interest in the estate of the deceased at all and as such the application by him is not maintainable. Thirdly it is contended by Mr. Roy Chowdhury that the bare possibility of filing the suit would not give the party concerned an interest sufficient to oppose the probate of the Will. Mr. Roy Chowdhury further contended that a document, creating an interest in an immoveable property must be registered. An agreement for sale even if registered cannot create an interest in the immoveable property.

3. Mr. Roy Chowdhury further contended that the application of opposite party No. 8 is premature because if he has an interest he can after the grant of probate pray for revocation of the grant and the Court has no power to thrust a party on the propounder if he does not want to make (him) a party in the proceeding.

4. Mr. Panda on behalf of the respondent however challenged the contention put forward by Mr. Roy Chowdhury. In so far as the Court's power to add a party to the proceeding is concerned, it must be stated that the Court has a power to add a person to the proceeding if the Court is satisfied that his claim of interest in the estate of the deceased is tenable. Mr. Panda however contended that under S. 55 (6) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, the agreement for sale creates sufficient interest in the property by which a person covered by the agreement can maintain an application under S. 283 of the Transfer of Property Act. Mr. Panda relied upon the case reported in AIR 1956 Cal 462 (Rabindra Nath v. Harendra Kumar),

5. In our opinion, the agreement for sale does not create an interest in the property which is the subject-matter of the sale. Under S. 54 of the T. P. Act an agreement for sale of immoveable property is a contract that a sale of such property shall take place on terms settled between the parties. It does not create any interest in or charge on such property or in other words the contract for sale does not create either an interest in or a charge on the property. It at best is a contract for sale which is only an equitable right of a purchaser and it does not create any interest in the land which is the subject-matter of the contract. In the case reported in AIR 1956 Cal 148 (India Elec. Works v. Mantosh) it has been held by the Division Bench of this Court that even after a decree for specific performance has been passed, the purchaser has no interest in the property. From S. 54 of the T. P. Act it is clear to us that the agreement for sale does not create of itself any interest in or charge on the property which was contracted to be sold between the parties,

6. In the case reported in AIR 1967 SC 744 (Ram Baran v. Ram Mohit) it has been held, inter alia, that in the case of an agreement for sale entered into prior to the passing of the T. P. Act, it was the accepted doctrine in India that the agreement created an interest in the land itself in favour of the purchaser, and following this doctrine the view was that a covenant for pre-emption contained in a deed of partition, which was unlimited in point of time, was not enforceable in law. But there has been a change in the legal position in India since the amending of the Transfer of Property Act in 1929. Section 54 of that Act states that contract for sale of immoveable property "does not of itself, create any interest in or charge on such property". In the case reported in AIR 1967 SC 978 (Lalji Jetha v. Kalidas) the Supreme Court also decided in the same line. At page 981 in para. 9 it has been stated that S. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act in terms provides that such a contract of sale does not create as in English law any equitable estate in the immoveable property which is the subject-matter of the contract. But the contract creates an obligation which is recognised by S. 3 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877 and S. 91 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882. But the Supreme Court in both the cases held that a contract for sale does not create any interest in or charge on the immoveable property contracted to be sold. In the case reported in AIR 1977 SC 774 (Narandas v. S. A. Kamtam) the Supreme Court also considered the nature of the right created on the immoveable property in respect of a contract of sale. It has been stated that a contract of sale in view of S. 54 of T. P. Act does not of itself create any interest in, or charge on the property. The personal obligation created by a contract of sale (as recognised in S. 3 of the Specific Relief Act and S. 91 of the Trusts Act) is described in S. 40 of the T. P. Act as an obligation arising out of contract and annexed to the ownership of property, but not amounting to an interest or easement therein.

7. Mr. Panda however heavily relied on the case reported in AIR 1956 Cal 462 (Rabindra Nath Banerjee v. Harendra Kumar). In the said judgment the single Judge of this Court considered the matter under O. 21, R. 89 regarding the interest of a person who is a party to the agreement of sale and payment of earnest money before proclamation for sale. His Lordship was considering the effect of S. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act in the following terms:—

"The language of S. 54 emphasises that 'of itself' a contract for sale does not create any interest or charge on the property. But very often a contract for sale does not stand by itself where there is a part payment of the purchase price or payment of what is called the earnest money. In that event S. 55 (6) (b), Transfer of Property Act would be attracted and it will be treated as though the ownership of the property had passed and there is a charge for part of the purchase money paid."

In our opinion, this observation cannot be said to be a correct proposition of law in view of the Supreme Court's decision cited above. The interest in the immovable property valued at more than Rs. 100 cannot, in our opinion, be transferred by an unregistered document as is clear under S. 17 of the Registration Act.

8. In our opinion, therefore, a party to the agreement for purchase has no right or interest in the immovable property left by the testator and as such, has no locus standi to oppose the application for grant of probate under S. 283 of the Indian Succession Act. The view we take, is supported by the decisions of the Division Bench of this Court reported in 62 Cal WN 444: (AIR 1958 Cal 377) (Southern Bank v. K. Ganeriwalla) in which it has been held that a creditor of the deceased testator has no locus standi to oppose the grant of a probate. The Division Bench of this Court in considering the principle of Privy Council's decision came to the finding that the creditor of an heir of the deceased is not entitled to citation and on that ground the probate cannot be revoked. At p. 455 (of Cal WN): (at p. 384 of AIR Cal) their Lordships held as follows:—

"All that I am concerned with at the present moment is that it was held in this case that a creditor of a testator's heir had no interest in his estate."

9. It is further held that a creditor of an heir of a testator had no interest in his estate and was not entitled to be served with a citation. In the present case we have also held that by dint of an agreement for sale the parties to the agreement have no interest or charge in respect of immoveable property.

10. Mr. Panda contended that the bare possibility of an interest is necessary to establish the locus standi of the opposite party No. 8 and there cannot be any doubt that the opposite party No. 8 has a possibility on the basis of the agreement of sale and therefore he must be said to be a person claiming to have any interest in the estate of the deceased. In the case reported in 36 Cal WN 635: (AIR 1932 Cal 734) (Nabin Chandra v. Nibaran Chandra) it has been held that "possibility of an interest" does not apply to the possibility of a party filling a character which would give him an interest, but the possibility of his having an interest in the result of setting aside the Will. It was held therein that in interpreting S. 283 of the Indian Succession Act, a person must have a real interest in the estate and a purchaser from an heir after the death of the testator has a locus standi and to have it, it is not necessary for the objector to show that he had an interest in the estate at the time of the testator's death. The main point for consideration is whether the person applying to be added in order to oppose the grant of probate must have a real interest in the estate of a deceased. A person entering into an agreement for sale has no interest in the immovable property left by the deceased testator. His claim at best is a claim for filing a suit. Moreover the case reported in 36 Cal WN 635: (AIR 1932 Cal 734) (Nabin Chandra v. Nibaran Chandra) has specifically repelled the argument that the "possibility of an interest does not apply to the possibility of a party filling a character which would give him an interest".

11. In our opinion, therefore, the learned Judge was not right in allowing the application of the agreement-holder opposite party No. 8 to be added as a party defendant.

12. The Rule is, therefore, made absolute. The order of the learned Judge is set aside.

13. There will be no order as to costs.

G. N. RAY, J.:— I agree.

Rule made absolute.

Purna Chandra Basu and Prafulla Kumar Chatterjee (Jr.), for Appellants; Ranjit Kumar Banerjee and Parantap Ray, for Respondents.

JANAH, J.:— This is a Letters Patent appeal arising out of a second appeal. The heirs and legal representatives of the defendant No. 1 are the appellants before us.

2. The plaintiff-respondent instituted a suit for a declaration that C. S. Khattian No. 164 of mouza Chalk Baidyabati recording a jama of Rs. 91 in respect of the land and the tank in the names of the defendants as tenants under the plaintiff was erroneous and also for a declaration of the plaintiff's khas dakhali title to the said tank and the land in the aforesaid khattian except 0.27 acres of land on the bank of the tank in plot No. 823 which appertained to the defendants' jama of Rs. 30. The trial court as well as the lower appellate court found in favour of the plaintiff and accordingly decreed the suit. The courts below also found that the garden and the tank in question had come in khas possession of the plaintiff in the year 1322 B. S. and since then Ambika Dholey possessed the same as an agent of the plaintiff and after the death of Ambika the defendants had been possessing the same as agents of the plaintiff. It was also found that 0.27 acres of land on the bank of the tank in plot No. 823 appertained to the defendants' jama of Rs. 30. Against the decision of the lower appellate court the appellants filed a second appeal to this Court. The second appeal came up for hearing before Chittatosh Mookerji J. who affirmed the decision of the lower appellate court. Against the decision in the said second appeal the appellants obtained leave under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and they have filed the present appeal.

3. Mr. Basu, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellants, has, in the first place, contended that the defendant No. 2 Sudhanya Kumar Dholey died during the pendency of the suit in the trial court but his heirs and legal representatives were not substituted in his place. According to Mr. Basu the entire suit had abated and, therefore, no decree could have been passed in favour of the plaintiff. It appears from the judgment passed in the second appeal that this point was raised for the first time in second appeal before this Court. The appellants did not raise the question of abatement either in the trial Court or in the first appellate court. On the other hand, it appears that after the decree was passed against the defendants although the defendant No. 2 had died before the decree the appellants included the names of the alleged heirs and legal representatives of the defendant No. 2 as respondents Nos. 2 to 7 in the appeal before the first appellate court. By an order dated Feb. 24, 1959 that Court directed the appellants to show cause why the names of the respondents Nos. 2 to 7 should not be expunged, and no cause having been shown, the first appellate court by an order dated 21st March, 1959 expunged the names of the respondents Nos. 2 to 7 from the Memorandum of Appeal. The appellants did not urge before the lower appellate court the question of abatement of the suit on account of the death of the said defendant No. 2. In these circumstances, the trial court or the first appellate court had no occasion to consider the question whether the right to sue did or did not survive against the remaining defendants only. In our view, the learned Judge hearing the second appeal rightly overruled the appellants' objection regarding the abatement of the suit as a whole. A similar question arose for decision in P. M. A. M. Vellayan Chetty v. Jothi Mahalinga Iyer, ILR 39 Mad 386 (AIR 1916 Mad 574) and it was held that under such circumstances the appellants are precluded from taking up such a point for the first time in appeal on the ground that an unsuccessful litigant has no right to argue the case more than once merely on the ground that the other party to the proceedings had died at the time of hearing. The learned Judges pointed out that O. 22, R. 4, Cl. (iii) provided that if the legal representative of the deceased defendant is not brought on the record within the time limited by law the suit shall abate against such defendant, thereby indicating that the suit could proceed against the other parties on the record. After pointing out other instances whether the suit or the appeal could proceed against the parties on record their Lordships observed:

"The object of these various provisions is to ensure that no party shall be prejudiced by hearing in his absence. No rule of law has been quoted to us which enables a party who has had the benefit of full hearing to take advantage of the absence of a party on the record."

In the present case although the defendant No. 2 had died the appellants were given full opportunity of hearing before the trial court as well as before the first appellate court. The appellants did not suffer any prejudice on account of the heirs and legal representatives of the defendant No. 2 not having been brought on record. In Dhurm Das Panday v. Mussammatt Shama Sundri Dibiah, (1837-1841) 3 Moo Ind App 229 (PC), the judicial committee observed:—

"No objection was made in either of those courts that the proper parties were not before the court. If such an objection had been made, it might have been removed, and I think it is a safe maxim for a court of appeal to be governed by—that an objection, which, if taken, might have been cured, and which has not been taken in the court below, shall not be taken in the Court of Appeal."

4. Mr. Banerjee, learned Advocate for the respondent contended that the present suit was instituted by the plaintiff on the allegation that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 were in possession of the disputed land as agents of the plaintiff and their possession was the possession of the plaintiff. Mr. Banerjee further contended that on the death of the defendant No. 2 the agency in so far as the said defendant is concerned came to an end. It was accordingly contended that there could be no question of substituting the heirs and legal representatives of the deceased defendant No. 2 in this suit. Mr. Banerjee relied upon S. 201 of the Contract Act which provides for the termination of the agency. In the present case on the death of the defendant No. 2 the agency of the said defendant stood terminated. Therefore, there was no necessity for substituting his heirs and legal representatives in the suit. This contention raised on behalf of the respondent has considerable force in it and it must be given effect to. In the facts and circumstances of the present case we are of the opinion that the appellants' objection on this ground was rightly overruled by the learned Judge in the second appeal and we see no reason why the appellants should be allowed to urge this objection in the present appeal.

5. The next point urged by Mr. Basu on behalf of the appellants is that the suit is one under the proviso to S. 111-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act and it is governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act of 1908. Mr. Basu contended that the record of rights was finally published on the 10th April, 1937. He has produced a copy of the Calcutta Gazette of the year 1937 in which the notification appears at page 945 of Part I showing that the record of rights was finally published on 10th April, 1937. His contention is that the suit having been filed on the 8th Sept., 1954, it is admittedly beyond 6 years, and as such, it is barred by limitation. In support of this contention Mr. Basu relied upon the case of Raja Pramodo Nath Roy v. Asiruddin Mondal, (1941) 15 Cal WN 896. That was a case where the record of rights recorded the status of the plaintiff as that of a tenure holder. The plaintiff claimed that he was an occupancy rayat, and instituted the suit for such a declaration. It was held that the suit was not one under S. 104-H of the Bengal Tenancy Act but it was under the proviso to S. 111-A of the said Act. It was held that such a suit would be within time if brought within 6 years from the date of final publication of the record of rights. In that case the plaintiff was aggrieved by the erroneous entry in the record of right and his cause of action arose with the final publication of the record of rights. That case, therefore, cannot have any application to the present case. The next decision cited by Mr. Basu is the case of Ashutosh Bhuiyan v. Radhikalal Goswami, ILR 56 Cal 407 : (AIR 1929 Cal 481). The question which arose for decision in that case was whether the suit out of which that appeal arose was one under S. 111-A or 111-B of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It was held that the suit was one under S. 111-B. That decision has no relevance in the present case. The next decision cited by Mr. Basu in support of his contention is Rai Keshab Chandra Banerjee v. Madan Mohan Poddar, (1936) 40 Cal WN 22. There it was held that where a suit is brought by a person for the declaration of any right of his as contemplated by the proviso to S. 111-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the suit is within time under Art. 120 of the Limitation Act, if brought within six years when his cause of action arose, that is to say, when any injury to his right is threatened. It was further held that such a suit is not barred because as ancillary to the relief as to the injury he also asks for a declaration that the entry in the record of rights is incorrect and the suit is brought beyond six years from the date when the record was finally published. In our view, this decision, instead of supporting Mr. Basu's contention, goes against him. The learned Judge hearing the second appeal did not also permit the appellants to raise the question of limitation for the first time in the second appeal on the ground that in the present case the question of limitation was a mixed question of fact and law and not a pure question of law. In Banarsi Das v. Kanshi Ram, AIR 1963 SC 1165, it has been pointed out that a new plea of limitation which is not purely on a question of law but on a mixed question of fact and law should not be allowed to be raised for the first time in a second appeal. Moreover, the present suit cannot be said to be one under the proviso to S. 111-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff was not bound to bring a suit for a declaration that the entry in the record of rights was erroneous unless and until there was an invasion of his right. Cause of action to institute a suit did not arise merely because there was an erroneous entry. This view finds support from the decisions in Rai Kiron Chandra Roy Bahadur v. Tarak Nath Gangopadhyay, 40 Cal WN 566 : (AIR 1936 Cal 456); Gannan Dunkerley and Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1970 SC 1433 and Bolo v. Koklan, 57 Ind App 325 : (AIR 1930 PC 270). In our view the learned Judge rightly disallowed the plea of limitation to be raised on behalf of the appellants in the Second Appeal.

6. The last contention put forward by Mr. Basu has been that the suit is barred under the proviso to S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. It has been argued that the plaintiff having brought the suit for a mere declaration without a prayer for any consequential relief, the suit was not maintainable. According to Mr. Basu the plaintiff ought to have prayed for recovery of possession, inasmuch as, it is the admitted case of the plaintiff that the defendants are in possession. In the present case the plaintiff asked for a declaration that C. S. Khattian No. 164 recording the jama of Rs. 91 in the names of the defendants under the plaintiff was erroneous. The plaintiff further prayed for a declaration of his khas dakhali title to the tank and the land in Khatian No. 164 excepting 0.27 acres of land thereof. The plaintiff's case is that the defendants are in possession as agents, for and on behalf of the plaintiff. That being so, it was not necessary for the plaintiff to ask for any further relief. The plaintiff would not have asked for recovery of possession because the plaintiff was in possession through the defendants who were alleged to be his agents. Further relief is to be prayed for only in cases where the decree would otherwise become infructuous. If there is no necessity, further relief need not be asked for. In Vemareddy Ramo- raghava Reddy v. Konduru Seshu Reddy AIR 1967 SC 436, it has been pointed out that S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act is not exhaustive of the cases in which a declaratory decree may be made and the Courts have powers to grant such a decree independently of the requirements of the section. Whether further relief apart from the declaration should be asked for or not depends upon the allegations with which the plaintiff comes to Court. In the present case, upon the allegations made in the plaint we are of the opinion that the plaintiff was not required to pray for any further relief. Indeed, it appears from the Ext. 3 series which are some of the letters written by Kanai Lal Dholey, the defendant No. 1 himself, that the defendants admitted the plaintiff's title and possession and that they were managing the property for and on behalf of the plaintiff. In Exts. 3 (3) 14 which is a letter dated 19th Sept., 1954 the defendant No. 1 is assuring the plaintiff that everything is being done by the defendant to protect the interest of the plaintiff and the plaintiff has nothing to worry about. In another letter dated 18th Bhadra, Ext. 3 (3) 15 the defendant No. 1 is informing the plaintiff that the intermediary interest has been abolished under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act and he is asking for certain papers to take steps on behalf of the plaintiff under the said Act for filing returns etc. It appears that some of the letters have been written even after the institution of the suit. On these facts we do not see how it can be said that the plaintiff ought to have asked for recovery of possession. Mr. Basu has relied upon a number of decisions in support of his contention. The said decisions are reported in 42 Cal WN 930 : (AIR 1938 PC 73), Sundar Singh Mallasingh v. Managing Committee, Sundar- singh Mallasingh Rajput High School;

AIR 1942 Cal 245, Anila Bala Devi v. Madhabendu Narayan Roy; AIR 1974 Cal 342, Kumud Ranjan Banerjee v. Manabendra Banerjee. It is not however necessary for us to consider these cases in detail because these cases are different on facts. On this aspect of the matter Chittatosh Mookherji J. took the view that even if this contention of the appellants were accepted his Lordship would have remanded the matter to give the plaintiff an opportunity to amend his plaint. The view taken by Chittatosh Mookherji J. appears to us to be in consonance with justice. Mr. Basu relied on two decisions reported in (1902) ILR 25 Mad 504, Surya Narayanamurti v. Tam- manna and ILR 55 Cal 590 : (AIR 1928 Cal 425), Sadhu Kathalia v. Dharendra Nath Roy and contended that where in spite of objection being taken by the defendant the plaintiff does not amend his plaint, he should not be given any further opportunity to amend the plaint at the appellate stage. In the present case the plaintiff had no occasion to amend his plaint because he had been successful throughout the litigation, and the defendant's plea that the suit is barred by S. 42 of Specific Relief Act has been overruled throughout.

7. For the reasons mentioned above, this appeal fails and it is accordingly dismissed with costs.

R. BHATTACHARYA, J.— I agree.
Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1977 CALCUTTA 503

NIRMAL CHANDRA MUKHERJI AND BANKIM CHANDRA RAY, JJ.

Babulal Singhania, Petitioner v. Piru- dan Ojha, Opposite Party.

Civil Rules Nos. 3457 and 3036 of 1975, D/- 5-5-1977.

Arbitration Act (1940), S. 34 — Stay of suit — Steps in proceedings — Defendant praying for time in suit — It amounts to steps in the suit — Application under S. 34 is barred — Courts also taking view that matter should be decided in suit because of serious allegations of fraud and misappropriation — High Court refused to interfere in revision. (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115).

The acts of the defendant in praying for time both in the injunction matter for filing objection as well as in the suit orally and by written application clearly and unequivocally display an intention on the part of the defendant to submit to the jurisdiction of the court in order to have the controversy decided in the suit. As such these acts amount to taking steps in the suit within the meaning of S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940. This debars the defendant from making an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act for stay of the said suit and for referring the disputes for adjudication in the arbitration proceedings. Case law discussed. (Para 29)

It also appears from the plaint that serious allegations of fraud and misappropriation of loans sanctioned in the name of the partnership business and paid to the fictitious customers of the defendant during the period when the defendant, was in charge of the management of the partnership business have been made against the defendant in the plaint. Such serious and grave allegations can be properly investigated and decided by the Court in the suit and not by the arbitrator in an arbitration proceeding. (Para 30)

Further, the courts below have held that the suit should be heard by the civil court and its proceedings should not be stayed under S. 34 of the Act in view of the serious and grave allegations of fraud and misappropriation made against the defendant. There is no infirmity in the finding. Moreover the findings arrived at by the courts below cannot be said to be unreasonable or capricious and as such the same cannot be set aside in the revisional application. (Para 30)

Syamacharan Mitter and Samaprasanna Roy Choudhury, for Petitioner;

Barun Kumar Roy Choudhury, for Opposite Party.

B. C. RAY, J.:— These two Rules arise out of two orders passed in Misc. Appeal No. 35 of 1975 and Title Suit No. 22 of 1976 respectively. Civil Rule No. 3457 of 1975 is directed against the order passed on 13th of August, 1975 by the District Judge, Howrah in Misc. Appeal No. 35 of 1975 affirming the order No. 18 dated 7-3-75 passed by the Munsif, First Court, Howrah in Title Suit No. 267 of 1974 rejecting the application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act. Civil Rule No. 3036 of 1975 is directed against the order No. 28 dated 31st July, 1975 passed by the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Howrah in Title Suit No. 22 of 1975 allowing the plaintiff opposite party's application under O. 39, R. 7 of the Civil P. C. for issue of a commission for making inventory of the articles and account papers as mentioned in the petition. On the prayer of both the parties these two rules were heard together.

2. The opposite party, Pirudan Ojha in Civil Rule No. 3457 of 1975 instituted on Nov. 21, 1974 a suit being Title Suit No. 267 of 1974 in the First Court of Munsif, Howrah against the defendant petitioner Babulal Singhania for dissolution of partnership and for accounts stating inter alia that the plaintiff and the defendant carried on the partnership business under the name and style of "Siha Processing & Co." at premises No. 4, Gopalram Pathak Road, on the basis of an agreement executed and registered by them on June 6, 1969 which was subsequently amended by a deed of agreement dated September 14, 1971, that in the said business the plaintiff has 40% share and the defendant has 60% share, that there were differences with the defendant who refused to render any account of loans taken from United Commercial Bank and defaulted in payment of instalment to the bank and of the monthly rents to the landlord of the factory premises. It has also been alleged that the defendant removed all account books and other relevant papers from the office of the factory and the loans sanctioned by the bank in favour of the partnership firm were actually paid by cheques to different customers of the partnership business most of whom were fictitious customers and the defendant thus misappropriated a huge sum of money. The plaintiff on October 14, 1974, served a notice for dissolution of the partnership which was a partnership-at-will on the defendant and he repeatedly requested the defendant to settle all disputes by referring to Arbitration in terms of the partnership agreement but without any effect. Hence this suit has been filed.

3. The opposite party, it is stated in the petition, tried to have an ex parte decree in the said suit but the defendant petitioner on coming to know of the same appeared in the said suit and filed an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 for stay of further proceedings of the said suit and for referring the disputes to Arbitration in accordance with the terms of Cl. 9 of the partnership agreement.

4. The plaintiff opposite party filed a written objection contending inter alia that the plaintiff came into the management of the firm only on and from 14-9-1971, that there was no valid and subsisting agreement between the parties, that the partnership business had been dissolved prior to the institution of the suit by a notice dissolving the partnership firm and the petitioner requested to settle the disputes by Arbitration but without any effect and as such the application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act should be rejected.

5. On March 7, 1975, the learned Munsif, First Court, Howrah by Order No. 18 rejected the application holding that the partnership agreement was not in force as the plaintiff dissolved the partnership by a notice dated 14-10-74 and there was serious allegation of criminal misappropriation against the defendant which should not be referred to the Arbitrator for adjudication.

6. On appeal the said judgment and order was affirmed by the learned District Judge, Howrah who dismissed the appeal.

7. It is against this order this Rule has been issued and the hearing of the suit has been stayed till the disposal of the Rule.

8. The opposite party, Babulal Singhania in Civil Rule No. 3076 of 1974 filed on March 19, 1975 an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act being Title Suit No. 22 of 1975 in the Second Court of Subordinate Judge, Howrah praying that the arbitration agreement be filed in court. In the said suit the opposite party, Babulal Singhania filed an application under O. 39, R. 7 of the Civil P. C. for appointment of a Commissioner for making an inventory of the machineries and account books lying in the factory premises at 4, Gopalram Pathak Road, P. S. Liluah. The petitioner filed an objection as to the maintainability of the said application under S. 20 of Arbitration Act as well as of the application for an appointment of an inventory Commissioner on the grounds inter alia that the application for stay of the suit filed by the opposite party under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act has been rejected and that no decision has been made as to filing of the arbitration agreement as provided in S. 20 of Arbitration Act.

9. On July 31, 1975, the learned Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Howrah, allowed the application for issue of a commission for making inventory of the articles and account papers.

10. It is against this order this Rule has been obtained. There is an order of stay of operation of the impugned order till the disposal of the Rule.

11. Mr. Shyamacharan Mitter, learned Advocate for the petitioner in C. R. No. 3076 contended that the defendant opposite party has appeared in Title Suit No. 267 of 1974 and prayed for adjournment of the suit. The defendant also made an application for adjournment of the said suit on the ground that the writ of summons with a copy of the plaint had not been served on him and also prayed for a direction for service of copy of the plaint on him for filing a written statement. Mr. Mitter has also submitted that the defendant also appeared and prayed for time in the injunction matter and on his prayer the hearing of the injunction petition was adjourned. The defendant also filed an application for adjournment of hearing of the injunction matter. Mr. Mitter has submitted that all these acts on the part of the defendant constituted taking steps in the proceedings as provided in S. 34 of the Arbitration Act and as such the courts below rightly rejected the application for stay of the suit. Several decisions have been cited by Mr. Mitter on this point. Mr. Mitter has further submitted that in the plaint of Title Suit No. 267 of 1974 there is serious allegation of fraud and misappropriation against the defendant, Babulal Singhania during the period he was in management of the said partnership business. These allegations of fraud and misappropriation, it has been submitted by Mr. Mitter, cannot be conveniently investigated by the Arbitrator and as such the courts below were right in holding that it was proper that this grave and serious allegations should be investigated and decided by civil court and not by Arbitrator.

12. Mr. Mitter has lastly submitted that after the rejection of the application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act the petition under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act was not competent and the application filed therein for the appointment of an Inventory Commissioner ought to have been dismissed by the Court below.

13. Mr. Barun Kumar Roy Chowdhury learned Advocate for the defendant opposite party, Babulal Singhania in C. R. No. 3076 of 1975 has submitted that the order of injunction had already been issued against the defendant and the defendant had no other alternative than to appear in the said injunction matter and to file objection to contest the same otherwise he would be greatly prejudiced if the injunction order had been made absolute. It has been further submitted that there is no provision in the Arbitration Act to remedy this wrong. Mr. Roy Chowdhury has further submitted that the suit was fixed for ex parte hearing and as such the defendant appeared in the suit through his lawyer and the defendant had to make an application for adjournment on the ground that the writ of summons with a copy of the plaint had not been served on him and for serving a copy of the plaint on him in order to acquaint himself with the statements and allegations made in the plaint. This, it has been submitted, cannot be considered to be taking any steps in the suit. It has also been submitted that an interlocutory matter is not a part of the proceeding in the suit and the filing of an application for time to file objection against the injunction petition and to contest the injunction matter is not taking a step in the proceeding as provided in S. 34 of the Arbitration Act. The courts below, it has been submitted were wrong in rejecting the application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act filed by the defendant opposite party.

14. Mr. Roy Chowdhury has also submitted that the petitioner has removed account books and other papers from the office of the factory premises to his house and the petitioner has not allowed the opposite party any access to the account books. The petitioner did not pay the monthly rents of the factory premises to the landlord and also of the instalments in respect of loans to the bank. It has therefore been prayed that a Commissioner be appointed to make an inventory of machinery parts as well as account books and other relevant papers lying in the factory premises at Liluah. The order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge allowing the said application for issue of a commission for making inventory of those articles is not without jurisdiction nor it is illegal or erroneous and as such the same is not liable to be revised.

15. The plaintiff, Pirudan Ojha, admittedly filed Title Suit No. 267 of 1974 for dissolution of partnership and for accounts against the defendant, Babulal Singhania in November, 1974 after serving a notice dated 14-10-74 dissolving the partnership business which is a partnership-at-will. In the said suit the plaintiff filed an application for temporary injunction and obtained an order of interim injunction whereby the defendant had been restrained from disturbing or interfering with the carrying on the business by the plaintiff petitioner until the hearing of the said application. It also appears that the defendant after serving of notice of the injunction petition on him appeared in the suit and prayed for time to file objection. The injunction matter was adjourned accordingly. This is evident from Order No. 6 dated Dec. 4, 1974. It is also evident from Order No. 9 dated 7-1-75 that the defendant filed a petition praying for an adjournment to enable him to file objection in the injunction matter. The hearing of the injunction matter was adjourned to a subsequent date. It also appears from Order No. 10 dated 15-1-75 that the defendant made an application for adjournment of the ex parte hearing of the suit and the said prayer was granted and the defendant was asked to file a written statement by certain date and he was directed to take copy of the plaint from the record. It also appears from Order No. 12 dated 5th February, 1975 that the defendant filed a petition praying for adjournment in the injunction matter. On the same day the defendant also filed a petition under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act praying for stay of further proceeding in the said suit and for referring the matter to Arbitration for adjudication of the disputes. It is also evident from the application for temporary injunction that the material averments of the plaint have been mentioned and the relief claimed in the plaint has also been stated clearly. The question now is whether these acts on the part of the defendants amount to taking steps in the proceeding within meaning of S. 34 of the Arbitration Act. Section 34 of the Arbitration Act specifically provides that the defendant has to file such an application for stay of the proceedings before filing any written statement or taking any other steps in the proceedings.

16. In AIR 1950 Bom 127, Nuruddin Abdul Husein v. Abu Ahmed Abdul Jalil it has been observed by Tendolkar J. that the two tests for determining whether an act is a step in the proceedings is not so much the question as to whether it is an application— although, of course, that would be a satisfactory test in many cases — but whether the act displays an unequivocal intention to proceed with the suit or to have the matter disposed of by arbitration. Filing of an appearance in court is not an application of any kind but is an act which is incumbent upon the defendant to do by virtue of R. 117 of the High Court Rules for preventing a suit for being set down as being undefended and therefore it is not a step in the proceedings.

17. In AIR 1961 Madh Pra 322, San-sarchand Deshraj v. State of Madhya Pradesh, it has been observed that the filing of a reply to the application of the plaintiff for securing of a temporary injunction and asking the said application itself does not amount to "taking other steps in the proceedings" by the defendant within the meaning of S. 34 of Arbitration Act. Opposing the application for temporary injunction is not an unequivocal intention on behalf of the defendant to choose to give up his right under the agreement to refer the dispute to arbitration. This decision has been followed in AIR 1974 All 431 Queens College, Konetra v. Collector, Varanasi, where it has been held by Mathur. J. that the act of the defendant to get an ex parte order of injunction vacated does not indicate an unequivocal intention to proceed with the suit and to give up the right to have the matter disposed of by arbitration. The adjudication of the injunction matter does not amount to adjudication of the claim in the suit itself.

18. In AIR 1966 Cal 315, Amritraj Kothari v. Golecha Financiers the view expressed in AIR 1961 Madh Pra 322 has been dissented from by Mullick, J. who has observed:—

"It is difficult to make a distinction between filing a written statement in the suit and filing an opposition to an interlocutory application in that suit; both of them are 'taking steps in the suit'. Filing an affidavit in an interlocutory application is as much taking a step in the proceeding as filing a written statement or filing an affidavit-in-opposition to an application under O. 12, R. 6. Interlocutory proceeding is a proceeding in the suit itself and any steps taken in the proceeding is a step taken in the suit. Arbitration Act empowers the court to pass suitable interim orders in respect of matters agreed to be adjusted by arbitration."

19. In 66 Cal WN 821: (AIR 1962 Cal 541), Dunichand Sons and Co. v. Fort Gloster Industries Ltd., the case in short is that the plaintiff Dunichand and Sons instituted a suit against Fort Gloster Industries Ltd. for a decree for a certain sum of money or alternatively for an enquiry into the damages and for other reliefs. On the service of writ of summons the defendant on 17-7-61 executed a warrant of attorney in favour of Messrs. Khaitan and Co. This was filed before the Registrar on 18-7-61 and on the same day appearance was entered in the suit on behalf of the defendant. On 17-7-61 i.e. before the warrant was filed an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act was taken and the same was made returnable on 24-7-61. It has been observed that mere entering appearance is not a step in the proceeding within the meaning of S. 34 of the Arbitration Act.

20. In AIR 1949 All 611, United Provinces Govt. v. Sri Har Nath the plaintiff filed a suit for certain reliefs against the defendant, U. P. Government. The defendant made an application for time to file a written statement. Sometime thereafter the defendant made an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act for stay of the suit. The application was rejected and the said order was affirmed on an appeal. It was held that an application for adjournment to file a written statement was a step in the proceeding within the meaning of S. 34 of the Arbitration Act.

21. In AIR 1924 Cal 789, The Karnani Industrial Bank Ltd. v. Satya Niranjan, it has been observed that verbal prayer by defendant's counsel for further time to file written statement is taking a step in the proceeding.

22. In (1907) ILR 34 Cal 443, Sarat Kumar v. Corporation of Calcutta it was held by Woodroffe J. that application for time to file written statement is a step in the proceeding within S. 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899 (Act 9 of 1899).

23. In AIR 1943 Cal 484, Subal Chandra Bhur v. Md. Ibrahim the counsel for the defendant appeared in the suit and applied for and obtained time to file his client's affidavit-in-opposition to the application for appointment of a receiver and also applied for and obtained directions and leave to inspect the books of accounts and records. It was observed by his Lordship S. R. Das, J. that the filing of such an application would indicate that the party acquiesced in the method adopted by other side of having the dispute decided by the court and not by Arbitrator.

24. In AIR 1948 Cal 59, Sadhan Kumar v. Sunil Kumar, it has been observed that the filing of an application for time to file a written statement is taking other steps in the proceeding as provided in S. 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1899 or S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 and therefore a person who has applied for time to file a written statement is not entitled at a later date to apply for stay of proceeding under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940.

25. In AIR 1970 Mad 323, M/s. Bortes S. A. v. Astrouic Compania Naviera S. A., it was observed that making an application in the suit with a prayer to vacate the interim injunction amounts to taking steps in the proceeding within the meaning of S. 34 of Arbitration Act and as such the defendant was disentitled to ask for stay of the suit.

26. In AIR 1920 Cal 685, Joy Lall & Co. v. Gopiram Bhotica the defendant appeared before the court and asked the court to direct the plaintiff to furnish security for costs. It was held that that Act on the part of the defendant amounted to taking steps in the proceedings.

27. In 81 Cal WN 219: (AIR 1976 Cal 126), W. F. Ducat & Co. Pvt. Ltd. v. Hiralal Pannalal it has been observed by S. K. Roychowdhury J. that the power of the court to grant a stay of suit under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 is discretionary and must be exercised judicially. It is not as a matter of course that a stay of a suit may be granted.

28. In AIR 1975 Cal 222, Biswanath Rungta v. Oriental Industrial Engineering Co. Pvt. Ltd., the case in short was that the plaintiff who was one of the directors of the company filed a suit and in the said suit he made an application for injunction restraining the defendant from operating the Bank account. An interim order of injunction was obtained. The defendant, thereafter appeared and prayed for an order that the bank should be restrained from allowing the plaintiff from operating the bank account. The said prayer was granted. It was held by Sabyasachi Mukharji, J. that the conduct only represents the intention of the defendant that during the period the disputes would last either in court or in arbitration each of the parties should be restrained from having the use of the money. From this conduct it is not evident that the defendant has either done anything in aid of the suit or submitted to the jurisdiction of the court for the purpose of adjudication of the controversy in the suit. The order of injunction having been made what the defendant did was to circumscribe it to such extent that the rights of the parties were protected until the disputes were decided. The facts of the case are different from the facts of the present case and as such this decision has no application to the present case.

29. Thus on a consideration of all the decisions mentioned before the conclusion is irresistible that the acts of the defendant in praying for time both in the injunction matter for filing objection as well as in the suit orally and by written application clearly and unequivocally displays an intention on the part of the defendant to submit to the jurisdiction of the court in order to have the controversy decided in the suit. As such these acts amount to taking steps in the suit within the meaning of S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (Act X of 1940). This debars the defendant from making an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act for stay of the said suit and for referring the disputes for adjudication in the arbitration proceedings.

30. It also appears from para. 2 of the plaint of Title Suit No. 267 of 1974 that serious allegations of fraud and misappropriation of loans sanctioned in the name of the partnership business and paid to the fictitious customers of the defendant during the period when the defendant, Babulal Singhania was in charge of the management of the partnership business have been made against the defendant in the plaint. Such serious and grave allegations can be properly investigated and decided by the Court in the suit and not by the Arbitrator in an arbitration proceeding. It has been contended on behalf of the defendant that the arbitrators are competent to decide questions both of law and of facts and as such only because allegations of fraud and misappropriation have been made against the defendant in the plaint they do not by themselves debar decision of those disputes by the arbitrator in an arbitration proceeding. Reference has been made in this connection to a Bench decision of this Court reported in (1952) 56 Cal WN 763, C. M. Karanji & Co. v. Indo-China Trading Co. Ltd. where it has been held that the arbitrators are Judges both of law and of facts and however difficult question of law the subject-matter of dispute may involve, the arbitration proceeding should be carried into effect. In AIR 1973 Cal 215, Union of India v. M/s. Hind Galvanizing and Engineering Co. Pvt. Ltd., it has been observed that where the dispute involved complicated questions of law it is proper that the matter should be decided in the suit rather than the matter being referred to arbitration. It has been further held that the decision of the trial Judge who rejected the application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act on that ground should not be called either unreasonable or capricious and so it would not be interfered with in appeal. In this case the courts below have held that the suit should be heard by the civil court and its proceedings should not be stayed under S. 34 of the Indian Arbitration Act in view of the serious and grave allegations of fraud and misappropriation made against the defendant. We do not find any infirmity in this finding and as such we are not inclined to interfere with the said finding. Moreover the findings arrived at by the courts below cannot be said to be unreasonable or capricious and as such the same cannot be set aside in this revisional application.

31. We have already held that the application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act was rightly rejected by the Courts below. The impugned order dated July 31, 1975 passed in Title Suit No. 22 of 1975 allowing the petition for issue of a commission for making inventory of the articles and accounts papers as mentioned in the petition in such circumstances cannot be upheld and the same is liable to be set aside.

32. In the premises aforesaid the Civil Rule No. 3457 of 1975 is discharged without costs and Civil Rule No. 3036 of 1975 is made absolute without costs. The Order No. 28 dated July 31, 1975 passed in Title Suit No. 22 of 1975 is hereby set aside. All interim orders are vacated. Let the records be sent down to the Court below as expeditiously as possible.

N. C. MUKHERJI, J.:— I agree.

Order accordingly.

ed by Nirmala the plaintiff is claiming another 1/6th share which Nirmala inherited from Ramesh, ORDER:— The property which is the subject-matter of this partition suit is premises No. 9, Gopi Mohon Dutta Lane, Calcutta (hereinafter referred to as the said premises). It is alleged in the plaint that one Rajendra Lal Banerjee, a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga purchased the said premises in the benami of his wife Khanta Bala. Rajendra Lal died intestate on or about the 3rd November, 1936 leaving him surviving Khanta Bala his sole widow, his three sons Suresh Chandra, Ramesh Chandra and Satyesh Chandra and his daughter Nirmala Chakravarti.

2. Khanta Bala died on the 28th December, 1953 intestate and leaving her surviving her children the said Suresh, Ramesh and Satyesh and Nirmala.

3. Suresh died intestate in or about 20th October, 1959 leaving him surviving his sole widow and his eleven children as his heirs, heiresses and legal representatives.

4. Ramesh, died intestate and unmarried on or about the 28th January, 1972 leaving Satyesh and Nirmala as his heir and heiress.

5. Nirmala has executed a Deed of Release dated the 26th May, 1975 whereby she has relinquished all her right, title and interest in the said premises in favour of Satyesh.

6. In this background, Satyesh has filed this suit claiming declaration of shares of the parties and partition of the said premises. Rani Banerjee, the defendant No. 1, is the widow of Suresh. Sunil, Sushil, Debdas, Tapan and Anup, the sons of Suresh have been impleaded as the defendants Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6. Mithu, Usha, Aparna and Mamata the unmarried daughters of Suresh, have been impleaded as the defendants Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10. Mira Chatterjee and Juthika Chatterjee, the married daughters of Suresh, have been impleaded as the defendants Nos. 11 and 12. Nirmala has been impleaded as the defendant No. 13.

7. It is not disputed that the plaintiff has a half share in the said premises. On the basis of the Deed of Release execut-

8. The plaintiff gave evidence in support of his claim. He tendered the Deed of Release dated the 26th May, 1975 executed by Nirmala which was marked as Ext. A, without any objection. The plaintiff proved the correctness of the genealogical table set out in the plaint and stated the relationship between the parties. Learned Advocate for Nirmala stated on instructions that Nirmala did acknowledge the said Deed of Release and intended that her share should go to the plaintiff.

9. The only contention on behalf of the defendants Nos. 1, 4, 5, 8 and 12 has been that the Court should not permit the plaintiff to claim the share of Nirmala in the said premises. By the Deed of Release it is contended there has not been a legal transfer or conveyance of the share of Nirmala in favour of the plaintiff. It was apparent from the said document that Nirmala had no knowledge as to her share in the said premises. In any event, as a deed of transfer the document was insufficiently stamped and could not be accepted in evidence.

10. Mr. Shyamal Sen, learned counsel for the plaintiff, cited a number of decisions and contended on the basis thereof that the deed (Ext. A) was valid deed of gift in favour of the plaintiff. The said decisions are considered in their chronological order as follows:—

The first decision is Hemendra Nath Mukerji v. Kumar Nath Roy, reported in (1908) 12 Cal WN 478. In this case a registered deed of disclaimer whereby the executants, inter alia, relinquished all their right, title and interest and claim in a property in favour of the releasee, was held to be transfer and that such transfer was complete as soon as the deed was registered.

The next decision, Subramanian Chettiar v. Revenue Divisional Officer, reported in AIR 1956 Mad 454 was cited for the proposition that an unstamped or defectively stamped document was not void but was effective from the date of its execution, though incapable of being made use of in evidence until stamped properly.

The next decision cited was Thayyil Rammo v. Kottiah Ramunni reported in AIR 1966 SC 337. Here the Supreme Court considered a registered deed which recorded a surrender of proprietary rights under a prior deed in favour of one of the parties. The Supreme Court approved and applied the decision of Memendra Nath Mukherji (supra) and held that a registered instrument, styled as release deed, releasing the right, title and interest of executant in any property in favour of the releasee for valuable consideration, might operate as a conveyance, if the document clearly disclosed and had an intention to effect a transfer. It was held further that nomenclature of the deed and the amount of stamp duty paid on it, though relevant, were not conclusive on the question of construction.

The next decision cited was Kuppuwami v. A. S. P. A. Arumugan, reported in AIR 1967 SC 1395. In this case the Supreme Court extended the principle laid down in Mammo's case (supra) and held that a registered instrument releasing the right, title and interest of the releasor without consideration might operate as transfer by way of a gift, if the document clearly showed an intention to effect a transfer and was signed by or on behalf of the releasor and was attested by at least two witnesses. The deed which was being considered by the Supreme Court in that case showed an intention to transfer title and the operative words of the deed were held to be sufficient to convey title.

The last case cited was Guniram v. Bodai, reported in AIR 1971 All 434. This decision is not of particular relevance in the instant case.

11. Learned Advocate for the defendants Nos. 1, 4, 5, 8 and 12 has contended that the recitals in the deed in the instant case (Ext. A) shows that the executant, was only aware that she might have inherited a share in the said premises from her parents and not from her deceased brother. I am unable to accept this contention. In the recital the deaths of Rajendra, Ramesh and Suresh have been specifically recorded. The operative portion of the deed reads as follows:—

"In consideration of the said agreement and in consideration of the premises the releasor doth hereby release, surrender and, relinquish unto and in favour of the Releasee whatever right, title, interest, claim or demand the Releasor has in the said premises and This Indenture Further Witnesseth that in consideration hereinbefore stated the Releasor doth hereby disclaim, disown and relinquish and for ever discharge all and every such pretended right, title, interest, claim or demand which may now or hereafter be alleged or contended or construed."

12. In my opinion the operative part of the deed is unambiguous and is intended to transfer whatever right, title and interest Nirmala had in the said premises in favour of the plaintiff. The document is attested by two witnesses and would operate as a deed of gift.

13. The objection as to stamp has to be considered next. In my opinion, the said document viz. Ext. 'A' having been exhibited without any objection, it is no longer open to the defendants Nos. 1, 4, 5, 8 and 12 to raise any objection as to its admissibility. Section 36 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899 provides as follows:

"Where an instrument has been admitted in an evidence, such admission shall not, except as provided in S. 61, be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped."

14. Section 61 of the Act provides for further agitation of the question of stamp by the appeal court either on its own motion or on the application of the Collector. In the instant case the document has been tendered and exhibited on the 15th June, 1977 without any objection from any of the parties and therefore S. 36 is attracted and the question cannot again be agitated in this suit.

15. However, the document ex facie has been stamped as a deed of release. Under S. 35 and other Sections of the Stamp Act the Court suo motu can take notice of the insufficiency of stamp. In that view, while permitting the deed to be tendered in evidence I direct the document to be impounded by the Registrar and to be forwarded to the Collector for adjudication of proper stamp duty.

16. There will be a decree in this suit as follows:

It is declared that the plaintiff is entitled to two-thirds share and the defendants Nos. 1 to 12 are each entitled to 1/36th share in the said premises. There will be a preliminary decree for partition. Mr. Shanti Bhushan Mukherjee, learned Advocate, is appointed the Commissioner of Partition. He will be at liberty to engage a Surveyor and Valuer for effecting the partition and will be entitled to the services of a clerk.

17. The Commissioner is directed to partition the said premises by metes and bounds in accordance with the shares declared as aforesaid and if the same is not so possible, to sell the property by public auction or private treaty as the Commissioner may decide.

18. The Commissioner will proceed expeditiously and file his return within four months from date.

19. The Commissioner and all parties to act on a signed copy of the minute of the decree on the undertaking of the learned advocate on record to draw up complete and file the same. Remuneration of the Commissioner will be fixed later.

20. Costs as in a partition suit.
